Lyric Theatre

Mr. R. A. Walker of the Lyric theatre is offering special plays as an inducement to the theatre going public to attend more regularly. A Mae West picture will be here around the first of October. It is "Klondike Annie." The clever actress is at her best in this play.

Mr. Walker is offering a prize of one pass in each of the eight grades to the pupil that makes the highest daily average from now until the close of the semester in December. The eight passes will be delivered January 1st, and will be good until commencement. This will be encouragement to the children to be good and will add zest to their studies, and may be the means of encouraging some youngster in a budding ambition to excel.

Autumn Driving Tips

Autumn driving, according to C. W. Wood, national director of service, Chevrolet Motor Co., has a special set of rules all its own, which should be followed closely for maximum enjoyment of motoring during the next few weeks.

"September and October," said Mr. Wood, "differ in three important respects from the months just preceding. They have a much higher average rainfall, making driving conditions more difficult. Streets and highways are frequently littered with wet leaves, calling for extra precautions. And finally, the colorful autumn scenery lures large numbers of people to the roads."

"For greatest enjoyment of driving under such conditions, all units of the car should be in the best condition. This is especially true of the braking system and the tires, which determine the driver's ability to come to a safe stop. Damp pavements, particularly if they are covered with slippery wet leaves, are no place to drive with worn-out tires or brakes that are not properly adjusted."

"Factors affecting visibility are extra important in the fall, too. Operation of windshield wipers should be checked, and headlights and tail lamps adjusted and refocused if necessary, for complete safety night and day, in rain, shine, or fog."

"The prevalence of fog in the autumn justified special suggestions for safe driving under these conditions. The safe rule for driving, at any time, is 'Keep to speeds at which you can stop your car in the clear space ahead.' The clear space ahead is greatly shortened by fog, of course, and the safe driving speed is reduced by just that much."

"Two things to remember when driving in fog are: use the utmost caution in overtaking other cars, and drive clear off the highway if you must stop to clean windshield or lamps."

"A little extra attention to the car itself, and a little extra care when driving, will pay big dividends in safety, comfort, and the enjoyment derived from your car."

Judges Choose 'Most Freckled' Boy and Girl

Here are the boy and girl adjudged to have the most and best freckles in Greater New York. They are Patricia Gallagher, fourteen, of Staten Island, and Charles Cochrane, of Queens. Six hundred children competed in the contest.

Just how the judges arrived at the decision is unknown. Some of the entrants were so nearly completely covered with freckles that any choice seemed unfair. However, Patricia Gallagher and Charles Cochrane were finally declared the winners.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THE homemaker who has a woman come in for a day each week to do the things she finds too much for her, either because she is not strong enough to do these things, or because she has not the opportunity, can get more work done by being prepared for the helper than without such preparation. The extra work that is done is not through pressure. It is entirely through preventing waste of time by getting ready before the worker arrives. It is annoying to the helper to be kept waiting for needed things. This is as tiresome as doing the work, provided everything is in readiness.

The laundress who must wait for soap, bluing, starch or any essential, is irritated by being held up by such delays. It annoys her to think that the woman of the house should not have enough respect for her labor to have things ready for her. The homemaker is annoyed with herself for not attending to the matter before, and is exasperated to find the washing delayed. Sometimes she is inclined to think the laundress is dilatory, and might go ahead if she would. However either the homemaker or the laundress feels, good nature is being taxed by the delay.

Cleaning Cloths. It sometimes happens that the woman to clean, has difficulty in getting sufficient cleaning cloths. The homemaker should see that new soft cloth is provided when the old cloth is gone. There are cleaners who use up cloth as if it were paper to be discarded after use. There are others who wash their cleaning cloths and hang them out to dry and be in readiness for another time. The homemaker can see that the woman does this. It will take a few moments longer, but is worth the time, as it is a measure of preparedness for the next day's work.

Brooms, brushes, mops, pails, clothespins, dusters, household ammonia, washing soda, silver polish, and all the things of whatever sort the special work requires, should be on hand and where the worker can find them without delay. Such attentions to the worker's needs shows an efficiency in the homemaker, that gains respect of the helper, while it makes it possible for the worker to get the most done in the given time.

Help the Hostess. When you are helping someone do any work, it is necessary to do it as nearly as possible in the way the other person wants it done. It is well to remember this during visits when you desire to be a helpful guest. Every homemaker has her own pet way of doing things, and if you know what it is, it is for you to do it her way unless she expresses no preferences.

There are women who prefer their guests to do, in their own way, whatever little tasks they offer to, possibly because the hostess realizes the guest is expert and efficient, or possibly because she likes to learn new ways. But most homemakers have certain definite methods of work, and plans of accomplishment, and appreciate it when a guest does things the way she, as homemaker, prefers.

To be specific, I know of one homemaker who likes her beds made without turning down the top sheet before putting on the daytime spread. She is apt to tell her friends who visit her and want to help, that this way is what she likes. So whatever the friend prefers, it is for her to make the beds thus.

Preparing Fruit. Another woman likes peaches cut into slices. It irritates her to have to cut into medium segments, although she tries not to show it, when a guest follows her own method, inadvertently. This is a hostess who is not very adaptable. However she entertains delightfully, and it is a pleasure to visit her.

When it comes to dish washing, the number of ways to do the work are endless. One woman rinses her dishes under running water from a faucet as a preliminary process. Another scrapes each dish, and makes them all into prim piles before starting to wash them. Another woman washes pots and pans before dishes, another afterwards. If you are a guest and do them with the hostess, be sure to follow her system, although should you do the work by yourself, you could undoubtedly follow your own system, if you so requested.

Reflected Sunshades. If a floor is painted a medium chrome yellow, it will, by reflection, give white or cream painted walls a charming, sunny effect.

WE OWE THANKS FOR PURE MILK

Vivid Contrast With U. S. Seen in Tropics.

By EDITH M. BARBER
EARLY each morning we find at our doorstep clean, fresh milk and cream which we are certain is safe to use. Whether we think about this fact or not we are conscious that the nutrients of this liquid food come up to the standard set by city or state.

Perhaps these facts were brought home to me by contrasting the appearance of the cattle in the tropics with those of our own dairy country. Even on the best farms they were scrawny and not to be compared with those which we see in our fertile countryside.

For many years the milk which comes into many cities in this country has been pasteurized. Conditions on dairy farms in many states are under the supervision of the health authorities. We are not confronted with any problem as far as the quality and safety of our daily supply is concerned. This is a matter of moment in most places in the tropics, where most of my American friends rely entirely upon canned or dried milk.

Although it has no bearing on the safety of the milk supply, it is very pleasant to those who like their morning naps to have milk distributed by wagons with pneumatic tires, sometimes drawn by horses whose hoofs are actually muffled. This latter is the custom in Erie, Pa., where I mistook the milk delivery for an early horseback rider!

Cream Soup.
1 1/2 to 2 cups vegetable pulp
1 tablespoon minced onion
3 cups white sauce
Seasoning to taste

Cook the vegetables and onion until they are tender. Rub through a sieve and add the pulp to the white sauce. Add the seasoning. Spinach, lettuce, onions, corn, peas and other vegetables may be used. The onion may be omitted.

Needle Ring.
1 package noodles
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups diced meat or vegetable
1 1/2 cups white sauce, well seasoned

Cook noodles in boiling salted water. Drain and dress with melted butter. Press into ring mold (quart size) and set in hot water. Dress left-over meat or vegetables with sauce, seasoned very well. Turn noodle mold onto platter and fill with creamed mixture. Two teaspoons of poppy seeds and one-half cup of chopped almonds may be browned in the butter used to dress the noodles.

Bread Pudding.
2 cups dry bread crumbs
1 quart hot milk
1/2 cup sugar
1 cup chopped figs
1/4 cup melted butter
3 eggs, beaten
Salt
1/2 cup chopped nuts

Add bread crumbs to hot milk and set aside to cool, then add all other ingredients and pour into greased baking dish. Place in pan of hot water in moderate oven and bake for one hour or steam for two hours. Serve with plain or whipped cream or pudding sauce.

Lemon Frosting.
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
2 tablespoons butter
Salt
1 cup confectioner's sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon water
2 cups confectioner's sugar
Cream orange rind and butter and add gradually the salt and one cup of confectioner's sugar which has been sifted. Add lemon juice and water and remaining confectioner's sugar.

Chocolate Frosting.
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups confectioner's sugar, sifted
4 egg yolks
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 squares chocolate, melted
Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar and a little beaten egg yolk and cream together well. Add rest of egg yolks, milk, vanilla and chocolate. Place bowl in pan of ice water and beat with rotary egg-beater until thick enough to spread.

Cream Puffs.
1/2 cup butter
1 cup boiling water
1 cup bread flour
4 eggs, unbeaten

Add the butter to the water, heat until the butter melts, add flour all at once and stir vigorously over the heat until a ball forms in the center of the pan. Cool slightly, add eggs one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mixture should be very stiff. Shape on buttered cookie sheets by dropping from a spoon. Bake until free from beads of moisture in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.).

Planets of Gas

What kind of creature could live on an island of ammonia in a sea of gasoline and breathe air made up of methane, or "marsh gas?" He would certainly have to be a lot different from earthly beings.

Astronomers at Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., reported not long ago that the atmospheres of the four planets Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus and Neptune are composed chiefly of marsh gas, and suggested that the large spot on the planet Jupiter is an island of ammonia afloat on a hydrocarbon sea.—Washington Post.

Accidents Kill More Young Than Three Diseases

Auto Crashes Lead in List of Fatalities

Washington.—More than twice as many children under 15 years are killed by accidents as by three common communicable diseases, measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria.

This fact emerges in a study of fatal childhood accidents which has been undertaken by the U. S. Public Health Service here. First section of the study relating to automobile accidents, has just been reported by William M. Gafar, senior statistician of the federal health service.

For children under one year of age mechanical suffocation leads the list of fatal accidents. At one and two years burns caused most fatal accidents. Automobile accidents and burns lead at three years.

The Dangerous Age.

At four years and from then up to fifteen years, automobile accidents rank first as cause of accidental deaths and also outnumber deaths from the three diseases, measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria. The study was limited to the year 1930, the most recent year for which accurate population enumerations exist.

Mr. Gafar divided the country into three geographic regions, Northeastern, North Central, Southeastern and Western, and reviewed the fatality figures by region. The Northeastern region had most childhood automobile deaths per hundred thousand children. Next greatest number was found in the Western region. Then followed the North Central and finally the Southeastern with fewest deaths per hundred thousand children.

"Blanks" in Mind Occur Several Times a Minute

Chicago.—Your mind "goes blank" several times every minute. During these blank periods you involuntarily stop work for a couple of seconds. If you are tired, the stops occur oftener—maybe eight or ten times each minute—and they may last twice as long.

This automatic putting on of brakes by the brain was discovered in experiments conducted at the psychology laboratory of the University of Chicago here, under the direction of Prof. Arthur G. Bills.

Mind Stops Work.

The "blocks," as Professor Bills calls these blank periods, are not complete, he explains. The individual does not lose track of what is going on, but he must mentally stop work on the task at hand.

Blocks partly account for the "err-r-r" and "Ah" which public speakers put between words. These blocks are particularly conspicuous when a person is doing rapid calculating. Every so often, he is unable to proceed and stalls. Fatigue increases both the frequency and the duration of the blocks, causing bunching of responses or spurts of work.

How Stutterers React.

Stutterers block about twice as often as normal persons and their blocks last longer, it was found.

"It is safe to assume that there is a common neurological basis between blocking and stuttering," Professor Bills concluded.

Mental blocks are enforced resting periods, he explained. They may account for the fact that continuous mental work does not impair mental efficiency to nearly the same extent that muscular work impairs muscular efficiency, he believes.

First "Quake" Recorder Is Placed in Museum

Philadelphia.—The first earthquake recorder in the United States, placed in service at Lick observatory at the University of California in 1886, will soon go on display at the museum of the Franklin Institute here.

The Lick observatory instrument was one of the few in California at the time of the disastrous quake in San Francisco on April 18, 1906. The observatory is only 25 miles away from San Francisco. The original record of this severe and damaging shock is still preserved and shows that while the vibrations threw the recording mechanism off the tracing paper, the apparatus functioned unharmed.

Electric Waves in Human Brain Are Studied by Science

Currents Vary During Sleep or Wakefulness

IS LIFE electrical? Through the ages man has tried to discover or to explain that mysterious something which is life—the force that animates a mass of blood, bones and flesh. At one time, when scientists were rapidly learning one fact after another about the composition, structure and function of the human body, optimistic persons were sure that these scientists would finally unravel the wonder of wonders—life, itself.

The idea that scientists might some day use this knowledge to build a robot and then find a way to breathe life into him will apparently never be realized.

Life Is Mystery.

"The miracle of life itself—the fact that to certain material processes consciousness is added—can never be explained," Prof. Hans Berger of the University of Jena, Germany, now declares in a report to Research and Progress.

Professor Berger is the man who started the wave of experiments on what are popularly known as "brain waves." These are the tracings on paper of the electric currents which arise in the brain.

All activities of life are accompanied by electrical impulses, the current thus produced being called bioelectric. The English scientist, Caton, was the first who showed that electric currents arise in the brains of the higher animals, dogs and apes.

Fifty years later, in 1924, Professor Berger showed the existence of these currents in man and devised a method of leading these currents off from the brain so that they can be amplified and charted or recorded, appearing as wavy lines on paper.

Brain Always Active.

Recent study has shown that these waves vary during sleep, consciousness, mental activity, under the influence of anesthetics or sedative drugs, and in certain diseases. Though the waves are different under differing conditions, they are always present, showing that the human brain like the human heart is continually active.

Study of the currents from the brain will, it is hoped, give valuable information about various mental disorders, such as similar studies of the currents from the heart tell certain important things about the condition of that organ. But apparently they will not shed much light on the question of what makes life.

No answer can be given, Professor Berger says, to the question of whether the electric tension that is seen in the main vibrations of the "brain waves" merely accompanies the vital processes or whether it does just the work necessary to produce consciousness.

Automaton Chemist Analyzes Solutions

Vienna.—A chemical "robot" into which one pours an electrolytic solution to be analyzed and then receives a printed answer in a few minutes has been demonstrated before the faculty and chemical students at the university here by Dr. Hans Hohn, former Viennese chemist now living in Germany at Cologne-Bayenthal.

Dr. Hohn's chemical analyzer is known as the Polarograph and operates by using the known chemical fact that the electric potential or voltage decreases as a solution is being disassociated during electrolysis.

What really pops out of the small black box, after an unknown electrolyte has been poured in, is the graph showing how electrical potential across the solution varies with time. From such potential curves (Polarograms) the trained chemical operator can quickly calculate the qualitative and quantitative analysis of the investigated material.

Tasteless Quinine Is Developed by Swiss

Washington.—That bitter, shudder-creating taste of quinine is claimed not to be present in a new quinine compound for which a United States patent has just been granted here to Max Hoffer, of Basel, Switzerland.

The inventor says that it is not only tasteless, but also that it has no after taste.

The man-made quinine substitute is an entirely new chemical, made by combining quinine with a naphthalene compound. Naphthalene itself is familiar as the common moth balls or moth flakes.

What Irwin S. Cobb Thinks about

U. S. Lags Behind.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—What I saw at the national air races in Los Angeles set me to thinking. It's a dangerous thing—thinking is—and nearly always upsetting to the peace of mind.

I'm thinking that no longer is the navy our first line of defense nor the army the second line. I'm thinking that the chief peril—and the chief security from that peril—is in the air now.

And of all the great powers, we are the most woefully behind in the matter of airplane protection. It would take us two years to make our air force as strong as it was four years ago. It would take infinitely longer than that to make it as strong as the present footing of any country which conceivably might attack us.

Well, we could always lock the stable after the horse was gone—if the stable hadn't been blown flat.

Rules for Long Life.

A JAPANESE doctor has landed with the word that, by following a few simple rules, a fellow lives to be 240 years old. He didn't say, but I figure this applies only to those of us who never go motor-ing.

The principal rules are to sleep on a hard mattress with a metal pillow and learn to wriggle like a goldfish. Whether, in time, the beginner sprouts gills and a fantail is not stated, but it counts plausible.

I've already spoken to a tinsmith about a pillow and, on awakening this morning, made a few experimental wriggles. My intentions might fool some people, but I don't believe they'd fool a goldfish, unless he'd been drinking or something. I'm afraid my finning was faulty. Besides, I didn't feel any too dignified—greeting the dowry down by behaving goldfishiously.

War Names Confusing.

NOT content with coining eighty or ninety separate different and confusing names for the opposing forces in Spain, the correspondents have gone and 'thunk up a plum bran' new one—extremicks. Maybe, though, the point is well taken. The dispatches would seem rather to indicate that quite a number of persons over there have lately shown a tendency to verge toward the extreme.

And picking out the various parties mixed up in the French political mess—that's another tough job. Only today I ran into this one—left-centrist. It sort of suggests Ty Cobb in his palmy days, covering the outfield. But—that couldn't be because the French don't go in for baseball. They prefer dueling as being just as exciting.

I must say it's discouraging just when, by following the news from Paris, I'm beginning to get the Reds unscrambled from the Pale Pinks, and the Mauves from the Heliotropes, and the Holy Rollers from the Merry Widows, to have this added complication thrust right in my face. Looks as though I'll have to start it all over again.

How to Reduce.

EVER since the day when I was known among friends as Thyroid Deficiency Irvy, the human de-tour, I've fought the losing fight against overweight.

I tried dieting and became the best friend the American spinach industry ever knew, yet had only to turn my head to brag and I regained, practically instantaneously, what I'd lost. I exercised until I had the jitters, but when I'd taken off half a pound, it bounced right back while the doctors were reviving me.

But now I've found the absolutely certain cure for reduction. It's working—in a moving picture with little Jane Withers. When she sets the pace you can track yourself back home by your own perspiration. Another engagement with Janie and I could be rented out as my own living skeleton.

Has Memories of Valencia.

IT'S hard to concentrate on pen-nant fights in the big leagues when we read of war-racked Spain, with 100,000 already dead.

I hope the lovely old city of Valencia has escaped the common ruin. Seven years ago I was traveling around and about over three continents, and at every stop had listened morning, noon and night, to the song "Valencia."

So a friend and I made a pilgrimage to the town in which presumably, the thing originated, and Valencia turned out to be the one spot on the map where nobody had ever played that tune or sung it or hummed it or whistled it, or even heard of it.

It was indeed a relief. So we stayed a week. The sherry-and-egg before luncheon was also quite good—all but the egg.

It Doesn't Pay—

Doing Favors for Others With Thought of Return Disappoints

"THE older I grow the more I am appalled by the ingratitude, the complete lack of a sense of obligation on the part of our fellow human beings.

"With me the people who come first are always those to whom I have any obligation whatsoever. Anything that is done for me is constantly on my mind and I am on the lookout to repay. But look about you and you will observe the most inconceivable indifference on the part of most otherwise decent people to what they owe to others. Indeed the code seems to be to cultivate those from whom some advantage may be forthcoming and neglect those to whom we are indebted. The answer to it all is to put yourself out for nobody; it doesn't pay."

The above lament was received by an international writer of note, who answers as follows.

It must have been an unusually unfortunate chain of experiences that gave this woman such an unhappy slant on human nature. But certain it is that favors done with thought of return are bound to bring disappointment. In this busy, hectic world, people are likely to be rather casual about give and take. That does not necessarily mean that they are unappreciative. They are just not punctilious. Frequently a kindness makes its mark but time passes before occasion presents itself to show appreciation, or to reciprocate. After all, if we think enough of people to put ourselves out for them, as our reader says, there must be a certain amount of faith.

If we do things for others only because we want to do them and find a certain satisfaction in it, we have nothing to lose. But the expected reward is something like the watched pot—very disappointing. In fact, it doesn't pay.

Uncle Phil Says:

There's a Difference

A conservative puts two and two together and so does an optimist, but the conservative has the two and two.

What we call "charm" is founded on kindness. You can depend on that virtue.

In ruling, better be careful. Minorities have a way of suddenly becoming majorities.

Brilliance Amuses

No one has the moral right to "talk cynical" who can't do it brilliantly.

A boy bandit starts when there is nobody to keep fool ideas out of a boy's head.

There is a good deal of protesting by the "cannon fodder;" but in European cannon fodder will have to do better than that.

We Have a Tale

Every man, if you know him, is interesting. The only "uninteresting people" are those you don't know.

The book that nobody sees—the checkbook.

Love of money is the root of half the evil and lack of money the root of the other half.

A hermit has learned that "letting people know what you think" isn't worth while.

CURIOUS DEVICES USED FOR SEEING AFTER DARKNESS

It is presumed that man originally toiled or played only during hours of sunlight. That when darkness came and the eyes could no longer see—he lay himself down to rest. Yet all the while, Nature, through volcanic and meteoric disturbances, through flashes of lightning, was trying to demonstrate to man its power to create light in the midst of darkness.

Fire was discovered, and man found he could prolong the day with the aid of firebrands, camp fires, torches.

The earliest lamps of which we have record were saucer shaped objects with a shallow projecting spout which held the wick. A hole in the center of this disc-like lamp held a small quantity of oil.

So far as is known, there was no radical development toward better lighting until 1783 A. D., when Leger of Paris devised a flat ribbon wick and burner. Not long after, Ami Argand of Paris, perfected a glass chimney which, together with his new improved type of circular wick and burner, produced illumination far superior to anything ever before seen.

Then in 1857, Auer von Welsbach, a German, developed a burner, in which the combination of a mixture of air and gas or vapor, heated to incandescence a mantle, composed of thoria and ceria.

Welsbach's mantle was, of course, crude and inefficient compared to present-day mantles. But to Welsbach, should go much of the credit for making available to us today, the pure white light which is so easily and economically provided in modern pressure mantle lamps using gasoline and kerosene for fuel.

Largest Battleship

The largest English warship is the battle cruiser "Hood," which weighs 42,100 tons and has a main battery of eight 15-inch guns. However, the ship with the greatest armament is the battleship "Rodney," which weighs 33,000 tons and has a main battery of nine 16-inch guns. The largest United States battleship is the "Maryland," which weighs 37,500 tons and has a main battery of eight 16-inch guns.—Detroit News.

State 4H Club Encampment

Mary Helen Kelleon from Lincoln, Irene Cox from Hondo, Doris Ferguson and Margaret Guthrie were the lucky ones of the 4H Club of Lincoln County, who won a trip to the State 4H Club encampment at State College which was held Aug. 13 to Sept. 4.

Mr. and Mrs. Evans (he being County agent and she our leader) accompanied us.

We had several lectures from W. H. Darrow on farm problems, D. A. Doblins Resources and there were several others.

We had demonstrations by different clubs on different things which were very interesting.

The Club members put on some very interesting programs. Miss Emma Haw from Las Cruces our state supervisor taking charge of the Club work, and was dearly loved by all. We members feel greatly benefited by going.

Centennial Group Plans

Albuquerque, September 23-- With twenty-one communities represented, the first state-wide planning conference for the Coronado (fourth) Centennial celebration in 1940 laid the foundation last Saturday evening for the permanent committees to direct the program, finances, and other phases of the gigantic celebration.

Under the chairmanship of Clinton P. Anderson, the conference discussed the Centennial plans and put their approval upon the organization outlined by the state planning commission chairman, Mrs. Albert G. Simma. Each community in the state will nominate members to the several committees and final selection will be made by the state chairman, it was said.

Dr. James F. Zimmerman, president of the Commission, again reiterated the commission's desire that no commercialism be allowed in the Coronado celebration. "The program is yet to be devised. It must be arranged not in a haphazard manner with senseless jealousies, but it shall be arranged by experts. The state is filled with matters historical, scientific, scenic and religious and all that remains for us to do is to show the world what we have here in New Mexico", he stated. "This celebration shall be a pageant of beauty-not of commercialized exhibits", he added.

Railroad Jim
THE COLUMN CONDUCTOR
Says...

Passengers in the smoking compartment on my train were arguing about why railroad business is picking up.

A factory owner said it was because of Free pick-up and-delivery of less than car-load freight. The railroad calls for the LCL freight at shipper's door and delivers it to consignee's door.

A traveling salesman said it was because so many passenger and freight trains now run on faster schedules.

There was a school principal in the group and he said it was because train travel is so much cheaper for passengers. He said passenger fares are at the lowest point in history, with substantial reductions if you buy a round-trip ticket—and no more surcharge for riding in sleeping cars.

One man, a farmer, said he liked something he could depend on, that's why he was traveling by train.

Another man, a newspaper reporter, said people were in favor of railroad travel because it is by far the safest. He quoted a lot of statistics from a book called, "Live and Let Live."

A banker we all know by name said railroad tax payments mean a lot in this state.

We are proud of railroad achievements, appreciate the public's good will and increased patronage, and pledge continued progress.

School Notes

The Lincoln County Rural School Library is happy to have some new books in their possession and three complete sets of Compton's Unit Pictured Material and one set of Classroom Teacher's Aids. These will prove invaluable to our teachers as they select their various units of study.

In addition to the new books purchased the teachers will welcome the news that the Library employees have been busy making flash cards and mimeographed seat work in order to aid them in their classroom teaching, thus making their teaching more interesting for the boys and girls in their classes.

Football

By Tony, Mgr.
Capitan won 6 to 0 from Carrizozo, although our boys put up a grand fight throughout the game. Chavez was Capitan's star and C. Dow was star for Carrizozo. Mr. Ming the Superintendent, pepped the boys up from the side line. Supporters from Carrizozo made a good showing. We hope they turn out even better for our home games. All the teachers were present, which we appreciate.

Mrs. Sue Jones who was ill at the home of Mrs. Lucas the past three months, and was in an El Paso hospital for three weeks, where she underwent an operation has fully recovered and has returned home.

Hats of Korea

With the exception of the dancing girls of the country, the Korean women wear no head covering other than their hair and this is twisted in the shape of a coil on top of the head to act as a pad in order that they may balance rather heavy bundles upon their heads. The men are rarely without the hat which is perched on top of the skull and not much of a protection. The dancing girls never appear without an elaborate headdress, resembling a four-pointed crown, tapering to the top.

Maine Is Captured by the Republicans

MAINE, the "barometer" state, is back in the Republican column at least so far as its state ticket is concerned. The G. O. P. captured the United States senatorship, the governorship and three congressional seats. Senator Wallace H. White, Republican, defeated Gov. Louis J. Brann, who sought to unseat him. Lewis O. Barrows, Republican, won the governorship by a substantial majority over F. Harold Dubord, Democrat.

The vote cast broke all records for size and interest in the election was intense. The state had been visited by both President Roosevelt, as he returned from his vacation cruise, and Gov. Alf M. Landon, the Republican Presidential nominee, who made speeches there only a few days ago. Colonel Knox, vice presidential candidate on the Republican ticket, also had canvassed the state. Brann, who was elected governor in 1932 and re-elected two years later, won the first Democrat to hold that office in Maine and was personally popular. White was elected senator in 1930 after ten years in the house of representatives.

Communism Is Denounced

POPE PIUS XI may be physically weak, as recent reports say, but age and illness have not lessened the vigor of his opinions and his way of expressing them. In greeting and blessing some five hundred Spanish refugees who were received at Castel Gandolfo, the holy father, took occasion to denounce strongly the "mad" forces of Communism which, he declared, menaced, in Spain and elsewhere, "the very foundations of all order, all culture and all civilization." He urged the constituted authorities of all nations to oppose "these great evils with every remedy and barrier that is possible" and prophesied that there will be utter chaos if "those who have a duty in the matter do not hasten to repair the breach—if, indeed, it is not already too late."

Pope Pius XI

The pope spoke especially of the situation in Spain, but said the crisis there is "a school in which the most serious lesson is being taught to Europe and to the whole world—to a world now at last wholly steeped, ensnared and threatened by subversive propaganda, and more especially to a Europe battered and shaken to its very foundation."

For forty minutes the pontiff spoke passionately, his voice at times broken with emotion, and his address was transmitted by radio to all the civilized world.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler, too, took another hard whack at the Communists at a ceremonial tribute to the World War dead in Nuremberg. Before 120,000 uniformed Nazis and 50,000 others he boasted of Germany's armed strength and shouted:

"Our old enemy, bolshevism, is vanquished within Germany, but still active around her borders. But let no one be deceived. We are ready at any hour. We all have one wish—to maintain peace—but with it goes one firm decision: Never to surrender Germany to that enemy we have come to know so well."

If Hitler, as some think, tries to lead the coming five-power Locarno conference into forming an anti-Soviet alliance, he will be firmly opposed by France. Foreign Minister Yvon Delbois says so, and declares France will under no circumstances abandon her military pact with Soviet Russia.

According to Pravda, authoritative newspaper of Moscow, Hitler plans to attack and paralyze Czechoslovakia before he embarks on a war against the Soviet Union. Benito Mussolini and his cabinet appropriated large sums to build up Italy's army, navy and air forces to greater strength and planned to carry on vigorously the campaign for self-sufficiency in raw materials.

It looked as if the dove of peace was preparing to leave Europe, and as relations between Japan and China grew more strained every day, she probably will have to take refuge on the western continent.

British Workers Reject Alliance With Reds

BRITISH organized labor will have no truck with the Communists. The trades union congress at Plymouth rejected, by overwhelming votes, three resolutions favoring the formation of a "popular front" alliance with the reds, similar to the combinations that captured the governments of France and Spain.

In this action the workers were largely influenced by the fiery words of Sir Walter Citrine, international labor leader, who has just returned from a visit to Russia. Said he: "After years of derision of the principles of the Socialist movement, after abuse of unions as the pillars of capitalism, we now have the curiously incongruous spectacle of Communist organizations wanting to come into our midst and be a part of the movement they have so derided."

"I do not know whether you are so credulous as really to believe that there is a sincere conversion to the principles of organized labor. However, for myself and the national council of labor I say without hesitation that the single, simple explanation of the tactics of the Communist movement today is the obvious, abject failure that has accompanied attempts to capture the Socialist movement for Communist principles."

San Sebastian Captured by Spanish Rebels

THE Spanish rebels scored their greatest victory to date when they captured San Sebastian, capital of Guipuzcoa province and famous Bay of Biscay resort. Santa Barbara fort, dominating the city, was first taken and the city's war council then decided to abandon the place, despite the opposition of the anarchists. The more conservative Basque nationalists prevented the reds from burning the city, only a paper factory and two residences being destroyed, and the defending forces retreated toward Bilbao, accompanied by thousands of civilians and foreigners.

Farmers Will Meet to Plan Conservation

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE WALLACE is arranging a series of community meetings of farmers for the purpose of laying out the "agricultural conservation program" for next year. He said the AAA planned the meetings in the farm areas in order to discuss crop insurance and possible maximum limits of benefit payments to each farm. He explained the program aimed at providing "greater abundance for the average American home," and should "help to check soil erosion, improve fertility, encourage better land use and maintain farm income."

Fleet Will Maneuver in North Pacific Waters

BACK at his desk after an illness of six months, Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson immediately made an announcement that will be of deep interest to Japan. The annual fleet maneuvers, which last May were shifted to the Canal Zone as a conciliatory gesture to Japan, will be held next year in North Pacific and Hawaiian waters, and probably the Tokio press, will yelp again.

With the announcement Secretary Swanson asserted Japanese plans to retain overage submarines and destroyers involve a "violation" of the London and Washington naval treaties, which are to expire December 31 by Japanese abrogation. He followed up his charge with the statement that the United States has completed plans for two new battleships and is prepared to begin construction "at a moment's notice."

The fleet maneuvers, officially designated as "fleet problem No. 15," will be held during late May and early June. The area of operation, it was indicated, will be the triangle between the Aleutian Islands, Hawaii, and Seattle, where the fleet problem of 1935 was conducted. Vessels and planes, probably will work as far west as the Wake Islands.

Armament of the new battleships is at present limited to 14 inch guns, but Admiral William H. Standley, chief of naval operations, said frankly that if Japan does not agree to this limitation by next April, "the sky is the limit."

Sabotage on American Warship Revealed

OUR navy's intelligence department has discovered that a recent small fire on the cruiser Indianapolis while she was being overhauled in the New York navy yard was caused by the driving of phonograph needles and nails into an electric cable; and other suspected sabotage on war vessels is being investigated. The work on the cruiser was being done by civilian employees and Capt. Charles A. Dunn, industrial manager of the yard, said the placing of the nails in the cables was "undoubtedly" a deliberate attempt to damage the cruiser.

Workers Undernourished, Says the A. F. of L.

IN ITS monthly survey of business the American Federation of Labor asserts that, despite increased industrial profits, there is widespread undernourishment among the wage earners. It adds that industry can well afford to raise the wages of the workers.

A study of employed workers' incomes in North Atlantic cities, the federation said, showed that only 28 per cent met the (income) requirements for an adequate diet, while 30 per cent did not have enough food to meet minimum requirements.

Asking "what income will assure a satisfactory food budget for a family of four?" the survey said: "The figures for Detroit indicate that families with less than $1,900 a year, for father, mother and two half-grown children, do not spend enough for food to buy the adequate diet at moderate cost."

Says Foreign Power Hired Him to Shoot King

GEORGE ANDREW McMAHON, on trial in London for drawing a revolver on King Edward during a parade last July, made the astounding assertion that he had been hired by representatives of a foreign power to shoot the monarch and they agreed to pay him 150 lbs. The man already had been acquitted on two of the three charges against him when he made the confession. It will be remembered that instead of shooting at Edward, he threw his revolver toward the king, who was mounted.

On the third charge, of unlawfully producing a pistol near the king with intent to alarm his majesty, McMahon was given one year in prison.

Discord in the World

Power Congress

HUNDREDS of delegates, from many nations, were present when the third World Power conference opened in Washington, with President Julius Dornmueller in the chair. Prospects were good for a useful discussion of the problems connected with the industry, but discord crept in early in the proceedings. At a round table debate on public regulation and ownership of utilities, M. P. Davidson, representing Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York, said the only way to reduce electric rates is by threatening public ownership. Three prominent private utility men promptly "took a walk," and John C. Dalton, manager of the County of London Electric Supply, criticized Davidson's talk as a "tirade."

Julius Dornmueller

The discussion started in connection with a paper by John E. Zimmerman, president of the United Gas Improvement company, who held that power "yardsticks," such as the TVA and Boulder Dam cannot be compared with private utilities unless operating conditions are similar. Such yardsticks, he said, will lead to competitive methods already proved "wasteful and unsatisfactory."

In papers taking the opposite view, Prof. William E. Mosher of Syracuse university, and James C. Bronight of the New York State Power Authority, held that public competition with private companies is "indisputable evidence" of declining faith in regulation.

Magnus Johnson, Former Senator, Dies

MAGNUS JOHNSON, who came from Sweden as an immigrant about forty years ago and made himself a power in Minnesota politics, is dead of pneumonia at the age of sixty-five. Johnson was an early enthusiast for co-operatives and for the Farmer-Labor movement and served in both houses of the Minnesota legislature. In 1923 he was elected United States senator to fill out the term of the late Knute Nelson. Defeated for the governorship in 1928, he retired to his farm, but in 1932 he was elected to congress. He was defeated for re-election in 1934 by Harold Knutson, and in the primary last June lost the farmer-Labor gubernatorial nomination to Elmer Benson.

Brazil's Babassu Oil Worries Dairymen

AMERICAN dairymen are protesting vainly to Secretary of State Hull against the reciprocal trade treaty with Brazil which, they assert, is seriously injuring the industry by encouragement of the manufacture of imitation butter. Under the treaty Brazilian babassu oil, unknown in United States markets prior to 1935, now is being used at the rate of more than a million pounds a month for manufacture of a butter substitute.

Mr. Hull referred the protests to Assistant Secretary Sayre, who pointed out that the provision for free importation of the nut and oil was authorized by congress in the trade agreement act of 1934. He added that the success of the program was of vital interest to the American dairy farmer, "who has more to gain from the re-establishment of prosperous domestic markets for his products through the restoration of an abundant foreign trade than by a policy of excluding even the most remotely competitive products."

Furred Suits "Must" for College

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

START your autumn wardrobe, Miss Collegian, with a fur-trimmed suit if you would underwrite for yourself a guarantee of being smartly and handsomely appareled throughout the coming round of campus and social activities. In fact the verdict handed down from the supreme court of high fashion declares a suit dramatized with lavish fur embellishment becomes an absolute "must have" this season for every woman and most especially for the college girl who would do the correct thing in matter of practical stylish daytime dress.

Since fur-laden costume suits are so outstanding on the current style program we are picturing a trio of last-minute models that simply radiate with style-significant details. These stunning ensembles were recently shown at a fashion revue presented by the style creators of Chicago in the wholesale district—a brilliant affair that intrigued a vast and appreciative audience to a point of high enthusiasm.

In these striking fashions three distinct trends are indicated—populuxe, tuxedo (with refer suggestion) and tunic. Generally speaking, the costume suit program for autumn and winter classifies into these silhouette influences. The daring, flaring youthful populuxe effect that distinguishes the colorful trotturer suit to the left carries appeal to the slender figure. This snappy walking suit of imported wool in the new moss green is lavishly bordered with red fox, a color combination that tunes in superbly with a glowing autumn landscape. The blouse is of rich lamo. The elegance of the material of which the blouse is made carries an important message in regard to the new fabric collections which foretell the use of most opulent and grandiose weaves for fall and winter fashions. Per example the latest move is to wear a waistcoat of costly brocade with the new cult as a happy diversion from the regulation blouse. As to evening velvets and satins and such they are superbly beautiful and "classy."

A tuscane wine costume of nubby wool is centered in the group. Here we have a jacket with fitted back and a spectacular lynx tuxedo front that dramatizes the picture. The very new and popular fur refer fronts such as stylize both jackets and long coats are quite similar to the tuxedo treatment. The dress with the "tuxedo" jacket is of matching material. It interprets a new neckline and has a double pearl ornament fastening down the front. Speaking of leading colors the wine shades repeat their triumph with dark rich greens (spruce green's the new theme) contesting for first honor.

The costume to the right is of spruce green wool trimmed in mink-dyed kollinsky. Here we have the more-than-ever popular tunic line. The tunic suit is a leader among leaders this season. The deep fur bordering is typical of the smartest fur treatments for fall. The matching muff and self-fur collar add a final touch of chic.

SHORT, FULL SKIRT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Skirts shorter and fuller is the exciting headline flashed from fashion's realm for fall and winter. Another significant style message is that the new modes reflect a strong British trend influenced by the forthcoming coronation of King Edward VIII. All this as a prologue to the story of the dress here shown made of black spotproof transparent velvet with full circular Victorian skirt and a basque blouse trimmed in royal blue chiffon with metal coin dots—inspired by fashions popular in the days of Queen Victoria. We learn furthermore from the series of fashion revues presented recently by the 'Style Creators of Chicago in the wholesale outlet that the coronation theme reflects in street outfits as well as in the richly colorful and jeweled evening costumes, also that the red being used is strictly a British wine color and that a typical British tunic and cap influence is evidenced in new stylings.

DECORATIONS FOR HATS FOR AUTUMN

Judging by the forecasts of autumn millinery we are getting back to the days when a hat which wasn't trimmed wasn't considered as worthy of attention.

Autumn hats have all sorts of novel decoration, usually in a shade which contrasts so that there is no chance of overlooking the elaboration of detail. Bonnet-like shapes that look suspiciously like those great-grandmothers once wore are trimmed with pompons and perky ostrich tips. Tassels, silk cords and even spangle arrangements in several different shades trim more sophisticated models.

The alliance of different tones is as significant as the trend toward trimming. Novel fancies of ribbon in two shades of green appear on black felt models and those of very dark felt shades. A soft raspberry tone is effective as a contrast for grayish blue.

Tunics Are Now Designed for All Types of Women

The vogue of tunics has reached the state where there are tunics designed for fat women, tunics for thin women, tunics for young and tunics for old. Woe unto the follower of fashion who happens to choose the wrong one.

Those flaring, knee length tunics which start from slender waistlines and shoot out in all directions are intended for the young and willowy creatures. The more they flare and the puffier the sleeves of the accompanying blouse—the younger they are. Stylish stouts are permitted to adopt the tunic theme providing they select the straight line version.

Furs on Fall Suits

Rich furs are shown on fall suits of black, rose-rust, green, brown, and gay mottled woolen. Black is the leading color. Next come the rusts, greens and browns, quite a bit of Oxford gray and blues that lean toward gray or green.

Golden Anniversary

According to an insurance company, the chances of celebrating a golden anniversary depend entirely upon one's age and that of the consort at the time of the marriage. Taking an average case in which the bride is twenty-two years of age and the bridegroom twenty-five years of age, the chances that they will both survive and celebrate their golden anniversary is 169 out of every 1,000, or about one in six.

SYNOPSIS

Job Braddon, young and fantastically successful broker of Chicago, is infatuated with Agnes Gleneth, beautiful daughter of a retired manufacturer. Rodney, a doctor, in love with Agnes, visits his brother, Job. Rod plans work at Rochester. Job suggests that he make a try for Agnes before leaving. In Rod there is a deeper, obstinate desire than in Job. Agnes believes he is happy, a girl must bind herself entirely to a man and have adorable babies. Rod visits Agnes and tells her of his great desire, but realizes it can never be fulfilled. Agnes' mother is attempting to regain her husband's love. Agnes has disturbing doubts as to what attracts her father in New York. Job tells Agnes he is going to marry her, and together they view an apartment in Chicago. Job asks Agnes to set an early date, but she tells him she cannot marry him. When the agent, Mr. Colver, offers to show them a furnished apartment, Job asks Agnes to see it alone, saying he must return to his office. Agnes consents and Job leaves. A radio is blaring terrifically from one of the apartments. Colver raps upon the door, which is opened by a scantily clad girl, who draws Agnes into the room. Colver finds her husband, Charles Lorrie, fatally shot. He calls the police. Myrtle Lorrie asks Agnes to phone Cathal O'Mara, a lawyer, to come at once. Agnes does. The police take charge. O'Mara arrives. The officers are antagonistic to him. Agnes sides with O'Mara. Agnes is to be a witness at the coming trial. Cathal's grandfather and father had lost their lives in the line of duty as city firemen, and his grandmother, Winnie, has built her all around Cathal, who, being ambitious, had "worked his way through law school" and, heading the appeal of the desperate and the despised cause, has committed himself to the defense of criminal cases. Thoughts of Agnes disturb Cathal. Mr. Lorrie had cast off the wife who had borne him his daughter to marry Myrtle, and after two years of wedded life she had killed him.

Agnes' mother tried to keep her in bed all day. "If we had gone to Florida, as we should have," her mother repeated, "this wouldn't have happened." "Not to me," said Agnes, and wondered who, instead, would first have stepped into that room, and been seized by Myrtle, and who would have summoned, for Myrtle, Martin O'Mara. She could not wish that it was not she.

Florida had been the winner playground for her father and mother in their years of happiness; and while Mother held the romantic illusion that, by returning together, they could recapture what they had had. Father lately had become more of a realist. He knew it would be dancing on the grave of their ecstasy.

Agnes lay looking at her mother but thinking of her father, who, though turned recalcitrant toward his wife, remained romantic—with whom? Some one younger, much younger, and perhaps like Myrtle? She couldn't imagine it; but—

She pulled the newspaper to her again, and looked at Charles Lorrie. You wouldn't think a man like that would marry Myrtle; he looked as if he'd have more sense. But sense didn't enter in. One day he'd wanted Myrtle; his dragons of desire had driven him, and he'd married her. Who was in New York for Father?

Agnes arose to be a witness at the inquest, and the coroner's jury decreed that there was cause to "hold" Myrtle Silver Lorrie to the Grand Jury, which took up the case early next week.

Job was to be a witness too, so Agnes and he went together; and they called her in, before him. So in she went alone, and stood before the 23 men, and swore to tell the truth and all of it.

Mr. Colver had just come out of the room, white and very nervous; and Agnes, trembling as she faced the 23 solemn men, wondered what Mr. Colver just had told them. Especially, had he told them of Bert?

Agnes repeated what she had related before.

"Now you have told us all that you saw or heard happen in your presence," the foreman challenged her.

"Yes."

"You are sure there is nothing more?"

"Nothing." But her face was burning.

"You have remembered something else?"

"Yes, I have."

And then there was no retreat; she had to tell them. And it was plain that word of Bert was new to all of them, that it was what they had needed—and that it was of great damage to Myrtle.

He had left his car on Dearborn street on the side across from the jail, and as they approached it, Agnes saw a man standing beside it whom she recognized suddenly as Martin O'Mara. She started a little; and when, the next instant, she felt Job's fingers tighten on her arm, she knew that he suspected who this was.

"That's the lawyer you called?" he said.

Agnes nodded; and before the men spoke to each other, she felt—almost as when O'Mara had come into the apartment confronted by the police—the flash of opposition to him.

Job could not like him, Agnes realized; Job could not possibly like him, even if she had not had her name coupled to his in the papers from the fact that she had summoned him for Myrtle. Under O'Mara's picture, one paper had so described him—"Martin O'Mara, the criminal lawyer; called to the Lorrie apartment by Miss Agnes Gleneth." That infuriated Job; and Agnes could feel it rising in him as they approached O'Mara.

Cathal O'Mara stood bareheaded, having taken off his hat, and holding it after Agnes spoke to him.

Cathal was excited, seeing her; but he did not show it. "How do you do, Mr. Braddon?" he said.

"What do you want?"

"Of you," said Cathal, suddenly hot inside, and because of that, only cooler without. "Little. I was in the jail," he explained to Agnes, as though he had not returned to her companion at all and nothing had passed between them; "and coming out, I saw Mr. Braddon's car. And I knew you were both before the Grand Jury."

"They'll indict your client by night," said Job.

"Yes," said Cathal. "I told her so." And he glanced toward the grim, black-barred walls connected to the Courts building by the covered passage known, most aptly, as "the Bridge of Sighs."

Over it, to and fro, trudged the accused to their trials and acquittals, or condemnations.

O'Mara's thought was returned, for the moment, within the jail; and Agnes wondered at what, within those gray walls, his mind caught; with what miseries and repugnances he dealt with; with what hopes and despair. She wished she could follow his thought in its flight.

She looked up at Job. Often his mind, momentarily, fled away; but she never had wished to follow its abstraction.

O'Mara recollected her. "After the indictment is found, as it will be, Miss Gleneth," he said, looking down at her, "shall I see you?"

"Why?" objected Job.

"I'll be preparing the case. In doing it, I must go over the evidence of my witnesses."

"You," said Job. "You imply she's yours. You're the hell of a nerve. Miss Gleneth is a witness for the state."

Cathal felt the pleasant furrow dancing within him. Oh, he liked a fight; and this man would give him one. He met Job's contempt straight, without

"I Was in the Jail," He Explained to Agnes.

anger. "The state may call Miss Gleneth; but so shall the defense; and whether or not the state calls her," Cathal said. "So it is my right and duty to review with my witnesses the testimony they will give. For that, Miss Gleneth, I'll go wherever you say. Some witnesses come to my office; I neither ask nor suggest that of you. With other witnesses, I go to them, to their offices. You having none, it would be at your father's office, perhaps, my best way meet."

"My office," said Job, "if you must confer with her. Her father's away."

"My mother's not," said Agnes, "so come to the house. Tomorrow—in the afternoon," said Agnes, breathless at this defiance of Job.

"Thank you. Tomorrow it will be."

CHAPTER V

Cathal O'Mara set out from the city at three on the following-day. He had been in court on another case; and when the hearing was adjourned, he took his car and drove north alone.

It was a sunny, warm, indolent March afternoon, with gutters running off the melt of the thawing snow, and the still air iridescent from the rising moisture. People appeared everywhere, and they seemed unusually pleasant and patient.

Far north along the lake shore were great Georgian homesteads, Elizabeth an manors, French chateaux and Renaissance palazzos which men, who made money in Chicago, gave to their wives to enhance and occupy them while they, separately, followed their own occupations and interests and their own transgressions, each after his own way.

The separateness of the women struck Cathal with particular force as he compared the fact that whereas he knew no few of the men who lived along these shores, he had never so much as spoken to one of the women until Agnes Gleneth had called him, over the phone, to come to the aid of Myrtle Lorrie.

In him, beside the eminently practical and realistic attitudes which went into the preparation of his cases (and won them for him) ran an incurable romanticism—which probably also had its value in court. He could uncover the most sordid details about one person, and turn about and idealize the next. In this best damn lawyer in town abode a little boy who had been reared by Winnie on ancient fairy and folk-tales never trusted to aught by tongue, never learned or taught from a page, but recited with all the mystic phrase and credence of oral tradition. So Cathal became steeped in the lore of heroes (and had not his grandfather proved himself one?) and of dragons, and of fair and utterly loyal ladies who would wait for their true love, in whatever guise he came and through whatever ordeal; until life's end.

Of course long ago these had thinned to symbols, but they had endured within him; and their delightful relics led him to constant emotional contradictions to the revelations of his own experiences.

So now Cathal, drove, denying himself illusions as to the greater nature of the men who dwell in these splendid places; he knew that, save for the possessions, they were as all men; yet as to the ladies, held so aloof from him, he was letting his fancies run. One he had met; and she was as none other out of all his encounters with women.

When he reached the house, Cathal discerned that instructions had been left concerning him. He asked for Miss Gleneth; but the man—it was Cravath—replied that he would tell Mrs. Gleneth that he was here.

Two girls (as Cathal first supposed) appeared on the stairs; the light-haired one was Agnes Gleneth, and the dark one he took for her sister until they were almost downstairs, and he saw that she was older.

He was familiar, in his profession, with women who kept into middle age, and through it, slender and youthful-looking figures and faces which denied, more or less successfully, the last decade of their years—women once greatly desired, who now desperately were "holding" their men, or striving to hold them against younger women.

Cathal Martin O'Mara, attorney-at-law, knew such women well; and he had learned to read the signs of success, or of failure, in their struggle. Here, he knew at least one was going on.

"You are the lawyer?" the mother asked him coldly.

"Yes," said Cathal.

She did not immediately proceed; and he was aware how she regarded him. His visit, and himself, composed for her an unavoidable, disagreeable incident. Her daughter for a moment had stepped out of the affairs of her own life, and intruded upon a tragic event in another's which had nothing whatever to do with her. Since they were unable to escape some further participation in the consequences of the intrusion, she must make it as formal and impersonal as possible. That was the mother's feeling.

It was not, even here, the daughter's. Cathal warmed, gratefully, as he glanced at her and she gave him her hand, which firmly pressed his for the instant; but her mother did not relax her feeling of offense at him.

"You approve of what your client did?" she demanded.

"Approve?" Cathal repeated; and this charge he had met before. "To represent an accused person is not to approve of her," he replied.

"Then what is it?"

"Mother!" said Agnes.

"I asked him, what is it?" She turned again to Cathal. "You are trying to prevent that woman from being punished, are you not? And you are here because you imagine my daughter will help you!"

"Yes," said Cathal; he knew there was no arguing with her now.

"I understand," Beatrice Gleneth said, less hostilely at his lack of opposition, "you have certain rights to question her."

Agnes stepped forward from beside her mother, and she took his hat. "Cravath," she called, before her mother could intertere, "take Mr. O'Mara's coat." A minute later she led him, and her mother, into the drawing-room.

Cathal looked about. He had never received in such a house before, and he made no attempt to conceal his interest in, nor his unfamiliarity with, such a big room.

His eyes went back to Mrs. Gleneth, and he better understood her. With no more effort of her own than was involved in marriage to a man who made money, she had come to this; but though she had it, she must starve herself slender, and she had done so—and she must keep herself over-young. And that she was endeavoring to do.

"Sit down now, won't you please?" said Agnes, the warmth within her spreading to her skin.

He waited until they both were seated separately and a little opposite each other, as they had come to be in their feelings. He dropped into a soft stuffed chair, facing them.

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

KICKING TEDDY UP-HILL

IT IS certain that Theodore Roosevelt would never have become President in the manner he did if it hadn't been for Sen. Thomas Platt, then the political boss of New York state. In order to insure the presence of a Republican at Albany, but with inner misgivings which were soon to be realized, he prevailed on the popular Rough Rider to become the gubernatorial candidate, shortly after the Spanish war.

Roosevelt was elected and showed immediately that he could not be controlled by Platt or any boss. Platt's embarrassment was only that of a politician. But the discomfort of his friends, thoroughly disturbed by Teddy's big stick gestures, became a problem.

The solution, finally arrived at by a devious route, appeared before the primaries of 1900. The Republican party in New York was to name a candidate for governor—perhaps Roosevelt again—in September. But the Republican party in the United States had to name a running mate for President McKinley, and the latter convention would be held in June!

Platt decided that Teddy would be the vice-presidential candidate. He would kick Roosevelt, up-hill, and out of New York state.

Roosevelt himself realized the move had been launched to shelve him, for so he regarded the vice-presidency. Moreover, neither Mark Hanna of Ohio, a president-maker in a big way in those days, nor McKinley wanted Roosevelt on the national ticket.

But Platt persisted. He was aided by Roosevelt's growing popularity, particularly in the West.

These Westerners carried their Roosevelt enthusiasm to the convention with them. The boom reached proportions that Hanna could not ignore and in a conference with Platt the night before the nominations the president-maker capitulated.

Hanna issued a statement advocating Roosevelt for the vice-presidency and told the newspapermen: "Boys, you can't stop it any more than you could stop Niagara."

Soon to become President at the unfortunate death of McKinley, Roosevelt won the election. And when the gleeful Senator Platt was asked if he would attend the inauguration he replied: "Yes, I am going down to see Theodore Roosevelt take the veil."

NOTICE TO A NOMINEE

A LOT of folks today believe that when political parties are convening, the favored candidates, wherever they may be, have one ear to a keyhole, a wetted finger uplifted to test direction of the political winds, and have set their radio dials the proper wave length to listen in on convention hall. Maybe they're right.

But it wasn't always like that. We had ten Presidents before the man who was destined to become the eleventh, James K. Polk of Tennessee, was informed of his candidacy by telegraph.

The dots and dashes that spelled out Polk's surprising overthrow of Martin Van Buren in the Democratic convention of 1844 were impulses over a newly-built line of telegraph between Baltimore, scene of the convention, and Washington, where the first man who received the news in what is today a commonplace fashion.

Van Buren, seeking to succeed himself, was easily the favorite. But he had steadily lost ground at the Baltimore meeting after being placed "on the spot" by the question of the annexation of Texas. Southern delegates began to forsake his candidacy in large numbers. His managers attempted to change the party's new two-thirds rule to a majority ukase, but were unsuccessful.

A steady drift to Polk began on the ninth ballot of the convention. Strangely enough, a letter from Jackson, Van Buren's mentor, which pleaded for harmony, helped complete the rout in Polk's favor.

The telegraph wire served for one more purpose on this momentous occasion. Sen. Silas Wright was in Washington and had been tendered second place on the ticket with Polk. He was angry over the shelving of Van Buren, so the dots and dashes which came back over the wire carried his indignant refusal of this chance to become the vice-president of the United States.

Gray Uniforms

Research among the archives of Fort Monroe, Va., reveals that the high-powered rifle was responsible for the change in color of uniforms of the United States Army from blue to olive drab. Blue, it was discovered, is visible at a longer distance than any other color, and makes an easy target for sharpshooters. Until after the Spanish-American war there were no guns accurate or high-powered enough to make any difference.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

When making bread and butter pudding, sprinkle each slice of bread and butter with desiccated coconut instead of currants, and strewn some on the top. This will make a change from the ordinary pudding and will be found very tasty.

If the stalks of broccoli are too thick, split them lengthwise before boiling, so that stalks will cook in the same amount of time as the buds. Broccoli should cook for 20 minutes after water starts boiling.

Refrigerator cookie, may be wrapped in waxed paper and kept in refrigerator for several days. Make into a roll and slice when ready to bake.

Steaming is a good way to cook vegetables, as it reduces the loss of minerals and vitamins. It is also economical, because you can cook several different vegetables at a time.

Instead of burning up withered stalks and plants, save them to lay over leaves used to cover flower beds. They prevent leaves blowing away. Burn these stalks and plants in the spring.

If you have no individual molds, jellies may be molded in muffin tins. Turn the pan upside-down, place hot, wet towel over pan and jellies will slip out easily.

Lemon slices served with tea are more attractive when sprinkled with paprika or chopped parsley.

Japanned articles should never be washed in hot water, as the Japan is likely to wash off. Use lukewarm water and soap.

Roosevelt and his New Deal

Mrs. D. T.

Who took the helm when Banks were broke,
And reduced interest on our note?
Loaned the farmers seed and hay
And gave them twenty years to pay?

ROOSEVELT.

Who took our young men off the streets
And gave them clothes and wholesome eats,
In clean and sanitary camps,
Instead of being lousy tramps?

ROOSEVELT.

Who gave us back our Beer and Wine?
Which may be bad, but most think fine,
And they will sure go down the line,
to vote for ROOSEVELT.

I know they say, he killed some cows,
But who bought up our starving cows?
And tho' friend Sam has turned his coat,
Because they shot his neighbor's sheep
The most of us are going to vote

What I Think

By M. P.

We care not what you think
The stuff you write does worse than stink,
It proves to us beyond a doubt,
That you are an unfair grouch.

When the Kansas farmer burned his 8 cent corn
You failed to raise your voice in scorn,
But when the New Deal plows up a field
And better prices for farmers yield
You let out a squeal

The stock speculator doesn't get a fair Deal
It matters not where we get beef and wheat
So long as we get enough to eat.

Yes, it's enough to make farmers mourn
When they think of the Hoover
3 cent cotton and 8 cent corn

But Roosevelt put mournfulness to flight
When he took up the common man's fight.

One of the grandest things that has ever been done
Was Roosevelt's 3C camps to save
Both father and son.

Yes, Landon has led the way to Cut school teachers' pay to
A dollar and a quarter per day.
But of course, no doubt, you think it's fine
To make slaves of our teachers
And heroes of our swine
