CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, Oct. 2, 1936

NUMBER 14

"Get the Job Done"

"Get the Job Done" is the campaign slogan of Governor Clyde Tingley, and Carrizozo has a clear cut demonstration of how the Governor gets the job done.

Recently when Governor Tingley was on an inspection tour in Lincoln County he was told about the dangerous condition of the loop in the road in Carrizozo. Inspecting the road himself the Governor saw the hazard of the dangerous turns both to motorists and pedestrians—a hazardous condition that has already claimed three lives.

"You get the right-of-way," the Governor told officials. "Wire me when you get it, and we'll start work immediately to build a straight road and cut out the curves."

Last week the wire went to Governor Tingley that the right-of-way had been obtained. Immediately word came back that highway crews and material were being assembled to rush the job through.

The job is underway. The dangerous condition is being removed. Carrizozo is getting its new piece of road.

The report from Santa Fe is that Governor Tingley instructed the Highway Department not to waste a single day in getting started, and to get the job done as fast as possible.

That kind of action will appeal to the voters when they look over the tickets on November 3, and we predict that a big majority of them will mark an X after the name of Clyde Tingley because they'll want to be sure that there is someone in the Governor's office in Santa Fe who can "Get the Job Done" for the next two years.

Football

By Bradley Smith

Last Friday afternoon the Carrizozo Grizzlies eleven met Alamo's team in what proved to be one of the outstanding games of the year. Alamogordo's line averaged 145 pounds to the Grizzlies, 120 pounds but our plucky little fellows showed some excellent coaching and a true fighting spirit. Alamo used all three and four year men, while only one man on our team had actually played in a real game before this year, therefore the out come of the game was apparent from the first kickoff.

Due to an arm injury which prevented our star center, Billy Beck from even being at the game Chavez filled the position extraordinarily well. Captain and quarter-back Charles Carl, full-back Charles Dow and blonde-headed half-back C. O. Davis starred, with no few iron willed attacks on their opponents. Sportsmanship was displayed by both teams. The game ended with Alamo away ahead in points but not near so far ahead in playing, considering the handicaps of the Grizzlies.

Today our boys are at Cloudcroft. We are sure they will bring back satisfactory results.

The Schedule for the Rest of the Season

School Notes

The Lincoln School District is very fortunate in having a modern four room school unit nearing completion. The building is Spanish style architecture, to be finished in buff pebble dash which is an effective contrast to the limestone rock foundation. Besides the four large classrooms, the auditorium 30x60 with a stage 10x20 will be a popular place for all community and school activities. For the first time the Lincoln School district will have a modern light plant and water system installed. This new school has cost the Lincoln School District $500.—the remainder of the cost being assumed by the W. P. A. project. Everyone in the Lincoln School District is mighty proud of their new school building.

Governor Tingley's Mother Passes Away

Governor Clyde Tingley was called to Marion, Ohio Tuesday night on account of the death of his mother, Mrs. Belle Tingley, age 83. He left Albuquerque by airplane to attend the funeral services which were held at Marion yesterday.

Singing Convention

The 7th Lincoln County Singing Convention will be held at Corona, Sunday Oct. 11th. The singing will begin at 10:00 A. M. and the basket dinner will be spread at 12:00. Everybody is urged to attend.

Roy and Ted Johnson have the Herald-Post and Times routes both in charge now. They are expert carriers and never miss a customer. We congratulate them upon this new contract which is in the nature of a promotion.

Senator Louise Coe

Mrs. Louise H. Coe of Glencoe is asking for re-election as Senator from the 15th District, comprised of Lincoln, Otero, Torrance and Socorro counties.

Senator Coe has served continuously in the New Mexico State Senate since 1925, and has been a forceful, outstanding member. She was the first woman to be elected to the State Senate. She was twice elected from the 18th District, (Lincoln and Otero counties). Last session she was elected President pro tem of the Senate.

In regard to her qualifications she is a graduate of the University of New Mexico, is a former school teacher and was superintendent of schools in Lincoln county.

Her ability in school matters was recognized from the start, and she has been chairman of the important educational committee ever since she became a member, even when the Senate was largely Republican and no other Democrat held a chairmanship.

Through her activities in educational and health programs, and her attitude toward the small ranchers and farmers she has established in the hearts of the people confidence in her honesty; her paramount desire to be fair and just to all has won the unswerving loyalty of farmers, laborers, tax payers, school, church, business and professional people throughout the district.

Through knowledge gained at her ranch home, through experience gained from eleven years in the senate, through her accomplishments as a social and civic leader, through her ability to hold the esteem of all classes, through her initiative and enthusiasm she is qualified beyond the average to represent the people of the district as Senator.

As a result of the storm Saturday and Sunday, linemen are busy repairing telephone lines in Ruidoso and other points in the county.

Mrs. Adams of Capitan is recuperating rapidly from operations performed by Doctor Goodwin, a bone specialist of El Paso, and Doctor Rathmann of Carrizozo. She was dismissed from the Rathmann Hospital Wednesday.

We acknowledge receipt of some fine pumpkins, carrots and onions from Mrs. Whitaker of Nogal, all of which came in "handy" and were appreciated.

Roosevelt vs. Hearst on "Red Backing"

ASSERTIONS made by William Randolph Hearst and other opponents of the New Deal that the President "passively accepts" the support of the Communists have got under Mr. Roosevelt's skin. A statement issued through Stephen T. Early, his secretary, said:

W. R. Hearst

"My attention has been called to a certain notorious newspaper owner to make it appear that the President passively accepts the support of alien organizations hostile to the American form of government.

"Such articles are conceived in malice and born of political spite. They are deliberately framed to give a false impression, in other words to 'frame' the American people.

"The President does not want and does not welcome the vote or support of any individual or group taking orders from alien sources.

"This simple fact is, of course, obvious. The American people will not permit their attention to be diverted from real issues to fake issues which no patriotic, honorable, decent citizen would purposely inject into American affairs."

Mr. Hearst, who was in Amsterdam, promptly replied by cable, saying in part:

"The President has issued a statement through a secretary. He has not had the frankness to say to whom he refers in the statement. I think I am justified in assuming that I am the object of the statement, and that I may courteously endeavor to correct Mr. Roosevelt's misstatements and to set him right.

"Let me say that I have not stated at any time whether the President willingly or unwillingly received the support of the Karl Marx Socialists, the Frankfurter radicals, communists and anarchists, the Tugwell bolsheviks, and the Richberg revolutionists which constitute the bulk of the following:

"I have simply said and shown that he does receive the support of these enemies of the American system of government, and that he has done his best to deserve the support of such scoundrel and destructive elements.

Al Smith Will Make Some Anti-Roosevelt Speeches

SPEECHES concerning what Al Smith would take in the Presidential campaign seems to be being held by the news that he will deliver several anti-Roosevelt addresses in the next few days. In New York on October 10, he is reported to be making out his campaign program and planning talks in Massachusetts and New Jersey. He said neither the Republican party nor the American Liberty League will sponsor his appearances. Until Mr. Smith announces his intentions it will not be known whether or not he will address the election of Governor Land.

Crop Insurance Pushed by the President

IMMEDIATE action toward putting in operation a two-fold crop insurance and drought prevention program was called for by President Roosevelt. It is designed to guard the farmers and the consumers against the danger of food shortages or price collapses. Two committees were named to work out legislation to be asked of the next congress.

M. L. Cooke

Mr. Roosevelt named Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace chairman of a committee directed to "prepare a report and recommendations for legislation providing a plan of all risk crop insurance," and suggested that the system provide for payment of premiums and insurance in commodities. This is in accord with Wallace's proposed plan under which farmers would put part of their crops of good years into a pool from which they could draw in lean years. It would serve, he believes, to keep surpluses from destroying the price structure in good years and provide an "insurance" against crop failures in other years.

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator, was named chairman of another committee to draft recommendations for a permanent land use program designed to avert drought emergencies in the great plains area. The President suggested the crop insurance plan might be limited to one or two major crops at the start and that it should be formulated with the advice and assistance of national farm organization leaders so that it can be submitted to congress with their support.

Veterans of Two Wars Open Conventions

VETERANS of the World war and of the Civil war opened their annual gatherings, the American Legion in Cleveland and the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington. The Legionnaires, many thousands of them, started off with the dedication of the Peace Gardens in the Ohio city, for which soil had been brought from sacred shrines of foreign countries and the forty-eight states. National Commander Ray Murphy presided over an impressive ceremony and unveiled a memorial plaque bearing the inscription:

"These gardens, planned by men who know the horrors of war, were dedicated to the brotherhood of man and peace throughout the world."

Commander Murphy in his annual report said: "Whether our country shall be spared participation in another great international conflagration may well depend upon our courage as Legionnaires to stand up and demand that our government now take the steps which may save us, without the loss of honor—a sacrifice we are unwilling to make at any cost."

Only about nine hundred survivors of the Union army were able to attend the G. A. R. encampment, and many believe it will be the last to be held. The aged warriors, headed by Oley Nelson of Iowa, the national commander, began their proceedings with a service in Washington cathedral. The route of their parade was six blocks on Pennsylvania avenue, the scene of the grand review of the Union armies before President Andrew Johnson seventy-one years ago.

Virgin Islands Have New Federal Judge

GEORGE P. JONES of Minnesota, who has been serving as a special assistant to the attorney general of the United States since 1934, has been made judge of the federal district court for the Virgin Islands. This is a recess appointment by President Roosevelt and is subject to confirmation by the senate. Mr. Jones planned to leave for St. Thomas about October 1. He succeeds Judge Albert C. Levitt of Connecticut, who resigned August 1 because, as he alleged, the Department of the Interior interfered with the processes of his court.

G. P. Jones

The oath of office was administered to Mr. Jones in Washington by Ugo Cruz, executive assistant to Attorney General Cummings, in the presence of Mr. Cummings and a number of other officials.

McAlexander, "Rock of the Marine," Dies

MAJ GEN ULYSSES S. GRANT McALEXANDER, U. S. A., retired, who won fame in the World war as "The Rock of the Marine," died suddenly in his home in Portland, Ore., at the age of seventy-two.

The general won his appellation for his stand in stemming a terrific assault by the Germans in their final great offensive on the western front in July, 1918.

He was then colonel in command of the Thirty-eighth infantry, and at the most critical period of the German attack he was told by headquarters that he might fall back if he thought best. He replied positively: "I will hold my lines," and he did. It was the Germans who fell back.

Spanish Rebels Rush on Toward Madrid

SEVERAL columns of Spanish Fascists and Moorish legionnaires were reported to be making a determined drive toward Madrid under the direction of General Franco, and the loyalists were falling back at the rate of five miles a day.

The rebel garrison of the Alcázar in Toledo was still holding out through the government forces, after dynamiting part of the old fortress, made attacks with flaming gasoline. The defenders lost heavily but the survivors kept up their deadly machine gun fire and repulsed the charges of the loyalists. This heroic garrison had been holding the fort for nine weeks.

The American State department ordered the embassy in Madrid closed and warned all Americans still in the capital that they remained at their own risk. The consulate at Malaga also was closed and the consul took refuge in Gibraltar. Diplomats of 13 nations, who had gone to Saint Jean de Luz, France, rejected the Spanish government's demand that they return to Madrid.

Killings Pave the Way for Japan's Move Against China

PROBABLY Japan is about ready to proceed further with the subjugation of China, the latest excuses being the alleged murder of several Japanese nationals by Chinese. It was announced by the navy department in Tokio that Japanese marines had been ordered to land at Hankow to protect the life and property of Japanese there, and that "the navy fears that it may be forced to resort to some defensive measures in the near future." The announcement added that the sincerity of the Nanking government in wanting to end anti-Japanese feeling in China was not dependable and hence protective measures were taken.

Havana Paper Dynamited; Four Persons Killed

FOUR persons were killed and two buildings wrecked by a dynamite blast that shook Havana, Cuba. The plant of the newspaper El Pais was destroyed, and only the quick work of the police saved that of the Diario de la Marina.

Informed authorities expressed belief the explosion was planned by Spanish residents who became angry over publication of Spanish civil war news in the two newspapers.

The blast demolished a Catholic church near the El Pais building. Scores of suspects were arrested, many of them being members of the Spanish Socialist circle.

Defeat of Senator Couzens Pleases the Republicans

REPUBLICANS were highly gratified by the results of the Michigan primary election for two reasons: First, because three out of five persons who went to the polls asked for Republican ballots; second, because Senator James Couzens, a Republican who has openly declared that he is supporting President Roosevelt for re-election, lost his fight for re-nomination. Couzens, one of the wealthiest members of the senate, was badly defeated by former Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker, and there is more than a suspicion that he knew his fate beforehand. Brucker, who is only forty-two years old, had been in public life for almost twenty years. The Republicans re-nominated Frank D. Fitzgerald for the governorship.

Sen. Couzens

On the Democratic side Representative Prentiss M. Brown won the senatorial nomination against Louis B. Ward who was supported by Father Coughlin. For governor they chose Frank Murphy, high commissioner to the Philippines and former mayor of Detroit. Both Murphy and his defeated opponent, George Welsh, campaigned as Roosevelt supporters.

In the New Hampshire primaries Gov. H. Styles Bridge won the Republican senatorial nomination, ending the effort of former Senator George H. Moses to stage a comeback. The Democrats put up Representative William N. Rogers. Nominees for governor are Maj. Francis P. Murphy, Republican, and Amos N. Blandin, Democrat.

Massachusetts will have for senator either Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican, or James M. Curley, now governor, Democrat. John W. Haigis, Republican, and Charles F. Hurley, Democrat, were nominated for the governorship.

The gubernatorial nominees in Wisconsin are: Gov. Philip La Follette, Progressive; Alexander Wiley, Republican; and Arthur W. Lueck, Democrat.

Savants Gather for the Harvard Tercentenary

IT IS pleasant to turn from war and politics and read of the doings at Cambridge, Mass., where Harvard university is celebrating the tercentenary of its founding.

In Sanders theater was held the academic reception for 554 scholars representing 502 universities, colleges and learned societies in every state of the Union and in forty foreign countries, and all of them wearing the caps, gowns and hoods signifying their various degrees of scholarship. President James B. Conant greeted the guests, accepted their credentials and delivered a simple address of welcome. He noted that the assembly was an impressive demonstration of the solidarity of the academic world, and saw in the greetings of the delegates "the continued aspiration of mankind toward a universal fellowship based on human reason."

When the delegates were called up in the order of the age of the institutions they represented, first to respond was Prof. Saleh Hashem Atia of Al-Azhar university of Cairo, founded in 970. Then came the next oldest, the Regia university, Neglia Studi Bologna, founded in the Tenth century, and represented by Prof. Corrado Gini. Third was the University of Paris, founded in the Eleventh century, whose representative was Dr. Cartan, Oxford, Cambridge and all the others followed, down to the youngest represented, the Academia Sinica of Nanking, China.

Il Duce Greets Mothers and Their Children

Effusively being the most desirable feminine virtue, in the eyes of Premier Mussolini, these Italian mothers at Potenza brought their offspring with them when they gathered to meet Il Duce. Premier Mussolini is here shown chatting with a group of mothers, during his visit to Potenza. For several years, Mussolini and his Fascist government have urged the rearing of large families. Various government funds have been appropriated to give financial aid to families with several children, and the result has been a gradual increase in Italy's birthrate. Germany under the Hitler government has also used similar schemes to check the declining birth rate and to increase the population. The war and the recent financial distress in European countries has caused a falling off in the population figures, and looking to the future, the militaristic governments have used every means to increase the population.

DRAGONS DRIVE YOU

SYNOPSIS

Jeb Braddon, young and fantastically successful broker of Chicago, is infatuated with Agnes Gleneth, beautiful daughter of a retired manufacturer. Rodney, a doctor, in love with Agnes, visits his brother, Jeb. Rod plans work at Rochester. Jeb suggests that he make a try for Agnes before leaving. In Rod there is a deeper, obstinate decency than in Jeb. Agnes believes to be happy, a girl must bind herself entirely to a man and have adorable babies. Rod visits Agnes and tells her of his great desire, but realizes it can never be fulfilled. Agnes' mother is attempting to regain her husband's love. Agnes has disturbing doubts as to what attracts her father in New York. Jeb tells Agnes he is going to marry her, and together they view an apartment in Chicago. Jeb asks Agnes to set an early date, but she tells him she cannot marry him. When the agent, Mr. Colver, offers to show them a furnished apartment, Jeb asks Agnes to see it alone, saying he must return to his office. Agnes consents and Jeb leaves. A radio is blaring terrifically from one of the apartments. Colver raps upon the door, which is opened by a scantily clad girl, who draws Agnes into the room. Colver finds her husband, Charles Lorrie, fatally shot. He calls the police. Myrtle Lorrie asks Agnes to phone Cathal O'Mara, a lawyer, to come at once. Agnes does. The police take charge. O'Mara arrives. The officers are antagonistic to him. Agnes sides with O'Mara. Agnes is to be a witness at the coming trial. Cathal's grandfather and father had lost their lives in the line of duty as city firemen, and his grandmother, Winnie, has built her all around Cathal, who, being ambitious, had worked his way through law school and, heading the appeal of the desperate and the despised cause, has committed himself to the defense of criminal cases. Thoughts of Agnes disturb Cathal. Mr. Lorrie had cast off the wife who had borne him his daughter to marry Myrtle, and after two years of wedded life she had killed him. The coroner's jury holds Myrtle to the grand jury. Agnes promises O'Mara to review the case with him.

"They told about Bert in the papers this morning," Agnes suddenly said, surprising him.

"Yes," said Cathal.

"Because I told them. I told the Grand Jury yesterday."

"Did you?" said Cathal, and watched her flush up to the roots of her fine, straw-yellow hair. She had on a simple blue dress (the same, it was, which she had worn for Rod); and in it she delighted this man too, though she was not thinking of him now.

"If I hadn't, wouldn't they have indicted her?"

He laughed, reassuring her, and she sat back. "You'd nothing to do with the indictment; and they know about Bert, but they didn't know he'd called her at the flat while you were there with her."

"Did you know that?" asked Agnes.

"Certainly; she told me."

"Oh!"

Her mother stirred herself. How familiarly her daughter had been conversing with this criminal lawyer!

"You have just referred to your client, I presume," she said to Cathal.

"Yes."

Suddenly curiosity caught her against her intention. "Does a woman like that tell her attorney all the truth about herself?"

"Some do," said Cathal.

"Did she?"

"She told me about Bert—and her relations with her husband. He knew it; and he knew about Bert—that Bert was in love with her, and she was in love with Bert. She's much like any other woman; and he was just a husband who'd made for himself too much money."

"If your daughter had happened to pass that door in the morning, instead of the afternoon, she'd have seen a husband and wife like enough to a million others. 'Tis the way with a crime like murder—especially murder. Mrs. Gleneth. It springs from nothing unusual. Just from the most casual things in the world. It comes from—the most human impulses pushed a bit further."

"What are you talking about?"

"The life all of us are living," Cathal replied, without breaking his calm. "And when one suddenly stops living it, from being shot by his wife, others can see plainer, perhaps, what they're up to. Take Charles Lorrie and his first wife—and his second who shot him: There's nothing strange in the three of them from start to finish—except the length to which two of them went with their impulses."

"Which two?" Agnes heard his mother ask.

"Lorrie and Myrtle—who, after he'd cast off her that bore his daughter to him, then married him. He started his trouble by what he did; and her mind clung to its quieter yet strangely stirring contents."

She closed the drawer and took downstairs the paper which preserved her impressions of that apartment wherein Myrtle had seized upon her.

Cathal arose to receive from Agnes the paper she had brought him; and he remained standing in the center of the room as he read.

Agnes had dated the paper, and at the top had written why she was recording, at that time, exactly what she had seen and heard and done; and why she had done what she had.

Cathal could catch its importance to his client and at the same time look through this writing deep into the revelation of the nature of the girl who was watching him read. How impossible to dissemble when one writes upon a page!

Cathal had not seen Agnes' writing before; and he looked up from this page she had written and realized as he had not, her case.

"Was her mother aware, Agnes wondered almost aghast, what she was betraying? Or didn't she care, if this man gave her a hint that would help her?"

"It lets the man deny his years," Cathal answered the mother as though he noticed nothing of her intensity. "He makes only more money, though growing older. It seems a sign of strength, greater instead of less with his years. His wife, she finds nothing in her dolings to deny her years for her. Spending money doesn't do it. You got to make it. It's making money that gives proof, which the wife can't match, of his greater ability and attractions."

"Attractions!" Beatrice Gleneth repeated, and Cathal caught a twitch-like wince, so he said quickly:

"Lorrie knew better—but they all do. He knew it was his money, not him, that Myrtle had to have. She married him for it."

"And she could have got away with it, and so could he, and been satisfied, if he hadn't been happy in his marriage before. It was that which proved the death of him—that once he'd been happy!"

"How?" breathed Beatrice.

Cathal confronted her. "Have you not known happiness?" he said boldly, and waited for no answer. "Then how, having bought her with money, could he have with her the full of it?"

"She sold herself body and soul to him, did Myrtle, whom your daughter walked in on, Mrs. Gleneth. She tried to deliver her soul as well as her body to him; but the soul wouldn't deliver. Something sees to that."

He stopped, and Beatrice Gleneth remained standing, waiting for him.

"But Charles Lorrie would have soul as well as body, having paid for it. Poor as her soul was, he would have it. Once he had a wife, body and soul, you see; so he was spoiled for less. And then there was Bert. So he began to beat up his young wife Myrtle. A trifle before two o'clock on that day, when later your daughter had the ill luck to be looking about the building with Mr. Braddon, Charles Lorrie went too far. . . . There were certain bruises and contusions on Myrtle which your daughter, placed as she was with Myrtle, could not have failed to see. So I must make sure of the manner of her memory of them, and some other items of evidence."

Agnes told him: "The morning after the—after we were in that apartment, and I read the newspapers here, I wrote down everything that I knew I'd done. The papers printed some things I didn't see and didn't do. And they didn't agree with each other."

"No," said Cathal. "Have you what you wrote?"

"In my room." And she arose. "I'll be right back."

In her room she bent before her desk, and pulled out the drawer containing her own intimate, sentimental miscellany.

She remembered now, when she had started to tuck in with this medley the record of her meeting with Myrtle Lorrie, she had stopped, restrained by the feeling that this memorandum was utterly alien and contaminating to the other contents of the drawer. But she had no safer repository; and so she had thrust it under the other things.

She withdrew it with no such exaggerated offense at its utter strangeness. Myrtle, into whose life Agnes Gleneth had stumbled, was no woman apart. This evening, in New York, might her father be seeking some counterpart of Myrtle?

And what of Jeb twenty years from now, or sixteen years or much less, if he exhausted his happiness with her sooner?

How, actually, had Jeb offered himself?

He'd give her all; and she'd give him all. Together, while their cup contained them, they'd tip it up and drain it to the last drop of mutual emotion. And then he would turn to some other woman? And what would she do?

"I don't know Glen; and neither do you. And I don't care—nor do you—if we first have everything from each other."

But she did care.

She shifted to the drawer one of Jeb's impetuous, exciting letters; and she touched for an instant, and almost with a cress, the envelope which Rod had addressed to her; and her mind clung to its quieter yet strangely stirring contents.

She closed the drawer and took downstairs the paper which preserved her impressions of that apartment wherein Myrtle had seized upon her.

Cathal arose to receive from Agnes the paper she had brought him; and he remained standing in the center of the room as he read.

Agnes had dated the paper, and at the top had written why she was recording, at that time, exactly what she had seen and heard and done; and why she had done what she had.

Cathal could catch its importance to his client and at the same time look through this writing deep into the revelation of the nature of the girl who was watching him read. How impossible to dissemble when one writes upon a page!

Cathal had not seen Agnes' writing before; and he looked up from this page she had written and realized as he had not, her case.

It multiplied in him the most powerful a man's instincts—most powerful in some men—to protect a woman in her innocence. To protect? To possess her, that was.

"God help you, Cathal!" Winnie would have cried with dread and fear for him, could she have seen him look up, from Agnes' memorandum, to Agnes.

Agnes' mother did see him; but in her mind there lay between her daughter and this lawyer an unbridgeable chasm which she could not imagine him, even in fancy, attempting to cross. Indeed, she left them alone a few minutes after Cathal began to review, in his clear, competent way, the items of evidence. The fellow—Beatrice Gleneth decided—was not offensive; on the contrary, he had a knack of dealing with most delicate subjects impersonally.

"You will make a good witness," Cathal said.

"For her?" said Agnes.

"For whom else?" asked Cathal.

"You'll get her off!" Agnes realized aloud, as she looked at him.

She liked him; she had liked him from the instant she saw him enter Myrtle's apartment, where the police already were. The people in the courtroom would like him; the jury would like him.

The tall clock in the hall surprised Agnes with its deep, booming stroke of five; the sun, unregarded, had cut its dimming radiance half across the room. It caught Cathal's head, and Agnes observed that his hair was not, as she had thought, black, but a burn of so deep a hue that only the direct sun brought out the red in it.

He had very nice hair; and he had better hands. In strength and shape, than any other man she knew—except Rod. His eyes were as blue as Agnes knew her own to be. This lawyer had eyes that could be cool, competent, practical; and then you could catch him looking away like a dreamer, a poet.

"I'll copy this; then that's all I'll need of you, now," he said.

"How did you get into your business?" Agnes suddenly asked him.

"The law?"

"I mean, defending women like Myrtle-Lorrie."

Finally he said:

"I was offered what you would call a good start in a law-firm, after I was admitted to the bar. Miss Gleneth," he said. "It was with a firm you'd highly approve—knowing nothing but the name of the partners and the clients they serve. You know some of them—the clients' daughters and sons. Some live along this lake shore, making their money—the men—in the city. Your father'd know many of them. I'd done well enough in law school, and made an acquaintance that got me the offer of the job; but it wasn't entirely me they wanted. It was more my connections."

"Connections?" said Agnes.

"Mine, such as they were, which made me friends with some who had influence in fixing what others must pay to the support of the State and the city—in taxes. I could be useful, I found, in seeing real-estate assessments adjusted and taxes reduced to make properties more profitable for those owning them. I was to be used in the tax-cheating that was cutting the heart out of Chicago."

"I don't understand," said Agnes, watching him.

"How would you? Don't think me putting myself above them that were asked to do what I wouldn't. You see, I was stopped by a stake of my own which I have in the city."

"You mean property?" asked Agnes, wondering at his feeling.

He shook his head. "No, not property. Nothing I own; merely a—a memory. At least it made me thank them that offered me that job, and turned me to criminal law—taking the case of the Myrtle Lorries. Shooting's cleaner."

"Then what?"

He was striking back, Agnes felt; but not at her. It was at others whom he felt in some way associated with her—and how closely, she wondered.

"You Will Make a Good Witness," Said Cathal.

Sophistication Is Going Out—

Youth Doffing the Soiled Mantle of Those Embittered by Disappointment

A COLLEGE DEAN said recently that being sophisticated is going out of fashion.

Can it be true that the craze for sophistication—to appear blasé, to seem worldly wise, to know it all, to be hard-boiled and contemptuous of the simple things—can it be true that modern youth is through with it?

And why? Is the advent of old-fashioned hats and ruffles so influencing our point of view that modern youth now wants to throw sophistication into the discard?

I think I know the reason, says a woman writer of international reputation. Modern Youth must have found out the real meaning of the word. Poring over their dictionaries they must have accidentally bumped into the derivation of "sophisticated."

For "sophisticated" means adulterated. Look it up and see if it doesn't!

And come to think of it, it couldn't have a better name. If the wisest of us had tried to put a fitting label on that less of youth's natural and beautiful freshness—if a genius had tried to express that warping of standards, that ainting of taste, that souring of outlook, that premature aging of all the sensibilities he could have manufactured no better word than "sophisticated."

For sophistication is an adulteration of viewpoint, of judgment, of taste by the taint of frustration, the bitterness of disillusionment, the poison of disappointment, the dregs of the cup of poor experience. True, life is not all beauty or joy or perfection. Neither is it all bitter or sour or wrong.

One of the most powerful weapons in the hands of youth is its freshness, its faith to write on its own slate only beauty and perfection. And when youth prematurely dons the soiled and shabby mantle of those who have known disappointment and failure, it does right to call this by the name "sophistication"—a synonym of adulteration.

State Fair

With all available booth space in the exhibit buildings at the Eastern New Mexico State Fair next week taken, and additional entries in the livestock division, directors of the fair were sure that the exhibits this year would be larger than ever before. Some commercial exhibits had to be refused because of lack of space and every inch of space was utilized in assigning location of booth displays. Directors emphasized, however, that individual entries in the farm products department, the handicraft, fine arts and domestic arts department would be well taken care of up to the closing hour specified in the premium list for the various divisions. This fair starts Wednesday, October 7 and closes Saturday night.

New Fertilizer Made From Starch Penetrates Soil Carries Phosphorus to Roots of Plants

Reno, Nev.—Combining a possible large-scale use for farm products with a very much more effective way to get phosphorus to the roots of growing plants, a new type of fertilizer developed at the Nevada University College of Agriculture in Reno is being watched with greatest interest by both agricultural scientists and fertilizer manufacturers.

Phosphorus is one of the most important of all fertilizer elements, yet it is at present one of the most inefficiently used. In the forms now commercially available, the phosphorus is grabbed by other chemical elements in the soil and held in insoluble form almost where it falls.

Experts Make Discovery.

It does not penetrate to any appreciable degree below the level disturbed by the plow, whereas most common crops and all orchard trees send their feeding roots far below the plowline.

Obviously, a soluble fertilizer, that will penetrate deeper, is a highly desirable thing. Dr. Robert Stewart and V. E. Spencer have been experimenting with organic compounds of phosphorus, instead of the simpler inorganic ones now in use.

Economical to Produce.

They have made several entirely new phosphate compounds, of which the most successful, both in its behavior in the soil and in its possibilities for economic manufacture, are compounds with common glucose.

If the glucose phosphates come into extensive use it will provide a tremendous potential market for corn and other high-starch farm products. Starch is easily converted into glucose, and the glucose, combined into the new, highly efficient phosphorus fertilizer, can return to make the farm and orchard more profitable.

Hawaiian Climate Growing Warmer, Records Indicate

Honolulu—While weather on the "mainland" is giving people plenty to think about, students of climatology in Hawaii are having their own problems to puzzle over. Three changes have become apparent.

Tradewinds in the Pacific have shifted their course.

Hawaii's temperature is gradually rising.

Distribution of rainfall in the mid-Pacific American territory is changing.

Expert Makes Study.

Some points in Hawaii are receiving 30 per cent more rain than they did 30 years ago while other points are receiving 21 per cent less. Every month in the year is slightly warmer than the corresponding period 30 years ago.

These are some of the conclusions John H. Voorhees, in charge of the U. S. Weather Bureau at Honolulu, has drawn from a study of records covering the period since the federal government established an official weather bureau there in 1904.

The warmest December day in Honolulu in nearly half a century was December 9, 1935, when the maximum temperature was 84.6 degrees.

First public knowledge of an apparent slight upward climb in Hawaii's temperature was obtained in 1923, when Edward A. Beals, at that time in charge of the U. S. Weather Bureau in Hawaii, reported to his department head in Washington that "Hawaii is growing warmer year by year."

Abandoned Mine Shaft Is Used to Cure Roquefort

Washington.—An old abandoned mine shaft in Pennsylvania is the newest idea in curing places for domestic Roquefort cheese, reports the Department of Agriculture here.

The damp shaft has been white-washed and air at 43 degrees Fahrenheit forced through it.

Thus a new underground place has been added to an industry already noted for its queer locations. On the upper Mississippi river caves have been cut out of the damp sandstone bluffs near St. Paul to provide curing rooms.

Growth of Timber Nears Balance With Consumption in U. S.

Danger of Exhaustion No Longer a Specter

FIGURES often quoted, to show that America is using up timber resources several times as fast as they are being re-grown, were called in question by John B. Woods of the Society of American Foresters, in an address before his colleagues in Washington, D. C.

Changes during very recent years, he declared, have gone far toward bringing timber production into balance with timber consumption.

The changes involve both an increase in tree growth and a sharp decline in timber use, he said. The new approach to a balanced state is of post-depression date.

Consumption Declines.

"To compare growth and drain on the basis of 1929 and prior years is to cling to the bad old days," Mr. Woods contended. Consumption declined abruptly from a five-year average of 36 billion feet of lumber to 10.4 billion for the next five-year period.

"Total forest drain for the period 1929-1934 is estimated by Smith in the N. R. A. report as 9,500,000 cubic feet per year. The same report carries an estimate of growth for the same period of 8,900,000 cubic feet.

"We recognize that production and loss at the old rate, put too great a burden upon our growing capacity. But reduced consumption and increased effectiveness of protective measures have put us practically in a state of balance. The job now is to complete the extension of management to all our lands—both public and private—and build up our productive capacity."

Re-Growth Is Rapid.

The accelerated re-growth of our timber is a tri-regional affair, Mr. Woods states. In the still-unexhausted Northwest, lumbermen have at last learned the lessons of more conservative cutting, better protection against fire and other natural agencies of destruction, and provision for replacement on cut-over lands.

Instead of becoming a barren waste of treeless flats and hills, the South "in two decades has become a potential yellow pine farm, now growing upon half of its pine lands (according to Inman Eldredge) 10,000,000 cords of wood each year. As the great plant swings into production, as the small trees become big ones, the annual yield of saw-timber and pulpwood may exceed in volume the yearly output of old-growth pine in the old days."

Yellowstone Elks Face Starvation in Coming Winter

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—Yellowstone's ten thousand elk of the Northern herd face starvation and death during the coming winter, because of the unprecedented failure of their rangeland and of the fields where hay is normally grown for their winter use.

A survey of the situation, just completed here, shows a falling off in density of forage vegetation of twenty-seven per cent, as compared with the figures for last year.

Not only is the total amount of vegetation decidedly less, but what is left is qualitatively less fit for animal consumption. The palatable grasses have been largely burned out or eaten off to the roots. Their place is taken by various kinds of undesirable weeds and unpalatable brush.

Recovery Is Slow.

This means not only bitter hard times for the elk during the coming winter, but also very slow recovery of the one-time rich game rangeland. The pasture will be years, perhaps decades, in coming back.

"Perhaps the most distinct indication of volume of forage that will be available during the coming winter is the height of forage plants," the report continues. "The average height of all plants examined in the plots is 65 per cent less than in 1935."

"In several instances the quadrants examined did not contain a single grass seed stalk, while in the previous year a good seed crop was produced. Seedling crops have been totally lacking this year or have died due to weather conditions."

Deaths Exceed Births in French Republic

Paris.—Deaths exceeded births in France during 1935, declares the scientific journal La Science et la Vie.

Births during the year numbered 638,031, and there were 658,337 deaths—a morbidity excess of nearly 20,000. During 1934 births exceeded deaths by about 43,000. Unemployment and rising cost of living in France are blamed for the situation.

At the same time Germany showed an excess of 400,000 births over deaths during 1935.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THOSE who are making a collection of old glassware that has designs of deep cutting or pressing, realize that the pieces are really beautiful only when they are bright and shining. This is true of modern glass also, of course, but the antique pieces more frequently have deeply imprinted patterns than does modern glass, and this makes them harder to wash and dry.

The first thing of importance is to have a good solution to wash the glass in, and of the proper temperature. A teaspoonful of washing soda and two or three teaspoonfuls of powdered soap to four quarts of hot water is recommended. After the soda and soap have dissolved, let the water be very warm but not scalding hot, and then put in the glassware.

At first do not immerse glass completely. If there is hollow ware such as tumblers, goblets, pitchers, etc., put the pieces in on their sides with water to half fill them. This allows the glass to expand, as it does under heat, and do this slowly. Allow the heat gradually to penetrate the glass. Otherwise the heat may be too sharp and sudden and breakage occur.

Cloth and Brush.

A brush is a great aid in cleaning glass with deep cutting or impressions. The bristles will get into crevices a dishcloth cannot, especially if the brush rotates as is the case with the kind used for washing bottles. Such a brush is good for cleaning the inside of vases, as well as outside crevices.

Drying cut glass has always offered problems. Jewelers overcome the difficulties by burying the pieces in jewelers' sawdust until the moisture is entirely absorbed, and then polishing the pieces with a cloth and brush. The homemaker will scarcely have a sufficiently large quantity of this sawdust, nor wish to give the time to drying by this slow process. The next best thing is to have plenty of towels, keeping a dry one always for final polishing, after using a first one for drying the glass. When polishing the pieces, omit no crevices. A brush for polishing is a good idea.

Keeping in Touch.

There are times with everyone when it is necessary to keep in contact with others, and again there are times when it is necessary to protect oneself against intrusions on time or on strength. It is possible to aid in furthering both objects as the necessity arises. Of the two things, it is easier to get in touch with others by means of phones and telegrams, notes and letters, than it is to shield ourselves from the company of others or from contacting them by telephone. This latter instrument is a blessing at most times, but at others it becomes a bother.

When we want immediate contacting of others, the phone and the telegraph are the best means. The former is quicker, but no more sure. We may decide to go to the theater, but are not sure if seats are available. A few moments at the phone and we contact the box office, and know.

We may be out and wish to contact home, and the phone puts us in touch with the family. If we are out, and wish to be in call of the family or of our business, we can leave word where we can be reached. More sure still is to leave the telephone number so that no one has to be bothered to hunt it up. A doctor, out on a round of visits, generally keeps in touch with his office enough to know whether very sick persons need him before he would otherwise get to them.

Securing Privacy.

When privacy is wanted, and freedom from bothering calls such as from cleaners, agents, etc., the phone need not be listed. This is frequently done. The telephone company will not give such numbers out. It remains for the person having the phone to give the number to those he or she wishes to receive telephone calls from.

When a person must get some work by a specified time, and cannot be interrupted, it is well to have some place in the house where neither doorbell nor phone can be heard. In case of illness in a home and phone calls would be disturbing some member of the family can ask friends not to phone the house.

Hibiscus Has Many Names

Hibiscus is known under an assortment of names, such as Rose of Sharon, Rose of China or Glorified Mallows. While hybridists strive for new and improved varieties, the plants themselves have been grown horticulturally for several hundred years. It is the magnificent hibiscus which contributes to the far-flung charm of the Hawaiian landscape.

CHOCOLATE NOT JUST A FLAVOR

March of Progress Has Found New Uses for It

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE word chocolate means to most of us first of all a flavor, perhaps our favorite, which is used in cake, in candy, in ice cream and other desserts and sometimes in a beverage. Cocoa, however, symbolizes first of all a hot drink. A concoction of ground cocoa beans was the national beverage of the western tropics for an unknown number of years before the discovery of America. So important did its introduction into Europe seem to the botanists of the day that they gave the cacao tree the name of "theobroma" which means "food of the Gods."

Perhaps because we use chocolate so much as a combined food and flavor, we use it less as a beverage. Hot beverages are, in general, used for their stimulating quality rather than for their food value. Cocoa, however, which is merely chocolate from which some of the natural cocoa butter has been extracted, ranks next to tea and coffee in its use as a hot beverage. When it is made with milk it is more than ever, of course, a food drink. Before the American Revolution the first chocolate and cocoa factory was established in Massachusetts, and the national taste for chocolate had begun to be established. Today, cocoa beans come from the West Indies, South America and even from Africa, to supply us with the hundreds of million pounds which we consume each year.

Cocoa beans grow in large egg-shaped pods which are dried and then cut open so that the beans may be removed. They are then cured by fermentation, washed and dried before they are shipped to the factories. There they are cleaned and roasted, just to the proper point to produce the best flavor. The beans are then cracked and broken, the shells removed, leaving the pieces of kernel which are known as cocoa nibs. Often several kinds of cocoa nibs, coming from different countries, are blended before they are ground with heated machines by which a thick liquid is produced. This is the chocolate which is known as plain or bitter and which hardens as it runs into molds. This is the type of chocolate which we use most of all in cooking. For dipping chocolate and sweet chocolate sugar and sometimes more cocoa butter are added. For milk chocolate condensed or powdered milk is added.

In the manufacture of cocoa some of the oil is removed and the remaining substance is ground and sifted to a very fine powder. Good cocoa has a reddish shade. The most satisfactory way to make it into a beverage is to add a small amount of cold water and to stir this over a low fire until the mixture is smooth and thick. Then cold milk may be added and heated until the mixture is foamy. It should then be beaten with an egg beater to prevent the formation of foam.

When chocolate is used as a flavor for desserts and cakes it is usually melted. This should be done over hot water so that the delicious flavor will not be destroyed by high temperature.

Chocolate Squares.

- 1-3 cup butter
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 square chocolate
- 1 egg
- 1 cup cake flour
- Salt
- 1/4 teaspoon soda
- 3 tablespoons milk

Cream butter and sugar, add chocolate, melted, and beaten egg. Sift flour, salt and soda and add, alternately, with the milk and mix well. Brush baking sheets or outside bottoms of cake pans with melted butter and spread on thinnest layer possible of the chocolate mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) seven minutes. Just as soon as baked, cut each layer into squares.

Chocolate Sauce.

- 2 squares chocolate or
- 1/4 cup cocoa
- 1 cup water
- 2 cups sugar
- Pinch of salt
- 2 teaspoons vanilla
- 2 tablespoons butter

Cut chocolate in small pieces or use cocoa and stir over direct heat with the water until thick and smooth. Add sugar and salt and stir until dissolved. Boil three minutes, add flavoring and butter and serve hot. Store in air-tight container and reheat when wanted to serve again.

Chocolate Delicacy.

- 1-3 cup butter
- 1/4 cup powdered sugar
- 3 eggs
- 2 squares chocolate, melted
- 1/4 cup dry sifted bread crumbs

Cream the butter with the sugar, add the egg yolks, slightly beaten; the melted chocolate and bread crumbs. Beat the egg whites and fold into the mixture. Grease two shallow cake pans and put one-third of the batter into each, reserving the rest for the filling. Bake in a slow oven (325 degrees F.) twenty minutes. Remove the pans and put together with the reserved filling. Serve garnished with whipped cream.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Passing of Thalberg. HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—Big an industry as the moving picture industry is, the death of one slender, shy, frail man has stunned it. The old guard of this business has lost its little corporal and the second generation of producing talent is left with a yawning gap where yesterday there loomed a leader who was both a pioneer and a progressive.

Irving Thalberg was an authentic genius of the films—a master showman, a deft interpreter of that tricky art which finds its medium through story and camera and screen.

It will be long before they breed another Thalberg out here. For men of his brain, his energy, his pathfinding instincts don't come in sets, don't often come singly.

The name Napoleon has been overworked to describe ability within some small body, but here, to the limits of his own craft, was not only a Napoleon but a Daniel Boone and a Palaeoc all rolled in one.

Payroll Patriots.

SOME low industrial royalist has been checking up on the sisters and the cousins and the aunts of New Dealers who are on the federal payroll. We call that nepotism when the opposition does it, or family love when one of our own crowd is guilty.

"'Twould seem Dixieland leads in this display of domestic affection. The champion is Senator Smith of South Carolina. There were all sorts of delegates at the Democratic national convention, but he was the only walking delegate—walked out twice, and each time walked right back again. He has five relatives drawing salaries from Uncle Sam. Even Uncle Jack Garner, the sphinx of Texas, has three.

This looks like an improvement on the old southern system, when kinfolks dropped in for a week-end and stayed the rest of their lives.

Summer Annoyances.

EVEN in sun-kicked California, summer is on its last legs. This one will go down in history as the summer which produced handles, knock-knocks; the dust storm and the campaign speech, these two being interchangeable terms in most cases; likewise the seventeenth-century locust and the gentleman who was in active charge of our Olympic team's trip to Berlin. People were seriously annoyed in other ways, too.

Political Geysers.

CAN it be we made a mistake by plowing under cotton instead of orators?

That famous phenomenon of nature in Yellowstone park, which spouts at such frequent intervals ought to be getting uneasy. Any moment it may lose its name of old faithful and become known as the Junior John Hamilton geyser.

And Secretary Ickes certainly is qualifying as the minute-man of the new revolution—or oftener than that, if there's an audience. Colonel Knox isn't doing so badly, either. In the modern version of "the spirit of '70," he's the one who's beating so hard on the eardrum. Still, it's a grand thing—but surprising—to find a newspaper editor who talks forcibly on his feet instead of writing feebly on his seat.

On the other hand, Uncle Jack Garner continues to be the ideal back-seat driver—the one who hasn't said a single word during the entire trip.

Dictators and Shirt Tails.

LET'S see. Among others, we now have the blue shirts in Ireland, the brown shirts in Germany, the red shirts in Russia, and, of course, the black shirts in Italy, which seems the most practical of all because you don't need to wash a black shirt for months and months.

So maybe we're too quick. The alarmists among us are predicting an early dictatorship here. At the rate all the standard shares are being snapped up, we'll have to think up a new color in shirts, and, unless we hurry, there may not be any new colors to think up, and you can't have a dictatorship without a shirt to match—that's the rule. Lavender hasn't been taken yet by anybody, but lavender seems kind of sissy, and, while, a gray-colored shirt might suit the careless eater; it lacks zing, don't you think? In any event, our shirt ought to have a good long tail to it, because, by that time, the American taxpayer probably will have lost his pants.

Adierika acts on BOTH upper and lower bowels while ordinary laxatives act on the lower bowels only. Adierika gives your system a thorough cleansing, bringing out old, poisonous matter that you would not believe was in your system and that has been causing gas pains, sour stomach, nervousness and headache for months.

Dr. H. L. Shanks, New York, reports: "I had been to intestinal cleaning, Adierika greatly reduced bacteria and colon bacilli." Give your bowels a REAL cleaning with Adierika and see how good you feel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and constipation. Leading Druggists.

Wool-Fur Ensembles for Autumn

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WOOL-and-fur ensembles for brisk autumn days are the most talked of costumes among new arrivals for brisk autumn days. Precious furs are combined with very fine sheer wools in stunning formal daytime modes, while popular sports furs such as kidskin and leopard are teamed with novelty wools in outfits that will add extra glamor to the football stadium and campus promenade this fall.

Fingertip and three-quarter length jackets and capes are favored in these costumes, as this type of styling plays up the smart contrast between gleaming fur and dull-surfaced wool used for the lining of the coat and for the accompanying frock or suit.

Capes appear in both swagger and formal styling in any number of the most striking wool-and-fur ensembles. The new square-shouldered slim capes that are making their appearance in advance showings are creating no end of excitement for they are so startlingly different from anything in the way of a daytime wrap seen in recent years. For real swank and a dramatic sensation a likely formula calls for a square-shouldered cape of safari brown Alaskan sealskin which, when it swings back, shows a lining of sheer rabbit wool in matching brown, and a fitted frock of the same sheer wool with touches of gold lame at the high collar and tailored cuffs—a true aristocrat this in fashion's realm. The belt buckle of the cape and the neck clasp of the cape are of handsome hammered metal. See this patrician two-piece pictured to the right in the illustration (same cape closed, in tiny inset).

Soft rabbit woolen in a muted green shade styles the nicely cut and detailed frock shown to the left. The identical rabbit woolen also lines the gray moleskin swagger coat of this smart fall ensemble. Which reminds us that style experts are all agog in regard to gray this season, especially in respect to furs. Silver lame accents the buttoned narrow gilet and edges the pocket tips. As further attraction the gilet has a row of lame-covered tiny buttons. The diagonal seaming of the dress is noteworthy.

French women adore black and this season they are again expressing a preference for it by wearing costumes of stunning black broadcloth with a touch of high color and with lavish fur. In this category is the formal afternoon costume suit that boasts a fingertip box coat of black kidskin with standup collar and banding trim at cuffs and pockets of the same soft black broadcloth that is used for the jacket lining and a straight cut skirt. A cherry red blouse and a saucy fitted kidskin cap edged with flaring black net completes the ensemble.

Then there is the costume that is very swagger indeed for sportswear and for informal daytime wear in town that features a three-quarter length flared coat of gray kidskin worked cleverly in swirling lines. The coat lining and a two-piece frock in waistcoat styling are made up in oxford rabbit wool with multi-colored polka dots scattered gaily over the surface. An accompanying kidskin hat is worn far back on the head. It is just such all-gray costumes as this that are taking the world of fashion by storm this fall.

LACE OVER METAL

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

All the rich fabrics have a leading place in first fall showings, and the picture is one of luxury. Special importance is placed on metal cloths, heavy nubby silks and wools and above all new patterns in lace, in such variety as has not been seen before, even in these last few seasons when lace has been foremost in vogue. The redingote dinner gown pictured combines the high-style features of rich fabric and the accepted silhouette. The foundation is heavy metal brocade.

BRIGHT SASHES AND FLOWER CLUSTERS

To be inspired by the men's clothes of the Directoire period and at the same time achieve a most feminine looking collection is certainly no common feat. This was brilliantly demonstrated at the Bruyere fall showings where smart Parisiennes were given a glimpse of beautiful fashions - to be for autumn and winter.

One of the most important items of this collection was the introduction of sashes, such as the elegant beaux of the Directoire used to parade in. They are black on black dresses, and have the ends embroidered in vivid colors. They look graceful and give a brilliant note to the dark day and evening gowns. Louise Boulanger places flower clusters on the sleeves this time in many of her dresses, encircling the arm.

Dignity Is Latest Note in

Fashions for Campus Wear

Fall styles for the school and college miss are going sophisticated. It's no longer smart to cultivate a look of studied carelessness. Swagger "collegiate" clothes are giving way to dignity and formal tailoring. Sweaters are worn with pearls, and formal velveteens are breaking into the classroom. The college lass will be up on her curled pompadours and her smoky shades of polish for the nails. No more boyish tobs or back-to-nature fingertips.

Off-the-face bonnets ready for the big game are dressed up with tiny veils. Bonnet, toques are smart in velvet with matching velvet bags. These contrast with the color of the suit: American beauty with slate blue, capucine or caramel with black or with brown, raisin with dark green.

Dressy, fur-trimmed suits are the leading theme for football week-ends, with fur jacket costumes a close second.

"The Man Who-o-o"

THAT TWO-THIRDS RULE

IN 1832 a Democratic President decided to have his party's convention (the first it had ever held) renominate him and along with that decision he directed that the nomination of his running mate should be made by vote of two-thirds of the convention delegates.

One hundred and four years later a Democratic President decided to have his party's convention renominate him and along with that action he brought about the abolition of the century-old "two-thirds rule."

The man who originated that distinctively Democratic institution was Andrew Jackson. The man who ended its existence was Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Jackson had selected his secretary of state, Martin Van Buren, for the position of vice-president. The senate had only recently rejected Van Buren's appointment as minister to Great Britain and "Old Hickory" thought it would square accounts with that body to have the "Red Fox" preside over it. Also vice-presidents in those days usually succeeded to the Presidency through regular election and Jackson wanted Van Buren to be his successor.

So when his party prepared to hold its first convention in Baltimore in 1832, Jackson wrote out this resolution which he gave to one of his lieutenants to present to the delegates:

"Resolved, That each State shall be entitled, in the nomination of a candidate for the Vice-Presidency, to a number of votes equal to the number to which they will be entitled in the Electoral College under the new apportionment in voting for President and Vice-President; and that two-thirds of the whole number of the votes in the convention shall be necessary to constitute a choice."

The Baltimore convention was a completely dominated by Jackson as the recent Philadelphia meeting was controlled by Roosevelt so the delegates obediently adopted the resolution. During Jackson's lifetime several efforts were made to abolish the rule but all of them failed. After his death it became all but sacred and for the next hundred years the shadow of Andrew Jackson, in the form of this rule, hung over every Democratic convention.

GASTRONOMICAL

ONE of the best ways to win a Presidential campaign is to get a good slogan and din it in the voters' ears. A good slogan appeals to the instincts or to the emotions rather than to the intellect. Combine that fact with the old saying about "the best way to a man's heart is through his stomach" and it's easy to understand certain incidents in political history.

Back in 1840 when the Whigs were trying to elect Gen. William Henry Harrison over Martin Van Buren, the Democratic candidate, they raised the cry of "Van's Policy, Fifty Cents a Day and French Soup; Our Policy, Two Dollars a Day and Roast Beef." Would a hungry voter hesitate long between the two? Of course not!

But there was another gastronomical angle to this campaign. The "singing Whigs" set to the tune of "Auld Lang Syne" such words as these:

Should good old cider be despised
And never regarded more?
Should plain log cabins be despised
O'er fattened halls of pore?
For the true old style, my boys!
For the true old style,
Let's take a mug of cider now
For the true old style.

So the thirsty voters who wanted "good old cider" joined with the hungry voters who wanted "roast beef" and together they elected Harrison.

Although the Whigs' slogan in 1840 was the ancestor of the "Full Dinner Pail" of a later era, that expression didn't actually come into use until 1896. In that year the opponents were Democratic Bryan and Republican McKinley. The tariff was the principal issue and the Republicans had various prosperity slogans. But wise old Mark Hanna boiled them all down into the vote-getting slogan of the "Full Dinner Pail" and the American laborer who wanted one voted for McKinley and elected him.

Thirty-two years later the Republicans used a variation on the prosperity theme and their promise to the voters of "A car in every garage and a chicken in every pot" helped Herbert Hoover defeat Al Smith in the election of 1928.

Wood Carving in Black Forest

For hundreds of years the Black Forest people of Germany have carried on their wood carving and handicrafts. They make cuckoo clocks, some entirely of wood, furniture, music boxes and toys. In former days many gems were cut there, and the region was famed for its glass. After the discovery of America, this last industry experienced a great boom, for traders needed great quantities of beads to trade with the Indians.

Black Satin Frock for Autumn Wear

Introducing Autumn's smartest frock. Snug at the waistline and flared below, a youthful interpretation with snap and dash. It's grand for business, school, socials, and a winning number at bunco or bingo!

The blouse has a clever feminine touch in its soft gathers that peep cunningly from beneath the yoke, which is topped by a narrow standing collar that ties in a dainty knot. To please your whim, omit the necktie and substitute a neckerchief, or ascot tie, then again forget about the buttons, open the yoke, press down the sides forming a V and trim it with a bright boutonniere. You may have your way about the sleeves, too, for the pattern offers both long and short. A graduated gore reduces the sweep at the hipline and gives the much desired flare to the hem.

No 13-Inch Fish

"Thirteen-inch fish are apparently very hard to catch in Michigan," says R. W. Eschmeyer of the Institute for Fisheries Research, after checking over thousands of creel census returns made by the state's anglers. Anglers estimate their fish at 10, 12, 14 and 16 inches but rarely do they say 9, 11, 13, 15 or any odd figure.
