CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, Oct. 30, 1936

NUMBER 18

District Attorney 3rd Judicial District

Hon. M. A. Threet, candidate for re-election, has discharged his duties faithfully and efficiently. He is positive in his convictions, fearless in his advocacy for the right, and loyal to his duties of office.

Senator 15th District

We have Senator Louise Coe, a gifted woman, who is well known through her twelve years of unselfish service in the Legislature. As senator from this district she has "held her own" with the best of them, and will continue to do so.

Assessor

In L. H. (Larry) Dow the Democrats present as their candidate for re-election, a man of sterling worth. He is strictly honest, well qualified, and pays strict attention to the details of office.

All are experienced legislators, and their success is recorded in letters that glow in the hearts of the citizens of this great state.

Will we be so foolish as to replace them with inexperienced, untried men? Men whose hearts are so calloused they cannot in justice to themselves, and to the great number of Americans benefitted see that a return to Republicanism and Hooverism would be disastrous?

They should not be replaced by selfish, mediocre inexperienced men.

A job well done deserves commendation.
Vote it straight for Democracy.

J. V. Taylor for Representative

The candidate for Representative of the 30th District composed of Socorro, Lincoln and Otero counties is J. V. Taylor, who has already served two terms as representative from this district and has given a good account of his time while in the Legislature. He has served as Chairman of the Taxation and Revenue Committee; member Livestock, Public Lands, Appropriation and Finance, and of the Judicial Committees, and during the last session was Chairman of the Special Elections Investigating Committee. Under this committee the new Election Code was drafted. Mr. Taylor was Chairman of the special Committee to investigate functions of various State Departments, salaries and wages paid by these departments. As a result of the work and recommendations of this committee several State departments were consolidated into what is now the Bureau of Revenue, effecting a material saving and a more efficient department. A great portion of the increased revenues of the State the past year are a result of the efficient work of the Bureau of Revenue. The evasion of the payment of gasoline taxes and special school taxes has been stopped. Mr. Taylor is a member of the Executive Board and Vice President of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association; a member of and vice-chairman of District No. 4 Advisory Board, and vice-chairman of the State Advisory Board, under the Taylor Grazing Act. He is a member of the State committee to work

To their credit are such acts as the Railroad Retirement act, National Labor Relations Act, Social Security Act and others. They were active in support of the law that guarantees safety of savings bank deposits up to $5,000. That act alone should cause the common people to vote the Democratic ticket 100 per cent. They backed the measure extending operations of CCC camps. They supported legislation for the improvement of homes. Many New Mexico citizens have refinanced their homes. They have backed every measure proposed for the benefit of farmers and stockmen.

what Irwin S. Cobb thinks about:

Campaign's Home Stretch.

BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.—Here the campaign is practically on its last legs, when it isn't standing on its head and spinning around—but yet not a peep out of the three fairest-haired young hopes of the New Deal.

They're still putting on an act—what's known in vaudeville as a dumb act—entitled "The Bollo Boys in a Sub-Cellar."

Horrid tales abound. 'Tis rumored that the gurgling sound coming from the White House dungeon is caused by Tugwell trying to get the gag out of his mouth with both hands tied behind his back. And a note believed to have been written by Harry Hopkins has been slipped through the bars begging somebody to smuggle in a file in a loaf of bread.

Irwin S. Cobb

Richberg, once the merriest of the administration's songsters, doesn't chirp any more, having been induced to take on the role of the man in the iron mask.

Remote-Control Patriotism.

DID you ever notice that these impassioned European statesmen, who so boldly defy tyrants in the homeland, generally put two or three national boundaries between themselves and the objects of their hate before cutting loose? One fiery anti-fascist waited until he got to Hoboken to tell Mussolini right to his face the face being only 5,000 miles distant—exactly what he thought of him.

Not that I'd blame any patriot for playing safety first, dictators being so sensitive to criticism. In fact, I like the idea so much, I'm thinking of taking a correspondence course in lion taming, myself.

Debunking Politiks.

CAN nothing be done to stop the destructive utterances of this man, Al Smith? Think of him, as he did in that Philadelphia speech of his, urging the voters to sift the bunk out of the campaign and study the facts. Does he want to deflate the whole system of American politics? Would you hire a man who squeezed all the meat out of the sausage and fried the sausage skin for breakfast?

Even so, maybe a little debunking would be gratifying to quite a lot of us who wish to start concentrating on football as soon as possible. I'm especially interested in how Yale comes out on its clever little idea of selling to a commercial broadcast the radio rights for all games played on the home grounds. But the fellow who gets the empty-bottles concession is the one who'll really clean up.

"Lead Dollar" Immortality.

HOW some old friends do hang on!

Twenty-five years ago or thereabouts, it appeared as a short story in Everybody's magazine under the title "The Lead Dollar."

Twenty years ago, believing I was using an actual occurrence which never before had been fictionalized, I wrote it, too, and called it "Heart of Lead," and, barely in time, was saved by Bob Davis and Charlie Van Loan from the unintentional but nonetheless serious literary crime of plagiarism.

Fifteen years ago, Octavus Roy Cohen and I just did head off a young girl writer who already had sold the same tale to a pleased editor. I forget now what she called her version.

Today, practically complete in all its sequences—poker game, bogus money, practical jokes, good Samaritan, homeless girl, skeptical hotel clerk, pitiable suicide and all—I find this dear old familiar standby in the current issue of a popular monthly with yet another author sponsoring it.

Jack Garner's Activities.

MONTH after month, Uncle Jack Garner never said anything but "Ouch!" and then not for publication. It seemed that, if defeated, he would go back to the comparative obscurity of Washington to the blazing prominence of Uvalde county, Texas, as the most finished specimen of sound-proof nominee, American politiks ever produced. But he's no longer a perfect example to all innocent bystanders—he's just a candidate.

Having read his first speech, I'm reminded of the English gentleman who fell on hard times but did have a few layin' hens left and was driven by necessity to peddle their product in the open street.

So, she picked out a back alley for her debut into vulgar trade, and, as she crept stealthily along, whispered in a stricken undertone:

"Fresh eggs, tuppence. I hope no one sees me. Fresh eggs, tuppence. I hope no one hears me."

Rotary Elevated Airport in Model

A model of a rotary elevated airport, designed by Captain Charles Frobisher was exhibited at the Inventions Exposition held recently in Central hall, London, England. One of the big advantages claimed for the rotary airport is that it can be turned in the direction the wind is blowing, thus facilitating the take-off and landing of planes.

New Machine Speeds Beet Digging

Of almost human ability at "topping" and digging sugar beets is the recent invention of John Devey, Jr., of Glendale, Calif., shown here with his device. Weighing 3,000 pounds, the machine in one operation slices the tops from the beets, and digs them from the ground 60 times as fast as the average worker.

Family Dancing Team Saves Home

The 100-acre farm of Henry Spies, located a mile and a half from Massena, Iowa, like many other mid-western farms, was plagued with the drouth as well as a mortgage, and things looked pretty gloomy until an idea dawned on the family. Organizing a dancing team, consisting of their six daughters who still lived at home, they toured various county fairs, earning $50 a day.

Store Root Crops and Make Profit

Simple, Well-Drained Field Location Needed; Do Not Dig a Trench.

By C. H. Nisley, Professor of Vegetable Gardening, New Jersey State College, WNU Service.

By storing such root crops as beets, turnips, parsnips and rutabagas in the field as soon as the weather becomes cold, many farmers are able to take advantage of a profitable market for these vegetables during winter.

The storage operation is simple, but a well-drained location is necessary. Do not dig a trench, but place the vegetables on the surface of the ground in rectangular piles with 25, 50, 75 or 100 bushels in each. The proper size of the pile depends upon the number of bushels to be taken out for sale at one time.

After the roots have been neatly arranged in the pile, cover them with from four to eight inches of straw, salt hay or double layer of burlap. Then place a three- to five-inch layer of soil over the roots to prevent the wind from uncovering them. As the weather becomes colder, more protection will be needed to prevent the roots from freezing. Ventilation must also be provided in order to allow moisture given the roots to escape. The vent or may be a roll of straw or hay placed on top of the mound, and some growers use a short stove pipe or a tile in both ends of the mound.

Cabbage, too, may be successfully stored in the field. Pull the plants up by the roots and place them on the ground upside down so that the roots extend upward. From three to ten rows of cabbages may be placed in one trench.

In the three-row system, two heads are placed alongside each other with the heads of the third row between and above the other two rows. When storing six rows in one trench, place the cabbages in three rows together on the ground, two rows on top of these and a third row on top of the second layer, forming a pyramid. Then cover the cabbage with burlap or a thin layer of salt hay or straw and add soil as for storing root crops.

Last Drawn Milk Richer, Is Why Stripping Pays

Which is richer in butterfat, the first-drawn or the last-drawn milk from a cow? Or is there any difference?

Invariably, the last-drawn milk is considerably richer. That is, why it is so important to strip cows thoroughly at each milking. Incomplete milking not only tends to damage the future production of the cow but it also is very unprofitable.

According to the dairy extension service at Iowa State college, convincing experiment along this line recently was conducted. A sample was taken of the first milk, then of the strippings and finally of the total milk mixed together. The first milk showed a butter fat test of 0.27 per cent. The strippings tested 0.9 per cent. The composite test for the entire milking was approximately 3 p. r. cent.

A cow tester for the Palo Alto testing association, reports that the average test of the last milk drawn from a number of cows in different herds was 9.2 per cent. He points out that a half pound of such milk left in each cow at each milking would amount to 2.65 pounds of butterfat per month or about 57 pounds on a 20-cow herd. — Wallace's Farmer.

Outlook for Wool

Prospective world supplies of wool in 1936-37, including production and stocks, probably will be less than for several years, says the bureau of agricultural economics. World production outside of Russia and China is expected to be about the same as in 1935 when 3,278,000,000 pounds, smallest clip since 1923, was produced. Supply of wool available in United States in 1936 will be much smaller than last year due to small carry-over into current season, but it is probable that mill consumption will also be smaller than last year.

Cost of Keeping Horse

A horse at medium work will require about one pound of hay and one pound of grain for each 100 pounds body weight. On this basis if figured on a 365-day feeding basis for a 1,200-pound horse with no allowance for pasture would require about three tons of hay and two and one-half tons of grain, such as equal parts corn and oats. Some allowance is made for wastage, for hay. With hay at $10 per ton and grain at $30 per ton the total year's feed cost would be $105.—Rural New-Yorker.

Should Remove Tusks

Tusks should be removed from male pigs that are to be kept for breeding, states a writer in Wallace's Farmer. A boar with tusks is a potentially dangerous animal at all times. The best time to remove the tusks is when the pigs are only a few days old. Cut the teeth close to the gums, with nippers which are made for this purpose. Be careful not to injure the gums, since an open wound furnishes an ideal place for disease.

Turtle Derby

A "Turtle Derby" was held on Matherhead Inlet near Australia. Giant green turtles, five feet in length, were used as steeds in the novel race. The men and women riders mounted their beasts on the sands, and with slow deliberate gait the turtles headed for the sea. Once there, it was a question of skill on the riders' part because when in deep water these animals are surprisingly fast swimmers and find little difficulty in getting rid of their human burdens.

"Lie Detector" May Explore Minds of Mental Patients

Unconscious Emotions May Be Discovered

HANOVER, N. H. — A new technique for detecting emotion through measurement of electric resistance of the skin was reported to the American Psychological association here.

Possible use of this new test in exploring the unconscious minds of the mentally ill was suggested by the results of experiments reported by Dr. T. W. Forbes, of the New York State Psychiatric Institute and hospital.

Sometimes known as the "lie detector," the psychogalvanometer — used to record the physical changes that occur when a person is questioned about his guilt or when his emotions are aroused in any other way — has previously been incorrectly used, Dr. Forbes indicated. The electrodes have customarily been applied to two separate skin areas. By reading potentials from just a single skin area, Dr. Forbes found not one but two waves which were confused or masked in the readings from two areas.

Reading the Waves. One wave is negative and the other positive, and both occur with great regularity in most individuals. The "a," or negative, wave showed little variation in amplitude and occurred whether the subject was excited or not.

The positive "b" wave, on the other hand, occurred with increased magnitude whenever the subject was excited.

This was true whether the "exciting" situation involved electric shock, the startle of a revolver shot, or words designed to be embarrassing.

The "lie detector" technique would not be equally effective on all individuals for the purpose of detecting their emotional responses, Dr. Forbes' experiments indicated. Some individuals, he reported, failed to show any change of the "b" wave except with very intense startle.

Eskimo Mummies of Alaska Shed Light on Ancient North

WASHINGTON. — Discovery of important mummy caves, where prehistoric people of the North hid away their dead, is a signal achievement of the Smithsonian institution's expedition to Alaska, just returned.

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, leader of the anthropological expedition, and his four associates braved fog, hazards and rocky barriers to explore two caves which they believed would contain bundled mummies of Alaska's early Aleutian Islanders.

These caves are no more than crevices in rocky mazes of the Aleutian Islands, Dr. Hrdlicka explained. A first attempt to reach one cave failed due to heavy fog that shut out the island and the two great volcanoes nearby.

Find Ancient People. With the aid of the Coast guard, the party returned and, finding that here were indeed buried many ancient people, both adults and children, they began to work fast as they could to remove mummy bundles from the confusion of fallen rock and debris. Foxes in the cave tomb had added to the damage of time.

"We worked with our hands," said Dr. Hrdlicka. "Tools were of no use. We had no time to think of resting or eating, for if fog settled down we would be marooned, perhaps for days."

By afternoon, the sea was running to a considerable swell, and the workers made haste to get away. All material collected had to be passed by relay in sacks from one man to another for three-quarters of a mile to the beach, where the boat was waiting.

Your Eye Can See One Millionth of an Inch

WASHINGTON. — The next time you see a film of oil on a rain puddle in the pavement look for the colored light fringes.

Pretty. Yes. But, more important, they indicate that your eye can detect a difference of one-millionth of an inch. That is the thickness of the oil films which produce those colors by interference. The beautiful coloring of some butterfly wings is a similar phenomenon of thin films. The best-micrometer gauges now in use will detect differences of only one ten-thousandth of an inch.

Fossil Remains of Man's "Great Uncle" Found in Africa

Ape Bones Date Back to Beginning of Ice Age

FRAGMENTS of bone from a South African cave, described in the British science journal, Nature, by Dr. R. Broom of the Transvaal museum, may prove to be some of the most significant fossils thus far turned up by science in its long search for facts bearing on the natural origin of man.

For sketches of these bits of bone, sent by their discoverer to Dr. William K. Gregory of the American Museum of Natural History, "suggest the right characters for the adult of Australopithecus or a nearly allied form."

Australopithecus, or "the Ape of the South," was first found in 1925 at Taung in Bechuanaland, by Prof. Raymond A. Dart of the Witwatersrand university, Johannesburg. The two fossils then discovered, a braincase and part of the bones of the face, were definitely those of an ape, but of an ape with more manlike characters than any previously known subhuman species, living or fossil. Australopithecus was apparently a real-missing link.

Comparisons Possible. Professor Dart's specimens were those of a young specimen, just cutting its first permanent molar teeth. It was therefore of less value scientifically than an adult specimen might have been, because young apes and human children are always more alike than the adult forms become.

By an especial stroke of good fortune, the newly discovered material described by Doctor Broom also includes a brain cast, so that a direct comparison with the juvenile brain cast of the earlier find can be made, and comparisons with the brains of human beings and the brains of apes will also be possible.

With this very important cast were also parts of the skull base and a fragment of the upper jaw. The age of the formation in which the fossils were found may be Pliocene, that is, the time just before the beginning of the world's latest great ice age, more than a million years ago. Since man's ancestry had already been well separated from the ape stock by the late Pliocene at least it is not considered probable that Australopithecus was a direct ancestor. He must be looked upon as a collateral relative—a great-uncle rather than a grandfather.

Bigger Sized Brain Needed to Improve Man's Behavior

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — If man's life is ever to be lived along entirely rational lines, free from such disturbances as war, crime, and economic booms and depressions, he will have to find a way of increasing the size of his brain.

This is the conclusion to be drawn from what Prof. Edgar Douglas Adrian of Cambridge university, English Nobel laureate and one of the pioneers in "brain wave" investigations, told scientists at the Harvard Tercentenary celebration here of the relation between the nervous system and human behavior.

Scientific delvings into the mechanism of the mind and body, by "brain waves" and other techniques, show that the only certain method by which human behavior can be improved is the apparently impossible feat of breeding men with large brains.

Superhuman Behavior. "It is tantalizing," Professor Adrian said, "to think of the new relations we should see, of the new world of thought we should live in, if four brains were but twice their present size. Our behavior would then be superhuman!"

Not even the most fanciful mind, given to picturing a race of supermen in a world to come, could conceive of the result, which Professor Adrian described as "beyond the power of human thought."

There's Life in the Dead Sea, After All

JERUSALEM.—Living organisms have been found in Dead Sea water, which has always been supposed to be utterly devoid of life of any kind because of its exceedingly high concentration of salt, potash, and other mineral matter. The discovery was made by Dr. B. Wilkansky of the Hebrew university of Jerusalem.

Doctor Wilkansky collected samples of water in the Dead sea, at various depths to 22 feet. After suitable laboratory preparation, three microscopic forms of life were found: one consisting of yeast-like cells, one of short, rod-like cells, and the third in the shape of long, fine threads.

CRANBERRIES IN GENERAL FAVOR

As Jelly or Sauce They Are Always Welcomed.

By EDITH M. BARBER

CRANBERRIES lend a gay note to the markets at this time of year. I can never resist them and as they have now begun to take their place with the other fruits for general use in cooking, we do not have to consider whether we really need them for jelly or for sauce to serve with meat.

They will always hold first place for this purpose. They are a great comfort to the cook because she seldom has to worry about cranberries jelling. Unless they are over-ripe, they are certain to mold. The recipe for either sauce or jelly is a very easy one to carry in your mind—just one-fourth as much water as berries and half as much sugar.

Pick over and wash one quart of cranberries. Cover with one cup of water and cook in a covered kettle ten minutes. Add two cups of sugar and cook three minutes. Skim and serve very cold. This sauce will keep indefinitely if kept cold and covered.

For cranberry jelly cook the berries in the same way until very tender. Press through a strainer, add the sugar and stir over the fire until the sugar is dissolved. Pour at once into a mold or jelly glasses and cool. This recipe will be more than enough for one meal, but it is time saving to make at least this amount as the jelly will keep.

Many recipes advise boiling the pulp and sugar together for a few minutes until you get the usual jelly test, two drops hanging side by side from the spoon when dipped into and then held above the saucepan, but I do not find it necessary to do this. Cranberry tapoca is one of my favorite desserts.

Cranberry Tapoca.

- ¾ cup granulated tapoca
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 3½ cups boiling water
- 1 pint cranberries
- ½ cup water
- ½ cup sugar

Cook tapoca, salt and boiling water together until clear. Cook cranberries and water until soft and add to the tapoca with the sugar. Cook five minutes, pour into a wet mold, chill and serve with whipped cream.

Cranberry Juice Cocktail.

- 4 cups cranberries
- 4 cups water
- 2-3 cup granulated sugar

Cook cranberries and water until all the skins pop open (about five minutes). Strain through cheese cloth. Bring the juice to boiling point, add sugar and boil two minutes. Serve cold. This may be corked and sealed for future use.

Gold Cake.

- 2 cups cake flour
  - 2 teaspoons baking powder
  - ¼ cup butter or other shortening
  - 1 cup sugar
  - 3 egg yolks
  - ¾ cup milk
  - ½ teaspoon lemon extract
- Sift flour with baking powder. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks beaten until very thick; then flour, alternately with milk. Add flavoring. Beat well. Bake in two eight-inch or nine-inch layer pans in moderate oven, 375 degrees Fahrenheit, 25 to 30 minutes. Spread lemon filling between layers. Sift powdered sugar over top of cake.

Ginger Ale Salad.

- 2 tablespoons gelatin
  - ½ cup water
  - 1 cup boiling water
  - 1½ cups ginger ale
  - ¼ cup sugar
  - Juice of 1 lemon
  - 2 cups fruit, cut fine
  - ½ cup nuts, chopped
- Soften gelatin in cold water five-minutes, dissolve in boiling water. Add ginger ale, lemon juice and sugar. Set aside to cool. When beginning to thicken add fruit and turn into fancy molds. Serve on lettuce and garnish with dressing.

Cinnamon Biscuits.

- 2 cups flour
  - 4 teaspoons baking powder
  - 1 teaspoon salt
  - ¼ cup shortening
  - ¾ cup milk or water
- Mix and sift dry ingredients. Rub shortening into the flour mixture. Add liquid. Roll into one-half inch sheets. Sprinkle top with mixture of cinnamon and sugar. Roll up and cut into slices one-half inch thick. Bake in a greased pan in a 400-degree oven about fifteen minutes.

Ice Cream Meringue.

- 12 small meringues
  - Chocolate sauce
  - 1 pint vanilla ice cream
- On each serving plate put a ball of ice cream and press a meringue on each side. Pass chocolate sauce.

Fall Painting

A coat of paint applied this fall to porch and cellar steps will do much to insure them against the onslaughts of winter. At the time these are painted, it is well to give the wooden or metal floor supports in the cellar a coat of paint and also the inside woodwork of slanting cellar doors.

Pilot Light Saves Cash

A switch at the head of your basement stairs with a tell-tale pilot light attached will remind you if you've forgotten to turn off the cellar lights. It deprives the most careless members of the family of their last excuse for not turning off the lights.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THE name American patchwork was given by the English to a certain type of piece patchwork evidently originated on this continent. It is a name unfamiliar to most Americans, although credit for the beautiful work is given to the women in the United States and Canada. American patchwork found its way from this continent to England in the latter quarter of the last century, somewhere about 1875 or 1880. In Great Britain it was attributed equally to the United States and Canada, both countries being in "America," and there being an uncertainty about just which section was responsible for the distinctive patchwork.

The name of loghouse quilting was given the design-abroad. It has an odd sound to us for log homes are termed log cabins in America. Here the pattern has been known through the century as the log cabin pattern, but the name loghouse quilting has a fascinating ring to it. The patchwork was, and is, one of the handsomest types of all. Its special feature was its use of ribbons for patches and also silk and satin (and sometimes velvet) cut into strips of ribbon widths.

How To Make Squares.

The strips are positioned in ever-widening rows about a small square of one of the materials. In each row strips overlap one another. Ends are straight, that is they are not dovetailed or mitered. The ribbon-like strips can be sewed to a foundation square or be seamed together. In the old work the ribbons were sewed to a foundation, with a square of silk sewed on the exact center of the foundation square. After this the rows were set in order about it. Edges slightly overlapped so no lining was visible.

The method of arrangement of colors is definite. One diagonal half of a square is of dark colored pieces, the other of light ones. When squares are sewed together dark comes against dark and light against light, producing a fascinating sequence of ever widening squares of light and dark. When colors are artistically combined, the quilt with its rich materials is superb. We can well be proud of the quilts which bear the name of American loghouse quilting.

Sun Calls Digest Poll Misleading

For months unbiased observers have been pointing out the unfairness of the Literary Digest Presidential Poll of 1936, primarily because its sample ballots were mailed out to persons having telephones and automobiles listed in their own names. Women, first voters and individuals on relief were not included but in many instances the members of exclusive clubs were circularized.

Now the arch Republican New York Sun, one of the most violent anti-Roosevelt Old Guard newspapers, has solemnly "cautioned" its readers to "disregard the Digest poll." In a leading editorial labeled "Imperfect Sampling," the Sun says:

"The weekly installment of the Literary Digest's poll covers 503,000 voters from 21 states and gives Gov. Landon 13 of them and a 3 to 2 lead over President Roosevelt. Republicans should not be misled by these figures, however, for an examination of the detailed figures indicates clearly that the sampling so far is unrepresentative."

The returns from New York State, for example, include votes from 53,905 persons who voted the Republican ticket in 1932 and only 28,605 who voted the Democratic ticket. The vote for Roosevelt in New York in 1932 was 2,534,000 and for Hoover 1,937,000. The sample represents less than three per cent of the 1932 vote and that small percentage not in the proper mixture.

Similar discrepancies can be found in other states represented in the Digest poll. Indiana went Democratic four years ago by approximately 9 to 7, but the Digest poll so far has produced ballots from 23,700 Republican voters of 1932 and only 18,000 Democratic voters of that year. California was Democratic by more than 470,000 votes in 1932, but the Republican voters in 1932 represented in the straw vote equal the Democratic voters of 1932. These examples are enough to indicate why tendencies in the poll are more significant than totals."

In polite language, the Sun indicates its belief that the Digest effort is a little less than unwelcome. It states in its lengthy analysis that decidedly too many who are listed as having supported Roosevelt in 1932 are recorded as favoring Landon this year. To the Sun, with its intimate relationship with the Old Guard headquarters, this "tendency" is all but disgusting, as is also another to make it appear that Lemko "will win three times as many Republican votes as Democratic votes in Republican states." To the Sun this seems little short of absurd.

The same editorial treats disparagingly still another sampling which the Republican high command and its columnists have been praising very highly and frequently. Of it the Sun says: "The so-called grass roots straw vote has brought in almost 670,000 votes of which Landon received 58.3 per cent, or almost exactly the same proportion as in the Literary Digest poll." To the Sun this seems a remarkable coincidence, as it had seemed previously to less biased observers.

"The Gentle Art of 'PICKING POCKETS'"

"With Apologies to Freeman Tilden"

THE NEW DEAL is smooth. It works gently, softly. Assisting it is the largest and highest paid staff of propaganda workers in the world's history. They are in every government department. They are trained writers. They are on the government payrolls. The taxpayer pays for the propaganda.

But the TAXPAYER is beginning to wonder what it is all about. He feels the gentle hand patting his shoulder and assuring him that all he has to do is to take the government's money and everything will be all right. He hears the crooning voice on the radio, soothing him with the same promises the same smooth voice made in 1932—and broken!

"But," says the taxpayer, "what is that peculiar feeling in my trousers pocket where I keep my money. It feels like somebody was making a touch. Can that mean that this New Deal gang is soothing me with doles and dough and other things and taking the money out of my pocket to pay for it all?"

That's what thinking taxpayers now know!

That's what keen minds have known for many months!

They've fooled many of us, since the broken Roosevelt promises of 1932, with the soft hand on the shoulder and the clutching hand of hidden taxes in the taxpayer's pocket.

Shall we let them work the same shell game on us in 1937?

The ROOSEVELT RECORD

"The record of the Roosevelt administration presents the most callous disregard of party principles, platform promises and personal pledges in all the history of American politics"

—John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for president in 1924; in a speech delivered in New York, Tues. night, Oct. 20, 1936.

With Apologies to "The Trumpet" etc.

! The Wail of the "COAT-TAIL" Candidates !

WHAT IS this chorus of voices we hear crying in the wilderness of New Mexico in this vital campaign of 1936, in which the forces of constitutional government and economy, in the name of the Republican party, are lined up against the armies of the New Deal and its program of continued borrowing, continued reckless spending, and concentration of all power in the hands of the executive and his bureaus?

They are the trembling voices of Senator Hatch, Senator Chavez, Congressman Dempsey and Governor Tingley; and behind all of their blasts of campaign oratory is the question they are asking themselves, daily and hourly:

"Will the Roosevelt Coat-Tail Hold?"

They shout at you what THEY have done for you with the money Roosevelt has let us have. They do not tell you that it was public money taken out of the taxpayers' pockets: Your pockets and mine. They have not advanced a single constructive suggestion. When mention is made of their individual records, Hatch, Chavez and Dempsey advise us to read the Congressional record. The reading discloses that these three men voted as Roosevelt, or boss Farley told them to vote; that they were rubber stamps for Tugwell, Felix Frankfurter and the rest of the radical crew who now surround the President of the United States and guide his policies along their radical lines of theory.

The four rubber stamps shout ridiculous criticisms at their opponents. They KNOW how Harry Hopkins' WPA money is being used for political coercion and intimidation of helpless workers. They know all the political corruption that has crept through the nation under the abuses of New Deal policies. Do they lift their voices in protest?

Never a single protest, friends. They just keep telling us how much money Roosevelt gave them to spend in New Mexico; hoping that thus if the Roosevelt financial coat-tails stand the strain, they may ride through to re-election . . . knowing that if Roosevelt is defeated, they are through.

Now here's a curious contradiction: While Roosevelt is going around and about the nation telling the people, as he did in 1932, that he is going to economize and balance the budget "in a year or two," these men, Hatch, Chavez, and Dempsey, and his friend the Movie Cowboy, Pardon us, Governor Tingley, tell you that the spending is to go, on, on a bigger scale than ever. If Roosevelt is right and keeps his present promises, these four men are misleading the people with falsehoods. If Roosevelt is misleading the people as he did in 1932, then we can look forward to wrecked government credit, printing press money and national financial ruin. So we have rough days coming if Roosevelt or his coat-tail riders win Nov. 3rd, and either side is telling the truth.

Why not play safe!

Why not elect Alf Landon, the sound, conservative business man and back him up with Everly and Otero in the senate and Brown in the house?

Why not put an end to the wild career of Tingley the cowboy builder of debt and elect Jaffa Miller governor, with the Republican staff of responsible business men candidates to back him up in his policy of economy?

Grab your pocket book, Mr. Taxpayer! See if it's still there; and if it is, vote to save what is left of its contents.

OIL-PLATING DONE HERE

(BUT BE SURE YOU READ ALL THE OTHER WINTER OIL ADS, TOO)

You will find most of the emphasis these days, on oil that flows freely.

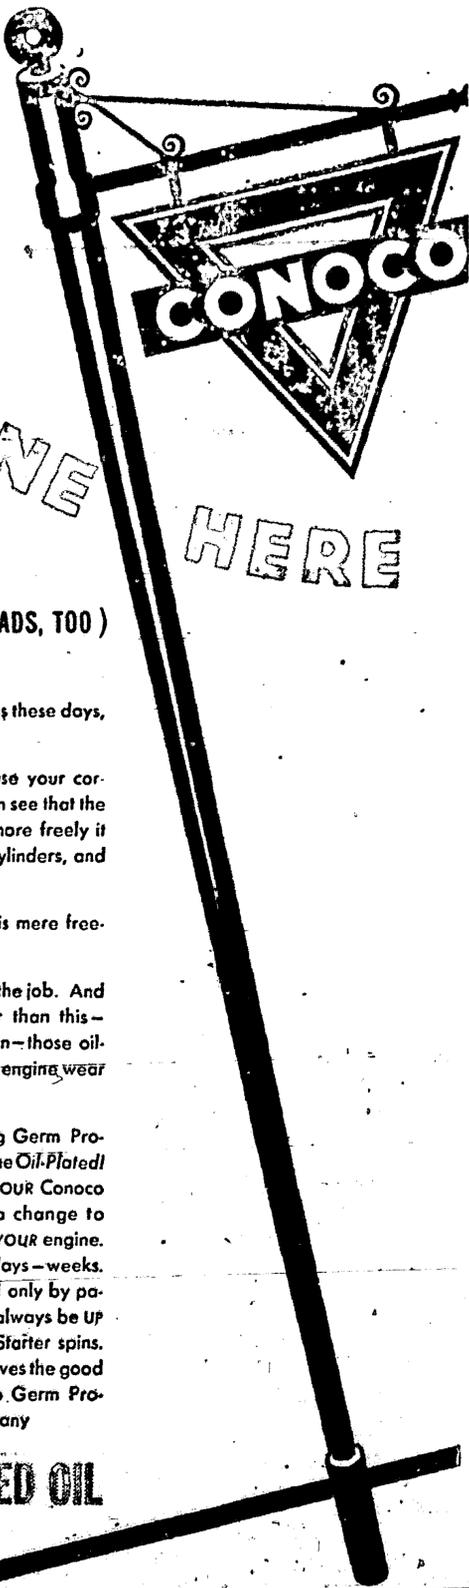

Well and good You SHOULD use your correct Winter grade, but You can see that the more freely any oil flows, the more freely it FLOWS DOWN OFF the pistons, cylinders, and other parts when you stop.

Then in starting up cold, where is mere free-flowing oil?

It is waiting to be pumped up on the job. And even in much warmer weather than this—according to engineering opinion—those oil-starved waits can cost you more engine wear than all the rest of your driving!

But this Winter with free-flowing Germ Processed oil, you can have your engine Oil-Plated! ... much more than a change to OUR Conoco Germ Processed oil... really a change to unbroken Winter lubrication for YOUR engine. It may stand cold for hours—days—weeks. Yet the slippery Oil-Plating formed only by patented Germ Processed oil, will always be UP IN ADVANCE. Pistons slip easy. Starter spins. Oil-Plated engine obliges—and lives the good life, on a stingy diet of Conoco Germ Processed oil. Continental Oil Company

Current Events IN REVIEW by Edward W. Pickard

Edward May Abdicate to Marry Mrs. Simpson

MERE scandal and gossip have no proper place in this department, but the "affaire Simpson," as the French would term it, has progressed until it assumes world importance.

King Edward

will abdicate in favor of his brother, the Duke of York, and marry the attractive woman who has shared so much of his time in recent months.

In support of this rumor is the reported fact that plans are being made for renting the farms of the Sandringham estate in Norfolk, which is the king's private property.

Should Edward give up the throne, it would eventually be occupied by Princess Elizabeth, eldest daughter of the Duke of York, and this succession would be decidedly popular with the people of England.

Japan "Not Fortifying" Isles Under Mandate

FOR some time there have appeared in print stories about how Japan was establishing air and submarine bases in the former German islands of the South Pacific over which she holds a League of Nations mandate.

It was believed that Great Britain was the prime mover in this new pact. As one commentator put it: "The agreement was made necessary when France debased her currency and placed an embargo on gold exports, because Great Britain suddenly discovered that nowhere in the world was there left a fixed yardstick against which to measure international commitments and handle international exchange."

Five Groups Accused by Trade Commission

CHARGES filed in Washington by the federal trade commission accuse five trade associations of attempting to corner the automobile parts and accessories business. The groups, which were ordered to show cause why they should not be compelled to cease their alleged combine, are the National Standard Parts association, Detroit; the Motor and Equipment Wholesale association, Chicago; the Automotive Trade associations of Greater Kansas City, Mo.; Mississippi Valley Automotive Jobbers association and the Southwestern Jobbers association. Their officials also are defendants in the suit.

The commission points out that the associations represent a "substantial proportion of the total volume of business of all manufacturers and jobbers of automobile parts and accessories throughout the United States." The commission charges that these groups "have combined together with others jointly, preventing the establishment of new and additional competitors," and with "executing certain agreements and conspiracies among themselves and with others."

Blum Warns Socialists of Republic's Danger

RADICAL Socialists are threatening to quit the "Popular Front" government of France because of discord with Communists, and they have been warned by Premier Leon Blum that the one condition whereunder the life of the republic can be prolonged is that the Popular Front "remain united." In an address to the radical leaders, Blum said a split in the coalition government would force his immediate resignation, and that dissolution of the parliament and new elections would result.

Monarchists of Austria, who would like to make Archduke Otto emperor, were encouraged by a speech delivered by Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg in which, defying the little entente, he shouted:

"No outsider, but only Austrians will decide whether the monarchy shall be restored!"

The day of a plebiscite to decide on the question of restoration of the Hapsburg claimant to the throne is "not yet in sight," the chancellor said. But, with Princess Adelheid, sister of Archduke Otto, listening, he declared that monarchist propaganda has a "proper place" in Austrian life.

"New Gold Standard" Tried by Uncle Sam

IT IS a new gold standard, a way of doing business which has never been tried before," was Secretary Morgenthau's characterization of the agreement just entered into by the United States, Great Britain and France, whereby, subject to 24 hours' cancellation, they will exchange gold for each other's currencies.

Financiers, economists and business men were taken by surprise by the move and immediately gave it close study. Some were disposed to label the maneuver "political expediency," but experts generally said it was a logical step in the sequence of monetary events but not positively in the direction of stabilization.

The new plan, Mr. Morgenthau said, differs from the old gold standard in that it will permit the export or earmarking of gold only to and between governments instead of private business institutions and traders.

No More Army Chaplains, Say Disciples of Christ

THE Disciples of Christ, in annual international convention in Kansas City, voted to send no more of the church's ministers to serve as chaplains in the United States army. The resolution adopted also asked the Federal Council of Churches "to sever its connection with the war system by dissolving its chaplaincy commission" and "to provide a non-military ministry of religion to men in the armed services at the church's own expense and under their own authority without involving the Church of Christ in any alliance whatsoever with the state or the military system."

Nineteen Die When Ship Sinks in Lake Erie

EIGHTEEN men and one woman perished in the waters of Lake Erie when the Canadian ship Sand Merchant foundered off Cleveland during a gale. Seven men, including the captain, were picked up after clinging to life boats for eleven hours. The woman who was lost was the wife of the first mate, who also drowned.

Many Are Killed in Moslem-Hindu Riots

FOR three days Moslems and Hindus in Bombay fought each other fiercely with guns and knives in riots that started during the construction of a Hindu temple near a mosque. Before the authorities had restored order about fifty persons had been killed and several hundred wounded. Nine attempts to set fires were made and one Hindu place of worship was burned to the ground.

Samuel Merwin, Novelist, Dies Suddenly

DEATH came suddenly and unexpectedly to Samuel Merwin, one of the well-known contemporary American novelists. He succumbed to a heart attack in the Players' club in New York. Mr. Merwin, who was sixty-two years old, wrote, among other books, "Anthony the Absolute," "The Passionate Pilgrim," "Hills of Han," "Silk," and "Bad Penny." He was associate editor of Success magazine from 1905 to 1909 and editor the following two years.

Coast Maritime Workers May Decide to Strike

AUTHORITY of the national maritime commission to declare a permanent truce in current contract controversies is challenged by the negotiating committee for the Pacific coast maritime unions, and members of those unions are instructed to vote on a proposal for a coast-wide waterfront strike.

The maritime commission had peremptorily demanded that the Pacific coast ports be kept open while it sent an investigator to San Francisco to discuss the conditions which have long threatened to bring on industrial warfare.

In telegrams to President Franklin Roosevelt and the commission, the committee said the commission had caused "great unrest" among the workers through its participation in negotiations between shipowners and dock and shipboard employees.

Russia Using Spanish War to Foment Discord

SOVIET RUSSIA made a second determined effort to aid the beleaguered government of Spain, and sustained a second rebuff. Ivan Malok, Russian ambassador to England, handed to Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the non-intervention committee, a virtual ultimatum demanding immediate convocation of the committee to consider blockading the coast of Portugal against arms shipments destined for the Spanish insurgents.

Observers in Europe are convinced that the Soviet government does not expect the powers to agree to any such blockade as is suggested, but is chiefly interested in stirring up discord.

Leaders of the Fascists were reported to have planned a steady steam-roller advance on Madrid, and this offensive was already under way. The defenders of the capital were hastily building fortifications in the suburbs and surrounding the city with trenches. In Oviedo the dynamite-armed force of loyalist miners was still battling with the garrison and rebel troops sent to the rescue were about to enter the city.

Belgium Drops Alliances and Will Be Neutral

BELGIUM, which since the close of the World war has been tied tight to France by a military alliance, has decided to drop that and all similar alliances and to rely for her safety on strict neutrality and a larger army. King Leopold so informed the cabinet, telling the ministers that Germany's reoccupation of the Rhineland "practically puts us back where we were before the great geographical position," he said, "makes it imperative for us to maintain a military machine of such size as to dissuade any neighbor from using our territory, to attack another state." The period of military service was extended from 12 to 18 months.

Only America Lags in Naval Construction

FIGURES made public by the American Navy department show that since July 1 last every great naval power except the United States has increased the number and tonnage of its war vessels. In the 2 1/2 months from July 1 to September 15, the United States reduced the number of its ships from 324 vessels totaling 1,080,715 tons to 306 vessels, totaling 1,062,875 tons.

The Man Who O-O Tales and Traditions from American Political History FRANK E. HAGEN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AN EARLY "BLACK-LEGION" ON TREES

ON TREES were posted mysterious squares of paper, black, or white, or red, summoning men to midnight meetings. At these meetings there were oaths and grips and passwords.

That was more than three-quarters of a century ago, but members of the "Black Legion," who created such a furore early in 1936, would have felt pretty much at home in those meetings back in the forties and fifties. There they would have fraternized with members of "The Supreme Order of the Star-Spangled Banner," a secret society which grew into a political party, the Native Americans, with a platform of opposition to foreigners, the papacy, infidelity and socialism.

Later they became known as the Know Nothings because, when a member was questioned about the order, he invariably answered "I don't know." In New York and Pennsylvania they elected several men to congress and in 1847 they held a national convention at Philadelphia. There they nominated Gen. Henry Dearborn for vice-president and recommended, but did not formally nominate, Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate for President.

In 1854-55 the Know Nothings carried Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Kentucky and California and looked forward to the election of 1856 with high hopes. Soon the party threw off its secret character and it became mostly Whigs. In February, they held another convention in Philadelphia at which they formally renamed their party the American party. They nominated for President Millard Fillmore, the Whig vice-president who had served all but one month of the term to which Zachary Taylor had been elected, and gave him for a running mate Andrew Donelson of Tennessee, the ward of "Old Hickory" Jackson. Fillmore carried only one state in the election which sent James Buchanan, the Democratic candidate, to the White House and the Know Nothings passed out of the political picture soon afterwards.

"TO THE VICTORS"

Although Andrew Jackson was the first exponent of that political creed, he was not the first man to express it in so many words. The man who did was William L. Marcy of New York, leader of one of the factions in the Democratic party when Polk was President.

The division in the Democratic ranks was over the distribution of federal patronage and it centered, as it has so often since, in New York state. The faction, led by Marcy, was called the "Hunkers" who were supported by Tammany and who were given that name because they were always inclined to hunger, or "hunker," for office.

The other faction, led by Silas Wright, was composed of disappointed Van Burenites—disappointed because Van Buren, whom Jackson had made his successor, had been refused a second term by the party which took Polk, a "dark horse," instead. This faction was called the "Barnburners" because, like the Dutch farmer in New York state who burned his barn to get rid of the rats in it, they declared they were ready to "burn their barns to get rid of the rats," the upstart "Hunkers."

As a matter of fact they did just that in the campaign of 1848. Opposed to slavery they joined forces with the Liberty party, took the name of the Free Soil party and nominated Martin Van Buren and Charles Francis Adams of Massachusetts. This split in the Democratic party resulted in a victory for Gen. Zachary Taylor, the Whig candidate, over Van Buren and over Lewis Cass, the regular Democratic nominee.

Along with "Hunker" and "Barnburner" is another interesting name once applied to the Democrats, growing out of the rivalry of these two factions. In the campaign of 1840 the Whigs called their opponents the "Locofocos" because at a meeting of the New York Democrats the two factions were trying to get control of the meeting. One gang turned off the gas lights and in the darkness, the other gang, which had come prepared for just such a stunt, took from their pockets the new friction matches, called "locofocos," struck them and by thus lighting the room were able to continue the session and dominate it.

New York City Milestones

The first New York City milestones were erected in 1769, starting from the second City Hall at Wall and Nassau Streets and running along the Bowery Road to Kingsbridge. In 1801 a second series was set from the second City Hall to Middle Road. The third series was erected in 1822 from the present City Hall along the Bowery and Third Avenue. All the stones were of uniform size, being sixty-six inches high, four inches wide and six inches thick.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY DR. JAMES W. BARTON Talks About

Underweight Children. IN AN examination of a number of children in the public or grammar schools it was found that the number of underweights was reduced by supplying milk at the school at least once a day. In the high schools where no milk was supplied the gain in weight for height and age was not so satisfactory.

Dr. Barton

While this habit of supplying extra milk for school children is excellent there is often physical defects and bad health habits that are undermining the youngsters' health, and these must be corrected if permanent results are to be obtained. A youngster that plays all the time and is too tired to eat and digest his food properly may be keeping his weight low just as can a youngster who doesn't get outdoors at all, and has no appetite for his food.

Infected teeth or tonsils, a nose that is blocked and preventing proper breathing, round shoulders, and other physical defects all prevent proper growth and development. Dr. W. R. P. Emerson in "Archives of Pediatrics" says: "The essentials for good nutrition and normal physical and mental development are: (1) freedom from physical defects, (2) adequate food, (3) free air, (4) sufficient exercise, and (5) proper rest. From a survey of a large number of children of preschool (three to six years) and school ages it was found that each child had an average of 4 1/2 physical defects and 6 faulty eating habits. Of a group of 1,000 children only 2 per cent (20 in the whole 1,000) were found to be free from physical defects.

"The most frequent defects are obstruction of the nose, bad teeth, diseases of various organs, and postural conditions (round shoulders, away back, spinal curvature), which were either the result or partly the causes of the underweight and underdevelopment."

Physicians are agreed that attaining the proper weight for any youngster's particular type of body or physique will mean "improvement in mental development, increased efficiency, and increased resistance to disease."

The treatment of underweight children then should be from the various standpoints outlined above which means, first, the removal of defects and bad health habits, and second, plenty of fresh air, plenty of good food and plenty of rest.

The Family Physician

There was a time when the "outstanding" doctor of a community was supposed to be very silent, very gruff, having no patience with the patient who wanted to tell him all about his sickness. It was felt that he knew so much that just a glance at his patient and the taking of pulse and temperature was all that he needed to know what was wrong and how to treat it.

Fortunately the real family physician was not of this type, but a real all-round friend of the family who had all the affairs of the family on his mind and tried to help whenever, and wherever possible.

And then came the "hospital" type of physician who took samples of blood, urine, sputum, used the X-ray and other types of examination possible in the hospital, and after waiting the hours and days necessary for these examinations to be completed, told the patient and the patient's family exactly what was wrong.

Now it is only good sense for the doctor to get all the help possible from the hospital's laboratories, because this will be of help to the patient; but the up-to-date doctor, the successful physician now realizes more than ever before that more than a knowledge of medicine, more than the findings from the laboratory are necessary if the patient is to get the best possible treatment.

Humanism Is Needed

Dr. Oscar Klotz in addressing the Toronto Academy of Medicine states: "In the practice of medicine the physician is called upon to use his every effort and equipment to learn the cause of the ailment and its treatment. He is often called upon to strain the last resources known to science to attain a satisfactory result. But over and above all these scientific endeavors, aided by all the available skill, there is need of a very commonplace attribute of man best spoken of as humanism—love and understanding of your fellow man. There is need of a sympathetic understanding which serves to support the courage of the patient, an appreciation of the mental and spiritual reactions of the sick, often determined by their surroundings and made worse by the poverty and distress of other members of the family. The full understanding of 'humanism' in medicine is acquired through varying circumstances of life and is attained in greatest measure by the family or general physician, rather than by the specialist."

Busiest Highway

The department of public relations of the American Automobile association believes it is generally recognized that Route No. 1, running north and south along the Atlantic seaboard, actually carries more traffic on a yearly average than any other. It is also their belief that the area between New York city and New Jersey represents the greatest highway traffic density of any place in the country.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CHAPTER VII

Rodney Braddon returned to Chicago from Rochester early on Sunday morning just eight days before the date set, on the calendar of the criminal courts, for the trial of Myrtle Lorrre for murder of her husband. Rod was ignorant of that date, and his arrival was without reference to the trial. He had come back to see his brother—and Agnes—before leaving for Germany. He had remained at Rochester much longer than he had planned.

He had been almost happy there. That is, he had found more to absorb him, to interest and excite him in his work, than ever he had before. Happiness for Rod did not depend upon sensual satisfactions; he consciously sought none of them, except music, sometimes. His sole excitement was in his work and study, which occupied him hour after hour; then he would go off on long, swinging walks alone. He kept his spare, splendid body in vigorous condition with swimming, when near water, or with tennis.

Rod played, in fact, to tire himself out, when he needed it to beat down the longings within him—and his loneliness.

Sometimes he could ward off the spells by exhaustion; at other times, they surprised him unprepared. Rod would come "home" to his dreary hotel room bringing with him now medical reports upon which he expected to pass the evening, and he would never return on the light, but sit miserably and uselessly idle in the dark.

He missed his brother. To be sure, when they had been in the same city, days passed without Rodney's seeing Jud; but he was there, and on such occasions, Rod could go to him instead of seeking his own lonely room. And recently, he had been able to go with Jud or alone, to the Glenelths. But now that was lost.

Rod had made friends among the doctors at Rochester. Not many friends, to be sure, for Rod was no mixer; but he had found a few congenial men whom he liked and respected, and whose lives served the same purposes as his—understanding of disease. But he could not feel like seeking them when his spirit dropped low. They were too like himself. His brother—and Agnes—were utterly different.

He had expected—and half feared, half hoped it—that he would have destroyed his power to retain Agnes in his day-dreams. Losing her, he had supposed he must lose the delight of his dream of her; but this had proved not so. When his loneliness assailed him, and he sat in the dark, he longed for her—her. Separate as he had kept himself from her, he had never been so close to another girl. Now she was his brother's, he believed. So he must imagine her his own no longer! But it had been futile to forbid this to himself. And here he was again in Chicago.

Rod had not wired his brother; and so, while dressing as the train entered the city, he weighed probabilities of Jud's whereabouts.

It was a warm, steamy June morning—so it was probable that Jud would be up early for a long day on the water.

Having no rooms in Chicago, Rod checked his bag at the station and phoned his brother's apartment. Nobody answered, so Rod took a taxi and told the driver to hurry to the harbor.

His brother's familiar boat was not in sight, but when Rod inquired, a boy in a launch said yes, Mr. Braddon's yacht was at anchor. That was it, there.

Rod stared at a new motor-cruiser three or four times as large as the boat he had known. It looked ninety feet long, with graceful clipper bow and a line of brass-bound portholes to cabins, and with gleaming saloons above-deck.

The boy ran Rod out to it; and on the quarterdeck stood Jud. He was bareheaded and wearing dannels without a coat.

No guests were in sight, and Rod was glad of that, though he was sure that guests must be on the way or were to be picked up at some port or pier. Jud never planned a Sunday on the water without a party.

Rodney hailed: "Jud! Hello!" And his brother saw who was in the launch. He stood stock still with surprise; and then Rod saw him laugh and run to the boat step, and he caught Rod's hand and hauled his brother aboard.

"Rod!" said Jud—and Rod felt his brother's arm tighten about his shoulders. "Like the kid, old state?"

Rodney obediently glanced about. "It looks great, Jud. I didn't know it was yours."

"Good Lord," said Jud, "it was in all the papers. Why's he waiting?" Jud looked at the launch. "Forget to pay him?"

"I paid him," said Rod, "but told him to wait."

Jeb laughed again in his warming way. "You would. Did you wonder if I wanted you to stay?—Hey, you!" he called to the boy. "Come closer! Catch!" And Jeb chucked a gold-piece which the boy caught, calling out loud thanks.

"All through," Jeb dismissed him. "Now, old top, are you going to stay?" "I'd like to, Jud."

Anchor was up; and they were moving, with deceptive smoothness, out of the harbor on a limpid, lazy lake.

The brothers sat down to breakfast opposite each other at the gay little table at the forward end of the dining-salon. Rod had learned that the guests for the day would be picked up at the Glenelths.

In the shining, perfectly appointed galley, Imlo was cooking, but a steward, new to Jud's staff, was serving the table.

For the first time the splendor and extravagance of Jeb's establishment wrung a remark from his brother.

"Doesn't this all cost a heap, Jud?" "I'll tell you the truth, Rod," Jeb confided. "Expense doesn't make any difference to me any more. Money doesn't mean anything. I can make whatever amount I want. That's an absolute fact. A lot of men are past that point, Rod. The city—the country—civilization's in a new era. We've got the production problem completely licked."

It was after breakfast when Rodney asked at last: "How is Agnes?" "She's all right," his brother returned.

"When are you marrying her, Jud?" "When that damn trial's over. That was the rottenest piece of luck for me. We were all set, Rod; we went to that building to look over an apartment, when Agnes opened that damned door, and—"

Rodney, listening, sat still with difficulty; he held himself quiet by gripping tight the arms of his chair so as not to betray, too clearly, the tumult within him. He had had no idea, until just now, that Agnes was not his brother's.

Ten people came aboard the boat when it lay off the shore opposite the Glenelths: Agnes and her mother and Beatrice and Davis and another young married couple whom Rod had never met. The others were paired, also; but they were not married: two girls whom Rodney vaguely remembered, and two boys, whose names he knew.

They were pleasant, casual, unimpressionable young people before whom Rodney felt odd and old and awkward. They looked him over, and their eyes traveled to his brother, making comparison; but what they said to Rodney was carefully polite.

They made no real difference to Rod. Agnes was near him; and if he had not known that his brother must have failed to establish possession of her, now he would have discerned it—though she plainly was supposed to be paired with Jud.

She was in white, with a bit of blue slashed in the cool silk which clung to her as the boat made a breeze; and she cast off her hat and let the sun burn her. Ill Rodney drew her back under the shade of the canvas over the forward deck. They remained there while the others stayed nowhere; and after a while, Rodney and Agnes were alone far forward.

He did not talk much to her. What had he to say? He sat in a striped canvas chair close to hers, and felt engaged in a content which could not confound, he knew, but which was complete for the moment.

She looked at him and smiled, not at him but with him, in his content; and always, when they would lose something if their eyes lingered on each other, she looked away over the water; and as never, never before, Rodney longed to keep her close to him forever.

She wasn't Jud's yet, whatever the papers, whatever Jud himself, had said. Might she some time in some way be his?

Rodney faced the breeze which was blowing her dress against her slight body. The appeal of her loveliness, the allure of her beautiful body, was only an adjunct to that quality of hers which had caught him long ago and would never release him.

He had never had to explain himself to Agnes; and she, without speaking of it, had stood between him and the world of others. How he needed her! How much more than did Jud? How he could work, what enormous research he could accomplish, if she were his wife to hold in his arms, when he dropped his task; if she would share with him the evening and hours of night, and meet for him, the world by day.

Now he had talked to her of his work at Rochester, and of himself, as he had to no one else, not even to Jud.

"Rod," she said at last, after one of their long silences. "I've something to decide. Help me. It's about the trial. They say that what will happen to Myrtle Lorrre will depend on me. I can free her—or convict her. Do you believe that?"

"I don't know," said Rod. "But Jud thinks so."

He saw her color quickly deepen under her sunburn. "So Jeb's told you."

"Yes; he told me, Agnes."

"What, especially?"

"That you took, from the first, the side of the defense. He—"

"What, Rod?"

"Can't understand it."

"Yes, he can, Rod. That's the trouble."

"That he understands it?"

"He knows I'm going to do what I am bound to do, because I believe—"

They Discussed Agnes' Coming Ordeal.

She stopped and caught her breath before she said it—"Martin O'Mara."

"O'Mara," said Rod. "The lawyer you called."

"Yes," said Agnes. "I'll tell you about him. He—"

Rodney, attending, tried to keep his mind on what she said; but his feelings made it utterly impossible. Fled far from him was his hour of false content. A new despair seized him.

He knew now that madly he had imagined that perhaps—perhaps—it had been some relic of memory of what he had done and said to her before he had gone away, which had interposed itself between her and Jud's complete possession of her.

But it was not that; it was something which had to do with that lawyer whom Jud had danced about—O'Mara.

CHAPTER VIII

The Monday of the trial dawned hot. The sun rose yellow and dazzling out of a lake that lay like a pool to the horizon; the faintest of breezes moved from off this endless mirror. At Agnes's wide-open windows the frail net of curtains barely quivered.

Ordinarily the sun, striking into her room, did not awaken her; but this morning she had seen the last stroke of the day and the first fingers of day grope over the edge of the waters.

The robins and the wrens chirped at the light; a wood thrush awoke, and gay little song sparrows.

After a while Agnes' mother came in, and for a short time they discussed Agnes' coming ordeal. Then Mrs. Glenelth left.

Today, Myrtle Lorrre must go on trial for her life, for the murder of her husband; and soon Agnes Glenelth must go on the witness-stand for her. No, not for Myrtle. There was no point in being dishonest with yourself. She was taking the side of the defense because of Cathal Martin O'Mara, who had come to the house again on Saturday morning—the day before yesterday—to go over her testimony once more.

Mr. Nordell and another attorney for the state had conferred with her twice; and she was subpoenaed as a witness for the state as well as for the defense.

But Jeb had said to her: "Nordell told me, Glen, you seemed to belong to the defense, body and soul. That's the impression he got. Are you crazy?" "I'm going to tell only what I saw and heard," she had replied to him.

"But how are you going to tell it? Nordell knows; and he's not fool enough to call you for his witness. You'd never be his. If he put you on the stand, you'd go over to your shyster friend O'Mara. So he'll let O'Mara put you on the stand—and then the state can get after you. Be O'Mara's witness, and see where you land! Good Lord, Glen, what's got into you?"

What was this which was in her, and which, by its recurrent excitements made sleep impossible and unthinkable after the dawn of this day? There was no use in disguising this to herself; when she should go on the witness-stand, she would declare by her implications, if she were forbidden to state it in words, that Myrtle Lorrre had killed justifiably.

Had she?

Satin-Clad Brides Go Victorian

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE importance of period fashions for evening this year means that they will be reflected in the gowns worn at many smart autumn and winter weddings. There is a quaintness about the early Victorian fashions that especially offers alluring possibilities to brides who would have a "picture" wedding scene.

Young brides with slender figures can wear becomingly these demure gowns of Victorian inspiration in silk taffeta or heavy clipper satin.

The lovely gown pictured creates romance and poetry for the modern wedding scene. This 1836 version of a Victorian wedding gown is interpreted in traditional ermine-white pure silk satin. The basque buttons quietly down the back. The full sleeves give the broad shoulder effect that accents, by way of contrast, the slender girlish waistline. The bride carries a prayer book with gordenias.

Of course one's bridal party must carry out the idea of the flower girl has a period look in a Victorian cream silk taffeta princess dress that is gored to fit at the waistline with a widely spreading skirt which, by the way, stresses the new length for little girls party dresses this season. This wee maiden ties a lavender silk ribbon in her hair and carries a bouquet of purple asters and cream colored gladioli with a silk tulle trail.

The bridesmaid befittingly wears a cream silk satin Victorian gown. The full sleeve, slender line and back fullness are important style details that present-day designers are definitely introducing in their newest creations. A demure little brown silk net bonnet adds to the quaintness of the costume. The flowers she carries are purple and cream asters.

If one prefers that the attendants dress colorfully rather than keep strictly to cream satin, they may wear pert gowns in autumn hues of peau de sole or silk taffeta with puff sleeves and full skirts. As quaint and as "period" looking as if she had stepped from the fashion pages of a Godey appears a bridesmaid who is gowned in a frock of lavender silk taffeta with a tiny wine-colored silk velvet hat surmounted with three hyacinth blue ostrich tips. An armful of purple, rich red and cream asters adds to the color glory of the picture.

One thing is certain, whether she is a classic bride in traditional satin or in soft clinging fabrics, or a bride in quaint frock of Victorian or director inspiration, she will be dressed in silk of one type or another.

This year it is good style to have one's attendants wear the same style and the same fabric as one's own gown, only in different colors. If desired, the bridesmaids may all wear the same color, or that which is novel and new, different shades of a basic color, giving somewhat of an ombre effect to the group as a whole.

For the important evening ensemble, smart trousseaux will include a black velvet evening gown which will make the bride look like a re-incarnation of Saigent's famous "Madame X." Top it off with a matching hip-length silk velvet jacket and it can be worn on the honeymoon for dinner and formal wear.

SILVER LAME GOWN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Never have gleaming metal weaves been more fashionable than they are at this very moment. The interesting note about these glamorous fabrics is the fact of their importance for dressy daytime wear as well as for formal evening. Of course their styling tunes them to afternoon as does that of the charming dress pictured. Fine allover pleating distinguishes this silver silk lame cocktail gown. This very beautiful silk silver lame comes in beguiling color tones, which makes it particularly adaptable for the making of the costume blouse or the tunic that completes color harmony for the ensembled costume.

SILHOUETTES BACK TO FORMER TRENDS

Just when we're getting used to high, broad shoulders, flares, perky short tunics and important long ones, along come Paris dispatches with the news that styles which immediately followed the war are beginning to make their influence felt. That means a neat, plain, slim silhouette.

It isn't only news from Paris that indicates the trend. A London designer sends over street frocks in the fewest of wooleens made on straight lines with only discreet, expertly tailored encrustations of the fabric as trimming, at belt, sleeves and occasionally on the skirt above a short, V-shaped slit in the center front to making walking easy. Even tunics are sometimes made on straight lines.

Rich Fabrics Mark Styles for Autumn and Winter Wear

Rich fabrics always signalize the advent of the fashions of autumn and winter. Rich lames and fur for evening things will be used, and hats will be correspondingly resplendent. Bright flowers and feathers on velvet comprise the theme of the new millinery. Flowers on black velvet are especially good for a hat that is good to perk up a late summer costume or point a new autumn dress.

There is a shallow, little black velvet pillbox with dangling, stemmed pink geraniums that is our favorite, but we would settle for a tall witch's crown hat of black velvet, topped by perky red and white cellophane flowers.

Shining Furs

Fur capes of shining black caracul, nutria and Persian, from waist to three-quarter length, with squared shoulders will be a favorite choice of well-dressed women. Fur stole collars trim the coats of many, three-piece ensembles, gray wolf on green wool, brown lapin on plaid and leopard with rust.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

A few bread crumbs added to scrambled eggs improves flavor and makes an extra serving possible.

A little hot milk added a little at a time while mashing potatoes will make them light and fluffy. Heat but do not boil the milk.

Two tablespoons of vinegar added to one cup of sweet milk will turn it into sour milk. Let stand for three minutes before using.

Doeskin and chamols gloves become stiff and harsh unless washed in tepid suds and rinsed in slightly soapy water.

Beat eggs only slightly when used in custards, puddings, sauces, etc. Beat well when used to make food light, as in sponge cakes, puffy omelets, etc.

Seems Pat's Front Had Retreated to the Rear

Pat, being a sound sleeper, had slept through the racket set up by his alarm clock, and, consequently, when he did awaken, found himself late for work. He hurriedly dressed and rushed off. In his great haste he did not know that he had put his trousers back to front. Alighting from the bus outside the factory, he slipped and fell into the gutter. The conductor went to his assistance.

"Are you hurt?" he asked.

Pat looked down at himself and noticed his trousers.

"I don't know about being hurt," he grumbled, "but I must have given myself a bad twist."

If You Have a Child

ASK YOUR DOCTOR THIS

Ask Him Before Giving Your Child an Unknown Remedy

Practically any doctor you ask will warn: "Don't give your child unknown remedies without asking your doctor first."

When it comes to the widely used children's remedy—"milk of magnesia," the standard of the world is established. For over half a century many doctors have said "PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia." Safe for children. No other is "quite like it."

Keep this in mind, and say "PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA" when you buy. Now also in tablet form. Get the form you prefer. But see that what you get is labeled "Genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Leadership of President Roosevelt

That the leadership of President Roosevelt has prevented class war and widespread disaster in America was the declaration of Marcus Levin, president of one of New York's largest department stores, in a recent radio address to the people of the country.

"If there had been a leader of lesser stature since March 4, 1933, in the office of President of the United States, one who cared nothing about human suffering, there would in all likelihood have been deep unrest and widespread disorder," he said. "President Roosevelt not only saved millions from the misery of suffering, but he saved America from class division and class war. His opponents claim that he was responsible for a campaign of class war. On the contrary, Roosevelt's leadership and statesmanship made impossible the class war which, but for him, would have been inevitable."

Mr. Levin defended relief expenditures under the New Deal and asserted that they were opposed "only by owners of huge fortunes—men who have enough and too much of every thing themselves and greedily fight to protect their property in this way by opposing the taxation needed for relief."

ON DISPLAY at all Buick Showrooms

FOUR WONDROUS NEW REASONS WHY: "It's Buick again!"

SENSATIONAL is the fervor with which the American public has taken to its heart the brilliant motor cars offered by Buick this year.

Indeed, the sweeping success of the 1936 Buick program fully challenged us and our great parent General Motors in a momentous decision.

Should we continue this amazingly popular line of cars into next year, perhaps the prudent thing to do—or should we dare broad improvement upon their spectacular excellence?

We felt there was only one right answer to that question, the bold and progressive answer—and that's why insiders now forecasting 1937 are already saying: "It's Buick again!"

That's why on top of $15,000,000 recently spent re-tooling and re-equipping Buick's great plant, we appropriated and are now spending $14,500,000 more.

That's why every car in the 1937 Buick line—the SPECIAL, the CENTURY, the ROADMASTER and the LIMITED—is a triumph visibly and intrinsically outranking anything we have ever done.

Each has more beauty for dazzling style, more power for breath-taking action, more room for full-family comfort, more downright "road-command" for safety and pleasure.

See them—then you'll know why Buick's soaring sales curve is headed for yet higher altitudes next year.
