Miss Ruth Ryden, county health nurse has returned from a regional meeting of nurses held in Deming. She returned by way of El Paso, where she was joined by Mrs. Edith Crawford, who has been under care of a physician there for some time. Mrs. Crawford is very much improved.

Mr. James Cooper, his son Lin and Mr. Roy Richard were in El Paso part of this week. Mr. Cooper took Lin down to have a consultation about a fractured vertebrae which resulted in his recent auto accident. The diagnosis was satisfactory and Lin will be entirely recovered in a short time.

Mrs. H. A. Barham of Cloudcroft is here this week auditing the books at the court house in preparation for the first of the year.

School Notes

Ola C. Jones Co. School Sup't

The Lincoln County Teachers' Convention was held in Capitan, Friday, December fourth. The morning session opened with registration of teachers, singing, and general session. Under the direction of W. E. Kerr, Assistant State Director, the Lincoln County teachers organized a chapter of the State Program of Improvement of Instruction. The organization's purpose is to submit changes to the state school curriculum. Mrs. Irene Hart, County Superintendent Elect, was named as County Chairman. Study groups were organized under the supervision of: Karl Cunningham at Capitan, Eric Ming at Carrizozo, S. G. Hester at Hondo, W. E. Abell at Corona, E. C. Bruce at San Patricio, L. V. Baker at Stetson, and Mrs. Marie Pacheco at Arabela.

At the noon hour, the Lincoln County Rural Teachers gave Mrs. Ola C. Jones, County Superintendent, a surprise luncheon. The table decorations were made to represent the progress of the schools during the four years of the present administration. Miniature buildings adorned the table with flags telling the date they were erected. The new equipment for the classrooms was cleverly shown by tiny tables, chairs, chart racks, sand tables, coat and hat closets, and covered wood boxes. The playground group consisted of swings, seesaws, and basketball goals. Then came the County Library with the tiny book cases filled with books and teachers' supplies. Of course, Mrs. Roselle was there in charge talking with her hands as usual. Another feature which caused much merriment was a group of dolls representing the County School Board in session with Mr. McQuillen standing in his favorite position. Last but not least was Mrs. Watson as Supervisor with a book under her arm.

As place favors, a candle holder bearing four tiny candles was placed at each plate. The holders were made of little pine slabs. The candles were green to carry out the color scheme used for the background of the table decorations. The four candles represented the four years of service.

As the delicious food prepared by the Ladies' Missionary Union of Capitan was served, Mr. Lewis Cummins, a very clever toastmaster, presented a delightful program. He led the guests to believe they were witnessing a football game, thus dividing his program into quarters. In the first quarter, Miss Marie Merchant gave two beautiful violin solos. She was followed by Mrs. Marie Rooney, who did credit to herself as usual in two vocal solos.

In the second quarter, along with jokes by the toastmaster, the special guests were introduced and asked to make a few remarks. Next a 'Guess-Who' biography was read by Mr. Cummins. Having read the biography, Mr. Cummins said: "Now we shall hear from Mr. Bruce who can tell us of whom we have heard." Thus introduced, Mr. Bruce led the group in singing several songs written for Mrs. Jones and set to music of familiar folk songs.

Last, with very appropriate remarks, Mr. Cummins presented to Mrs. Jones a beautiful fitted traveling case bound in rich brown leather. All in all, it was a very well planned program. But with all the merry making,

Automobile Accidents

As Mr. Jim Cooper and son Lin were driving into town from Ancho last Friday night between 8 and 9 o'clock they overtook Mr. Guebara and son, who were hauling a load of wood. The Guebara boy was sitting on the rear of the wagon, when he became frightened and jumped off, falling just in front of Mr. Cooper's car. Mr. Cooper swerved his car into the ditch to avoid striking the boy who however had received fatal injuries from which he died instantly. His neck and both legs were broken from the fall.

Lin Cooper was injured, but not seriously, when his father's car turned over. He is in the Robinson hospital, but it is thought he will be all right when he recovers from the shock. The Cooper car was completely wrecked.

While driving toward town on the overpass last Saturday night, Miss Maudie Warden accidentally turned her car over. She was uninjured, but one wheel was broken off the car and the fenders bent.

there was a tinge of sadness. Both teachers and superintendent realized that they were convening in the last convention of a very successful administration.

In the afternoon, the teachers elected officers as follows: Mrs. Irene Hart, President, R. V. Trolor, Vice President, and Gertrude Pearce, Secretary and Treasurer. Sectional meetings were held as follows:

Primary Section - Florence Long, Chairman. At this session, Miss Thelma McCully, Rural Supervisor Curry County, gave the teachers wonderful aids on chart and program making.

Intermediate Section - Ofelia Miranda, Chairman. Mrs. Mary Watson, Supervisor Curriculum Revision Study, spoke on "The Teacher's Part in the State Program for the Improvement of Instruction."

Upper Grade Section - L. V. Baker, Chairman. This section stressed "Diagnosis as a basis for Remedial Teaching."

One Room Section - Gertrude Pearce, Chairman. Mrs. Marie Hughes addressed the group on "Correlation of Subjects." Mrs. Hughes is principal of the San Jose Experimental School and Assistant Director of Curriculum Study.

High School Section - W. E. Abell, Chairman. A delightful overture was played by the Corona orchestra followed by a program stressing "Humanizing the High School" through a Student Council. By way of the teacher, supervision and administration, and our school and future values.

In the evening, the Capitan Parent-Teachers Association served eighty people a most delicious and delectable banquet, followed by the closing session in which Mrs. Hughes gave an interesting and instructive address on the "History and Progress of Our School System."

The next convention will be held in Lincoln to which the public is cordially invited.

Santa Claus Coming

Carrizozo Business Men's Club Sponsors North Pole Visitor

On Saturday afternoon at 2:00 P. M. December 19, Santa Claus will make his entrance into Carrizozo in a brand new Chevrolet to visit with all the kiddies in town. Santa Claus will leave his reindeer and sled in the mountains because of the lack of snow. Upon his arrival, he will visit with all on the main streets of Carrizozo. Don't fail to be at hand when Santa makes his arrival. Bring the children and don't forget he has a bag chuck full of gifts for all kiddies there to receive them.

Watch next week's paper for details as to where he will start his visit welcoming the Yuletide into Carrizozo. Come one and all.

As The News Sees It

Poor, dear Mrs. Simpson. She thought she was going to be a queen and now she isn't. What a disappointment!

Mrs. Simpson won't be able to make up to Edward VIII for the loss of his throne and the prestige that went with it. She will be censured all over the world for causing the abdication of the most idolized young man and the most loved British monarch in history. In two years, or less time the glamor will have vanished, love's dream will have cooled, all either will have to look back upon will be disillusionment and the memories of a love affair stripped of romance, and drama, and clothed in realism. He may even remind her in different ways that if it were not for her, he would still be King. Little as we value a throne, we wouldn't renounce one for any woman on earth.

HER OWN FATHER!

—Should she HATE HIM?

Jane Van Tassel, born and raised in Chicago, came West to meet her father for the first time... a man whose supposedly misunderstood complex had made him leave a wife and child many years ago to seek fortune on the western ranges.

But Gus Van Tassel's complex was downright wickedness, far too well understood by his fellow ranchers and the cowhands. Jane, managing the ranch while her father was in the hospital, tried not to believe the wicked stories. In her own heart there was certainty that Gus Van Tassel was a land thief, a crook whose very soul was hated by all who knew him. But... after all he was her father.

Then came Bill Denton, broad and handsome, the man whom Jane's father despised with a deathless passion for revenge. How should she regard this young stalwart? Should his vow of undying love be accepted or must she follow the dictates of her father and stamp Bill Denton as one to be scorned?

Jane Van Tassel followed the dictates of her heart....

Litvinov Attacks Nazi Foes of Soviet Russia

WHAT Russia thinks of the Nazi leaders of Germany and their anti-communist pact with Japan was set forth in plain words by Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinov in an address before the all union congress of Soviets in Moscow Italy, which has just concluded a similar agreement with Tokio...

M. Litvinov

The soviet union has no reason to change its position, which was and always will be—peace. It wants peace for itself and for all other countries.

"I want no words—there has been too much talk—but action from others.

The soviet union begs no one to be its partner. It does not ask for unions, alliances or combinations. The day will come when the Red army and navy will be forced to defend the Fatherland.

"I am sure the soviet union will stand as a fortress against the filthy waves of a Fascist sea."

and that she soon will have 7,000 airplanes and 100,000 pilots. "If the German Fascists threaten our country, wee unto them," declared Corps Commander Krhpin, assistant commander of the Red army air forces.

V. M. Molotov, president of the council of commissars, professed love for the German people but intense hate for their leaders, who, he said, "have well earned their appellation of 'modern cannibals.'"

Green Is Re-Elected by Federation of Labor

WILLIAM GREEN was re-elected president of the American Federation of Labor before the closing of the convention in Tampa.

Reports of existing conditions, however, showed that the situation is serious. Gov. Walter Welford, of North Dakota, told the conference that water levels throughout his state are seriously diminished, constituting a major problem for the state and federal governments.

Mayor Dore of Seattle May Be Recalled

SEATTLE has a habit of recalling its mayors when they are not satisfactory. One was thus ousted in 1911 and another in 1931. Now a movement has been started for the recall of Mayor John F. Dore, who is accused of inciting acts of violence in a labor dispute.

Keeping Up With Science By Science Service

Radio Robot Flies Eight Miles Aloft for Weather Data

Tiny Storage Battery Has Been Devised

Pasadena, Calif.—Scientists here as a step toward improved weather forecasting have made a robot balloon, which constantly calls down to earth radio reports of temperature, pressure and humidity from altitudes as lofty as 40,000 feet (nearly eight miles).

The flying radio station weighs only two pounds and the balloon is five feet in diameter. The radio emits a 1.7 meter wave, which is one of the shortest wave-lengths used for a practical purpose.

To reduce the weight of California Institute of Technology's soaring weather station, the smallest yet devised for such an ultra-short wave, Louvan E. Wood, graduate assistant who designed the meteorograph, has developed a tiny two-volt storage battery that will rest on a fingernail.

Broadcasts Humidity Records. In addition to temperature and pressure, the station is designed to broadcast humidity records. The present method of gathering these data is by airplane.

Except for the elimination of one or two technical difficulties in the recording of data, the radio method of gathering meteorological information aloft is on the eve of practical use.

By gathering weather data up to altitudes of 40,000 feet, meteorologists will be able to refine the new system of air-mass forecasting.

The radio, credit for which goes to Capt. O. C. Maier of the United States signal corps, has one tiny tube that transmits a constant signal, interrupted by a timing device that translates the data for broadcasting.

Ultraviolet Ray Is Used in Selecting Eggs for Storage

Amsterdam.—Eggs can be made to tell the truth about their age by exposing them to ultraviolet light, it has been discovered at the University of Utrecht.

The trick depends on the phenomenon known as fluorescence. Ultraviolet radiation is itself invisible to the human eye, but it causes various substances to shine with light of different colors.

To the human eye an egg is just an egg. But under a beam of ultraviolet a really fresh-laid egg glows with a very pronounced red coloration. Less freshly laid eggs shade into blue, and the older they are the deeper is the blue.

Investigators at the University of Utrecht first made use of this new tool of the scientists to select eggs for storage.

A quantity of eggs were classified as to age by ultraviolet and then placed in storage. After six months not one of the "quite freshly laid" eggs had to be discarded.

Dream Book Is Relic From Ancient Egypt

London.—A new and unique relic from ancient Egypt is a dream book used over 3,000 years ago, to advise whether dreams were good or bad.

The book, which archeologists call very remarkable, lists various things that an Egyptian was likely to dream of. Each item is followed by the terse verdict: "good" or "bad."

Too Many Whalers on the Trail of Poor Leviathan

He Is Protected by Treaty of Powers

JONAH was never inside a whale at all and never meant to say he was, declares the latest bit of biblical interpretation. When the prophet related how he had been "swallowed up by a great fish," he was only using a figure of speech which his contemporary hearers understood well enough meant that he was in a pretty bad fix.

Nowadays the whale is in the position of Jonah. Too many whalers, with too efficient ships and too deadly killing weapons, are pursuing poor Leviathan through all the seven seas, and cluster thickest on his trail in the remotest part of the world, away "down under," in the waters about Antarctica.

Among the ratifying powers are some that have no coastline at all, like Czechoslovakia and Switzerland, and others whose direct interest in the whaling industry is remote, like Turkey and Rumania.

Some Nations Won't Agree. But there are a few notable holdouts: The U. S. S. R., which controls the greatest stretch of Arctic seacoast in the world, and Japan, always unwilling to yield any national advantage whatever.

If these holdout nations should plunge ahead without restraint, killing whales with no bag limit at all, they might be expected to undo all the good effects of other powers' treaty-sealed self-denial.

Norway May Foll Them. At present, Japan and Germany have only one floating factory each. And both nations are considered as "broke" as can be. It remains an open question whether they will spend great speculative sums on whaling fleets, when every mark and yen is urgently needed to feed other hungry spots in their respective national economies.

And Norway has a fistful of aces in the hole. A large part of the Norwegian fleet of floating factories is tied up at present. A special act of the Norwegian parliament forbids the selling of any of these ships.

Early Palestine Favored Heads Bulging in Back

London.—The curious fashion of shaping one's head to make it bulge high at the back was known to early inhabitants of Palestine, so British archeologists digging at ruins of Lachish have discovered.

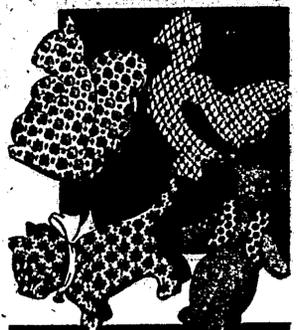

Several skulls, apparently pressed and bound to this shape in the infant stage of childhood, have been unearthed. They are believed to date from an earlier time than the conquest of the Promised Land by the Israelites.

Plants' Food Making Slowed by Heavy Water

New York.—Heavy water, containing double-weight hydrogen atoms instead of the common, single-weight ones, slows down the food-making process in green plants.

They kept colonies of a one-celled green plant in practically pure heavy water, and parallel colonies in similar amounts of ordinary water. The heavy water colonies carried on photosynthesis, or primary food production, only about two-fifths as rapidly as those in the common water.

In 1876 the St. Louis National Baseball club had a player whose one and only ambition was to make a home run. After months of futile attempts, he reached a state of exasperation one day which caused him to stretch a two-base hit into a home run—by shooting two infielders.

"Yes," said Agnes, losing breath. "Can you do something?" She caught his sleeve. "I don't know whom to turn to. Father can do no more just now; and Jeb—Mr. Braddon—Davis would be frantic if he helped him. But you can't put up money for him."

"I can't," admitted Cathal, "not to any amount such as he will need. But that's not all there is to do."

"He got his capital by borrowing on his life insurance. I don't know how one does that; do you?"

"Yes—when's his birthday?"

"October 20. Why?"

"It was just something I wanted to know," said Cathal, and held out his hand. Hers was in his; he held it; and then he let go.

Cathal drove away with a calendar superimposed over the other excitements in his mind. Today was the twenty-fifth of May. So Davis Ayreforth's birthday was four days and five months away. That meant that in all probability he must make his heavy payments of life insurance premiums within four days. For life insurance practice fixes the date upon which a man's age "changes" an even half-year—six months—before his birthday. Davis Ayreforth's age "changed," therefore, on the twenty-ninth of April; and on that date, undoubtedly, most of his insurance policies were written, and the premiums each year were due. But the companies, by common practice, extended date of payment by a month's "grace." So the final day for payment would be May 29—just four days off.

Cathal drove to the city that night lost only at times in the delights of his dreams of her; with these, he was haunted by desperate eyes and men's bitten lips—Linsdale's and Ayreforth's.

Cathal did not forget Davis. He received on the twenty-eighth the full special reports which he had ordered from the commercial agencies, and further, a verbal report from his own investigator; and on the forenoon of the twenty-ninth, Cathal went to Davis' office.

Davis, after a time, sent out word he could not see Mr. O'Mara.

Cathal, standing, stared past the secretary who brought this message; he strode past her, then, and tried to turn the knob of Mr. Ayreforth's door. It did not turn. It was locked.

Perhaps, during his wait, Cathal unconsciously had prepared the plan which immediately he adopted. He had not expected exactly this situation; but he did not delay an instant. He went to the window of the outer office which adjoined the partition wall. It was open, and he stepped out upon the sill. A twin window, also open, was on the other side of the partition, with a step between their sills. Cathal caught the sash and made the step—and he was in Davis' office.

Only after he had entered did Davis seem to have heard him. Davis was sitting at his desk with pen in his hand over paper. He had been trying to write something.

He jerked about, dropping his pen. He saw O'Mara, and started to rise but he did not. His hand darted to an open drawer beside him, and came up with a pistol, which he lifted, not toward Cathal, but toward his own head.

Cathal caught him; and they fought for the pistol.

It was like grappling a madman. Cathal blocked his arm so that the muzzle of the pistol pointed off, but Cathal could not get the pistol away. Then suddenly the pistol dropped. It was on the floor; and for the moment, Cathal was satisfied. He thought he had won; and he let Davis go.

Davis fell back from him, and Cathal stooped for the pistol. And he had it safe, and had snapped the cartridges out, when he realized Davis was at the window—12 floors above the street.

There must be for a man still sane, mostly, a second's halt before self-destruction, and so again Cathal caught him.

He clutched him with both arms from behind, and bracing his feet below the window, he pulled Davis back into the room; and then Cathal took no more chances. He let go and regained his feet first; and as Davis stood up, Cathal swung with all his weight in the blow upon Davis' chin.

Davis dropped to the floor on his face.

The office people were pounding at the locked door, and shouting for admittance.

"Is Mr. Remble there?" Cathal called through; and when the partner answered: "You come in; keep everybody else out," he unlocked the door, swung it enough to let Remble in, and bolted it once more.

Ken Remble stood gaping, his partner at his feet. The cartridges which Cathal had ejected were scattered on the floor.

"He shot himself!" Ken Remble whispered.

"No," said Cathal. "I took the gun away from him. He's knocked out; that's all."

"Who are you?"

"O'Mara. I'm a lawyer."

"Lawyer?"

"I came here as his friend."

"Oh... What's our move now?"

"Yours," said Cathal, "is to quiet your people. Tell them anything you please; and tell me later. I'll stay with him."

He was alone with Davis again behind the locked door.

Davis sat up dizzily. "What time is it?"

"Time?" said Cathal; and before he brought the desk clock into Davis' sight, he turned the hands. "It's after twelve, Ayreforth," he said. "It's two minutes after noon. Your insurance has expired."

"I didn't do it!" he broke down utterly. "I didn't do it—for her."

Cathal remained with him, in the office, until two o'clock, when he was able to communicate with Robert Glenelth in his office; and Glenelth came for the Dark One's husband and took him home.

That evening, when he arrived at the Linsdales', Cathal received a message to call Miss Glenelth. She would wait for him, Agnes told him, no matter how late it might be before he could come to the house.

It was Agnes who opened the door; and they were alone in the hall.

She spoke to Cathal so quietly that he asked: "It's all right?"

Agnes glanced toward the silent stairs. "Bee's trying to get him to sleep. He wanted to do it—for her."

She caught his hand. "What can I say to you?"

"Nothing," said Cathal, his hand burning from her touch. He wanted to turn his hand and clasp hers; he wanted—how he wanted to draw her to him! But he did not.

"But for you," she whispered, "but for you—" She closed her eyes, and could not finish. Then she looked up at him again. "We've shared some terrible things, you and I, Cathal O'Mara," she said.

"May we share more?"

The burning that had been in his hand was throughout his body. "Not more troubles, I mean!" he said. "Yet, may I have my part in putting them from you, if they are to come!"

Her hand was gone from him, but she was leading him out onto the terrace, where the lights from the house dimly shone. "Do you remember—the lightning?" timidly he asked.

"I remember everything we've done together," she replied with her honestness that excited him through.

He was keeping himself from her; carefully, he kept to himself; and she wanted him closer. When he did not move, she did.

"The times we've met," she heard him say, "could be packed in a day; do you know it?"

"I know it. What a day!"

"Do you live in it—ever?"

"Ever? Again and again, over and over! Do you?"

"Do I?" He could speak no further to her. He stood, keeping himself off as he had, searching her eyes in the dim light; but slowly, slowly his hands went to her.

She saw them and waited for them; but they stopped, and she seized his suddenly, and she clasped her fingers through his; and so, as he held to her, she held to him. And they felt each other quivering.

"So it's come to you too!" he whispered.

"Yes, Cathal O'Mara, it's come to me too."

Their fingers twisted together in glorious agony.

"But what can we do with it?"

"Do? What do you want to do?"

"Live in our kingdom; can we?"

"Our kingdom? Where?"

"Wherever you will be—with me—if you believe it."

"Believe what, Cathal?"

"That it's not the world of others that lovers live in; it's the kingdom of themselves alone."

"It may be a marvelous, movable kingdom. For it's wherever one finds the other. In the city to have it, you need but together to shut the door; or it may surprise you from no more than a meeting, unexpected, amid the crowd of the street."

"There, I've told you. But I know—I know it's in my fancy, only. With all the differences between us, can it ever be?"

CHAPTER XIII

Bee, not yet undressed, lay on the bed beside her husband. He had worn himself out; and the bromide which she had brought him had made him sleepy at last; but she could not sleep.

A car drove away; and Bee crept from the room, closed the door carefully behind her, and waited at the top of the stairs. Agnes did not appear; and there was no sound below. "Agnes! Agnes!" Bee called cautiously; and for a moment she had the fear that her sister had driven away with O'Mara. "Agnes!"

Agnes turned from the door where she had stood since he left her. She heard Bee at last, and looked up and saw her.

She went slowly, almost as if with difficulty; and indeed, difficulties assailed her, but she did not feel them as her own. For herself, she felt no doubt at all. She was defiantly, exultingly sure—of herself, and of him.

"Agnes, what have you done?"

"Done!" said Agnes breathlessly. "What I'll never, never undo—what ever anybody says, Bee, I've told Cathal O'Mara I'll marry him."

Her sister seized her. "What? ... Agnes!"

"Yes," whispered Agnes, "I told him. That's what I did. But he fears I don't know what I mean. That's why he's gone away."

"What are you talking about? Come into my room," begged Bee, before she remembered Davis just beyond her door. "No; yours," said said to her sister; and Agnes followed her into her own room.

"Now, tell me," the Dark One commanded.

"For two weeks," said Agnes confusedly, "he means to stay away. We're not to see each other; he won't come here. He won't even call me."

"Why?"

"So I'll have the time to myself to be surer."

"Do you need to be surer?" Bee asked.

"Look at me, Agnes! ... Oh, damn it, I never got it. You've got it! ... And I've had! And I've my third child within me."

"I've got him yet. I'm glad of that, you know. Don't you? ... He knows, I've made him know! ... He tried to kill himself—for me. ... But you, Agnes; you go ahead! To hell with everything else! Be happy—happy! Happy, I tell you!"

Daylight laid upon Agnes no dismay. Through hours after Bee had returned to Davis, Agnes lay awake; but she had slept at last, to rouse to objects that showed again their sharp edges, to glare and to shadow.

She shut her eyes again and curled to relieve the enjoyment of his arms about her for the moment before he had put her away from him—when, though to hold her and she clung to him, his own faith had failed him. For he knew that it must be—it was, in some degree at least, the world of others that they must live in; and no desperate denials of his own, even though she joined in them, could screen that world away.

Jeb called up. And it was strange to talk to him and never to Cathal. Stranger still that he, and never Cathal, came to the house. But she kept herself from Jeb's hands.

Her father was involved again in Davis' affairs; and Jeb again—and unknown to Davis, Agnes hoped—was helping him salvage something.

Every other day, it seemed, Cathal's name was in the papers; and always accorded the new respect; for he spoke of men accused, or about to be put on trial, who too recently had ruled.

Queerly and pleasantly, on unsummoned occasions through these long, listless days, she recollected everything he had said to her, from the very first, and with a clarity and completeness as if, at the time, she had memorized it. So on one day—it was the ninth of the ordeal of the fourteen—she recalled how he had told her that his grandfather had died in the Cold Storage fire in the Fair of '33.

It had meant nothing to her; but now she inquired of it; and the next afternoon she was in the Tribune tower, asking to see the files of the paper for July, 1833. So there, upon the brittle and yellowed page, she read his name—Cathal Martin O'Mara; and she read what that Cathal O'Mara, nearly forty years ago, had dared and done, and how he had died. And his wife, who had been young then, had had to look on.

Winnie, that was, Winnie, who had been at the trial!

Agnes went out to a taxi.

Winnie, on this afternoon, was home alone, as she often was, and especially on the afternoons of Tuesday and Friday, for then she baked. Bread, first, and next cakes.

She timed this baking to the school-bells which, at half-past three, would ring their release to the little girls and boys.

She stirred a great bowl of smooth golden batter, did Winnie, and she poured a scant half of it into the big round tin for the family cake. The bigger half, by far, Winnie turned into her tins of dozens of little cupcakes for the boys and girls. And for them, when they came, she had plenty of milk in the icebox.

She had quarts of it today—quarts beyond the family need. For these were bitter times for them about here, as well as for the rich, or them that had been rich.

So Winnie sat with her huge bowl in her aproned lap, stirring the batter smooth with her big wooden spoon, to be ready once more for the children—boys and girls; and was it strange that it was the little, bold, hungry boys in patched trousers and scuffed shoes who most caught at her scant?

Warm, Gay Jacket-Coats for Winter

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AND now it is the "winter girl" that leads the grand march in the style parade. In her giddily gay wool plaids, her Tyrolean-inspired knitted togs and her sturdy Norwegian worsteds and knits what a picture she makes amidst scenes of snow and ice and gray burdened sky!

What with gorgeously colorful Scotch wool plaids almost stamped in the vogue and what with the Tyrolean influence going that strong all's needed is a range or so of snow-clad Alps in the distance to make the scene complete. It would seem as if the present sports and practical daytime fashions are about as picturesque as ever winter fashions might hope to be.

Important news in regard to clothes designed to fortify against the rigors of winter is the enthusiasm shown for fancy, sometimes quite fantastic, short jackets and high-collared coats also wool shirts (call 'em shortwaists if you insist) that contrast monotone skirts, culottes or plus four trousers—the latter a favorite type with the ski and skate devotee.

Let winds howl and icicles form in endless chain, it's immune you will be to their devastating chill if clad in a sturdy coat for all outdoors as shown to the left in the picture. Here is a coat in the newer short length that performs a three-act-in-one of being gay, being "comfy" and high-style on every count. It is made of a rough-and-ready old-town wool plaid in warm deep color tones—just the sort of plaid weaves everybody's calling for this season.

Have you heard of the new plaid wool shirts that are showing up so vaingloriously in college-girl wardrobe? Not only are these plaid shirts rating ace-high in classroom and campus environs but for office and general everyday practical wear the shirt of enchanting plaid wool is everything it should be. See the perfectly tailored specimen of a modish plaid shirt in the illustration. As here shown it is worn with dark green beautifully fitted men's wear flannel culottes.

The intriguing thing about the newer handknit fashions is that they are stylized to the nth degree and many interesting new and fanciful stitches are being introduced. A perfectly charming innovation is the employment of embroidery done in vivid Tyrolean color schemes in connection with not only knitted cardigans and sweaters but pert boxy hip-length jackets are made of felt or cloth trimmed with gay applique felt flowers and colorful bindings and amusing buttons.

That the newest style trends are being incorporated in hand-knitted fashions is a fact evidenced in the cunning waist-length jacket pictured on the figure seated. See the full-at-top sleeves that give the very important wide shoulder lines. If you are wanting to know, it requires about ten balls of feather-down yarn to knit this jacket which is done in a simple lacy pattern. One ball of Limerick green shetland floss trims it. Make this jacket Tyrolean, if you will, by embroidering gay little yarn flowers here and there. Bright colored buttons add yet another note of interest.

PETIT POINT BAGS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

With the winter season of grandiose social functions coming, on visions of lovely evening bags begin to stir the imagination. To women of discriminating taste a bag of exquisite petit point speaks most eloquently when it comes to giving the desired dramatization to the costume. The very lovely and distinctive bags here pictured are creations by Madame Jolles of Vienna. The sophisticated cape of regal black Lyon velvet shown at the top makes a perfect setting for the charming petit point bag done in brilliant colors and marvelously intricate design. Below in the picture the subtle Edwardian mood of the patrician quilted satin coat is enhanced with a glamorous petit point bag of unusual shape and by a new handily, recalling a graceful arc. This winsome bag is as youthful as is the simply cut wrap that so unmistakably bears the stamp of aristocracy.

VELVET HAS PROVED SMARTEST MATERIAL

Velvet has proved to be the smartest material of the year. It is shown in numerous varieties—velveteen, panne, lame, shaven to a flat, stubby surface or printed into a striped or plaid design. Black, as is always the case in Paris, is the favorite, although various shades of green, red and brown are almost as popular.

The new velvets are used for severely tailored suits to be worn under fur capes as well as for dressy cocktail suits worn with rich lame blouses. Velveteen is used for street dresses worn under fur-trimmed cloth coats as well as jacket suits worn with plaid woolen blouses.

Right-Sized Heel Factor of Importance in Dress

To the woman who regards good dressing as an art, the right heel is as important as the right jewels or gloves.

If she aims to look tall and queenly in her evening gown, towering heels are an indispensable part of the picture. If her mood is coquettish and her gown inspired by an ancient Greek robe, heel-less or flat-heeled sandals provide the proper foot note.

Heels covered with vivid fabrics or encrusted with jewels add a sparkling touch to her formal evening ensembles. Many of her most striking costumes owe their success to the harmony between her heels and her hair ornament, handkerchief, or corsage. As costume accessories heels are becoming more and more significant.

Lamb-Trimmed Tunics

Three importantly dressed women recently observed at Longchamp wore tunic wool costumes, with the silhouette marked by Persian lamb borders. One coat by Jodelle used also a wide border of the lamb for a bib-like front collar.

A Reminder
The successful man was lecturing to an admiring audience.
"I must say," he concluded, "that I owe everything I have to my wife."
"Hey!" shouted a tradesman at the back of the hall, "you're not forgetting my bill, are yer?"—Grit.

AND MUSCLE-BOUND

Terrific Strain
A very young boy reported for the prep school football team. The coach, learning his age, told him to "come back when he was older."
Several weeks later the lad was back. "I told you not to come back until you were older!" said the coach.
"I know, sir," was the retort, "but seeing the team play last Saturday puts years on me!"

Manly Fellow
"Did Johnny take his medicine like a man?"
"Yes, he made an awful fuss."

FRIDAY, DEC. 11, 1936

Mrs. Era B. Smith, Editor and Publisher

Seven per cent of the world's population is in the United States. This seven per cent consumes half the world's coffee, three-fourths of the world's silk, two-thirds of the world's crude oil and has more purchasing power than all the people of Europe. And yet our citizens are continually told that the American system has broken down. Strange breakdown!

12 Suggestions for Safety

Writing in the Portland Oregonian, Ray Conway, Manager of the Oregon State Motor Association, gives twelve specific suggestions for reducing accidents that can be easily followed by any commonwealth, with the aid of cities and towns. His suggestions are:

- 1. Illuminate main traveled highways contiguous to cities.
2. Distinctly mark sections of highways where vision is impaired and passing is dangerous.
3. Erect markers to show maximum speeds allowed in congested areas.
4. Freely "Keep to Right" signs on all highways in the state.
5. Make warning signs standard in size, color and position.
6. Teach highway safety in the public schools.
7. Enforce laws from viewpoint of safety--not revenue.
8. Make statewide inspection of cars compulsory.
9. Pedestrians to a uniform, enforced traffic code.
10. Adopt a safety plans law covering all new cars sold.
11. ...
12. Do not permit left-hand turns in metropolitan areas.

Some of these suggestions may seem of minor importance when compared with others--but all of them are essentials of a comprehensive program to make our streets and highways safer. In many states, traffic codes are outmoded and inadequate. Little has been done in marking danger spots on highways. Cars are permitted to operate irrespective of their mechanical condition. The inevitable result is a soaring death and injury toll.

If every state will bring its laws and highway regulations up to date, a long step toward curbing the reckless and incompetent motorist will be taken.

How Many Wienies Can 2,000 People Eat?

Las Vegas, Dec. 7.--Must a private bun be bought for each wienie, or will one bun for two wienies be sufficient? Should the orchestra be fed before or after the dance, or can we take a chance on feeding the trombone player between "Moonlight and Roses" and "I'm Fed up on Love"?

These are just some of the problems which are perplexing Ivan Hilton, of Las Vegas, who is master of ceremonies in charge of making the Democratic Victory Celebration in the Meadow City on Saturday, December 12, a big success. The celebration is sponsored by the Democratic organization of San Miguel county.

Mr. Hilton is expecting at least 2,000 visitors and perhaps more. He has extended invitations to party workers in every county in the state.

"There seems to be a feeling on the part of some people that the Legislative committee meeting in Albuquerque on Friday and Saturday may conflict with the celebration," Mr. Hilton said. "I don't believe the two meetings will conflict. Our banquet won't start until about 8:00 p. m., and this will give members of the committee a chance to attend both meetings."

Two bands and three orchestras will provide music for the celebration. Three dances will be in progress during the evening, one at the Normal gym, one at the armory and the third in Old Town.

Everything will be free, including the buffet dinner at the gym. A banquet, at which some 200 Democratic leaders will be present, is also planned.

Guests from the western section of San Miguel county and from Santa Fe and other nearby counties, will gather in Pecos at 1:00 p. m., and form a motorcade which will proceed to Las Vegas. The motorcade will be met at Romeroville by a delegation from Las Vegas.

Mr. Hilton said that Governor Clyde Tingley, John E. Miles, Democratic State Chairman, and other state notables will be present.

"Since this is the first time San Miguel has gone democratic," he said, "we felt the celebration should be held in Las Vegas. We are having an old time fiesta and feed with a baile afterwards, and everything is entirely free. Democrats from everywhere are urged to attend."

Chevrolet Smashes Another Record

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 3, 1936.—Chevrolet production for November exceeded that of any previous November in the 25-year history of the company, summaries of official figures revealed this week, with a total of 112,229 cars distributed from the company's factories.

Domestic production for the month was 95,022; export production, 12,853; and Canadian production, 4,354. The total was 3,353 more cars than the 108,876 produced in November, 1935, which was the previous record.

At the same time, company officials said, unfilled orders for the new Chevrolet are running far ahead of last year, with 96,084 customers' orders still to be met.

Factory production schedules have been stepped up to more than 6,000 cars a day in an effort to keep up with popular demand, with plants working at capacity.

Tales and Traditions from American Political History

BY FRANK E. HAGEN AND ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HOW'RE YOU BETTING

THOSE loose old days, before betting was considered illegal, brought considerable wagering on the results of presidential campaigns—the amounts at stake frequently totaling millions.

It was back in that era, 1908 to be specific, that brokers making book on the election actually recorded 60,000 to 1 against the chances of one of the candidates. The long shot entry was Eugene V. Debs, perennial Socialist candidate.

That same campaign demonstrated that the professional odds-layers knew considerable about their business. In September, 1908, Taft was the 2 to 1 favorite over Bryan; by October the odds lengthened to 3 to 1 and on election day Taft's chances were rated at 8 to 1, with few takers.

Anyone who believes the professional wagers are infallible should thumb back the record to 1910 when it is estimated from five to ten million dollars changed hands on the result.

Wilson and Hughes were the leading contenders, with Wilson on the inside track because he was up for re-election. In September, 1910, the financial district in New York was betting 2 to 1 on Hughes. In October the odds were 10 to 7 and even money was placed the day of election.

Closeness of the contest, in doubt for days until California returns moved into the Wilson column, perhaps was excuse for the error in judgment by the financiers.

They may be wrong again in 1936 but perhaps it would be well for readers to confine themselves to freak bets, if any at all are made. Perhaps the most ingenious of these occurred in that same 1910 election.

A man, apparently three sheets in the wind, strolled into a commissioneer's office, bet $5 he could name 20 states Wilson would carry. He then bet $10 he could name ten additional states. Then he offered $20 he could name still another 10 states.

"And now," he announced, "here's $50 says I can name eight states more for Wilson."

When the rush to take him submitted, the better, miraculously sobered, named his states. The "pitch" of his game was that he named eight states of the cold South as the block on which the $50 wager was laid. He could not fail to win at least $15!

ALLISON OF IOWA

FIRST honors for "coming close" to the presidency, although he is minus even the standing of an "also ran," must be awarded William B. Allison of Iowa.

Allison's doubtful honor came to him at the Republican convention of 1903, which ended finally with the nomination of Benjamin Harrison, later elected President.

Delegates to the convention had balloted ineffectually for several candidates when a four-hour recess was taken to permit a counting of votes. Delegates from New York, Illinois, California, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, Iowa and Missouri, went into conference.

Representatives from each of these states were practically empowered to act for the entire state delegation. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts spoke in favor of Allison of Iowa after several of the candidates had been discussed. It was finally agreed that Allison's fitness for the high job was apparent and that he should get the support of the conferring states.

New York state had been represented, however, by only three of its four delegates-at-large. The three who agreed on Allison failed to reckon with their absent colleague, Chauncey Depew, the rapier-witted banquetter.

Depew was president of a railroad at the time. He had been supported as a candidate but was forced to withdraw because of farm belt opposition to the railroads. Much of the opposition to him had come from Iowa and so he turned thumbs-down on Allison. Subsequent events proved that if Depew had not balked, the conferring states would have nominated Allison and he would have been elected President in place of Harrison.

The ironical part of this personal catastrophe is that Allison's stature measured fully as high as the job demanded. He had moved out to Iowa as a young lawyer, served eight years in the lower house of congress and, beginning in 1872, was a United States senator from the Tall Corn state for an unbroken period of 35 years.

Britain Traces 1776 Failure
The British attribute their failure in our Revolution to the fact that, according to them, it was largely a naval war and the English fleet lacked its usual dash and enterprise. Their armies failed on land for want of proper support from the sea and Yorktown's surrender was due to the actual, if temporary, loss of the command of the sea, with Paul Jones harrying the English at their own doors.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Twilight of Ex-Debutantes

SANTA, MONICA, CALIF.—

Should the king marry Mrs. Simpson or should it be vice versa and Mrs. Simpson marry the king, in either event the happy outcome is bound to prove blighting upon a large coterie of slightly weather-beaten ex-debutantes of the 'crop of 1925.

Anyhow, it was a great vintage year for debutantes, because that was when we had the most memorable of royal visits. And ever since there have been ever so many now somewhat matured buds who, season after season, have maintained front rank in society by being reminded, about once in so often, of the supreme hour when they danced with the then prince of Wales and speaking of him in a fondly sentimental tone as "Dear David."

Irvin S. Cobb

But even such a precious reminiscence suddenly becomes mighty pale, mighty puny alongside a prospective achievement which may change the ancient slogan of majesty to "Honi soit qui Wally pense!"

Passing of the Train Butcher
THERE'S melancholy in the news that the railroad "train butcher" is vanishing. Eggs, like so many fixtures of the passing generation, such as the dried-potato as a cure for rheumatism and the drooping sidewhisker, he'll be an extinct species.

In my earliest recollections, of travel he has a fond place, along with the lunch put up in a congress shoe box, the cinder in the eye and the smell which made every day coach remind you of a woodpecker's nest.

On almost the first car trip I ever made unaccompanied 'twas he who sold me a sealed volume entitled "The Jolly Old Drummer's Spicy Library," with a whispered warning not to break the wrapper before leaving the train for fear of arrest. I remember my guilty feeling, my youthful thrill of anticipation. I got my money's worth right there. I didn't get it, later, because there was nothing in that book you couldn't read at a meeting of the ladies' aid with impunity.

He was indeed an engaging scoundrel and engaging scoundrels grow increasingly scarce. There's nothing picturesque about an "investment counselor" doing business with the aid of a sucker list and a new issue of Bull Con. preferred.

Ugly Railroad Stations
NO MATTER which way you're going, it seems you must change trains in Chicago, and nearly always, change stations as well. Chicago proudly boasts of more railroad stations and uglier ones and situated at more remote and inconvenient intervals from one another than any city anywhere. It's as though once upon a time she set out to collect the largest covey of truly homely stations in the world and then the bunch flushed and scattered on her.

Yet as far as I can find out—correct me if I err—there's no structural reason why through cars on most lines could not be switched directly to the connecting lines without being brought into the heart of the city. Maybe Chicago loves the distinction of being the largest junction point on earth.

Hungarian Duels
YOUR correspondent has been quite calm about that Budapest doctor's string of nine duels. I lived through several Kentucky primary elections, so a scrap where you don't have to replace any divots afterward leaves me comparatively calm.

There's an average of 300 duels every month in Hungary, but to date the only fatalities are among those who were bored to death waiting for something to happen. It's fine to be able to appease your sacred honor without losing any of your sacred epidermis.

If, in the old days, we'd only had that system for adjusting political differences, I can think of at least one uncle and several cousins of mine who might still be alive and voting the regular Democratic ticket.

Legend of the Augean Stables
The legend of the Augean stables is that Aeneas, Greek king of Elis, had a stable of 3,000 oxen which had not been cleaned for 30 years. Hercules was given the task of clearing the stables in one day with the promise of one-tenth of the cattle, if he succeeded. The god accepted the challenge and turned the River Alpheus through the stable, which immediately carried away the filth. On the refusal of Augeas to keep his word a war ensued. Hercules conquered and put Augeas to death.

Uncle Phil Says:

Seeing Happiness
Happiness is the gift of seeing the good things of life in such high relief that the rest is unimportant. Approve not of him who commends everything you say.

When a man with an air as if it were natural to him to give orders is found, it isn't long before the meek put him in a position to do it.

If you have savage opinions, people will be hypocritical to you to keep on good terms.

Doubt's Nemesis
Confidence, self-assurance, self-faith—these are the great friends which will kill the traitor doubt.

A long answer turneth away anybody else who was going to ask a question.

Discuss your troubles with many and they will discuss them with the whole community.

Feuds arise from exaggerated personal pride and generally among people who have not a great deal to be proud of.

Philosopher's Task
It is the work of a philosopher to be every day subduing passions and laying aside prejudices.

Nature doesn't eliminate foolishness. Civilized man has to learn how, some day.

What men say when they are angry is either the blazing truth or very unreliable.

Using Abilities
The art of being able to make good use of moderate abilities wins esteem, and confers more reputation than real merit.

If you encounter a man who knows several secrets of his friends and doesn't tell them, that's the man to tie up to.

UNIQUE DESSERT IS FRESH DATES

They Should Be Kept Cold Until Time to Eat.

By EDITH M. BARBER

The New World owes the Old World much as far as our staple food supplies are concerned. Many of our everyday fruits and vegetables were introduced from far distant places. Sometimes cultivated cuttings were grafted to wild native trees and shrubs with the result that this country now leads the world in the production of oranges, for instance. In addition to our native grapes enormous quantities of the European varieties are now produced on the Pacific coast.

Comparatively recently the cultivation of figs has been undertaken in this country and more recently American dates have come into the market. They are actually grown in the desert and for the first time we are able to obtain fresh dates. They are sent to market under refrigeration in attractive baskets from which they may be served on the table if you like. They should, by the way, be kept in the refrigerator until you are ready to use them. They are large and plump and make a very good dessert for the quick meal served by themselves, with nuts or raisins, or with cream cheese.

A dessert which is practical for the business woman housekeeper is a date and nut pudding which is baked in a shallow pan and which improves in flavor with time. The recipe given today is large enough to serve several times. It will keep well if stored in a tightly covered tin box and may be used hot or cold. It may be reheated by steaming over hot water or by covering and reheating in the oven. It may be cut into squares for serving with a pudding sauce or whipped cream or may be broken into pieces and mixed with whipped cream.

Date and Nut Pudding.

- 1 cup flour
- 2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 egg
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 cup sliced dates
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift dry ingredients. Beat the egg, beat in the sugar gradually, add the sliced dates and chopped nuts. Stir in the milk and vanilla. Add dry ingredients. Spread the mixture on a greased shallow baking pan to form a layer about one inch thick. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for one hour. Cut into squares when cold and serve with whipped cream or small ball of ice cream, or a pudding sauce, Sherry Sauce.

- 3 egg yolks
 - 6 tablespoons sugar
 - 4 tablespoons cream
 - 1/4 cup sherry
- Beat egg yolks and add sugar and cream. Place in top of double boiler and cook, heating constantly, for five minutes. Remove from fire and gradually add the sherry. Serve at once.

Rich Muffins.

- 1/4 cup butter
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1 cup milk
- 2 cups flour
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt

Cream the butter, add the sugar, and egg well beaten, sift the baking powder with the flour and add to the first mixture, alternating with milk. Bake in greased gem pans, 25 minutes in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit).

Liver in Sour Cream.

- 1/2 pound salt pork
- 1 1/2 pounds liver
- 3 tablespoons french dressing
- Salt
- Pepper
- 1 cup sour cream

Cut salt pork into small strips and insert them into the liver. Marinate liver in french dressing, turning a few times. Place liver in a casserole, add salt and pepper and cream. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees Fahrenheit), until tender.

Cream Cole Slaw.

- 1 cup cream
- 1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
- 2 teaspoons minced onion
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon paprika
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 4 cups shredded cabbage

Whip the cream, add the vinegar, onion, seasoning and mayonnaise and mix well. Add the cabbage and mix thoroughly.

Colors For Walls

In rooms with light-tinted walls where a change of color is desired, if a tone as light or even lighter is chosen the present furnishings will usually harmonize with the new wall hue. Cream or tan, for example, may be replaced by oyster white or light rose, or a white wall repainted in cream. Gray is easily harmonized with many interiors formerly keyed to another color.

Blue Background

Blue-painted walls are cool, restful and make an excellent background for a light room that aspires to a certain amount of formality in its treatment.

be temporary only. For example flowering plants can be on tables on the side of a room farthest away from windows, and remain there during part of a day or during evenings should they prove most decorative there. But during part of the day they must be re-placed in the sunshine lest the foliage fade and the blossoms droop.

Healthy Plants

It takes prolonged nourishing and tending to restore plants to their original beauty when they once lose their health. As plants are living organisms, they require just the right environments to flourish. They are healthy or unhealthy according to their conditions. It is easier to keep the plants in good shape, by correct care than to restore their vitality once it is low. For this reason the use of plants in decoration should be carefully considered.

To let plants remain blossoming in windows, where they are but partly seen to advantage, is not suggested, but that they be given temporary absence only. It is well to use them for decoration, to put them where the whole surroundings are made more vitally beautiful by their presence, even though this means changing their positions frequently to preserve their charm and health.

HOW ARE YOU TODAY?

Dr. James W. Barton TALKS ABOUT

Exercise Will Reduce

PRACTICALLY every health writer in suggesting methods for reducing weight advises reduction in the amount of food eaten. This is very sensible advice because old and young, with or without heart or other ailments, can, even if overweight, safely reduce the amount of food to some extent. It has been well said, "You can't get fat on the food you do not eat."

Further, cutting down the food to a point where there is not enough for the needs of the body, and the body will use what it needs to maintain life, means that it will use up some of the fat in and on the body to keep the body working. Thus with no more fat being stored away, and some of what is stored being used up every day to supply the needs of the body, the weight is bound to be reduced.

There are some overweights who like food so much or feel so weak when it is reduced in amount that they are looking for some means (other than by drugs) to get rid of their fat without cutting down on their food intake.

It is in these cases that exercise is so valuable in burning off their excess fat.

Unfortunately all overweights cannot indulge in exercise. Some are too old, some too feeble, others have heart or blood vessel complications; exercise is impossible or unsafe in these individuals.

However, exercise is the most effective method of using up the body's energy and if the body's energy is being used up by exercise, certainly it cannot be stored away in the body as fat.

Exercise Uses Up Calories

The average man will use from 2,500 to 3,000 calories a day unless he is doing hard work or taking strenuous exercise when he may use up 6,000 calories. The average woman uses up about 1,600 to 2,500 calories unless she is doing hard work or taking a great amount of exercise.

Physical directors will tell you that doing some light work such as a long walk may use up as much as 300 to 500 calories, whilst a set of tennis or a hard game of basketball, hockey, or football will use up 800 to 1,200 calories or even more.

The fuel for doing this work or exercise must come from somewhere, either from the food that is eaten or from the excess fat on the body. If then a part of what is eaten is used to supply the energy for the exercise taken, there will be therefore less fuel or food to be stored away as fat. Further, as mentioned above, if the amount of food eaten is not enough to supply the body's needs and for the exercise taken, the body tissues will have to be used as fuel or food which of course means that much loss of weight.

Thus we can really look upon exercise as the ideal method of reducing weight because, without reducing the amount of food eaten, it will use up some of the food eaten, preventing storage of fat, and actually burn up some of the fat already stored. Exercise is really a "double action" system of reducing weight.

Fat and the Heart

In a group of 136 patients all of whom were overweight it was found that although only 19 died as a direct result of an accumulation of fat in and about the heart, this excess heart fat and the excess of fat throughout the body was an important factor in greatly shortening the life span in most of the other cases.

Dr. Harry L. Smith and Frederick A. Willis in Archives of Internal Medicine describe their findings of fat formation in the underlying layer of tissue of the bag (pericardium) which surrounds the heart and also in and about the muscle fibres of the walls of the heart itself. This fat adds a burden to an already overworked heart which has to take care of all this added fat and weight of the body.

The expectation of life in obesity (overweight) is unfavorable. Only four of their series of cases attained the age of seventy, the average of the entire group being 52 years, and their ages ran from 10 months to 75 years. There were 94 females; and 42 males.

The point is that although the fat actually crowded the heart and interfered to some extent with its activity, it was the great increase in fat and weight throughout the body that made the heart's work so great.

Several Standby Designs

SEWING CIRCLE fans will get a "lift" out of this week's selection of dapper designs for home sewing. It's not a bit too early to be anticipating your first-of-the-year requirements and each frock here presented is a veritable winner in its individual class.

The cleverly cut slip, Pattern 1909, consists of just six simple pieces including the shoulder strap and offers a choice of straps or a built up shoulder. With a combination of bust ease and a fitted waist, this number will prove a popular favorite in silk crepe, crepe de chine, pongee, or tulle. An excellent gift for an intimate friend, by the way, the pattern is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, and 46. Size 10 requires 2 3/4 yards of 39 inch material.

The sleek princess frock, Pattern 1841, has everything it takes for success and—you'll hardly believe it, but it's so—requires just seven pieces for the pattern. Princess frocks are always tops for home sewing. Sleeves are gay and youthful, the pockets trig and

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

THE decorative value of growing plants is being appreciated increasingly. No longer in their charm brought into evidence for functions alone. Plants, with ornamental foliage or blossoming varieties, are used in every-day home decoration. This is possible without cost when the homemaker tends her own plants, for she can distribute them about rooms wherever they will show to best advantage. It is true that potted plants must not be left long in places ungenial to their growth, but for short periods no harm befalls them if deprived of the sunshine essential to most varieties of healthy plants.

It is important to appreciate that plants cannot flourish except when in the light, and in most instances, when in sunny windows. Often, in illustrations of rooms, the plants are found where their decorative value is greatest, regardless of everything else. It should be remembered that such positions can

A potted plant in full flower in a dull green bowl lends decorative beauty to this modern room.

Mistake-O-Graph

What with all the excitement of the Christmas season our artist has found it rather hard to keep away from the toy department. Of course, he goes there purely in the interest of the kiddies, and not for his own amusement, he claims. The excitement seems to have gone to his head, however, as we notice several bad mistakes. For example, the word "hosiery" is misspelled. Can you find 15 other mistakes? The answers are given above.
