High Hopes for 1937

Extending New Year's greetings to New Mexico today, Governor Clyde Tingley said he had high hopes that 1937 will be the brightest year in history.

"We have definitely rounded the corner and we can look to the future with hope and courage," the governor said.

"The year 1936 has been one of progress and accomplishments. It has seen the biggest building boom in years. The year has set a record for tourist trade. Business men generally have enjoyed greater prosperity than in many years. There has been greater development of our resources. More people are at work.

"More has been done this year for the general welfare of the people, such as services offered under the social security law, the public health service, our educational services. Through the policies of the federal government the wage earner and the ordinary citizen is no longer the forgotten man.

"There has been general and consistent progress in all fields of government service, and indications are that this progress will continue in 1937.

"The state administration is concerned with continuing the progress made during 1936 and we are determined to go forward rather than rest upon the accomplishments thus far made.

"With a return of confidence among our people, and with a continuance of the support and cooperation given this administration in 1936, I am confident that in another year we can look back upon even greater progress and accomplishments."

He returned here with his parents September 1932, since which time he has been a trusted and skillful employe of the City Garage. After a short honeymoon in El Paso they returned here and are living in a new house which Mr. Ortiz recently completed.

Booster for this State

Gov. Clyde Tingley expressed regret at the death of another great friend of New Mexico, Arthur Brisbane.

Paying tribute to the nationally known columnist and newspaper publisher, the governor said:

"Probably no man who had no interest in New Mexico except as a visitor did so much to bring the state's resources and climate to national attention. He was always enthusiastic about New Mexico and always interested in its development."

The executive said he has been urged by Thomas H. Colcott of the Socony Oil company, who bought a New Mexico ranch because of Brisbane's "flowing descriptions of New Mexico climate" to collect all of Brisbane's articles about New Mexico for a permanent record.

The governor said he would ask the Hearst newspapers to supply him with articles about New Mexico which Brisbane wrote during the past several years.

John Brady

Prominent Spanish-American and two companions meet instant Death

People in Lincoln County were unspeakably shocked last Saturday night at the sudden and violent death, in a head on collision, of one of the county's most widely known citizens, Mr. John Brady, age 38, together with his two companions, Vidal Zamora, and Joe Anaya. The three men were enroute from Lincoln to Fort Stanton to secure some medicine for Alejandro Zamora, brother of Vidal Zamora. They were driving at a high rate of speed, when they met a government truck and in some unaccountable way crashed into it head-on. Persons who reached the scene of the tragedy shortly afterward stated that the impact threw the car and truck two or three hundred feet apart. Mr. Cochran, deputy sheriff, reached the scene not many minutes later and kept all cars from passing until after the coroner arrived.

In the meantime the man for whom they were speeding to get medicine died about the time the crash occurred.

Mr. Brady was a prominent Republican and had held several important offices. He was deputy United States Marshal under Secundino Romero. Later he served as Sheriff of Lincoln county from 1929 to 1932.

Mr. Brady is survived by his wife, and one daughter, also his father, Mr. Roberto Brady, and two brothers.

Funeral services were held for Mr. Brady at 2:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at San Patricio attended by many prominent people. The casket was banked with many beautiful flowers.

ALEJANDRO AND VIDAL SAMORA

Last Sunday afternoon, Rev. Father Salvatore conducted joint funeral services for Alejandro Zamora, age 45 who died Saturday night of pneumonia and his brother Vidal Zamora, age 42, who was victim of an automobile accident, while enroute to Fort Stanton for medicine for his dying brother, accompanied by ex-sheriff John Brady and Mr. Joe Anaya.

The families had lived in Lincoln for many years, and a large concourse of friends followed the remains to their final resting place at Priest Hill cemetery. The brothers were both ex-service men, and the American Legion sent beautiful flowers.

Both men are survived by their parents and several brothers and sisters. Each is survived by his wife. Besides above-named survivors Vidal Zamora leaves seven children.

JOE ANAYA

The funeral of Joe Anaya, age 35 was held Tuesday afternoon at one o'clock at Picacho, followed by interment in the Picacho cemetery. Mr. Anaya is survived by his widow, Mrs. Zenaida Anaya, five children, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Anaya, and one sister, Mrs. Lillian Maes. Mr. Anaya was a successful ranchman, owning many cattle and goats.

The Mescalera Indian service government truck was only slightly damaged. Driver was Edward Shirley, age 24, accompanied by Fred Cole 20, and Swainzee Clark 21. Judge Maes and Sheriff McCamant absolved Shirley from blame as the car was on the wrong side of the road when it struck the truck.

Steel Workers Swing to the Lewis Force

UNDER the general leadership of John L. Lewis the war for unionizing the steel industry and destroying the company unions is now under way. Some 250 company union representatives from the Pittsburgh, the Cleveland, Youngstown and the eastern districts met in Pittsburgh and were told by Philip Murray, chief aide of Lewis and chairman of the committee for industrial union, that a strike in the $5,000,000,000 industry might result "if the industry continues to employ its dog-in-the-manger attitude" in dealing with trade unions.

Thereupon the delegates adopted resolutions unanimously condemning the company union plan as a "farce," and establishing a new organization called the "CIO representative council," with this "declaration of principles":

1. All steel workers be organized into a national industrial union.
2. Employee representatives use their influence to enroll the steel workers into the steel workers organizing committee's campaign.
3. All steel workers be thoroughly informed by employee representatives who know from experience that the company union is a device of the management and totally unable to win any major concessions for the steel workers.
4. CIO employee representatives remain inside the company union for reasons obvious to all.

The wage demands are:
A $1.24 a day increase for all employees receiving over $5 a day.
A 30 hour, five day week.
Paid vacations of one week for employees of two years' service and two weeks for employees of five or more years' service.

Time and one-half pay for overtime within the regular working week.
Double time for Sundays and holidays.

Flat Glass Industry Paralyzed by Strikes

EXTENSION of the glass workers' strike to plants in Toledo, Charleston, W. Va., and Shreveport, La., brought the flat glass industry almost to a standstill. The closing of these factories is directed against the automobile industry, but the Ford company is equipped to produce its own glass and the other automobile makers are said to have enough glass in stock for a month. It was estimated that 14,300 men were idle at the plants of the Libby-Owens and Pittsburgh Plate Glass companies.

The new strikes were called after leaders of the Federation of Flat Glass Workers failed to reach an agreement with representatives of the two companies concerning strikes already in progress. Libby-Owens also was negotiating for a new union contract, their old one having expired.

Employers said the impasse was reached as a result of the union's determined demands for a closed shop, a checkoff system of union dues, and wage increases.

Glen W. McCabe, president of the Glass Workers' federation, denied the union was demanding a closed shop or that the checkoff system had to be granted.

Senator Peter Norbeck of South Dakota Dies

PETER NORBECK, United States senator from South Dakota since 1920, died at his home in Redfield, S. D., at the age of sixty-six after a long illness from heart disease and cancer of the tongue and jaw. Norbeck, a Republican with radical tendencies, entered politics in 1909 as a member of the state senate. Later he was lieutenant governor and governor of his state and then was elected to the United States senate. In that body he was an insistent advocate of agricultural relief measures.

Norbeck's death reduced to 16 the number of Republicans in the senate, but if the selection of his successor is left to the Republican governor-elect, there would be again 17. However it may be that Tom Berry, the Democratic governor about to go out of office, will be named to fill out Norbeck's term.

Hundreds Are Killed by Earthquake in Salvador

EARTHQUAKE shocks accompanied by volcanic eruptions devastated large areas in central Salvador, killing more than two hundred persons and injuring about four hundred. San Vicente, a city of 25,000, was the center of the tremors, and it was reported to be practically destroyed. Several thousand persons were participating in a religious procession when the first quake came, and many of them were crushed under falling walls.

Other towns in the stricken region were wrecked. Roads from the capital were broken up and communications were destroyed, so that accurate information was slow in coming out.

All of the towns affected by the quake are in the vicinity of the San Vicente volcano. The area, important in manufacturing and agriculture, is in the rich tobacco and indigo-growing region. Gen. Maximiliano Martinez, president of Salvador, hastened to the scene of the disaster to take personal charge of relief measures, and physicians and medical supplies were rushed from San Salvador, together with military detachments.

Pope Has Fainting Spell and Grows Weaker

HOPE for the recovery of Pope Pius dwindled day by day. He suffered a fainting spell and was reported to be exceedingly weak. His illness was complicated by high fever and there was danger of influenza. Senator Nicola Pandolfi of Rome, widely known as a specialist on the ill of old age, was summoned by Dr. Amanti Milani, and both agreed that the pontiff must have complete rest. His visitors were limited to the ten cardinals who are prefects of executive bodies of the church and they were permitted to enter the sick room only one each day to obtain the pope's authorization for their most important decisions. The customary Christmas eve audience for cardinals and diplomats was canceled, and the pope also had to abandon his plan to celebrate mass on the 57th anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood.

Nanking Army Fighting to Rescue Chiang Kai-shek

GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK not being released by Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang within the specified time, the Nanking troops moved against the Sianfu rebels. Two of the mutinous battalions were captured and disbanded at Hsien. It appeared that Marshal Chang really was reduced to negotiating for his own life and safety, and there were reports that he was willing to surrender the dictator and quit the country, as has many a rebellious Chinese war lord before him. T. V. Soong, who is Chiang's brother-in-law, went to Sianfu to attempt to arrange for Chiang's release. American and British governments were concerned over the safety of their nationals in Sianfu if that city should be besieged by the National army. There would certainly be a distressing shortage of food and fuel, and to this would be added the dangers of probable bombardment by artillery and airplanes. Discipline among the mutinous troops is known to be very poor and already there have been many instances of murder and looting.

Japanese military authorities charge that Marshal Chang's revolt was part of a deliberate plan to line up western powers, including soviet Russia, against Japan. The Chinese ambassador to Tokio was told by Foreign Minister Hiroto Arita that the Chinese government would not be permitted to enter into any accord that would make it appear that it favored war against Japan. Arita made it plain that Japan would abandon its waiting policy if Nanking compromised with Marshal Chang.

President Gomez of Cuba Breaks With Batista

PRESIDENT MIGUEL GOMEZ of Cuba and his administration are at odds with Col. Fulgencio Batista, chief of staff and the "strong man" of the island republic. Batista has been insisting on a bill for a 9 cents a bag sugar tax designed to produce $2,000,000 revenue annually for rural schools to be operated by army sergeants. Gomez and his crowd have opposed this legislation, fearing it means the rise of fascism; but it is warmly supported by the farmers, tobacco raisers and cane field workers, thousands of whom marched to Havana to demand the passage of the bill. These people call Batista "defender of the common people" and "savior of Cuba."

The sugar tax bill was passed, but President Gomez persisted in his opposition, and vetoed the measure. The Batista followers demanded his resignation and also prepared to have him impeached by the house of representatives. At this writing it is expected Gomez will quit his office. Several months ago Batista was quoted as saying he would not be afraid to head a dictatorship "if it were necessary for the good of the country." He may soon be called on to assume that position.

Hitler Suggests Dividing Spain Into Two Parts

IT NOW seems likely that General Franco and his Fascist armies cannot conquer Spain without open and substantial aid from sympathetic nations, and that cannot be given him without grave danger of precipitating a general European war. But Adolf Hitler has devised a plan for solving the Spanish problem and probably will soon offer it to the powers. His scheme is for the division of Spain into two countries, a Fascist state comprising the area Franco now holds and including Madrid, and a republican state centering in Catalonia. To arrange this Germany may propose a general peace conference. General Faupel, personal aide to General Franco, went to Berlin and told the reichsfuehrer that the Fascists must have more help. But Hitler is moving with considerable caution, though he has recognized the Franco regime.

The Russian government has made official charges that the Spanish Fascists set fire to and sank the Soviet motorship Komsomol and warned them of grave consequences. Newspaper announcements told the Spanish insurgents they were "playing with fire" and called the act a "frightful new crime of incendiaries of war."

Senator Black Has Plan to Curb Lower Courts

SENTIMENT in favor of legislation to lessen the powers of the Supreme court is growing weaker in Washington because the President seems to be opposed to it, at least for the present. But Senator Hugo Black of Alabama has announced that he will introduce a bill designed to strip the lower courts of their injunctive powers. This measure would prohibit lower courts from enjoining the operation of laws of congress and require them to forward all records and complete transcripts to the Supreme court within 30 days after an appeal.

Half a Billion Wanted for Works Relief

HARRY HOPKINS, WPA administrator, and Harold L. Ickes, PWA administrator, were called into conference with President Roosevelt and plans were laid for seeking from congress an appropriation of $500,000,000 to continue the federal works relief program until next June 30. Hopkins reported that the funds on hand would scarcely last through January and that quick action is necessary if the program is not to be interrupted. The estimate on the money needed was based on the fact that the same amount was taken from WPA funds for drought relief. Ickes states that his WPA program would release a substantial number of unemployed from WPA rolls.

President Roosevelt Busy Preparing for Inaugural

RETURNING to Washington in fine health and spirits after his trip to Buenos Aires, President Roosevelt plunged into a great mass of work that had accumulated on his desk. There were numerous reports on government activities to be read, plans for the inaugural on January 20 to be made, outlining of his inaugural address, and consultation with the full cabinet concerning the program for his second term. Still more immediate was the task of writing his annual message on the state of the nation and his budget message for the coming fiscal year.

The inaugural ceremonies will be simple in accordance with Mr. Roosevelt's wishes, and the traditional ball will be omitted. After consultation with Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the inaugural committee, and Vice President Garner, it was decided that the parade should be limited to units from the army, navy and marine corps and from the West Point and Annapolis academies. One of Mr. Roosevelt's first duties was a sad one—that of attending the funeral services for August Genierich, his close friend and bodyguard, who died suddenly in Buenos Aires. The services were held in the White House and with the President were Mrs. Roosevelt, Vice President and Mrs. Garner and cabinet members.

John Hamilton Remains Republican Chairman

JOHN HAMILTON is still chairman of the Republican national committee. At a meeting in Chicago 74 of the 76 members in attendance rejected his resignation, and he responded: "I'm gratified, and I'll keep right on working." Mr. Hamilton was then voted a salary of $15,000 a year and a base expense account of $10,000 annually, and will be required to put in all his time on the task of rebuilding the party and reducing the deficit. This is the first time a national chairman has been put on a full time salary basis. Before adjournment Hamilton was empowered to appoint a group of Republicans soon to formulate a plan to bring the party funds out of the red. Treasurer C. B. Goodspeed reported that the campaign expenditures were $2,540,776, and that the deficit was $301,501.

HAPPY NEW YEAR MUSH
By Luella B. Lyons

Travelogue For Life
By MARTHA B. THOMAS

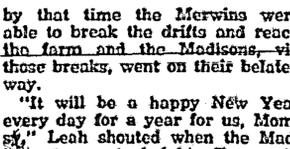

LEAH MERWIN had been the one elected to stay at home when the others went into town in the old slyver to the morning New Year's service at the church. Someone had to remain at home to watch the stock and, too, Leah hadn't a new or even a decent coat. Jake Merwin was having tough sledding in financial affairs without one more need being voiced, so Leah never told him of her need.

"I wouldn't have minded if it hadn't started snowing the minute their backs were turned and now—they won't tackle driving home in this weather," but Leah's words stopped at once as she made out in the swirling snow a car that was stopping in the barnyard. The plump figures of a man and a woman were making a wild dash for the protection of the house.

"We saw we couldn't go another turn of the wheels," the sweet, friendly woman told Leah—the lady who introduced the two of them as Mr. and Mrs. Tom Madison, 11 miles to the east of Berger. "We hoped to spend New Year's and visit at our son's, Tom Junior's over at Berger, but now—well, we want to buy our dinner here from you. May we, my dear, without putting you out?"

They were such a jolly pair and Leah even forgot to be embarrassed when she had to serve them the only thing she had prepared, a feast of delicious fried mush and butter and syrup and plenty of fresh milk and coffee. Supper consisted of the same fare and so did breakfast the next morning, but by that time the Merwins were able to break the drifts and reach the farm and the Madisons, via those breaks, went on their belated way.

"I've just had a thought," said Marcia, "and it's a grand one." They were tucked cozily beneath a bear rug in an old-fashioned sleigh, gliding along under the stars to the silvery jangle of bells. "Tell me at once," commanded Jerry, "I collect grand thoughts as a hobby."

Marcia laughed. "Tonight in New Year's eve, and it," she sat up straight in her eagerness, "the sun were shining, and we were going with it, just as fast, I mean—we could yell down Happy New Year to the whole world as we rolled along!"

Jerry was amused and indulgent. "Don't you see," continued the girl, "we're all so used to thinking of events happening just where we are, and not following them on and on."

The idea rather gets you." "Around the world in 24 hours at New Year's. A zippy travelogue?"

But she was serious. "See here, Jerry, you and I are going to be married soon, and I sort of hope we can, well, keep our thoughts up and off the ground."

"What an odd idea. Usually coming brides are chattering of linen and silver."

She pressed her hand on his arm. "Stop the horse a minute, please. There—let's both lean back and look up at the sky, and fill our eyes with stars, and space . . . and time-going-on. Maybe, if we drink deep enough," her voice was husky with feeling, "we won't get all tangled up with trifles. I'm a little afraid sometimes, of our days ahead, Jerry."

"Afraid?" The man's voice sounded hurt. "Only that I'll get a habit of low-visibility."

"You mean," Jerry leaned over to take her hands "you want always to remember that new happiness, new ways of thought, and New Years, go ringing around the world with the sun; that time does not circle around one small set of people or circumstances?"

"Yes, yes, Jerry! Let's make a pact together, now. Not to think little thoughts about little events that happen to our little selves."

"Fine. I'm with you!" "And to remind each another now and then, to stop, and get the true sense of time and space and world-bigness going on and on."

"Done, darling! New Year's resolution for a happy life: KEEP THE SUN, MOON AND STARS IN YOUR THOUGHTS . . . and you'll never be narrow-minded!" Jerry kissed her.

The Social Register. SANTA MONICA, CALIF. — Those who warm their aristocratic hands at the social register, take comfort from the latest issue of that priceless volume. It seems that, if a well-born lady weds a night club playboy with a head suitable for a handle on a dollar umbrella, she stays put.

But if she is married to a genuine gentleman, such as Gene Tunney is, or a gifted orchestra leader, such as Eddie Duchin, out she goes.

The charming granddaughter of a poor Irish immigrant qualifies as an entry, which is as it should be, in any language. But when she takes for a husband the son of a poor Jewish immigrant, whose blemish is that he's a professional song writer—and one of the greatest song writers alive—her name is scratched off the sacred scroll.

Yet what's an old family but a family that advertises that it's old? And what is society except a lot of people who keep proclaiming that they are society until the rest of us believe them?

Protecting Human Game. FOR the preservation of the lessening wild fowl, the government stands pat by its ruling that ducks may no longer be lured to hunting grounds which have been baited for them and then bagged. But one shudders what would happen to Wall Street if practically the same system now in vogue for garnering in the human game was over abolished on the stock exchange.

Still, why not leave well enough alone? If there was no margin gambling available for cleaning the poor things, they'd bet their money on horse racing or the old Spanish prisoner game or something.

Liberty League Marriages. THE rotogravure sections reveal that they've just opened a fresh cradle of du Ponts, too late to qualify for membership in the Liberty League, because the Liberty League, alas, is dead of overnourishment, but in ample time to fill up the background of the approaching marriage of the President's fine son, Franklin Delano, Jr., and a charming daughter of the royal family of Delaware.

That's one wedding where the ushers will do well to see that the families are seated in separate pews during the ceremony, because somebody might tactlessly be reminded of little things that came up during the heat of the late campaign.

Otherwise, in the customary regalia of shad-belled coats and striped trousers, it will be difficult to distinguish a champion of the rights of the great common people from an entrenched wretch of the ruggedly individualistic group. High hats and neat spats make all men equal—and make come of them homelier-looking.

Playing the Ponies. RACING starts soon out in Hollywood, and the stars and stardines may have to make their pictures between events at Santa Anita because they'll have absolutely no time for fiddling around studios.

To risk my modest wagers on, I'm looking for a horse named Virginia Creeper or else Trailing Arbutus. Then when I lose, as I always do, I can't say my choice wasn't appropriately named.

If I had a bet on Paul Revere's nag, Paul never would have made that famous ride of his. Somewhere between Concord and Lexington, a constable would have pinched him for blocking the highway.

I often wonder where the foot-sore plugs I get tips on really hail from. It can't be a racing stable. Maybe—yes, I'm sure that's right—they're exhausted refugees from a bid-a-wee-home.

Future Inventions. CELEBRATING the hundredth anniversary of the American patent system, the assembled research sharps declare that among the boons to mankind promised us in the near future by our native inventive geniuses are the following:

Clothes made out of glass (with curtains, I hope, for those of us who are more than six years old).

Whisky aged instantly by powerful sound waves. (But who has thought of suitable relief for those who also will be aged instantly by drinking said whisky?)

Rats grown as big as cows by powerful sound waves. (I can hardly wait for the happy day when we may afford a family rat the size of a Jersey cow.)

CHAPTER I

It was the Fourth of July, and Sleepy Cat—that sunswept little desert town bordering on the Very Bad Lands of the arid Southwest—was dusty.

Dust was not unusual in Sleepy Cat; to be dusty was its normal condition; when not dusty, Sleepy Cat was dead.

"But you needn't be scared of this kind of dust," explained Dr. Carpy, who, sitting with his feet up against the porch-handrail of his Sleepy Cat Hotel, was talking to Jane Van Tambel. "It's not dirt, this dust—not like your Chicago dust. It's clean volcanic ash that drifts up from the Spanish Sinks.

"But toward sundown when the ash settles over the Superstition Range and the sun shines through it, the air shows every color of the rainbow. That snow on Music Mountain."—Dr. Carpy pointed—"looks pink and red and purple. You'll like it out here."

Jane disagreed vigorously. "Oh, no! It's going to be awfully lonesome after city life," she declared positively.

"You'll never be lonesome in Sleepy Cat—unless you're good," observed the doctor cynically. "Otherwise you'll find things generally hum in Sleepy Cat."

"It certainly is lively today," conceded the dissatisfied city girl.

It was horsemen, not a few of them, clattered up and down Front street and Silver street, chiefly to hear their own noise. And a mob of miners and prospectors from Thief River had come up for the celebration and the horse races.

"Been out on the Fairgrounds yet?" asked the doctor, continuing his chat with Jane. "Seen any of the races?"

"I saw the Indian races this morning—such yipping and yelling! And those Texans that rode into town yesterday—they yelled louder than the Indians."

"That outfit has just delivered four thousand head of cattle to the Gunlock Agency. They checked them in yesterday. Some old-time Sleepy Cat men in that bunch—Henry Sawdy and John Lefever made the drive with the outfit—all the way up from the Rio Grande. Hello," exclaimed the doctor lazily, "here comes Sawdy now."

A rather tall man, well rounded out, somewhat bow-legged, strongly built and confident, if not aggressive, in manner, was coming up the wooden steps leading from the sidewalk to the hotel office. Carpy hailed him. Sawdy, poised under an overwhelming sombrero, turned and walked toward the doctor and his guest.

"Henry!" exclaimed the doctor. "You blamed old longhorn, I never looked to see you back in Sleepy Cat."

"Ain't no warrants out agin me, are there?" asked Sawdy in calm, blunt, but spirited fashion.

"There must be one or more agin you down along the Rio Grande, Henry," retorted the doctor, "or you wouldn't be so far from the tinkle of the gular with winter coming on. Meet Miss Van Tambel—newcomer since you went south. Mr. Sawdy, Miss Jane."

That in hand, Sawdy stared: "Miss Van Tambel?" he echoed. "Did I get the name right?" he asked as Jane nodded to his greeting.

"You got it right," remarked Carpy dryly.

"Well," returned Sawdy, swallowing, "if you could get a few more newcomers like this, Doc, you'd have a live town. She's no relation to—"

"Ous Van Tambel? Yes," nodded Carpy, easily impatient. "She's his daughter—only daughter; only child, in fact."

Sawdy swallowed again. "Well, I'll say any man might be proud to claim her. I used to work for your father. Is he alive yet?"

"Alive, yes," interposed Carpy, "but a sick man. Have you had a horse race this morning, Henry?" asked Carpy in teasing fashion.

Sawdy snorted. "Hindin' at that sell yesterday, eh? No horse race at all," he went on angrily. "It was just a plain steal, Doc—beggin' your pardon, miss—a steal put up by this saloon keeper, Boland, and a crooked cowman, McCrossen, and that Thief River butcher, Clubfoot."

Jane started. McCrossen was the Van Tambel foreman at Gunlock Ranch. "But what about this race?" persisted Carpy. "Sit down, Henry."

"Why keep ropin' at a dead corpse, Doc?" protested Sawdy. And turning to Jane: "Do you know this man?" he asked, nodding toward the doctor.

"Slightly," smiled Jane. "I hope to know him better."

"Don't get too well acquainted," advised Sawdy. "He's got a trick of diggin' into your sore spots."

"Tell us about that race," interrupted Carpy.

"Well," began the cowman reluctantly, "right before last we bedded the herd down about three miles below Thief River town. About sundown Clubfoot rode into camp on a good-lookin' bay mare. I didn't see him, I was on guard. He said he was on his way up to Sleepy Cat, John Lefever, our foreman, invited him to take supper and bunk for the night."

"He said he was a prospector goin' out on the Gunlock range. He started talkin' horses and said he wanted to sell his pony—claimed he had the fastest mare along the Sinks. He blowed about that pony until John got touchy about his own little chestnut gelding, and John finally promised him a race when we got to Sleepy Cat. Nobody in our bunch not havin' seen the fellow's horse run, John wanted till everybody got to sleep and takes Clubfoot's mare off her picket rope for a tryout. Shucks! She had no speed at all."

"Next day they arranged the race, and we boys put up our dough—every dollar in the outfit. What do you think of us for suckers? When the race started, that cursed prospector—beggin' your pardon, miss—run in a ringer on us—another bay mare, looked exactly like the one he rode into camp. That mare run like a streak—covered five hundred yards before John's gelding got his feet picked up. Then we got the story."

"Clubfoot turned out to be a side-swope for this saloon keeper Boland here. So we smashed up Boland's glass-ware and lookin'-glass last night, proper."

"That wasn't right, Henry," expostulated Carpy with perfect gravity. "That bird's got five hundred of our dough," continued Sawdy grimly.

"Henry, I thought you and John were too wise to get stung like that. How you going to get even? Smashing-glass-ware won't do it."

"I don't know, Doc, I don't know."

"Henry," observed Carpy, "what you mean is you know but you won't tell."

"The races ain't all over yet. Then there's the ropin' and throwin'—"

Carpy nodded.

"—and the trick ridin'. All I'll say is—"

"Say all you want to before this young lady. She won't spill. I'll guarantee her," said Carpy.

"Well, if that's so, miss—and you certainly look up to the brag—I'll say McCrossen, that new foreman of yours, was in on that shindin' we took—at least, we think so. That's nothin' in the world against you."

Jane spoke frankly: "Oh, I'm glad, Mr. Sawdy, you don't bring me into it, for I really don't know any more about it than a babe unborn."

"I hear McCrossen is quite a rider," observed Sawdy tentatively.

"That's what everybody says," returned Jane. "He certainly is wonderful in the saddle."

Sawdy nodded wisely, as if merely to say, "It is well."

"Sawdy," demanded Carpy, "what you got up your sleeve?"

"Nothin' at all, Doc—not a thing in the world."

"You can't fool me, you old desert rat," persisted Carpy.

"Well, Doc, since you're so smart, will you back what I've got up my sleeve for fifty dollars? Will you do it, Doc? I've just come from Jake Spotts' place. He lent me fifty—"

Carpy reached into his trousers pocket and drew out a roll of bills. "Go along, you critter!" he exclaimed indignantly. "I might have known your long-winded story would cost me money. But I didn't look for it to be fifty dollars."

"Make it a hundred, Doc," ventured Sawdy in his rich, persuasive voice.

"Not on your life, Henry. You'll lose this, anyway."

"We get paid tomorrow—cough up for me."

"Go hang! I haven't got it to spare. Want to do some betting myself?"

Jane held out her purse. "Why, here, Mr. Sawdy. There's over fifty in this that I'm sure I don't need. Take it."

Sawdy stared dumbfounded. "I couldn't do that, young miss. I couldn't."

Jane, still smiling, had opened her purse, taken from it five gold eagles, and held them out. "If you refuse to let me accommodate you, it won't be much of a compliment to me," she protested. But it was the light in her eyes and her lips parted over two even rows of white teeth that staggered Sawdy. He was groggy, but though going down he fought on.

"I know blamed well I ought not to do it," muttered the big fellow. "Doc—what shall I do?"

"Take it!" said Carpy gruffly. "You'll lose it—then you can work it out for Jane on the ranch this summer—she's running things out there while her father's sick."

Sawdy reluctantly let the trim young lady drop the gold pieces into his horny hand—she laughing, he serious, Dr. Carpy—vastly amused. "If the worst comes to the worst, I could work it out," repeated Sawdy soberly.

"But if you go to work at Gunlock," remarked the doctor, "make no mistake. Keep off the grass. Don't aspire for the hand of this young princess. I've got a bid in there myself."

"Why, Doctor!" exclaimed Jane, all rosy in protest and rising to go.

"Just the same, girl, any man that bids for you has got to face a major operation at my hands. Will you be back for dinner?" he asked of Jane as she made ready to leave. "We're having watermelon today."

"I'm not going to miss that. But I must go over to Rubido's to order some supplies. By the way, I forgot to ask: What shall I do with that medicine you gave me last time?"

"Throw it out the window and ride horseback. You're coming along wonderful for six weeks out here."

"Hold on, miss, just a minute, please," begged Sawdy as the party broke up. "You'll be at the Fairgrounds this afternoon for the races?"

"Of course I'll be there," responded Jane pertly.

"You've done me a kind, good turn. I want to do you a good one. This goes for this old medicine man, too," Sawdy nodded toward the doctor.

"What is it?" asked Jane coolly. Sawdy was solemn.

"You won't neither of you spill it? All right. Don't bet no money on the trick ridin' this afternoon."

By two o'clock that day the Fairgrounds were teeming hot and tremendously crowded. Frontier Day celebration was combined with the national holiday and the county fair of a county bigger than most eastern states. A gathering of horsemen, cowmen, miners, railroad men, gamblers, prospectors, desert raps, and frontier adventurers milled about the rickety little grandstand and what, under more sophisticated circumstances, would be called the paddock.

A sprinkling of Indians from the Reservation added color to the scene—elderly bucks, dignified and taciturn; young men with their ponies; fat, swarthy squaws bright in Navajo blankets; and attractive Indian girls rigged in gaudy fashions.

On an occasion such as this, when a local celebration combined with the arrival of a goodly outfit of cowmen, there was reason to look forward to a lively round-up by proprietors of third parlors, gamblers, clothiers, merchants, and barbers. On this particular Fourth of July there was every reason but one for such a hope—the cow outfit had been thoroughly skinned by the advance guard of Sleepy Cat sharpshooters in the person of Harry Boland and Clubfoot and Company.

In consequence the Circle Dot boys, as Sawdy's outfit was known, made no especial contribution to the Fairgrounds festivities; they were present but not betting.

Sawdy, long-faced and solemn, neglected to pull at his sweeping mustachios—a sure sign of mental depression. John Lefever, rotund and naturally jolly, Circle Dot foreman, only whistled softly.

UNCOMMON AMERICANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

First War Correspondent

ON THE monument which they erected over his grave are inscribed these words: "He was a poet, journalist, author, and farmer—eminent in all." Yet this does less than justice to the career of George Wilkins Kendall.

A native of New Hampshire, Kendall became a printer at an early age and followed his trade in many cities. He was in New York in 1833 when an outbreak of the dreaded cholera caused him to take ship for New Orleans. There he entered the employ of a paper called the True American, and while working there conceived the idea of a new daily newspaper which should follow the policies that had made the New York Sun and Philadelphia Ledger so successful.

Taking into partnership Francis A. Lumsden, a fellow employee, Kendall launched the New Orleans Picayune in January, 1837. He was only twenty-eight at the time and his resources were small. But he was such an enterprising editor that the Picayune soon became one of the best known papers in the country.

At the outbreak of the War with Mexico in 1846, New Orleans became the chief outfitting point for the American forces. It was also the natural center of communication between the armies in the field and Washington. Kendall was quick to see the journalistic opportunity which this offered. He organized a system of relays of horses and riders between Mexico and New Orleans and of fast boats between New Orleans and Baltimore. Then he accompanied the armies of Scott and Taylor and began sending back vivid first-hand accounts of their battles, frequently writing his dispatches while cannon roared and bullets whistled around him.

Kendall supplied the government with its first knowledge of the battle of Buena Vista and it was again this enterprising journalist who informed Washington that the treaty of peace had been signed. He came out of the war with the title of major and a bullet in his knee, received at the storming of Chapultepec. In his later years he retired to a farm in Texas where he was a successful farmer and stock raiser and he died there in 1867.

Ambassador to His Native Land

HE WAS born a Yankee during the early days of the American republic. Forty years later, having helped establish a new American republic, he came back to his native land, the accredited minister to its government from the government of the younger nation of which he later became the last president. And that in brief is the paradoxical career of Anson Jones.

Born at Great Barrington, Mass., on January 20, 1798, young Jones decided to become a doctor. After several years study in Litchfield, Conn., he was licensed to practice in 1820. Then the wanderlust seized him and he wandered to Philadelphia, to New Orleans, to South America and finally settled in Texas in 1833.

At the outbreak of the troubles between Texas and Mexico he was among the first to advocate a declaration of Texar independence. When the war started he enlisted as a private but was soon appointed a surgeon in the Texas army of liberation. With it he served at San Jacinto and after the republic was founded he became representative from Brazoria to the Texan congress.

In 1838 he was appointed minister to the United States. Thus this Yankee came back to his homeland as an "ambassador" from a "foreign power." While in Washington, he was elected to the Texas senate and later became its president. During the second term of Sam Houston as president of the Lone Star republic, Jones was his secretary of state, and in 1844 he was elected president.

That was a critical year in the affairs of the new nation. There was talk of annexation by the United States and a sharp division of opinion arose among Texans over it. One of those who was opposed to it was the President. But the citizens of the republic voted overwhelmingly in favor of it and on December 29, 1845, the republic of Texas came to an end and the state of Texas succeeded it.

Bowing to the inevitable, Jones turned over the reins of government to James Pinckney Henderson, the first governor of the state of Texas, and retired to his home in Washington county. In 1857 he was prominently mentioned as a candidate for United States senator but he was destined never to return to Washington where he had once gone as "ambassador." In a fit of insanity he died by his own hand on January 8, 1856, convinced to the last that Texas had made a mistake in giving up its independence.

Size 3 requires 2 1/2 yards of 35 or 39 inch fabric and 3/4 yard contrasting.

Pattern 1938—This new dress "belongs" in almost any company. Its great simplicity will endear it to homemakers, and business women alike. It is a combination of charm, good lines and youthfulness. You'll want two versions of this style—one with short sleeves, the other with long. Pique, silk crepe or velveteen will serve nicely as the material. It is available in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35 inch material, with long sleeves 4 1/2 yards.

Pattern 1938—Daytime distinction takes on a new meaning in this super-styled frock! The squared shoulders, swing skirt and peplum fullness are the important details which give it such perfectly balanced finesse. Yet not one part of it is difficult to cut or to sew. This is a dress which is adequate for every occasion—save the strictly formal.

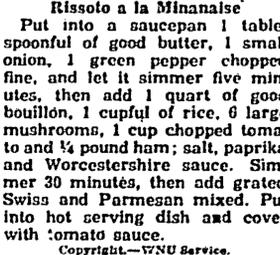

Available for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 42 bust). Size 16 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39 inch material. The collar, jabot and belt in contrast take 3/4 yard.

Applications Filed

More than 800,000 persons in the States of Texas, Louisiana, and New Mexico have filed applications for federal old-age benefit accounts, according to first returns from the post offices in the southwest region, Oscar M. Powell, Regional Director of the Social Security Board, announced today.

Indications point to a total registration throughout the region of possibly a million workers by January 1, the time when every worker in the covered employments must have established a Social Security account.

Texas, with 690,539 applications filed, led the States of this region. Louisiana reported 201,177 and New Mexico had 25,442. Powell urged all employees who have not yet done so to file applications with their postmasters as soon as possible so that employers will be enabled to make their necessary reports beginning January 1.

Information from application cards is being transcribed to office records from which the individual's permanent Social Security account is established. Wages earned by the registered workers are recorded periodically in their accounts, and on the basis of the total amount of wages credited, old-age benefit payments may be readily calculated when those workers reach the age of 65.

Tips on Cold Weather Starting

While the proper maintenance of a car's battery and electric system will do much to assure quick starting in the winter months, there are also a few simple suggestions which all drivers will find helpful, says a bulletin issued this week by Chevrolet. "Remember," says the bulletin, "that the battery has two functions: one, to operate the starting motor, and two, to furnish the spark. The engine always turns over harder in cold weather, and unless the battery is in good condition, there may not be enough current left, while the starter is operating, to provide the necessary spark.

"Operation of the starter places a heavy load on the battery, and so every precaution should be taken to assure the quickest start once the starter is depressed. One way of doing this is to turn the engine over two or three times with the starter before switching on the ignition. This preloads the combustion chambers with gasoline mixture, and the engine usually starts the moment the ignition is turned on. "The throttle should be opened slightly throughout the operation, but not far enough to make the engine race when it starts.

"In cars with manually-operated choke, it is an easy matter to find the precise point to which the choke should be opened for winter starting. Once the engine is started, close the choke slightly to prevent dilution of crankcase oil through admission of raw gasoline.

"Never under any circumstances should the warm-up process be hurried by racing the engine. The reason for this is that lubricants flow slowly when the engine is cold, and they should have a chance to warm up before the engine is subject to higher speeds."

Mother's Evening Prayer, Mary Baker Eddy.

O gentle presence, peace, joy and power;

O life divine, that owns each waiting hour,

Thro' Love that guards the nestling, faltering flight,

Keep Thou my child on upward wind tonight.

Love is our refuge; only with mine eyes,

Can I behold the snare the pit, the fall:

His habitation high is here, and nigh,

His arm encircles me, and mine, and all.

O make me glad for every scalding tear,

For hope deferred, ingratitude, disdain!

Wait, and love more for every hate, and fear.

No ill, Since God is good, and loss is gain.

Beneath the shadow of his mighty wing,

In that sweet secret of the narrow way,

Seeking, and finding, with the angels sing,

"Lo, I am with you alway," watch and pray.

Another Holiday Tragedy

Miss Maybelle White, age 20, of Tucumcari, daughter of Quay county sheriff died from injuries which she received on Christmas eve while enroute from Hudson to Tucumcari. Her companions were Miss Rene Nutt, and Messrs. Don Lemmon and Pat Bowen. Mr. Lemmon, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Lemmon former residents here, is teaching in Quay county.

As they reached a cement dip the driver swerved the car to avoid a road sign which had blown down across the road, and got into a soft shoulder which caused the car to turn over three times. The young men were not badly hurt, but Miss Nutt suffered a sprained back.

Public Health Column

Community Resolution

Effective resolution by a whole community is something hard to achieve. It needs at the same time the cohesive quality of tolerance, and a spirit of high endeavor. Here are two virtues that are not often combined. It is a short step from zeal to zealot and the people who care most sincerely for reform are often those who can believe only in their own particular brand of reformation.

Oliver Cromwell once cried to his earnest Roundheads: "I beseech you to believe that you may sometimes be mistaken!" That is the scientific approach to truth. But scientific method in a community is but sounding brass or tinkling cymbal unless it be subordinated to the motive which Paul describes in the thirteenth chapter of his first letter to the Corinthians with a word that is translated "charity" in the King James version and has been rendered "love" in the revised version. Neither word, as the words are commonly used today, expresses the sense of the Greek. Perhaps "goodwill" would be a more accurate translation.

Supposing that a community, inspired by the ideal of health for all its members, rich and poor, worthy and less worthy, were to determine on January 1st to work conscientiously and open mindedly to that end throughout the year; supposing that they appointed a health committee to advise the district health officer of their needs and to consult him regarding the best way of meeting them; supposing they combined determination with tact, persuasion with persistence, sentiment with sacrifice, what might they not achieve by January of 1938?

Social Security Bill

Governor Clyde Tingley signed the approved bill providing for New Mexico compliance under the Social Security Act's Unemployment Insurance Title, here Wednesday the 16th. Plans have been made for the first of a series of conferences preparing for the administrative set-up of a state employment compensation act. The measure was approved in a two day special session. The governor's signature putting their work on the state's statute books will give New Mexico unemployment compensation provisions for jobless with benefits starting two years after first payments of a tax on employers of eight or more men starts in January.

The act limits the amount of benefits to a maximum of $15 and a minimum of $5 per week for sixteen weeks. It transfers the state unemployment offices to the unemployment, compensation commission.

Memories of Wintry Days

"Memories of the wintry days of 20 to 30 years ago must come back to many an old time motorist when he sees how easily the modern car starts on an ordinary zero morning," says C. P. Simpson, Pontiac general sales manager.

"Although I never lived in the north until three years ago, I have heard many an old timer tell about spinning the starting crank with his right hand while with his left he held a hankerchief saturated with gasoline over the intake of the carburetor.

"And the usual thing in those days was to take out a teakettle of hot water and pour it over the caburetor and intake manifold to warm them up.

"But now there is no more huffing and puffing . . . just a push of the button and the engine swings in on all cylinders, purring like a contented cat.

"Few of the old timers and fewer of the younger generation who never had starting trouble realize that much of the ease of starting a car today in cold weather is due to Benj. H. Anibal, Pontiac vice-president and chief engineer.

"If it had not been for Pontiac's pioneering of light oils four years ago motor cars probably would not be starting and running in the coldest kind of weather the way they do now.

"It was in the winter of 1932-33 that Mr. Anibal pioneered the use of 10-W and 20-W oils that now are in general use. At first he met with considerable opposition from oil companies which stood out for heavier oils. As Mr. Anibal explains there was not enough power impulse in a cold motor then to move the pistons against heavy oils, and there is not enough today to start easily without light oils.

So, easy starting in cold weather is due as much to the use of light oils as it is to improved engine design."

BUYING FOOD IS IMPORTANT TASK

Be Sure to Get Full Value for Money Spent.

By EDITH M. BARBER
THE question of marketing for food is one of the most important housekeeping problems confronting the busy mother. Often the demands of her young children are such that she is not able to make a daily trip to the grocery and butcher shop. "Personal marketing," she has heard, will cut bills in half. But in her busy day she can barely find time to give her order by telephone.

The woman who must do her daily buying by telephone is limited in her choice of grocer, as many of the chain stores do not give telephone service. This, with the absence of delivery service and credit, are some of the reasons why products can be priced lower in such stores than in independent stores. She must necessarily choose a reliable grocer if she is to have even fairly good service with only telephone connections. The wise housekeeper makes an effort to market in person often enough to be known to the grocer and to show that she knows good quality and will accept no other. If the grocer grows careless in filling her order a few returns will usually be enough to stop this.

In telephone marketing it is a good idea for the housekeeper to deal with the same clerk regularly so that there will be someone responsible for putting up the order. If her staple orders are put in on other days than Saturdays, she will also get better results.

The housekeeper must be sure that she is getting honest weight. A pair of scales should be in every kitchen and a check-up made occasionally of anything bought in bulk. This weight question in comparison to value is more subtle now than in many food materials are put up in packages. Many women take for granted that these are customarily pound or half-pound units. Often they are six, ten, twelve, or fourteen ounces. Different brands of the same foodstuff should be compared, with weight, as well as price and quality considered. By law every package is compelled to have printed on it the weight of the contents. But can you tell, without looking, how many ounces of cereal or raisins or baking powder are in the packages of the brand you usually use? Just try and see if you rate one hundred per cent! Then see whether you know how many ounces are in the loaf of bread you usually buy.

This brings us to the question of package goods, which are in most cases higher in price than bulk goods. Often the difference is worth while, as many foods, if exposed to the air, absorb flavor from other foods, gather dust and possibly germs from the air. Wares are more attractive, more conveniently presented, more sanitary, and this, of course, has added to the cost. Much of it we should be willing to pay.

The Household

By LYDIA LE BARON WALKER

BRINGING a home up to date in style of decorations can be accomplished in two widely divergent ways. One is to select new pieces of furniture so discriminatingly that they will fit in with the things already possessed and each appear at home with the other. Some furniture already owned will probably have to be discarded, or at least stored, should it be too good actually to discard.

The Victorian furniture was such a startling change from the classic old time furniture in vogue when the Victorian came in, that entire household furnishings apparently were given up in favor of the incoming style. Had it not been for the spacious attics, and marvelous old stables and barns, the classic pieces would not have remained intact. We would have been the losers, for a renaissance of the former vogues brought again into style the very pieces discarded, and into the discard went many Victorian furnishings which today are being brought to the fore again. So do smart styles rotate!

Styles and Standards.

Such wholesale changes were, and continue to be, expensive. Few persons can keep homes equipped in what are considered smart furnishings by substituting a great deal of new furniture for old. After all since there is nothing new under the sun, smartness is a matter of what is in the heyday of popular fancy at the moment. But there are choice pieces of furniture, etc., that are always in style, because always of exquisite lines and graceful contours.

Before going further into this side of the question, let us consider other ways of stressing smartness in interior decorations, one of which is by changing perishable things from the old to the new style. Another way is to get smart accessories, carefully selected to fit in with the furniture one has.

Draperies.

Draperies and curtains do much to alter the appearance of a room. These have to be renewed periodically in any event. So let them be in smart style, not too bizarre, to avoid clashing with other furnishings.

Accessories, such as lamps, can be in smart-style, also, occasional tables, ornaments, afternoon tea and after dinner coffee sets, glassware—crystal clear or colored to fit the moment—and picture frames, as styles change decidedly in these. Such pieces of furniture as foot rests can be in evidence, when smartly in style, or be stowed away when not, except when comfort makes them too sorely wanted to put away entirely.

Unseen Light Helps Enforce Sanitation Laws in New York

It Reveals Quality of Mattress Materials

NEW YORK. — "Invisible light," the same kind that gives healthy tans, is helping the bedding division of the New York department of labor run down violators who stuff mattresses with second-hand material but tag them: "filled with new cotton."

"We are using the ultra-violet fluorescence as a principle test in the prosecution of such cases," David Himmelfarb of the laboratory told a meeting of the American Association of Textile Chemists and Colorists. The ultra-violet light quickly discloses to the inspector whether the cotton fibers and felts used in making mattresses are second-hand or new.

Traps Cheating Makers.
"This work has been developed in our laboratory in order to make sure that all mattresses sold in the state of New York are properly designated and that when the tag calls for new material, it shall be actually new material, because there has been practice of using second-hand material," he went on to say.

The unique test is based on the fact that when various textile fibers are exposed to the proper type of ultra-violet rays they each fluoresce in different ways, thus enabling them to be distinguished from each other. Fluorescence is the power of a substance to absorb certain wavelengths of light, usually invisible, and to re-emit it as visible light. Thus, new cotton when exposed to practically invisible ultra-violet rays glows with a purplish or violet light or fluorescence. On the other hand, if the cotton is old or second-hand it glows with ivory-white fluorescence. The differences in fluorescence, therefore, reveal the age of the cotton fiber to the tester.

With his mercury quartz arc lamp, provided with a filter that cuts out most of the visible ultra-violet rays, the tester directs streams of the invisible rays from the lamp onto the mattress stuffing and from the color of the light given off can draw pretty sure conclusions as to whether the stuffings are new or old fibers.

This test should be of great value to those many states which have laws requiring manufacturers to disclose to the purchaser, usually by an attached cloth label, the kind and nature of the filling material used in mattresses and upholstered furniture.

Mystery Gland in Bees Unlocks Cradle Doors

BERLIN.—Every worker bee carries a gland that is of no use to her but serves the coming generation. The existence of this gland, under the bee's lower jaw, has long been known, but nobody knew what it was used for.

Now Dr. Karl Dreher, of the Marburg Zoological institute, has found that this maxillary gland, as it is called, secretes a substance that dissolves the cocoons in which young bees develop, when they are ready to emerge.

This gland is indispensable for the life of the hive, as a matter of fact, because the young bees cannot break the cocoon cases themselves, and the jaws of the nurse-bees are too short and blunt to open them by biting. This is especially true for the queen-bee cocoons.

Plant "Missing Links" Discovered in Oregon

BEND, ORE.—Plant "missing links", closing a gap in the history of life on this continent, have been discovered in Oregon, and the discovery has been verified by Dr. Ralph W. Chaney of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

The new-found fossils date from the Pliocene geologic epoch, which came before the Great Ice age. The beds were uncovered during the process of recent highway construction. They are capped with approximately 100 feet of lava. The discovery verified a prediction made by Dr. Chaney many years ago, when he said that willows and poplars would be abundantly represented in beds of this age, wherever they were found. New Germ-Killing Oil Is Obtained From the Ti-Tree

It Destroys Bacteria and Promotes Healing

SINCE the early days of antiseptic surgery and of crude antiseptics, medical men have been looking for a substance that would kill bacteria—especially the germs that infect wounds—without harming the living tissue of the patient. Such a substance seems to have been found in an essential oil distilled from the Australian ti-tree.

Few people outside Australia had heard of the ti-tree until recently, but now surgeons are beginning to wonder whether the oil is to make their professional dream come true. Tested by the standard method, ti-tree oil was from eleven to thirteen times as effective as carbolic acid of the same strength in killing typhoid bacteria, yet it is non-poisonous.

It Promotes Healing.
Not only is it non-irritating to wounded human tissues, but it is claimed actually to promote the healing of wounds. It is said to dissolve and bring away pus without injuring the healthy tissue.

All other disinfectants and germicides irritate, if they do not destroy, human tissue to some extent, so that their application to a wound must represent a compromise between killing the bacteria and harming the patient. Ti-tree oil is being used by Australian doctors and dentists with remarkable success in treating skin diseases, septic wounds, abscesses, and pyorrhea, according to the Medical Journal of Australia.

Used Also in Perfumery.
It is a pale lemon-colored, pleasant-smelling oil with an odor resembling nutmeg. This has caused it to be employed in perfumery, but its most refined uses will be in medical and surgical practice.

The chemistry of ti-tree oil has not yet been cleared up, so that it is not known to what the oil owes its peculiar virtue. Ti-tree oil seems, however, to have a more complex composition than many oils originating in Australia, that land of strange plants and animals.

The ti-tree grows only in a belt near the north coast of New South Wales, and its oil is so little known to the world that only one firm in London is handling it.

Interstellar Space May Contain the Element Titanium

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. — Discovery in far-off interstellar space of what is probably ionized gas of the element titanium, a find astronomers say is likely to prove of tremendous significance in learning the content and nature of these nearly vacuous regions, has been reported to the Harvard Observatory by the Mount Wilson Observatory in California.

The find was made by Dr. Walter S. Adams, director of the Mount Wilson observatory, and Dr. Theodore Dunham, a member of the staff, while they were conducting research on the ultraviolet part of the spectrum of the bright star Chi 2 Orionis.

Will Be of Vast Importance.
Harvard astronomers declared, "It seems probable that if the discovery of the interstellar titanium is confirmed it will give information concerning the content and nature of interstellar space that is of more importance than was the discovery of sodium and calcium in nearly empty space."

The star Chi Aurigae also shows the new titanium lines, Dr. Adams and Dr. Dunham reported, and it is probable, they added, that further research on the spectra of the hot stars will reveal the presence of this intervening matter in all directions from the earth.

Glass Wool Is Good Soil for Orchids

WASHINGTON — Hobby and professional interests are combined in a unique fashion by Dr. George W. Morey of the Carnegie Institution of Washington. Dr. Morey is a physical chemist in the institution's geophysical laboratory, specializing in the study of glass and glass-like compounds. As an avocation, he grows orchids.

Recently he has discovered that orchids can be grown to good advantage by rooting them in glass wool, a fluffy material made of matted threads of very fine spun glass, now widely used for a number of purposes, from house insulation to the weaving of fancy fabrics.

Period Influences Superb Fabrics

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FORMAL gowns for the midwinter social season are said to be the most sumptuous and extravagant seen at any time since pre-war days. The "dress-up" movement is growing more and more so with each passing hour. From style centers come reports that an astonishing number of formals are selling this season and that the call for handsome afternoon gowns in rich metallics, velvets and laces is reaching far beyond the usual.

Gorgeous, glistening, gleaming, sparkling and arrestingly colorful are the fabrics and laces that are fashioning the luxury apparel noted at fashionable gatherings. Then, too, the trend to greater elegance is expressed in the emphasis placed on luxurious accessories, on flattering little dinner hats and elaborate evening headpieces.

Even more thrilling than the elegant materials and the vainglorious accessories that distinguish this season's formal modes are the various period influences that mark their styling. Designers, seeking inspiration for the costume creations, are delving into fashion lore of centuries past as they never delved before. The picturesque Tyrolean and Dalmatian mood is expressed in terms of colorful embroidery, which is generously used at present, and in other intriguing details that are adding greatly to the gaiety of current fashions. Boleros are flourishing in the mode both day and night, and in the evening the latest is to throw a lace mantilla over head and shoulders and wear a red, red rose for corsage—fashion has gone as picturesquely Spanish as that!

One of the most outstanding gestures toward recapturing styles of the past is the reincarnation of the lovely Empire gowns taken from the days of Josephine and Napoleon. The stately and very beautiful dresses worn by the standing figures in the illustration bespeak the new Empire move as interpreted by designers in the style apparel creator group of the Chicago wholesale district. In these gowns we see the modern woman transformed into a glamorous true-to-tradition Napoleonic type. The silhouette, as you see, achieves a fashionable figure launched with a new profile of erect carriage and imperious dignity, accentuating a high bust and waistline, flat diaphragm, deep décolletage, short puff sleeves and long graceful skirt.

Superb lame weaves gleaming with gold and silver and striking color are used for these gowns. The gown to the left is of an eye-catching metal brocade in an alluring tangerine color. Handsome lame in a vivid emerald green fashions the center dress, with narrow green-metal ribbon accentuating the high bust line.

The spirit of embellishment and splendor, in keeping with the new luxury trend, has invaded the lace realm also. Very lovely Chantilly laces have their floral patternings outlined in metal threadwork, while come laces add a decorative touch of embroidery or perhaps are starred with sequins, pearls and such. A dinner and evening ensemble stressing the vogue for the jacketed formal gown is attractively expressed in metallic-outlined Chantilly as worn by the seated figure in the picture. The neckline of the dress is square and the jacket ties softly with a bow. Which is the same as telling you when you buy lace for your frock it is not enough, you must allow an extra length for a jacket. In this way it serves a twofold purpose—with the jacket informal enough to wear to the simple dinner party, without the jacket a gown formal enough for the most pretentious evening occasion.

LACE MANTILLA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

White metallized silk moire for a picturesque wide-skirted formal evening frock with a Spanish mantilla of black silk lace gracing shoulders and head, here indeed is the costume ideal for the debutante to wear to mid-winter festivities. Such grand silks as we have with us this season! The silk moires are beloved indeed and they are lovely in white or colors. White shot with silver is supremely chic. And the new silk brocades! One can't describe them for their beauty is beyond word pictures. These brocades are stunning for princess evening coats that button down the front.

HATS NOT BECOMING TO AVERAGE WOMAN

The selection of becoming hats promises to be more difficult than ever this season. Scidom has there been such a generous choice, as far as actual style trends go, but most of the numerous different shapes prove unbecoming to the average woman.

Height still reigns supreme, although many milliners have tried to retain the more moderate, rounded and shallow crown. The tall crowns, still shaped like inverted flower pots, prevail on every type hat, but the turban. Some of these felts seem to be inspired by early Pilgrim days in America, while others look more like modern Alpine hats with taller crowns.

Adding Accessories Gives New Effects to Costumes

If you know your fashion arithmetic you will discover that one costume can be made into two by the addition of the right accessories. Take those black suits, for example, which have a modest bit of Persian lamb trimming on collar, cuffs and pockets. It doesn't matter whether the jacket is short or long, or whether it is fitted or swaggy—the choice of a blouse, hat and gloves determine the ensemble's perfection.

For afternoon and informal evening needs there are elegant blouses of metallic fabrics and satins, while for tailored needs the shirtwaist blouse with studs is the smartest you can find. Light gloves, dark gloves or bright gloves have their advantages as do hats of felt or velvet.

Skirts and Sleeves
While there are exceptions to this rule, in most cases plain sleeves are used on gowns when the skirt is flaring, and full sleeves on dresses having narrow skirts.

Pleasure Giving

Talking to Advantage of Others and Joy to Ourselves in 1937

TALKING is the recognized medium of communication between persons who are together or who, being absent, use a telephone. It is unfortunate having such a marvelous medium at our command that we so often fail to put it to the use worthy of its value. It is possible to send a glow of happiness through the listener when we speak merited words of appreciation. It is possible to solace those in sorrow by words of comfort spoken from the heart. It is possible to make joy doubly glad some by expressing our happiness in the good fortune of others. Through talking to our children we can spur them on to do fine things, or encourage them in worthy resolves. In short the good we can do by talking in the right spirit is inestimable.

By talking in the right way we bring good to others and joy to ourselves.

"Too Much Talk"

It is when we swerve from the best use of the spoken word that we drag it down and harm both ourselves and our hearers. There is an expression, "too much talk" which is significant of this very thing. The words speak for themselves; declaring that it would be advisable to cease saying the things we are. It is never said of good words. Of them we could say: Let us have more talk of the same sort, it is needed.

Many Words

Have you ever considered how much is said when derogatory talk is going on? Word are spoken and reiterated over and over again, as if by repetition the unpleasant things would be increased. Unfortunately this is what happens. Unkind or unfriendly conversation, by some perverse twist of human nature, is sure to be repeated, and usually with embellishments. Either the one who repeats it cannot believe her ears, and wonders if anyone else knows about the unfortunate circumstances, or else she finds a strange pleasure in repeating slander. It may be the derogatory words are against someone she dislikes. It may be they are about a total stranger. If the talk was commendatory repeating it would foster fine things. Good things should be given frequent repetition.

Pleasure Giving in 1937

We all could add so much to the pleasure and joy of living during the new year 1937, if we would set a watch on our talk, and by a wishful determination use this great means at our command to help others. It is one of the things that costs nothing and yet which can do such an endless amount of good. It is a way open to all alike.

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay Heating Expert

How to Check "Chimney Loss," Greatest Waste in Home Heating

WHAT is "chimney loss"? Well, that's a term we heating experts have for heat that goes up the chimney and is wasted.

Yet it's really a simple matter to save money by reducing this loss—convert "chimney loss" to "useful heat," as we call it. Here's the remedy:

Next time you refuel the fire, move the handle of the turn dam-

Sectional View Side View Turn Damper in Smoke Pipe

per (that disc or plate-like damper inside the smoke pipe) 1-10th of an inch toward the closed upright position. Then, if the fire keeps on burning too freely, turn the damper another sixteenth of an inch. Repeat this operation until you find the correct adjustment—one that will deliver the greatest amount of useful heat with the least "chimney loss."

Once you have found this ideal adjustment of the damper, mark the position on the smoke pipe with a piece of chalk or something that can be plainly seen, and leave the damper set at that mark.

Bear this in mind: The nearer the turn damper is set to the closed position the smaller the "chimney loss" and the greater the volume of "useful heat" that goes to properly heating your home. And, of course, the lower your fuel bills.

Mistakes From Pride

I HAVE been more and more convinced the more I think of it, that, in general, pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes. All the other passions do occasional good; but whenever pride puts in its word, everything goes wrong; and what it might really be desirable to do, quietly and innocently, it is mortally dangerous to do proudly.—Ruskin.

WOMEN WHO HOLD THEIR MEN NEVER LET THEM KNOW

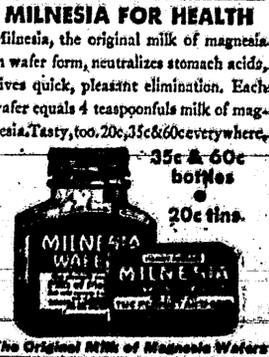

NO matter how much your back aches and your nerves scream, your husband, because he is only a man, can never understand why you are so hard to live with one week in every month. Too often the honeymoon experience is wrecked by the nagging tensions of a three-quarter moon. The wise woman cover her husband know by outward sign that she is a victim of periodic pain.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "mellow through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature (and you) to get rid of the functional disorders which women must endure in the three critical years: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. New Line being constructed by Santa Fe Railway

Colorado will gain five towns, and Oklahoma one, upon completion of the 111 miles of new line being constructed by the Santa Fe Railway, between Las Animas, Colorado, and Boise City, Oklahoma. In addition, one inland town, heretofore without railroad service, will be on the new line.

The new stations are Castenada, in Cimmaron County, Okla.; Bisonte, Ramp and Frick, in Baca County, Colorado; Ruxton and Gilpin in Bent County, Colorado. The new railroad touches the old town of Campo, in Baca County, Colo., and has been built through Springfield, Baca County, Colo., seat, which is on the Santa-Pritchett branch of the Santa Fe. The new line will be turned over for operation February 1.

The new town of Castenada was named for an officer-historian in Coronado's army, which traversed much of this territory. Bisonte is named for the buffalo which roamed the country. Ramp is Spanish for a smooth country. Frick was named for a director of the Santa Fe. Ruxton is named for Capt. Frederick Ruxton, Colorado explorer. Gilpin was named in honor of the first governor of Colorado.

Completion of the Boise City-Las Animas line will save from 142 to 226 miles in the movement of freight over the Santa Fe to and from Colorado, from and to points in Texas, and on portions of the Santa Fe in Oklahoma and New Mexico. It also will shorten the distance from Amarillo to Denver and intermediate points somewhat over 25 miles compared with any other railroad.

While the Santa Fe lost 41 miles of lines from its rail system in 1935, it overcame that in 1936 and has 286 additional miles of lines. The small decrease in 1935 was due to minor adjustments in track. The mileage gains made in 1936 include the construction of the 111-mile line between Las Animas and Boise City, and an arrangement for the purchase of 216 miles of line from the Frisco Railroad, from Fort Worth to Menard in Texas. These additions give the Santa Fe a total of 13,686 miles of railway.
