CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, APRIL 23, 1937

NUMBER 48

Commissioners Proceedings

Special meeting of the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners March 22 1937.

All officers present, except Hon. Gordon Wells absent on account of illness.

Acting on a petition presented by residents of Corona, the Board announces the appointment of T. N. Grimmett as Constable of Corona, to succeed Robert Scroggins; the Board having accepted Mr. Scroggins' resignation.

There followed an open session meeting wherein the Board of Commissioners heard arguments and discussion pertaining to the proposed incorporation of the village of Ruidoso. A petition was presented to the Board praying that incorporation be granted which action the Board deferred until proper review could be had of the exceptions.

Later, the Board having heard and considered all arguments and discussions offered in its public meeting, ruled: that incorporation cannot be granted on this date; a proper survey and census must be made before incorporation is granted; and that the present petition for the incorporation of the Village of Ruidoso be denied. Regular April Term of the Commissioners Court.

Board is convened at 10:00 a. m. Monday, April 5, 1937 all officers present as of March 22.

In the Matter of Granting a Franchise to The Ruidoso Light and Power Company:

Resolution:

Whereas, the Lincoln County Board of Commissioners, meeting in executive session, has duly considered the petition and application of the Ruidoso Light and Power Company for a new Franchise for a period of twenty-five years, and the Board being fully advised finds: that the Ruidoso Telephone Company was on the 8th day of May, A. D. 1926, granted a Franchise authorizing it to use the public highways, the streets and alleys of unincorporated towns of Lincoln county for the purpose of constructing power and light and telephone lines. That on the 30th day of June, the Ruidoso Telephone Company assigned its interests inasmuch as had to do with power and light to Joe Mogel, later the Ruidoso Light and Power Company. That the Ruidoso Light and Power Company is right in requesting a new Franchise for the statutory period of twenty-five years, so that it may have more definite assurance that its rights will be protected as a public service institution.

Now Therefore, on motion of P. R. Sandoval and carried, a Franchise is granted to The Ruidoso Light and Power Company for a period of twenty-five years, to operate and maintain its electrical energy system in the county of Lincoln, thereby permitting it to use the public highways and the streets and alleys of unincorporated towns for the purpose of constructing electric power and light and telephone lines.

Now there appears before the Board, persons asking that the road from Capitan to the Tucson Mountain region be repaired: The Board states and wishes it known that as soon as the road equipment is withdrawn from the Claunch sector, the Board will endeavor to begin repairing, constructing and placing the County roads in better condition.

Current Events IN REVIEW by Edward W. Pickard

Wagner Act Upheld by the Supreme Court

FIVE history-making decisions were handed down by the Supreme court, all upholding the validity of the Wagner labor relations act and inferentially broadening the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution.

Chief Justice Hughes supported the constitutional basis of the Wagner act, finding it a legal "scheme" to protect commerce from injury resulting from the denial by employers of the right of employees to organize and "from the refusal of employers to accept the procedure of collective bargaining."

The broad constitutionality of the act, was strongly noted by the chief justice. He declared that: "We think it clear that the national labor relations act may be construed so as to operate within the spirit of constitutional authority."

Hughes defined the right of employees to self-organization and to select their representatives for collective bargaining as "a fundamental right."

Regarding the vital point of the application of the interstate commerce clause of the Constitution, Hughes declared:

"The congressional authority to protect interstate commerce from burdens and obstructions is not limited to transactions which can be deemed to be an essential part of a 'flow' of interstate or foreign commerce. Burdens or obstructions may be due to injurious action springing from other sources."

In the case of the Associated Press, concerning the dismissal of Morris Watson, a New York editorial employee, the court was split, 5 to 4. The majority opinion, read by Justice Roberts, held that the act does not "abridge the freedom of speech or of the press safeguarded by the first amendment" to the Constitution. The court took the view that Watson was dismissed not because his work was un satisfactory but because of his activities in the Newspaper Guild, and ordered his reinstatement.

Dissenting conservatives, comprising Justices Willis Van Devanter, George Sutherland, James C. McReynolds and Pierce Butler, contended that the act should not be applied to the Associated Press because its provisions violated the "freedom of the press" clause of the Constitution. They found that if the act interfered with the ability of the Associated Press to maintain a policy of impartial news reporting, it must fall under the freedom of the press guaranty.

The three other cases, in each of which the Wagner act was upheld, involved dismissal of 18 employees by an interstate bus company, a dispute between the Fruehauf Trailer Company of Detroit, Mich., and the United Automobile Workers Union; and a dispute between the Friedmann-Harry Marks Clothing Company of Richmond Va., and Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

In the bus case the decision was unanimous; in the others the division was 5 to 4.

Canada Motors Strike on Verge of Settlement

MITCHELL HEPBURN, premier of Ontario, reiterating his determination not to permit C. I. O. representatives from the United States to take part in negotiations for settlement of the strike in the General Motors of Canada plant at Oshawa, promised to "call out an army if necessary" to protect the property of the corporation.

Premier HEPBURN

that Premier HEPBURN had intervened in the affair unnecessarily or at least prematurely, and that his blustering language was not warranted, since the strike was being conducted in a fairly orderly manner with no threat of a sitdown.

C. I. O. Men Shoot Several Foes in Galena, Kan.

ORGANIZERS of the international Union of Mill, Mine and Smelter Workers, an affiliate of the C. I. O., invaded the lead and zinc field of Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri and were forcibly resisted by the "blue carders" of the Tri-State Metal Mine and Smelter Workers' union, which the C. I. O. says is a company union.

Leaders of the blue card union say nearly every miner in the region belongs to it, that they are drawing higher pay than ever before and are interested only in keeping conditions as they are and in an opportunity to work.

The C. I. O. has started a campaign to organize the 270,000 employees of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, the largest corporation in the United States. Local unions are to be chartered by the United Electrical and Radio Workers of America. Promotional literature is being distributed.

Prime Minister Baldwin Will Soon Quit Office

FREQUENT reports that Stanley Baldwin would soon retire from the post of prime minister of Great Britain were confirmed by him in a speech to the members of his constituency at Worcester.

Neville Chamberlain

In his Worcester address Mr. Baldwin said: "It is far better to go when people may still think of you as perhaps not incompetent in your work than to stay until they know before you do that you are becoming incompetent."

"In a democratic country the prime minister is not only the head of a government, but he is the leader of a party and the leader of the house of commons. To carry on that tripartite task for many years beyond the age I have now reached is, in my belief, beyond the strength of human nature."

The prime minister's long service to his country will be rewarded by elevation to the peerage.

British Navy Ordered to Protect Merchant Ships

GREAT BRITAIN will respect the blockade of the northern Spanish port of Bilbao established by General Franco, Fascist leader. But her navy has been given orders by the cabinet to protect to the fullest extent all British shipping outside the three mile limit.

The huge battle cruiser Hood and other warships were sent in a hurry to the Bay of Biscay, and orders were given to open fire on any Spanish vessel interfering with British cargo ships on the high seas. The cabinet, it was said, decided to continue to withhold the granting of belligerent rights to Franco but regarded the blockade of Bilbao as a special case since Franco's forces surround the town by sea and land. Six British ships had been waiting at St. Jean de Luz and one at Bayonne, unable to land food cargoes at Bilbao because of the presence of Franco's warships.

Farmers Must Pay More to Raise 1937 Crops

ACCORDING to the Department of Agriculture American farmers will have to pay more to raise their crops in 1937 than they did last year. Farm labor will cost more. Seed prices already have advanced sharply, and feed prices will be materially higher than in 1936.

Drive Against Communism Started by the K. of C.

IT IS the opinion of the Knights of Columbus that communism is responsible for sitdown and other strikes in the United States and Canada, and that national organization of 600,000 Catholic men therefore has started an "endless crusade" against what it terms "the most damnable organization in the world." The program was launched officially by 400 delegates of councils in the New York district and will be carried on all over the country.

Fascism Is Defeated in Belgian Election

BELGIAN Fascists were badly defeated in an election which was admittedly a show of Fascist and anti-Fascist strength though it was only for one seat in parliament. The voters flatly rejected Leon Degrelle, foe of Premier Paul Van Zeeland, the former obtaining only 69,242 votes as against 275,840 for Van Zeeland. The Fascists there are known as Rexists and were backed by the Flemish nationalists.

Senate Hits Sitdowns but Sponsors the President

IN ORDER to get the Guffey coal control bill through the senate without an amendment condemning the sitdown strike, Majority Leader Joe Robinson promised to permit consideration of a resolution carrying similar condemnation, but when it was presented and adopted, by a vote of 75 to 3, it was not a joint resolution, which would require the signature of the President. That was what Senator McNary and others wanted, but Robinson said it must be concurrent, because he would not put Mr. Roosevelt in the position of having to indicate his position on the sitdown strike by either signing or vetoing the measure.

Sen. Robinson

Besides declaring the sitdown strike "illegal and contrary to sound public policy" the resolution as adopted took a double slap at the employers by also declaring: "That the so-called industrial spy system breeds fear, suspicion and animosity, tends to cause strikes and industrial warfare and is contrary to sound public policy; and "That it is likewise contrary to sound public policy for any employer to deny the right of collective bargaining, to foster the company union or to engage in any other unfair labor practice as defined in the national labor relations act."

Senator Lewis Urges New Peace Conference

SENATOR JAMES HAMILTON LEWIS of Illinois told the senate that he believes the time has come for President Roosevelt to call an international peace conference that would revise the treaty of Versailles. He said the object of the conference would be to reach a "new disposition that might content the nations that are now in revolt and which continue in conflict because of the affront and injury they feel was worked upon them under the terms of the treaty."

The senator asserted the popularity of Mr. Roosevelt abroad would lend much to the success of such a conference.

Trans-Atlantic Air Service Soon to Be Realized

TRANS-ATLANTIC air service between the United States and Great Britain may be expected to start almost immediately, for the last obstacle in its way was removed by an agreement with Canada concerning routes through the Dominion.

Assistant Secretary of Commerce J. Monroe Johnson announced that two routes through Canada had been made available for trans-Atlantic flying craft that will make a total of four trips a week. One route is by way of Shediac, N. B., and the other through Montreal. The hop-off point for eastward flights over the ocean would be from Bottwood, N. F., which also would be landfall on the westward flights.

Johnson said that under the agreement British and United States planes would make two crossings a week.

Italian Editor Accuses France and Russia

THAT France and Russia are flagrantly violating the Spanish civil war neutrality agreement by sending aid to the Madrid government is the charge flatly made by Virginio Gayda, Italian editor who is generally regarded as voicing the views of Premier Mussolini. Gayda said 25 officers of the French general staff were mapping the strategy of the loyalists especially on the front northeast of Madrid, and that transshipment had been permitted through France of much "war material" made in the United States. He alleged that Edouard Daladier, French minister of war, is receiving reports on the performance of the new 155 millimeter (6.1 inch) French guns sent to Spain and used extensively in the Guadaluajara battle.

The Spanish steamer Mar Negro, Gayda declared, was en route to Valencia from Odessa, Russia, with a cargo of munitions of war for the Spanish government.

The Rogues' Gallery Nina Wilcox Putnam Explains Your Ancestry

Get an oil-paint number showing a gent wearing one of those lace-millstones around his neck, a hat like a little fifty dollar copy of a French import and holding onto a dagger like he was asking the artist "How much?" Then hang this over the parlor mantel and wait for the suckers.

By NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

I SEE that another citizen fixit has got himself on the front page by the simple expedient of being arrested. This morning there was a story about a guy who called himself a Genealogist but that was only an alias. He was really a come-on guy, knock knock, "come-on-let-me-take-you-plenty." Some lady hired this bird to look up her ancestors and then had him arrested when she found he was taking the names out of the telephone book.

Just in case you have never given the subject of ancestors a thought, you liar, let me explain that an ancestor is somebody so dead they can't deny any of the brags you put on about them.

When a family gets enough money to start referring to their folks as "my people" they generally try to start looking up the family-tree hoping to find a duke or an earl perching on the upper branches. Some do and some don't, and many of the family who looked up and then looked away quickly because all they could see up on the collateral branches was a noose or an ice-man or something.

Genealogy Comes Easy. It is this latter sort of experience which has given rise to the professional Genealogist. He assumes the shock of taking the first peep at your ancestors and then if the thing looks bad, why for a couple of dollars more he can get a few paid witnesses to swear you were descended from Sir Gummenn-Up of the English nobility—descended quite a long ways perhaps, but he's perfectly willing to give you a piece of paper with a chart on it to prove it. This chart is sort of a cross between what a trained nurse makes out for the doctor to look at and a report on the number of pies consumed at Passamaquoddy.

And you get so you believe it yourself. Well, so you claim, anyhow! This chart is as you may have guessed, a family tree. Like any other tree it is in better shape if well pruned before cultivating. As a rule it is the collateral-branches which need to be walloped off, because a collateral-branch is by no means necessarily the one with plenty of collateral to put up at the bank. Far from it, in Genealogy the collats are apt to be wild shoots full of thorns and the less said about 'em the better.

Jones' Coat of Arms. Another good way to acquire ancestors is to save up and buy a few old portraits. Get an oil-paint number showing a gent wearing one of those lace-millstones around his neck, a hat like a little fifty-dollar copy of a French import and holding onto a dagger like he was asking the artist "How much?" or something. Then hang this over the parlor mantel and wait for the suckers. They will scarcely be in a position to contradict you when you claim the portrait is your great-great-great, well pretty darned great-uncle, Sir Howdareyou—I know one rich old buzzard who tried this with great success twelve times running. The thirteenth time he also ran because he told the story to the feller who painted the picture. But don't let his experience stop you—so few of us know any artists or that they really are artists even if they are painting on relief.

working on Bah-Relief, no doubt! Of course if you are going to have Ancestors you must have all the trimmings, such as a coat of arms. I know it's kind of hard to imagine a coat without arms, it would be awkward on a cold day. But the arms in the case we are at the moment interested in (I hope) is a kind of a picture. That is to say it's a picture in which every item means something, only, like the "Nude Descending the Staircase," you don't know what, until it's explained to you.

For example, a certain Mr. Jones dug up his coat of Arms and was surprised to find it wasn't a bullet-proof vest. In his picture two snails rampant are fighting over a bud of garlic. Above this is a quarter of a yard of good quality ribbon frozen into a fancy shape and on it the words "Fidus et Audax." Translated, I guess Fido, the dog, ate Audax, presumably a cat. And around this ancient truth is a wreath of ostrich feathers, probably signifying that the Jones family liked to bury their heads in the sand, especially when they saw a creditor coming along.

The Jones "crest" is a demi-tasse of the above. And the use of a crest is to scrape it off the door of a second-hand car before it can be re-sold, or to help sell the car to somebody who is crestfallen. But one thing you must remember: Never accept a coat of arms or a crest which is not a college-graduate, or it will be a phoney. Yes sure, The College of Heraldry is where you get 'em. So you don't believe me, eh? Well go look it up in the N. Y. Phone book!

Heritage Means Little. Naturally common people who can't afford all this hidio ought to be willing to be their own ancestors, but you know how we Americans are—we are all descended from the very best people. If you doubt it just bring up the subject any time, any place, and see for yourself. Why even a man and wife alone at home have been known to dig up and match more ancestors in a single evening than ever came over in the Mayflower. While many a gathering of homey folks who have survived talks on religion and politics has bust wide open over ancestors. The one who could talk the loudest naturally had the longest family tree. And there's many a Daughter of the Revolution who doesn't look her age. But don't, I pray you, Arbothomet-old chap, don't confuse the Daughters of the Revolution with the Daughter of the Regiment!

Personally I would not get much comfort out of the thought I was descended from some Lord Hoosis who walked around in a personal armored car with his head in a coal-scuttle, except such comfort as came from the knowledge I would never have to look at the poor thing. My father wore stiff bosomed shirts in hot weather, and that's bad enough. And my lack of lordly ancestors who tortured helpless females is amply compensated for by my memory of my mother getting into her hour-glass corset. In fact unless they leave you money, what is the good of ancestors, anyway. Of course you can blame your own worst traits onto them, but nobody else will. All your friends will think it's you that is the so-and-so, and they don't care a hoot if it is inherited from somebody they can't get to with a complaint.

California Condors.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Local naturalists are all agog over the discovery that the California condor is coming back in numbers to his former haunts just up country from here. In fact, they are going out of one violent gog, right into another. Because the condor, the mightiest winged creature in all North America, was supposed to be practically extinct, along with such vanished species of native wild life as the great auk, the passenger pigeon and the lightning rod agent.

So now we have set up a new mark for envious Florida to shoot at. For while they may have croupers at Bradley's in Palm Beach, with eyes as keen and bleak as the condor's are, and real-estate dealers in Miami as greedy as he is, our frustrated rivals will be put to it to dig up a bird with a wing spread of from nine to eleven feet.

Communism's Gallant Foe.

HARDLY a day passes but we read in the paper of an account of individual heroism, of sacrifice, of devotion to duty—something which renews our faith in human beings and makes us realize that scattered through the world are splendid souls of whom we never heard before and probably shall never hear again. When the emergency came he rose to it—and that's enough.

But because, in the last few months, we've learned to expect it of him, I'm thinking many of us fail to appreciate a recurrent act of gallant service by one venerable, enfeebled man whose name is familiar to all Christendom. From time to time, triumphing by sheer will power, by sheer singleness of purpose above his own suffering, Pope Pius XI, speaking from what soon must be his deathbed, sends forth a clarion call for a united front against the growing menace of communism.

Waning Merchant Marines.

AFTER we've spent billions in government subsidies trying to build up a proper merchant fleet of our own, it's just a trifle disconcerting to read that, among the six nations leading in maritime chipping, the United States still ranks third in gross tonnage, fifth in ships having a speed of twelve knots or better, and last in ships built within the last ten years.

But, although Los Angeles is a great port, we have no time right now to pester about a comparatively trivial thing such as the threatened vanishment of the American flag from the seven seas—not while we're still so uncertain about who will have the leading parts in "Gone With the Wind." To date, nearly every lady in the movie colony has been suggested for Scarlett O'Hara except Mae West and Jane Withers, and as for Rhett Butler—well, it may yet be necessary to cast that role as a whole minstrel first part, with an interlocutor and six end men.

Italians in Spain.

IT MUST be slightly annoying to those Italian soldiers who were flung headlong upon Spain to fight in a war in which they had no personal interest, when, through mistake, they are mown down in hundreds by their own troops, and then the bewildered remnants find themselves in the hands of the opposing government forces, who have a reputation for sometimes being a trifle rough with prisoners whom they capture.

Still, it must be a great comfort to the confused captives—and to the relatives of the fallen back home as well—to have assurance from Mussolini that they are winning the way for fascist doctrines. Until they heard that cheering message, those battered survivors probably thought that they had been licked.

The Height of Gail.

AS J. CAESAR remarked at the time, all Gaul was once divided in three parts, but it is obvious that subsequently there was a complete re-consolidation.

When France, already in default to us on one little four-billion debt, starts scheming to peddle her newest issue of government securities over here, that must indeed be regarded as the height of gallishness or Gaulishness—spell it either way, reader, it'll come out the same. Moreover, to evade the Johnson act, she would have American investors send the money to Paris and buy these French bonds there. This sort of smacks of inviting Br' Rabbit to come into camp to be massacred, instead of hunting him down, with the dogs.

"Not going out?"

"I'm staying in town."

"Stay in town?" stammered Bull, vastly surprised.

"Drive me to the hotel," Jane said wearily. "I'll take a room there. You drive home and come back for me tomorrow afternoon."

It was ten o'clock. Assigned to a room, Jane freshened herself after the long, dusty car ride, bathed her face and temples again and again in cold water, and tried to collect her throbbing thoughts.

It all seemed like a hideous dream. Surely it could be shaken off; surely men could not be so fiendish as to plot fire and so horrible a death as would follow to sleeping men.

Her father! She shuddered. This thought was most horrible of all—indeed—and yet . . .

Of one thing she felt certain: if it were true, she could no longer live under the same roof with him, and the terrifying duty of learning the revolting truth from his own lips confronted her.

And her lover—Bill, blinded Bill—what now of him? Could she ever face him again? What would he say? What would he do?

He knew the truth. No doubt remained in her mind on that point. No need now to ask why he seemed worried and changed. Was he only waiting, trying to decide how to tell her he could not marry her—that her father had blinded him—that they must part?

She threw open her window and kneeling before it, looked out upon the silent, far-stretching desert with its myriad of heavenly lights. The cool air cleared her head. But what could loosen the deadly grief and shame that clutched at her pounding heart?

When Dr. Carpy walked into his office from the dining room after breakfast next morning, he saw Jane Van Tumbel standing before the window, looking out.

"Why, Jane!" he exclaimed. "What brings you here so early?"

She looked around at him in silence. The doctor walked over to her and laid his hands on her shoulders.

"Jane," he asked, "what has happened, girl?"

The grief in her sunken eyes was too apparent.

"Oh, Doctor!" The exclamation came like a burst of suffering long pent. "I know everything."

He saw the fat was flatty in the fire. Indeed he had long had only a faint hope of keeping the facts from Jane. His real hope had been that she might not hear the truth (ill he could save Denison's eyes and thus cushion the horrid shock that the facts must bring to an innocent sufferer.

She had thrown her arms on the table in front of her. Her head sank between them.

Dr. Carpy rose, walked around to her side, lifted her head and, standing beside her, supported it in his arms.

"Jane," he said slowly, looking down into her pitiful eyes, "from what you tell me, I see that you have heard loose stories floating around."

"You, too, have heard them, Doctor. Why, oh, why didn't you tell me?"

"Jane!" exclaimed the doctor, driven from his last stronghold of reserve by the poignancy of her grief. "How the hell could I tell you a story involving those it did in such an affair? Actually, nobody knows just what the facts are. Now we must get started right. First you tell me all you heard. Then I'll tell you all I've heard—is that fair?"

Brokenly, and pausing at intervals to control her voice, Jane gave him the train story.

Carpy had bowed his head.

"Well," he commented as she looked soberly up, "that's not far from what I've been told myself. But, Jane, I'm not a bit sure we have the facts in these stories. They all depend on the word of one of the worst characters in this country. Barney Rebstock wouldn't hesitate at anything low down in the whole range of crime—anybody in town will tell you that. He's not only an ex-convict but the biggest liar in this whole country."

"Doctor," she said solemnly, "does Bill know all that you and I know?"

"Jane," he answered in like, "Bill knows all that you and I know."

"Oh, I knew it. I knew it. To think that poor I should have brought this horror into his life!"

"Jane, that's not so. This might all have happened if you never had seen this country."

"I want you to do one last favor for me, Doctor. Will you?" asked Jane.

"What is it, Jane?"

"I want you to say to Bill that I freely release him from his promise of marriage; that I beg him to forgive me all I have innocently caused him to suffer—and that I will leave here forever."

"Jane!" exclaimed her listener. She raised her hand, "I've not dashed yet."

"Go on!" he snapped, bluntly.

"My father has made me his heir to Gunlock ranch; he has no other heir. This morning I will make my will and bequeath whatever I inherit from my father to William Denison, to atone as far as I can for the wrongs my father has done him."

"Well!" remarked Carpy coldly.

"That is all."

"And that is what you want me to tell Bill?"

"That, Doctor, is what I want Bill to know. Oh, if I had another to do it for me, dear Doctor, I wouldn't put it on you."

Carpy rose to his feet.

"Jane, you're sending me on a fool's errand. But seeing I'm nothing but an old fool, I expect I'm just the man for the job. I can tell you now what he'll say as well as if I'd seen him and given him your message. But I know, of course, that wouldn't satisfy you. So I'll go—and go now."

"Now promise," he repeated, in parting, "you will stay right here in this office till I get back."

She promised.

But she was ill prepared for what she saw when the office door was opened half an hour later and Doctor Carpy pushed Denison ahead of him into the office. Bill's eyes were bandaged. He groped a little with his hands, while the doctor guided him to a chair.

"Here he is, Jane," announced Carpy bluntly. "He can speak for himself."

She had not an instant to wait. No sooner did Denison feel himself seated in a chair than he held out his arms and said, apparently not with deep feeling, not with pained emotion, but in the most commonplace, everyday, matter-of-fact manner: "Where's my girl? Come here!"

"Bill, I thought you ought at least to have a—"

The old doctor watched Jane run timidly to Denison's side. "Bill!" she exclaimed brokenly. "Here I am!"

"What's all this talk I hear about your quitting me, Jane?" he asked unsteadily.

"Bill, I thought you ought at least to have a—"

"Well, I've had my chance, haven't I? And this is my answer. Till death do us part! Nothing less, nothing else goes! Is that plain, girl? I gave you a chance the other day to quit me—what was your answer?"

CHAPTER XII

Jane did not go home that afternoon. She sent Bull and the buckboard back with instructions not to come in for her until she sent word. She wrote a brief note to her father, merely saying that she had attended to his business and would be home in a few days. Van Tumbel, in an impatient rage, sent Bull back with an order to Jane to come home at once or not to come home at all.

The harsh message made less impression on his daughter than he had intended; but it did bring back the answer that she would be out soon.

When the buckboard next day drew up at the ranchhouse door, Jane alighted with a fast-beating heart. Fortunately, when she got home, her father was out in the bills. Her welcome came from Quong; it sort of broke the ice of the home-coming. But she went to her room, got out her two old suitcases, dusted them off, laid them on her bed and, stripping the hooks of her closet and opening the drawers of her dresser, began almost furiously to pack.

While she was at this, she heard the heavy uneven steps of her father in the living room, and the next minute his huge bulk darkened the open doorway of her bedroom.

"Hello!" he snapped.

She turned. "Hello, Father," she responded simply.

"What are you doing?"

"Packing."

"What for?"

"Preparing to go into town."

"What you goin' in town agin for?"

"I've got a job in town, and I'm going there to work at it."

"What kind of a job?" he snorted.

"I'm going to study nursing at the hospital."

"What the hell you goin' to do that for?"

"Because things have been done from here that make this place hateful to me. I couldn't stand it here any longer."

"What things you talkin' about?"

She looked at him steadily. "I'm talking about burning Bill Denison's ranch house."

"What's that got to do with your quittin' home?"

"Everything. Everybody's talking about that fire. Barney Rebstock has told that you paid him for setting fire to a neighbor's ranch house with men sleeping in it."

"Why, that fellow's the worst liar in Sleepy Cat. Nobody believes anything he says."

"I can tell you everybody believes it," she said, trembling.

"Do you believe it?"

"Father, I am forced to unless you can convince me you had nothing to do with it. This wretch has had a pocketful of money."

Van Tumbel regarded her with perfect poise. "Why, I did give him a little money. I'll say I've been sorry for him. I know he hates Bill Denison—a good many folks in this country's got no use for that—"

"Stop!" cried Jane. "Don't say anything against Bill Denison. He saved my life!"

—that damned, dirty, ornery rascal and thief—"

Jane's eyes blazed. She stamped her foot. "Don't you dare!" she cried. "What you're saying about him is what everyone in this country says about you."

"Yes! There's some damned mean people in this country," thundered her father. "Just look out yourself, my lady. I don't know any more about that fire than you do. If Barney Rebstock wanted to get even with Denison, that's his business, not mine. You shut your trap."

"That's not all."

"More lies, oh?"

"McCrosen has told in town that you once tried to get him to set the house on fire and he refused to do it."

"He lies! He did do it! I gave him five hundred dollars to do it. He agreed to do it and took the money to do it. If he hired Barney Rebstock to start the fire that's his lookout! I left you here to watch things, and McCrosen has been running off my steers ever since I went to the hospital. He knows I know it. He knows I'm going to get after him. And I will," he shouted with a frightful oath.

"Now look here! I'll tell you where you got off. You're not going a step to town! I know your scheme; you're going to live with that man Denison—"

"Father!"

"Yes, I know you. You don't leave this house!"

Loading every sentence with rage and oaths, Van Tumbel seized a suitcase from the bed, dashed it to the floor, stamped on it.

"Now you go to town if you dare," he roared. "And if you leave this house today, never come back—if you do I'll kick you out. Get out of my sight, before I choke you!"

She hurried from the room and from the house.

What should she do? Escape was first in her thoughts, as she hurried up the hill trail. When she could partially collect her distracted senses, she had wandered well into the hills. She threw herself on the ground and tried to think.

She never knew how long she was there. But shadows were lengthening when she rose. She was hungry. There was nothing to do but go down and get something to eat; then, if she could keep out of sight of her father, to start for town.

She walked to the house in fear. But she reached the kitchen without seeing her father. Quong gave her dinner. He told her her father had gone to the Reservation. Afraid that her father would return before she could get away, Jane started for the corral. Bull Page was fastening the gate when Jane walked up to him. "I must go to town, Bull. I want a horse."

"It's again orders, Miss Jane, to let a horse out for you. Gus is a rarin' mad for some cause."

"I know, Bull. He's angry at me. I can't help it."

Bull scratched his head. "His orders are dead agin lettin' a horse go out."

"No matter, Bull. Never mind." She started to walk away. "What you goin' to do, Missy Jane?"

She turned with a sorry smile. "Guess I'll have to walk. Good-bye."

"Hold on!" he called, hobbling after her. "Hold on! You ain't goin' to walk!"

"Bull, I don't want to make trouble for you. I'll walk."

"Trouble be damned. I've seen Gus mad before—he'll get over it. I'm goin' to saddle a horse."

Jane hesitated. But, dragged out as she was by excitement and worry, she doubted whether she could make town on foot. She surrendered and climbed onto the horse he had saddled.

"Bull," she said, "why do you take all this trouble for me?"

"Why, I'd do anythin' in the world for you, Missy Jane. You're the one person on Gunlock that treats old Bill like a man an' not like a dog. Why, if I up 'n' just died for you, it wouldn't be too much."

"Good-bye, Bull."

"So long, Missy Jane."

A dispute with the agent on the Reservation over a cattle delivery held Van Tumbel at Flambeau until late, Bull Page unsaddled and put Van Tumbel's horse into the corral.

"Where's Jane's pony?" Van Tumbel demanded.

"Why, I guess she's out with it," Gus suggested Bull.

Van Tumbel stared up. "Didn't I give you and everybody else orders not to let her take a horse till I gave permission?"

"Say It" With Frilly, Lacy Neckwear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

YES, indeed, fashion is in an utterly feminine romancing mood this spring. Hats gay with ribbons and flowers and laces, suits prettified with the daintiest frilliest lingerie blouses worn for years, dresses of prints so flowery and multi-colored as to dazzle the eye and that which is a sure sign of the return of romanticism in the mode—the revival of the laciest, the daintiest, the most adorable fluffy-ruffle neckwear and dainty snowy lingerie touches that even the wildest flights of one's imagination might ere devise.

And now that we know that frilly, ultra-feminine neckline and wrist-line fantasies are going to be the very thing let's look up some of the entrancing things which shops are showing this season. The group pictured is typical of the many charming, flattering jabots, collar-and-cuff sets and "bibbs" that smart women are wearing to give an extra spring-like touch to their tailored silk and their cheer wool dresses.

In the first place there's nothing smarter than finely pleated laces for neckwear. The good-looking collar and cuff set that gives so keen a fashion touch to the simple crepe frock worn by the young woman standing below to the left in the picture is of a rather heavy lace in a dark shade of ecru. The V-shaped collar is extremely flattering and together with its wide cuffs makes a "picture." With this lace three-piece you can give infinite variety to a winter-wear wardrobe or it will enhance your newest frock to a glamorous degree.

See to the right above in the group Claudette Colbert wearing a stunning collar made of an interesting silk-drawn novelty lace fluted row upon row as you see. This actress favors a combination of the collar in Peter Pan effect, the jabot at the front and a tiny bow of dark plain material to match her lovely dress.

An entirely different type of lacy neckwear is the "bib" or yoke effect pictured left above. It is one of those exquisitely fine and beautiful accessories that you can wear with your very best gown in most ladylike fashion. The lace is a choice Alencon type with insets of hand-embroidered batiste as delicately sheer as chiffon. The lace is cut in a square with a circular ruffle following the square outline of the bib.

Above to the right lavish embroidery edged with dainty val lace adds charm to a band collar with its tiered ruffles of permanent Swiss organdie beautifully flower-embroidered. Fine as a cobweb, this imported organdie is decidedly practical in spite of its fragile look.

Bows, too, are going to be worn a lot this season. In fact snowy, lacy-lingerie accents are registering for a tremendous vogue, be they collars, cuffs, dainty gilets with waistcoat belts that button around the waist, "bibbs," jabots or any accessory item made of lace, of Swiss organdie of washable mousseline de soie or of any delicate sheer and these will carry a wealth of embroidery or hand stitching in many instances. The new bows now showing in endless variety are cunning on tailored dresses. If they are not of mousseline or organdie with lace edgings then they are apt to be entirely of heavy laces like Cluny or Irish.

SMART FOR SPRING

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Capes, capes and more capes, thus does the parade of spring suits announce a vogue of tremendous importance this season. Even if you buy a jacket and skirt suit you are supposed to buy a stylish smartly tailored wool cape to wear over it. The new ensembles are that way—skirt, plus jacket, plus cape. The one shown here is of a stunning black wool fabric for skirt and cape with jacket of black and white loosely woven worsted. The scarf is coral colored.

SAILOR HATS AND TURBANS IN STYLE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Where there's new fashions there's always new thrills. Just about the most exciting thrills registering on the little sailor hats and turbans that are made of bizarre plaid or stripe crepes or taffeta silk. These are the sort that the moment you see them you make up your mind in a flash that your happiness depends on acquiring just such a chapau. The sailors are covered as smooth as glass with the striped silk (or the plaid) with perhaps a little whirligig of ribbon for a finish or a rakish wee feather; and then as if that is not enough to entice you, more than likely a matching scarf adds to the allure, or if not a scarf, one of the new romantic gypsy sashes that ties so nonchalantly about waistlines these days. Cast your plainest dark crepe frock under the witchery of these plaid or striped silk accessories and it will take on untold glory and glamor.

Tunic Dresses Are Worn for Daytime and Evening

Mainboucher, who first launched the tunic dress, makes use of them for every occasion in his winter collection.

One of the new Mainboucher tunic dresses is in black wool crepe. The top, which ends in a flaring basque at the hip, has been caught into a diamond-shaped pattern which is studded with brilliants. The skirt is of plain wool crepe.

Outstanding is a black satin tunic evening gown which comes to the knees in front but extends downward in back to form a train. The underskirt is black tulle, gathered very full.

OF INTEREST TO THE HOUSEWIFE

Salmon in Rice Nests—Two cups of rich cream sauce, one egg yolk, two teaspoons lemon juice, one pound can salmon, one sn all can mushrooms, one cup rice, two hard cooked eggs. Beat egg yolks slightly and add to the hot cream sauce with the lemon juice. Add the salmon and the sliced mushrooms and heat thoroughly. Boil the rice, drain and form in mounds on plates; then make depression in mounds to form nests. Fill with salmon mixture. Cut hard cooked eggs in quarters lengthwise and garnish each serving with one.

Protecting Buttonholes—A row of machine-sewing around button holes in knit underwear prevents stretching and makes them last longer.

New Hot-Water Bottles—Have a little glycerine added to the water with which hot-water bottles are filled for the first time. This will make the rubber supple, and the bottle will last longer.

For Steamed or Boiled Puddings—Puddings will not stick to the basin if two strips of proof paper are put crosswise in the basin before the mixture is poured in.

Removing Stains on Hands—Vegetable stains can be removed from the hands by rubbing them with a slice of raw potato.

Frying Eggs—Eggs are less liable to break or stick to the pan if a little flour is added to the frying fat.

Boiling Old Potatoes—Old potatoes sometimes turn black during boiling. To prevent this add a squeeze of lemon juice to the water in which they are boiled.

Preparing Salted Nuts—Here is an ideal manner in which to prepare your salted nuts at home: Take blanched nuts, salt and oil. Sprinkle nuts very lightly with oil, using not more than one teaspoon to one cup of nuts. Spread in one layer in a baking pan and brown delicately in a moderately hot oven—375 degrees—stirring occasionally that they may color evenly. Sprinkle with salt after removing from the oven, and spread on crumpled glazed paper to absorb any surface oil.

Shrink the Cord—When loose covers for chairs, etc., are being made, boil the piping cord before using. This little precaution prevents unsightly puckers after the cover is washed.

Congressional Reflections

Washington, D. C. April 22, 1937. Visitors from New Mexico chose Washington's most beautiful season to come visiting; Cherry Blossom time is Washington's and the Nation's greatest pride. Literally hundreds of thousands of tourists came to admire the beautiful blossoms. New Mexico has sent her share of visitors, some of these combining business with pleasure.

Former Governor A. T. Hannett and Judge David Chavez Jr. are here representing the Interstate Stream Commission and the State of New Mexico in the hearings before the Interior Department involving the proposed revision of the Boulder Dam contract. The matter is of vital importance to the State of New Mexico. As a member of the Colorado River compact such New Mexico projects as are connected with the Colorado River Basin would be seriously jeopardized in the event that the contracts are revised. For example the success of obtaining funds for the proposed transmountain diversion will depend more or less on whether the funds which are accumulating for the benefit of the Upper Basin States are used for the purposes as established under the contract and not diverted elsewhere for the exclusive use of the States of Arizona and California. Through the vigorous efforts of New Mexico officials the attitude of all the Upper Basin States has crystallized in deference of their combined rights, for it was at the solicitation of the New Mexico members of the Commission that the other upper Basin States sent representatives to join this protest. The State of New Mexico will not be content to stand idly by and see her rights as established by the compact invalidated. The entire State is aroused, Governor Clyde Tingley in a conference shortly before Mr. Hannett and Mr. Chavez left for Washington discussed the entire program and gave his official backing for this stand. The combined Congressional Delegations of the Upper Basin States are united in opposition to any proposals affecting their rights. Senator Chavez and Senator Hatch both are attending the hearings in Secretary Ickes' office.

John E. Miles, Chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, Charles E. Roehl, State Park Commissioner, and Concha Ortiz y Pino comprised the party that accompanied Governor Hannett and Judge Chavez. State Park Commissioner, Roehl, since coming to Washington has done nothing but admire the gorge us display of flowers and blossoms, but those of us who have seen the dahlia beds at the Governor's Mansion in Santa Fe are of the opinion that Mr. Roehl need take his hat off to no one.

Other visitors to Washington this week are John Chapman of Santa Fe, N. B. Phillips, Secretary of the Elephant Butte Irrigation District and Roland Harwell, President of the Elephant Butte Irrigation District.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Comrey were in from their Capitan ranch buying supplies last Tuesday. Mr. Comrey was quite ill the greater part of the winter, but with the coming of spring he has improved very much and hopes to be entirely recovered before many weeks.

Rules For Smokers

As a general rule, fires caused by smokers are second in number to lighting fires in Arizona and New Mexico. Of course lighting fires are inevitable and the only thing that can be done is to get to them and put them out before they have a chance to spread.

Smokers fires are a different proposition and are liable to break out any place at any time. This type of fire can be prevented, however, if smokers will remember three simple rules:

- 1. Be sure your match is out. Break it in two before you throw it away.
- 2. Never throw a cigarette out of an Automobile.
- 3. When smoking in or near vegetation of any type, stop, clear a place, sit down and smoke, be sure your cigarette is out before you get up and leave.

Wide Interest In Road
The dream of a great international highway from El Paso and Juarez to Mexico City is approaching reality, a group of El Pasoans became convinced on a weekend motor trip to Chihuahua City.
Wide interest was found by the El Pasoans in the Good Roads Convention to be held in Chihuahua City May 15 to promote interest in the highway project.
Governor Talamantes of Chihuahua and his administration are pledged to seek early completion of the Juarez-Chihuahua City link in the highway.— Herald Post.

Spring Driving Hints

Winter is always hard on a car. Often it must be left standing for hours in the cold. Frost, snow, and dirt are part of its winter diet. In order to put the car into shape for the most pleasurable spring and summer driving, several things should be done.

The radiator should be drained and flushed in order to insure a clear flow of water through the cooling system. Motor oil should be changed and new lubricants supplied all around. The carburetor and fuel system ought to be checked carefully for warmer weather. Brakes should be tested, and particular care should be given to the steering apparatus. In most cases, simple adjustments will be all that is required to put them in perfect running order. The importance of brakes and steering gear, however, makes it mandatory that they be checked before being subjected to any hard driving.

In routine city driving, minor adjustments may go unnoticed or may be neglected. Often these adjustments remain unnoticed until the car is called upon to work at full power over long periods. Then they may develop into conditions that necessitate repair expense that could have been avoided.

Good tires are among the most important equipment of an automobile, for consideration of both safety and comfort in driving. All tools and emergency equipment should be checked carefully. All lights should be tested, and headlamp beams properly adjusted.

New windshield wiper blades are inexpensive, and old blades should be replaced if worn after a hard winter's use. The body should be thoroughly cleaned and polished to revive the beauty of its luster.

A motor tune-up is one of the best precautionary measures that the motorist can take in the spring. The battery should be checked carefully, and the generator charging rate adjusted for long-distance running at good speeds. Shock absorbers may also need adjusting, and a thorough greasing of the chassis will add much to the pleasure of driving.

The fan belt, which is not called upon to carry much of a load during routine city driving, should be checked and adjusted to function properly on longer and faster runs. Body bolts, door hinges, and latches must be oiled and tightened to eliminate the squeaks and rattles that sometimes develop during the rough winter season.

These are a few suggestions to drivers who will soon feel the call of the open road. If they are followed, the motorist will find his spring driving much pleasanter.

1937 Ford V-8

● If you think that "all low-price cars cost about the same" — forget it! They don't.

Ford makes a car — a 60-horsepower economy Ford V-8 — that sells from 30 to 60 dollars under the prices asked for any other car of comparable size. The lowest Ford prices in years!

Check delivered prices in your town and see for yourself.

● Of course, first cost doesn't prove "low cost" — you must consider operating cost also.

The "60" has definitely established itself as the most economical car in Ford history. Ford cars have been famous for economy for 34 years, so that means something!

Owners who have driven it thousands of miles report that the Ford "60" averages between 22 and 27 miles on a gallon of gasoline.

You can prove those figures — on the open road — in a car provided by the nearest Ford dealer.

● When you've finished your personal check-up, ask yourself:

"Do I want to save money the day I buy my car and every mile I drive it?"

"Do I want a safe, roomy, comfortable car of advanced design — created from the finest materials to the highest precision standards?"

There's only one answer, of course — the 1937 Ford V-8.

Ford V-8 $529 at Southern Factory. Transportation charges. State and Federal taxes extra. This price is for the 60-horsepower Coupe equipped with front and rear bumpers, spare tire, horn, windshield wiper, sun visor, glove compartment, and ash tray.

$25 A MONTH, after 25¢ usual down-payment, buy any Ford V-8 Car, from any Ford dealer, anywhere in the U. S. — through Authorized Ford Finance Plans of Universal Credit Co.

STATES HAVE OPPORTUNITY TO SHOW WARES IN HUGE BUILDING AT NEW YORK FAIR

NEW YORK. (Special).—Included in the limited edition book of unusual size and beauty which the New York World's Fair 1939 Incorporated has sent to state governors and, through diplomatic channels, to foreign governments, is the following text devoted to:

The Sovereign States of the Federal Union

George Washington, in declaring that the public felicity and prosperity of America depend upon the firm union and the unceasing cooperation of the sovereign American States, divined the future. The prosperity and the greatness of these United States have arisen from the free and unimpeded circulation of ideas and products in the world's greatest consumer market.

The Fair gives to each State the appropriate setting and opportunity to announce to the world its unique and indispensable contribution to America's rich and colorful civilization. The Fair contemplates a Hall of States, in the imposing Government group and flanking the structure which the Fair looks to the United States to build, to house the exhibits of the forty-eight States, and the Territories. Those wishing to participate more extensively will, in addition to their exhibits in the Hall of States, either erect their own buildings or obtain space to display their products and attractions in one or more of the exhibit zones.

The State of New York has naturally taken the leadership in the participation of the sovereign States of the Federal Union. Its total appropriations for Fair purposes may exceed $5,000,000; and the New York State World's Fair Commission, appointed by the Governor, has been active for some time. Other States already are beginning to express enthusiastic interest in participating more extensively than at previous world's fairs. The many visitors will find a fresh cause for pride and enthusiasm in the revealing exhibits of their respective States. But beyond this, the exhibits will enable the States to make a persuasive presentation to all visitors of what they have to offer to the consumer and to the tourist.

No Strike Expected by S.P.

"Notwithstanding strike notices received, the company does not expect a strike," said President A. D. McDonald of the Southern Pacific, commenting on the notices served by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen that their members will strike at 6 p. m., Friday, April 16, 1937.

"The controversial questions at issue have arisen primarily out of the failure of the four Train Service organizations to agree among themselves upon certain jurisdictional matters, namely, the method of securing interpretations as to the intent of certain rules in each other's agreements. There is no real dispute between the railroad and the Brotherhoods with respect to existing agreements. The railroad company is caught between two contending forces and cannot satisfy both of them. The matter cannot be settled except through operation of the provisions of the Railway Labor Act.

"Under the provisions of the Railway Labor Act the President of the United States may, when interruption of interstate commerce is seriously threatened, create an emergency board to investigate the matter. If the President so acts, the Railway Labor Act provides that the emergency board shall make report within 30 days from the date of its creation, and that for 30 days after the emergency board has made its report no change shall be made by the parties to the controversy in the conditions out of which the dispute arose. As the efforts of the Mediation Board to bring about an amicable settlement through mediation or arbitration have failed, and as two of the four train service brotherhoods have actually served strike notices, it is expected that the President, under the powers expressly given him by the Railway Labor Act, will promptly create an emergency board, and that during the 60 day period mentioned, or later, means will be found to settle the matter and avoid any interruption of service. Such emergency board recommendations in the past have always formed a basis for amicable settlements."

Improved Billing System

A new and improved method of issuing telephone bills will be introduced in Carrizozo in the near future, according to an announcement made today by George T. McQuillen manager of The Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company here.

Under the present practice of issuing bills, all telephone statements for New Mexico are issued on the first of each month. A distribution of billing will now be made so that bills will be issued throughout the month in six equal groups. Each subscriber will receive but one bill a month after the new plan is effective, but mailing will be on a different date than formerly.

There will be no change in the regular May 1 bill but the next statement received by subscribers will introduce the new arrangement.

"The adoption of the new plan, known as Rotation Billing, will enable us to provide better service to our customers," Mr. McQuillen explained.

"For example, under the present practice, with all bills issued on the 1st of the month, charges for long distance calls are included only up to the 21st of the preceding month. The new plan will permit the inclusion of all charges and credits up to the date of the bill. The appearance of the bill itself also will be improved."

The change to the new plan in Carrizozo will be made May 21, when a bill will be issued bringing all charges and credits up to date.

The May 21 bill will cover charges and credits for somewhat less than a normal period but each bill thereafter, dated the 21st of each month will cover normal charges for a month's local service and a month's long distance charges.

Actual mailing of bills will be

UNCOMMON AMERICANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

Founder of the Chautauqua
THERE was a time when the chautauqua was "next only to the public school system in bringing to the masses of people some share of their inheritance in the world's great creations in art and literature." It was literally the "university of the people" and it was the creation of a man who did not himself have a college education.

He was John Heyl Vincent, born in Alabama in 1832 of a line of Pennsylvanians who moved back to that state soon after John was born. Educated at Wesleyan Institute in Newark, N. J., he began to preach at the age of eighteen and later was ordained into the Methodist ministry. Transferred to the Rock River, Ill., conference in 1857 he became the pastor of a church at Galena, Ill., where one of his parishioners was a quiet little ex captain of the army named Ulysses S. Grant.

After a trip to the old world Vincent was elected general agent of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday School Union in 1866 and two years later corresponding secretary of the Sunday School Union and Tract Society in New York. In these offices he did more than any other man to shape the International Uniform and a School Lesson system.

In 1874 Vincent and Lewis Miller founded a summer assembly on Chautauqua Lake, N. Y., for the training of Sunday school teachers and in 1878 the Chautauqua Literary and Scientific Circle was instituted, providing a system of popular education through home reading and study. The next year the first of the summer schools was organized and these developed rapidly.

In speaking of his work at Chautauqua Bishop Vincent said, "I do not expect to make a second Harvard or Yale out of Chautauqua, but I do want to give the people of this generation such a taste of what it is to be intelligent that they will see to it that their children have the best education the country can give."

How well he succeeded in doing that is shown by the extension of the idea to the summer schools of colleges and universities, the summer assemblies, conferences and training schools of the various religious and secular organizations and the summer courses of lectures and entertainments which made the word "Chautauqua" a common noun. It is also shown by the declaration of Theodore Roosevelt that "Chautauqua is the most American thing in America."

Camera Man

WITH telephoto lens to aid them in getting long distance "shots" and high-speed film to record the scene even when the light is poor, it's not so difficult for the camera man of today to "cover" a modern war. But it was very different when the first camera man who ever "covered" a war went into the field to do his job.

His name was Matthew Brady, the son of Irish immigrants to New York state, who was engaged in the trade of making jewel and instrument cases when he became interested in the art of daguerreotypy soon after it was introduced into this country in 1839. The man who brought it here was Samuel Finley Breese Morse, a painter, (later famous as the inventor of the telegraph).

Brady learned his first lessons from Morse and learned them so well that by 1853 he was this nation's outstanding photographer. When the War Between the States opened he was both famous and wealthy and he could have lived a life of ease on his income. Instead he chose a career of privation and danger on the battlefields.

Brady fitted up a canvas-covered wagon to carry his equipment and to serve as his dark room in the field. In it he had to make his own emulsion to coat the large glass plates that were his negatives, for the convenient film roll had not yet been thought of.

His wagon became a familiar sight to all the armies. It plowed through muddy roads, it was ferried over rivers in constant danger of being dumped overboard and all his precious equipment lost. But fortunately for posterity Brady came safely through all these dangers and the United States government now owns a collection of his negatives, which are priceless records of one of the greatest tragedies in our history. It is also the symbol of a tragic career. After the war was over Brady found himself in financial difficulties. His negatives were sold to pay a storage bill and in 1874 the government acquired them by paying the charges of $2,640. Brady did not benefit by the deal but later—much later—the government did give him $23,000 for the collection which was then valued at $150,000. In his later years Brady lost his pre-eminence as a photographer and he died in comparative poverty and obscurity in 1896.

Overcoming Tuberculosis

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

THE first thought in treating a patient is to learn just what is causing the symptoms. Sometimes the symptoms are not very severe or pronounced and the physician has to make a number of examinations before he feels certain of the nature of the trouble.

Thus a few years ago when a young adult complained of being tired all the time and losing weight, the physician would suspect tuberculosis or "consumption," as it was then called, but there might not be much in the way of other symptoms to guide him. There might be very little cough, no pain in the chest, no spitting of blood.

However, since the discovery of the valuable help that an X-ray of the chest can give, this method of examination is now used everywhere to prove or disprove the existence of a tuberculous spot or spots in the lung tissue.

Death Rate at Its Lowest. When we remember that some years ago a victim of tuberculosis was doomed just as was a victim of pernicious anemia and diabetes until quite recently, it is gratifying to know that the fight against tuberculosis is now successful. Thus during the past year the death rate from tuberculosis in North America is, the lowest it has ever been.

The treatment has not varied during the past thirty years; it consists of fresh air and sunshine, rest, and nourishing food. When the temperature keeps at normal, light exercise is given which is gradually increased up to five hours of light work daily.

Rest is the biggest factor in the treatment because every movement of the body means that a little more air must be breathed into the lungs and if the lungs are to heal they also must be resting, as much as possible.

Causes of Underweight.

When an individual is apparently going down hill physically, face pale, skin pallid or "dirty-looking," loss of strength, loss of weight, dislike for any mental or physical work, pains in joints and muscles, tongue pale, flabby and easily marked or indented by the teeth, then it is not hard to understand that something is certainly wrong in the body somewhere. If little red spots appear on the skin, first on the legs and later on other parts, which spots later become quite large as if blood were immediately under the skin, and swellings appear in the bend of the elbows and knees, the physician knows that he has a well developed case of scurvy to treat.

Scurvy, or scorbutus as it is called, is due to a lack of vitamin C in the food that is eaten and so fruit and vegetables containing this vitamin—canned or fresh—is the immediate treatment. These foods are oranges, lemons, combined with meat juice or the white of egg, later followed by other foods containing vitamin C, that is potatoes, watercress, raw cabbage, onions, carrots, turnips, tomatoes.

However, physicians have been realizing for some years now that there are other conditions in the body in which, though the symptoms are not so outstanding as in scurvy, are nevertheless due to a lack of some necessary mineral or vitamin in the foods eaten; at least not enough of these substances to fulfill the needs of this particular individual.

Thus a patient may be pale, lack strength, have little or no appetite, and an examination of the blood will show that anaemia—lack of iron—is present. Although the iron contained in all the cells of the body is only 1 part in 25,000 of the body weight, nevertheless every one of these tiny cells must have some iron in it if it is to do its work properly. The foods containing, or rich in, iron are meat (especially liver), egg yolk, leafy-vegetables—and peas, fresh and dried.

Another mineral that is often lacking, one which is needed for building bone and teeth, building nerve tissue and making the blood more "sticky" and thus helping the healing of sores, ulcers, and other skin conditions is calcium, or lime as it is usually called. The individual wonders why he feels so weak, lacks appetite, and has little resistance to ailments. The treatment here is the eating of foods that are rich in lime. The foods rich in lime are spinach, cauliflower, turnip, dried peas and beans, dates, figs, raisins, milk, cheese, egg-yolk.

It is surprising the way an increase in the foods containing iron and calcium, most of which are likewise rich in phosphorus also, increase the weight, appetite, and general health and strength of many "run-down" individuals.

If your constipation is of long standing, enormous quantities of dangerous bacteria accumulate. Then your digestion is upset. GAS often presses heart and lungs, making life miserable. Clue in Geography to Tooth Decay Found by Research

Effects of Latitude and Drinking Water

Baltimore.—Dentists seeking ways to prevent caries or tooth decay took a lesson in geography at the meeting here of the International Association for Dental Research.

Latitude, hardness of drinking water and nearness to mining regions all seem to have an effect on tooth decay, Dr. Clarence A. Mills, professor of experimental medicine at the University of Cincinnati, told the dentists.

The amount of tooth decay in American school children increases steadily throughout the United States as the distance from the tropics increases, Dr. Mills said. The increase is roughly 15 more decayed teeth per 100 children for each added degree of latitude, "or well over 200 per cent from Gulf to Canadian border."

Effects of Ultra-violet Light.
Dr. Mills explains this as being due to the decreased amount of ultra-violet light reaching inhabitants of the more northern latitudes. The only exception to the increase of tooth decay toward the north is found in the northern plains section, where the sunlight is more plentiful than in other northern regions of the country. The part played by ultra-violet light in stimulating development of strong bones and teeth has already been shown, Dr. Mills pointed out.

Hard water is good for the teeth, even though it makes dishwashing, laundering and other household chores more difficult and presents a serious problem to factories. Dr. Mills found almost 30 per cent more caries among the children of cities using river and lake water than among those using water from wells or springs, even though the mean latitude of the two groups was the same. The reason for this, he believes, is the degree of hardness of the water. His data show that caries diminishes as hardness increases. Animal studies have already shown that the calcium and magnesium supply in the drinking water and food affect bone and tooth formation and tooth decay.

Caries and Soil Leaching.
Another relation between geography and tooth decay is the finding that children living near the headwaters of a river have less caries than those living near the same river's mouth. This is probably related to soil leaching, Dr. Mills suggests.

A high caries rate is found in mining regions in Pennsylvania and on down the Ohio river. This may be accounted for by the millions of tons of sulphuric acid which seep each year from the mines into Pennsylvania streams and on down the Ohio. Besides corroding boilers, metal pipes and river craft, Dr. Mills believes this acid may lead to tooth decay in persons drinking the water. Sulphuric acid will liberate calcium from bones and teeth in large amounts, studies on lead poisoning treatment have shown. This point and a possible relation between amount of tooth decay and amount of oxidized sulphur from coal combustion in the air of smoky cities need to be investigated further, Dr. Mills suggested.

Children's Problems Solved by Study of Puppet Shows

New York.—Children's worries about love, marriage and even sex are being solved for a group of little patients at Bellevue hospital here by puppet shows. These puppet shows represent for children the problem plays which parents see on Broadway.

This use of puppet shows was described to members of the American Orthopsychiatric association meeting here by Dr. Lauretta Bender and Adolph Woltman of the psychiatric division of Bellevue hospital.

Just as the grown-up audience discusses the problem of John and Mary on the stage, the children discuss with each other and the psychiatrist the problems of the puppet characters. Through such discussion, by children or grown-ups, comes better understanding of their own problems. With a little help from the psychiatrist, the children are then able to find the best way out of their difficulties. The puppet shows are designed to include all the problems that worry children and keep them from growing up happily.

Intermarriage for Generations Doesn't Weaken the Stock

Results of Study of Japan Fishing Village

INTERMARRIAGE for several generations is popularly supposed to weaken the stock and produce a race or people physically and mentally degenerate. Evidence to the contrary appears in a report to the American Medical Association of a study of conditions in the small fishing village of Usuki on the coast of western Japan.

The inhabitants of this village have strictly kept the custom of intermarriage for hundreds of years. According to tradition the village was settled in 1605 by the descendants of a noble family forced to flee in a civil war. The biologic effect of intermarriage has been studied in the village since 1933 by Dr. Takeshi Ikemi. His findings are summarized in the following report:
"There are 135 families having 1,786 members in all (904 men and 882 women). They have never mingled with other villagers or townsmen except in business transactions; consequently their habits and customs are quite different from other Japanese."

Children Do Well at School.
"Although the children are not regular attendants at school, an investigation of the school records shows that they generally do well at school. Thus intermarriage never affected their intellectual faculties."

"Crime is rare. During the last ten years seven violated the fishing law, four injured others, four did some stealing, four broke the law of weights and measures, eight were charged with gambling, one cheated others, two were robbers, five interfered with government officials in the execution of their duty, and three other derelictions brought the total instances of malfeasance to thirty-eight. Judging from this, it may be affirmed that intermarriage does not bring about the degeneration of mental control."

Normally Healthy and Strong.
"The sanitary knowledge of the people is meager; they have epidemic diseases, such as dysentery and cholera, but there is fever any serious hereditary disease. Leprosy, syphilis and elephantiasis at present are not seen among them. Neither color blindness nor insanity occurs. The constitution of the people is strong and they are good wrestlers in spite of their taking very simple food. In the physical examination for conscription, these villagers have always ranked first, in that prefecture, with respect to health and constitution."

"Divorce is rare. The birth rate, in comparison to that of the two neighboring villages, shows that intermarriage does not affect the birth rate. Stillbirths are uncommon."

"There are now twenty-seven couples who married cousins." Information about the offspring of these couples shows that "when the excellent are married, no bad results are to be found."

225,000,000-Year-Old Reptile Bones Found in Texas

Cambridge, Mass.—A complete fossil specimen of a long-spined Dimetrodon, one of the earliest of reptiles and apparently the commonest animal on earth about 225 million years ago, has recently been brought to Harvard university by Robert Witter of the Museum of Comparative Zoology.

It was found in the "red beds" of northwestern Texas, which have previously yielded numerous skeletons of the early Permian period, of which the Dimetrodon was characteristic. This flesh-eating creature had its day and ceased to be, long before the rise of the dinosaurs.

Most spectacular feature of the eight-foot animal is a series of long, bony spines extending two feet upward from its back. There is evidence that in life these spines were connected by a web of skin to form a sort of sail along the middle of the back.

The function of this sail, if any, is still a scientific puzzle.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

WHEN a man goes after his collar button, a lady had better mind her frills and fripperies. Or they'll be scattered all over the place.

Of course it's quite the style among people who take their style very seriously for a husband and wife to have separate rooms. Which is all right if you can spare the space and want to preserve your mystery.

But there's a lot to be said for the sweet every-dayness of marriage. After all, some women look their best in their tangled moments, and some men are very debonair with their lather. So if by choice or necessity, you share a room with your spouse, the main recipe is to make it really joint in mood as well as fact.

That's not always so easy—at least from the looks of it—as most rooms of this kind are either too feminine or else they'll be positively clinical in their austerity. But one couple we know have succeeded in making their bedroom comfortable and becoming to both of them. It's rather a large room to begin with—and what's nicer than a spacious big bedroom? Sarah selected wall paper in very pale yellow with white flowers so that the effect is rather of an ivory or subtle neutral. The furniture is mahogany, with a massive old poster bed as the main piece. This has a firmly bodied crocheted spread in white, appropriate, decorative and yet "sittable," and the white is repeated in the curtains which are marquisette and made with seven inch ruffles that fall very softly. An easy chair for him and a chaise longue for her are both upholstered in cocoa brown moire. The rug is a misty patterned design in two shades of lightish green, and most of the accessories in the room are white. Sarah's dressing table has a simple white marquisette skirt with tailored bows of green and brown velvet ribbon tied together—bows like these also serve as tie backs for the curtains, and there aren't any draperies.

It's not a dramatic room—they didn't want it to be. But it has a substantial charm about it, and you can see at a glance that it's a room that both he and she enjoy living in. Which is what decorating is all about anyway.

Sociable Kitchens.
We are all up in arms when we hear anyone make a slurring remark about kitchens, or kitchen work for that matter. Because kitchens are pleasantly sociable if you give them half a chance. And if you don't believe us, read Dickens or Kathleen Norris for descriptions of gay kitchens.

It's fun to have impromptu parties in the kitchen—after-the-movie snacks . . . Sunday night suppers . . . old time candy pulls. They're very simple if you do a little thinking ahead. One problem is the matter of places to sit. If the kitchen is big enough, be sure to have at least one rocking chair. And benches that slide under the table between times are useful every day as well as for parties. If you need more table area than you have room for, have a shelf table on hinges along the wall that folds down when not in use.

Have festive ware for kitchen serving too—a very brilliant pottery tea set and cookie jar to match, or some of that spun aluminum and walnut buffet service ware is very good for kitchen entertaining.

An easy way to make the kitchen look more partitioned is to take the glass or wood doors off your cupboards, paint the insides as well as the shelves in some very bright color, and then repeat this bright color in oilcloth covers for the tables and pads for chairs.

Another notion we have is that a kitchen is more genial looking when the pots and pans are hanging up where you can see them. Certainly they're handier that way if they're near the stove.

NUTS, LEGUMES GIVE VITAMIN B

Combination Will Enhance Protein Value of Dish.

By EDITH M. BARBER

ALTHOUGH naturally we go to the animal kingdom for a large part of our supply of muscle-building food which is scientifically known as protein, the vegetable kingdom will also contribute to our daily needs. Nuts and vegetables, such as beans, peas and lentils, which are called legumes, supply us with liberal amounts of this important element in good nutrition. We also find worthwhile amounts in cereals.

Nuts are not unlike meat in content, because they are high in both protein and fat. They vary as far as their mineral content is concerned, as some are well supplied and others contain little. The legumes are higher in protein and lower in fat. Instead of the fat, they contribute carbohydrates. Both nuts and legumes have a high caloric value. The latter as well furnish important amounts of minerals. Both nuts and legumes will give us vitamin B. The addition of nuts to vegetable dishes will add protein and flavor.

Legumes used in such dishes as baked beans, split pea soup, black or white bean soup and in other ways make satisfying dishes.

Murmurings of Spring

"IF YOU'D take a few steps, Sis, I believe I'd be inspired to answer that question, 'Did you ever see a dream walking?' You are nothing less than devastating—truly a menace!"

"You meow so sweetly, Connie. I'm a bit suspicious that this little peplum frock of mine has got you caty. Your eyes really aren't green by rights, you know."

Connie Sews Her Own.
"How could you? I think my dress looks as nice on me as yours does on you. Why practically all of the girls at the Laf-a-Lot last night wanted to know where I found such a lovely frock. Not one of them guessed that I made it myself. And did I feel elegant when I played Mendelssohn's Spring Song on Diane's new baby grand! The girls said I fit into the picture perfectly. I thought if only Dwight could see me now."

"I still say my two-piece with its piped peplum, cute little buttons and stream-lines in the No. 1 spring outfit in this woman's town."

Mother Happens Along.
"Girls, girls, if your talk were only half as pretty as your frocks you'd be better off. Sometimes I wonder if you wouldn't be more appropriately titled The Check Twins, rather than The Chic Twins."

"Okay, Mother, you win. Let's change the subject by changing clothes. We'll put on our collotes and join you in a round of golf, how's that? Gee, Mother, you never look sweeter than when you're wearing a casual young two-piece shirt dress. The plaid pique is just the thing for you, too. In fact, Mom, you're just about tops from any angle."

ARE YOU Sleepless, Nervous?

Most women at some period of their lives need a tonic like Dr. Pease's Favorite Prescription. Mrs. J. Q. Adams of 166 Warren Ave., Rochester, Idaho, said: "I couldn't sleep well at night and everything seemed to get on my nerves. Head aches associated with functional disturbances made me very miserable. I used the 'Prescription' as a tonic, then I had a good appetite and felt improved in every way. Buy now!"

"FINEST, MOST ECONOMICAL CAR I'VE EVER DRIVEN"
Adds pleased owner of big,
roomy, extra-value Pontiac

All that kept this motorist from buying a Pontiac sooner was the belief that a car so big and beautiful must be very expensive as well. But a check of the facts revealed this truth: *based on 18 months terms in 168 representative cities, the difference in monthly payments between a

Pontiac DeLuxe six 2-door sedan and the same model of the next lower-priced cars is only 15 cents a day. That, you'll agree, is little enough to pay for more of everything worthwhile. If you, too, thought Pontiac an expensive car, see your Pontiac dealer. He can quickly prove that America's finest low-priced car is well within your means.

He can do more—he will show you with facts and figures that Pontiac is one of the most economical cars ever built!
