An Authority on The Courts

Our courts are the balance-wheel of our whole constitutional system; and ours is the only constitutional system so balanced and controlled. Other constitutional systems lack complete poise and certainty of operation because they lack the support and interpretation of authoritative, undisputable courts of laws.

It is clear beyond all need of exposition that for the definite maintenance of constitutional understandings it is indispensable, alike for the preservation of the individual and for the preservation of the integrity of the powers of the government, that there should be some non-political forum in which those understandings can be impartially debated and determined. That forum our courts supply. There the individual may assert his rights; there the government must accept definition of its authority. There the individual may challenge the legality of governmental action and have it judged by the test of fundamental principles, and that test the government must abide; there the government can check the too aggressive self-assertion of the individual and establish its power upon lines which all can comprehend and heed.

The constitutional powers of the courts constitute the ultimate safeguard alike of individual privilege and governmental prerogative. It is in this sense that our judiciary is the balance-wheel of our entire system; it is meant to maintain that nice adjustment between individual rights and governmental powers which constitutes political liberty. President Woodrow Wilson in "Constitutional Government in the United States."

Tucumcari Wins

The Carrizozo ball team took a very decisive trouncing at Tucumcari last Sunday, the score was 31 to 8. The boys don't feel a bit discouraged and promise to surprise the Utes on their return game here on July 18th.

San Antonio, the fast little team that defeated Carrizozo on their first encounter probably will be the one to cross bats here next Sunday.

Delicious barbecued meat at Burnett's Cash Grocery at 11:30 each day. Why swelter over the stove when you can get it already cooked?

Phillips 66 Storage Tanks

The Phillips 66 Petroleum Company bought land from Mrs. Nellie Branum just about one-fourth mile from the city limits on the left side of highway 380 and are building concrete abutments for their large, wholesale storage tanks which they will install right away. They consider Carrizozo the most central location for the territory they intend to serve.

CAPITAN ITEMS

We are glad to report that Mrs. Helen Sears, is back home now. She is recovering very nicely, from an operation which she underwent at El Paso recently. It is hoped she will soon be able to attend to her duties as Postmistress.

Jose Baca and Daniel L. Salazar were here from Lincoln Wednesday.

Juan Padilla is driving a new 1937 Chevrolet truck, he bought last week.

Mr. Seldon Burks, is again selling cars after being somewhat bothered with an attack of "spring fever". Atta Boy Burks.

Mr. "Bug" Merchant went to Carrizozo Wednesday of this week. He says, "Let it rain again." Yes, its getting dry otra vez.

The following cars have been delivered by the City Garage, Capitan, during the month of June; To R. D. Kingston, GMC pickup; L. R. Lamay, GMC pickup; Tittsworth Company, GMC pickup; Ike Brooks, Oldsmobile; Roy Frazier, Chevrolet sedan; Vera Mosier, Chevrolet Coach.

Rev. R. C. Lewis moved to Lovington, last week, and Mr. A. B. Scudday and family arrived Saturday from Broadview. Mr. Scudday is now in charge of the church services at the Nazarene church.

Today's Taxogram

One large source of government income is the automobile owner, probably on the theory that anyone who can afford a car has ample money to pay taxes. On the average the tax collector gets $48.24 direct taxes out of the use of the family car during the year. Since three out of four automobile owners in this country earn less than $40 a week, it is obvious that the bulk of these taxes are paid by people of modest means.

Preamble of the Constitution of The American Legion

For God and Country, We associate ourselves together for the following purposes: To uphold and defend the constitution of the United States of America; To maintain law and order; To foster and perpetuate a one hundred per cent Americanism; To preserve the memories and incidents of our associations in the Great War; To inculcate a sense of individual obligation to the community, state and nation; To combat the autocracy of both the classes and the masses; To make right the master of might; To promote peace and good will on earth; To safeguard and transmit to posterity the principles of Justice, Freedom and Democracy; To consecrate and sanctify our comradeship by our devotion to mutual helpfulness.

VIOLENCE and threats continued to break forth on the strike front as the battle between certain industries, particularly steel, and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization became more and more tense.

Nine men were shot and wounded at Anderson, Ind., as Homer Martin, president of the United Automobile Workers of America, a C. I. O. affiliate, stopped in the city to address a mass meeting. The wounded men, non-members of the union, claimed a member had opened fire upon them with a shotgun from a window in Union hall after an exchange of insults. Union members charged attempts had been made to injure the amplifying apparatus which was to carry Martin's words to the throng.

Martin was en route to Monroe, Mich., where 200 World War veterans had been deputized to prevent picketing of the Newton steel plant, controlled by Republic Steel, whose plants have borne the brunt of the C. I. O. campaigns in the last few weeks. The vigilantes, armed with shot-guns, rifles, revolvers and machine guns, were determined that the local Steel Workers Organizing Committee was not going to make good its threat to close the Newton plant with a mob of thousands of C. I. O. picketers from Detroit.

The Monroe deputies broke up a picket line and re-opened the plant to loyal employees, after that the local C. I. O. union made arrangements to import pickets from outside the city. Despite the impending trouble a battalion of Michigan national guardsmen, ordered to the scene by Gov. Frank Murphy, disbanded, leaving the task of maintaining the peace to the regular police force and deputies.

At the South Chicago plants of Youngstown and Inland 4,000 pickets were massed by C. I. O. leaders who anticipated that attempts would be made by independent unions to break through the lines keeping the plants closed. At Youngstown, Ohio, the city council thought it detected storm clouds of new strike violence and voted to allow Mayor Lionel Evans to hire and equip what additional emergency police he thought would be necessary. Labor unions in sympathy with C. I. O. threatened to retaliate by declaring a city-wide "labor holiday" or general strike. Unions in Canton, Ohio, did likewise.

CIO Starts at Bottom

JOHN L. LEWIS aimed another blow at steel through the United Mine Workers, of which he is president. Workers in the captive mines (mines operated by an individual steel concern which is the sole user of the coal brought to the surface) in Pennsylvania walked out of the shafts and joined the steel picket lines. The purpose was to cripple further the steel plants now shut down or operating under difficulties while picketed; the immediate objective was the closing of the Cambria plant at Bethlehem Steel. The effectiveness of the walkout was a matter for dispute; plant officials claimed all departments were in operation.

Court Plan Walloped

THE senate judiciary committee made short work of President Roosevelt's Supreme court packing plan. Its report, in summary: "We recommend the rejection of this bill as a needless, futile, and utterly dangerous abandonment of constitutional principle. "It was presented to the congress in a most intricate form and for reasons that obscured its real purpose. "It would not banish age from the bench nor abolish divided decisions. "It would not affect the power of any court to hold laws unconstitutional, nor withdraw from any judge the authority to issue injunctions.

"It would not reduce the expense of litigation nor speed the decision of cases.

"It is a proposal without precedent and without justification.

"It would subjugate the courts to the will of congress and the President and thereby destroy the independence of the judiciary, the only certain shield of individual rights.

"It contains the germ of a system of centralized administration of law that would enable an executive so minded to send his judges into every judicial district in the land to sit in judgment on controversies between government and citizens.

"It points the way to the evasion of the Constitution and establishes the method whereby the people may be deprived of their right to pass upon all amendments of the fundamental law.

"It stands now before the country, acknowledged by its proponents as a plan to force judicial interpretation of the Constitution, a proposal that violates every sacred tradition of American democracy.

"Under the form of the Constitution it seeks to do that which is unconstitutional.

"Its ultimate operation would be to make this government one of men rather than one of law, and its practical operation would be to make the Constitution what the executive or legislative branches of the government choose to say it is—an interpretation to be changed with each change of administration.

"It is a measure which should be so emphatically rejected that its parallel will never again be presented to the free representatives of the free people of America."

Harry Losos 1st Round

DESPITE the pleas of Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, the full senate appropriation committee approved the Byrnes amendment to the relief bill, 13 to 10. The amendment to the $1,500,000,000 bill requires local governments to pay at least 40 per cent of the cost of all WPA projects, or else sign a kind of civic "pauper's oath." The South Carolina senator's amendment was seen as further evidence of the break between the administration and the conservative Democrats. The South, especially, has been voicing its insistence upon states' rights as opposed to all-powerful central government as advocated by the New Deal, and the relief bill amendment was seen as a case in point. Hopkins had argued that compelling states to contribute 40 per cent of the cost of WPA projects would virtually eliminate such federal projects in the South. It was believed that this may be what the southern senators want; they claim that the payment of $12 a week to negroes cut down their labor pool and they want to get the negro workers back into the cotton fields.

Capital on the Move

THE Spanish loyalist government, after another terrific bombing of the city by insurgent airplanes of the German Junkers and Heinkel types, decided to move the capital from Bilbao to Santander, but to defend Bilbao to the death. The Basque battalions reorganized for a last ditch stand to protect the broken "iron ring" of the city's defenses from the forces of General Francisco Franco. The latter, it was admitted, already had penetrated the first line of fortifications near Pica and Larrabezua, five miles to the east. Several persons were killed and many houses destroyed by the rebel bombs and machine guns. Meanwhile the loyalists were claiming important advances along the Cordoba front.

Social Justice for Ford

FATHER COUGHLIN, Detroit's radio priest, refused to confirm or deny that he was entering the field of labor organization by sponsoring the new union which has sprung up at the Ford plant in opposition to C. I. O. efforts. The union is called the Workers' Council for Social Justice, and incorporates the principles of Father Coughlin's National Union for Social Justice. U. A. W. A. leaders, also attempting to organize the 90,000 men in the River Rouge plant, denounced the newcomer as a "company union."

Patrolling Powers Agree

ABOUT the same time, the diplomats of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany were signing an agreement which brought the latter two back into the International Non-Intervention committee. It has to be accepted by both factions in the Spanish fight before becoming effective. The understanding is that the two Spanish powers will be requested to extend the safety zones in Spanish ports and pledge to do their best to prevent incidents. It was agreed that each commander of the patrolling powers should have the right to immediate self defense if he were attacked, but that he must not begin any retaliation before the four powers have had an opportunity to confer and decide what action is best.

Great satisfaction over the outcome of the conference was indicated in Rome, with the newspapers expressing a friendlier attitude toward Great Britain than they had in weeks. Chief trouble was that until both Spanish forces agree, the Spanish coast remained open to gun-runners.

We're in the Money!

IF YOU don't think things are picking up, maybe the United States Department of Commerce can convince you. It has just reported the national income for 1936 reached a total of $62,056,000,000, and officials predicted that the figure for 1937 would reach $70,000,000,000. The all-time high was $78,632,000,000 in the dizzy boom year of 1929, and the all-time low $44,940,000,000 in 1933.

The department's report said that since 1933 the national income has risen more swiftly than prices and that the real purchasing power of individuals was much larger. Income, it said, increased 38 per cent from 1933 to 1936, while the cost of living advanced 8 per cent. The per capita income of employees last year was listed at $1,244, which was $50 more than in the preceding year and 83.4 per cent of the figure for 1929.

Reds Rub Out 8

EIGHT Soviet Russian generals, including Marshal Mikhail Tukhachevsky, former vice commissar of defense, learned the wrath of the Kremlin. Condemned for treason, they were led before a firing squad and killed, by order of the military tribunal of the Soviet supreme court. The court only the day before had declared them guilty of conspiring with the military intelligence service of an "unfriendly" foreign power. Although the "unfriendly" power was never named by officials, correspondents in Moscow declared indications were unmistakable that Red leaders believe the power was Nazi Germany.

Most of the Russian capital was virtually certain that the eight, who had been denied appeal, had been put to death for an ambitious plot to rob the Soviet of its western provinces and turn them over to Germany.

U. S. A. for Rebel Parson

REV. R. ANDERSON JARDINE, a pucky little minister who defied the archbishop of Canterbury and endeared himself to millions by giving to the Duke of Windsor and Wallis Warfield the religious marriage ceremony of the Church of England despite the fact that the church forbade it, has quit his job.

The "poor man's parson" whose surprise move skyrocketed him from obscurity to international fame resigned as vicar of St. Paul's church in Dorlington, England. Although he had returned from France, where he married modern history's most romantic figures, only a few days before, he declared his latest act had "nothing to do with events which have taken place lately." The London Daily Mirror reported that the former vicar plans a two-month vacation lecturing and preaching in the United States and will visit an uncle, Sen. W. D. Rogers, in Coronado, Calif.

They DO Come Back

FOUR years ago a hucky young professional golfer named Ralph Guldahl stood on the final green of the United States National Open championship golf tournament, needing to sink an easy four-foot putt to tie Johnny Goodman for the title. He missed, and quit golf to sell automobiles.

Last year his love of the game overtook him and he decided upon one more try. He came back with a vengeance, cleaning up most of the money in the winter tournaments. He climaxed his return to form by winning golf's most coveted title, that of national open champion, at Oakland Hills country club, Birmingham, Mich., in the 1937 meet just closed. His score of 281 for 72 holes was an all-time record for open competition.

Silk Prints, Jackets and Big Brims

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

HERE'S giving you a very proper formula for smart spectator sports costumes to wear these summer days. The combination runs thusly—stunning silk print for the dress which must have a jacket, cape or coat of the same or of some other plain silk related to the ensemble, with matching print silk details, to which add headgear that makes a wide brim appear at its widest. The fuss and furor being made over gay prints and wide brims is on the increase as summer advances.

The vogue started early in the season, at which time fashions at the Belmont racetrack set the pace for a colorful and luxurious summer costume program, that highlights silk prints in unmistakable terms. Then, too, the emphasis placed on big brims is becoming more and more apparent as fashions take a definite stand.

At outdoor events fashionables are adopting this formula of silk print costume plus a huge brim with greatest enthusiasm. Noteworthy among high-style gestures is the topping of one's print dress with a tippet or a cape or a jacket of silk bengaline. The revival of bengaline is big news in the fabric realm, and it's good news for bengaline is so dependably wearable and has an air of gentility about it that ever appeals to discriminating taste.

In assembling your costume to be worn in the grandstand or to view what's going on from the club verandah the big thought to keep in mind is the importance that fashion attaches to matching or related jackets or coats or caps if your taste runs in the modern. If you like to do things a bit "modern" you will see to it that your dress be monochrome with your coat or cape or jacket done in spectacular print. The swank outfit to the left in the picture tells the story more dramatically than words. In this instance it is the coat that is of gay jockey plaid linen-like silk that tops a simple monochrome sports frock. This type is a "last word" fashion in coats that are worn over either black or beige crepe dresses. The huge stitched silk cartwheel that completes this costume gives perfect style accent. Speaking of hats that are styled of silk, the most recent millinery collections feature them, particularly wide-brimmed types that are tailored of black or navy taffeta. A hat of this kind is considered good style worn with either the daytime tailleur or with the summery lacy lingerie frock. The costume centered in the group makes twin print its fabric theme. It also stresses the voguish redingote silhouette. Royal rose printed silk crepe is used for the dress with printed silk chiffon for the sheer redingote that is worn over it. The redingote as here shown has a border of the silk crepe, thus bringing the costume into a perfect unit.

The idea of a jacket of contrasting material that is lined with the print that fashions the dress is nicely carried out in the costume illustrated to the right. The dress is of acaju silk crepon printed in powder blue. The jacket worn with it is of flannel identical to the blue in the print. It is lined with matching print. Note the large Spanish sailor brim and velvet bow on the hat.

If you favor the very smart red-and-white color scheme we would suggest a redingote of wine and white printed silk chiffon banded with a matching silk print of the same fabric as the dress. Wear with this charming redingote ensemble a white toyo sports hat trimmed with a wide wine colored band. Shoes and bag of wine colored gabardine together with gloves in matching wine tone will add infinite distinction.

BOLERO EFFECT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Rivalling the princess style in popularity in children's fashions is the dress with a bolero or at least with a bolero effect. The idea of a bolero is really a peasant trend, such as is wielding a widespread influence throughout juvenile styles this season. The cunning white pique frock pictured has a simulated bolero typical of the Dalmatian dress. Wee brass buttons go down the front and there is a dash of gay embroidery at each side of the front done in red, blue and yellow. The typical peasantlike pillbox hat sports a streamer tassel of pompoms repeating the color of the embroidery on the dress.

ROMANTIC MOOD IS KEYNOTE OF SEASON

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For the very formal evening gown the romantic mood is the keynote of the season. Crisp silk mousselines, silk nets and silk marquisettes or stiff silk tullestas make gowns with yards and yards of skirt fullness swirling and billowing about the ankles. Some are stiffened with cording like "Southern Belle" hoop skirts, others use several layers of the silks in contrasting or matching colors to give the bouffant effect. Exotic striped sheers over plain silk foundations sometimes have huge ruffles of self fabric around the hem to accent the width of the skirt.

There's romance in daytime clothes, too. Frills and furbelows in the way of ribbon-bow trimmings and neckwear, also blouses of the sheer face-trimmed fluff-ruffle type add the feminine touch. As to romance in hats there's plenty of it in the way of large leghorn capelines, many having long ribbon streamers for dressy wear, while for wear with tailored suits there are immense black or navy leghorns that are banded with ribbon tying in a sprightly little bow.

New Evening Frocks Are Beau Catchers for Fair

The new evening frocks are regular beau catchers, and the dance floor looks just like a garden filled with beautiful, ethereal blossoms. Full-skirted frocks of chiffon or lace with matching, long capes, complete with dainty hoods, are selling fast. But they should be worn only by the very young woman. Then there is the marquisette dress and bolero, with short, high, puffed sleeves. This comes in delicate blue or rose and has the bottom of its full skirt strewn with tiny velvet forget-me-not clusters.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Summer Influenza.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—I. This favored land we are now starting to celebrate the customary seasonal rite of having our summer influenza.

Summer influenza is distinguished from winter influenza by the fact that the former does not set in until September, thereby providing intervals for spring and fall to slip in between.

The symptoms remain practically the same. The eyes water copiously, but the nose runs second. The head stops up thoroughly, thus providing proof of the fallacy of the old adage—all sinus fall in dry weather. The patient barks like a trained seal, but the difference here is that the seal stops barking if you toss him a hunk of raw fish.

One could go on at length, but it's difficult to continue a writing job when you're using a nasal inhalant to punctuate with and have a taste in your mouth like moth balls smothered in creosote dressing.

The Art of Cussing.

MY OLD chum Burgess Johnson, once an editor but now a college professor, tells a credulous bunch of advertising men that Mark Twain was the champion all-time all-American cusser—could cuss five solid minutes without repeating himself.

Pardon me, Burgess, but Mark Twain never did any such thing. Once I heard him at his out-cussing best—denouncing a publisher who had offended him. He swore for five minutes all right, but over and over again he used the same few familiar oaths which the English-speaking race always have used. He didn't introduce a new or an original one.

I studied the art of cussing, both by note and by ear, under such gifted masters of profanity as southern steamboat moles, New York newspaper men, London cab drivers, western mule whackers and north woods timber choppers.

With my hand on my heart I solemnly affirm that not one of these alleged experts ever employed any save the dependable age-seasoned standby, to wit, seven adjectives, two strong nouns, one ultrastrong noun and one compound phrase—the commonest of all.

Romance for King Zog.

FOR about the fifth time comes a plaintive plea from Albania, one of those remote little border countries of eastern Europe where every now and then peace threatens to break out. They have a king over there. At least they had a king at the time of going to press with this dispatch. His name is King Zog. This is neither a typographical error nor a vaudeville gag. The name positively is Zog, and radio comedians may make the most of it.

For many months he has been paging the world for a wife. The qualifications call for the lady to have $5,000,000. His majesty would also like for her to turn Mohammedan, but the main requirement is that $5,000,000 bank roll.

California's Coastline.

WHILE it's quite a roomy coastline, California has at present only one coastline. This is a source of mortification to patriotic native sons, Florida having two such, one on either side, besides a dampish area in the middle known as the Everglades.

Still, in a way, California's silvery strand continues to excel. Within easy speeding distance we have at least one beach resort where, when Palm Springs folds up on account of the heat, many of our artistic colony go to relax. So wholeheartedly do some go in for this that often you may stand off a quarter of a mile and hear them relaxing.

Occasionally a relaxationist relaxes so completely that it takes weeks for him to get over it. His friends leave him at the seaside only to gather at the bedside.

The Changing World.

IT WAS Susan B. Anthony who dedicated her life to the cause of emancipation for her sex. But it was her grandniece who lately attained the headlines by suggesting that, with the addition of a buckle here and a ribbon there, a nightie would make a suitable evening gown for almost any occasion.

Thus do we see how from one generation on to another is handed down the flame of genius and service to womankind.

But, although the inspired suggestion is already weeks old, there still are no signs that it is finding advocates among the queen bees of the cultural hive. Maybe the reason is that a belle of the Hollywood artistic group would feel so ostentatiously overdressed if she wore a full-fashioned nightie to a social function.

BEAUTY'S DAUGHTER

By Kathleen Norris

SYNOPSIS

Victoria Herrenden, a vivacious little girl, had been too young to feel the shock that came when her father, Keith Herrenden, lost his fortune. A gentle, unobtrusive soul, he is now employed as an obscure chemist in San Francisco, at a meager salary. His wife, Magda, cannot adjust herself to the change. She is a beautiful woman, fond of pleasure and a magnet for men's attention. Magda and Victoria have been down at a summer resort when Keith joins them for the weekend. Magda leaves for a bridge party, excusing herself for being such a "runaway." Later that night Victoria is grief-stricken when she hears her parents quarreling. The Herrendens return to their small San Francisco apartment. Keith does not approve of Magda's mad social life and they quarrel frequently. Magda receives flowers and a diamond ring from Ferdie Manners, a wealthy man from Argentina whom she had met less than a week before. Manners arrives a few hours later. Magda shows him a valuable Chinese shawl that has been in the Herrenden family for many years. Vic is shocked when she learns her mother had contemplated selling it. Magda tells Manners a dealer had offered her $300 for the shawl. Magda takes Victoria to Nevada to visit a woman friend who has a daughter named Catherine. There she tells her she is going to get a divorce. Victoria soon is in boarding school with her friend Catherine. Magda marries Manners and they spend two years in Argentina. Victoria has studied in Europe and she returns to visit her mother when Ferdie sends a beautiful home. Magda is unhappy over Ferdie's drinking and attentions to other women. When her mother and stepfather return to South America, Victoria refuses to go with them. Magda returns and tells Vic she and Ferdie have separated. Victoria is now a student nurse.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"You are handsome," Magda said, under her breath, not listening. "Don't they let you use make-up at all?"

"Not on duty, and you sort of get out of the habit. What are you looking at?" Victoria asked, with an embarrassed laugh, as her mother continued her placid scrutiny.

"Well, you're simply adorable, Vicky," she said at length, "and you get enthusiastic just the way you used to. But—although it's a little soon to talk about it, I had rather a different plan in mind for you. I was thinking of Europe, after your debut."

"Europe!" Vicky echoed, her own eyes suddenly blazing. She remembered her student year there under the gentle unremitting chaperonage of the Dominican nuns. Again she heard the fountains of Rome gushing; saw the lights of the Place de la Concorde setting white statues and dark tree tops in bold relief against a blue night sky, caught a whiff of wet spring greenness from the grass beside the London Mall. "Oh, Mummy!" she said.

"Would you like it?"

"Oh, well, Mother—you and I?" Victoria's voice shook with excitement.

"We two?"

"Ferdie wouldn't mind?"

Instead of answering, Mrs. Manners looked away through the exquisite silky shadows of half-lowered lashes. Victoria's heart sank; she knew that gentle patience, she knew that long, resigned sigh. All was not going well between her mother and Ferdie.

The luncheon was cleared away; the two women resumed their chairs by the wood fire.

"There are a thousand persons to whom I ought to telephone," Magda said lazily. "I won't. I love this sitting here with you. You haven't told me anything about yourself. Vicky, have you seen or heard anything of your father?"

"Yes, I saw Dad about two weeks ago," Victoria replied.

Magda added no further questions, but her eyes were expectant.

"He's married again, you know, Mummy. I wrote you that. And they're going to have a baby. They were married last February, and they expect the baby at Christmas. He simply adores Olivette, and he's all excited about the baby."

"Hal!" Magda said and fell thoughtful. "Still up in Seattle?"

"He says he loves it."

Magda twisted the Herrenden pearls in beautiful restless fingers. But for some reason or other she felt that her mother wasn't wholly pleased with the news.

"Ferdie," said Magda, out of thought—"Ferdie is a strange creature, Vicky. I may as well tell you now as at any time that everything's wrong—it's all wrong."

Victoria was silent, puzzled, and after a pause Magda went on lightly:

"And so—Mr. Fernando-Ainsa y Castello Manners and I have decided to separate. No, no, no, not a divorce," she interrupted herself to say quickly, as Vicky's stricken face was turned from the fire in involuntary protest. "He doesn't want a divorce. If he got a divorce Maud Campbell would have him married before he could turn around, so he doesn't want a divorce, and neither do I. If you get a divorce they can do all sorts of funny things about alimony, go to court and have it adjusted and lessened—I don't know what they can't do. But a separation means that you and I can live where we like, and do as we please. And so it's to be Europe—off we go! I'll get you some things—or we can get them there."

"The only thing," Victoria began somewhat hesitantly, "Ought Ferdie pay for me, too? I mean, it's all right for a visit—it's all right for a few months. But after all—after all he doesn't owe me."

"It's my money, and you're with me," Magda explained simply, with a touch of impatience.

"I was thinking of Ferdie, Vic," Magda said, out of a silence, "and thinking—" she stopped for a long sigh—"thinking of the tremendous difference there is in men," she said.

"I mean, Vic," she began again, as Victoria could find nothing to say—"I mean that—well, I suppose I was thinking of Lucius Farmer."

"Who's he?" A familiar tightening, a familiar sinking sensation was at Victoria's heart. Oh, dear. Oh, dear. This was commencing again was it?

"You must know his name, darling. He's about the most successful painter of murals in America. He made the trip with us from Buenos Aires, but he lives down here in Carmel with a perfectly impossible wife and daughters."

"And what did the impossible wife and daughters think of you, Mummy?"

"Oh, they weren't along—perish the thought! No, he was alone."

Magda's voice fell to a dreamy note. "One of the finest men—"

"I Love This Sitting Here With You."

she said, under her breath. "I mean one of the simplest and—and biggest—and gentlest—"

"This life would be heaven for women, Vic, if many men were like him!"

And again Victoria could find nothing to say.

More flowers came; the telephone rang; Magda's old friends were beginning to realize that she had arrived.

Lucius Farmer came to see them the next morning.

Magda was restless; Victoria had gone into her own room to try on a gown her mother had brought her. It was of sheer batiste, embroidered delicately with tiny garlands of roses, all in white. It was the sort of gown that makes any girl's eyes dance, and Victoria, coming back with its frail folds blowing about her, wore the radiant expression that only a new gown gives to twenty years.

She halted at the sight of a strange tall man standing at the foggy window, talking with her mother. They both turned. Victoria's hand was taken in a big hard hand. She liked the man at once, one must like him; there was something about Lucius that disarmed criticism, that won all hearts. Something simple and friendly, and a little uncertain and timid, and at the same time something definite and vital; there was a world of mirth, a child's secret and delicious merriment in his gray eyes.

He was not smiling this morning; he seemed serious and burdened, immediately the pleasantness of greeting had died away. Victoria, presently going back to her room, could hear through the open doorway the gravity of his tone as he and her mother talked at the window, their heads together.

"I can't, Magda," he said more than once. "I'm so sorry—I can't."

But when Victoria came out again to find her mother alone, there was an air of disappointment or defeat in Mrs. Manners' attitude. She was glowing with inner fires; she was shaken, laughing, ecstatic. She put her arms about Vicky; held the girl away from her to laugh into her eyes.

"My darling, do you like him?" Victoria regarded her with a smile that had small heart in it.

"Isn't the question—do you?"

"Vic, on the steamer, the day we left Buenos Aires, we found each other!" Magda said. "He came up to me and said: 'Aren't you the Valdes' friend, Senora Manners?' I don't know how he ever nerved himself to do it, for he's not like that as a rule. But he said he had seen me at the country club. We hardly spoke to anyone else on the voyage; we had our meals on deck, we talked and talked as if we never could talk enough!"

"For the first time in my life, Vic, I have met a man who stirs in me something—something that I might have been, might have had?" Magda continued. "He loves me, I know that, although he's never told me so. But it isn't that. It's the companionship, the exquisite delight of being understood—understood!" Magda broke off to say in amused scorn. "He knows more than I of everything—books, music, people. And his attitude toward life is so beautiful, so simple and eager and fine."

There was a silence. Magda smiled and wiped suddenly wet eyes, and Victoria smiled, too, a mother's patient smile for a child.

"So what?" the girl asked good-naturedly.

"So nothing, my darling, that's the tragedy!" Magda answered lightly, and there was another silence.

"No," she went on presently, ending it. "Ferdie gets here next week, and Lucius goes down to his wife and the little girls in Carmel, and that's the end."

The day moved on.

That night, when they went downstairs to join the Kendalls, and be carried off for a dinner, Victoria saw Lucius and a woman and two gawky dark shy girls, all sitting in the great red chairs of the hotel foyer, evidently waiting for someone. Was it for Mother?

Whether it was or not they all came over to Vic and Magda, and there were introductions. Mrs. Farmer was a plain stout wholesome-looking little woman in glasses, with ropes of oily gray-brown hair wound about her head. The girls were like her, although both gave promise of come beauty. Ann, Constance, Victoria.

"Vicky," said her mother, in the course of the next few days, "when you fall in love, make it with a man to whom you can be an inspiration. It's a sacred thing—it's worth all the pain and the ache, to inspire a truly great man!"

At first Victoria felt most pity for the man. He was clever, keen, affectionate, simple, and he was suffering cruelly. After a few weeks she perceived that her mother was in misery as great as his. Magda carried it better, but it was there.

Ferdie was back now, restless, irritable, unreasonable. He went to races, fights, polo games with men; he went off on hunting and fishing trips. Sometimes Victoria thought him entirely oblivious of what was going on; sometimes she thought he knew. Magda was burning up with it; she could not have wholly concealed it even if she would. She glowed and trembled, laughed and cried; she was strangely, awkwardly like a girl again—a girl upon whom the inexorable forties had set their tragic seal. Somehow it hurt Victoria to the depths of her soul to see her mother's agony in this grip of young love.

Lucius was fighting it; grimly, honestly, uselessly. He and Magda met; sat long over hotel tea tables telling each other that this must be the end, that there was no honor, no happiness for them except in renunciation. Magda, in her dark violet velvet, with the broad brim of her dark velvet hat shadowing her splendid eyes, and the rich gold-brown of sables setting off her exquisite skin, was perhaps as beautiful at such moments as she had ever been in her life. Just to be with Lucius brought the transparent color to her face and the strange liquid pulsing to her eyes.

But when they had parted it was only to begin the agony again.

Ferdie was settled in a suite of rooms connecting with Magda's own.

It was Ferdie who brought to Victoria and Magda a handful of steamship companies' folders. They opened the shining, brightly colored little booklets eagerly, studied floor plans, discussed "Deck B" and "Deck C." It was Ferdie's idea that Magda and Victoria take one of the canal steamers to New York, stopping at South America and island ports, using up the coldest of the winter weeks on the leisurely trip.

"It's just possible that Lucius will be on the Eleatic with us," Magda said one day innocently.

"Mother, don't let him!" Vic pleaded. Magda looked at her, and the color rushed into her own face.

"But, what am I to do, Vic? I can't stand this!" Magda suddenly muttered defensively.

'Way Back When

By JEANNE

DREISER WAS A BILL COLLECTOR

IF YOU lived in Chicago, Ill., years ago, you may have bought carpet tacks or a can of paint from a young hardware clerk who looked like nobody at all to you. A few years later you might have rented an apartment from the real estate office where he clerked; a little later you may have seen a young man persistently ringing the doorbell of that neighbor of yours who was careless about her furniture installments. For Theodore Dreiser, famous in American letters today, was in his youth hardware clerk, clerk in a real estate office, and bill collector for a furniture house.

He was born in Terre Haute, Ind., in 1871. A poor boy, he attended the public schools of Warsaw, Ind., quitting at the age of sixteen to go to work in Chicago at $5 per week. An ordinary young man, with an ordinary background, who could have foretold that some day he would produce a book ("American Tragedy") which would arouse world-wide controversy, banned in some cities, required reading in some school systems?

After the collector's job, persistent calling at the Chicago Daily Globe got him a job as a reporter. His rise was rapid as he developed a clear reportorial style, until 1898 he became editor-in-chief of the Butterick Publications which included Delineator Magazine. His first book, "Sister Carrie," was published in 1900 and immediately banned for its frankness. It was not until 1911 that his next, "Jennie Gerhardt," appeared; and it was followed at regular intervals by other books of the "call a spade a spade" type. "American Tragedy" appeared in 1925, was translated into many languages and was adapted to the stage in America and in Germany as late as 1930.

LOWELL THOMAS WAS A COOK

THE life of Lowell Thomas has been tremendously exciting, but it may be encouraging to those of you in everyday jobs, and pining for adventure, to know that he was not always free from humdrum occupations.

The radio and news-reel reporter was born in Woodington, Ohio, in 1892. The family moved to Cripple Creek, Colo., where Lowell attended public schools set in the midst of a typical rough-and-ready mining town. His parents were not wealthy, and Lowell Thomas had to work for a higher education. While attending Valparaiso university in northern Indiana, he was a janitor, a salesman, and night cook in a short-order restaurant. Thirsting for more knowledge after graduation, the boy went on to the University of Denver where he took several degrees, working at odd times for a newspaper. During the summer months, he punched cows and pitched alfalfa. In Chicago Kent

College of Law, he studied law, and then took post-graduate work in English literature at Princeton. After that he worked as a teacher and on a newspaper.

His beginning did not promise excitement and adventure. But then came the World war, and Lowell Thomas went to the front with a staff of cameramen making official pictures! It changed his whole life. He joined D. H. Lawrence and his bedouin army in Arabia, emerging from that "revolt on the desert" with the exclusive story and pictures. It was the beginning of his fame. Since then, he has met almost everyone of importance, seen everything of note, and reported his observations in newspapers, on the screen, and over the air in a graphic style that has gained him an audience to millions.

Modern-to-the-Minute

AS RIGHT as rain, and as cooling, are these clever young modes for the woman who sews. Each is simple to make, pleasant to wear, and may possibly be the difference between a modern and a mediocre wardrobe for you this summer. Sew - Your - Own wants to help you look your best, to stamp you modern-to-the-minute, and therefore is anxious and proud to present today's trio.

A Two Piece for Chic. If he tells you you're just a nice armful you are the right size and type to wear the blouse 'n' skirt shown above, left. The waistcoat idea is very much the thing in blouses. The skirt is terribly young and figure flattering. What more could any little heart desire? You can have this smart ensemble for a song and a minimum of stitches. Think of the countless summer occasions ahead that all but specify this very outfit.

Not Smart Matron. You should sue for slander anyone who calls you a Smart Matron when you don this gratifying new fashion (above center). You step into an entirely new size range when you step forth in this frock. So simple is its technique—merely a deftly designed feminine jabot, softly draped contours, and a meticulously slender skirt—yet so effective. It will thrill you in marquisette chiffon or lace, and it will keep you deliciously cool.

Snappy for Sports. Play the net or the grandstand in the sports dress at the right and feel perfectly confident in any event. There isn't one among us who hasn't a real yen for a streamlined all-of-a-piece sporter that's on and off in a jiffy, launders easily, and comes up smiling time after time. You can concoct something clever of seersucker or pique and complete the whole thing in an afternoon. Why not order your size today and have all-summer benefit of a really companionable sports dress?

The Patterns.
Pattern 1302 is for sizes 14 to 42. Size 15 requires 2 1/4 yards of 39 inch material for the blouse, 2 3/4 yards for the skirt.
Pattern 1286 is for sizes 36 to 48. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39 inch material.
Pattern 1915 is for sizes 14 to 42. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards of 35 inch material plus 3 1/2 yards of bias binding to finish edges as pictured.
Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coin) each.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste. Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—facial, neck, puffy, all played out. In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Congressional Reflections

Office of Senator Chavez, June 23, 1937. The conference with Long, official with the Rural Electrification Authority, on the Gila-Mogollon project, and other electrification projects proved very disappointing to Senator Chavez not from the standpoint of the attitude of the authority but rather from the revelation of high-handed tactics used by New Mexico utilities to deprive rural communities of benefits they were entitled to under the New Deal Legislation. He released the following statement:

"Many sections from all over the State have been contacting this office with the idea of getting the benefits in their areas provided for by the law under the Rural Electrification Act, and while the Rural Electrification Administration here is most anxious to help it is handicapped by provisions of the law passed by the last session of the New Mexico Legislature wherein two clauses were slipped into said law that practically nullifies the Rural Electrification Act as far as New Mexico is concerned, and it appears that nothing can be done until New Mexico, itself, through its Legislature, will cooperate to get these benefits for the State by amending said law."

"Knowing the personnel of the last legislature, I feel confident that as soon as it knows the true condition that said Legislature will amend the law if it should get an opportunity. However, if the present Legislature does not get an opportunity the next one will, and then New Mexico can and will be at par with the rest of the States that are now taking advantage of this most beneficial legislation passed by Congress."

"I am positive that the last Legislature would not have passed the law as it did if it had been fully informed in the matter. I know that their interests are with the people and not with the utilities. There is no need for a rate of $1.50 for ten kilowatt hours by a private utility when, under the Rural Electrification Act, the farmers in Valencia County could have paid at the rate of 80 cents for 10 kilowatts. Common sense will tell you that, and the utilities of the State, controlled mainly from New York have had the people of New Mexico at their mercy long enough. Knowing New Mexico as I do I feel sure that its citizens still have more faith in Franklin Roosevelt than they have in City Service or any other foreign utility."

Senator Chavez Scores Debt Defaulters

Score one for the Father of the idea of making June 15 National Peace Day. No better day than that on which the foreign nations welched could have been selected to vividly bring to the attention of the American people the futility of war. It will bring home to us the utter irresponsibility of European Nations, who mad with lust for power spend millions on instruments of slaughter and have nothing but cordial regrets for their inability to pay. It will also be a reminder to these same powers lest they expect our moral and financial if not active support in future quarrels, quarrels which will not be of our making nor of our concern. It will also remind us

Lincoln County Farmers Received $5780.00 in Loans

The resettlement Administration has loaned farmers in Lincoln county a total of $5780.00 since July 1, 1936, according to James W. J. Evans, supervisor for this county, with offices in the Lutz building.

Purpose of this rehabilitation loan program, he explained, is to enable individual farm families to get a new start under more favorable conditions. In emergency cases this agency has provided money for food and other necessaries until they were able to provide for themselves. The loans have been made for the purchase of necessary farm supplies, livestock, household needs, feed, seed, fertilizer, for payment of rent, taxes and for food.

When these rehabilitation loans were made the county supervisor provided agricultural assistance and guidance and in most cases the home management supervisor assisted the farm women in home management plans. While the county supervisor works on a farm plan to show which crops can best be grown on the farmer's land and how he can make the most money from his farm, the home management supervisor works with the farm women in connection with the home.

It is interesting to note that many farmers do not need a loan after their farm plans have been worked out by a county supervisor and they have produced one crop. The rural rehabilitation program of this federal agency has been welcomed in every section of the county. It has been shown that a small loan for necessary items on the farm and proper farming practices would put many of the country's temporarily distressed families on their feet permanently.

Rehabilitation loans made to farmers in Region Twelve of the Resettlement Administration from July 1, 1936, to June 12, 1937, amounted to $2,522,888.20.

Everybody is going to the American Legion dance at community hall, Saturday July 3rd.

Copper--- An Essential Industry

"A healthy copper industry is absolutely essential to the national defense and international independence of the United States," says the Silver City, New Mexico Enterprise. "Copper is as necessary to the army and navy as it is to industry."

The copper industry naturally faces the problems faced by all industry--- problems caused by changing economic conditions.
In addition, copper has often been a favorite target for unfriendly legislation. Unnecessarily restrictive laws have been passed that have made the task of the industry doubly hard. In some cases, excessive taxes have been levied against it.

Today the future of this vital industry is bright if it is given a fair chance to increase its development and payrolls, unhampered
by inimical laws.

Underwater Treatment

By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

SOMETIMES wonder whether the new methods of treatment for pain and stiffness in muscles and joints have not made us forget some of the methods used hundreds, yes thousands of years ago. There are more "pain killers" available now than ever before, many of which do excellent work in emergencies or when other methods are not suitable, and all of which get away to a great extent from the necessity of using opium.

When we think of the hot baths used so many years ago to ease pain and prevent stiffness as compared with the modern method of using pain killing drugs, the hot baths may seem crude and clumsy. However, the big point about easing pain and getting stiff joints loosened up is that the hot water allows movement without causing too much pain and increases the blood circulation in the part.

As you know objects are "lighter" under water and so the raising or movement of a crippled or sore arm or leg under water is done with less effort and pain than when out of the water.

In Europe there are many "bath" sanatoriums in charge of physicians of high standing. These physicians are called balneologists (balneo meaning bath).

What German Experts Say of It. The Berlin correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association reports a paper read by Balneologist Hartel before the Berlin Medical society recording the good results obtained by the underwater method employed at Warm Springs, Ga. Films showing patients undergoing systematic exercise under water were exhibited.

At this same meeting Dr. Scholtz of the Virchow hospital in Berlin spoke of his experiments with lame persons. Movement in a crippled arm or leg is almost always first made possible by the removal of its weight in water; after the first movements, continued regular bathing and exercise increase the strength of the limb and its power to control movement. The removal of the weight of the limb because it is under water allows the patient to exert his whole power and attention on the movement instead of on the effort of the lifting of the weight of the arm or leg.

A child shown by Dr. Scholtz who had been entirely crippled by infantile paralysis had now the normal use of his limbs after receiving this treatment.

This underwater treatment should be of great help in loosening up old stiff rheumatic joints, or in injured joints where the pain of movement has brought on stiffness.

Underweight Who Feels Ill. A physician meeting a friend on the street jokingly criticized him for allowing himself to get so fat; in fact added a little warning as to the consequences of carrying so much extra weight.

The friend quite calmly replied, "Well, I've just been down to the hospital to see a very thin friend of mine who is confined there. As I went through the wards I had a chance to look into a few private rooms as I was passing; I didn't see any fat patients; they were all very thin."

Generally speaking thin men and thin women may live longer than those who are fat but there is a degree of leanness or underweight that carries with it nervousness, lack of energy, lack of concentration, and early fatigue. These individuals feel so weak and dispirited that they are constantly consulting not only their own physician but many others. And the strange thing is that after careful examination while there may be such simple conditions as blood pressure slightly below level, and the temperature slightly below normal, there is, in most cases, no organic condition found.

In many cases the reason these thin individuals do not feel well is because they have been born with "nerves." Other cases have acquired "nerves" because of some underlying defect in the body, or because they have been under severe strain or emotional disturbances.

Dr. E. V. McCollum in his book, "Food, Nutrition and Health," thus describes these thin patients:

"These are the restless, active, and over-conscientious people who habitually work beyond their capacity, because their strength is so limited. They worry and expect the worst. They are possessed with fear for their health, fear of failure in business or occupation, fear for the safety of family and friends. Most of them have digestive disturbances."

Washing Linoleum.—Oilcloth and linoleum will dry with a brighter finish if a lump of sugar is dissolved in the scrubbing water.

Frying Doughnuts.—To keep doughnuts from absorbing too much of the fat in which they are fried put a drop or two of vinegar in the dough when mixing the ingredients.

Quick Mayonnaise.—The yellow part of an egg is thoroughly beaten up with a teaspoon vinegar. Add some salt and pepper. Pour oil over it and whip the mixture thoroughly. Then add two dessertspoons of vinegar and one tablespoon boiling water.

Clearing the Atmosphere.—Burn a few drops of vinegar on a hot shovel for a quick way of clearing the smell of stale smoke out of a room.

Rice, Scrambled Eggs, Cheese.—Have ready a border of rice (boiled) in a dish. Make some scrambled eggs to which cheese has been added. Place the mixture in the center of the dish and sprinkle a little chopped parsley over the top. Serve piping hot.

Removing Spots From Tile.—Spots can be removed from the tile bathroom floor by rubbing with a cloth moistened with kerosene and then polishing with one moistened with paraffin.

Cleaning Silver.—Moist salt will remove egg tarnish from silver.

Washing Woolens.—Rinse woolens in warm water to which a little olive oil has been added. This helps to keep them soft.

Barbecued Ham.—Fry the required number of thin ham slices from a left-over boiled ham. Arrange them in a serving dish, and pour the following sauce over them; add to the ham fat in the frying pan a teaspoonful of made mustard, half a teaspoonful sugar, three tablespoonfuls vinegar and a tablespoonful of red currant jelly. Warm all the ingredients up together, sprinkle with paprika (optional) and pour over the ham.

Chilling Canned Fruits.—Before placing canned fruits in the refrigerator to chill remove the paper label which acts as an insulator. WNU Service.

Missing Instruments Supplied by Novel Electrical Device

Plays Any Scale and Has Great Volume

Swarthmore, Pa.—When Dr. W. F. G. Swann, the well-known scientist who is director of the Bartol Research foundation here, lifts his baton in his extra-curricular job as conductor of the non-paid Swarthmore Symphony orchestra, he can call into service two novel electrical musical instruments used nowhere else in the world.

Like most non-paid musical units the Swarthmore orchestra finds difficulty in obtaining a full complement of instruments to render standard symphonic works. But ingenuity, in the person of the Bartol scientist, Dr. William E. Danforth, has devised electrical apparatus that can pinch-hit for the missing French horn and bass clarinet. A simple elongated box that one holds on the left forearm and plays by moving the fingers on two metal strips does the trick, when linked to radio amplifying apparatus and a loud speaker.

Slight pressure of the right forefinger on one of the strip causes the loud speaker to give a tone controlled in a fashion similar to the fingering of a violin. The loudness of the tone produced is controlled by moving a small lever with the left thumb. The other fingers of the left hand control the range of pitch of the instrument.

Dr. Danforth explained that while none of the principles used in the instrument are new to electrical science, certain features of design, ease of playing and "life" of the tone produced, are improved over what has previously been available.

How Oscillator Works.
Fundamental to the operation of the "oscillon," explained Dr. Danforth, is a gas discharge oscillator. When the finger is placed on the strip an electrical condenser starts charging up like a small water tank being filled through a pipe.

After a certain amount of electricity is stored up in this way the electricity is discharged through the gas discharge tube.

After the discharge, the condenser again begins to store electricity and repeats the process at regular intervals. Thus is produced a rapid succession of electrical pulses which are sent through a radio tube amplifier to a loud speaker.

"Banana" Diet for Ducks Supplied by Odd Water Plants

Grinnell, Iowa.—"Duck bananas," considered good food for water fowl, do not grow on banana trees or anything like them. They are the product of two kinds of water plants, one a water lily and one a gentian, explains Prof. H. S. Conard of Grinnell college, for many years a specialist on the water lilies.

The "duck bananas," are really little clumps of short, thick roots, that look for all the world like pigmy "hands" of bananas. They are rich with stored food materials, and ducks are believed to be very fond of them.

So widely is this doctrine accepted that persons interested in rebuilding our wild-fowl population have been buying and planting them by the bushel.

It is commonly stated that "duck bananas" are borne on the roots of only one kind of plant, the Mexican water lily, which is hence called the banana water lily. However, Professor Conard has shown there are two distinct kinds.

The second kind is borne not by a water lily but by a quite unrelated plant known as floating heart, from the shape of its leaves.

Five Layers of Water Found in One Lake

Leningrad.—Five well-defined layers of water, each different from all the others, have been found in a lake on the Arctic island of Kildin, near the Murmansk coast.

From surface downward the layers of water are: fresh, brackish, strongly salt, red and sulphurous. The sulphur gases dissolved in the bottom layer are deadly to almost all forms of life, but the bacteria that give the fourth layer its red color feed on the sulphur and prevent any of it from poisoning the layers above.

Astronomers Hoping to Discover New Principle of Nature

Great Telescope May Solve Their Problem

By ROBERT D. POTTER
EITHER astronomers are soon to discover some new, hitherto unrecognized principle of nature or else telescopes, such as the 100-inch diameter instrument of Mt. Wilson observatory, are now looking about to the limits of the universe.

This is the choice which Dr. Edwin Hubble, Mt. Wilson observatory's noted astronomer, extends to his fellow scientists. As soon as the new 200-inch telescope being erected on Mt. Palomar, California, is in operation and studies on the light from the most distant nebulae are made with it, astronomy may have the answer to its present quandary.

Expanding Universe Theory.
The trouble is with the present theory of the expanding universe which accounts nicely for the shifting of the light from distant nebulae toward the red end of the spectrum. The expanding universe theory, one recalls, pictures some tremendous explosion in ages past which sent out matter that is still expanding. Just as the whistle of a train goes to a lower pitch as it rushes away from the observer so too, in the optical case, does the light from a nebula rushing away from the observer go to a lower "pitch," which, in the case of light, means a shift toward the red end of the spectrum.

The trouble with this interpretation of the "red-shift" is that it leaves one with a universe that is small, closed and dense; a universe whose outer limit is but little more than the present seeing limits of existing telescopes.

Astronomers Not Satisfied.
Frankly astronomers admit that they have yet no alternative theory which fits the observed facts so satisfactorily but many of them cannot help feeling that they are not now looking to the limits of space or anywhere near it and that the present region they observe is probably only a small part of a far vaster space.

Alternative solution is to avoid calling the "red-shift" evidence of an expanding universe and to visualize one that is static and far vaster in both age and volume. But before that can be done some scientist will have to discover, recognize and interpret the new principle of nature. Like a careful mountain climber, scientists do not jump off a time-tried, safe ledge of knowledge until they have a better one.

Sheep Bush, African Forage Plant, Grows Well in Arizona

Washington.—Karoo or sheep bush, one of the principal forage plants for sheep in the South African desert plateau areas in times of severe drouth, is now being propagated by the nurserymen of the United States soil conservation service for seed increase, since this plant has demonstrated extreme drouth resistant possibilities and adaptability to the American desert.

The original introduction of the karroo or sheep bush into the United States was made more than 35 years ago by Dr. David G. Fairchild, for many years head of the division of foreign plant introduction of the bureau of plant industry. First plantings were made from a packet of native African karroo seeds in the plant-introduction gardens at Chico, Calif. After that, for many years, little attention was given to the plantings.

Then came the recent drouth emergency, and a small amount of seed was furnished the soil conservation service for experimental planting under Southwestern arid conditions. So the sheep bush, along with some 30 or 40 other species of widely varying growth habits, was planted in the Arizona desert.

After a year or two all of the species thus planted had disappeared, with the single exception of the sheep bush. This is taken as a thoroughly convincing experimental result.

Timberline Shows Alaska Climate Grows Milder

Washington.—Timberline on the Arctic tundra gives indication that the climate of Alaska has been rapidly modifying for a fairly long stretch of years, states Prof. Robert F. Griggs of George Washington university, in Science.

Trees at the edge of timber growth are thrifty and prosperous-looking, as though they had grown in a favoring climate. There are no snags or dead trees among them. It is a new forest—apparently an advancing forest.

CHILDREN LIKE THEIR SPINACH

Washing Thoroughly Important Part of Preparation.

By EDITH M. BARBER.

SPINACH for a number of years has been the topic for jests and has almost replaced the classic mother-in-law joke. It was rather interesting to find that the children, instead of disliking this vegetable, actually chose it as one of their favorite foods, according to a recent survey. Spinach actually ranked next to ice cream.

Because of the two types of spinach which are on the market at different times of the year, and because seasons in city markets are long extended through shipments from various parts of the country, we can find it in its fresh form throughout the year. And, of course, we can always call on the canners.

In the preparation of spinach for the table, perhaps the most important point is the washing as every grain of sand must be removed. No one likes gritty spinach. The easiest way to handle this question is to use two large pans and to lift the leaves after their first washing into a pan of fresh water and to continue this until no more sand is deposited on the bottom of the pans.

Spinach will need no more water for cooking than what clings to the leaves after washing. It should be cooked just until the leaves are tender, usually not more than six to eight minutes. Butter or cream which is used for dressing, should be added to the vegetable, which should not be drained of the liquid which results after cooking. If you like, you may chop or puree the leaves before dressing them. Salt, pepper, a little nutmeg, lemon juice, vinegar, horseradish, sweet or sour cream as well as butter all bring out the flavor of this vegetable.

Spinach on Toast.
Wash one peck of spinach and cook in a covered pan five to eight minutes. Turn into colander and press out as much water as possible. Mince very fine. Melt three tablespoons butter in a frying pan, add two tablespoons flour and stir until well blended. Add spinach and cook five minutes, stirring constantly. Add one cup cream, salt and pepper, cook three minutes and serve on toast.

Spinach Nests.
6 bread cases
Melted butter
2 cups cooked spinach
Salt, pepper
1/2 cup grated cheese
Make bread cases by cutting bread into three-inch squares and cutting out the center. Roll each case in melted butter. Chop the spinach, mix with seasoning and fill the bread cases. Sprinkle with the cheese and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit), until bread is light brown and the cheese is melted.

Cole Slaw With Cooked Dressing
3 to 4 cups shredded cabbage
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
3/4 teaspoon mustard
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons flour
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup milk
1/4 cup vinegar
Mix the dry ingredients. Add slightly beaten egg yolks, butter, milk and vinegar slowly. Stir over hot water until thick. Pour while hot over shredded cabbage. Two tablespoons of chopped green pepper or pimento may be added if desired.

Chicken Salad.
1 1/2 cups diced cooked chicken
1 cup diced celery
2 tablespoons French dressing
1/2 cup mayonnaise
Lettuce
1 tablespoon capers or sliced stuffed olives
Combine chicken, celery and French dressing and chill. When ready to serve, mix with mayonnaise, arrange on bed of lettuce and garnish with capers or sliced stuffed olives. Sliced hard cooked eggs may also be used as a garnish.

Fancy Sandwiches.
For sandwiches of fancy shape, cover large spread slice with an unsliced slice, cut into squares, diamonds, or finger lengths with knife, or into hearts, spades, diamonds, clubs, or stars with special cutter.

Butterscotch Pudding.
2 1/2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold water
2 cups boiling water
1 cup brown sugar
Salt
3/4 cup sliced Brazil nuts
Measure cornstarch into top of double boiler. Stir in cold water and when smooth, add boiling water, brown sugar and salt. Stir over direct heat until mixture boils, set over hot water and cook twenty minutes. Stir in Brazil nuts and pour into one large pudding dish or into six sherbet glasses. Chill and serve with whipped cream.

Celery Stuffed With Lobster.
2 stalks celery
1 can lobster paste
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
3 drops tabasco sauce
1 teaspoon German mustard
Separate celery and clean. Cream butter and mix with lobster paste and seasoning. Fill celery stalks with mixture. Endive may be used instead of celery.

In as Much as Young Man Qualified for Job, He Got It

"Well," inquired the man in the swivel chair as the seventy-fourth applicant of the day strode into his office, "have you had a thorough education in art?"
"Yes, sir," answered the young applicant confidently, "I have."
"Studied in Europe?"
"Yes. Four years at the Beaux Arts."
"And you're sure you could guide visitors through this place competently?"
"Yes, I am sure."
"Well, we shall see. What were the three Greek orders?"
"Ionic, Corinthian and Doric."
"Good! What are the outstanding features of Gothic architecture?"

"Pointed arches, vertical accent, skeletal framework with small wall space and large windows. This contrasts with the Romanesque where—"
"Whoa. Whoa. That's enough. And you'd be able to explain reproductions of great painters to inquiring visitors?"
"Certainly. The perspective of Ferruccio, the power and religious fervor of Masaccio, the splendid chiaroscuro of Leonardo, the relentless realism of Rembrandt, the brilliant color tones of Veronese, born 1528, died—"

A very charming lady—Mrs. Louise Coe who spoke here yesterday to the rural teachers. Until we have a large bloc of "Mrs. Coes" instead of only one in the senate, the women will not count for much in the halls of legislature. Dr. Fife made a graceful little introduction of Mrs. Coe, saying that she combined both the courage and the intelligence for a perfect legislator—and he really should have added she also has the handsome good looks which help put a lady across in any situation.—Las Cruces Daily News.

Mr. R. A. Walker of the Lyric theatre informs us that he is ready to install the cooling system just as soon as the washer and fans arrive. The putting up of Fir-Tex on the walls although delayed a few days will be finished in the very near future. The new seats will be installed just as soon as they get here.

Mr. E. H. Hendricks was a business visitor from Jicarilla last Saturday.

Mr. Prehm is repairing his building which was damaged recently.

Mr. W. G. Duggar was in town on business yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill Smith and daughters were here from White Oaks yesterday.

Miss Betty Shafer has returned from a visit to Denver with her aunt and uncle Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hayden.

Yesterday Mrs. R. E. Berry visited her husband who is in the Alamo hospital, suffering from fractures of both feet. Mr. Berry fell when a scaffold on which he was standing broke. He is resting as well as may be expected and will be able to be brought home next week.

Prizes Offered in 4-H Girls Contest

The National 4-H Canning Contest offering county, state, sectional and national prizes is again offered to Club Leaders, and every girl enrolled in a bona fide Club is invited to compete. The contest is conducted by Extension Agents without fee or obligation of any kind.

Contestants are required to report the number of jars and kinds, of food canned, how they were utilized, exhibits made and prizes won, demonstration and judging contests entered, assistance given other canning girls and housewives, and awards or recognition received.

Many girls are able to earn considerable sums through this project besides the valuable training they gain.

Each county winner is awarded a handsome gold medal, the state champion receives an all-expense trip to the National 4-H Club Congress to be held in Chicago early in December, and college scholarships totaling $1,000 will be presented to the four sectional winners and national champion through the Kerr Glass Corporation, sponsor of the contest for the ninth year.

STANDARD GASOLINE IS UNSURPASSED

"RESULTS OF EXTENSIVE TESTS conducted by the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association on the nine Non-Premium Gasolines leading in sales volume in the Pacific Coast area substantiate the statement of the Standard Oil Company of California that Standard Gasoline is Unsurpassed."

To Standard Gasoline goes this new high distinction—Certified Unsurpassed.

This finding speaks for itself. It is the official report of the A.A.A. Contest Board, Washington, D. C.—the nationally recognized authority on automotive performance of every sort. Year after year Standard Gasoline is unsurpassed—the ideal motor fuel for your car. And—you can depend on it—Standard will be kept unsurpassed.

comparing the respective merits of Standard against the other leading gasolines on the market. One by one they are checked against the constantly changing requirements of the new motors as well. The big purpose of all this is to see that Standard is unsurpassed and remains so!

You now have additional proof—Certified by the American Automobile Association Contest Board. You'll find still more proof in every gallon of Standard Gasoline Unsurpassed. Try a tankful!
