Governor Tingley Urges Safe Driving

Governor Tingley today urged that with the re-opening of schools throughout the state this week that motorists appoint themselves "a committee of one for safe driving."

"With children crowding streets in school zones, with youngsters using the roads in rural areas, and with school buses plying back and forth daily there is greater need for sane, cautious driving," the governor said.

"If every motorist will obligate himself to drive carefully a majority of accidents can be prevented," the governor said. "I would like to see New Mexico go through a school year without an accident involving children."

State police will be instructed to exercise vigilance in looking out for the safety of children in rural areas in making their daily patrols.

The governor cautioned against fast driving through school zones throughout the state.

"A school zone slow sign means slow," the governor said, "and state police will enforce the regulation."

The governor urged that in cities throughout the state local governments use police to handle traffic in school zones during noon and afternoon school dismissals.

Party For Dixon Children

Last Tuesday afternoon Mrs. C. O. Davis, Sr., entertained in honor of her little granddaughters Geraldine and Jackie Dixon who are going to El Paso for the winter. Games were played by the many children who were present. Lovely refreshments were served.

Cooperating Individuals

"We work and we live cooperatively, not as individuals," said President Callen in his address before the twenty-first annual convention of Kiwanis International in Indianapolis, Indiana. "A community has its life in common, influenced positively or negatively by every individual. The problem of the community is to lift itself by its own bootstraps to higher levels of useful living and equality of opportunity. Such a problem is solved by leaders and not by commanders."

There is food for thought in the above quotation for the people in Carrizozo and every other village and city.

True we are individualists. Our great zest in living is pride in the thought that we as machinists, clerks, professional and business people are important. And yet, each of us realizes that were we alone on a desert island our particular skill might be very unimportant. While "the eye cannot say to the hand I have no need of you" just so are we important as we fit into the scheme of life as a whole.

We are worth-while parts of our community and contribute to the success of Carrizozo as we work together.

Kindness Pays Dividends

Beware of easy ways to progress. During your life time you will see many false prophets, hear many offers of something-for-nothing. Maybe somewhere there is an undiscovered path to quick success. But whenever any such way is offered to you, ask yourself one simple question: "Whom will it harm?"

Remember that your security and your progress often depend on how well others succeed.

Through those long years behind us it was invariably the man who tried to profit by harming others often found himself losing what he hoped to gain. Contributed.

Water Conservation Association Meeting

One of the largest and most representative crowds ever assembled at Amarillo is expected for that city on Wednesday, September 8th, at which time a meeting of the Panhandle Water Conservation Association, and similar groups from the five-state dust bowl area will pay honor to Congressman Marvin Jones and other Senators and Representatives of the Southwest for the work done on the water and soil conservation program at the recent session of Congress, according to John McCarty, President of the Panhandle body.

The meeting will begin at ten o'clock in the morning of September 8th, in the Crystal Ballroom of the Herring Hotel, and will include a barbecue at Jack Hall's Ranch at noon, and a program in the afternoon.

The Governors of five southwestern states have been invited to be present, and it is believed that most of the Congressmen and Senators from the Southwest will be in attendance.

The meeting will hear the report of Carl Hinton, Secretary-Manager of the Panhandle Water Conservation Association, who was recently delegated by the five-state conference at Amarillo to aid in securing legislation for the semi-arid part of the nation. It is also expected that definite plans will be discussed for carrying out the program with the greatest possible dispatch now that legislation and funds have been secured which will enable the program to be put into effect.

Officials of the Association are urging as strong an attendance as possible, especially of Commissioners Courts, farmers, ranchers, business men, county agents and any citizens interested in soil and water conservation.

McCamant ranch fourteen miles southeast of Corona Monday, September 13. Cooperating ranchers at Corona have laid plans for a barbecue and have donated two muttons and a beef.

This meeting will be one of the eleven scheduled for New Mexico during the present year and should prove of great interest to livestock producers of Lincoln and surrounding counties. Mr. J. K. Wallace, Senior Marketing Specialist of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics will attend this meeting and will discuss the livestock outlook for 1937-38. Mr. W. A. Wunsch, Executive Secretary of the AAA in New Mexico, will also be present and will discuss the Range Conservation Program. Mr. W. H. Tolbert, member of a pioneer Lincoln County ranching family who was recently appointed Extension Animal Husbandman by the New Mexico State College, will discuss range carrying capacities and recent experimental findings concerning the proper stocking of New Mexico ranges.

These livestock demonstrations were started in 1923, and have been held annually with the exception of two years, this being the twelfth year of the demonstrations. Mr. Wallace has assisted with these meetings. They have always been very popular and attended with much interest by the livestock men of the state.

Warning To Farm Families

Destitute farm families of other states are being warned of the risks they run in going to California, expecting to support themselves by work in the crop fields...

Distorted reports, picturing California as a paradise for the dispossessed of other areas are now being circulated. These stories hold out false hopes and are likely to lead to cruel disappointments and increased misery...

Mr. Evans referred to a communication recently received from Jonathan Garst, director of the Resettlement Administration program in California in which the hardships of migratory farm families were defined.

"I started trimming the Christmas tree right before last," Victoria said. "I had to get some more things for it in town yesterday."

She stopped, remembering Marsh's and the white shawl. The sick reluctance to believe it all took possession of her again.

"Quentin gone?"
"He went early—I didn't see him."
Weak misery blotted out all other emotions and she turned desperately toward the duty of the minute, toward the wrapping and tying of presents, the heaping of bundles, the fastening of trimmings on the tree that stood in lone cold state in the downstairs drawing room.

It was cold in the drawing room; Victoria worked in a sweater; left half the trimming undone. There was no heart in it today. Christmas had always been a wildly festive time in the Hardisty family—even the dreadful first Christmas when Quentin and Vicky and Gwen had all been ill. It would be no such holiday tomorrow. It would never seem Christmas again.

"Oh, my God!" Vicky said, standing still in the middle of the room, putting her hands that were sore from wires and string and tinsel, that were cold and dirty, tightly over her eyes. "My God, what shall I do!"

Well, and what had to be done now? With the rest of the tree's trimming Nurse must help; it was too much to do alone in this cold room. Victoria went out to the kitchen and asked Claus, the old German gardener, who was brewing himself some coffee on the laundry stove, to look at the drawing-room radiators. Company tomorrow.

Then upstairs again to find beds made, and the children dressed and circulating about with their usual uproarious activity. Bricks, crayons, railway trains, and blackboards were all in evidence. The question of stockings arose; when were they going to hang the stockings?

"The holes of the nails we had last year are all here!" Susan said excitedly, in interested investigation at the hearth.

"Mother," the gentle twin said, at her knee, "if we hanged them now might they be filled by supper?"

"Oh, no, darling, because Christmas isn't until tomorrow!"
The nursery door opened; Gita shyly insinuated herself into the room, closed the door again.

"Amah's sick, and M'ma said I could come over," she said. Victoria's face paled, but there was no one to see.

"Come in, Gita. Better close it, dear, because Madeleine's getting all ready for her bath—aren't you, my sweetheart?" She rubbed her face gently against Madeleine's little fluffy head and felt the tears, hot and hurtful, in her eyes again and the agony of despair in her heart.

At noon Quentin telephoned.
"That you, Vicky? Vic, will you look in the pocket of my coat—the gray coat—and see if there's a little black book there? I'll send down for it if you find it."

"Just a minute, Quentin." It was the doctor's wife talking; it was no longer only Victoria Hardisty. In a moment she was back. "It's here. Want Claus to bring it in?"

"Well, but won't that mean that you've no car?"
"I don't need it. I'm not going out. I was downtown this morning."

"Everything all right?"
A pause. Then Vicky said heavily:
"I guess so."
"Well, don't get too tired. I'll be home early."

Vicky put down the telephone, stood up, and somehow moved blindly toward her bed. In another moment she was flung upon it, in a passion of tears. To have to end all this—to have to end the happy years when she had felt so sure that she and the children were enough—to have next Christmas day dawn on a nursery to which Daddy was a stranger...

"What's the matter, Vicky?" Magda asked, late in the afternoon, when Vicky, from sheer inability to do anything more was lying idle on the couch near the fire in the upstairs sitting room.

"You know why?" she demanded in surprise.

"I suppose so," Magda said reluctantly and uncomfortably. She jerked her head in the general direction of the Morrison house.

"Don't take it so seriously, Vic!" her mother urged, after a silence in which she had obviously been casting about for something to say.

"Seriously!" Vicky blew her nose, wiped her eyes, spoke in a calmer and quite determined voice. "I'm not going to make any fuss," she said. "But if that's what Quentin wants, I won't stand in his way."

"Oh, but you can't ever be sure. Quentin doesn't seem to me like a man who'd go very far in anything like that. Look at the lovely way he is with the children," Magda argued.

"I know." Vic's eyes watered. "That's what makes it so ghastly," she said in a whisper. "What have you seen, Mother?" she asked, after a pause.

"Oh, well, that he liked her," Magda answered somewhat cautiously. "And certainly that she was after him!" she added with more confidence.

"Well, she's got him!" Vicky said grimly.
"Vicky," her mother presently began placatingly, in real uneasiness, "you wouldn't break up a home like this just because Quentin happened to look at another woman?"

"What else can a woman do when everything she's ever loved and trusted—" Vicky stopped abruptly, choked by the tears that rose in her throat. "After all, one has some pride!" she added, in a lower tone. "Oh, it's all so horrible," she said bitterly, half aloud. "It's all such a nightmare!"

"She'd marry him, like a shot," Magda predicted. "She'd get a divorce and a big settlement from Spencer Morrison, and then she'd marry Quentin."

"She can," Vicky said, trembling. "She knows Quentin is going to be the biggest of them all," Magda went on.

"It's like a death," Vicky said. "It's worse than a death!"
"Oh, Lord, no, it isn't, Vic. It happens all the time."

"But it never seemed as if it would happen to me," Vicky fell into brooding thought. "It ends everything—everything that I ever built into my life," she said. "And perhaps I'm wrong. Perhaps men like the sort of women who go right on in marriage and have their own affairs! Perhaps a home and children and a woman who loves him aren't enough."

"Oh, I wouldn't say that!" Magda said soothingly. But something in her completely false tone made Vicky laugh suddenly.

"But you think that, don't you, Mother?" she asked, looking up, her haggard cheeks suddenly scarlet.

"Well, yes—and no," Magda said, pondering. "I think most men would like a mother-wife and a show-off wife," she formulated it slowly. "They love home first, and to find a big steak ready, and a fire, and kids all washed and fresh and ready to be shushed off to bed, and someone to love them in a quiet sort of way. And then they like another woman to flatter them, and meet them places, and be admired."

Vicky considered this, a faint scowl between her heavy brows.
"And what would a man think of a wife who felt that way?"
"Oh, well, you can't go by that, Vicky!" Magda assured her hastily.

"No, you can't go by anything," Vicky lifelessly agreed.
"In the old days, you see, it was harder for 'em!" Magda presently observed, as if thinking aloud.

"Harder for wives?"
"No, harder for the other women."
"How d'you mean harder?"
"Well, before there was so much divorce," Magda offered simply. "A woman had to be a man's mistress then, and that wasn't so good. Other women wouldn't speak to her, and the man himself got pretty sick of it after a while. Then he came back to his wife."

to marry a dear friend of mine, Pearl Ashburnley...
Victoria was not listening.
"Quentin may wreck my life," she said. "But I wonder how he'll feel when he discovers that he's wrecked his own, lost his children, made himself ridiculous—" She paused.

"As far as the children go, if a man is successful and makes money," Magda said, "they pretty soon find good reasons for getting back to him. He takes one to Europe, or he gives another a car—they don't take sides. You never resented anything I did, poor kid!"

"Yes, but that was my mother!"
"I know. But I was the one who got out—I threw Keith Herrenden over. You know, Vic it's an awful mistake to bring children into a quarrel, because they don't understand and it just scares them."

"I certainly wouldn't bring them into this!" Victoria protested almost indignantly.
"Well, I didn't suppose you would. All you tell 'em is that Daddy is going to be away for a while, and that you feel happy about it."

"Oh, my God," Victoria prayed, in an agonized whisper, as the full sense of her own helplessness and of the desperate nature of the situation strengthened in her heart. Daddy going to be away for a while—no Quentin to come into her room from the dressing room in the early morning, when spring light was widening over the wet garden, and a wood fire was snapping! No tutor doctor for whom to call at the office so proudly, so lovingly, in the late afternoons, and drive home to warmth and fire and heartening dinner. No picnics on the scimitar shore of Half Moon Bay, with Quentin's big figure recumbent and asleep on the sand, and small forms, barelegged to the hip, digging and running in the level warm rush of waves!

"Feel happy about it!" she echoed bitterly. And in despair she added: "I shall never feel happy again! There's nothing I can do. Whatever I do is wrong!"

"People get over divorce," Magda said.
"I never will."
"Funny thing," Magda mused, as her daughter's bitter laugh died away into silence and the room was still. "If a woman—I mean the wife, now—could only keep her mouth shut and wait, she'd win out every time."

"You mean kiss a man, and be kind to him, and keep his house comfortable, and let him go off to the other woman whenever he likes?" Victoria asked, in a proud, quick voice.

"Yep. About that."
"You mean knowing that he was unfaithful, knowing that he despised her and wanted to get away from her, knowing that another woman was reveling in his compliments and presents—in the love that belonged to her, to keep it up for weeks—" The indignant summary halted; Victoria, her cheeks scarlet, was looking a challenge at her mother.

"Weeks!" Magda echoed.
"Months, anyway. Years, maybe."
"Years!" Vicky echoed. And with a brief and mirthless laugh she plunged her head into her hands and rumbled her hair. "You make me laugh," she muttered scornfully.

"You see, she wants something that you've got," Magda offered mildly.
"Well, she can have it!"
"So that it's a sort of compliment, in a way. You have to look at it like that, Vic. You've got to—well, face the facts. Quentin is a terribly attractive fellow. Women like him, and he's always going to be around them—that's part of being a doctor. Don't be a fool about it and run your head into the sand like a giraffe or whatever it is. A strange woman will always have something for a man that his wife hasn't got."

"Yes, and a strange man something for a woman!" Vicky put in hotly, triumphantly.
"So that if I wanted to run around with—well, say Dr. Bledsoe, Quentin would presumably wait for me, and bear everything, and then forget it as if it had never been?"

"But you're not that sort," Magda reminded her.
"I should hope I'm not!" Victoria exclaimed, again with an air of scoring in the argument. But strangely enough, against this mother of hers who had known so many creditable ways, and who so rarely argued, or indeed said anything considerable at all, she could not seem to score today.

"You don't think, Mother," Vic asked quietly, "that any woman who had borne a man children, spent years of care and love on his own child, nursed him when he was ill, worried over his bills and his diet for seven years—you don't think that that woman can calmly put up with his setting up a—mistress, and shaming her and wronging her, and wronging his own children, too? And then when he's tired," Victoria rushed on, warming to her subject, "and comes home calmly, she is to forgive him, and make a fuss over him again! Well, perhaps there are women who could do it, but I'm not one of them!"

'Way Back When

By JEANNE

GENERAL WAS SCHOOL TEACHER

SOMETIMES one small incident changes a whole life's trend, and leads to prominence beyond all previous dreams. We all recall one of two unexpected happenings in our own lives which changed their whole course.

John J. Pershing, who rose to be general of all the United States army, might have had an entirely different life had he not taken advantage of a lucky opportunity. He was born in 1860 at Laclede, Mo. His father was boss of a railroad gang and, later, a farmer. John quit school when he was thirteen to work on the farm, digging fence holes, herding sheep, planting corn, all the usual jobs that are the lot of a farm boy. Ambitious to be a lawyer, he studied night after night. In 1879, he got a job as teacher in Prairie Mount, Mo., and saved most of the $40 per month he received to study law at Kirksville Normal school.

When came the incident which changed his whole life. Jack Pershing saw an advertisement announcing competitive examinations for West Point. He had only two weeks to prepare, but he won the appointment. At West Point he won prominence as president of his class and as first captain of the corps of cadets. Possessing the characteristics of a perfect soldier, his assignments after graduation into the army were marked with success. While a military instructor at the University of Nebraska, he resumed his law studies and took his degree. Since the army conducts its own military courts, this gave Pershing an opportunity to combine his business love with his soldierly success. When the World War broke out, he was made general of the U. S. army.

FAMED TENOR MIGHT HAVE BEEN A CLERK

SOMETIMES parents despair unnecessarily about their children. Just because a youngster shows no aptitude for the job his parents may choose for him is no indication that failure awaits him.

If John McCormack had followed the plans of his father he might have been a Catholic priest. The famous tenor was born in Athlone, Ireland, in 1864, fourth of eleven children. His father worked in the woolen mills of the town and the family was very poor. John attended the Catholic schools and was an excellent student, winning a scholarship to college. There he studied for the priesthood.

At an early age John McCormack's voice showed promise and at the age of nine he sang in a school entertainment. Music was not one of the subjects offered at college, and so John had no opportunity to receive training for his voice. It did not occur to him at that time that singing would be his profession. However, he did decide against becoming a priest, which must have been a hard blow for his father. But the man did not lack understanding and he encouraged the boy in his desire to become a civil service clerk. When John failed in the entrance examinations at the school where he would receive his training, and when given a second chance forgot the appointment, his father must have truly despaired.

Then it began to dawn on John McCormack that singing was his true vocation. He had loved to sing all his life. He went to Dublin and got a job in the Marlborough Street cathedral choir at $125 a year. He began to gain more and more recognition, sang for recordings of the Edison and Gramophone companies, and eventually became a star of opera. Today he is known the world over for his golden tenor.

They're Cinches to Sew

YES, the sewing bug will get you, if you don't watch out, young lady! And when it does there will be a hum in your life (and we don't mean head noises). Right now is the time to begin; right here is the place to get your inspiration. So all together, girls: it's sew, sew, sew-your-own!

Inspiration Number 1. The vivacious model at the left is the number 1 piece for your new autumn advance. It calls for taffeta, embellished, as you might expect, with grosgrain. You may use vivid colors too, Milady, for Fashion has gone color mad this fall. Reds of every hue, bright blues, lavender, warm browns, all are being featured in smart evening frocks.

PRIDE By Frank A. Gault
PRIDE can be a man's greatest asset or it can be a fatal weakness. Which is it with you? How often have you heard some pompous individual proclaim, "It is evident you don't know who I am," or words to that effect. You can be sure that there is a man with a false pride who doesn't amount to much, even to himself. It is a safe bet that he is self-important, overbearing and that he will selfishly take any unfair advantage that less belligerent and less disagreeable people will let him get away with.

The man with the right kind of pride will not push himself forward, will not take advantage of any position he has been able to create for himself and does not consider that he is entitled to any special consideration. When we see a man whose pride is publicly in evidence we can be sure we see an inferior individual. When we see a man who is properly proud we see a man who is retiring, unassuming and trustworthy, whether he be rich or poor.

One man's pride will cause him to live beyond his means in order to impress his neighbors. Another's will cause him to starve rather than accept charity. Discard false pride.—Los Angeles Tribune.

CONGRESS ENDS SESSION

Dodges Most of 'Must' Legislation . . . Shelves Wages and Hours Bill . . . Shell Hits U. S. Flagship in China

A breathing spell! Members of 75th congress, happy in adjournment at last, file out of the Capitol in Washington.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Hooray! School Is Out!

EVEN if there were more than a few threats of "Wait'll I get you after school," the nation's lawmakers were happy as schoolboys at the end of the term, as the first session of the Seventy-fifth congress came to a close at last. The senators and representatives, fairly bogged down with months of wrangling, much of it futile, through the intolerable Washington summer, were glad of release, even if such release carried the implication that there might be a special session in October.

But the legislators left the Capitol in the realization that the session just ended will probably become known less for what it did than what it did not do.

Four out of five of President Roosevelt's major "must" measures it did not pass, the fifth it passed only with reservations which put a new complexion upon it.

Congress did not pass the wages and hours bill. After being passed by the senate in unacceptable form, with the understanding that it would be improved in the house, the bill was still buried with the house rules committee when the bell rang.

Congress did not pass the new crop control bill which includes Secretary Wallace's "ever-normal granary" project. It was agreed that this legislation be brought up during the first week of the January session or the special session.

It did not pass the President's desired legislation for re-organization of the executive department. It did vote the White House six new secretaries, though.

It did not pass the proposal to increase the membership of the Supreme court by six justices, who would apparently be selected with a view to insuring the constitutionality of New Deal measures. By a vote of 70 to 20 it permitted a substitute measure, which would have added the justices one at a time, to die a natural death in committee.

In addition to failing to enact this legislation demanded by the chief executive, congress defeated the Norris bill to create seven "little TVA's," and the crop insurance bill, proposing a revolving fund of $100,000,000. The senate failed to ratify the sanitary convention with Argentina, modifying the restrictions on imports of meat and live stock.

However, congress did pass the Wagner low-cost housing bill, but with restrictions on the unit cost which will, it is charged, make the program virtually unavailable for New York and other large cities which constitute the principal slum problems. The $526,000,000 measure was on the President's "must" list.

Pass a sugar quota which may be vetoed by the President. He threatened to veto such a bill if it limited the output of Puerto Rico and Hawaii to 126,000 and 23,000 short tons annually, and it does just that.

Extend the neutrality law to prohibit the shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents or extension of credit to them.

Pass the Guffey act, creating a commission to fix prices and control the marketing of bituminous coal. Appropriate $1,500,000,000 for work relief in this current fiscal year.

Pass a bill to outlaw personal holding companies and other alleged means of tax evasion.

Passed a reform bill for the lower courts, designed to speed appeals to the Supreme court and permit the Department of Justice to intervene in cases involving the constitutionality of a statute.

Ratified the Buenos Aires "peace treaties," which include a consultative pact for common course of action when war anywhere threatens the American republics.

Extended the CCC three years. The President had asked that it be made permanent.

Passed a farm tenancy bill to help share croppers buy their own farms. This provides for the expenditure of $10,000,000 the first year, $23,000,000 the second year, and $30,000,000 in succeeding years. Appropriations for the session totaled $9,369,488,693; this was $946,910,379 less than for the 1936 session, which included $2,237,000,000 for the soldiers' bonus.

Guffey's Unholy Threesome

SINCE the fight on the President's court plan began in the senate, it has become more and more obvious that a serious split impends in the Democratic party ranks. It was not a secret that certain of the senators and representatives were marked for extinction, fish fries and harmony dinners notwithstanding.

But few expected the bombshell that broke when Sen. Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania, in a radio speech just before the end of the session, openly named Senators O'Mahoney of Texas, Burke of Nebraska and Wheeler of Montana as senators who would not return to Washington after the next elections.

Burke summed up reply of the three men attacked when he said that if Guffey's statement were true "we might just as well forget about Jefferson Island and harmony dinners and get ready for a real battle." Wheeler, on the senate floor, said that if the "Democratic bosses want to drive us out of the Democratic party they will not have any difficulty in doing so. I say to you (Guffey) that if you nominate your governor of Pennsylvania or yourself for President of the United States, you will not have to drive us out."

Admiral Yarnoll Protests

UNCLE SAM was brought nearer than ever to the unofficial war in North China when a shell exploded on the deck of the Augusta, flagship of the United States' Asiatic fleet, killing Freddie John Falgout, a seaman, and wounding 10 others of the crew. The ship was lying at anchor in the Whangpoo river in the heart of the International Settlement of Shanghai. It was impossible to determine whether the shell had been fired by the Chinese or Japanese.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnoll, commander of the fleet, warned the governments of both nations against shellfire over American and foreign warships. The President and the State department were inclined to leave diplomatic overtures to the military, naval and diplomatic officers in China. The President declared that under the circumstances accidents such as the one which beset the Augusta were bound to occur.

Premier Soos Long War

PREMIER FUMIMARO KONO declared in Tokyo that there would be no settlement of the undeclared war until Japan had "punished" the Chinese army. He admitted that he believed the fighting would be of long duration.

The Japanese foreign office was said to have rejected a British plan to establish a neutral zone in Shanghai. A spokesman said the Chinese soldiers must withdraw far enough beyond the limits of the demilitarized zone of 1932 to make an attack impossible. The government's aim was expressed as a desire to restore amicable relations between Japan and China, but to chastise the Chinese militarists.

Franco Batters 'Iron Ring'

LOYALIST Spain's second "iron ring" — the one around Santander on the northern coast — is proving no more invulnerable than its first — the fortifications about Bilbao. Rebels have broken through it, besieging the hungry city and bombarding its fortifications with artillery. General Franco's forces have captured several important neighboring towns in Villacarrido, considered an important sector.

In a communique the national defense ministry at Valencia admitted that the government had met defeat in the fighting about Santander, but claimed the victory had cost the insurgents heavily in men. It also claimed that an Italian sergeant, taken prisoner, reported that four Italian divisions were fighting with the rebels on the Santander front.

Declared or Not, It's War

SHANGHAI'S "war" of 1932 was a second-rate movie sham battle compared with what's going on over there now. The city of 3,500,000 inhabitants and its environs are a scene of destruction, terror, flames and death on a mass scale the horror of which is unthinkable.

Thousands upon thousands of civilians lie dead, dying and wounded, and the toll increases day after day. No estimate has even been attempted to determine the amount of casualties among the Chinese and Japanese fighting forces. Indeed such an estimate today might be woefully inadequate tomorrow, for reports tell of whole brigades being shot or blown to bits in a single encounter.

Square mile after square mile, especially in the native Chapei district, has been gutted by fires that rise in the wake of bombs and artillery shells. Millions of men, women and children face slower, even more terrible death by hunger, for who is to bring supplies from the outlying farm fields while the whole area is under terrific fire?

Even in the International Settlement life is fleeting, insecure, for bombs and shells drop there, too. And with 1,000,000 refugees inside to be fed, shops are rapidly locking their doors to protect their wares from rioters.

As this is written, the Chinese land forces, outnumbering the Japanese four to one, are forcing the invaders slowly back to the Whangpoo in fierce ground fighting. Whether expected Japanese reinforcements will be able to turn the tide of battle is problematical. At the same time Japanese warships — half the entire Japanese fleet must be in the Whangpoo — are showering exploding shells upon huge concentrations of Chinese soldiers.

In the great aerial battle of the war, the Chinese scored a decisive victory, successfully turning back scores of Japanese bombers and fighting planes. The Nanking government reported that it had brought down 40 Japanese planes in the first ten days of the fighting, including 30 giant bombers, said to cost $150,000 each.

Under the continual threat of bombs, and with fires raging on all sides, the governing council of the International Settlement admitted that it was unable to care for its own ward road jail, one of the world's largest. Plans were being made to turn loose the 7,000 inmates, which included murderers, thieves and narcotic addicts.

The Japanese were reported attempting to land 50,000 fresh troops as reinforcements for the ground forces being pounded by the Chinese.

Question Black's Eligibility

THE senate confirmed the President's nomination of Sen. Hugo L. Black of Alabama to the Supreme court, 63 to 10, but only after a bitter fight, following which the minority protested that the confirmation had been railroaded through.

Six Democrats and ten Republicans voted against Black. The Democratic insurgents, led by Edward R. Burke (Neb.) and Royal S. Copeland (N. Y.) based their objections principally upon charges that he was associated with the Ku Klux Klan, and therefore unfit to sit with the high tribunal for reasons of racial and religious prejudice. The Republicans, notably William E. Borah (Idaho), argued that he could not legally become a member of the court.

That his eligibility might be tested before the court itself was a possibility when Attorney Albert Levitt, former special assistant to Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, filed a plea for leave to pray an order for Black to show affirmatively why he should be permitted to serve as an associate justice. He raised the same legal questions as the Republican minority had.

1. That Black could not become a justice because during his term as a senator the Summers retirement act was passed, permitting justices to retire at full pay. The Constitution provides that no member of congress shall be appointed to an office which was created or the emolument of which was increased during his membership in congress.

2. That no vacancy existed on the Supreme court anyway, since Justice Willis Van Devanter had only retired, not resigned, and may still be called for judicial service by the chief justice.

It was expected that the Black appointment would become political fodder in the new campaign.

Hint of a Third Party?

JOHN L. LEWIS, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, added his condemnation of the seventy-fifth congress to that of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, for not passing the wage-hour bill. Lewis threatened to lead his followers out of the Democratic party unless it "delivered" on campaign promises. Leaders, he said, must "either restore sufficient party discipline to permit government to function under their guidance or confess that their party is not the vehicle by which the people of the country may progress to a solution of their pressing social problems."

Lewis had just received another disappointment when the New York shipyard strike of a C. I. O. affiliate collapsed after nine weeks. Insurgents took command of approximately 2,000 members of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers and voted to return to work immediately.

Prints Tune to School Girl Needs

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MYRIADS of gay little print frocks wending their way schoolward is the picture fashion is flashing on the screen for fall. There is really no danger of overdoing the print collection for little daughter, for there are so many varieties of textures and design in the realm of washable prints this season mothers can assemble a wardrobe of prints ranging from playtime and classroom frocks to pretty-party dresses, and then not have too many for occasions that may arise.

From mother's standpoint the new print collections should and will prove all that they should be in supplying fabrics which will insure her child the joy of being well-dressed whatever the occasion, because fabricists are bringing out cottons and rayons and linens that have the "looks" of choicest challis and fine crepes.

The thing that intrigues the little folks in regard to prints is that many of the nicest, prettiest prints have been especially designed for them with pictorial motifs that make direct appeal to childhood. Not only are the patterns charming to behold but they are in many instances instructive and entertaining as well. For smaller children there are prints with the letters of the alphabet scattered designfully in all-over patterning. Mother Goose figures too, and boats and ships and birds and animals, fruits and flowers done in a way to capture the fancy of a child.

The washable prints developed this season are unique and lovely. It's a series of perfectly charming prints that we have in mind — artistic creations each of which has been inspired by a song. There are fifteen designs in this collection nine of which have been adapted to cotton fabrics and six to rayon. The unique part of it is that these theme song designs use titles of copyrighted songs. What a grand chorus of prints there will be in classroom, at home and in the highways and byways that little girls tread during the coming tawny autumn days! Not that children have a monopoly on these intriguing musical prints for designers are making them up into the smartest-ever housecoats, pajamas and daytime dresses for grown-ups.

Does your little girl love music? If so she'll adore the beruffled frock of new chintz-type print (centered in the illustration) the motif of which is based on "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles," a song children know and love. Clever little girl and boy figures holding balloons and other bubble motifs following the position of the notes on the scale with tiny clef signs make the design of this print which is fascinating for young and older folk. The crisp white organdy ruffles and buttons add winsome accents.

The dress to the left is also made of a theme-song "bubble" print. It is a pleasing type for the growing girl. Three narrow ribbon bows positioned on ribbon crossbars set row and row march soldier-like down the front of the bodice. Pleated skirt and demure Peter Pan collar complete this smart style.

The dress to the right reflects a quaint spirit in the lacings up the front, the close-fitting bodice, and the now-so-fashionable "owing skirt." Any girl would love to wear this dress "first day of school." The scattered daisies is a patterning inspired by that familiar song, "Daisy, Daisy, Tell Me Your Answer True" — enough to inspire any little girl wearing this dress to become a prima donna.

CASUAL COSTUMES SLATED FOR FALL

"Look casual," is the latest slogan being broadcast to women who are pre-occupied with the question of what to wear for early fall. Although both tailored tweeds and softly-feminine garments will continue to be style-right for particular occasions, it's the casual costume that is slated for high-style acceptance.

Suits are always an early-fall favorite but they were never better calculated to make women want to cast aside their summer clothes. Already the shops are beginning to display scores of casually cut models ranging from classic two-piece ensembles complete with blouse and topcoat or fur cape.

College Girls in Favor of Low-Heeled Daytime Shoes

Increased interest in sports is given as the chief factor in the college girl's inclination toward lower heel heights on daytime shoes but her choice is also influenced by other considerations such as comfort and the suitability of low-heeled footwear to sports clothes.

The prevalence of "girls of more than average height" was one of the reasons advanced for the increased popularity of low and medium-heeled evening shoes.

Shaded Stockings, Boon to Woman With Bulky Calves

The woman with oversized calves can buy shaded stockings which gradually darken in color at the largest part of the leg and thus have a very slenderizing effect. These stockings shade from a light tan at the foot and ankle to a dark brown at the calf and upper leg. For slimmer legs, there are stockings of sun-an color with feet of dark brown.

PLAID TAILLEUR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Plaid's the thing for your new fall suit if you are seeking the smartest. The one pictured is of heavy plaid linen. It's a real Scotch tartan plaid done in dark green, dark blue lined with white, red and yellow. Black velvet binds the edges, pocket flaps and cuffs. This makes a stunning costume for early fall and later on you will be wanting to copy it in plaid wool. We are quite sure you will for these stunning plaid jacket suits are the "last word" in chic.

Black and Sand Black velvet is worn with a tailored coat of sand-colored wool.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The State of the World. SANTA MONICA, CALIF. — Up in Montreal a veteran showman says he talks with chimpanzees in their own language. I wish he'd ask one of his chimpanzee pals what he thinks about the present setup of civilization.

Because I can't find any humans who agree as to where we all are going and what the chances are of getting there. In fact, the only two who appear to be certain about it are young Mr. Corcoran and young Mr. Cohen, and they seem to hesitate at times — not much, but just a teeny-weeny bit — which is disconcerting to the lay mind. We are likely to lose confidence even in a comet, once it starts wobbling on us.

I'm also upset by a statement from England's greatest star-gazer — they call him the astronomer royal, which, by coupling it with the royal family, naturally gives astronomy a great social boost in England and admits it to the best circles. He says the moon is clear off its mathematically prescribed course.

Cash Versus I. O. U.'s. ONLY a few weeks ago the front pages were carrying dispatches saying the adjustment of Great Britain's defaulted debt was just around the corner. Economists and financiers had discussed terms of settlement. Figures were quoted — mainly figures calling for big reductions on our part, but never mind that. They were figures anyhow.

Lately the papers have been strangely silent on the subject. Perhaps you remember the old story told on the late John Sharp Williams, who frequented a game at Washington where sportive statesmen played poker for heavy stakes — mostly with those quaint little fictional products called I. O. U.'s as mediums of exchange.

Early one morning a fellow censor met the famous Mississippian coming from an all-night session. "I certainly mopped up," he proclaimed. "I won $3,000 — and what's more, $9.75 of it was in cash."

Autumn Millinery. JUST as the poor, bewildered males are becoming reconciled to the prevalent styles in women's hats, up pops a style creator in New York warning us that what we've thus far endured is merely a foretaste of what's coming. In other words, we ain't seen nothin'!

For autumn, he predicts a quaint number with a slanted peak fifteen inches high, which, I take it, will make the wearer look like a refugee trying to escape from under a collapsing pagoda.

Another is a turban entirely composed of rooster feathers. A matching coat of rooster feathers goes with this design. But in the old days they used hot tar.

A third model features for its top-hammer a series of kalsomine brushes sticking straight up. Naturally, the hat itself will imitate a barrel of whitewash.

But the gem of all is a dainty globular structure of Scotch plaid. Can you imagine anything more becoming to your lady wife than an effect suggesting that she's balancing a hot-water bag on her brow?

"McGuffeyisms." THE lieutenant-governor of Ohio urges a return to "McGuffeyism" for settling modern problems.

"Twas in a McGuffey reader that I met these Spartan half-wits of literature — the Spartan boy who let the fox gnaw his vitals; the chuckle-headed youth who stood on the burning deck; the congenial idiot who climbed an alp in midwinter while wearing nothing but a night shirt and carrying a banner labeled "Excelsior" in order to freeze to death; the skipper who, when the ship was sinking, undertook to calm the passengers by — but wait, read the immortal lines:

"We are lost!" the captain shouted. As he staggered down the stair. And then the champion of all — the Dutch lad who discovered a leak in the dyke so he stuck his wrist in the crevice and all night stayed there. In the morning, when an early riser came along and asked what was the general idea, the heroic urchin said — but let me quote the exact language of the book:

"I am hindering the sea from running in," was the simple reply of the child."

Simple? I'll tell the world! Nothing could be simpler except an authority on hydraulics who figures that, when the Atlantic ocean starts boring through a crack in a mud wall, you can hold it back by using one small Dutch boy's arm for a stopper.

How Long Will Our Fuel Supply Last? Here's the Answer

There's Plenty of Coal, but Oil's Running Short

New York.—Unless new methods of obtaining and processing petroleum are developed, America may begin to feel the cramping hand of an oncoming oil shortage in from 10 to 20 years. This is the verdict of Dr. Arno C. Fieldner, chief of the technologic division of the United States Bureau of Mines.

Dr. Fieldner outlined the present resources of the nation's fuels. Of coal America has plenty, said Dr. Fieldner. Enough to last hundreds and perhaps a thousand or more years. But natural gas and oil obtained by present methods may be exhausted in less than a century, he warned.

Trend Favors Coal.
Here is the significant forecast of Dr. Fieldner on America's future fuels:

Coal will continue to be the chief fuel for the generation of public utility and major industrial power. While improved burning of coal might tend to decrease consumption and the further development of water power may be expected to increase, Dr. Fieldner sees an increasing demand for total energy needed by the country so that coal's relative position should be favorable. Moreover, after 10 or 15 years oil resources will become more difficult to exploit, so that the trend will be the increased consumption of coal.

"Tomorrow's power and central heating plants will burn any kind of coal completely and efficiently," said Dr. Fieldner. "There will be no smoke, no dust, and no sulphurous gases emitted to the atmosphere."

Heating Costs Remain Steady.
No substitute for metallurgical coke has appeared, continued Dr. Fieldner. The coke-oven industry should expand. Regulations prohibiting the waste of natural gas and the urge for additional markets will lead to the construction of more long-distance pipe lines which already go from Texas to Chicago and to Detroit. Gas will find industrial and domestic use and will displace oil as well as coal for fuel in some places. As natural gas approaches exhaustion gas from coal will take its place.

Dr. Fieldner sees a further use of automatic coal and gas heating of homes and believes improved insulation will permit heating at about the present costs, despite the inevitable advances in the price of the fuel.

While oil-fuel Diesel engines on railroads may be expected to increase, Dr. Fieldner foresees coal retaining its predominance as the fuel for freight traffic throughout the age of oil and natural gas.

Three-fourths of the world's shipping is now powered by oil fuel. Oil, in fact, has energized marine transport.

On the crucial question of gasoline supplies for automobiles Dr. Fieldner regards present pessimistic fears of a shortage by 1945 as unjustified. Such warnings, he points out, have been issued regularly since the automobile came into use. Scientific research, both in cracking heavy oils to yield more gasoline and the reverse process of polymerization where gasoline is created out of lighter gaseous vapors, should hold the production to levels of demand, states Dr. Fieldner.

Maybe There's Something to Scotch Way After All

Minneapolis, Minn.—Maybe there's something in the thrifty habits of the old Scotchman after all, at least in the case of soap. A little soap and lots of water makes a weak solution, is better than a strong soap solution for washing away dirt.

In the American Chemical society's Fourteenth Annual Colloid Symposium held at the University of Minnesota—here scientists were at last able to explain why.

Studies of Prof. Ernst A. Hauser, H. E. Edgerton and W. B. Tucker of Massachusetts Institute of Technology with a high speed camera showed that the basis of the better cleaning was the formation of drops of a liquid and the accompanying phenomenon of surface tension. Ingenious silhouette pictures of falling drops were shown by the MIT scientists which reveal knowledge having applications in dyeing, tanning and other practical matters beside the washing behavior of soap in solution.

Here's How to Find Out if Dentifrice Hurts Your Teeth

Uncle Sam Tests 25 Brands in Placing Order

Atlantic City.—With a nickel and a piece of glass you can make a simple test that will tell you whether your favorite toothpaste will scratch the enamel of your teeth.

The test is one that the United States government requires for all toothpaste purchased and it was described at the meeting of the American Dental association here by Drs. Wilmer Souder, physicist, and Jrl C. Schoonover, chemist, of the national bureau of standards.

Uncle Sam buys large quantities of toothpaste. When an order for some 14,000 dozen tubes was contemplated, a committee was appointed to write specifications for a safe and effective cleanser for the teeth. These specifications, now adopted for use, were reported here.

Must Not Contain Poison!
Safety for the tissues of the mouth and the teeth was the first consideration of these men when they met to decide what must be contained in Uncle Sam's toothpaste. Next came the question of efficiency in removing foreign materials from the teeth. Last in importance was the matter of flavor or perfume.

A toothpaste must not be excessively either alkaline or acid, it was decided. It must not be caustic. It must not contain arsenic, or other poisons. It must have a preservative that will insure that it keeps in good condition until used.

Twenty-five popular brands of toothpaste were tested against the specifications as adopted for use in government purchasing. More than half failed to meet the requirements, Drs. Souder and Schoonover said. Hardening, separation or spoiling were the most common faults. Some showed signs of chemical attack upon the tube container, and that was considered undesirable.

How to Make Test.
Ten toothpastes among those tested failed on the test for scratching. This test, as developed at the national bureau of standards, can be used by anyone who wants to be sure his dentifrice is not scratching the enamel of his teeth. A piece of glass and a piece of alloy metal of the size and hardness of a five-cent piece are all that are needed for the experiment. First test the glass for hardness by rubbing the edge of the metal piece over it to be sure that the metal alone does not scratch the glass. Human enamel and glass both vary in hardness. The grade of soda-lime glass used in a non-corrosive microscope slide was found to be harder than any of the enamel tested.

Place some of the toothpaste to be tested on the glass and rub again with the coin. If scratches result, then you may expect scratches on your teeth.

Ventilating Experts Seek Way to Ban Odors From Rooms

Swampscott, Mass.—Engineers may discuss ventilating and air conditioning and use their layman-baffling "cfm's" to describe the flow of air, but what most people want to know is what to do about odors when they think of ventilating.

In the meeting of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers here, two scientists from Harvard's school of public health disclosed their studies about odor removal from rooms and auditoriums.

Prof. C. P. Yaglou and W. N. Witheridge showed that there is a characteristic human smell which can be detected in a room after the occupants have left it. This human odor is apparently highly complex, unstable and rapidly breaks down, but there is a certain minimum amount of the odor left in a room which will last for days until it is thoroughly ventilated. The findings show that where numbers of people gather large rooms should be used, for great size acts as a sort of reservoir of odor which allows the initial decrease in intensity of odor to occur harmlessly.

High Heels for Glamor? Cleo, Helen Wore Sandals

Kansas City, Mo.—Outstanding glamor ladies of history, Cleopatra and Helen of Troy, wore sandals, not high heels.

This thought on shoe psychology was presented here to the American Home Economics association by Miss Ruth Kerr of the Calif-Tanners' association.

Declaring that it is a task for the engineer and the physicist, to adapt the facts known about foot balance to shoe design, Miss Kerr said:

"No positive findings have yet been made to establish exactly what happens to the static shoe when it is united with the dynamic foot in action."

FOOD VALUE OF RAW VEGETABLES

Adequate Diet Requires Good Portions Daily.

By EDITH M. BARBER
EVERY once-in-a-while the "natural" food fad puts in an appearance. The theory is that man was meant to partake of foods in the state which nature provides. Primitive man, without doubt, preserved life on a diet of fruits, nuts, roots and other vegetable foods, supplemented by a certain amount of raw meat. His teeth, however, were not strong enough to masticate meat in this form. As soon as the use for cookery was discovered, man became much more certain of the preservation of his life and consequently the development of civilization began.

Through the Middle ages and even later we find that raw vegetables were looked upon with suspicion. Physicians warned their patients against them. Country people, however, especially the peasants, discovered that the greens which grew wild in profusion in the spring provided a remedy for the swollen joints and skin diseases which a diet of salt meat and fish and bread, the staples of their winter diet, produced. "Spillets" became popular among all classes.

Today the adequate diet includes a goodly portion of raw vegetables and fruits for the sake of minerals and vitamins which they provide more liberally than when they are cooked.

Colds Due to Allergy

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

SOMETIMES you find yourself sneezing and coughing with a "running" nose and naturally you believe you have caught a cold and are in for a few days' misery. However, in a very short time, hours at most, the sneezing, coughing, and stuffiness of the nose disappear, much to your surprise.

The truth of the matter is that instead of having the usual "infectious" cold, due to the "cold," flu, or other organisms getting into the system, you really had an "allergic" cold in the head due to some substance you breathed in from the air, or some substance you had eaten.

Dr. Barton

The usual or common cold in the head is due to overheated rooms, lack of ventilation, not enough moisture in the room, exposure to wet and cold, inhaling dust or irritating substances, infected tonsils, and adenoid growths. All these interfere with the mucous membrane of the nose so that it is unable to fight off the organisms that cause the cold. With the usual or common head cold there is a feeling of tiredness, chilliness, slight headache. The symptoms last from two or three days to several weeks.

Not Like Common Colds.

However, in the "cold" due to allergy sensitiveness to various substances—the history, the onset, the symptoms themselves are considerably different from those of the common cold.

Dr. Norman W. Celin, Seattle, Wash., in Northwest Medicine, says "Frequent colds at any season or at special seasons of the year are often manifestations or symptoms of allergy. To diagnose that the condition is allergic there must be an investigation of (1) a family history of allergy, (2) previous allergic history of the patient (asthma, hay fever, eczema, stomach and intestinal upsets) and (3) a present history of allergic symptoms. All foods, plants, substances handled in industry and other substances should be tested by the scratch method or injection into the skin. The most constant symptom of nasal or nose allergy is a "stuffy" nose which is always worse in the morning, chronic cough occurring especially during the early morning hours is likewise a symptom." I believe that these simple methods of learning the difference between the usual head cold due to infections, and colds due to allergy (sensitiveness to substances) will enable us to treat either type intelligently.

Use of Dinitrophenol.

There are cases where the body processes are working at the normal rate, the individual does not eat much food and yet the body weight is much above normal. It is in these cases that the new drug dinitrophenol has been used with much success.

From San Francisco, where a great amount of research work has been done on dinitrophenol, come some interesting findings. In using thyroid extract to make the body processes work faster and so burn up fat, care must be taken where there is any heart ailment as the thyroid extract throws extra work on the heart.

However when Dr. M. L. Tainter used dinitrophenol in three cases of overweight suffering with angina pectoris, without any heart symptoms occurring, Dr. Harold Rosenblum, San Francisco, determined to find whether the dinitrophenol increased the rate of the heart beat, whether it increased the amount of blood the heart pumped and whether it increased the blood pressure.

Accordingly the rate at which the blood was flowing was observed before, during, and after the use of dinitrophenol in patients who were being treated for overweight. The blood travels completely around the body in from ten to sixteen seconds. The tests were made in the morning, no food having been taken since the last meal of the previous day—fourteen hours or thereabouts, the patient lying quietly at rest. A record was also kept of the weight, the pulse rate before and during the period during which dinitrophenol was given.

The results showed that although the rate at which the body processes were working was greatly increased, nevertheless the heart did not beat faster and the amount of blood pumped by the heart was not increased. The blood pressure also was not increased by the dinitrophenol.

The reason that dinitrophenol should only be used under a physician's supervision is that so many are "sensitive" to this drug just as many are sensitive to pollen, furs, hairs and other substances which cause hay fever, asthma, and eczema.

Western Farm Sinks 200 Feet Into the Earth

H. A. Robertson is shown viewing the destruction wrought on the land he is farming near Buhl, Idaho, by the sinking of thousands of square feet of rich soil into the bowels of the earth. More than five acres has already sunk 125 to 200 feet below its normal level, forming a canyon. This phenomenon of nature, experts say, is due to a great fissure beneath much of southern Idaho and may doom a considerable area.

GRASSES, LEGUMES USED AS ENSILAGE

Can Be Kept in Condition by Adding Molasses.

By A. C. Kimrey, Extension Dairy Specialist, North Carolina State College, WNU Service.

With molasses as a preservative, any green crop that will make hay can be stored in a silo without any appreciable loss of feed value.

Corn silage contains substances that act as a preservative, but legumes and grasses do not have enough sugar to ferment properly. By adding molasses to legumes and grasses, the material can be kept in good condition.

The crop can be cut at any stage of maturity and in any kind of weather. However, greater feeding value is obtained if the crop is cut as early in the season as possible without injuring the stand. Cereal crops should be cut when the grain is in the milk stage.

Start cutting early in the morning. If the crop is wet with dew or rain, so much the better. The crop should be put in the silo within a few hours after cutting.

If the crop must remain in the field more than a few hours on a dry day, water should be added as it is blown into the silo.

Around 40 to 45 pounds of molasses should be added to each ton of cereal and grass crops, while 75 to 80 pounds should be added to a ton of legume silage.

The molasses can be added from an elevated barrel by allowing the proper amount to flow through a spigot into the green material as it is fed into the cutter.

Egg Producers, Handlers Can Stop Summer Losses

Producers and handlers of eggs are losing hundreds of dollars every week of warm weather from highly perishable fertile eggs, according to O. C. Ufford, extension poultryman for Colorado State college, Fort Collins.

Suggestions for preventing this loss are outlined as follows:

Roosters should be marketed or confined during the summer so that infertile eggs may be produced.

Provide one nest for each four hens.

Gather eggs more than once a day. Cool eggs before packing them in cases.

Eggs may be cooled and water evaporation from the eggs may be prevented by keeping them in the cellar or by keeping a damp sack over the case.

Market eggs as often as possible during warm weather, preferably about every three or four days.

Keep clean straw in nests. Handlers of eggs will find it more profitable to keep eggs stored in a cool place until they are sold.

Mowing Weeds Aids Grass

Mowing weeds and removing brush and other tall vegetation encourages the spread of more beneficial grasses, clover, and lespedeza, eliminates the competition for moisture and plant food, and results in a turf more resistant to soil erosion. The Soil Conservation Service has found. In the past 2 years mowing has been extended over more than 100,000 previously unmowed acres of grassland on Soil Conservation Service erosion control areas. Fairly high mowing—from 4 to 6 inches when weeds are about in full bloom—is recommended.

Marketing Milk

Three major adjustments in milk transportation and production practices would save farmers thousands of dollars annually, according to agricultural economists of the University of Illinois. More dollars in the pockets of producers and better service to consumers could be brought about by rearrangement of hauling routes so as to reduce mileage and increase load volume, by marketing more milk through country plants and by narrowing the seasonal variation in milk production.

Protein Feeds for Cattle

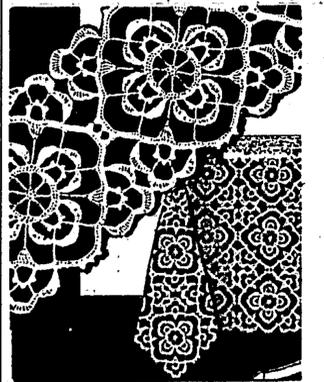

High protein feeds have given faster gains, better finish, and lower costs in cattle fattening than rations with less protein, according to observations made by the University of Illinois. Linseed meal, soybean oil meal and cottonseed meal are the protein feeds generally used. It is profitable to give one pound of one of these feeds, to each seven to ten pounds of corn, depending upon the age of the cattle and the kind of roughage.

Saving Poultry From Heat

Good ventilation in the poultry flock is the best way to prevent heat prostration. The north side of the house should be opened to allow free circulation of the air. Windows or doors on the east or west side of the building should be opened to allow free air movement. If there is a room ventilator it should be opened because this too increases air movements. Insulation of the roof, of course, helps materially to reduce the temperature in the room.

Cuba Independent

On May 31 of 1936 a new treaty between the United States and Cuba was ratified. This treaty superseded that of May 22, 1903, and abandoned the right of the United States to intervene in the internal affairs of Cuba under the so-called Platt amendment.

Under the authority of this treaty the United States had intervened on five occasions. The republic of Cuba is therefore completely independent of the United States.

Women Turn Confidently to

CHERIE NICHOLAS
Nationally Known Fashion Authority

CONCERNING styles and fashions, women desire only that information which they know is authentic. They demand accurate reporting of the new clothing trends, with candid portrayals of the described garments through truthful illustrations. They seek the correct, the latest and finest—but never the bizarre, the extreme or sensational. They wish their fashion writer to speak of smartness and good taste, of what is practical for the average woman, and [a very important item] of garments and hats they can find in their own local stores and shops.

Small wonder, therefore, that women turn confidently to Cherie Nicholas, whose illustrated fashion articles appear regularly in this newspaper. Miss Nicholas tells what the nation's foremost designers and creators of fine styles decree shall be right for the weeks to come.
