FOOTBALL GAME

The Carrizozo Grizzlies journeyed to Capitan last Friday where they met the Capitan High School Tigers. The teams were evenly matched and out for blood. The Grizzlies pushed over a score in the first quarter and from then on the game was fought out with both teams making threats to score. In the third quarter the Tigers intercepted a pass and scored a touchdown, making the game a tie, seven to seven. Bill Beck, our center was the star on the defense, while U. D. Walker showed his power as fullback.

Today the Grizzlies will play Alamogordo in connection with the Otero County Fair

Get 400 Rings Back From Fish

Santa Fe, Sept. 21--- A mounting number of little metal rings with which 2500 trout were marked this spring are being turned into the State Game Department and from them Jimmie Johnson hopes to trace the travel habits of New Mexico trout.

Anglers who caught the marked fish were asked to tell the department where the fish were caught. From this information and the data listed when the fish were "planted," the department will show how far the trout travel up and down stream.

Four hundred of the rings, described as a good return, have been received by the department so far.

Uncle Sam Needs Your Help

Uncle Sam has declared war against a national enemy, the fire demon which is attacking America's forests, threatening her valuable timber supply, turning scenic woodlands into a desolate "No Man's Land", and leaving denuded slopes and their aftermath-- floods, ruined homes, lost lives and ravaged farms.

Someone had aided and abetted the fire enemy by being careless with a match, a tobacco butt or a campfire. Ground cover in the forests is dangerously dry during summer months, and Uncle Sam appeals to every citizen to be "on guard" while in the forests.

Flag's newest patriotic poster will soon appear in public places. original painting will be displayed in several southwestern cities, on a nation-wide tour.

Too Much Water in Tissues

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

SOMETIMES you see an overweight man or woman, who, instead of having a red or rosy complexion, look unusually pale, in fact, "pasty" describes their appearance accurately. They are suspected of having heart and kidney trouble, as this pale, podgy appearance is often present in chronic inflammation of the kidneys. However, when the finger is pressed into the flesh, the flesh does not "pit," and this overweight and pasty appearance is simply due to too much water being allowed to remain in the body tissues.

Now this condition is believed to be due to some disturbance in the pituitary gland lying on the floor of the skull. This little gland seems to regulate to a considerable extent both the water and the starch consumption by the body tissues. Unlike the ordinary or usual overweight cases where the excess weight is due to overeating, these pasty podgy individuals are really not large eaters; in fact they are small eaters. Thus many have been known to retain their weight on 700 calories a day, which would be about one-third the amount of food eaten by the average individual of the same weight and height.

The patients are usually young (twelve to twenty years of age). The output of urine from the kidneys is much below normal, being about one pint a day, whereas the normal output should be more than twice that amount. Such are the characteristics of the "water retainers" as these individuals are called.

Method of Treatment.
You can thus see that the accumulation of water is a big factor in weight production. Naturally if the pituitary gland is at fault in these cases it would be thought advisable to give by mouth or injection some extract of pituitary gland.

In outlining the treatment for these "water retainers," Dr. A. H. Douthwaite in the British Medical Journal says:

"Treatment consists of (1) cutting down the fluid intake to about 1 1/2 pints a day; (2) limiting or cutting down on salt by avoiding salt entirely, both at the table and in the cooking; (3) giving a diet of low caloric (fuel or food) value as follows:

- Six large bananas
- 1 1/2 pints of skimmed milk
- 1/2 of medium sized cabbage or lettuce.

"Divide the above into three or four meals. Loss of weight will be about one-half pound daily. After two to three weeks substitute for two bananas two eggs and a little butter and green vegetables. Fish and lean meat a week later.

"(4) The use of small doses of calomel (mercury) beginning with very small doses (one-tenth to one-quarter grain), and gradually increasing it if there is no reaction or symptoms due to the mercury, or if there is not too much purging.

"The above complete treatment may be repeated four times a year if necessary."

Now this looks very simple but in this type of overweight—water retention—as in all types of overweight the reduction of food is bound to affect the whole body, and notwithstanding the benefit to the working processes of the body by the loss of this water weight, the heart may be affected and must always be watched carefully.

Women Fight Cancer.
Because millions of dollars are being spent and hundreds of research physicians are working night and day to try to discover the cause of cancer, many may have the idea that until that cause is found nothing can be done to save the lives of those afflicted with cancer. Yet every day men and women are attending clinics where by the use of the X-ray, radium, and the knife many are saved.

What should prove a powerful force in spreading the idea that cancer is curable is what will be known as "The Women's Field Army," sponsored by the American Society for the Control of Cancer. Without guns, without uniforms, without poison gas, a war is being launched. It is a war of education against one of the greatest menaces of life: cancer. The first drive against cancer is indeed a war to save human life. The soldiers are the women of America and the enemy is cancer.

Yanks Leave "While Leaving's Good"

Shanghai.—Americans are fleeing Shanghai as Sino-Japanese war terrors mount. This is a scene on Shanghai customs jolly as 350 American women and children were about to board a tender to take them to the liner President Jefferson, Manila bound following evacuation orders.

Aha! Maybe This Is Where Hitch-Hikers Caught Up the Idea

Paris.—It's not often that a cameraman has such luck in picturing a leaping marsupial of the gray kangaroo family with her youngster in its pouch. All the more reason for the novelty of this picture of the youngest hitch-hiker in the Paris zoo.

Less Than 200 Answer G. A. R. Call

Madison, Wis.—First thought of the fewer than 200 Civil War veterans in the annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic was for the comrades who have gone before them. Shown at the memorial services are Alice Cary Risley, eighty-three, of Columbia, Mo., only surviving nurse, and Capt. Eugene Merrick, of Los Angeles.

One Killed, 12 Hurt in Railroad Wreck

New Haven, Ind.—The engineer was killed and a dozen other persons injured as this passenger train, bound from Detroit to St. Louis, plunged from the tracks. The locomotive almost buried itself in the ground at the force of the impact, the cause of which was not immediately determined.

COLOSSAL COD

Catalina Island, Calif.—Little Charles Thompson says now he can understand that story about Jonah and the whale. He's locking into the mouth of a 17-pound rock cod caught in the deep Pacific ocean waters near here. This fish ordinarily "weighs in" at about one-half to two pounds.

what Irwin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Big Book Craze.

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—We're promised a historical novel longer than any yet—say half a million words or so. Of course, the author probably uses some words at least twice, but that won't reduce the gross tonnage unless they're very short words.

I can't take it. While still convalescent from "Anthony Adverse," I was stricken down by "Gone With the Wind" and had such a relapse that even now I barely can hold on my stomach such comparatively light and trifling stuff as volume VET to ZYM of the encyclopedia.

When reading this modern bulk literature, it upsets me to find my legs going to sleep before I do. And the constant pressure makes callouses on my second mezzanine landing. I admit these mass production books serve nicely as door stoppers and for pressing wild flowers. I also heard of a chap who detected a prowler under his window and dropped a frothy little work of fiction weighing slightly less than nine pounds on the back of the fellow's neck, dislocating three vertebrae. At last accounts, the surgeons were still picking long jagged chapters out of his spine.

In my present mood, what I crave is the romantic stuff of olden days, in which our sainted Aunt Sophie was wont to inscribe "Alan, how sad!" or "Only too true!" in pale violet ink on the margins. What happened to all the Aunt Sophies, anyhow?

An Actor's Temperament.

WE'VE all been waiting for something to top it, but the best wheeze of the month remains the one that was emitted, not by a paid gagster, but by a simple stagehand at one of the studios when Mr. Leslie Howard refused to go on making a picture until a group of distinguished visitors, including Mr. Charles Norris, the novelist, had been phoned off the set.

"He ain't core at you gents," stated the stagehand to the ousted parties, "but he's been playin' 'Hamlet' on the regular stage and he ain't used to havin' a crowd watchin' him while he's actin'."

If Mr. Norris and his friends wanted to see some really great acting they should have patronized the professional wrestling matches. That's where they put on the heavy dramatic stuff—beautifully rehearsed, perfectly done.

Children's Education

I LIKE the way the wealthy I classes in England rear their children. Little Rosemary doesn't recite for the company after dinner, and if Master Jones-Terwilliger Minor gets uppity at school, he gets thrashed.

Many a rich American has known how sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to see his daughter grow up a wanton and his boy turn out a wastrel. Yet, with few exceptions—so few that the newspapers comment on them—it never seems to occur to these fond fathers that less of coddling and pampering and spoiling in adolescence and more of wholesome discipline might produce a higher average grade of heirs.

What set me to thinking along this line was being (other night at a party where a poor little four-year-old, having already the pitiable assurance of a veteran prima donna, was fetched in to give impersonations. She never again could impersonate natural babyhood though, more's the pity! And her pert small brother was encouraged to dominate the talk.

Mark my word for it, that kid is going to come to no good end—not even a well-spanked end, which would help.

Mr. Pincus' Coup.

IN THESE topsy-turvy times liberal-minded patriots who are striving to steer a middle course between ultraconservative left-wingers and ultraconservative rightists might do well, methinks, to follow the example set by Mr. Pincus.

Mr. Pincus had opened a clothing store. Immediately on one side of him was the clothing store of Mr. Ginsberg and immediately on the other side was the clothing store of Mr. Dreifus; and three clothing stores in a row were too many even for Essex street.

So the adjacent competitors framed a plot to put the newcomer out of business. Next morning their rival, coming down to open up, found over Mr. Dreifus' establishment a flaming legend, to wit:

BANKRUPT SALE
And above Mr. Ginsberg's door was this equally prominent announcement:

CLOSING OUT SALE
Within an hour, smeared across the entire front of Mr. Pincus' store, exactly in between the other two, appeared a huge sign reading as follows:

Household Questions

Cleaning Brass.—Never use vinegar to clean brass. Though it cleans at first, it soon causes tarnish. The proper materials for cleaning brass are oil and rottenstone.

When Preserving.—Don't pack jars too tightly when preserving fruits and vegetables. Leave a space of at least half an inch at the top for liquid.

Removing Tobacco Stains.—Tobacco stains may be removed from washable materials by moistening with lemon juice and bleaching in the sun.

Brightening Carpets.—Vacuum-clean carpets first to remove the loose dirt and fluff and then sponge or shampoo with a cloth wrung out of warm soapsuds, or use a good carpet soap. Repeat with another cloth wrung out of clear water, and finish with a dry cloth, always rubbing the way of the pile.

Egg as Cleanser.—The yolk of eggs may be used for removing mud, chocolate or coffee stains from any kind of material except velvet. Rub into the stain, wash off with warm soapy water, and rinse thoroughly.

Rice Castles.—Wash 3 ounces rice and boil until tender. Mix with 4 ounces honey, 2 ounces currants, 2 ounces raisins, 2 ounces chopped walnuts. Add a well-beaten egg. Grease some small molds, place a glace cherry in each, and three-parts fill with the mixture. Cover and steam for 1 hour. Serve with custard.

Orchards Gassed to Produce Improved Crops Regularly

Weather Will Not Count, Say Method's Devisers

Washington.—Fruit trees are made to produce regular crops, and on time, too, regardless of the previous winter weather, it is claimed in a patent just granted here to Daniel Glenn Sorber and Marston H. Kimball, California researchers of the United States Department of Agriculture, and assigned to Henry A. Wallace as secretary of agriculture.

This is accomplished, the inventors reveal, by literally gas-attacking the trees with butylene, a hydrocarbon gas.

"There are thousands of acres of walnuts, peaches and other deciduous fruits, including apples, pears, apricots, plums, prunes, cherries and bush berries now planted in areas where in certain years winter weather conditions are unfavorable to the formation of flowers, the setting of fruit, and the production of a crop," state the inventors. "This condition results in failure of trees to produce regular crops, occasioning heavy losses and often seriously crippling the industry."

Will Produce Uniformity in Fruiting.

Such fruit trees as lemon and avocado also exhibit marked alternate bearing tendencies, say the inventors. "The result is a heavy production one year, followed by lighter producing the next, with attendant cultural and marketing difficulties which produce economic losses."

The process used by the inventors to stimulate growth and produce uniformity in fruiting is this: About two weeks before the normal or desired leafing, start of the growth cycle, or blooming time for the variety of trees being treated, the trees are enclosed in tents or gas-tight covers.

Then butylene gas is released inside the tent until the proportion of gas to the atmosphere is 1 part of butylene to 100,000 parts of air. The temperature during treatment is kept between 60 and 100 degrees Fahrenheit. The length of treatment is from one to two hours.

Gas and other chemical treatments have been used in the past to stimulate opening of cut flowers, production of roots on cuttings, etc., but this is the first time whole trees have been gassed to make them blossom at the desired time.

Longer Life for Working Classes Has Been Gained

New York.—Longer life for the working classes in this country has been gained during the past quarter of a century as a result of public health activities, a report of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company shows.

The expectation of life at birth for the industrial policyholders of this company crossed the 60 year mark for the first time in 1935. In 1911 the expectation of life at birth for this class of the population was only 48.63 years whereas now it is 60.25 years.

Expectation of life at birth for the working classes is now almost as good as for the population as a whole, it appears from comparison on the life insurance figures with those of the United States registration area. For the whole population, in 1934, life expectation at birth was 60.25 years.

The gain in life expectation of the insured wage earners appears even more striking when compared with urban dwellers rather than with the population as a whole. This is a fairer comparison, the life insurance statisticians point out, because the insured wage earners live chiefly in cities. White males at age ten in the urban area of the United States gained 3.95 years of life from 1910 to 1930, while white male industrial policyholders at the same age gained 6.77 years from 1911-12 to 1930. At the same age white females in the industrial policyholder group gained a year more than those in the urban area of the United States.

The gain in life expectancy for the industrial class is all the more striking and encouraging because it was made during a quarter century that included the World War, the devastating 1918-19 influenza epidemic and the economic depression, each of which greatly affected the lives and health of the population. Commenting on this, the life insurance officers compliment the health authorities.

Chinese Culture Not So Ancient as People Suppose

Babylonia and Egypt Are Ahead of It in Time

Ann Arbor.—Some people have claimed that the famed and ancient civilization of China grew and flourished in the isolation that occidental travelers knew when they first went there in comparatively recent times. Others hold that China's civilization and its arts were lifted "ready made" from the Near East civilization of Babylonia and Egypt.

Neither theory has any basis of fact, declared Carl Whiting Bishop of the Freer Gallery of Art, Washington, D. C., in an address before the University of Michigan Institute of Far Eastern Studies here.

New knowledge of the last few years is upsetting some long favored conceptions of China and its cultural rise. For one thing Chinese civilization is not one of the oldest in the world, as has been popularly supposed.

What China truly can claim, said Mr. Bishop, is a longer continuous history than most nations have, which helps lend an air of antiquity really unpossessed.

Actually Babylonia and Egypt were flourishing thousands of years before China. But China has changed so slowly that it has retained, almost into present times, some characteristics which have disappeared from other nations long ago. This, again, lends it an air of antiquity to probing men of modern times.

A River-Valley Civilization. The early origins of China's civilization, said Mr. Bishop, appear to have arisen in the basin of the great Yellow river, making it another one of the well-known "river-valley civilizations" like those along the Nile, the Indus and the Euphrates rivers.

When Babylonia and Egypt had advanced well on the way to organized civilization the Chinese dwelt in a state of barbarism only a little more advanced than that of the American Indians on the Atlantic seaboard at the time of the landing of Columbus, declared Mr. Bishop.

One fact indicating that Chinese civilization was probably not of independent, isolated origin is that few, if any, of the domestic animals or food plants of either the modern or ancient Chinese were of native origin. Not only did these forms appear in the Near East long before they appeared in China but also there appear to be no wild forms native in China from which they could have come. However, the migration of these foods and plants was accomplished before the beginning of China's historical period and hence, again, their presence seems to lend another bit of evidence to great antiquity; antiquity really not possessed.

Changes Came Very Slowly.

At the earliest known historical time in China—about the middle of the second millennium B. C.—society was divided there into two great classes: land-holding feudal lords and a great mass of serf population. The former class can be said to have been in the Bronze age of civilization, while the latter were still, in effect, dwelling in the New Stone age of their ancestors.

Then, about the Eleventh century B. C., came the invasion of China by the peoples of unknown but probably related origin, the Chou. With this invasion came significant changes that occurred slowly but surely. By 200 B. C., China was finally coming into her Iron age, said Mr. Bishop.

Autocratic government in China, centered in a single emperor, did not arrive until the Third century, B. C., Mr. Bishop added. With this important change Chinese civilization took on those characteristics that marked it for the next two thousand years or until the impact of sea trade routes led to its collapse.

Briton Sees Great Advance in Battle to Defeat Cancer

New York.—A "great advance in the struggle against cancer" was reported by Dr. W. Cramer, of the Imperial Cancer Research fund, London, to the American Journal of Cancer here.

This is the fact that the increase in cancer during the last 20 years, in England at least, is almost all in the age groups over 65 years. This is true for cancer of the organs most frequently attacked by cancer, such as the tongue, esophagus, stomach, intestines, liver and pancreas in men, and the uterus in women. The only exception is in the case of breast cancer in women. Here there is found a significant increase even in the earlier age groups.

THOUGHTS TURN TO BLUEBERRIES

Delicious With Cream, Also in Pies and Cobblers.

By EDITH M. BARBER

WHAT'S the difference between huckleberries and blueberries? That's a difficult question to answer, because the terms are used differently in various sections of the country. Generally, however, those berries of a blue shade which have a certain frosted appearance are called blueberries, while those which are almost black and have a clear color are known as huckleberries. The first which come to market during the season grow on small shrubs. Later come the berries from the taller bushes.

The majority of our supply grows wild in such profusion that the berries are often gathered by rakes, after which they are winnowed by machinery in order to clean them. Others are picked by hand.

Like other berries, they seem to belong with sugar and cream and are put to good use for one of our favorite American pies. They are an addition to muffins and to griddle cakes, and, of course, make delicious cobblers—and other desserts of this type. Sometimes a little lemon juice is added with the sugar to provide a tang. Although the berries have a natural sweetness, they still need plenty of sugar to combine with their juice.

Blueberry Pie.

Pastry
1 tablespoon sugar
1 tablespoon flour
2½ cups blueberries
Flour
¼ cup sugar (about, depending on sweetness of the fruit).
Line a pie plate with pastry, dredge with a tablespoon of sugar mixed with an equal amount of flour. Fill with the berries, which have been slightly dredged with flour, sprinkle with sugar and cover with a top crust. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, for ten minutes; then reduce the heat to 350 degrees Fahrenheit and bake forty to forty-five minutes.

Huckleberry Muffins.

¼ cup butter
¼ cup sugar
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 cups flour
1 cup milk
1 cup huckleberries
Cream the butter and sugar and add egg. Sift baking powder, salt and rest of flour and add alternately with the milk. Add floured berries and bake twenty-five minutes at 400 degrees in greased muffin pans. This mixture may be baked in a greased cake pan in a moderate oven for 30 minutes and served with a hard or creamy sauce.

Baked Tuna Fish.

2 cups canned tuna fish
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups tomato juice
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon sugar
1 cup American cheese, grated
Flake tuna fish apart. Melt butter, add flour and mix until smooth. Add tomato juice, salt, pepper and sugar. Bring slowly to the boiling point, stirring constantly until thick. Add tuna fish, pour into a buttered casserole and cover top with cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) twenty to twenty-five minutes.

Plum Dumplings.

1½ pounds plums
½ cup water
¼ cup sugar
Dumplings
Wash plums and cook covered until pits come to the top. Skim out pits and stir in sugar. Drop dumpling dough from a tablespoon on top of plum mixture and cook slowly fifteen minutes. Serve hot.

Fried Peaches.

Cut six peaches in halves and remove the stones but not the skins. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a frying pan and place the halves in the pan with the cut side down. Cook until soft, basting with butter. Turn and fry on the other side for a few minutes; add more butter as needed. Sprinkle with one-half cup granulated sugar and cook until the sugar melts. Serve with hot meat or as a dessert.

Butterscotch Sauce.

2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup cream
Put sugar in heavy frying pan and stir with wooden spoon over a low heat until melted. Add cream gradually. Stir until smooth, and serve hot over ice cream or cottage pudding.

White Cake.

2 cups sifted cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
¼ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 egg whites stiffly beaten
Sift flour once, add baking powder and sift together. Cream shortening thoroughly, then add sugar gradually and cream together until light and fluffy. Add flour to creamed mixture, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time. Beat after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased nine-inch layer pans in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) one hour.

When King George Received the Big News from America

Samuel Morse, inventor of the electric telegraph, had only one ambition as a young man and that was to become an artist. He studied under Washington Allston, then the greatest painter in the United States, and with Allston went to London in 1811. There he met Benjamin West who, although an American, was president of the Royal Academy, and a great favorite with the king, who later made him Sir Benjamin West.

West was actually at work on a portrait of the king when the latter was handed the Declaration of Independence. Morse heard the poignant story from West himself, says Ernest Greenwood in "From Amber to Amperes." Here it is—as related by Morse:

"Turning to the picture of the king, Sir Benjamin West said: 'Do you see that picture, Mr. Morse? Well, sir, the king was sitting for me when the box containing the American Declaration of Independence was handed to him.'"

"Indeed!" I answered, "and what appeared to be the emotion of the king? What did he say?" "Well, sir," said West, "he made a reply characteristic of the goodness of his heart," or words to that effect. "Well," he said, "if they can be happier under the government they have chosen, then under mine, I shall be happy!"

Morse stayed four years in England where he achieved considerable success as a portrait painter. Then returning to his native country, he afterwards became president of the national academy and an eminently successful painter, his sitters becoming so numerous that he was unable to meet and fill all of his orders. It was during his return voyage to America in 1832, following a second visit to Europe, that Morse got his conception of the telegraph. Twelve years later—May 24, 1844—he gave a public demonstration of his invention, sending a message from Washington to Baltimore. The rest is well known history. —Kansas City Star.

The Scales

WHAT goes up must come down. Or if you wish to put it in more scientific language: Action is equal to reaction and in the contrary direction.

This is the law of compensation. It is the one fixed, immutable law of life and it applies to everything, everywhere. It cannot be evaded or avoided. The working of it may be immediate or it may be a matter of centuries, but if we keep ourselves aware of it we may be saved disappointment and disillusion.

The extent to which we try to restrict that law is absurd. We speak of balanced budgets, balanced rations, and the balance of trade; but we quite ignore balanced lives and balanced sociology; so, in the end, Nature takes the job off our hands, with the consequent upheavals and disturbances.

We work or play to excess, we indulge our appetites and our senses to repletion, perhaps to gluttony, and when we suffer during Nature's work of restoring balance, we rail at fate.

In monarchy and republic we allow our thirst for power and for money to overbalance our lives, both individually and socially, then blame God and man for the chaos which attends the restoration of balance.

In all the affairs of life we may evolve philosophies and devise systems; but just so long as they are out of balance, individually, socially, industrially or governmentally, just so long will the scale teeter up and down to our discomfort.

If as individuals our lives are out of balance, the structure as a whole must also be out of balance; and in time that balance must be restored—by us or by THOSE WHO FOLLOW.—Ray S. Ayers in Detroit News.

A Worthy Object

WILL power is the mental experience exercised in bringing about a desired end. Therefore, I say that a man must necessarily have a worthy object in view to bring out the best in him—that a man must see more than a salary to be more than a salaried man. A man must see the position of ownership, partnership, management, or increased award, in order to awaken his will power.

The man who does good to another does even more good to himself.

Funster Ought to Have Recognized His Fellow

Jones de Vere Jones decided it would be fun to spend a day in the country. Back to Nature, and all that.

Meeting a farmer in a field he thought to have some fun with him.

"Good-morning," he started. "I must say I admire your part of the country."

Then he noticed a scarecrow in the middle of the field.

"And is that one of the oldest inhabitants?" he went on, pointing to the scarecrow.

"Now, zur," came the slow reply. "That be no oldest 'habitant. Just a visitor like yourself."

First Choice OF FARMERS

Firestone GROUND GRIP TIRES

FARMERS everywhere are saying that the amazing Firestone Ground Grip Tire is FIRST in performance and FIRST in economy. So many thousands of farmers are changing over to this wonderful tire that production has been greatly increased to meet the demand.

FIRST IN DRAWBAR PULL. The greater drawbar pull of this amazing tire accounts for its ability to do more work in a given time.

FIRST IN TRACTION. The patented Ground Grip Tread takes a deeper bite into the soil. Added strength to resist the strain of heavy pulling is provided by Gum-Dipping the cord body. Every fiber of every cotton cord is saturated with liquid rubber by this patented Firestone process. Two extra layers of Gum-Dipped cords under the tread bind the tread and cord body so solidly together that we guarantee they will not separate.

FIRST IN ECONOMY. Saves up to 50% in fuel over steel-lugged wheels. Covers more acres per day. Low-cost Firestone cut-down wheel program permits using one set of tires on several different implements.

FIRST IN SALES. Firestone Ground Grip Tires have such outstanding leadership in performance that sales are soaring. Don't wait another day—see the Firestone Ground Grip Tire today at your nearest Firestone Implement Dealer, Tire Dealer or Auto Supply and Service Store.

N. M. State Fair

Whether you were born in Maine or California, Washington or Florida you will see your state represented by a float in the opening parade of the Eastern New Mexico State Fair to be held in Roswell October 6, 7, 8 and 9. Native sons of each state are planning decorated cars or floats typical of their particular state. This is only one of many features of the parade which will officially open the four day state event.

Exhibit space in general exhibits building is practically all reserved the advance reservations being heavier than ever before in the fifteen years the fair has been held. More room has been allotted this year for the classified farm products section because exhibitors from all parts of the state have indicated they will bring or send entries. Last year twenty-two counties were represented and this year directors hope to increase this number. New Mexico Crop Improvement Association will again have one of the outstanding departments of the fair.

Livestock barns will be filled with Herefords, sheep, dairy cattle, and hogs and poultry building will be taxed to hold the entries expected.

Old timers day—for those who have been in New Mexico thirty years or longer—will again be Friday October 8, with a parade of old time vehicles and many of the old timers wearing clothing popular when they first reached the state.

GMC Trucks

Dredged up from the shoal waters of San Francisco Bay, the 430 acre site of the Golden Gate International Exposition is nearing completion on schedule for opening of the Exposition in 1939. Unusual interest, both from engineering and civilian viewpoints, is attached to this undertaking for after the close of the fair the site will be transformed into a fine municipal airport.

In this gigantic construction feat, as in the building of the Golden Gate and San Francisco Bay bridges, GMC trucks have labored ceaselessly to complete their tasks on schedule. A fleet of six Model T-46s in the service of the Basalt Rock Company of Napa, Calif., has transported approximately one-half of the riprap material forming the huge sea wall around the entire exposition site.

Over 140,000 tons of rock were involved in this particular phase of the undertaking. Material was hauled by the trucks from the quarry to barges 1 1/2 miles distant. The barges were loaded in daytime, towed by tugs down the bay at night to the Exposition site and next day the material was transferred to its permanent position by floating derricks utilizing a clam shell.

The sea wall formed by the riprap varies from 15 to 20 feet in height. Three grades of stone were used, ranging from Grade C fine to Grade A, consisting of boulders weighing from 500 to 6,000 pounds. To haul this coarse material the GMC trucks were equipped with extra heavy 8 cubic yard capacity riprap bodies. The trucks have been engaged constantly in this work for nearly a year.

Babies in the firing line would undoubtedly be a major scandal in any country in the world today. No person with any pretensions to humanity could tolerate such a thing for a moment. The thing is unthinkable, damnable, horrible! How many of our fond parents, uncles, aunts and dear, dear family friends realize, however, that every time they gather round and admire the new arrival in the family and kiss it fondly on its little mouth—such a rosebud mouth—that they are actually bombarding the helpless little child with all the bacteria that they may at the time be carrying in their mouths, noses and throats. Here is a partial list of some of the bacterial bombardment that the baby may have to suffer. First of all of course one of the aggressors may without their knowledge, be a diphtheria carrier. They may be transmitting measles, or influenza, or meningitis, or mumps, or infantile paralysis, or scarlet fever, or any one of many other communicable diseases. Even Syphilis cannot be ruled out.

Poor babies in the firing line! They cannot tell the admiring throng what they think. Perhaps in their ignorance they don't think. All they can do is to squirm and suffer perhaps in silence but more probably not. Parents and others should and must realize that babies are not merely pretty playthings to be made over and to be slobbered over at will by all and sundry. They are living beings and they represent the coming generation of full blooded Americans who we hope will carry on the traditions and all that is best in our country.

Parents should lay down a rule and apply it not only to relations, friend but also to themselves. Babies can be looked at from a

FLEET STALKS 'PIRATES'

Britain, France Will Patrol Mediterranean for 'Subs' . . . Japs Advance as Chinese Start Tactical Retreat

Edward W. Pickard

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

© Western Newspaper Union

Showdown on 'Sub' Piracy

GREAT BRITAIN and France were massing the greatest destroyer fleet ever operated in the Mediterranean sea, to police it and safeguard neutral shipping from attacks by "pirate" submarines, as a result of the agreement signed by nine powers at Nyon, near Geneva.

The principal provisions of the agreement, which Germany and Italy were invited to join, were:

- 1. Mediterranean shipping will be restricted to the regular ship lanes, which will be patrolled by French and British warships, in both the eastern and western stretches. If Italy agreed, she was to be allowed to patrol the Tyrrhenian sea. 2. Patrolling navies will attack and attempt to destroy any submarine which attacks merchant ships other than Spanish, without first giving passengers and crew opportunity to leave in lifeboats, as outlined in the 1936 London naval treaty.

- 3. Signatories expressly declare that they do not concede belligerent rights to either party in Spain. 4. Patrol ships arriving on the scene of an attack too late to prevent it will be authorized to attack any submarine in the vicinity, provided they are satisfied it is the guilty one. 5. These measures will be executed by the British and French fleets anywhere in the Mediterranean with the exception of the Adriatic. Eastern powers will protect neutral shipping in their territorial waters. 6. Signatories agree not to let any of their own submarines put to sea in the Mediterranean unless accompanied by a surface vessel, except in certain "exercise" zones. 7. Signatories will not permit foreign submarines in their waters unless in urgent distress or on the surface and accompanied.

It was plain that delegates knew that explosions might occur in half a dozen European capitals if their pact did not get into operation before there were any further attacks on shipping. They were embarrassed in conference by the Russian foreign commissioner, Maxim Litvinoff, who insisted on naming Italy as the "pirate" Russia at first refused to sign, on the grounds that the second provision was no protection at all, merely requiring submarine commanders to be "gentlemanly" before sinking ships, and that it implied recognition of both Spanish parties as belligerents.

China's German Strategy

JAPAN'S long-awaited "big push" in China was believed definitely "on" as the Japanese assumed virtual control of North Hopen, and made important thrusts into the Chinese lines at Shanghai, after the most terrible fighting of a month of undeclared warfare.

At about the same time, the Chinese, heeding at last the advice of German officers generally conceded the "brains" of the central army, began a strategic retreat to the "third area of defense" mapped out by these same officers after the Shanghai conflict of 1933, which was conducted under identical conditions.

Included in the Japanese drive to break the 20-mile Chinese line from the Wosung forts to Lihuo were more bombings and shellings of the heavily populated Chinese districts of Nantao, Chapel and Lungwa, with women and children accounting for most of the enormous casualty list.

The Japanese conquest of North Hopen appeared to have been clinched with smashing victories at Machang and Taingsien. Taingsien is 40 miles south of Tientsin and only 16 miles from Tsangchow, where the principal Chinese defenses of the area are located. From Tsangchow to Paotingtu there exists a strong, unbroken Chinese line which includes the finest Chinese war equipment and the country's heaviest artillery.

HANDS ACROSS EUROPE

Jointly refusing to attend the anti-"piracy" conference, Hitler (left) and Mussolini once more show the complete accord of the two Fascist governments.

man advisers finally won them over to the theory that these positions had been held at a cost far out of proportion to their importance.

Japan has depended largely upon the naval guns for most of her artillery shelling and, attacking farther back from the river, will lose that advantage. The presence of Japanese warships was an important factor in the heavy Chinese casualty list, which totaled 20,000 killed and 20,000 wounded. The invaders lost 10,000 men killed and an unestimated number wounded.

The first strategic stage of the Chinese fighting in Shanghai—as planned by the German officers—was to slow down and harass the landing of Japanese reinforcements; the second, to divide the Japanese line; and the third, to deprive the Japanese of the use of their naval guns.

Realizing what is going on, the Japanese command has ordered rapid advance no matter what the cost, in an effort to change an orderly retreat into a complete rout. As a result, the Japanese for the time being are the heavy losers in men, rather than the Chinese. The latter have been covering their maneuver well, leaving land mines in their wake which have blown whole Japanese units to bits, and continuing to throw a curtain of artillery fire in front of the invaders. The city of Shanghai is a mass of fires and ruin such as no one has ever seen there before.

$300,000,000 in New Money

SECRETARY OF THE TREASURY MORGENTHAU has agreed to issue $300,000,000 in cash against an equal amount of the treasury's "sterilized" gold. The move was believed to have been made because of recent weakness in the market for government bonds and a 40 per cent decline in the stock market over a period of about four weeks.

In addition, the open market committee of the federal reserve board announced that it had authorized the twelve federal reserve banks to buy additional amounts of short term government securities.

In some quarters, the treasury's move was interpreted as an about face by the administration, reversing its year-old policy of trying to prevent an untimely inflation.

'Keep Us Out of War'

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, anxious over conditions in Europe and the Far East, cut his vacation short and returned to Washington to discuss developments with his cabinet. After discussing the situation with Norman H. Davis, his European ambassador-at-large, and Bernard M. Baruch, and getting reports from the State department, he was said to be convinced that there was a real possibility of implication of the United States in a foreign war.

In an address before an outdoor meeting of Dutchess county (N. Y.) citizens President Roosevelt had said, "World conditions are pretty serious. I am glad to say . . . that we are going to do everything we can in the United States—not only the people of the United States but the government of the United States—to keep us out of war." He added that "it will take a lot of planning to keep us out of war."

16,098,000-Bale Cotton Crop

The nation's largest cotton yield in the nation's history was forecast by the Department of Agriculture, which estimated a 1937 crop of 16,098,000 bales. The cotton crop September 1 was 75 per cent of normal, indicating an average yield per acre of 228.5 pounds.

Yanks in Far East 'Kick'

AMERICANS in Shanghai, constantly in danger of their lives, cabled Washington, demanding the protection of United States ships. The American Chamber of Commerce in the war-torn city asked Secretary of State Hull for immediate clarification of the State department's stand. Some of them were bitter toward President Roosevelt, who, from his yacht, had told newspaper men that Americans in the war zone would remain there at their own risk.

Many business men, with lifetime savings invested there vigorously urged the President to adopt "a foreign policy with a strong front and keep the American flag waving." One veteran Yank resident circulated a petition demanding that the President "get off his yacht, get on his feet and get some guts above them."

American missionaries and business men protested that the United States' position in the Far East was largely the result of their life's work, and insisted on a more steadfast attitude to keep the American stake in China. The State department replied that there was a broad distinction between getting out of the line of fire and relinquishing privileges established over the years. Vice consuls in many Chinese ports were ordered to leave their posts.

Headache for the League

AT GENEVA, the Chinese delegation framed an appeal against Japanese invasion, to be presented to the League of Nations. The appeal, which urged peace-loving members and non-members to join in action against the "aggression," invoked Article 17 of the League covenant, which would invite Japan to sit in on the council of reply. If the accused nation refuses the invitation sanctions may be applied against it. Japan has definitely indicated she intends to reject any such invitation.

The Chinese statement charged that since mid-August Japan has thrown 60,000 troops into the Wosung-Shanghai area. "The intention of Japan . . . cannot otherwise be interpreted than to dominate Shanghai . . . and to attack Nanking, the capital," the statement said. It also declared that the Japanese blockade of the entire Chinese coast was illegal.

Hitler: 'Stand by Japan'

A DOLF HITLER, in a manifesto to the German nation, offered to stand by both Italy and Japan in a "defensive fight against bolshevism." He charged that the "two major wars" now going on (the Sino-Japanese and the Spanish civil wars) were the result of "attempts to spread communism."

The Reichsfuehrer's speech was read to the Nazi party congress in Nuremberg while he sat on the platform. It could not have been better timed in view of the current friction between Italy and Soviet Russia over submarine piracy in the Mediterranean.

Germany and Italy's "community of interests" have emerged in recent months, he said, "more and more an element in the defense of Europe against chaotic imbecility." His manifesto continued: "Our (anti-communistic) agreement with Japan serves the same fundamental mission—to stand together in defense of world civilization."

Nazi Too Busy to Fight

A DOLF HITLER, German dictator, struck what might have been a cheerful note, in conference with foreign government representatives at the Nazi rally in Nuremberg, when he declared that Germany is too busy to become involved in any war. He said that the plans which he and other Nazi leaders have for the country would take from 20 to 40 years to complete, and that war might be disastrous to them.

The Reichsfuehrer reiterated his belief that Germany's colonies must be returned to her, to furnish a market for her goods. He implied that Great Britain need have no fear of the Nazis maintaining naval bases in colonies, for the expense of that would offset the economic advantage created by them.

McGrady Quits Labor Post

EDWARD F. MCGRADY, assistant secretary of labor, and chief strike trouble shooter of Mme. Frances Perkins' department, resigned to devote his talents to radio. He left his $9,000-a-year job to take the post of executive vice president in charge of industrial relations with the Radio Corporation of America, at a salary variously estimated at from $15,000 to $50,000.

In a letter to McGrady, President Roosevelt expressed "deep regret," and added, "Your efforts to maintain harmonious labor relations have always been in the public interest and in fairness to workers and management."

McGrady had been one of the federal mediators who failed to achieve a settlement of the C. I. O. strike against "Little Steel." In his new position, his services will be available to the government upon call, it was reported.

Striking Wools for Town, Campus

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SMART clothes are alive with fabric interest this fall. The wools that tailor to town and campus needs are especially intriguing and seeing that the first requisite of a perfect autumn wardrobe is a tailored outfit that will prove "first aid" no matter what apparel emergency may arise, here's telling you about the fascinating weaves that lead in fashion this season.

Tweeds especially have a lot of texture interest. They are nubbed and flecked in decorative weavings that capture your fancy at first sight. When you go tweed shopping, and of course you will if you are assembling a school-faring clothes collection, ask to see some of the new-season candlewick tweed, the latest herringbone weaves, smart diagonals, the houndstooth, tattersall, rosey plaid and sugar-leaf patternings, and you will feel, having seen these, that you have had a liberal education on the subject of tweeds at the very start.

The next thing is to decide on which tweed is the tweed you want most. To help you out we are suggesting a nubby beige tweed flecked with white such as makes the smart three-piece costume as shown to the left in the picture. Here is an outfit that is ideal for fall wear on campus or in town. It pretty near comes to being a whole wardrobe in itself. A suit that has a topcoat as has this is an economical buy no matter what it costs, for it takes care of the problem of an early fall coat since it can be worn as a separate wrap. Note its button-back revers, also the unpressed pleats running down from the slash pocket lines. The matching suit has a chic high lapel collar, triangular pockets and narrow leather belt. The skirt is cut straight and plim as a fashionable daytime skirt must be this season.

And we are not through talking about tweeds for we just must mention the especially lovely "winter pastels" that belong to the tweed family. More than likely you won't be able to resist them because of the fine shetland and other fine yarns used in the spinning. You can get novelty open weaves if you wish.

DRAPE AND SHIRT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A perfect afternoon frock for the young girl is this style in spongy texture lightweight wool. The draped button-over neckline and the shirring at the bodice are very new and attractive. A narrow gold-colored belt accents the fitted waistline. The skirt is softly flared.

Double-Duty Capes

Enter the double-duty shouldercape, which may be looped up over the wearer's head and used as a hood.

Very youthful and attractive for campus wear is the two-piece frock of sheer rabbit woolen centered in the group. The pleated-all-around skirt bespeaks "last word" vogue. You really must have a pleated wool skirt if you are going away to school to wear with your sweater, with your suede jacket, and with blouses galore. The wide shoulder line, high lapel collar and front-buttoned jacket closing are nice points but we've saved the nicest point to the last—those cunning little bows on the pockets! Now there's an idea that's going to send you right to the head of the class. Made of the very softest material as the suit itself these bows add infinitely to the chic of this most attractive outfit and make it outstanding.

A luxurious natural wolf tuxedo collar runs the length of the topcoat of this stunning three-piece costume shown to the right. The tuxedo ensemble is made of novelty woolen with a diagonal rib weave in deep brown flecked with beige. This outfit is entirely in line with the vogue this season that calls for lavishness of fur on suits and coats. The tuxedo effects are especially good this season. Handsome furs will be used unsparingly with care taken in achieving color blends that unify the costume.

Citing other fashionable wool weaves, there are the new coating fabrics that have long hair interspersed and tightly embedded in the texture, their sheen contrasting against the soft surface of the fabric. Tightly twisted boucle nubs are also decorative and colorful. Persian lamb cloth is a new fabric this season. For children's coats, a new chinchilla fabric in soft colors is important. Fleeces, both woven and knitted, are in demand. Suedes, velours and duvelynes are outstanding for dressy wear. For formal type costumes broadcloth is a leader.

DAYTIME SKIRTS TO BE SHORT AND SLIM

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Short, slim and pencil-like is the dictum for daytime skirts. The accepted length for the suit skirt is from twelve to fifteen inches from the ground. Depends on how conservative you may be. Of a necessity these narrow skirts often have slashed hemlines. Daytime dresses hover about twelve to fourteen inches from floor.

For evening dresses the newest thing is the short-in-front hemline. In fact uneven hemlines are a most important styling detail. A few designers continue to favor the short full ballerina skirts for dance frocks. There are dinner gowns galore that are ankle length and sheathlike, for the most part in sleek black, many of which are enlivened with glittering touches.

The majority have high necklines with flattering short sleeves. However, in the practical daytime dresses long sleeves perfectly fitted, also bracelet sleeve lengths are featured.

Slide Fasteners Used

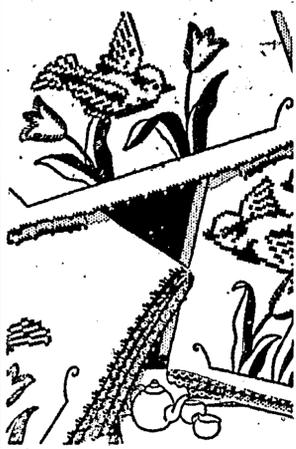

The Schiaparelli type of housecoat developed in flannel and fastening at the front with a patent slide fastener is popular.

Flaring Youth

For college girls and the very young, important collections include gored, flaring skirts and some which are pleated all around.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

NEW husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month. You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up each before marriage has time to sour. And if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.

For three generations women have told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. CHAPTER XII—Continued

"I don't know how much Vic knows," Quentin said, with simplicity. "I know I'm—I'm damned sorry about the whole thing, I'm horribly sorry. I blame myself entirely. I don't think we thought what we were getting into, how horribly rotten the thing was!"

"We knew that we loved each other. Some of those first days," Serena said, "ah, weren't they heaven? We were brave, then, we weren't thinking all the time of what the world would say. Vicky knows something, of course," she added, "but she doesn't know everything. She doesn't know that I went twice to Los Angeles with you, lover; she hasn't seen any of your letters."

There was a silence, during which Quentin looked at the darkening strip of western sky up beyond the hills; his brows knit, his jaw set, his hands jammed into his pockets. "You're forgetting Spencer," Quentin observed dryly. Serena took instant hope from the words.

"Lover," she said, "he may not be a problem long. He's taking that sleeping stuff all the time. I told Dr. Cudworth the other day that it made me anxious, that some day he would sleep too deep and not wake up. I did really—I went into his office and told him, because I thought, 'If anything happened, some day Spencer may not wake up at all.'"

"You're making this so horribly hard, Sina." He put away the insistent arms. "I tell you it's all over. Good-night!" he said almost inaudibly, turning away. She followed him swiftly, caught at his arm.

"Oh, no, no, no! You can't do that. You can't just say good-night! When can I see you, Quentin? I must see you. We must settle this!"

"It's settled," he said, briefly. "Nothing's settled!" she said breathlessly. "Not one thing is settled! I can ruin your life, Quentin; I can tell Vicky everything."

"If you want to talk about it, although it seems to me we've said everything there is to say," he compromised unwillingly. Serena drew near to him again eagerly. "But remember I've got to take the Keats children home!"

"Quent, Serena Morrison is extremely anxious to get hold of you," Vicky said calmly, a few days later.

He and she were alone beside the evening fire in their little upstairs sitting room. The doctor had been reading some scientific article in a medical magazine, had finished it, and was lying back in his chair, his arms locked behind his head, his stretched legs crossed, his eyes half closed. Victoria was working at the flat-topped desk just behind him. Bills, receipts, checkbook, papers of all sorts were scattered before her; she made notes with a very sharp pencil.

"I think I am going to come out even!" she had announced some moments earlier. And then, contentedly, "This is pleasant, isn't it?" but to neither remark had Quentin made any reply. He had shown no interest even when the telephone bell had trilled, except for a glance toward Vicky and a faint shake of the head, and Vicky had duly announced to the unseen speaker that the doctor had gone out for a moment.

But his abstracted mood somehow only accentuated her happiness tonight; these had been wonderful days, the days since his return. He and she had been closer together in every way than they had been for a long time. It had not been only that Quentin had been gentler, or kinder, or more generous than before, but he had been curiously, dumbly devoted, wanting to be at home, seeming to love every minute of his life there, quietly contriving to re-establish himself in the children's plans, to contribute to the happiness of them all.

"Life would simply be heaven if it could go on this way!" Vicky, feeling herself pleasantly capable over her book-keeping, had been thinking to herself when the telephone had rung a second time. And after having for a second time disposed of its claim, she had observed mildly: "Quent, Serena Morrison is extremely anxious to get hold of you."

That roused him. He turned his head to frown dark brows knitted in a faint scowl.

"Was that Serena?"

"Yes. She must know I often imitate Anna," Victoria said thoughtfully. "But I can't help it. I don't want to talk to her."

"Telephone often?" Quentin asked with a little effort.

"Lately, yes. She's called about five times today. She usually says that she's anxious to see you, but today she's been saying that Spencer is ill."

"They have a doctor," Quentin said dryly.

"I know it. Cudworth. He's a good man, isn't he, Quent?"

"Fine. Old-fashioned. But he's all right," Quentin answered and lapsed into silence again.

Presently he began: "There's something I want to say to you, Vic."

Victoria looked at him with bright eyes.

"It's probably something I've never asked you to say," she said evenly.

"No, you've never asked me to say it. And it won't do any particular good for me to say it," the man answered, his body bowed forward now, his big hands locked between his knees, his eyes on the fire. "But I'd like to say this, just the same. I've been—I'm just beginning to realize what a fool I've been! I've known I was a fool for a long time—since last summer, since Mart was born. I had time to think about it in Germany. My God, what I went through there, missing you all—Kenty and Sue and little Mad and the new baby! And I thought what a fool I'd made of myself, and how I'd hurt you."

Victoria left the desk and took the chair opposite his own. The spring night was cold, and she had put on for dinner an old brown velvet gown with a deep, childish embroidered collar; her waved brushed mop, her round serious eyes, and the flat-heeled brown velvet slippers she crossed on a footstool all helped to give her the aspect of a child.

"You mean you wish you were done with Serena?"

"I am done with her!" Quentin muttered, not raising his head from his hands. "It was all over six months ago."

"Was That Serena?"

"Ha!" Vicky commented and was silent.

"It's all a mess! She—" He stopped, but his tone and the long pause were eloquent.

"Why don't you see Serena and have it over?" Vicky asked presently, quite simply.

"I have seen her," Quentin growled.

"Since you got home?"

"There were letters waiting when I got here, ten days ago," Quentin said, the painful rush of his words showing, even under the circumstances, his relief at finding an opportunity to talk. "All that week she telephoned, and twice she came to the office, but I was only doing appointment work last week and didn't see her. Then on Saturday, when Vi and the kids were here—remember?—I went up to the barn to see Moogy and the puppies, and she was waiting there—said she had been watching us on the lawn."

"Good heavens!" Vicky said. "Then it isn't that Spencer's ill," she mused. "He didn't look as if he'd been ill today."

"Of course not!"

"You've changed and she hasn't," Vicky added, in the same reflective tone. "That's it?"

"I've made such a mess of it; I've let you in for all this," Quentin muttered, grinding his graying hair in his big hands. "Vic, there's no use saying I'm sorry! There's nothing I can say."

"She doesn't seem to have much shame about it," Vic observed mildly. "Oh, my God, to be as happy as this again!" she said in her soul.

"Now," Quentin said, after thought, and with a change of tone—"now she's everywhere, Vic waiting for me. As far as I'm concerned, it's all been over for a year; it's stale, it's cold, God knows I wish I need never set eyes on her again! But now's the time, she wants to see me. She keeps asking me, what has she done? Who has been telling me things about her?"

CHAPTER XIII

Victoria raised her round eyes.

"Is that the line?"

"I'm telling you about it," Quentin muttered, surprised at himself. "But you're not like most women, you're different! I need you, even in this. I can't get out, unless you help get me out. I let myself in for it, I've nobody to blame but myself, but I can't get myself out. She's everywhere," he went on, glancing up restlessly, glancing back again. "If Johnny and I go to lunch at the St. Francis hotel, she's there; she comes across the room. He knows about it, Vic; every doctor in my office knows."

They're all smug when she comes in. Miss Cleve, in the outer office, is so damn discreet! Doctor, Mrs. Morrison, and she says she's in great pain! That's for the benefit of the people who are waiting, people in real pain. We used to think it was a great joke. It doesn't seem so funny now! And the minute she comes in, Quent, what have I done? Who's been talking about me?"

Quentin stared for some time into the fire in silence. After a time he said:

"Would you go away?"

"If I were you?"

"I mean all of us. Simply move out. We could have a city house now, for the kids' schools, and a country place, too. Or we could take up that Boston proposition. Why not get away from it all?"

"You mean run away?" Victoria amended the phrase slowly.

"Well, I suppose that's what it would amount to."

"I don't think you can ever run away from anything, Quent. I was thinking," Victoria said, "of Marty; if anything ever happened to Marty, I was thinking: 'How can I bear the nursery and the crib and his brown dog on the chain, how can I bear to go back to five children when I've had six? And I thought then,' she went on, speaking steadily, but with brimming eyes—"I thought then that we'd have to go away, that we couldn't stand it! But I don't think so now. You can't run away from anything. You can't run away from sorrow, or from"

—she jerked her head in the direction of the Morrison house—"or from anything you've done," she said.

"But Vic, I tell you honestly, I can't stand her! She's making my life a burden," Quentin said simply, and if there was anything absurd in the situation neither husband nor wife was in the mood to see it. "Every time I come out to the elevator at the office, I'm afraid she's there. I've had ten days of it now, and I tell you it's getting on my nerves!"

Victoria's eyes were on the fire. "I've had three years of it," she said quietly. There was a long silence.

"Yes, I know you have, I know you have," Quentin said then, gruffly.

"You haven't any right to run away! You belong here," Vicky continued after a pause.

"What are we to do? Just go on?"

Quentin presently asked, looking up. "What else? As far as she goes," Vicky said, with a movement of her head in the direction of the Morrison house, "she'll gradually—well, get over it. If you run away she'd follow you. As it is, she'll annoy you for a while, and come over here and break the news to me."

Her voice died away into musing, and Quentin raised his head and stared at her strangely.

"You're an extraordinary woman, Vicky," he said. "You can talk about it. Don't you—don't you care?"

For a full half-minute Victoria returned his stare. Then she said in a voice that trembled, that was pitched very low:

"Oh, I care! Any woman cares. I'm hurt in my pride and my faith and my—my heart. It isn't a question of whether or not one cares. It's only a question as to what one does about it. I choose to do it my way."

She got to her feet, stood looking at him irresolutely for a moment, opened her lips as if she had something further to say. But she thought better of it, murmured instead a "good-night," crossed the room and was gone. Quentin did not look up when she moved, nor answer her good-night. After she was gone he sat beside the dying fire for a long, long while with his head in his hands and his shoulders bowed.

In the next week for the first time in years Victoria and Quentin Hardisty, to the great satisfaction of those who loved them, were seen lurching together on the fashionable Monday at the St. Francis hotel. They were together later at the reception given to two distinguished visiting physicians. "Vic wore a new smart suit of blue banded with gray fur, infinitely becoming to her warm brown coloring, and a dark blue hat. On the gray fur violets were pinned. "Who gave me the violets?" Vicky said to Dr. Austreicher, "Quentin, of course, and he brought me the suit and the hat from Paris. Don't you think that's having a husband!"

"Vic, you know you've grown awfully pretty," John Keats told her. "What have you done to yourself? Had your face lifted?"

"No, I discovered shade hats and freckle cream last summer," Vic answered, laughing. "It seems incredible to live to be thirty-six without having had the sense to use them before! One dollar a jar for freckle cream, and before I'd used half of it I began to see a great light dawning!"

"Yes, but you've done something else, too. New clothes?"

"This is the outfit Quentin brought me, hat and all. I adore it."

"Maybe it's that you're rested, Vic. You've been going like a steam roller all these years."

Way Back When

FAMOUS SONG WRITER WAS NEWSBOY

PEOPLE who are able to help others express happiness and those who amuse us always have a chance for success far out of proportion to circumstances of birth or environment. So, rightly, the world sees to it that persons who can drive away care have no financial worries.

Irving Berlin was born in Russia in 1888, the youngest of eight children. His father, a cantor or psalm-singer in the village synagogue, brought the family to New York's East Side tenement district when Irving was four years old. The boy loved to sing, but his first jobs were as a newsboy, and a telegraph delivery boy. His was the depressing life of the slums child, street-fighting, swimming in the dirty East river, dodging traffic in the streets at play. At fourteen, he left home to sing in saloons for pennies the patrons tossed to him. He was in the chorus of a musical show, was a waiter in a Chinese restaurant, and a singing waiter in a couple of night clubs.

Up to this time, the happiness Irving Berlin brought to others was limited to the few people who could see and hear him. His voice was not unusual enough to bring him to the top rank of entertainers. Then, he started writing songs. The first one brought him only 37 cents, the next, $25; but thereafter he advanced rapidly. He worked often until two or three o'clock in the morning, and by the time he was thirty-six, 300 songs had been published under his name, including such world-known hits as "Down on the Farm," "Everybody's Doin' It," "My Wife Has Gone to the Country," and "Alexander's Rag time Band."

PRESIDENT WAS LAUNDRYMAN

WORK is a habit, and to those who acquire it it becomes fun, relaxation coming through the kind of work done. In analyzing the lives of successful men and women, we usually find that they got the work habit early in life and never lost it.

Herbert Hoover was a worker. He was born in 1874, in West Branch, Iowa, the son of a blacksmith. His father died when he was six years old, his mother when he was nine; and he went to live with an uncle who operated a Quaker academy in Oregon. Herbert earned his board by doing odd chores, feeding and currying the horses, milking cows, and tending the furnace. All of this was in addition to his regular school work and, as if this were not enough work for a young boy, he studied English literature and history outside of school hours. Later in Salem, Oregon, Herbert worked as an office boy for his uncle, and went to night school until he had enough credits to enter Leland Stanford university. He worked his way through by acting as clerk for the registrar, and handling and delivering the San Francisco News on the campus. Later he started a laundry agency, calling for the bags of soiled laundry and delivering the bundles himself.

In 1893, Herbert Hoover got a job with the United States Geological society. He had natural ability at engineering. That together with the habit of work, gained rapid progress for him. He became nationally known as a successful engineer and a business man. In 1898 he became President of the United States.

Herbert Hoover was born with no silver spoon. Orphaned early, he had to fight for every bit of knowledge, for every opportunity. But Herbert Hoover was born with the habit of work, and he had the good luck to keep that habit. His record was success.

Unwanted Effect

Sometimes a soft answer can be so utterly soft as to loose one's wrath instead of turning it away. Yes, tolerance can be mere laziness.

The entire Southwest is now assured of splendid farm crops and good prices for them. That means business will be good. When the farmers have money, they spend most of it in their home communities. That makes business good in the small towns. When business is good in the rural sections and the small towns, the large towns and the cities get their share. Manufacturing plants, wholesalers of all kinds and distributors of necessities and luxuries are usually in the larger towns and cities.
