Methodist Pastor Entertained at Ancho

The pastor and wife of the Methodist church and Mr. R. A. A. Chase were invited to a Christmas dinner Dec. 26, 9 miles from Ancho, where a number of friends had met and spread a bountiful dinner together. After having a sociable and enjoyable time, the congregation was called together by singing. Rev. R. A. Crawford brought a Christmas message. Followed by a talk from Mr. Hall and a splendid Christmas program of songs, readings, play. In one corner of the church was a beautiful Christmas tree well laden with presents and treats for all present. At the close Mr. Chase was presented with a nice package, and the pastor and wife received a large basket and box of good things to eat. These people are to be commended for their interest and loyalty to their church and to each other.

Written report by pastor: Report on finances: Carrizozo $66.85, Copitan $24.00, total $90.85. Proportioned Presiding Elder $13.00. Pastor $77.85, salary for November and December. ### The White Elephant

THE year 1884 is known in circusland as the "white elephant year." P. T. Barnum had secured from Siam a genuine sacred white elephant and it drew such crowds that one of his rivals decided he must have a white elephant too.

So he whitewashed one of his pachyderms and renamed it the "Light of Asia." The dazzling whiteness of this beast, set off by its black velvet trappings, far outshone the rather dingy whiteness of Barnum's genuine animal. Barnum denounced it as a fake, but to prove it genuine its owners allowed visitors to touch its trunk which had been enameled.

But they didn't dare enamel its whole body (the whitewash could be scrubbed off each night) and thereby hangs a tale. At each performance the "Light of Asia" was stripped of its trappings, placed on a platform and beside it stood a learned "professor" who gave a lecture about the wonderful beast. The crowds noticed that the "professor" stipped about as he gave his spiel and wondered why. The reason was that the elephant wanted to make friendly advances to the "professor" and he knew that if he allowed the "Light" to rub against him, the whitewash might rub off on his black coat.

For some time the war of the rival "white elephants" went merrily on. Then Barnum made a deal with his competitor to withdraw the "Light of Asia." The next season the elephant was back on the road, but this time in its natural colors. Eventually, the "Light of Asia" wound up its career as "Old John," one of the favorite "bulls" of the Ringling circus.

The Lancaster School Board

IT'S an oft-repeated tale—that story about the school board in Lancaster, Ohio, refusing to have the school house used as the scene of a debate on whether or not railroads were practicable. They are quoted as saying that "such things as railroads and telegraphs are impossibilities and rank infidelity. There is nothing in the Word of God about them. If God had designed that His intelligent creatures should travel at the frightful rate of 15 miles an hour by steam He would have foretold it through His holy prophets. It is a device of Satan to lead immortal souls to Hell."

The tale is only half-true. In 1931 a traveler from New York stopped at a little log school house near South Charleston in Clark county and told the pupils about seeing a demonstration of a new "fire-wagon" in the East. When the pupil took the story home, their parents, being conservative folk whose minds weren't open to new ideas, said the school house shouldn't be used for such "trashy talk." So the school board sent a note to the teacher, Harvey Scott, who was secretary of a debating society, telling him he was welcome to use the school house to debate all proper questions, but "such things as railroads, etc." Telegraphs were NOT mentioned in their note because the electric telegraph hadn't been invented yet. That came 13 years later.

The story was tacked on to Lancaster because Scott, later editor of a paper in that town, printed in it a series of pioneer sketches including this yarn. And that's why citizens of Lancaster ever since have been denying the story which casts a reflection upon the intelligence of their forefathers.

The Dutch Mail

WHEN type in a print shop becomes all mixed up, that's "pi," and it's also grief for the newspaper publisher if this happens just before the paper is ready to go to press. But when it happened to an early English editor, he made the best of a bad situation. Sir Richard Phillips was his name and he was editor of the Leicester Herald.

Just before press time one day, a "devil" dropped a tray of type just as it was about to be put into the "forms." There was no time to straighten out all the ensuing mess, so Phillips assembled the scattered type and printed from it in that condition. With it was a notice that the "Dutch Mail" (news from Holland) had been received too late to be translated and was therefore being printed just as received.

Thirty years later Phillips is said to have met a reader in Nottingham who had carefully preserved his copy of that paper. He was still trying to find someone who could translate the news from Holland!

Four-leaf Clover Legend

Most of us know that a four-leafed clover is supposed to be lucky, but few know why. Here is explanation given by a writer in Pearson's London Weekly: When Eve was detected leaving the Garden of Eden she saw a patch of clover, by the gates, and wanting to take with her a tangible memory of the Paradise she had so foolishly lost, she snatched a piece. It had four leaves, and ever since then a four-leafed clover has been considered lucky, because it has grown from Eden, that was in the Garden of Eden.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

After Dinner Speeches.
HOUSTON, TEXAS.—Late-ly, for my sins, I've had to listen to a jag of after-dinner oratory, including plenty of mine. I hope people like to hear me. I do.

Feature writers say professional after-dinner speakers are dying out. That may be true in New York, where folks are anxious to get the dinner over with so they may hurry to the night-spots and do some sincere and earnest drinking in an effort to forget what the stock market did to them yesterday and what it's going to do to them tomorrow.

Irvin S. Cobb

But out in the hinterlands the new crop of native orators is a bountiful one; and the typical silver tongues of the great open spaces—I'm speaking of their neighborhoods although I might include their mouths—are still convinced that the sweetest music on earth is the sound of one's own voice uplifted in eloquence.

An English preacher had the best formula: Stand up to be seen, speak up to be heard, shut up to be appreciated. If he'd left out all but the last part, 't would have been a perfect recipe.

Tomorrow's Treasures.

WANT to acquire untold wealth for your latter years, or, anyhow, for your grateful heirs?

Then collect things. Collect cheap things which are both common and commonplace. Then sit down and wait for these objects to become obsolete and therefore priceless. Yesterday's necessity is today's junk, but will be tomorrow's treasured antique.

Assume you'd saved up old circus bills, or Mississippi river steamboat menus, or buggy whips, or those handpainted clop-jars formerly found in all truly refined homes. Henry Ford or come museum would take a lot at any price.

I'm putting aside literary works of a purely imaginative conception. I have one perfect specimen of idyllic creation—a time-table of the old Florida East Coast railroad, also a complete working synopsis of the Townsend plan—just sheer fantasy. But the most fanciful romances are the platform pledges adopted at national conventions of the two great parties during the last twenty years—there's a real fiction for you!

Germany's Colonies.

EVERY nation is united in the magnanimous attitude that to Germany should be restored the colonies taken from her by the winning side in the World's war—except the nations that acquired the said colonies in the split-up.

That's the main hitch. It's more than a hitch. It's a hard knot, tied originally with hate and sealed now with greed. In other words, sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander—unless it happens to be our gander, which naturally alters the case.

Nor seemingly has it occurred to any government that the original owners of Germany's former territorial possessions might like to have a say about whom they're going to belong to in future. But then, if ever we started considering the wishes of despoiled native tribes over the world, where would the white man's noble civilization be?

Cosmopolites.

THE last time before this that Captain Mike Hogg and Major Raymond Dickson returned to their ranch at Dick Blanca, Mex., they were just back from New York.

That night, at the bunkhouse, the hands, mostly Texas lads, foregathered to hear the bosses tell about the wonders of the great city. One or two of them had visited New York, so these cosmopolites proceeded to exhibit their familiarity with its sights.

"Major," said one, "I reckon old Grant's tomb's still doin' business at the same stand, eh?"

"And I bet the aquarium is right where she was when I was there," said another. "And all them tall buildin's."

There was present one lanky youth who had never been fifty miles away from where he was born, in a bend of the Rio Grande; probably never had seen a town of more than a thousand inhabitants. But with all these seasoned travelers showing off, he didn't mean to be left out. He waited for an opening.

"Cap'n Mike," he said, "tell me, is that there same feller still runnin' the hotel in New York?"

Canny Politician Had a Desire in the Matter

Who was it said the English couldn't take a joke, and that immediately?

At a hectic political meeting where representatives of the various parties were gathered, an English politician, while addressing the assemblage, was struck full in the face with the body of a dead cat. It came from the direction of the audience. A look of great anger came over his face as he prepared to seek out the perpetrator of the vile deed. But from the audience arose one who said: "Please, sir, I'm very sorry. I meant it for your opponent."

"Well, my friend," came the quick reply from the injured one. "I sincerely wish that you had meant it for me and it hit him."

The NEW YEAR'S RECONCILIATION

by BLANCHER TANNER OILLIN

ADDIE ROOT and Mattie Campbell had always been friends until Miss Mattie claimed Miss Addie's dog chased her cat and tore up her flowers. The fence was built and the boundary line of the two places ran so close to Miss Addie's gooseberry bush that some of the branches of the bush hung over the fence. The bush belonged to Miss Addie but the fruit on Miss Mattie's side of the fence Miss Mattie claimed. So Miss Addie picked the fruit on her side of the fence and Miss Mattie that on hers.

Last summer, being sure that Miss Mattie was away from home, Miss Addie went in through the rear gate and picked the fruit on Miss Mattie's side of the fence. The jam in the jar before her, which she had taken down from the shelf for her supper that cold New Year's eve was from that fruit. The jar had held candied ginger in Miss Addie's childhood and she recalled how she and little Mattie had eaten the ginger from it. She recalled that she and Mattie had picked gooseberries from a bush which grew near the place where the bush which had caused so much trouble now grew. She recalled the many happy times she and Miss Mattie had spent together—the times when Miss Mattie had been a real friend in need—had helped to ease some hurt or lighten some sorrow. What a pity it seemed that such friendship should ever be broken. Miss Addie's dog had been given away long ago, and Miss Mattie's cat had wandered away from home and never returned. With the two original causes of the trouble gone, wasn't it too bad for one-time friends to remain enemies? Wouldn't it be better to turn over a new leaf this New Year's day and renew their friendship?

It seemed so to Miss Addie and she resolved not to waste another minute, but do it right away! So with a jar of jam in her hand and love in her heart she went to wish Miss Mattie a happy New Year.

Watch Night

On New Year's eve midnight masses and watchnight services are held everywhere, while those less inclined to religious observances make the closing minutes of the year an occasion for jollity.

Welcome, New Year

WELCOME to you, New Year, enter newborn king—
Can you tell us something of the tidings that you bring?
Do you carry happiness?
Enough to last the year?
Do you sing a song of joy
To cast out doubt and fear?
Perhaps a balm for heartaches
You bring along with you?
Perhaps a key to friendships
To buoy us all year through.
We bid you welcome, New Year—our dreams we trust with you,
Forgetting ill of all the past, we start the book anew.

January Was for Janus, God of New Adventures

THE month of January bears its name because Janus was the god of the opening year. He presided over the undertaking of any new adventure, and was a god known only to the Romans. The Romans adopted January as the first of the year from the reign of their second king, Numa Pompilius, who ruled until 672 B. C.

Not until the Eighteenth century was January universally adopted as the beginning of the year. England took the step in 1752, and Sweden in 1753, but other European countries adopted this New Year's day at an earlier date; France in 1564, Holland, Protestant Germany and Russia in 1700.

New Year's at White House Since the White House was not completed during our first President's lifetime, the John Adamses were the first presidential family to occupy it. The first drawing room or New Year's reception was held in the "President's palace," as it was then referred to, on New Year's day, 1801.

Behind Marian's shadowed silhouette the window glass itself shattered, as if it had exploded inward; out in the brush sounded the ringing crack of a rifle. Then there was silence and the window against which Marian had stood was empty except for the lamp-lit gleam of its shattered glass.

Wheeler's breath jerked in his throat; he dropped to the ground and raced for the house.

In the dark beside the shattered window Douglas was holding the girl in his arms, and though she clung to him, Wheeler saw that the wagon boss was holding her up. He heard Douglas say, "Are you hurt? Are you—"

Billy Wheeler cried out, "In God's name, Marian—"

Marian's voice said shakily, "I'm all right."

"You hit?"

"No."

"Get a gun!" said Val Douglas crazily. "We was standing here, and somebody took a shot at—"

Wheeler turned and ran for the bunk house. Half way he almost crashed in to Tulare Callahan.

"What's up?"

"Get the boys out," Wheeler told him. "To hell with saddles, but get ropes and guns. Somebody fired into the layout—we've got to try to stampede over him in the brush."

Behind the 04 layout the buck-brush stood ragged, much of it shouldered high to a mounted man; in its crooked brakes the hard sandy ground showed barren in the light of the near stars.

With some difficulty Billy Wheeler restrained Gil Baker and Steve Hurley from spurring their ponies headlong into the brush, as if they were trying to jump a bunch of steers.

"Stick together, move slow, and keep stopping to listen," Wheeler said. "That's our only chance."

They trilled into the bush slowly, single file, Wheeler in the lead. He had accidentally mounted a horse that believed in ghosts, and it moved sidelong, stretching its nose warily at the brush shadows, blowing long uneasy whoops. Repeatedly they halted to sit listening.

For an hour they combed the dark brush, alternately walking their horses and listening.

Not until they came out at the foot of a barren rise did they realize that they had wandered almost a mile from their starting point. When you have seen one thicket of buck-brush by starlight you have seen them all. They had pushed through a hundred thickets, in which a man could have hidden under the very feet of their horses—yet in that mile of country there were a thousand thickets more. The riders were grim and light-mouthed.

Horse Dunn met them at the corral. He had been prowling all over the place, rifle on his arm. He spoke low-voiced, but no one of them say something, so he said the first thing came into his head. Every sign we got points to the fact that Lon Magoon was killed, in his own saddle, and on his own horse, and at Short Crick."

"I'm thinking now," said Billy Wheeler, "that we can prove that one way or the other—right here and now."

"We've still got his saddle, haven't we?"

"It's still under my bunk."

"Let me see it."

Horse Dunn stared at him irritably for a moment, then picked up a lamp with a jerk, and led the way to the clean bare room in which he lived. By the yellow light of the lamp the fine old saddles on their racks against the wall glistened cleanly from silverwork and steel. Dunn sat down on a box and hooked his elbows on the table behind him.

"Horse, how big a man is this Lon Magoon? About my size?"

"Hell, no! Not by eight inches. Little short wiry feller—put you in mind of a grasshopper, or a flea."

Wheeler hauled out Magoon's saddle. Billy measured the length of the stirrup leather with his arm—stirrup in armpit, fingers upon the tree.

"I stand five-eleven," Wheeler said. "Yet these stirrups are too long for me to ride. Horse, the man that rode this saddle was over six feet tall."

Horse Dunn came across the room in two strides and dropped to one knee beside Billy. "Damn it, I know that's Magoon's hull!"

"You mean it was Magoon's hull. You can see the short-rig bend worn into the stirrup leathers. But since then the leathers have been let down long, and laced there with rawhide whang."

Horse Dunn measured the stirrup leathers against his own arm. Then he forked the saddle where it lay, jamming his feet into the stirrups.

"Tall as me," he breathed, unbelievably for several moments. "Do you reckon," he said at last, "that infernal old lion hunter would let down those stirrups, just to get us balled up?"

"Look at the wear on the stirrup leather. The saddle has been ridden since the stirrups were let down."

Horse Dunn got up slowly and went back to his seat on the box. For a long time he sat staring at the floor. When at last he drew a deep breath and got up, his movements were those of a man preoccupied.

He got out a roll of adhesive tape, pulled off a boot and woolen sock, and began to tape up the outside of his ankle bone, which appeared to be skinned. "I've got to take a hammer to those spurs," he said, his mind on other things. "Seems like they—"

"Horse—Coffee was right! The man that died in this saddle was not Lon Magoon."

Suddenly Dunn stood up, a shaggy towering figure, staring redly at Billy Wheeler. "Then, in God's name, who's dead?"

Wheeler regarded him without expression. Within the hour, a shadowy hunch had come over him. He knew that he had no proof for the thing that was in his mind; yet somehow it stood clear and plain. He went to the fireplace, and picked up an old branding iron that had been in use as a fire poker. He squatted on his heels, and with this sooty iron began to make marks on Dunn's clean-swept floor.

"Saying that the 94 is here," he said, marking a cross, "and Short Crick over here; then here lies that broken badlands called the Red Sleep. Seems to me there used to be a trail across the Red Sleep, leading over to Pahranagat."

"Yes, sure. But—"

Horse Dunn waited; Billy Wheeler studied the floor. "Where would a man be coming from, passing over Short Crick toward the 94? Maybe—Pahranagat?"

"Could," Horse admitted dubiously.

"That little railroad spur ends there."

"Sometimes," Horse Dunn made a sudden contribution, "Lon Magoon has shipped a few stolen beef carcasses out of Pahranagat."

Wheeler nodded. "From Pahranagat the spur runs down the Little Minto to Plumas, then—let me see—"

"Cheat Creek, Monitor, Sikes Crossing," Dunn supplied; "and so to the main stem."

"And so to the main stem," Wheeler repeated. "And maybe an old-timer, a saddle man, working toward the 94 by train, would figure it was better to come by Pahranagat—and there pick up a horse?"

They were silent, and the background of the outer night seemed uncommonly still—perhaps because Old Man Coffee's hands were gone.

"A saddle-minded man," Wheeler repeated, "coming from—say—Flagstaff. He threw the branding iron into the fireplace; it sent up a puff of white ash, against the black opening. "Horse, where was Bob Flagg last heard from?"

Dunn's voice came out thickly. "Flagstaff," he said.

CHAPTER IX

Horse Dunn sat relaxed, staring morosely at the floor. In his eyes a dark fire glowed. Wheeler wondered what ugly and shadowy things the old man was seeing. Perhaps, Wheeler thought, he would not wish to see in his life the like of what Horse Dunn was seeing, as he sat looking at the floor.

Finally Horse Dunn jerked to his feet with an abrupt impatience. "This is all pipe smoke," he said. "For a minute you threw me up in the air with that bunk. But hell! You figure Bob came here a way no man would ever think of coming. There's better than a hundred million people in this country, and Bob Flagg is one of 'em, so you figure that maybe it was him got killed!"

"Well, we might anyway check up at Pahranagat. There isn't so much travel up the Little Minto but what we could find out if Bob Flagg came that way."

"I'll send Val Douglas over there tomorrow. I sure don't aim to leave any stone unturned. But if a guess is an inch long, you sure jumped a mile."

"Maybe," Wheeler admitted.

Horse Dunn took a turn of the room and the fighting spirit that had flared up in his eyes burned low and smoky again. "This country's gone to hell in a handbasket. I've never asked for any more than justice, and I've dealt out nothing less. But where can you get it now? A man's hands are tied. There was more honesty in the old six-gun than in a thousand courts of so-called law. I'd give 'em their cock-eyed country. I'd wash my hands of the whole works, and good riddance—if it wasn't for the girl."

It always came back to Marian. The old man didn't dare lose because of what it meant to the girl; he had labored for her too long, in years that for any other man would have been the twilight years of his life.

She came before Wheeler's eyes now, between himself and Horse Dunn, almost as clearly as if she had really been in the room.

Dunn was saying, "Know what I'd like to do? I'd like to cut out for the Argentine. Where a man's cows have a chance to turn around, by God. I'd—"

"Argentine, hell!" Billy exploded at him. "If I'd been running this outfit, this situation would never have come up or started to come up!"

"I suppose you'd have sold out," Dunn said, a hard edge on his voice.

"Maybe and maybe not. But I wouldn't have gone cow crazy, range crazy, until I couldn't afford to work my stock!"

Stangely, Horse did not anger. Wheeler saw that the Old Man thought his tirade was merely based on youth and ignorance, which he had seen in unlimited quantities before.

"Maybe," Dunn said now, "you'd have kept the 94 a little one-horse spread—in the best of shape. But that ain't the question now. We're where we are, and there's no use fighting over what went before."

"I can save it yet," Wheeler told him rashly. "I can throw a hundred thousand into the 94."

"I didn't know you could swing that much. You got it, Billy?"

"What I haven't got it—I can get."

Horse Dunn studied him, sadly, a long time. "That's an offer, is it?" he said at last.

"On one condition. That you give me a free hand, to hire, fire, buy or sell, land or cattle, for three years."

"I believe," said Dunn. "I'd even do that."

"It's a deal, then?"

Army Takes Pride in Great Naval Guns; Rifles Throw Shells Twenty-Six Miles

The army uses navy guns to guard Oahu, the island on which lies the largest military concentration under the American flag, writes a Honolulu United Press correspondent.

This paradox of coast defense is due to diplomats and the formulation of the Washington Treaty. The treaty banned the addition of sixteen-inch guns to battleships, so the surplus rifles were turned over to the army.

Two of these guns, mounted on carriages constructed by the army's Ordnance department, were proof fired recently at Fort Barrette, 20 miles west of Honolulu, guarding the western approach to the island.

Their performance showed strikingly their defense capabilities in time of emergency. Each is capable of hurling a 2,100-pound projectile over a maximum range of 45,000 yards—nearly 26 miles. They can be swung around and elevated to a maximum of 55 degrees.

Hence they could drop a shell at

"No! You and me'll never make a deal like that!"

"It's your out," Wheeler told him, "and it's your only out. Let me take the finance and the outfit—and all the other ruction falls to pieces."

And now Horse Dunn's eyes blazed again, and his voice crackled. "You'll never put a dime in this brand!"

"It's her brand," Wheeler reminded him. "You willing to let it bust up and go down, and the girl and her mother without a cent?"

"Let 'er bust—before it ever hangs on your dough!"

"But damnation—why?"

"You want to know why? I'll tell you why! Because you want that girl! You want that girl—you think I'm blind? But she don't want you."

"Isn't This Pretty Early? Couldn't You Sleep?"

I'd no sooner put her in your debt than I'd sell her to you outright. You're only making the offer because you're in love with Marian."

"You're crazy! I'm making the offer because I think I can come out on it."

"You want the girl," Horse persisted.

"You old fool—" Wheeler held his voice down—"do you think I'd ever expect to get her that way? Do you think I'd want her on the basis of—"

"Anyway, that's all over and done, two years back," Wheeler lied. "Once she could have had me body and soul. But that's all over. I wouldn't tie myself up, not now, to her or anyone else."

"You lie," said Horse calmly. "Horse, if you'll let me take—"

"Never a dime of your money in her brand," Horse said with utter finality.

Wheeler turned in that night feeling old and grim.

It was still dark as Billy Wheeler let himself noiselessly into the cook shack and lighted a lamp. He found himself cold biscuits; and in a huge pot on the back of the stove he found bitter coffee above a banked fire.

He had about finished washing down his cold biscuits when he was annoyed to discover that another early riser was about. Someone was walking quietly toward the cook shack. Hurriedly he blew out his light, gulped down half a cup of dregs, and let himself out of the kitchen, anxious to be on his way without conversation.

Then, rounding the corner of the cook shack he almost ran into Marian.

"Morning, Billy." He saw that she was wearing belted overalls and boots.

"Isn't this pretty early? Couldn't you sleep?"

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Save Chicken Fat.—Chicken fat may be used as a butter substitute in cooking. Consequently, it is a good plan to save the fat from boiled, stewed or fried chicken.

Washing Window Shades.—Soiled window shades may be washed by spreading each shade on a flat surface and then rubbing it with a clean cloth or sponge and soapuds.

Polishing Furniture.—That foggy appearance on highly polished furniture can be removed by sponging with a cloth dipped in a solution of one quart clear water and two tablespoons of vinegar, wiping dry with another cloth and rubbing.

Lincoln County Farmers Assisted

The Farm Security Administration has loaned $5,830.00 to farmers in Lincoln county during the past twelve months, according to J. W. J. Evans, county rural rehabilitation supervisor, following his annual report to Regional Director L. H. Hauter at Amarillo Texas. Collections of the amount due during the past 12 months amounted to $1938.56. Subsistence grants for the same period amounted to $1,005.00.

Mr. Evans calls attention to the fact that while the collection figure may seem unusually small when compared to the loan figure, many loans were made for five years and are not due for several years. He also calls attention to the fact that these loans are fully secured.

Mr. Evans said he has been working with 60 farmers in this county during 1937. In addition to financial assistance to deserving farmer cooperators, the county rural rehabilitation supervisor has brought to these farm families a broad program of technical assistance as furnished by this branch of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Substantial gains for many farmers cooperating with the FSA in this county is reported by Mr. Evans. Many farmers who received financial help from this agency during the past three years are now able to carry on their operations without further help.

Another service offered by the FSA through county rural rehabilitation supervisors is that of arm debt adjustment. Every farmer in this county, even though he is not a cooperator with the FSA, may take advantage of this free service. In the past twelve months this branch of service has saved farmers in Region 12 a total of $1,352,274. This saving has resulted in the payment of taxes amounting to $5,142.

Lincoln School Program

Lincoln School had its annual Christmas program Thursday night, Dec. 23rd. An unusual feature of the program was the creative work done by the seventh and eighth grade children, consisting of a play and song written by them under the supervision of Mrs. Nickola. A group of saxette players trained by Mr. Nickola is another attraction.

The remainder of the program—verses, readings, and piano selections—proved to be very entertaining. The evening came to an end with the distribution of candy and nuts by the P. T. A.

Mr. Mitchell Ellis who is employed at Bolon spent the Christmas holidays at his home near Jicarilla.

Mr. and Mrs. George Goodson Luna were business visitors in town last Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Cleghorn of Alto Oaks were in town on business last Monday.

Messrs. G. T. McQuillen and Father Kroggel spent Monday night in Hot Springs.

Mrs. Erva Claunch and daughter and son, Evelyn and Jackie left Sunday and Monday in Santa Fe visiting Mrs. Claunch's mother, Mr. J. D. Adams who is employed there.

National Truck Week

Business men throughout the United States, anxious to find a means of improving their delivery and haulage equipment while at the same time curtailing costs, will be interested in announcement of a National Truck Week to be held by Chevrolet dealers the week of January 10th.

The 9,600 Chevrolet dealers in all parts of the country will present the five Chevrolet truck lines for 1938 in striking show-room displays, supported by one of the most extensive truck advertising campaigns in the history of the industry, according to W. E. Fish, Chevrolet commercial car manager.

The program calls for newspaper advertising, backed up by radio, billboards and direct mail material, Mr. Fish declared. The performance, durability and economy of the new 1938 Chevrolet truck will be stressed.

The National Truck Week is the direct result of the unusual volume of favorable comment received by company officials concerning the display of the new trucks at the National Automobile Shows at New York and Chicago and at the National Truck Show at Newark, N. J., Mr. Fish revealed.

"The favorable reaction at these national shows has prompted us to arrange this showing on a nationwide scale in order to bring our new commercial cars and trucks more closely before the country," Mr. Fish said.

Chevrolet is offering for 1938 five lines of commercial cars and trucks comprising a wide range of different body styles designed to meet the haulage and delivery demands of various lines of business and industry. These include two models for light delivery on the Master passenger car chassis and a wide selection on the heavier  $\frac{1}{2}$ -ton,  $\frac{3}{4}$ -ton, 1-ton, and  $1\frac{1}{2}$ -ton chassis. The  $1\frac{1}{2}$ -ton models are available on both a 131 $\frac{1}{2}$  inch wheelbase and the 157 inch wheelbase.

School Notes

(Crowded Out Last Week)
School closed at noon yesterday for Christmas holidays. I am sure that every one is looking forward to much pleasure during these days.

Many students of the Carrizozo High School have been absent this week because of the raging storms and a wave of influenza.

On December 21, James Ferguson a freshman in high school, while plaining a board in manual training cut the end of his finger off on the jointer. He went to the hospital where Dr. Rathmann dressed it.

Saturday night the Carrizozo High School team was defeated by the Capitan High School team. We won't have another game till the Christmas vacation is over.

The Girls' Glee Club is participating in the annual Christmas affair at the Community hall where they sang, accompanied by Mrs. Kelley.

The freshmen class is sorry to lose one of its students, Amado Luera.

All the lower grades of the Carrizozo school are very busy rehearsing programs for Christmas. The Manual Training class is kept busy all through the period fixing Christmas trees for the various rooms.

S. P. To Use Radio To Safeguard Rails

Southern Pacific will be the first Railroad to use short wave radio in safeguarding train movements in case of emergency, if applications now pending before the Federal Communications Commission receive favorable action. The Commission has already granted construction permits, and initial construction work has already been started.

The proposed short wave system would be placed in operation shortly after the first of the year in the snowed region where the company's Overland Route crosses the mile-high Sierra Nevada mountains, and would consist of two-way telephone and telegraph communication to be used in emergencies when line wires fail, railroad officials stated today.

First units installed would be a 500-watt transmitter and receiving equipment at Norden and a 50-watt transmitter and receiving equipment as a mobile fire train unit at Emigrant Gap.

Railroad officials pointed out that with the addition of special emergency radio communication service to present facilities, train movements through this district would be protected with every known modern device, under all weather conditions.

Then the procession was led by the orchestra to the home of the bride where a midnight luncheon was served to all those present.

The bride is the charming and beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Candido Chavez. The groom is the youngest son of Mrs. Roberta Romero and is a brother to T. C. Romero.

CONGRESS DOES LITTLE

President's "Must" Program Virtually Wrecked . . . Panay Bombing Still a Live Issue

Ambassador Hiroshi Salto of Japan and Mme. Salto photographed as they were leaving the Japanese embassy in Washington for the White House to attend the state reception for the diplomatic corps. Shortly afterwards Salto broadcast to the American people what amounted to an apology for the bombing of the Panay in the Yangtze river, calling it a "shocking blunder."

F.D.R.'s Program Battered

CONGRESS, in virtual revolt against the administration, was on the eve of adjournment for the holidays, and the special session in its month of existence had done almost nothing in the way of carrying out the legislative program which the President had laid before it. Once again Mr. Roosevelt turned to Vice President Garner to devise salvage strategy, and summoned to the White House with the veteran Texan were Speaker Bankhead and Senator Barkley and Representative Sam Rayburn, majority leaders of the senate and house.

Vice President Garner

The topic of their discussion was what should be done with the wreckage of the five-point program in the closing days of the session and how much of it should be demanded of congress in the regular session in January.

It was hoped the new housing bill could be pushed through the senate before adjournment, having been approved by committee after passage by the house, 325 to 23. There was not much opposition to this measure, which administration leaders said would lead to the construction and sale of millions of new homes, most of them to cost about $4,000.

Crop control bills were passed by both senate and house, but they differed widely and early final enactment was impossible because the joint conference between committees of the two houses to reconcile the measures could not get into action before January.

Wage-Hour Bill Killed

WHEN the bill for regulation of wages and hours, approved by the senate in August, came up for action in the house the President suffered one of his greatest legislative defeats. Southern Democrats and the Republican minority combined to send the measure back to the labor committee, which meant its definite defeat. This bill, which would have set up an administrator with dictatorial powers over labor and business management, was considered only second in importance to the farm bill. It had the support of the C. I. O., so John Lewis shared in the defeat. The A. F. of L. had offered a substitute which was rejected, as President Green had expected it would be.

No action was taken on the President's other "must" measures, which were for revision of anti-trust laws, regional planning and federal government reorganization.

Advocates of the ever-normal granary bill, which passed the senate, contend it will stabilize both prices and supplies of five major crops and so benefit farmers and consumers. Opponents not only question its efficacy but say it calls for harmful regimentation.

Nothing definite was done by congress concerning revision of the taxes which are hampering business and industry.

Cummings Accuses Judge

CONGRESS was asked by Attorney General Cummings to investigate the conduct of United States District Judge Ferdinand Geiger of Milwaukee in connection with the latter's discharge of a grand jury, which was investigating the automobile finance industry.

In a letter to Chairman Sumners of the house judiciary committee Cummings charged that Geiger's conduct was "so obstructive to the administration of justice that I could not justify a failure to bring it to your knowledge."

Geiger, presiding over the Eastern Wisconsin federal district, discharged the grand jury without permitting it to report after a three months' investigation into the activities of three companies, which, Cummings said, were "identified in interest" with General Motors corporation, Ford Motor company and Chrysler corporation.

Cummings charged that the grand jury was prepared to return indictments when it was dismissed.

Panay Incident

WHILE Washington was awaiting a formal reply from Tokyo to the American notes concerning the murderous attack by Japanese airmen and machine gunners on the U. S. Gunboat Panay, it was reported that Hirohito, emperor of Japan, had taken personal charge of the matter. If true, this would be a severe blow to the all-powerful military and naval factions in the Japanese government which have been doing about as they chose. It would be an astonishing development in another way, for hitherto the "Son of Heaven" has always held himself aloof from such concerns. The Japanese cabinet was called in extraordinary session to discuss the Panay incident and determine what reply should be made to the American protests.

In Washington Ambassador Hiroshi Salto added his voice to the many apologies offered. In a radio address he termed the bombing of the Panay and the Standard Oil ships a "shocking blunder" and said that "necessary steps are being and will be taken so that guarantees of safety will be assured all foreign persons and interests" in Japan-controlled areas of China.

Washington's second note was especially sharply worded because of the revelation that the Panay and the boats carrying its dead and wounded, to shore were fired upon by machine gunners in Japanese army boats. The stories of the survivors, including several newspaper men, and motion pictures of the attack were all in the hands of the American officials and seemed irrefutable, although General Harada, the Japanese military attaché at Shanghai, issued a report which contradicted them in several vital particulars. It purported to be "the sum total of staff officers' investigation" of the incident.

China Won't Give Up

IN HANKOW, now the Chinese capital, high officials declared China would make no peace overtures to Japan but would fight to the end. Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek was perfecting a new plan for military operations.

Chinese blew up and burned most of the Japanese-owned mill area of Taingtao, the damage being estimated at 100 million dollars. All of the 300 Americans in that city were reported safe. Three American warships were there ready to aid them if necessary.

You Must Have a Glamorous Blouse

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THERE is a disposition among designers this season to create "above-the-table" effects, as they please to term it, and this is where the blouse of gleaming lame weave plays a stellar role. Your jacket or caped suit or your fur coat may be as conservative as you may insist but when it comes to the blouse underneath witness a blaze of glory when it is revealed. For a fact, the smartest dress-up blouses are just like that, this season.

What's more, though it's hard to believe, notwithstanding its unmistakable-luxury appeal, when it comes right down to figuring it out a blouse of gorgeous sparkling metal cloth is a perfectly safe and sane adventure in economy. How so? Well, it dresses you up at a moment's notice and accommodatingly conceals itself under a friendly jacket when you do not want to be too dressed up. And if you are in the "make your own" class, all that's needed is a yard or so of handsome fabric, a simple pattern and a determination to do and dare in order to acquire as elegant a blouse as dreams may picture.

Not that the ready made blouse is prohibitive in price, on the contrary it's surprising what lovely models are to be had these days at comparatively little cost. For formal wear silk lame is favored not only for its smartness but because the silk core reduces tarnishing hazards. As to the newer styling the blouses that look festive with much glamour and glitter feature the same corseted waist, high bust line, draped bodice and close fitting neck seen in the smartest dresses. Many silk blouses completing formal afternoon suits show sleeve interest concentrated on top. Pin tucking, shirring, cutout or contrasting engravations of mat on brilliant or vice versa are used as trimming for otherwise simple blouses.

To the right in the picture we show a turquoise silk lame blouse with an artfully gathered bodice and flange points at the neck which makes it a 1937 model. This attractive style is also adapted to large sizes in which the corset effect is modified. The points of the collar may be turned down for the shorter neck.

The blouse to the left is the last word in modish detail. Firstly, it plays up glitter and glamour to a finish. Secondly, it carries the message of stripes, and the matter of stripes in elegant fabrics, especially in luxurious lames, is very important this season. In this instance the material is black and silver lame. Then too this blouse proclaims the very advance and widely heralded high surplice model which is fashioned along the new molded line. And please to take note of the cunning hat and whimsical veil. Yes indeed, this ensemble is a perfect criterion of what to wear when you go stepping during the mid-winter social whirl.

If not a blouse of glittering lame then choose a shirtmaker cocktail dress of silver weave like the one pictured in the center background. This type is a perennial favorite, and somehow they look prettier than ever this season. See the clever little pocket with the decorative monogram embroidered in green silk. No lame shirtmaker dress can afford to be without a cunning pocket like this, to our way of thinking. And the adorable hat with its devastating veil done with the usual Lilly Dache artistry, what more could a debutante desire?

CURL COIFFURE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

"Fashions may change, pompadour may give way to bobs for a time, but they come back again," explained Charles Dana Gibson in discussing his famed Gibson Girl of the 1890s on his recent birthday. And now New York and Paris arbiters of fashion confess that the new styles for Palm Beach and Southern wear have been to a great extent inspired by the Gibson Girl. The "1937 Gibson Girl" shown here glories in a modern pompadour curl coiffure which Twentieth-century science has made it possible for her to arrange herself with one of the new automatic bob pin curlers. This beauty gadget shoots curls into the hair in almost the twinkling of an eye. It works so easily and simply the curls can even be done after slipping on this striking two-piece flame-colored chiffon evening gown made with an ingeniously sleeved capelet-to-slip-on-after-dancing. The gown is made light fitting along corseted lines, draped over the bosom with a low front and back.

VERSATILE PUMPS HIGHLIGHT FASHION

By CHERIE NICHOLAS
Pumps in every imaginable interpretation are conspicuously in the foreground now and will be even more so in the spring showings. There is a new seamless kind that spells comfort itself at the same time that it makes the foot look small because of its glove-like fit.

The open-throat pumps are hailed with delight as they do away with the cut-in discomfort across the instep. Other pumps are sandalized attractively while others are fashioned along d'orsay lines. For the many who love pumps but do not have pump feet there are soft step ins styled in fascinating variety.

Tunic Blouses Styled on Modern Greyhound Lines

With "greyhound" lines, Manbocher's ideal for daytime, slim tunic blouses are shown with dark suits and handknit sweaters come well down over the neckline instead of stopping at the waist. The illusion of the length is achieved on dresses with stitching or beading to give a two-piece effect in front with natural waistline in back, detail accentuates the bustline and gives a long, slim waist, and suit coats are from hip to three-quarter length.

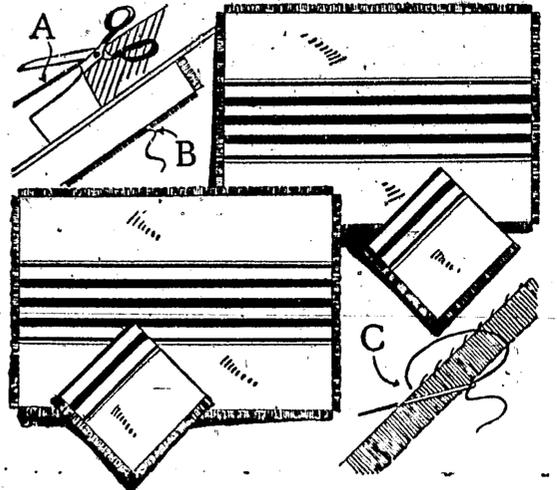

Daytime Furs Have More Variety Than Ever Before

Daytime furs this season have more variety than ever before, with three-quarters box coats for sports, classic dress coats and jackets of every conceivable description. Short sleeves are outstanding in the Revillon collection. Jackets and coats of three-quarters length are made with elbow-length puffed sleeves, the costumes worn with matching long gloves. A mink daytime jacket has capelike loose sleeves to the elbow.

Barrel Sweater
The barrel sweater is becoming a campus favorite.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

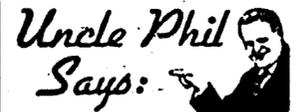

Make Luncheon Sets of Striped Material.

THE napkins and mats are fringed and then whipped to keep them from raveling and to strengthen the edge. This is a very quick and easy finish to use for linens of the coarser weaves and is in harmony with peasant dishes and provincial furniture.

In cutting the material for the mats and napkins it is best to pull a thread to guide you so that the edges will be perfectly straight and fringe easily. Cut right along the little opening made in the material by drawing the thread as shown at A. Plan the size of the mats and napkins so that the material will cut to good advantage and the stripes will arrange themselves in a pleasing way through the center of each piece. Napkins for this purpose may be as small as nine inches square, though many people like them a little larger than this. The mats are usually about eleven by eighteen inches.

Pull out the threads to make the fringe at the edge as I have shown here at B. From a half to three-quarters of an inch is a good depth for the fringe. Save the threads you pull out and use them for whipping the edge as I have shown here at C.

Home Heating Hints

By John Barclay Heating Expert

Bank Fire Only With Fresh Coal—Never Smother It With Ashes or Cinders.

THERE is no mystery about how to bank a fire for the night. I'd like to give you the easiest, simplest method I know of, so that you will have no trouble getting abundant heat in the morning.

To make room for fresh coal, shake the grates gently until you see the first red glow in the ashpit! Then pull the live coals toward the front, using a shovel or a hoe, so that the bed slopes downward from the edge of the fire-door to the back. Shovel fresh coal into the hollow, being careful to leave a spot of live coals exposed in front to act as a "hot spot" in igniting the gases given off by the fresh coal, preventing puffs and explosions.

Allow sufficient time for these gases to be exhausted before banking the fire. When this is done, close the ashpit damper, open the check damper, leaving the turn damper as nearly closed as possible. Never leave the fire-door open after the fire is banked for the night.

Nab Man For Passing Bogus Money

Buzz Tarrant, well known young man of Pinon, was taken into custody here last week end by U. S. Secret Service Operator Emmett B. Hargett, and charged with distribution of counterfeit currency.

Taken before U. S. Commissioner Tom Charles, Tarrant was placed under $5,000 bond to await the action of the U. S. District court. He was taken to Roswell Tuesday-morning to await trial.

Tarrant is alleged to have been a "go-between" for a gang of counterfeiters working out of Old Mexico, where the money is allegedly printed. J. M. Coates of Hope is held in connection with the same investigation and is in jail at Albuquerque.

Tarrant is alleged to have passed 28 counterfeit bills, of the $20 denomination. The bills are said to have been of excellent workmanship.—Alamogordo News.

Letter From China to L. Vernon Baker of Hollywood, N. M.

Nov. 2, 1937.
Rev. and Mrs. Lealie A. Thompson,
Phillips House,
Kowloon, Hong Kong.

Dear friend:

We will write you a few lines to let you know that we have been allowed to come back from the Philippines where we went on vacation and were detained for over a month by the war in China and crowded conditions that prevailed in Hong Kong.

We returned to Hong Kong ten days ago and found things comparatively quiet here. The city is flooded with refugees from interior China and prices have gone so high that it is very expensive to live. Before the winter is over we hope we will be able to return to Shiuchow.

In the meantime we are returning to our language study, that we might be better prepared for work when we are able to return to our station.

A conversation with a member of the Berlin Mission also from Shiuchow revealed to us the extent of the damage that Japanese planes have wrought.

In Shiuchow alone, Japanese planes have dropped 170 bombs. In one day they dropped 68. One of them was dropped in between some buildings of the Berlin Mission, shattering all the window panes in three buildings. Scores of people have been killed and wounded. Two hotels and many dwellings have been wrecked. The bulk of damage has been in the southern part of the city with the objectives being the railway and the airplane factory. Out-buildings of the factory have been destroyed but the main buildings are intact. Our homes and mission property are fortunately in the northern part of the city, with the exception of Bible school buildings and a residence on a hill to the south of the city. To avoid the bombings, the people who have not returned to their villages, have been leaving the city every morning at eight and returning in the afternoon after three.

Last week I went to Canton to bring down our trunks which had been carried as far as Canton. The city seemed to a large extent to be practically depopulated. Tungshan, which has an airport and is transversed by the Canton-Hong Kong Railway, was especially deserted. I saw where one bomb had fallen and wrecked a number of dwellings. Near the railroad on the way to Canton, I noticed a number of shell holes where they had missed the railway tracks.

As far as we can learn, none of our Chinese Christians have been among the many killed and wounded. It is our prayer that this cruel war will soon end and that China will receive just treatment. Airplanes have made war a reality in the whole of China.

The war has been a serious setback to our work. Our Woman's Bible School in Shiuchow has been open for about two weeks and our Men's Bible School will open very shortly. The Graves Seminary in Canton will miss the first half year work.

A letter has just come from the pastor of our church saying that thieves have broken into our home in Shiuchow. It has been sealed up by the magistrate. We hope that no serious damage has been done.

I quote from a letter from Shiuchow: "City life here is absolutely dead. Almost all the people have taken to the country. The southern part of the town hardly has one house which has not been damaged."

China has one blessing from this war—she presents a united front to the world for the first time in a long period of history. And we are praying that it may mean a new China turning to a Christian way of living as a best solution to all her problems.

Pray for China and those who are trying to serve her people.

Sincerely,
Lealie and Pauline Thompson.
