LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS

Official U.S. Land Dist. Paper

VOLUME XIII—[Carrizozo News, Vol. 27]

CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JAN. 21, 1938

NUMBER 30

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Wingfield

Mary Elizabeth Lytton was born in Llano, Texas, August 25, 1851. She was married to Charles W. Wingfield, June 22, 1875. To this union ten children were born, three of whom preceded her in death. The husband passed away in 1910.

Mr. and Mrs. Wingfield came to Lincoln county in 1885, where she had continued to reside until two years ago, at which time she moved to Portales to make her home with a daughter, Mrs. Mabel Robinson, with whom she resided until her death, January 14, 1938.

She is survived by three sons and four daughters: R. E. Wingfield, Tularosa; I. N. Wingfield, Ruidoso; M. L. Wingfield, Phoenix, Ariz; Mrs. Phema Owens, Woodward, Okla.; Mrs. Lottie Letcher, Capitan; Mrs. Mabel Robinson, Portales; Mrs. Doris Gray, Globe, Ariz. She is also survived by thirty grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren.

She was a kind and loving companion, a devoted mother and grandmother; a fine conscientious woman; one ever loyal to her church and who always did her duty.

Funeral services were conducted at the Hale school house on the Ruidoso at 2:30 Jan 15, by Rev. J. R. Bevins of the Tularosa Methodist church followed by interment in the Ruidoso cemetery, beside her husband.

Pall bearers were her grandsons: Charles, Jim, Walter and Newt Robinson, William and Jack Wingfield.—Contributed.

Suggests Use of Funds

Governor Tingley said today that he had learned that some communities have not yet made any disposition of funds raised last year and two years ago through sponsorship of Birthday balls for the President.

"Funds raised by communities and not yet put to use can accomplish nothing while they are held in a bank account," the Governor said. "These dollars should be put to work immediately."

"At the time they were raised it was planned to use them to finance treatment for crippled children in the community. Now, with the Carrie Tingley Hospital in operation treatment is available to every needy child in the state, and the goal of the hospital is to afford such treatment just as rapidly as it is possible to do, so every crippled child who needs an operation, hospitalization and treatment."

The Governor said he wanted to suggest to communities that any funds now being held be sent to the Carrie Tingley Hospital or to the Hospital Trusteeship Fund, in care of his office.

The Trustee Fund has been used, the Governor said, to purchase auxiliary equipment, such as playground and recreation equipment, which is a necessary part of the hospital service and to help finance the state's share in completing WPA projects at the hospital.

Miss Lena May McFarland of Capitan spent last weekend with her aunt and uncle Sheriff and Mrs. R. E. Grimes.

Modern automobile accessories are designed with three major purposes in mind, comfort, safety and convenience and the most important of these is safety, according to M. D. Douglas, manager of Chevrolet's parts and accessories department.

"The motoring public, along with civic-minded organizations throughout the country, is paying more and more attention to safety on the highways," Mr. Douglas declared. "This is largely the result of concerted campaigns which have been sponsored to a large extent by automobile manufacturers themselves. While all automobile accessories try to effect improvements to the comfort and convenience of motoring, all are at the same time concerned with increasing motoring safety."

"Chevrolet accessories are custom-built, engineered especially to Chevrolet cars. They add to inherent beauty of the car and they increase driving comfort and convenience. Their primary function, however, is to give Chevrolet drivers the advantage of the latest developments in safety devices."

Mr. Douglace cited the example of the new super deluxe Chevrolet radio as a case in point. Ordinarily it would be difficult to understand wherein a car radio could add to the safety of driving, he admitted, but when you consider the elimination of a hazard as a contribution to safety it is a different question.

The new Chevrolet radio, with its push-button station selector, permits the driver to enjoy his favorite radio program, while at the same time the selection of that program does not distract his attention from the road.

The driver may set his radio to receive the program on any of eight separate stations with the mere touch of a finger. The push of a button automatically tunes in the station he wants.

The attention required to change stations is even less than that needed to light a cigarette. The radio itself is the finest available, Mr. Douglas said, embodying all the refinements to be found in the most powerful home radios.

It is toward such improvements that accessory engineers are continually striving. Their work adds beauty. It adds comfort. It adds convenience to motoring. But its most important contribution lies in the field of safety.

The Livestock Situation

Los Angeles, January 19, 1938—There is a growing conviction on the part of cattlemen that one solution in the marketing of beef at more stable prices will come through more general use of the Federal service in grading and stamping for quality. The livestock and meat business is probably the oldest industry in the world; in the United States it is by far the greatest industry. Yet we must admit that our merchandizing of beef and nearly all meats is on an antiquated basis.

Despite the fact that meat forms the center of nearly every American meal, there so far has been little effort to standardize the product, or to make certain that the buyer on the retail counter has any real assurance that he or she will get the quality of product ordered. It is argued by cattlemen that if standard Federal grading of beef becomes an accomplished fact the country over, it will be the greatest step ever taken towards adding confidence on the part of the consumer in beef.

Indicating the tremendous demand on the part of consumers for government-graded and stamped beef, it is interesting to note that in the short period of two years, Los Angeles now stands fourth in the United States in the volume of beef carrying government stamp grades. Los Angeles advanced from eleventh place to fourth place during the last twelve months, with indications pointing towards standing third place early this year. At this time, Chicago is first, New York second, St. Louis third and Los Angeles fourth.

Producers and feeders believe that when the time comes that a housewife may order meat by U. S. government grades over the telephone, it will help to reduce the cost of distribution. It goes without saying that the most economical means of merchandizing meat by telephone, but it is difficult to inspire complete confidence until the buyer is assured of standardized quality guaranteed by an official government stamp.

Lincoln County School Library

Mr. G. T. McQuillen, president of the Lincoln County Board of Education and Ex-mayor of Carrizozo, has another feather in his cap. The handsome new County library is almost completed. Due to the efforts of Mr. McQuillen and Mrs. Ola Jones this WPA project is just about the most valuable asset of white town and county may boast.

The exterior is adobe, pebbledashed and finished in white. Above the entrance in black standing out in bold relief are the words: "The Fountain of Knowledge Flows thro' Books." The interior is plastered in a rough design of gray and white. Three large windows are placed in the center on each side with additional windows in the ends which will furnish ample light even on a dark day.

Mr. McQuillen and Mrs. Jones have visited several libraries recently with a view to designing the interior in the most convenient way so that efficient service may be given at all times.

Much credit is due the Board of Education, Mrs. Jones, rural supervisor, and others for the fine building.

The transfer can then be ironed off again as when new.

Keeping Up With Science

By Science Service

Fever Therapy for Organs of Body May Be Developed

Pasadena, Calif.—New researches at the California Institute of Technology here hold the possibility of offering the long-sought goal of selective treatment of various organs of the body by those ultra-short radio waves now being employed to produce artificial fever in the therapy of disease.

Wave Absorption Studied. Prof. G. Potapenko of the physics department is the man whose findings may yield these important practical results. For more than a year he has been investigating the absorption of short radio waves (8 inches to 4 feet in length) as they pass through many substances.

Contrary to present-held theories seemed not to depend greatly on the size of the molecules in the substance, but rather on the size of part of the molecule which can be called the "tail." This "tail" seems to rotate freely about the axis of such molecules as those of alcohol.

To Produce Selective Heating. The exact knowledge of the maximum of absorption is necessary to produce the selective heating of specific organs or parts of the body. Those parts containing molecules with orienting "tails" can be easily administered the sought-for selective heating treatment.

All that is necessary, points out Professor Potapenko, is to tune the radio wave generator to the wavelength corresponding to the maximum of absorption. Otherwise the effect is one of general heating like that now used to produce a general artificial fever in the whole body.

Ball-and-Socket Joint in Skull of a Dinosaur

Washington.—What use was there for a ball-and-socket jointed bone at the back of a dinosaur's skull? Charles W. Gilmore, curator of vertebrate paleontology at the United States National museum, would like to know.

At the back of the skull of a hadrosaur, a rooster-crested monster that lived in Montana about a hundred million years ago, he has found a bone arrangement that has never been found in any other kind of skull. A relatively small, triangular bone bears on its front edge a socket or cup, which fits neatly over a ball-shaped projection on the bone in front of it.

Whatever was the use of this unique skull joint, it could hardly have been to make room for the hadrosaur's massive brain. For the hadrosaur's brain was anything but massive. It couldn't have weighed more than two or three ounces. It was enough to see, hear, and probably smell with, but that was about all. But then, very likely a dinosaur never bothered to think—except possibly once in a while about another dinosaur.

Normal American Man Doesn't Look So Good

New York.—Homo Americanus (male) took a debunking at Cooper Union here, at the hands of Dr. John Dollard of Yale, who has studied the species intensively, taking thousands of measurements of attitude both physical and mental.

Here's what you look like, Mr. Proud American Man: Physically, you are potbellied, flat-chested, round-shouldered.

You believe what you read in the papers. You think the competitive system is all right, and expect to thrive thereby yourself, but you'll take your beating without whining if you do chance to lose out. Win or lose, you're for the status quo.

You are married or expect to be. But you're not averse to a bit of philandering before marriage, or even after.

On the credit side: You don't like too much talk. You keep clean. You believe in education and in democracy.

Ice Cream Pie Is Excellent Lesson in Refrigeration

New York.—Some of you may have had this air conditioned, or so-called ice cream, pie that is going around. You bake the lower crust of a pie, let it cool, fill with ice cream, put meringue on top and toast the meringue in the oven until brown.

Their amazement comes from a lack of understanding of heat insulation, air conditioning requirements and similar profound topics which you, as the pie fabricator, can check off on your fingers.

Meringue Acts Like Cork. The meringue, you point out, of course, consists of just about nothing except bubbles of air with walls of egg white, and the same properties which give cork its grand insulation qualities in preventing the passage of heat enable the meringue to keep the ice cream from melting during its brief visit to the hot oven.

No one has perhaps figured out the size of a bubble of air in meringue. But the cork cells are about one one-thousandth of an inch in diameter and some 200,000,000 of them would be needed to make up a cubic inch. Each cell of cork contains air and heat has great difficulty in passing through even a small thickness of them.

Not All Cork From Spain. Thus while your guests are eating their air conditioned ice cream pie and the topic of conversation has naturally turned to cork you may add that despite the war in Spain the supply of cork is decreased only a little.

Some of them may not know that the bark of a certain species of live oak tree, that we call cork, is produced in much greater quantities in Portugal than it is in Spain. And that as much or more than is produced in Spain comes from Italy, France and North Africa.

Last year's Spanish harvest of cork (technically it is known as the "strip") was naturally decreased by the civil war, but world markets have not yet been affected.

Hormone Induced a Rat to Mother Young Squab

New York.—The spectacle of a healthy, grown-up female rat chattering and mothering a tender young squab, just because a few drops of a hormone from the pituitary gland had been injected into the rat's body, was described by Prof. Charles R. Stockard of Cornell university medical college at a meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine.

Professor Stockard used this phenomenon, discovered by Dr. Oscar Riddle of the Carnegie institution of Washington's laboratories at Cold Spring Harbor, to illustrate the powerful influence that hormones or gland secretions may exert on the body of man and other animals. The rat he talked about was a perfectly normal rat that ordinarily would have made a prompt meal of the tender meat of the squab. The only difference in this particular rat was the few drops of hormone.

Hormones have other effects on the body. Together with the nervous system and brain, they are responsible for all the different parts and mechanisms of the body working together as a whole. Hormones and nerves, moreover, depend on each other. Nerves stimulate glands to secrete hormones and hormones stimulate nerves to control muscles, even in such simple movements as those involved in walking and talking. Which of the two is more important may be surmised from the fact that hormone control is an older and more primitive method of integration than the nervous mechanism. Plants, for example, do not have anything like nerves, but they do produce hormones for controlling and integrating life processes.

Crop Failures Reason for Deserted Pueblos

St. Paul, Minn.—Deserted Indian villages, pueblos in silent ruin, might have warned many an American farmer not to try his luck in the treacherous dust bowl areas in our western plains.

This is the vital lesson from America's past, which science is beginning to uncover, and which may help avert future farm tragedies.

Reporting to the Journal Science an investigation of many Pueblo Indian ruins in southwestern Great Plains, Max C. Marley, biochemist of this city, declares that crop failures, not marauding enemies, apparently drove Indians from these valley farms.

His discoveries in New Mexico uphold the recently advanced theory of Dr. W. H. Wedel of the Smithsonian institution, that drought eras routed Indian farmers in regions of Kansas and Nebraska.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Butchery by Air.

SAN ANTONIO, TEXAS.—Following the example of Il Duce and that air-minded son of his, who wrote a brave book describing the joy of bombing undefended mud villages full of women and children, one of the leading statesmen of Italy has delivered a speech declaring war is the most glorious, most inspiring, most beautiful thing on earth.

Caporetta was the place where all ranks of an entire army, with victory against the enemy right around the corner, suddenly remembered they had sworn to die in the last ditch and started for the extreme rear to look for it. Or it may have been that everybody just simultaneously felt homesick. Anyhow, it was months before some of them caught up with their panting.

So it's possible this blood-thirsty orator has confused the science of warfare with the sport of foot-racing.

The Meaning of Words.

A DISTINGUISHED gentleman, who never admitted the Eighteenth amendment was a failure, is said to be comforting the dregs with words of wisdom, his attitude—in effect—being this:

The causes of sanity and safety suffer because certain distillers and many local retailers indiscriminately sell an unnecessarily high-powered product, the results being law-breaking, property damage; danger and personal injury and untold suffering for innocent parties; homicides, mutilations, often a horrid death for the purchaser of the article in question.

To extend the argument further, let us change just three words: "... Certain automobile manufacturers and many local agents indiscriminately sell an unnecessarily high-powered product, the results being law-breaking, property damage; danger and personal injury and untold suffering for innocent parties; homicides, mutilations, often a horrid death for the purchaser of the article in question."

Now then, when the aforesaid gentleman kindly proves that, in selling cars capable of traveling 130 miles an hour or even faster, for use on highways having a speed limit of 60 miles an hour, or less, he is promoting the causes of sanity and safety, I'll turn prohibitionist with him.

Practical Jokes.

THREE city sportsmen drove into the Kerrville country in Texas. Everywhere the lands were posted. But one of the party knew an old rancher whose acres bordered the highway. Leaving his mates at the road, he went to ask permission to hunt deer on the property.

"Sure," said the owner. "Bust right in—my place is full of bucks; I never gun 'em myself. Now do me a favor. As you turn into the lot, you'll see an old, crippled, sick white mare. She oughter be dead, but I ain't got the heart to kill any living creature. Put her out of her misery, will you?"

The gratified huntsman had a waggish idea. As he opened the pasture gate, he let out a terrific yell.

"I feel so good I've got to shoot something!" he whooped. "Believe I'll shoot a horse to start with."

With that, he hauled off and blasted down the feeble old nag where she leaned against the fence.

"And now," as he turned on his horrified companions. "I believe I'll shoot me a couple of so-and-soes."

He waved his rifle in their direction. The next instant one had vaulted out of the car and had him down, choking him until his tongue stuck out like a pink plush necktie.

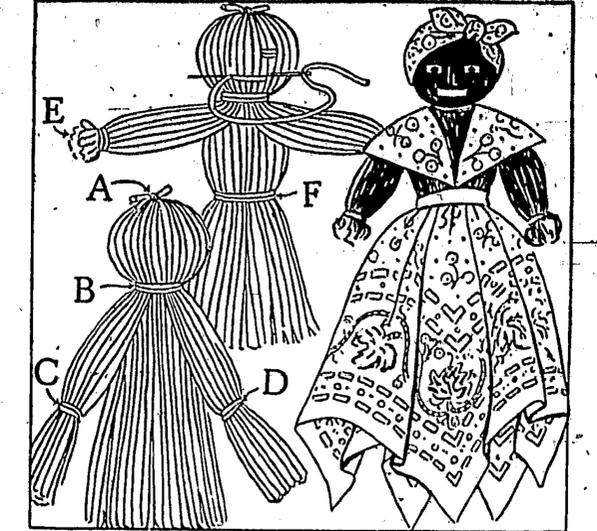

They were halfway back to town, with a large man sitting on his head and another driving like mad to find a lunatic asylum or a stout jail, before the humorist succeeded in convincing them it was all just clean, boyish fun.

Now the rest of Texas is wondering whom the joke's on. IRVIN S. COBB. Copyright.—WNU Service.

Closed Doors to Tokugawa

About 500 years ago a Tokugawa shogun (dictator) closed Japan's doors to the world and her foreign shipping stopped. But for centuries before that, Japanese fishermen and delegates of the Daimyo (Feudal lords) sailed extensively along the China coast. They even voyaged to Siam, Sumatra and Java. In the earlier open-door days, the shogunate designated certain vessels called "go-shu-in-sen" as trading ships.

HOW to SEW RUTH WYETH SPEARS

A Bandanna Doll Has Old Time Charm

IF YOU want to make a very big doll, use two hanks of yarn and the biggest red bandanna handkerchief you can find. Smaller dolls made from one hank and a medium size handkerchief are also attractive.

Tie the hank at the top as at A, then cut it across the bottom. Make the head by tying the yarn in as at B, then separate part of the strands at the sides and bind them together to make the arms as at C and D. Cut these strands off as at E to make the hands. Bind the rest of the yarn around as at F to define the waistline. Thread a large needle with white darning cotton and make the mouth and eyes with several stitches made as shown here. Sew small black buttons or beads in the middle of the eyes.

Cut a square out of the center of the handkerchief. The square piece you cut out should be big enough so it may be cut through the center from corner to corner to make two triangles—one to be used for the head kerchief for the doll and one for the three cornered shoulder kerchief. When this is done, gather around the square hole in the center of the bandanna and draw up the gathering thread to make the full top of the skirt.

Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 210 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Brought Prices Down

At the beginning of the century only the rich could afford silk hosiery. Since then advertising has created a demand that has resulted in better and less expensive production methods, provided many thousand additional jobs, and reduced the price to the consumer to a point where practically all can wear silk hosiery if they wish.

Office of Senator Chavez

Washington, D. C., January 19, 1938. The Senate ended its second week of operations with no decision on the Anti-lynching bill. Bitterness between the opponents and those opposing a measure threatened to hold progress of Administration endorsed legislation. No sign of break in the legislative jam has been evidenced.

New Mexicans interested in ending their much beloved Judge Patton on the United States Supreme Court are holding their breath. It is rumored that Judge Patton's name was among the six submitted to the White House by Attorney General Cummings. Of the six, Patton is deemed to have the best chance.

Senators Hatch and Chavez are in asking Governor Tingley to personally intercede with the New Mexico Highway Commission in preserving from threatened destruction the charming village of Rancho de Taos. One of the surveys realigning United States Highway 64 would remove many old houses and gardens and destroy the ancient charm of one of the oldest historical villages in New Mexico. Many petitions have been received opposing the survey. The Taos Artists Association has also protested the move. It is expected that Governor Tingley will be greatly interested in view of the campaign he has waged to publicize the tourist attractions of the state. We are sure everyone will be grateful for his assistance.

The matter of obtaining additional funds to speed the WPA projects for rebuilding dams and canals destroyed by the floods in the upper Pecos River in San Miguel and Guadalupe Counties last year is now before WPA officials in Washington. Senator Chavez has conferred with them and urged speedy approval in order to assure construction in time to allow the people of those communities to make their spring plantings.

The Inter-departmental Committee studying conditions in the Middle Rio Grande Valley met with the Congressional Delegation this week to go over their report. The picture they painted of the steady destruction of the resources of the Valley was disheartening on one hand but also encouraging on the other in view of the awakened interest of the Administration in the welfare of the Valley. The Committee will confer further with the Congressional Delegation in order to lay the ground work for proposed corrective legislation.

Representatives of New Mexico's Farm Groups are again in Washington to assist the New Mexico Congressional Delegation in handling the farm Bill which is now in conference.

Recent visitors to Senator Chavez' office have been: Dean F. Stahman of Las Cruces; Albert Woods of Artesia; Mrs. Anna Foley of Vaughn and Mrs. John T. Murphy of Santa Fe. Frank T. Ortiz, Director of the New Mexico District, National Bituminous Coal Commission, left for New Mexico this week.

FOR SALE:— or trade 30 Victor wolf traps, good as new. Also one 2 wheel trailer.— Western Lumber Company.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Thornton were in town from Ocuero last Saturday.

ALADDIN LIGHT SAVES EYESIGHT

Getting Lessons Made More Pleasant Here's a school girl's own comment on Aladdin light: "It has helped my school work by creating a desire to study. What student likes dim light?" No wonder teachers say that their brightest pupils come from Aladdin homes. Aladdin lamps help avoid eye strain, which to so many thousands of rural folks has brought the expense of an eye specialist, and glasses; and often permanent injury to eyes.

Modern White Light

Fills Your Rooms Pays for Itself... Burns 94% Air...

Aladdin brings brightness and happiness into homes... Helpful light for those who want to read, sew or study, and for the smaller children to enjoy their games. It is not surpassed by electric light for whiteness and steadiness. Aladdin runs 50 hours on one gallon of ordinary coal oil (kerosene), gives a whole evening of light for about a penny's worth of oil. It's so safe a child can operate it. No noise, pumping up or pressure. Not smelly or smoky. The colorful new Aladdin shades decorate a room by night or day.

Short Term Loan Payments Increased

Payments on loans discounted through the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Wichita were 84 percent greater in 1937, than in 1936, according to Frank M. Butcher, president in his annual report to the Farm Credit Board of the Wichita district.

Cash receipts of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, including partial payments and loans paid in full, amounted to $22,900,000 last year compared to slightly more than $17,000,000 in 1936, with approximately the volume of business involved in both years, President Butcher's report shows.

This increase in repayment, Butcher asserts, is due to higher income of the farmer in 1937 as compared to 1936, particularly during the first three-quarters of the year. Higher prices, especially for wheat and livestock coupled with improved pasture and feeding conditions in parts of the district helped many producers in liquidating their indebtedness, he states.

Farm income for the Ninth District, comprising Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico, was $97,000,000 more in 1937 than in 1936, Butcher's report continues. Generally the farm income is satisfactory in the eastern wheat territory, the mountain livestock ranges, and the irrigated arid and quite unsatisfactory in the land wheat region, the growing sections, and the livestock ranges in eastern Colorado and New Mexico.

Office of Senator Chavez

Washington, D. C., January 19, 1938. - The Senate ended its second week of operations with no decision on the Anti-lynching bill. Bitterness between the opponents and those opposing the measure threatened to hold up progress of Administration sponsored legislation. No sign of break in the legislative jam has been evidenced.

New Mexicans interested in seeing their much beloved Judge Bratton on the United States Supreme Court are holding their breath. It is rumored that Judge Bratton's name was among the names submitted to the White House by Attorney General Cummings. Of the six, Bratton is deemed to have the best chance.

Senators Hatch and Chavez joined in asking Governor Tingley to personally intercede with the New Mexico Highway Commission in preserving from threatened destruction the charming village of Rancho de Taos. One of the surveys realigning United States Highway 64 would remove many old houses and gardens and destroy the ancient charm of one of the oldest historical villages in New Mexico. Many petitions have been received opposing the survey. The Taos Artists Association has also protested the move. It is expected that Governor Tingley will be greatly interested in view of the campaign he has waged to publicize the tourist attractions of the state. We are sure everyone will be grateful for his assistance.

The matter of obtaining additional funds to speed the WPA projects for rebuilding dams and canals destroyed by the floods in the upper Pecos River in San Miguel and Guadalupe Counties last year is now before WPA officials in Washington. Senator Chavez has conferred with them and urged speedy approval in order to assure construction in time to allow the people of those communities to make their spring plantings.

The inter-departmental committee studying conditions in the Middle Rio Grande Valley met with the Congressional Delegation this week to go over their report. The picture they painted of the steady destruction of the resources of the Valley was disheartening on one hand but also encouraging on the other in view of the awakened interest of the Administration in the welfare of the Valley. The committee will confer further with the Congressional Delegation in order to lay the ground work for proposed corrective legislation.

Representatives of New Mexico's Farm Groups are again in Washington to assist the New Mexico Congressional Delegation in handling the farm bill which is now in conference.

Recent visitors to Senator Chavez's office have been: Dean F. Stahman of Las Cruces; Albert Woods of Artesia; Mrs. Anna Foley of Vaughn and Mrs. John T. Murphy of Santa Fe. Frank Ortiz, Director of the New Mexico District, National Bituminous Coal Commission, left for New Mexico this week.

FOR SALE: - or trade 30 Victor wolf traps, good as new. Also one 2 wheel trailer. - Western Lumber Company.

It always
Makes me mad
To go into
A restaurant
And find those Nasty open
Sugar bowls
Which are nothing
But parade grounds
For flies
And one can't Tell where
The flies
Came from .
In the first place
And another thing
About those bowls
That gets
My goat is when I need to put Sugar in my

Find only

Already used it

And so I have to
Dunk the wet

Getting Lessons Made More Pleasant
Here's a school girl's own comment on Aladdin light: "It has helped my school work by creating a destra to study. What student likes dim light?" No wonder teachers say that their brightest pupils come from Aladdin homes. Aladdin lamps help avoid eye strain, which to so many thousands of rural folks has brought the expense of an eye specialist, and glasses; and often permanent injury to eyes.

Modern White Light
Fills Your Rooms Aladdin brings brightness and happiness into homes... Restful light pays for itself... for those who want to read, sew or study, and for the smaller children to enjoy their games. It is not surpassed by electric light for whiteness and steadiness. Aladdin runs 50 hours on one gallon of ordinary coal oil (kerosene), gives a whole evening of light for about a penny's worth of oil. It's so safe a child can operate it. No noise, pumping up or pressure. Not smoky or smelly. The colorful new Aladdin shades decorate a room by night or day.

Short Term Loan Payments Increased

Payments on loans discounted through the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Wichita were 84 percent greater in 1937, than in 1936, according to Frank M. Butcher, president in his annual report to the Farm Credit Board of the Wichita district.

Cash receipts of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, including partial payments and loans paid in full, amounted to $22,900,000 last year compared to slightly more than $17,000,000 in 1936, with approximately the volume of business involved in both years, President Butcher's report shows.

This increase in repayment, Butcher asserts, is due to higher income of the farmer in 1937 as compared to 1936, particularly during the first three-quarters of the year. Higher prices, especially for wheat and livestock coupled with improved planting and feeding conditions in parts of the district helped many producers in liquidating their indebtedness, he states.

Farm income for the Ninth District, including Kansas, Oklahoma, Colorado and New Mexico, was $97,000,000 more in 1937 than in 1936, Butcher's report continues.

BRITAIN TO CURB JAPAN

Chamberlain Roused by Arrogance at Shanghai . . . Jackson Day Celebrated by the Democrats

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Japanese Too Arrogant

GRAND BRITAIN'S government, according to dispatches from London, has finally been driven by Japanese arrogance at Shanghai to the point of resistance. The invaders have been demanding full control of the captured city, to the virtual exclusion of other foreign interests, and their troops there have treated British policemen in the international settlement very roughly.

Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain has taken personal command of a British program designed to curb the Japanese expansion of power, and is keeping Washington and Paris fully informed of his plans and actions. Also he has been in frequent telephonic conversation with Foreign Minister Eden, vacationing at Cannes.

A high government official in London said Chamberlain had resolved "not to stand for Japanese use of military superiority in the present emergency to force concessions in Shanghai." It was made plain that Britain would act only in harmony with the United States and France.

That the Japanese are not afraid of Great Britain was indicated by a statement by Rear Admiral Tanetsugu Sosa, retired, maintaining that it would be easy for the Japanese navy to reduce the British strongholds at Hongkong and Singapore before the British main fleet could get there. Sosa said the only thing that could save Britain was to draw the United States into the war.

Jackson Day Feasts

DEMOCRATS who partook of Jackson day banquets in various large cities paid about $250,000 into the purse of the party's national committee. At the dinner in Washington President Roosevelt pleaded with the nation to understand that his administration believes it is helping and not hurting business by the drive against monopolistic practices. His talk was rather conciliatory. He promised a fight, but he called it a cheerful fight on his part, against a mere handful of the total business men and bankers and industrialists who can be expected to "fight to the last ditch to retain such autocratic control over the industry and the finances of the country as they now possess."

At the New York banquet Jim Farley staged the debut of Robert H. Jackson, assistant attorney general, as a candidate for the governorship of the Empire state. The young lawyer, who has attracted public attention recently by attacks on big business, was the principal speaker. At a luncheon party he admitted he would be the Democratic nominee for governor "if the party wants me."

Jackson is believed by many to be the President's choice for the 1940 presidential nomination.

Budget Message Summary

MORE vitally important than his annual message on the state of the nation was President Roosevelt's budget message to congress. In it he forecast a deficit of $1,088,120,000 for the current fiscal year which ends on June 30, and a deficit of $940,000,000 for the 1939 fiscal year.

There was no promise that the budget would be balanced in the near future, the national revenue estimates being reduced because of the depression.

Nearly a billion dollars was asked by the President for national defense because of "world conditions over which his nation has no control," and more may be called for soon for the same purpose.

Summarized, the President's budget statement said: Revenues for the next fiscal year will total $9,910,400,000, a decrease of $401,076,000 from the present fiscal year.

Expenditures, exclusive of debt retirements, will total $9,090,000,000, a decrease of $539,600,000 from the present fiscal year.

National defense appropriations will total $991,300,000, an increase of $34,300,000. Later the President may ask for additional funds to construct several extra naval vessels.

Relief expenditures for the next fiscal year will total roughly $1,130,304,000, a decrease of $941,350,000 from the present fiscal year.

The deficit will be financed through Social Security and other trust funds and not through public borrowing.

The deficit estimate for the fiscal year which ends June 30 has been raised from $695,000,000 to $1,030,100,000, because of the business recession.

Expenditures for new highways, new rivers and harbors projects, new public buildings, new reclamation projects and other new public works will be reduced sharply.

The public debt will reach a record high of $30,520,200,000 on June 30, 1939.

Vandenberg's Stan

SENATOR ARTHUR H. VANDENBERG of Michigan is not going to seek the Republican nomination for President in 1940, but if it is offered him he will not refuse the honor. He so stated in a letter to Joseph Leib, organizer of a movement against a third term for Mr. Roosevelt.

The senator, whose term expires in 1941, asserted he would not work for or countenance any organized effort to obtain the presidential nomination for him, but added: "I hope I shall never run away from any public duty or obligation which confronts me."

In his letter he hinted he expects that a new form of opposition will develop against Roosevelt as a result of the split in the Democratic party and Republican activities in seeking to form a new program through a committee of 150 representatives of all groups within the Republican party.

Wheeler Hits I.C.C.

SENATOR BURTON K. WHEELER of Montana, chairman of the senate railroad finance investigating committee, charged in a statement that the interstate commerce commission is using "trick rabbits" in solving carrier problems.

He accused the finance division of the I. C. C., which must approve government loans to railroads before they are granted by the Reconstruction Finance corporation, of deliberately violating the law and "calmly gambling" on a stock market increase to "protect the taxpayers' money."

Wheeler's ire was aroused by conditions surrounding a loan of $6,000,000 by the RFC to the Erie railroad and an $8,000,000 RFC loan to the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

Civil Service Lags

CONGRESS was told by the civil service commission that its failure to place employees of newly created government agencies was becoming "a matter of grave public concern."

"Wholesale exemptions such as have been permitted in the last year must cease if the merit system is to prevail," the commission said.

It made these recommendations: Place first, second and third class postmasters under civil service.

Authorize the President to draft all nonpolicy forming employees into the classified service.

Make retirement compulsory for government employees at the age of seventy and optional at sixty years, after 30 years' service, or at sixty-two after 15 years' service.

Historic Hoaxes

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON © Western Newspaper Union

Wolf! Wolf!

FOR several years, just as regularly as winter came around, press association dispatches carried the news about hunters up in Canada having to fight for their lives against packs of ferocious timber wolves. In fact, a winter without such a wolf story was like a winter without Christmas and Santa Claus. And strangely enough all of these stories came from the town of Algoma.

And then when the whole nation had become thoroughly "wolf-conscious" (and "Algoma-conscious") J. W. Curran, editor of the Sault Ste. Marie Daily Star, confessed that it was all a hoax. He had attempted to interest outside newspapers in the resources of the Algoma wilderness and had failed. So he turned to wolves to help him. The non-existent ferocious beasts turned the trick.

Tourists were attracted to the area in increasing numbers. Even the discovery there of low grade iron ore deposits as the result of the provincial government's offering a bounty for developing iron ore beds is credited to the wolf campaign.

But after awhile Mr. Curran became tired of hearing his paper called the "Wolf Gazette." He had accomplished his purpose and in an editorial he exposed the hoax. He said, "Any man who says he was et by a wolf is a liar." Then he offered a $500 reward for anyone who could claim that an Algoma man had been attacked by a wolf. That reward is still standing for no one has yet tried to collect the $500. There are wolves in that region but it seems that they're not as fierce as the "Wolf Gazette" once claimed they were.

The Archko Volume

IN 1870 Rev. W. D. Mahan, a Cumberland Presbyterian minister of Boonville, Mo., published a book called "The Archko Volume." It purported to be an official report of the trial and death of Jesus Christ, made directly to the Emperor Tiberius by Pontius Pilate, governor of Judea, which Mahan asserted he had obtained from the Vatican in Rome.

Its authenticity was immediately attacked but Mahan defended his work so vigorously that many people were convinced that it was genuine. Later he expanded the book with the addition of other documents, giving many new "facts" about the life of Christ. These, he asserted, he had obtained in the Vatican and in Constantinople.

Since that time the Archko Volume has been reprinted in many different editions in many different cities; it has been translated into foreign languages and thousands of copies of it have been sold all over the world. Despite the fact that Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed of the University of Chicago, an eminent authority on early Christian literature, has proved that the book is a fake from beginning to end, many people still believe it authentic. And strangely enough an original printing of this fake is now considered a rarity and a valuable piece of Americana, and several copies have been sold for as much as $50 each.

A Bath for Miss Liberty

TO THE city editor of every New York newspaper several years ago came an announcement from the "American Patriotic League" that the Statue of Liberty was going to be given a bath. It had been decided that the film of dust and smoke from passing steamers must be removed from Bartholdi's famous statue but in order to avoid possible injury to the metal, the announcement said, a new supersuds solution would be used.

The story, printed in all the papers, was picked up by the press associations and carried all over the country. Immediately the columnists and newspaper paragraphers began making wisecracks about Miss Liberty's bath and it became one of the leading topics of the day.

But when an inquiry about the proposed bath was made at the War department, which then had jurisdiction over Bedloe's Island, officials there said they knew nothing about the matter. Then one New York editor became suspicious. He dug up the original announcement and looked at the address of the "American Patriotic League."

By a strange coincidence it was the same address as that of an advertising agency handling publicity for a soap company that was ready to put a new soap product on the market!

Beer Is Very Old

Historically, beer is of great antiquity. It was manufactured by the Egyptians and the Greeks, Romans and ancient Gauls. The Romans are supposed to have introduced the art of brewing into Britain, the only intoxicating beverages used by the Britons previous to the Roman conquest being mead and cider. Ale seems to have been the current name in England for malt liquor in general before the introduction of the use of hops from Germany about 1234.

Handsome Tweeds the Year Around

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

FASTER than you can say "corset waist" or "sling skirt," styles may come and styles may go, but when apparel for outdoor travel and for wear during the varied activities of the day is to be considered, women whose clothes carry the air and tone of the thoroughly inevitable select the classically correct, meticulously tailored wool (preferably tweed) garments and ensembles that are right for wear through all seasons and in all weathers.

It is with this thought in mind that we call your attention to the handsome travel and resort coats illustrated and to the suit which is every inch an aristocrat. Invent in outfits of this distinctive character, made of sterling worth Harris tweeds, as they are and you lay the foundation for a wardrobe that will carry you through with a patrician air in any group, at any hour of the day and at any season of the year.

There is much of romance and interesting story that surrounds the history of the quality-kind tweeds that fashion these models. They are not produced by any one company, but are of pure virgin wool developed in Scotland and spun, dyed, finished and handwoven by the islanders of the outer Hebrides. The island of Harris is the one that has given its name to these hand-loomed tweeds, but the fabrics are also made in neighboring islands.

The distinctive coloring of these tweeds is also traceable to their peculiar origin. Nearly all the dye comes from native herbs, roots, lichens, mosses and seaweeds and other natural vegetable resources. The various formulae for these dyes are heirloom secrets, jealously guarded. Having told you in part the story of romance that surrounds the tweeds used for the garments pictured, let's consider the styling points that add to their chic. The traditionally correct topcoat to the left is tailored of handloomed tweed in herringbone pattern. It is single-breasted and full length, with free straight hanging lines. By the way, advance models particularly stress the importance of straight hanging lines for spring coats. In a warm red brown this coat combines beautifully with sports costumes of any type or color.

© Western Newspaper Union.

The high round collar and loose swagger lines that identify the sturdy-topcoat of luxurious tweed centered in the group are eminently youthful. A fine line check in deep brown is striking against the light tan background in wide herringbone weave. Leather buttons at the front closing repeat the deep brown accent. Leather is another interesting theme for spring. It is used for pipings, for buttons, for applique and various other trimmings.

The classic suit for all weather, all season wear, is here interpreted in the aristocratic tweed that hails from Scottish isles. Soft shades of blue green are blended in herringbone pattern for the fitted, broad-shouldered jacket with monotone skirt in matching blue, providing smart contrast as to fabric patterning. Sometimes the order is reversed and the skirt is of the patterned tweed topped with a monotone jacket. In some instances ensembles are shown which include hats of matching tweeds and even bags are tailored of the same tweed.

Strange Facts

Caesar Played Football

IT WAS from the Greeks, without question, that the Romans adapted football. Under the Romans, football—or "harpastum" in Latin, became primarily a sport of the soldiers, serving admirably as a physical conditioner during the periods of peace between the campaigns of the Caesars.

The Roman legions, in their invasion of the British Isles, taught the Britons to play football. Football in England, by the Eleventh century, had taken some sort of form, with goals in use and with players permitted only to kick the ball, not to carry or throw it. It was still played by masses of men. It was rough and rugged sport and its exponents sometimes stood in poor favor with the more staid citizens.

Football came under the wrath of a reigning monarch. King Henry II, alarmed because the boys were playing football instead of practicing with the bow and arrow, sternly abolished the game. The four succeeding kings followed his example and it was not until about 1600, with King James on the throne, that football was permitted again. Gunpowder had then taken the place of the bow and arrow. In 1681 Charles II formed a team and challenged the duke of Albemarle to a game. The sport then spread to the English schools. Its development thereafter was unhampered and rapid. In the main it took the form of what we know today as soccer, or association football, which allows only kicking the ball or butting it with the head.

ALL-OVER TUCKS

Watch the new mid-season lightweight wool dresses and take note of the goodly number that achieve their chic and their charm via a tuck technique such as you see here pictured. The material is a red worsted of cashmere-like softness with all-over tucking and a trimming of corded scallops of self-fabric finishing neck and short sleeves. The red suede peak-crown hat is a favorite type.

RICKRACK TRIMMING INSPIRES WEAVING

There is something so refreshing and attractive about rickrack on cottons or linens. So it is not surprising to find this trimming at last having an influence upon weaves and patterns for this spring. One sees it in both imports and American fabrics. Usually the rickrack which appears in a stripe or band arrangement is carried out in colors keyed to the rickrack trimming, suggesting further trimming up if desired.

These patterned cottons and linens have a very definite place in connection with the fashion for decorated materials, as they have that hand-worked look which women like.

Too much long riding alone—especially when it was mixed up with the night riders' long rope—could do queer things to a man whose head wasn't too strong in the first place. Lon Magoon, half outlaw, half sneak-thief, all coyote, might have turned at last into something which must be destroyed at sight, without hesitation.

Then he walked to the dead horse and roughly verified the angle of the shot; then turned and began to climb the canyon slope.

"Billy, come back! You can't—"
"You stay down," he ordered her savagely. "Or by God, I'll tie you down with my pigging-string!"

It would have been easy then to walk into gunfire, easy to shoot it out with an ambushed man. Always keeping his eye on Marian's position, he searched those upper slopes, backward, forward, and quartering. But what happened to him was the one hardest thing of all—to find the broken country empty and silent, with nothing in it to fight or trail.

In the end he could only go back to the girl with no result to show, and no assurance as to what was ahead. He would not have been surprised, when he turned his back on that emptiness, if a gun had spoken from a place where no one was, and brought him down.

"No catchum," he told Marian. She had not stayed under cover, but was sitting on a rock, a little apart from her dead horse. No use quarrelling with her over that; she had already proved to him that he couldn't control anything she chose to do. He put himself between her and the rim. "It's a long walk back," he said morosely. "That's my fault. I'm not used to this stuff, or I wouldn't have lost my pony. When I saw your horse drop—I lost my head, I guess."

"Because it was I," she said with an unexpected, deep-striking clarity. "We'd better get going, I think."
"We can't go on? And get—"
"That must have been the man we were after, that killed your horse."

She drew a deep breath, and stood up. For a moment she looked all about her, upward at the high, towering rims. Then suddenly he saw her away.

He stepped forward in time to steady her with his hands on her arms. And now he found that she was trembling violently. Her face was white, making her eyes look enormous, and very dark. "Billy—I'm afraid—" She sat down on the rock again, as if her knees would not hold her up.

"No more danger, child. It's all over, and he's gone."

"But who could it be? Why should he want to—hurt me?"

"I don't know that. I can't imagine any living thing wanting to hurt you. I swear, by la Madre de Dios—he'll pay for it if I live to find him. Now don't you be afraid any more. It's all over, for now."

The tears began to roll down her face, and she hid them with her hands. Quickly he looked about him, checking the throw of the land. Then he lifted her up and led her to a pocket gully at the foot of the precipitous north slope. When he had made sure that searching lead could not reach them here, he got the blanket from her dead pony, and spread it for her to rest upon; and gathered bits of dead brush to build a tiny fire. "Striking fire kind of seems like setting up a mark," he apologized. "But you're plenty safe if you stay close under the rock split. Now you take it easy. We'll rest here an hour or so; then we'll go back."

Marian drew up her knees, and hid her eyes against them. One of her hands reached out to him uncertainly, and he took it. Her fingers were moist and cold, with a tremor in them; he warmed them between his hands, noticing how huge his hands were made to look by her slim fingers.

Presently she looked up, shook her head sharply, and drew away her hand. "I'm all right now. Did you ever see such silliness?"

"Rest easy. We've got lots of time."

The dusk had closed more rapidly at the last, and little light was left in the sky; but a moon was rising behind a high point of rocks, silhouetting a crag that looked like a horse's head.

He noticed how huge it looked, as moonbeams when they are low to the earth. The horse-head crag had a 400-foot profile, but it looked little against the moon, which was made to look bigger than a mountain, bigger than a range.

"You know," he said, "it's funny how badly things work out; never the way you want them to be. Many and many a night, lying out in the hills, watching my fire—like this—I've thought about how it would be, if you were there. How I'd get you to like these hills, and the coyotes talking, and the smell of smoke in your hair—you know, foolish stuff."
"I do love the hills," she said.
"No, look at the moon. This isn't it. This isn't right. You ought to be able to lie by your fire and smell pine timber. And that crack out there ought to have water running in it. You sit and listen to running water, and pretty soon you get to hear voices in it; sometimes you lie awake for hours trying to get what they say. But what's more to the point, there's likewise trout in the water. There ought to be a nice pan of trout frying, here on the fire."

"You fit with things like that, you know. As if you were made out of them."

He said, "A half hour's rest in the rocks, with a long, long walk ahead—this is about as close as people get to the way they want things, I suppose."

"It's my fault, Billy. If I hadn't been so stubborn you wouldn't have lost your horse; you'd have gone on through."

"Shucks, now!"
She was silent, and they sat looking into the fire. The smell of autumn was cool and clean in the air, across the dry sage; and the red-gold moon faintly mellowed the chill of darkness on the gaunt hills, so that they sat here in unreality, as if in a dream.

"Some places," he said, "they call that a harvest moon; the Indians call it the hunting moon, and they used to make smoke-medicines by it."

"What do you call it?"

"Well—sometimes we call it a coyote moon. Because it puts a kind of singing craze on the coyotes. They gather around on hill tops, seems like, and sing their hearts out, as if it drove them wild crazy, come way. Listen."

"Well, You See—" She Met His Eyes Again—"I Win."

Far off, so faint a whisper that it seemed half imagined, they could hear now a queer high crooning, full of an interwoven yapping and trilling, like nothing else on earth.

"It sounds," Marian said, "as if there were 40 or 50 of them—sitting somewhere on a mountain in a ring."

"Two," he told her. "They pair off this time of year."

"Two," she repeated. "Then that's why there's something more than moon madness in that singing."

He knew that they should be starting the long return, but he could not bring himself to say so. The thing that had brought them together again—the disaster to Horse Dunn and the 94—had nearly run its course. And he knew that it was a good thing for him that it had. Already he had lived under the same roof with Marian too long for his own good. He no longer had any hope that he could forget her; she would always be in the back of his mind some place, waiting to come real close to him in his dreams.

He supposed he would have to learn to live with those dreams. To sit with her now, far out and alone beside the little fire was itself an unreal and precious thing, now that he no longer fought against it. A quiet peace had come upon this place; or something as near peace as he ever knew any more. She was very near to him, so near that though their shoulders did not touch, it seemed to him that he could feel her warmth; and her hair, with the firelight in it, was a warm smoky mist, shot with gold, clouding his eyes.

They sat for a long time listening to the faint coyote song and the little popping of the fire. Once, as they sat quiet, he heard far off a thing he did not understand. It was so distant and so muffled that he could not at once decide whether it could have been the fall of a rock from a high place, or had been the report of a gun far away up the canyon, smothered by close walls and the drift of the air. He glanced at Marian to see if she had noticed it, and saw that she had not. Marian looked at him, the firelight pooling long shadows under, the lashes of her steady eyes. "I just thought of something."

"What was it?"
"This—Isn't it kind of funny?—this is exactly the situation we were speaking of the other day."

He was puzzled. "When was this?"
"In inspiration."

For a moment he didn't get it. Then it came back to him in a rush—the blast of sun upon the dusty street, the atmosphere of silent, waiting hostility, the groups of spurred and booted men in doorways, watching without seeming to watch; and he had stood talking to Marian across the door of a car, not thinking about what was ahead.

"If you and I were set afoot," she quoted, "some place far off in the mountains at night, with only one blanket between us—"

He was resting perfectly still on one elbow, looking at the fire; but he could feel her eyes, so near his face, watching him under her lashes. And behind her eyes he supposed she was laughing at him.

"I was right," she said. "You didn't know it then, but you can see it now. You see—it seems a good deal different, now that we're really here."

"Does it?" he said without expression. He got up with a sort of stiff, slow leisure, for the little fire was burning low. He went beyond the fire, squatted on one heel beside it, and fed it pieces of stick. "You see, I know you, Billy. Sometimes I think I know you better than I know myself." Her eyes wavered and drifted out toward the low young stars. "I can remember when I was afraid of you. If we had been out here then—two years ago—I would have wanted nothing so much as to get back among other people. That's all gone, now."

He looked at her. She had never seemed more lovely, more human, more elementally desirable than she looked now, a tired girl in cowboy-country work clothes, slim and lazy, relaxed by the little fire as if she had never known any other resting place in her life. Her face was quiet, almost grave; but though her eyes looked drowsy there was a little gleam in them that did not come from the flame in front: a small provocative glimmer of fire within, which he had seen in her eyes only two or three times in his life—and never before the last two or three days.

Their eyes met and held, his steady and marked within, hers seeming to laugh at him a little, half veiled by her lashes.

"I said," she reminded him, "that if we were—in a situation like this, there wouldn't be anything for me to worry about, nothing at all. And you said, if I thought that I was a fool. Well, you see—" she met his eyes again—"I win."

Still her eyes held, and he could not understand why hers did not drop. "I can't believe, hardly," he said, "that you have any idea what sort of thing you're talking about."

She smiled. "You think I don't? That's because western men are certainly the most conventional people in the world."

Suddenly he angered. He had not brought her here of his own will, nor set them afoot, nor wished to rest here with her. He would not even have been on her range, or within a day's ride of it, if her interests had not drawn him in and held him. She had made her decisions in regard to him long ago, and to change them he had spent his every resource without any effect. And now, at the last—it amused her to torment him. It seemed to him that there was a capricious she-devil in that girl—perhaps in all women, given opportunity.

"You see, I know you," she was saying again.

The masks behind his eyes dropped away, and though his face hardly changed his eyes reddened, seeming to smoke with an angry fire that came up behind. She herself had lighted that fire, long ago. It was a fire that had driven him relentlessly, making him rich; it could have made him work for her all her life—or it could break him again, and drive him up and down the world. Suddenly he did not know whether he loved or hated this girl.

"I'll give you the same answer I gave you in inspiration," he said, his words almost inaudible, even against the stillness of the night. "If you think that, you're a little fool."

Still she met his eyes, so long, so steadily, so knowingly that he wondered for an instant what was happening, was going to happen, there under the coyote moon.

Then he saw her face change, so that she was suddenly pale, and the unreadable light in her eyes went out, and she was like a little girl. Abruptly she pressed her face hard into her hands.

He made his voice as hard and cold as the rocks that hung over them. "Now what?"

She answered in a muffled voice, "I was wrong—I am afraid. I—I fall every one . . ." She lifted her head and glanced about her, as if she were seeing this place for the first time. A black shape lay beside the empty dust of the stream, like a great black bottle overturned—the carcass of Marian's dead horse. Suddenly the girl turned sideways, and dropped her head in her arms upon the blanket. She began to cry, terribly, silently except for the choice of her breath.

He sat down against a rock and waited. The gaunt, dead rock-hills leaned over them sadly cold and silent, blackened by the twisted ghost shapes of the parched brush. And the coyote moon was pale and old, no longer golden, but greenish, like phosphorus rubbed on a dead and frozen face.

Once she said, "But it's your fault, too—that I fall—your fault as much as my own."

His answer was perfectly honest. "I don't know what you mean."

CHAPTER XII

It was impossible for him to sit waiting for her weeping to stop, while her slim body shook convulsively with her effort to suppress it, and her breath jerked uncontrollably in her throat. Her tumbled hair made her seem a child; he had never seen her look so small, so fragilely made. And he thought he had never in his life seen anything so pitifully in need of comforting. He swore under his breath and got to his feet.

For a few moments he stood over her, watching the movement of the firelight in her hair. He could hardly prevent himself from touching her; almost he stooped and picked her up in his arms. But he was telling himself that that was the last thing she wanted.

He walked out a little way into the dark, and stood listening to the night silence. He was still worrying about the distant muffled sound of concussion which he had heard. It seemed to him now that what he had heard was unquestionably the sound of a gun—perhaps a gun fired near the forgotten miner's shanty at the upper end of the gulch; but what he could not imagine was who could have fired it. He had assumed that it was Lon Magoon who had killed Marian's pony; but now he saw that something was wrong. If Magoon had fired upon Marian Dunn and killed her horse he would not have gone to the cabin at the head of the gulch, but would have put long country between himself and them. Therefore two men, not one, must be prowling these hills. He thought of Coffee's theory that there had been a third man at Short Crick—and was worse puzzled than before.

Azaleas of the South Imported From France; Plant Brought From Toulouse

Azalea time in the deep South is one of great joy and exquisite beauty, writes Annabella Neusbaum in Nature Magazine. When the azaleas, evergreen shrubs of delicate foliage, burst their buds, masses of flowers cover the bush until, its foliage hidden, the entire plant is a glowing mass of living color.

The gracious charm of old Mobile, with her quaint old streets and spacious avenues lined with magnificent century-old live oaks and magnolias, provides a perfect setting for the azaleas and camellias. Today, Mobile has a beautiful "Azalea trail," a road some fifteen miles long that leads one through streets, literally banked with these flowers. The plants range from two to twenty feet in height, the reigning color being a glorious deep pink.

The history of the azaleas is closely interwoven with the romantic history and tradition of the old South. They came to the New World shortly after Blenville founded Mobile in 1711. From old family records we find that Francois Ludgere Diard, native Mobilian and direct descendant of one of the original settlers, returned to France to visit relatives in Toulouse. At the time of his visit the azaleas of southern France were blooming. He was so impressed with their dazzling splendor that on his return to the New World he brought home three varieties: a deep glowing pink known today as Pride of Mobile; a lavender-pink one, and a snowy-white one. Today, gorgeous specimens of these original plants can be seen in the oldest gardens—some of them perhaps a century and a half old, 20 feet high, and spreading out to a diameter of 100 feet. Now they are found all along the Gulf Coast from Texas to Florida, up the Atlantic seaboard to South Carolina.

Death of President Garfield President Garfield was shot on July 2, 1881, by Charles Julius Guiteau, and died at Elberon, N. J., on September 19, of the same year.

A Lift Toward Spring

GOOD frocks and true are these currently exhibited by your favorite designers, Sew-Your-Own. There's an ultra-polished model for informal evenings (dancing and that sort of thing), called the "Good-night frock." Then there's the more home-loving "Good-morning" number, and, to complete the trio, a swell little afternoon frock for tea-time goings-on. Why not spend happy days ahead in these very frocks? All you need do, you know, is to Sew, Sew, Sew-Your-Own!

Spring Frock.

The girl who has a flare for streamlining will see at once that the frock at the left is meant for her—just for her. She will make it of satin if she's thinking ahead to Spring; of wool if her mind is on the present or near future. She will puff the sleeves gently, give the girldie tie a fair but firm snug-ging-up, adjust the chic cowl neck—and she'll be something lovely to look at. Yes, Milady, this is the "Good-night frock" and if it's the last thing you do, you must add it in your new wardrobe.

To Start the Day.

When you greet the little family with that bright and cheery "Good morning," be sure your frock reflects an equally sweet note. Sew-Your-Own's most assuring number to this end is pictured above center. With a copy or two in gay gingham or seersucker you'll breeze through your day's work like nobody's business. The shirt-waist styling offers style and comfort that make this your best bet for early season's wear.

A "Go-Gittin'" Style

And for a charming "Good afternoon," choose a frock with plenty on the personality side. Such

Gentlemen from Birth

There is social superiority, much as we decry the claims of those who assume to have it. But it isn't based on ancestry or wealth or even on intellect. There are men in every walk of life who are born gentlemen.

Most salutary thing one can do is to talk back to himself.

The first thorough American utilitarian ignored the beauty of Niagara falls and mourned over the water power going to waste.

When a man says "I hate compliments," his words sound empty. Who does?

An Account They Cherish

As soon as a friendship is formed the parties to it open an account of favors and obligations. Shrewd school teachers intuitively know which of their pupils are going to make the big hits in life.

Would you rather have a man tell you his troubles than to brag? People who shout breathlessly and ceaselessly for "somebody to do something" often get the wrong thing done.

is the new young model at the right. Buttons in a line down the front tell you in so many dots and dashes that here you have "go-gittin'" style for Spring, 1933. Princess lines cared for fastidiously by a belt, and a collar with much of what it takes—these are things that prompt Sew-Your-Own to put this frock in its Fashion-First Review for the Spring season. Make your version soon, Milady. That invitation to tea will find you unafraid and eager to go.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste
Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.
You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, swelling up ankles, swelling, painness under the eyes—red streaks, gravel all played out.
In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your druggist!

"Research Professor of Economy"

SHE'S not a Ph.D. or an LL.D. She hasn't a diploma or a cap and gown. Her research is not done in the laboratory or the library. As a matter of fact, her findings are made, usually, in the street car, in the subway, in the suburban commuter's train.
She reads the advertisements in this paper with care and consideration. They form her research data. By means of them she makes her purchases so that she well deserves the title of "Research Professor of Economy." She discovers them after them, as the years roll on, combining high quality with low.
It is clear to you at once that you . . . and all who make and keep a home . . . have the same opportunity. With the help of newspaper advertising you, too, can graduate from the school of indiscriminate buying into the faculty of fastidious purchases!

He's An Industrial Worker!

YOU would naturally think of the man operating the tractor as a farmer. And he is a farmer, but he's also an increasingly important figure in the industrial world, not only as a consumer but as a producer. He's engaged in hoeing up a field of soy beans which later, after passing through various factory processes, you'll be using in the form of paint and varnish, soap, linoleum and scores of other products. Consumers Information points out that 91 million pounds of soy bean oil, a comparatively new crop for American farmers, was produced in one recent year. Of this amount, 2 1/2 million pounds went into the soap kettle, 5 million into linoleum and 13 million into paint and varnish.

This brand new market for American farmers, who are now growing a large number of industrial as well as food products, has been developed, like many others, through the vast research programs undertaken by American industry, whose laboratories have added untold millions to the national wealth and also thousands of jobs for American workers.
