VOLUME XIII—[Carrizozo News, Vol. 27]

CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, JAN. 28, 1938

NUMBER 31

The Road to The Cemetery

When the final and official figures are tabulated, it will probably be found that the automobile death toll in 1937 reached a new all-time record, exceeding the 1936 slaughter with its 37,000 victims.

There is no reason for being surprised at the continued increase. Each year cars are made faster and more powerful -- and a dangerous percentage of them become the property of drivers who couldn't be trusted to operate a bicycle safely. Roadways and surfaces are improved, thus offering a new temptation to excessive speed. And the number of accidents in which John Barleycorn is a factor tends to rise steadily.

This doesn't mean that the automobile accident toll cannot be reduced. It can be—but it is going to take action, not words. The individual responsibility of each motorist when he slides behind the wheel of a projectile weighing a ton or two and capable of doing eighty miles an hour, must be driven home. Law enforcement must be strengthened. The "fixer" of traffic violations must be eliminated. It must be realized that driving a car on the public highway is a privilege, not a right to be abused and license laws must be more stringent. Finally, there be swift and sure punishment for the reckless or drunken driver.

There are several hundred thousand graves in this country that constitute mute testimony to our past laxity in controlling the automobile. Unless public demand forces a change, you may fill one of the thousands of new graves that, figuratively speaking, will be dug by motorists in the years to come.

Augustus Hines (Negro)

Last Saturday, January 22, Augustus Hines passed away. He was born at Eufala, Alabama in 1877, moved to El Paso in 1906, where he became a member of the Second Baptist church (colored) that same year. He moved to a ranch southeast of Ancho eighteen years ago where he lived until his death.

"Gus," as he was known to all was a faithful Sunday school and church member. He seldom missed regardless of weather and was respected for his good qualities. Rev. R. A. Crawford of Carrizozo conducted funeral services which were attended by a large crowd of neighbors and friends.

He is survived by his wife, two brothers and three sisters who have the sympathy of all.—Contributed.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

A Slipper Cover With Welt Seams.

IN THE sketch at the upper left you see the pieces of a davenport slipcover fitted with seam lines pinned. The material is wrong side out as the welt or corded seams must be stitched from the inside of the cover.

Before the seams around the front of the arms are pinned as at A the arm cover edge of the seam must be gathered as at B. It is important to allow just enough material so the arm cover fits easily.

The cable cord that is covered with bias material and fitted into the seams to make the welt may be purchased at any notion counter. The material to cover it must be cut on a true bias and stitched in place as shown here at C. The cording foot attachment for your machine must be used for this stitching so the sewing will come close to the cord. The next step is to either baste or stitch the covered cord to one edge of the right side of the seam as shown here at D. Then, using the cording foot again, stitch the seam as shown. Clip the seam edges around curves so they will not draw.

It will be necessary to leave an opening in the back to be fastened with snaps. Openings must be arranged on the underside of the seam cushions as shown here at E. Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers, dressing tables and curtains for all types of rooms. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Leaflet of patchwork stitches now included if requested. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address enclosing 25 cents (coins preferred) to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines, Chicago, Ill.

AROUND THE HOUSE

For Griddle Cakes.—The texture of griddle cakes will be much finer if the white of egg in mixing is separated from the yolk and added last to batter.

Attractive Apple Dessert.—Pare five medium-sized apples, scoop out core and put into pan containing boiling syrup to which 5 cents' worth of cinnamon drops ("red-hot") have been added. Let boil until tender. Then remove from fire and place melted marshmallow in center of each apple. The apples will be red and spicy, and with the white centers make an attractive dessert.

Thaw Meat Slowly.—Frozen meat should be placed in the kitchen for several hours before it is cooked. Meat thawed quickly is invariably tough.

Separating Yolks From Whites.—When separating the yolks from the whites of eggs, break them over a funnel. The whites will pass through, leaving the yolks in the funnel.

Fudge Cake.—One-half cup fat, one and one-quarter cups sugar, two eggs or three yolks, two squares melted chocolate, two cups cake flour, two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one-half teaspoonful salt, one cup milk, one teaspoon vanilla. Cream fat, add sugar and cream until light and fluffy. Beat in eggs, add chocolate and then alternately add milk and sifted dry ingredients. Add vanilla and bake in two layers, or a rectangular pan for squares, or as cup cakes, in moderate oven. Ice with creamy chocolate icing.

Rotate Use of Clothes.—Always when putting away the clean clothes, place the freshly ironed ones on the bottoms of the various piles. Then towels, handkerchiefs, napkins, etc., will be used in turn and some will not wear out more quickly than others.

Andes Wax Palms Would Flourish in West Coast Climate

Washington. — Wax palms, that now wave their 200-foot tops above the 10,000-foot Quindio pass in the equatorial Andes, may presently grace the parks of Pacific coast cities from San Diego to Grays Harbor, Wash.

Similarity in climate between the North American highland and the South American coastal strip offers this possibility, says Dr. Miriam L. Bomhard, botanist of the United States forest service, in the annual report of the Smithsonian institution.

Among Tallest of Trees.

These palms, as Dr. Bomhard describes them, are among the most remarkable trees in the world. They are easily the tallest of all palms, their slender stately trunks lifting their feathery tops 200 feet or more into the air. When first discovered they were the tallest trees known.

They grow in the high Andes of northwestern South America, from Venezuela to southern Peru. The altitude of their habitat is never less than 4,000 feet and rises to 10,000 feet at Quindio pass in Colombia, and to 13,000 feet on the Colombia-Ecuador border. It is cold country, within sight of perpetual snows on the lofty Andean peaks; not at all the kind of habitat commonly envisioned for palms. Some of the species regularly endure temperatures below freezing.

Reason for the Name.

The tree is known as the wax palm because the trunk is covered with a coating of wax, which travelers have described as giving it the appearance of a towering pillar of alabaster. Natives scrape this off and use it for candles and matches. It burns with a clear white flame.

There are several distinct species of wax palms, one of them bearing the name Beethovenia, in honor of the great German composer. Each species has its own peculiar range of altitude and climate preferences.

Deed Adds a Thousand Years to Age of Dura

New Haven, Conn. — Surprised Americans, digging in Mesopotamia, have unearthed a real estate deed 3,500 years old that adds over a thousand years to age of a famous ancient city, Dura-on-the-Euphrates.

The deed inscribed on clay has been brought here to Yale university by Frank E. Brown, archaeologist of the Yale expedition exploring Dura's buried ruins.

The real estate deed reveals that Dura was not founded by Alexander the Great, as a desert outpost of his empire, about 200 B. C., which historians have taken for granted. Instead, the city was flourishing 17 or 18 hundred years before Christ, in an era so little known that modern scholars call it a dark age of Mesopotamia's civilization.

Archaeologists found the clay tablet embedded in a temple wall of much later date. Deciphering it, they realized it describes a real estate transaction regarding a field in the city of Damara, which by its described locality and its spelling was apparently the same as Dura.

Prof. F. J. Stephens, curator of Yale's Babylonian collection, points out that the ancient deed was witnessed by important people, such as officials, judges, and priests. "We may say," he explained, "that our document was a deed whereby the king conferred the piece of property described upon one of his nobles."

The tablet dates from the reign of a king Hammurabi of Hana, who lived several centuries later than famous King Hammurabi of Babylon. Hana is a mysterious kingdom, whose capital lay near Dura, within the 2,000 years of "dark ages" between early Babylonia and the Greek and Roman eras, a gap which archaeologists are now beginning to fill with ancient history.

Peter Pan Among Insects Discovered in Florida

Gainesville, Fla.—A "Peter Pan" among insects, a species that never grows up, has been discovered in a ravine in northwestern Florida by Prof. Theodore H. Hubbell of the University of Florida here.

The curious creature is a grouse locust that remains in its nymphal, or infantile, form all its life, never producing wings like the rest of its kindred. It matures only sexually, so that the species may be perpetuated.

The nearest relatives of the new species are found in Central America; but they are ordinary, normal-winged insects.

Ant Has Few Foes, Effective Defense, and Great Numbers

New York.—In sheer numbers, the ants challenge imagination. They outnumber all other forms of terrestrial animals. Over 7,000 species, subspecies, and varieties have already been collected and classified.

But why is this insect so dominant? Here are some reasons: The ant is preyed upon by comparatively few other animals. The ant's most dangerous enemies are other ants. Then, too, it possesses very effective means for defense. Some ants have powerful stings, similar to the bees and the wasps, while others squirt drops of poison at their molesters. A third reason—ants have long lives. Worker ants have been known to live four to five years, while queens live as long as 13 to 15 years. During the queen's lifetime, many thousands of eggs are produced.

Workers Are Small.

The workers are the small wingless ants with which we are all acquainted. They are structurally females but sexually sterile. The kings and queens are the sexual forms and they possess wings. During the summer, the mature kings and queens which have been developed in the nest swarm. While they are in the air, mating takes place. After mating the king dies and the queen establishes a new colony.

This is considered the typical life history, but practically every species has developed some peculiar habit characteristic of it alone.

Blind Ants of Tropics.

There are tropical ants which travel in great armies, as savage as the ancient Huns or Mongols, who spend their lives destroying nests of others and killing all insects in their way. These ants are blind, so that the size of an object in their path means nothing to them. Holes in the ground are entered, tall trees are climbed. Even human dwellings are invaded in search of prey. When such an army enters a house, the owner must temporarily surrender. But he can be sure that when the ants leave, all the cockroaches, spiders, rats, mice and other animal life shall have been devoured or driven away.

There are other species of ants which have such large mouthparts that they are unable to feed themselves and must be waited upon. They gather slaves by raiding the nests of other ants and carrying home the young. When these young reach maturity, they serve their captors.

Linoleum, Maple, Rubber for Workroom Flooring

Washington. — Linoleum, fluted-grained maple and rubber outlasted concrete and asphalt in tests here to determine the best kind of flooring material for post office workrooms.

Conducted by Warren E. Emley and C. E. Hofer of the national bureau of standards at the request of the procurement division of the Treasury department, tests revealed that the three materials can take the pounding of 1,500-pound trucks with small iron wheels better than can materials generally used for street paving.

Five samples of concrete were among the 20 samples tried, Mr. Emley indicated. A truck of the type used in the post office for hauling bags of mail was run 60,000 times around a 40-foot track to see which material lasted longest.

Future post office construction, it is expected, will take cognizance of the test's results. Mr. Emley warned, however, that the tests apply only to the special conditions of the small-wheeled heavy trucks found in post offices.

Mount Whitney Still Is Highest in United States

Washington.—Mount Whitney is still the highest mountain in continental United States, but second and third places have been interchanged as a result of recent surveys by the coast and geodetic survey. The new heights for the five highest peaks in the United States are:

- Mount Whitney, California, 14,495 feet, lost 1 foot.
- Mount Massive, Colorado, 14,424 feet, gained 5 feet.
- Mount Elbert, Colorado, 14,420 feet, lost 11 feet.
- Mount Rainier, Washington, 14,408 feet, same.
- Mount Harvard, Colorado, 14,375 feet, lost 24 feet.

The gains and losses are not actual. The change in height is due to more accurate surveys since the last set of altitudes was announced in 1936.

Bad Mastodon Teeth

Buffalo, N. Y.—Mastodons, the prehistoric elephants that roamed North America during the Ice age, suffered from toothache and a gum ailment like pyorrhea, a study of the bones of the Richmond mastodon, dug up from a bog in Indiana some seven years ago, has just revealed.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK... By Lemuel F. Parton

NEW YORK.—It seems possible that Rockefeller Center was trying for a delicate cultural balance in getting three alien artists to do its murals.

Right, left and center, in the order named, Jose Maria Sert, Diego Rivera and Frank Brangwyn, were the muralists.

There was an inevitable clash, and now, after five years, a compromise. Lenin's head, by the hard-boiled, hard-bitten Mexican Rivera, blocked out in 1934, has been replaced by a conventional mural by the Spanish Sr. Sert, with the orthodox theme of America's continuing development along the old lines. The compromise appears in Sr. Sert's restrained sepiá monochrome, instead of his usual lavishing outpouring of gold and scarlet, verdant green and ecstatic blue.

Sr. Sert is the most millionairish of all living painters. Here he pines down. If we didn't go left with Lenin, our new era isn't going to be as gaudy as the last one.

It will be a sober, industrious, thrifty, monochrome age, with no more high-kicking and low thinking. That seems to be what Sr. Sert and the Rockefeller Center people are saying.

When the big, booming, sixty-one-year-old Spanish painter is going strong, he makes Veronese just a wet wash with a touch of bluing. He was a regular stand-by and emergency painter for his friend, King Alfonso. "Con mucho gusto," he can swing the whole spectrum, with bold, regal effects which are the delight of kings.

He has done many magnificent rooms in Europe, including the Madrid chapel of the duke of Alba, now Franco's commercial envoy to England, and Sir Phillip Sassoon's splendid ballrooms. His first exhibition in this country was in 1924, when he received prolonged critical accolades.

He was born in Barcelona of the ancient Spanish gentry, and studied in Paris in his early youth.

From the first, he developed boldness and exuberance, both in color and technique. Briffault's pre-war Europe—which was to have gone on forever, but didn't—knew him for its very own. His new monochrome fits an age "ickkled o'er with the pale cast of thought."

In the current argument between government and business, it is interesting to note that the temple of business gets back to the Muses and the classical symbols of work and labor, after its brief leftward deviation in 1933. In Washington, such bold innovators as Henry Varum Poor and George Biddle still state tortuous new themes in the government murals. But there's not so much splash in these Rockefeller Center murals as there might have been in, say, 1923.

YOUNG BURGESS MEREDITH, at the age of twenty-eight, is picked to run Actors Equity association, for a time at least. A star on Broadway, a country squire, a Hollywood success, he has had more to go around than a roller-coaster addict, with the up-grade all in the depression years.

In Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland, his father was a doctor and his grandfather an evangelist. His Uncle Joe, whom he greatly admired, was in vaudeville.

He washed dishes and tended furnaces during one sad and tosy year at Amherst, ran a haberdashery shop with his brother in Cleveland, went bankrupt, was a reporter on the Stamford Advocate, until they caught him at it, sold roofing, vacuum cleaners and cosmetics, worked in Macy's department store, sang in church choirs for $4 a Sunday, lived a week on breakfast food samples, and was for a time one of the migrant army of jobless youth.

The depression brought him luck. In 1923, he got a letter of introduction to Eva le Gallienne and a payless job as an apprentice actor. His climb was slow.

He first attained high visibility in "She Loves Me 'Not," in 1933. He clinched his gains in his three Maxwell Anderson plays, "Winterset," "High Tor," and "Star Wagon."

His estate is near that of Mr. Anderson in Rockland county, New York, where he is very busy with house-building, dogs, and books. He has an eager, avid mind, buzzing with new ideas.

He is a faithful intellectual under-study of the older Mr. Anderson and his genius chimes in perfectly with Mr. Anderson's exalted blank verse dramaturgy.

He is five feet, seven inches tall, weighs 135 pounds and is no matinee idol—listed briefly at booking agency as "blond and homely" when he first went after a job in the theater. His wife is the distinguished actress, Margaret Perry.

Musician's Argot

Those who live by the fiddle, the saxophone and the drum, it appears, have an argot unintelligible to the uninitiate.

A trombone is a slushpump; an accordion is a box of teeth; the leader is the front man, while a female soloist is a canary; a scatter-joint is a night club. And when an inkshinger (arranger) harmonizes the spots (notes) so that the greasespot (stellar swing player) can go to town with the tunes, particularly if he is a gate man (a celebrity who can draw in his own following), the band (orchestra means long-hairs who play classic music in symphonies) can probably stick on location (a long engagement) for more than coffee money.

Office of Senator Chavez

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22. - Good news for the people of the Rio Puerco Grazing Area from Washington - 125 or 110 families living along the Rio Puerco in the owns of Casa Salazar, La Posta, Guadalupe, Catezon and La Venana have been extremely worried lately due to the stringent regulations and what they thought was help of the Grazing Division of the Interior Department in matters of permits. They were being crowded practically out of existence by the purchase of private lands on the one side and the creation of grazing districts on the other.

Word coming to the writer this week from the Grazing Division, and Erision Service, Farm Security Administration and the Indian Bureau is to the effect that strict instructions have been issued from Washington that grazing areas for the subsistence population along the Rio Puerco and means are being taken to provide for the feeding of her stock until a general adjustment is made of grazing rights.

In many instances the trouble has been that the people in these areas are not fully acquainted with the benefits they can receive under the law. The law provides for permits and free use of grazing areas to a certain number of stock for domestic or local use. Out of the entire 110 families only some have made application for such permits. It is sincerely hoped that the statement be read by the people of these communities that they take advantage of the law and put in their application with the proper authorities of the law as soon as possible.

Through the medium of the press, the writer has received the intelligence that Navajo Tribal Council news constituted in demanding the enactment of a law extending the Navajo Reservation. The present Tribal Council was organized under the direct sponsorship of the Indian Bureau at Washington and the Superintendent of the Navajo Agency at Windowrock, Mr. Fryer, and is composed of what may be called "Bureau Indians". The real Navajos, or those who prefer to keep their self respect and who are in the vast majority are very much dissatisfied because Navajos are not allowed to continue with their old council which was selected by the real Navajos and only this date the writer had the privilege of inserting in the Congressional Record a petition signed by Non-Bureau Navajos, taking the Indian Bureau to task for its ruthless policy in stock reduction and general treatment of the Navajo people.

There are some whites who desire an expansion of the Navajo Reservation but they are composed of those who are tired of their holdings and want to unload on the Government. Amongst them is Mr. Amrose, not very active on behalf of the extension Bill. The gentlemen in question owns a piece of property along the old State Highway, through the town of Thereau. Recently the Highway Department has moved the highway a certain distance south of its old location, leaving Mr. Amrose's property out of the line of the main traffic and Oh, Boy, how he would love to sell the property to the government.

Planning Board Meet

A meeting of the County planning board was held with Mr. Lee Gould of Dona Ana Co. acting as leader of the discussion. Representatives of the range livestock industry as well as of the principal crop areas were present. The county was divided into two parts, irrigated and dry farming areas, and recommendations made and considered for each. Unfortunately, as some of the members came from quite a distance, there was not sufficient time to discuss fully all the problems brought up.

Mr. J. Weston, Jr., of Jicarilla was a business visitor in Carrizozo last Friday and while here became a subscriber to the Lincoln County News.

Same can be said of owners of titles of property in McKinley, Sandoval, Rio Arriba and San Juan counties, who have not resided or been in their places for years but would now also sell to the government for a fancy price and in the interest of the Indians. Mr. G. T. McQuillen, president of the Lincoln County Board of Education and Ex-mayor of Carrizozo, has another feather in his cap. The handsome new County library is almost completed. Due to the efforts of Mr. McQuillen and Mrs. Ola Jones this WPA project is just about the most valuable asset of which the town and county may boast.

The exterior is adobe, pebble dashed and finished in white. Above the entrance in black, standing out in bold relief are the words: "The Fountain of Knowledge Flows thro' Books." The interior is plastered in a rough design of gray and white. Three large windows are placed in the center on each side with additional windows in the ends, which will furnish ample light even on a dark day.

Mr. McQuillen and Mrs. Jones have visited several libraries recently with a view to designing the interior in the most convenient way so that efficient service may be given at all times.

Much credit is due the Board of Education, Mrs. Jones, rural supervisor, and others for this fine building.

The reason was
That tuberculosis

Not show up
With symptoms
Until much later
Tuberculosis

Here's a school girl's own comment on Aladdin light: "It has helped my school work by creating a desire to study. What student likes dim light?" No wonder teachers say that their brightest pupils come from Aladdin homes. Aladdin lamps help avoid eye strain, which to so many thousands of rural folks has brought the expense of an eye specialist, and glasses; and often permanent injury to eyes.

REED FOR SUPREME COURT

Solicitor General Is Nominated by the President . . . Roosevelt Would Wipe Out All Holding Companies

Drags Wolf and Foolish Bear, aged members of the ancient water-buster clan of North Dakota's Gros Ventre Indians, are shown being greeted by "The Great White Father," President Roosevelt, whom they visited on a trip which they hope will bring a merciful rain to end the long drouth in their parched country. The Indians were on their way to the Heye foundation of the Museum of the American Indian where George G. Heye was to return to them a sacred bundle, a "medicine" they believe will make their lands fertile again. Since the loss of the bundle in 1907, their country is slowly turning into desert due to lack of rain.

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Choice of Reed Liked

NOMINATION of Stanley Forman Reed of Kentucky, solicitor general, as associate justice of the Supreme court met with general approval and it was predicted in Washington that he would be speedily confirmed by the senate with little or no opposition.

Republicans and Democrats alike were quick to praise the Kentuckian, who, while a defender of many New Deal measures, has acquired a reputation for being realistic and a liberal with "moderate" tendencies. Senator Ashurst, chairman of the judiciary committee, named a subcommittee which planned quick public hearings on the nomination. Mr. Reed, who will fill the vacancy caused by the retirement of Justice George Sutherland, is fifty-three years old and has never before been on the bench. In 1929 Herbert Hoover, then President, made him general counsel of the federal farm board. Later he was shifted to the same capacity in the Reconstruction Finance corporation. He retained his post at the outset of the present administration.

Then President Roosevelt picked him for solicitor general to defend the New Deal cases before the Supreme court. Of these he won 11 and lost 2.

In the opinion of lawyers Mr. Reed's legal philosophy is orthodox. His liberalism is not that which would do away with legal procedure in establishment of untried schemes, yet he feels that congress and the President would shirk their duty if they did not venture into legislative fields of untried constitutionality.

Hits Holding Companies

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, in a press conference, declared he was determined to wipe out all holding companies. The method to be used in eliminating them, he said, was still under discussion; he indicated it might be done through legislation and the exercise of the taxing power. The "death sentence" imposed on holding companies in the utility industry in the 1935 act is a step toward the new purge. The President revealed that Wendell L. Willkie, head of the Commonwealth and Southern corporation, recently had urged him to relax this restriction and that his plea had been rejected.

Senator Norris, who has proposed that most holding companies be taxed out of existence, holds that it might be desirable to retain first degree companies, or those which hold securities in operating companies only.

Tax Changes Planned

CHAIRMAN DOUGHTON and his house ways and means committee began hearings on proposals for 63 changes in the revenue laws which would exempt small corporations, constituting 90 per cent of American business, under the undivided profits levy and grant large enterprises only part of the relief demanded from harsh rates. These changes were formulated by Fred Vinson's subcommittee, which in a long report defended them as fair and predicted they would stimulate business without reducing the aggregate federal revenue. In addition to changes in the tax structure the sub-committee urged recodification of the complex maze of internal revenue statutes to clarify their meaning, speed tax collections, and simplify enforcement.

The most important individual change recommended was the proposed exemption of small corporations—those earning $25,000 or less annually and comprising about 90 per cent of the nation's 200,000 business concerns—from the undistributed surplus tax.

The report proposed as a "general rule" a tentative tax of 20 per cent on corporations' earnings more than $25,000 per year, but allowing a credit of four-tenths of 1 per cent for each 10 per cent of earnings declared as dividends.

Kidnaped Ross Was Slain

SCORE another for J. Edgar Hoover and his "G-men". They have solved the mysterious case of the kidnaping of Charles Ross, elderly retired manufacturer, in Chicago last September, arrested the kidnaper and obtained his confession that he killed both Ross and his own confederate after getting $50,000 ransom money from Mrs. Ross. The murderer, Peter Anders, was taken at Santa Anita race track, near Los Angeles, where he had been passing some of the ransom money through the pari mutuel machines. Full details of his confession were not at once made public.

Dodd Angors the Nazis

WILLIAM E. DODD, until recently American ambassador to Berlin, has put himself in a class with Mayor La Guardia so far as the Nazis are concerned, by a speech in New York. It was violently anti-Hitler, and German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff immediately made a bitter protest to Secretary of State Hull, saying Dodd had insulted the Reichsfuehrer. In particular the ambassador was angered by Dodd's statements that under Hitler "almost as many personal opponents were killed in five years as Charles II (king of England) executed in 20 years of the Seventeenth century," and that Hitler is "now more absolute than any medieval emperor of Germany."

Mr. Hull informed Dieckhoff that Dodd was now a private citizen and that our government does not have control over the utterances of individuals; also that Dodd's utterances do not represent the views of this government.

No Peace with Chiang

JAPAN is determined to bring to pass the complete downfall of Chiang Kai-shek and his Nationalist government of China. Following a meeting of the imperial council in Tokyo in the presence of the emperor, it was announced that Japan would withdraw its recognition of the Chiang regime and would encourage the Japanese-dominated government set up in Peking.

The official statement continued: "Needless to say, this involves no change in the policy adopted by the Japanese government of respecting the territorial integrity and sovereignty of China, as well as the rights and interests of the other powers in China."

"Japan's responsibilities for peace in East Asia are now even heavier than ever before. It is the fervent hope of the government that the people will put forth still greater effort toward the accomplishment of this important task incumbent on the nation."

Shanghai was informed that Chiang had ordered his troops "not to retreat a single inch."

Historic Hoaxes

Many Ladies' Man

EUGENE FIELD took special delight in tormenting Edward S. Bok, because Bok, who was a bachelor, was editor of the Ladies' Home Journal. That apparent inconsistency was amusing to the poet and humorist.

One day he inserted in the news columns of the Chicago Daily News a notice of Bok's engagement to Miss Lavinia Pinkham, granddaughter of Mrs. Lydia Pinkham of patent medicine fame. The story went out over the Associated Press and was reprinted in papers throughout the United States. A few days later there was a story about Miss Pinkham's departure for Paris to buy a trousseau.

Soon letters and inquiries began to pour in upon Bok, who pleaded with Field to put a stop to such stories. Field obliged him by printing a denial of the Pinkham engagement but at the same time linked Bok's name with that of Mrs. Frank Leslie. Again there was a flood of letters to the unfortunate editor of the Journal, also some caustic comment about the fickleness of his affections. Shortly afterwards Bok's engagement to the daughter of Cyrus H. K. Curtis, publisher of the Journal, was officially announced and Field was very contrite for the joke he had played on the Philadelphia editor.

But that didn't stop him playing jokes on Bok. His next was a fake interview "at quarantine" with Bok upon his return from a trip to Europe. Since the interview dealt with changes in women's fashions in Paris it was widely copied by fashion papers all over the country and even fooled Bok's office in Philadelphia. The people there believed that he was still in Europe and there was much scurrying around to prepare for his arrival before they learned that it was another of Eugene Field's jokes.

John Wilkes Booth Mummy

IF, AT some county fair or in a "museum," you were told you could see the "mummified body of John Wilkes Booth" upon payment of a certain fee, it is to be hoped that you took advantage of the opportunity. For if you had, you would have gazed upon one of the greatest hoaxes in American history.

Around the turn of the century a house painter in Enid, Okla., known as John St. Helen (his real name was David E. George) convinced Finis L. Bates, a Tennessee lawyer, that he was in reality John Wilkes Booth. He asserted that he had escaped from the burning barn in Maryland a few days after the assassination of Lincoln, and now, struck with remorse over his deed, had to confess to ease his soul.

Bates tried to interest the United States government in his discovery, so he could collect the $100,000 reward offered for the slayer of Lincoln—this, despite the fact that that reward had long since been paid to the captors of Booth. But the federal authorities weren't interested.

In 1903 St. Helen (or George) committed suicide and the Tennessee lawyer claimed the body. In 1908 Bates published a book, "Escape and Suicide of John Wilkes Booth," to bolster up his claim. For a time the mummified body of his "Booth" was exhibited in Memphis, Tenn., and in 1923 it was said to have been sold "to parties in the West." Where it is now is unknown but wherever it may be, this is true: it is NOT the body of the man who killed Abraham Lincoln!

Wedding Story

DURING the winter of 1923-30, Robert Quillen, editor of the Fountain Inn (S. C.) Tribune printed a story about a wedding in his community which wasn't complimentary to either the bride or groom. As a climax, it insinuated that this had been a "shot gun wedding" and then added: "This may be the last issue of the Tribune but my life ambition has been to write up one wedding and tell the truth. Now that is done, death can have no sting."

This story was widely reprinted throughout the country, because many an editor, no doubt, had often wished to write just such a story and was glad to know that one of their number at last dared to do so. Some of them suspected that it was a fictitious yarn, but others believed it was genuine and criticized Quillen for "exposing and treating people so cruelly."

It was a hoax, all right, but it is still often reprinted as a real wedding story, perhaps the most famous one ever written.

Badminton

The name badminton was "pocina" when first played in India, no one knows how long ago. English soldiers on leave carried it home and it was introduced by the Duke of Beaufort at his home, Badminton. Hence the name. Like tennis, it is played with rackets, but on a smaller court. Instead of a ball, a shuttlecock is used. This is shaped like an orange cut in half, has feathers imbedded in the flat side. The shuttlecock must be hit on the round side and while in the air.

Knit and Crochet for the Teen Age

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

KNITTERS are turning out perfectly charming apparel for the 'teen age these days. If you think the styles for growing girls were clever and attractive last year just wait until you see the intriguing knit-created togs for the coming spring and summer! To give you an idea of what's going on in the knitted realm we are illustrating two cunning dresses which any little miss will be proud to wear.

Fashion-right to the last detail is the little plaid school dress to the left in the picture. Knit of sturdy sports yarn it will valiantly withstand the steady grind of a school-room or the severe test of outdoor life, at the same time that it "carries on" with a stylish air that classes its wearer among the best-dressed set. Any little girl would treasure the separate bolero, or call it Eton jacket if you will. It is almost sure to prove her constant companion, for being a separate item it can be donned with any dress. Grand to wear under one's coat, too, if the temperature goes down!

No doubt you will feel the urge to knit more than one of these cunning jackets for they can be made to add such a fetching color touch to any dress. The combination of a plaided knit dress with a monotone bolero as pictured reaches a high note of chic.

The little jumper dress to the right is sure to appeal to mothers who knit. It is so very practical, since it can be worn over any blouse, and that means little daughter can feel spry and span in a refreshing change each day. This particular jumper dress which you see pictured is knitted of softest shetland yarn in a lovely Lyon blue, and is sturdy enough to be just the thing for little missy to wear when she trots back and forth to school. The rib effect of the knit makes it up to the moment in fashion, but the real beauty of it is that it's so simple and inexpensive to make.

In the inset we are showing a cunning little hat for a cunning little girl. Call this little headpiece a calot if you are aiming to speak in correct fashion parlance. Any young fashionable will adore it and well she might. The pert little topknot curlieue gives it a style and a dash that makes it distinctive. It's crocheted of knitting worsted and can be worked up in any favorite colors.

Have you taken note of the gay-colored mittens and gloves that children are wearing with their dark coats? Some of them are hand-embroidered with cunning wool flowers.

Perhaps in the wardrobe of little daughter there is a cloth dress of all too-common hue. Well, here's a way to make it look bright and new and attractive. Crochet or knit a triangle neckerchief of the gayest of gay yarn. While you are about it make a belt to the click, click, click of your knitting needles, or crochet if you prefer. Then crochet over all the edges of the cloth dress in buttonhole stitch of matching yarn. Perhaps you are "making over" a dress for wee daughter out of big sister's discarded cloth frock. Add these crochet details and see how pretty it will turn out.

THE BETTER SILKS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

At formal fashion gatherings it is very noticeable that the best-costumed are choosing to wear dresses styled with utmost simplicity of fabrics that frankly bespeak their elegance. In selecting silks the tendency is to consider the better qualities, the real pure dye silks that are so genuinely sterling they tell you so at first glance. A dress of this type silk is here shown. It is elegant white silk faille with wide horizontal stripe that is used for the gown.

"FUSSY FEMININE" TREND COMES BACK

Girls who like to wear fussy, ultra-feminine clothes for evening wear will have every opportunity to do so this winter. It's time for glistening and slinky satins, rusty taffetas and soft, feminine nets.

Evening gowns are styled with full, flowing skirts. Some affect tight bodices and a tiny suggestion of hoops in the flared skirt. Others cling to the Empire silhouette idea, with close-fitting lines molded to the figure.

Many of the gowns fashioned of net show skirts which are completely ruffled. A few feature the panier extension at the hipline, a flattering departure for those with slim hips. Black and white are especially effective color choices in this material, with pastels also good.

Richly Colored Wools Are Popular in Paris Showings

The new soft woolsens in deep, rich colors introduced at the winter collections of the famous couture houses are daytime favorites of chic Parisians and American women who have selected their autumn wardrobes recently in Paris.

Mrs. Paul Dubonnet was so intrigued by one of Paquin's sports frocks that she has ordered the same style made in brown, navy and black.

The woolen frock is designed on simple, casual lines with buttons fastening the back of the blouse to the neckline; long, fitted sleeves and collar with high revers fastened back with buttons.

Suede and Scarves

Suede jackets with knitted sleeves and bright scarves at the neckline are featured for sportswear in the leading Paris shops.

He was trying to guess who the second man could be. Vaguely he was thinking of the green eyes of Rufe Deane, watching Marian as she testified against the Bender faction at the Inspiration hearing. He knew that there was nothing behind the embittered man which would prevent his firing upon the girl—if a reason for such an act could be conceived. But still he could think of no explanation for the firing of that other distant gun.

He turned and went back to the fire. Marian was sitting up trying to press the redness from her eyes; she seemed steady again. "Sorry," she said.

"I've got to go on up the canyon," he told her.

"I thought you said Magoon wouldn't stop there, now."

He told her, shortly, of the distant report of the gun.

"But who could it be?"

"I don't know. But—I've got to go up and see."

"I'm ready to start," Marian said.

"Ready—?"

"I'm going to go where you go."

He considered a moment. She looked tired, and there was a long hour of rough travel between them and the hidden cabin. But he supposed she would not want to try to wander back through the dark alone nor could he, against her will, leave her to imagine horrors in the dark. The hard twist of his mouth turned a shade more grim.

"Very well," he said. "But you're going to be a little tired before the night's over, I'm afraid."

"I don't care anything about that."

To a tired rider a trail can unroll interminably ahead; much worse is a trail on foot, forever upward into increasing dark. To a walker accustomed to the saddle one mile seems ten. It could not have been more than three miles to the ancient shack at the head of the gulch, but they climbed continually and the twist of the dry stream lengthened the miles. He knew that often Marian was trying to conceal from him the laboring of her breath in the high air. It must have seemed to the girl that she plodded and stumbled all night long through that uphill sand, while Wheeler's long stride led out relentlessly. She could not know how much he stowed his pace for her.

The broad canyon narrowed and steepened until it was a twisting gorge between vast black walls. The going became steeper, and the sand shoving ended; the dead stream was an interminable staircase of ledges and tumbles of rock.

They had traveled an interminable time before Wheeler whispered to her, "We've got to be quieter now." And still they went on, climbing a long way.

He was moving slowly and very cautiously when at last he turned off and worked his way up a gravelly slide of stone; then forward through twisting juniper that clung to the steep land. He stopped, gripped her shoulder, thrust her downward to her knees.

"What—?"

He stopped her whisper with a quick hand over her mouth; but directly ahead, not a dozen paces away, she was answered by the sudden long snort of a pony. He was peering through the juniper; her eyes followed his, straining in the canyon's black shadows. What he was looking at took form in the darkness, and without moving seemed to appear suddenly all at once. With a shock she saw that they were not fifteen steps away from a small ruined shanty set hard against an overhanging wall of stone.

The shack at the head of the gulch was windowless, and its door was open into blackness. Beside it, tied some yards apart, were the horse which had snorted, and a second animal that might have been either a horse or a mule.

Wheeler backed away, drawing her after him, foot by foot. Fifty yards away in the shelter of the rocks he made her sit down. No sound came from above except the uneasy shifting of the ponies' feet; and Wheeler permitted himself a deep breath of relief. She could hardly hear his whisper in the dark; "I didn't remember it was so close."

"Is he there?"

"Someone's there, or the horses would be gone. Wait here."

Slowly Wheeler made his way upward again over the rocks, through the juniper scrub. Walking upright, but very quietly, he circled and approached along the side wall, until his hands found the side of the cabin itself. He pressed an ear against the rough timber, and listened for long minutes. But he could hear nothing, not even the drawing of a breath.

He took out his knife and cut a plume of brush. Standing close against the corner of the cabin he struck a match and set the brush afire. He swung an arm around the corner of the cabin and threw the lighted brush through the open door.

Crouching low, he moved ten paces from the cabin and circled slowly, watching the lighted doorway.

He could see the blazing brush on the cabin's floor of hard-packed earth, and no hand moved to put it out. Behind the flame the cabin's interior was barren; he made out an ancient brush jacket hung against the wall, the three-legged ruin of a crude table, the black shadow of a bunk. Someone was here—should be here; but if the fugitive had been in the cabin he would have thrown a blanket over that torch by now. Wheeler wondered if the man was behind him, or drawing a bead on him from above.

As he circled a high-heeled boot came into view upon the cabin floor. That boot was unnatural; it was lying on its side, yet not on its side—tilted up a little upon its toe. When he saw that, something turned over inside Wheeler, for he knew what was in the cabin. He straightened up and walked to the door, stepped inside quickly and flattened himself against a wall.

The flickering flame of the brush was lower now, but by what was left of its light he was looking, for the first time in his life, at the face of Lon Magoon. Magoon had fallen forward; there was a rifle under him, and it was at the cock. But

"Well, You Must Have Mistaken Your Man."

It was not in his hands, for his arms were folded tight against his body.

Wheeler stepped forward to see how this man had died. But even before he turned the cow thief over he knew that Lon Magoon had died by shotgun, as had Cayuse Cayetano and Bob Flagg.

The 94, lightless and silent under the low-swinging moon, appeared deserted as Marian Dunn and Billy Wheeler trotted in, riding the horse and the mule they had found at Magoon's cabin. "You go on in, Marian. I'll take care of your horse."

Marian said in a small voice, "Is everyone gone from here?"

No need to remind her that the sheriff must certainly have come and gone, and taken Horse Dunn with him, by now. "It must be after midnight," he said. "Whoever is here must have turned in."

She walked off toward the silent house. It would not have surprised him if they had found themselves entirely alone; but by the time he had finished tossing hay to their animals he heard the murmur of voices, and, following Marian, he found her talking to Old Man Coffee. The old lion hunter sat angularly on a low step, the coal of his pipe glowing and dying out again at slow intervals.

"Marian tells me you caught up with Lon Magoon."

"We found him, all right."

"How was he killed?"

"With a shotgun; same as the rest."

"I was kind of looking for that," Coffee said. "Lucky, though, that you stumbled onto it so quick."

Marian sat down on the step beside Old Man Coffee. "Why were you looking for it?" she demanded.

"Well—" Coffee paused and seemed to consider—"kind of hard to say. One thing, I've been to Pahrnanagat since I seen you. I didn't tell you I was going there, but I had a kind of hunch, and so I went. And I got trace of Bob Flagg there at Pahrnanagat. Seems like he was coming to the 94 by kind of a back way; and at Pahrnanagat he run into Lon Magoon. He bought or borried a cheap horse and a worn out saddle from Magoon, and they rode out of Pahrnanagat together. Begins to look like Lon Magoon was a witness to the killing of Bob Flagg."

"But how do you know," Marian said, "that Magoon himself didn't kill Flagg?"

"Well—these killings being done with a shotgun is kind of unusual; it makes you think the same killer attended to all three. And it's easier to see, too, how Magoon might have been a kind of a distant witness. Suppose Magoon was riding along with Flagg, who didn't know him very well. Pretty soon Magoon sees some local cowman coming toward them. Magoon doesn't want to fall in with any local cowman, on account of the business he's in. He splits off and kind of hovers in the distance. In a case like that, him not getting out of sight soon enough would just be suicide for him. Whoever killed Flagg would figure he had to kill Magoon before he talked."

"Did you see Val Douglas at Pahrnanagat?"

"No, he wasn't there when I was. But he's been back here, tonight, since I been here. He said Pahrnanagat was where he was. Well, I don't know; I didn't see him there. And according to him he couldn't get any trace of Bob Flagg."

"Is he here now?"

"He pulled right out again. Nobody's here, but me and that old woman that cooks. She claims the sheriff come in and took Horse Dunn to Inspiration, about an hour before I got here. Tulare Callahan come in with Horse; they was pretty much worried over where you was, Marian. Tulare saddled up again and rode out to see if he could find out where you had went. Later Steve Hurley come in, and he's gone looking for you too. So naturally Val Douglas, he figured he'd have to make as good a showing as anybody did, and he hightailed. So now the whole 94 is out hunting for you—what of 'em isn't in jail."

"Men make me so mad!" Marian declared. "I have a good notion to go riding out looking for them, now, just to make the picture of idocy complete!"

Coffee looked as if he wouldn't put it past her. "Oh, now, I wouldn't go and do that, child."

"Coffee," Billy said, "one other kind of funny thing happened, while we were out. That hombra that shot at Marian the other night—he took another try."

"Damn!" said Coffee. "He come close?"

"Killed her horse. I got nervous and let my own pony get loose, and he stampeded. Later we had to come back on a mule Magoon had tied up, and a horse he stole from the 94."

Old Man Coffee turned slowly and for a few moments studied Marian's face. "Uh huh," he said at last.

There was a silence. "What do you think of it?" Marian said.

"I think," said Coffee, "you better turn in."

Marian rose slowly. "I suppose you're right—I've made enough trouble for one day, haven't I?"

When she was gone Billy Wheeler took her place on the step beside Old Man Coffee. "Well, we're slowly learning a thing or two," he said. "God knows where this thing leads to; but it ought to lead some place pretty soon."

Old Man Coffee knocked out his pipe, refilled it again, and struck a new light. In the flare of the match his bony old face looked more grim and more sardonic than ever. "It ain't going to lead me no place. It's led me far enough. I'm through."

Wheeler did not argue this. Twice before Coffee had made such hollow threats; he did not believe the old lion hunter would actually withdraw now.

"One thing I didn't tell you about Bob Flagg," Coffee said. "I suppose you got a right to what I know. Well—here's a little item that's a peach! Flagg—he bummed his way into Pahrnanagat in an empty cow car."

Wheeler was astounded. "You sure must be wrong," he declared. "Why, that sounds crazy! He and Dunn had just sold out the Arizona ranch, at Dunn's order. Dunn's share was the biggest, and of course they couldn't get but part cash but there was fifty thousand ready money mixed into the deal. Flagg didn't have any reason for coming in any such way as that!"

"He done it, though. It was right hard for me to find anybody that knew he'd been there at all. Sure seems like Flagg was taking every way he could think of to get to the 94 without being noticed." I thought it was kind of peculiar that Flagg should come by way of Pahrnanagat, which is kind of like sliding in the back door. Still, that wouldn't mean anything by itself; some of us old guys get used to thinking in terms of saddle work. But this other thing—it's queer."

"Well, you must have mistaken your man!"

"No, I didn't."

Wheeler turned thoughtful, they were silent for some minutes. A dark and ugly reason for Flagg's peculiar behavior was taking shape.

"Do you suppose Lon Magoon could have been a spy, sent to Pahrnanagat to watch for Bob Flagg?"

"A spy for who?"

"A spy for the men that set out to kill Flagg. We know who the enemies of the 94 are. Link Bender—Pinto Halliday—Rufe Deane—even Sam Caldwell—there isn't a one of them that would have hesitated to shoot a man down, if it meant wiping out the 94. We know that those people, or some of them, got access to Horse Dunn's mail at Inspiration. We can figure they knew that the Arizona outfit was cold, and that Flagg was on the way here with the money—money that the 94 had to have to pull through."

"I had that figured out long ago," Coffee said. "I figured Cayetano was the cat's paw for Link Bender. Even after Cayetano was killed, I thought maybe they just killed him so he wouldn't turn state's evidence."

"But you don't think that now?"

"Now," said Coffee, "I don't think."

"Throw out the death of Cayuse," Wheeler suggested. "Say that he was killed simply because he was too hot on the trail. Throw out the death of Magoon—say that he was feared as a distant witness. It turns back to the enemies of the 94."

"Which includes everybody," Coffee snorted.

"Coffee, have you found out something you're holding back?" Wheeler asked.

Coffee shook his head. "You know everything I know so far as I can think."

"Then you have some way of reading the facts—some way different from what I've got."

"Maybe. I've quit bothering my head about it."

"Hell! You'll never make me think that you're going to pull out of this case and leave it unsolved."

"There's just one thing about this case," Coffee admitted, "that I sure hate to leave mixed up. How come old Rock and me to get mixed up about the trail of the killer horse? I s'pose all the rest of my life—"

Old Man Coffee's voice was bitter—"I'll never get away from wondering how come I lost that trail."

"Of course, if I remember rightly," Wheeler reminded him, "you figured out from the way the shot went into the saddle that the man on the so-called killer horse was not the killer."

"That ain't important. The man on the killer horse took and hid the body, anyway. Two men or one—comes to the same thing. Catch one and you catch both."

Fountain Pens Affected by Altitude, According to an Official of Airline

Old Man Altitude still holds a decided edge over the fountain pen manufacturers, according to an official of an airline corporation.

The challenge of high altitudes has been accepted by at least two of the largest pen designers in the world, and to date the decision has always gone to the rarefied air. Despite the best efforts of pen manufacturers over a period of several years, fountain pens still insist on discharging ink on people who are careless in opening them above 5,000 feet.

In the early days of air transportation, when the problem was still new to the fountain pen industry, a fountain pen could be depended upon to act as a real fountain and provide the writer with a spurt. Since those days most manufacturers have succeeded in improving their product so the actual spurt is eliminated but no one has been entirely successful in eliminating profuse leakage.

The reason for this is that the fountain pen, filled at normal altitudes on the ground, has pressure within a sac equal to the pressure outside the case. As the pen is carried aloft the outside air pressure decreases while that within the pen remains the same. The result is constant pressure within the pen tending to force the ink out—in spurts whenever the passage is imperfect.

Aggravating the situation is the fact that present-day transport planes operate at altitudes almost invariably above 8,000 feet whereas the old-time transports seldom exceeded 5,000 feet except in unusual weather or wind conditions.

Many people have thrown away perfectly good pens under these circumstances, convinced they had in some way been ruined, but it's only altitude.

When There Were No Dukes

Between the years of 1572 and 1623 there were, no dukes in our peage, says London Answers Magazine. In the former year, Queen Elizabeth, executed the remaining two, while James I revived the title in the latter year for the benefit of his favorite, George Villiers, who became Duke of Buckingham.

Making Winter Hours Count

SEW - YOUR - OWN means most at this season of the year when dark and long winter days make time hang heavy on your hands. You can get your Spring wardrobe well started by making these days count. This is the time to sew and sew—and then when the first frocuses show their heads, you will be all ready for Spring; your wardrobe in order and the right clothes to wear. With sew-your-own patterns and a few yards of material, you can make short work of this whole business of sewing.

Practical Slip. This four-gore slip is the choice of every woman who likes comfort. The side panels prevent the slip from twisting and turning and keep it comfortably in place on the most strenuous day. The pattern includes built-up and strap shoulder—and you can make it for your own wardrobe in a few hours at a fraction of what you would usually spend. Keep the pattern, you will use it again and again once you see how really comfortable this dress is.

Cheery Morning Frock. No matter how many of these informal dresses you have, you never have enough. So start right in to sew now and make two or three of them for Spring. This dress (the one in center) is designed on clever shirt-waist lines and buttons from neck to hem. Piping is used at edge of collar, cuffs and pockets. It's the neatest, trimmest little frock you have ever seen. You'll enjoy it all through the summer.

Sweet and Simple. The figure at right is wearing an afternoon frock that is as fresh and new as a daisy. The gored skirt flares like a ballerina's and the bodice is smoothly fitted, closing with two wide scallops trimmed in smart ruffling. Wear this dress for bridge parties now—and wear it all through the Spring and Summer. It is one of the most popular silhouettes—nicely made up in silk or cotton.

The Patterns. Pattern 1437 is designed for sizes 14 to 40 (32 to 40 bust). Size 16 requires 3 yards of 39-inch material and 3/4 yard ribbon for shoulder straps.

Pattern 1440 is designed for sizes 12 to 40 (30 to 40 bust). Size 14 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material and 2 yards of binding or braid to trim as pictured. For collar and cuffs in contrast 3/4 yard fabric is required.

Pattern 1341 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35 or 39-inch material plus 2 1/2 yards of machine-made pleating to trim.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

IT'S IN THE NEWS!

There are two classes of news in these columns every week: (1) interesting stories about events all over the world; and (2) the advertisements. Yes, the advertisements are the most important of all, because they affect you more directly and personally than any other.

A new and better method of refrigeration is devised—and you learn about it through advertisements. Improvements are added to automobiles which make them safer than ever—again advertisements carry the story. Styles change in clothing—and advertisements rush the news to your doorstep. A manufacturer finds a way to lower the price on his products—he advertises to tell you about the savings.

You'll find that it pays to follow this news every week. Reading the advertisements is the sure way to keep abreast of the world . . . to learn of new comforts and conveniences . . . to get full money's worth for every dollar you spend.

BANKING is a business. Like every business it is operated for profit. Unlike other businesses, however, if a bank is unprofitable, it is unsound. Your grocer can close his doors and quit when business fails—your bank cannot close lest the entire community suffer severe loss.

YOUR bank sells service—at a profit that is fair to all. This profit is shown in two forms—interest on loans and service charges. If your account contains sufficient money to be profitable from interest derived from loans made with it, you pay no charge. Otherwise you pay your share for safe banking by a service charge.

Conoco Credits Newspaper Ads

Giving due credit for the best year in its history to the heavy use of newspaper advertising, the Continental Oil Company today announced that its 1938 advertising appropriations for newspaper space will be increased by 17 percent over the 1937 expenditures.

Continental during the coming year will allot to the daily and weekly press about 66 percent of all that is to be spent on consumer media and will place advertising in approximately 1250 newspapers. The new advertising will continue to deal with Conoco Bronze Gasoline and Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil and the action of this lubricant, due to the presence of a product of the research laboratories, in forming an abnormally tough film that stays on metal surfaces even while the motor is idle, instead of draining off.

The new campaign, which has been carefully checked for reader response in selected test areas at Colorado Springs, Colo., and in Richmond, Va., will also stress the position of local Conoco dealers as "mileage merchants" who
