

G.O.P. is "Discouraged and Tired," John Hamilton Tells Republicans

In a series of lawn parties in New England, Chairman John D. M. Hamilton of the Republican National Committee, has been giving conservative audiences some exclusive information. Boston papers relate that "on the green sward of the exclusive Nahant Club" the chairman told 1,200 Republican ladies "The Republican party for 50 years has been building a humanitarian program with which the New Deal accomplishments cannot be compared." He credited the GOP with "workmen's compensation acts, old age pensions, the right of collective bargaining a legal ban on injunctions interfering with labor's right to strike, laws to protect women and children in industry" and of course "tariffs to protect American workmen."

This rally was sponsored by Mrs. Sarah Oliver Hulswit's "Woman Rebellion." That lady pictured President Roosevelt as a "traitor for seeking to fasten anything foreign as the New Deal on the American people," and her audience "shrilled with delight."

Pending a week-end series of conferences with Republican ladies resident in New York, Chairman Hamilton appeared on the lawn of the statehouse at Augusta, Maine. Had his address been delivered on one of the lesser remote planets it would have received no more frugal mention in the great metropolitan dailies, which on happier occasion print his every word. At Augusta, according to the Republican Press-Herald of Portland the chairman told his audience "I come back rather chastened and I hope with somewhat more political experience under my belt. Maine and Vermont are the only places where I may feel among Republicans from the grass roots up. There are only three other states having Republican governors."

"While the party is discouraged and somewhat tired," he admitted, "in all of the states" he had visited "with the exception of five or six below the Mason-Dixon line, has not given up." The only cheering news he had to offer was that "the rank and file of the party" contributed "more than a million dollars to the party funds, the largest ever provided following a national election. This," he explained, "made possible payments to many of the state committees."

As to this year's prospects, a subject on which the Portland papers said he "touched cautiously," Chairman Hamilton declared that "no one can tell what the Civil Service Employees Cannot Indulge in Politics

The Civil Service Commission issued an edict that classified employees of the Federal Government cannot indulge in political activities with the exception of attending political rallies and voting. They were informed that the use of political stickers on their cars or the wearing of campaign buttons would violate the ruling.

The President, according to reports, is contemplating another stumping tour into the west late in September to aid New Deal candidates.

tide will be in the fall, a tide is just as baffling as that which defeated us in 1936." However he added, "If the Republican party is to prevail in 1940, it must prevail in 1938 and must prevail all the way down the line. There is no place for slackers in the ranks; they must be read off the party lists."

"This campaign is as near a crusade as any party has ever been called upon to make. The American people stand with their backs against the wall to save the American form of government as we know it to be. Consequently, each seat which we pick up will encourage Democratic Congressmen to support our opposition to bills by which the President hopes to destroy American democracy."

Not a line of any of this address of the GOP chairman appeared in any of the conservative New York, Philadelphia and Washington newspapers. They simply quoted him as saying at Augusta that the political trend is now running the other way, "presumably from the well remembered way of 1936."

Chevrolet School

A capacity enrollment of 30 students—three of them from foreign lands—is assured for the third School of Modern Merchandising and Management for sons of Chevrolet Dealers, which opens here Sept. 12. T. O. McLaughlin, director of the school, which W. E. Holler, general sales manager, founded in connection with his Quality Dealer program, made the announcement.

McLaughlin has just returned from a tour of the United States during which he held 12 banquet meetings with graduates of the two previous courses, setting up the nucleus of a permanent alumni body. In the course of the trip, he interviewed many prospective students, from which 27 of the 30 enrollees for the approaching session have been picked.

The other three representing foreign countries, were selected through collaboration with General Motors Export Division. One of them comes from New Zealand, 10,000 miles away, one from South Africa, and the third from Alberta, Canada.

"The enrollment for school opening Sept. 12 is the heaviest we have ever had," said McLaughlin. "It is the peak number that can be accommodated at one time, since the effectiveness of the course depends on giving the students a great deal of individual attention. As it is, the course has been lengthened from seven weeks to eight, and so broad is the field covered that strict adherence to schedule will be needed to finish on time."

Sessions, he explained, consist of lecture periods covering all phases of the operation of Chevrolet dealerships interspersed with trips to such points of special interest as the General Motors Proving Ground, the Chevrolet and General Motors engineering laboratories, and various Chevrolet manufacturing and assembly plants in Detroit and other cities. The work is designed to provide the future Chevrolet dealers not only with a knowledge of the merchandising of motor cars, but also an understanding of the problems involved in their design, engineering, and manufacture.

New Mexico Governor Visiting In Ohio

New Mexico's No. 1 citizen came back home Wednesday to visit friends and look after his vast farming interests in the county. This is no other than Governor Clyde "Bus" Tingley, who gets a great kick out of visiting and talking over old times here.

"Bus" had planned to attend the Wood County Tomato Festival last week but was forced to postpone his visit due to a session of the legislature in New Mexico. While here he is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Bowman.

Governor Tingley is still an 100 per cent New Dealer. He declared absolute allegiance to President Roosevelt. In fact he plans to pay a visit to the President before returning home.

Mrs. Tingley, the former Carrie Wooster, of this city, did not accompany the governor on the trip. Bowling Green (Ohio) Republican.

Here are the 1938 New York Yankees who are carrying on the famous pennant-winning tradition this season, leading to another American league championship and perhaps a world series victory. Adm. William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, leaves the White House after conferring with President Roosevelt on next year's naval building program. The program will come before the next congress.

SHE WAS QUEEN OF GRAPE FETE

Though many California communities harvested grapes this autumn, and although many of them held grape festivals where they chose queens of the grape harvest, residents of Escondido, Calif., believe their queen is about "tops." The celebration is an annual affair, bigger than usual this year because of the fruitful season.

If Asteroid Should Strike New York Harbor!

This drawing by Walter Favreau of the Hayden planetarium shows the destruction of New York if an asteroid, such as Hermes, which came within 230,000 miles of the earth last year, were to fall in New York harbor. The SALLY SMILE

MRS. PINNEY had called to see Miss Bowman, and the two women were in close conversation in Miss Bowman's private office. Miss Bowman was chief executive of the governing board of the hospital, and Mrs. Pinney was a director.

"Well, it simply has come to this," Miss Bowman said, wiping her eyeglasses nervously, "we'll have to close the hospital, if we can't get something to run it on. The citizens have done nobly—nobly, but they can't do everything. It remains for some moneyed person to come to the front now."

"Like Mrs. Chichester?" suggested Mrs. Pinney. Mrs. Pinney was a small, eager woman, who looked rather worn from the long-continued struggle of keeping the precious little hospital going on next to nothing a year.

"Yes! Mrs. Chichester. She is our richest citizen. She could give $50,000 and never feel it."

"But would she?"

"There's the question. I'm afraid she wouldn't. I've approached her unsuccessfully."

"So have I," moaned Mrs. Pinney. "Well, you can't force a person to give up her money, that's certain. I suppose it's hopeless."

"I don't know about that. I've been thinking I'd send Sally Drew to her and see what good that would do."

"Sally Drew!" Mrs. Pinney jumped. "She's the very one. I'll see her this afternoon."

Sally Drew was a tiny woman with hair like snowy wool and a pale pointed little face. Her eyes were wonderful, so bright, so black, so alive. They danced in her face. But her smile was more wonderful than her eyes.

The smile came now at sight of Mrs. Pinney.

"Julia!" she cried. "Come right in."

In Sally's small living room, so old-fashioned, so cozy, and withal so well suited to Sally herself, Julia Pinney told her story.

"Well, what do you want me to do?" Sally asked.

"I want you to go to Helen Chichester and get her to give us $5,000. That will keep the hospital running for one year. After that—but we'll hope."

Sally's smile vanished. She was silent an instant.

"I'll go, of course," she said quietly.

"Mrs. Pinney arose."

"Sally, you're a dear. If any one can do it you can. You are our last resort."

At 9, just as Mrs. Pinney was ready to fly to pieces with suspense, Sally walked in. The Sally smile was bright indeed.

"I couldn't get away sooner. Helen wouldn't let me come. You

A Costly Road

The Pulaski skyway is probably the most expensive road in the world for its length. The part of it that is raised is three miles long and cost $21,000,000. The approaches cost an additional $19,000,000. This roadway is 50 feet in width and can easily accommodate five lanes of traffic. It is estimated that 20,000,000 motor vehicles use it annually. It passes over both the Hackensack and the Passaic rivers and the New Jersey Meadows.

see, we haven't spoken before in thirty years—"

"What?" gasped Mrs. Pinney. "Thirty years," nodded Sally. "I did hate to go. But after I got there it was all right. Here's your money." She drew a check from her handbag and gave it to Julia.

"Fifty thousand dollars!" Mrs. Pinney could just articulate. "But we hoped your smile would do it."

"It did," Sally grew grave. "Thirty years ago Helen got the man I wanted. But no one ever knew it except her and me, for the day she was married I pinned on my smile and I've worn it ever since." She paused reflectively. "She says she was puzzled for thirty years over my smile. We made a fair exchange. I told her how I got it and she gave me $50,000 for my secret."

Herbert Chichester had only lived five years, but he had lived long enough to spoil the lives of two women. His wife had grown selfish and sore, but the woman she had won him from had "pinned on a smile" that had brightened a whole community.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

"WHEN I furnished my house," writes Laverne H., "I remembered what you said about going ahead with your own ideas in spite of what the family said. So, although everyone disapproved of my ideas about blue walls in the living room and yellow walls in kitchen and bathroom, I went right ahead. Now I never fail to get compliments on everything. Even the milkman, the paper boy and the grocery boy, as well as our visitors, stop to admire it. So please excuse my expanded chest when I say that I've made a 'perfect little home for a couple of newlyweds who like comfort in the casual style and had to make it out of a run-down old house. We did practically every bit of the work ourselves—even a little plastering."

"The bathroom you'd like—the yellow walls have colorful schools of tropical fish painted on them... more of my work! I have a problem in the living room, as I want to make slip covers for sofa and matching chair. The rug is a brown and beige textured pattern and theavenport of brown mohair with chair to match (the slip covers will be for these). An odd chair has the seat and back in shaded blue stripes and the occasional pieces and desk are in maple. Curtains and accessories are in white. The blue walls are papered and have an all-over design in cream. What would you suggest for the slip covers?"

Why don't you speak for yourself, Laverne! You're doing a grand job of your decorating without any help. Congratulations. But since you ask for it, we're always ready to have our say. We'd probably dive right in and have bright yellow slip covers made for both pieces. Then repeat the yellow here and there in flowers and maybe in a yellow pottery tea set.

New Styles in Bird Cages.

We wouldn't have minded too much being only a bird in a gilded cage. But we certainly wouldn't have stood for the green or red wire cages that have been a bird's only choice in the recent past.

Now style is invading the bird cage world—and we saw the other day a whole repertoire of period design cages that could go into all sorts of formal rooms with dignity. And a bird is a blithe note in decoration, providing its cage doesn't look too much like a hardware store.

For the Eighteenth century English or Colonial room, there is a Sherraton cage with typical brass gallery and fret, and urn and arrow detail. On a mahogany pedestal stand, this would be a handsome decorative addition to a room of the period. For an early American room, there is a cage of maple and pewter; while a bone white finish and Doric column detail distinguishes a cage for the Nineteenth century room of classic inspiration. For the frankly Victorian room, we're partial to those old-time fancy white wire cages. And of course there's a modern cage for the sophisticated chipper. All these new designs are constructed with the latest ideas on bird hygiene in mind. These new cages should be available in the stores within a few weeks.

If you've been going through life feeling just a little snooty about a pet bird, better revise your ideas. What is gayer than a pair of brilliantly yellow canaries—singing their hearts away in a room that's mostly white and pale green. And can you think of a smarter sight than green love birds against terra cotta walls? Or love birds against powder pink walls are a pretty sight. A parrot is dramatic in an exotic sort of room with tropical colors or white.

Double Boilers Useful Utensils

Good for Heating Soups And Keeping Food Warm

By EDITH M. BARBER

EVERY cook has a few pet utensils. I have my favorites and although I can get along with makeshifts, if necessary, I can work more quickly and efficiently with my own equipment. Among my favorites is a double boiler. Although it takes longer when you cook over hot water instead of over direct heat, the fact that foods do not need to be watched meticulously to avoid their burning is an asset. You may go blithely on your way with your other preparations. Of course, the steaming process is not appropriate for all foods but it is an insurance in the preparation of puddings, certain sauces, rice, and some vegetables.

Double boilers come in a number of materials such as enamel, aluminum and in heat-proof glass. The latter, bound with metal, serves a triple purpose, as the two utensils may be used over the direct heat if you like. The cover fits both parts. It is convenient because it is not necessary to remove the upper portion when used as a double boiler to test the water supply in the lower part.

The business woman housekeeper will like a double boiler for heating soups as well as for the processes mentioned above. She may also find it useful for keeping foods hot when a member of the family is late for dinner. And just try cooking corn which has been cut off the cob and dressed with a little cream in the top of a double boiler! By the way, it is ideal for a soufflé which I call foolproof. Fruit pulp of any sort may be used. You will find the strained fruits which are prepared especially for infant diet useful for the quick preparation of a soufflé of this kind.

Prune Soufflé.

5 egg whites
1 cup sweetened prune pulp
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind.

Beat egg whites until stiff. Fold in sweetened prune pulp, which has been forced through a strainer. Fold in salt, lemon juice and rind. Place in top of a well-greased, two-quart double boiler. Cover and cook over hot water one hour. Turn out of pan and garnish with whipped cream.

Cooked apricots, cranberries, fresh peaches or berries, sweetened to taste, may replace the prune pulp.

Note: If not ready to serve, turn out heat, but do not remove cover.

Coconut Pudding.

½ cup cornstarch
½ cup sugar
3 cups scalded milk
1 cup shredded coconut
¼ teaspoon salt
Whites of 3 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix the cornstarch and sugar with enough cold milk to make a smooth paste. Scald the rest of the milk and, when it is hot, stir in the cornstarch mixture. Stir until smooth and thick, add the coconut, cover and cook 30 minutes in the double boiler. Remove from the fire, add the whites of eggs, beaten stiff, and the vanilla. Pour into a mold and chill. When set, turn out on a large plate, garnish with candied orange or grapefruit peel and pass a chocolate sauce or whipped cream.

A chocolate pudding may be prepared by adding before the eggs two squares of chocolate cooked until smooth with one-quarter cup of cold water. The coconut may be omitted and one-half cup of nut meats may be added.

A fruit pudding may be prepared by using one cup of cut dates, raisins, prunes or mixed fruit, instead of the coconut.

A caramel pudding may be prepared by using three-quarter cup of brown sugar, instead of the granulated sugar. One cup of dried fruit may be added.

German Dressing.

2 strips bacon
1 tablespoon flour
2 egg yolks
¼ cup vinegar
Pepper, salt, paprika

Cut bacon in small pieces, fry lightly and remove from fire. Add flour and blend well with bacon fat. Stir in beaten egg yolks, add water and vinegar and stir over a low fire a few minutes until smooth. Season to taste with pepper, salt and paprika.

Glazed Carrots.

1 or 2 bunches of carrots (depending on size)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons sugar
Nutmeg

Scrape and slice the carrots. Cook in a small amount of salted water until tender. Drain. Add butter, sugar and nutmeg, stir gently over low fire and cook two or three minutes until the sugar melts.

Grease spots may be removed from the kitchen floor by sprinkling them with baking soda and then pouring boiling water over them.

Do not put uncovered bottles of milk or cream in the refrigerator. Milk and cream readily absorb odors when left uncovered.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

OPENING mail is always stimulating—especially so when one comes upon a letter like this: "Dear Mrs. Spears—If you could step into my house you would see in every room ideas I have gotten from your Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Your drawings are so easy to follow that I have made slipcovers and even reupholstered a wing chair. I never knew there were so many good ideas for curtains and bedspreads. "All my friends admire those I have made. I am now planning to make some new sheets and pillow cases. I like to buy sheeting and pillow case tubing by the yard to fit different beds. Can you suggest some kind of trimming? I want something that will wash well and that I can make quickly on the machine. Sincerely, T. S."

I wonder if "T. S." has my Sewing Book 2, Embroidery, Gifts and Novelties? On Page 14 of that book is a suggestion that just about fills her requirements, and for those of you who are keeping scrap books of these sewing lessons as they appear in the paper, here is an idea for contrasting facings for sheets and pillow cases. The diagram shows each step in the making of the colored facings. Make your own cardboard pattern for the scallops by drawing part way around a small plate or saucer. Use this pattern to mark and cut the scallops. After the scallops are cut, turn the raw edge over the cardboard pattern with a warm iron as shown.

With the help of Mrs. Spears' Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, you can make many of the things you have been wanting for the house. Book 2—Embroidery and Gifts is full of ideas for ways to use your spare time in making things for yourself or to sell. Books are 25 cents each. If you order both books, crazypatch quilt leaflet illustrating 30 authentic stitches is included free. Address: Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood free from an excess of toxic impurities. THE ART OF LIVING—Life (1934)—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, grating uric acid, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbances. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste, like Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dainty spells, upset nerves and hoodsy spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and avert coming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELLS WORTH TRYING!

The Livestock Situation

By J. A. McNaughton

Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, September 15. The great fall movement of cattle from western ranges is now getting under way and will reach its peak during the next three months. With most of the range country in excellent condition, owners of cattle have been taking full advantage of range feed and cattle are coming out carrying more weight than in several years. In many sections, summer rains provided good feed, but caused cattle to mature somewhat later than normally, with the result that it now appears that somewhat burdensome receipts may be in store during October and November.

Despite relatively low prices of grain, hay and concentrates, there is a lack of optimism on the part of cattle feeders. Yet it seems probable that cattle and lamb feeding will be carried along on a larger scale than normally, as grain and hay growers feel that livestock feeding will offer the most profitable outlet for feedstuffs. While prices of steers and feeders are well under a year ago, range men have some consolation in the fact that weights of cattle for the most part are running much heavier, so that net prices per head will not show as much loss as the prices per pound would indicate.

On the part of range operators, there may be considerable inclination to hold back stock cattle for another year if prices are not satisfactory. They have an abundance of hay and winter feed, and some of the more important range areas which have the first good season in several years are in need of restocking.

In California, there is now a broad demand for stocker and feeder cattle for there is an abundance of dry range feed, as well as grain, concentrates and hay. There is some feeling that stocker and feeder cattle may be in for some decline from present levels, and if such is the case, it is believed likely that California will be in the market for as many replacement cattle as last year.

The great increase in the number of smaller operators in California should make the general market an attractive center for both buyers and sellers of stocker and feeder cattle. Under open, competitive bidding, prices fair to both buyers and sellers are established; and buyers are saved the expense of traveling long distances in order to find the grades and ages of cattle best suited to their needs.

FIGHTING 'FORTYPHOBIA'

Industry Rejects the Man Over 40, Giving America a New Worry; Science Proves There's No Reason for Such Discrimination

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Last January, President Roosevelt's unemployment census showed between 8,000,000 and 11,000,000 Americans were out of work. Since then, recession has boosted the figure. The tragedy of unemployment has been one thing, but the type of people hit by this ogre is an even greater disaster.

What hurts — and what the best minds of America are still unable to understand — is the predominance of middle-aged people on relief, the great multitude of competent men and women who have been unable to find jobs simply because they're "over 40."

You can see it any day in the want ads under "Help Wanted":

Plumber, experienced at fittings and alterations. Only men in young thirties need apply. 2-432 Gazette Office.

It's a case of plain arithmetic that young men can weather unemployment better than their elders, having fewer mouths to feed, fewer feet to shod. But a cold-blooded employer, looking only at efficiency and economy, compares the thick-thatched head with the bald pate and takes the former. Young men learn quicker, adapt themselves better, turn out superior work. At least, it's the argument.

Tables Are Turned.

The man over 40 is a problem of the machine age. Once, in the days of guild supremacy, the situation was reversed. Every youth was an apprentice whose hands were thought unskilled, whose talents were shaped under the guidance of a wizened elder. Moreover, in that simple world it was satisfaction enough that all hands were busy; the age of specialization had not arrived.

If you should look in the department of labor files at Washington, the case of John Brown would furnish an example of today's dilemma. Brown is 45, married and has two children. His wage-earning days started after grammar school because his widowed mother needed help. At 15 he found work in a local factory, took time out to serve overseas in the World War, then worked steadily until the depression days of 1932. Meanwhile, he had been married, had bought himself a home, took out insurance and built up a small savings account.

But from 1932 to 1937, John Brown could find no work. His savings disappeared, he lost his insurance and his home was mortgaged. When the factory finally re-opened, the boss refused to give him a job; and he needed younger men. In consequence John Brown doesn't know where to turn. His life's work has been specialized and he'd have to start as an apprentice in another trade. With many, many years of usefulness ahead of him, this man has reached an age when industry turns him out. —Why?

Industry's Answer.

As their first reason, employers say he is a "bad physical risk," that he's entering the period in life when degenerative diseases will lower his efficiency. But employers are generalizing here; a man's susceptibility to disease almost always depends on the type of work he does. Highest death rates are found among unskilled laborers. Statistics show that frequency of sickness decreases with advancing age, though older people have more severe illnesses. The only fair course is to let a physician determine whether the man over 40 is a "bad physical risk."

The employer's second reason is "bad accident risk," notwithstanding repeated surveys which show the man over 40 is more careful than younger workers. Caution is a natural by-product of age. The only grounds for the "bad accident risk" argument is that older men are slower in recovering from injuries.

Next, employers speak of "decreased productivity." There is no denying that efficiency declines with age, but not so fast as to strike a death blow to the man of 40. What few tests are available show that exceptional workers of 40, 50—and even 60—are just as efficient as younger men. The simple answer is that proficiency's decline is gradual; it does not plummet down after a man reaches 40.

The most valid argument of all is the last, that a middle-aged man is "too slow and inadaptible to changing conditions." In an age like the present, where industry has been revolutionized in the past two decades, this claim may hold water. Modern machines work faster. The men who tend them must do likewise.

America Grows Old.

But arguments are fruitless and meanwhile the problem grows worse. Because of America's declining birth rate, we are rapidly becoming a nation of middle-aged men and women; by 1950 it is estimated 30 per cent will be over 40!

Industry and government have not been blind to the problem. First they favored social security, but its result has been higher taxes and a subsequent demand for more efficiency and fewer workers. They tried old-age pensions, but it was poor business to hire a man at 40 when he'd be retired in a few years. They tried sharing the work, which reduced efficiency and proved an expensive proposition. And the century-old trend to shorter work weeks has defeated itself because it brought labor-saving machinery.

The solution is not yet. Some say only an intricate balancing act can overcome the problem, a comprehensive system of social insurance to keep men employed or keep them fed when jobless. Though many remedies have been, and will be offerred, the man over 40 has thus far received little but sympathy.

One man has scoffed at sympathy. He is Henry Simler, a New York typewriter manufacturer, who recently began fighting the "fortyphobia" menace by proving that men over 40 can compete with their younger colleagues and do a good job of it. To employers from coast to coast he sent a comprehensive questionnaire to learn what employers have actually learned about the relation of age to efficiency.

He discovered that youth is more careful about its appearance, is more cheerful and more enthusiastic. But for loyalty, conscientiousness, willingness and results, the man over 40 won by a wide margin. With these facts he set out to form a nation-wide organization of Forty-Plus clubs, groups who would break down employer resistance in their respective communities.

Flooring "Fortyphobia."

What happened in Boston is typical. At the first meeting of this Forty-Plus club was a small group of unemployed men, mostly of the executive type. One was 40, a Dartmouth graduate with manufacturing and retailing experience. A second was 42, formerly vice president of a drug company. A third had wide experience in public relations work. They decided to tackle the problem from the inside out, to find jobs for each other by capitalizing on Simler's survey and selling themselves to the public and employers.

They scoffed publicly at the "Help Wanted" advertiser who sought a technical college graduate with at least 15 years' experience in one specialized line and who "must not be over 35." What this employer wanted, they said, was an unemployed genius who finished college at 20. One "Forty-Pluser" administered a verbal thrashing to a man who had turned him down for lack of experience only 10 years ago, and who now said he was too old.

Boston's Payoff.

Their campaign brought results, too. After six weeks, five Forty-Plus club members had permanent positions, one of them paying $6,000 a year. Automatically these men were suspended from membership, since this strange organization is anxious to "kick out" its brothers in the bond as rapidly as possible, thereby making room for new men.

Some employers express a hope that the "fortyphobia" problem will work its own way out. They claim the present crisis is only a temporary, violent reaction to the modern trend of thought which favors work for the young man and leisure for old age.

Meanwhile, the man over 40 is being given the attention he deserves. Massachusetts has empowered its department of labor to publish the names of employers who discriminate against certain persons on account of age. And Secretary of Labor Perkins has added her opinion that "it is against common sense to leave people of 40, 45 and 50 out of work when they are willing and able to work."

But perhaps employers have a just reason to discriminate. Before America can solve this great social problem, she must find the true cause.

C. Houston Goudiss Offers Timely Advice On Avoiding the Menace of Tooth Decay

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the most serious indictments against our present-day civilization is its failure to preserve the teeth of men, women and children. Countless examinations in all parts of the country reveal that practically 100 per cent of the adult population is afflicted with some form of oral disease. And surveys of the physical condition of school pupils in different localities and under various circumstances disclose that tooth decay affects between 90 and 97 per cent of our school children.

Remarkable and widely heralded advances have been made in our knowledge of how to control and prevent many dangerous and debilitating diseases.

Yet we appear to be complacent in the face of the fact that the majority of our population is handicapped by decayed teeth!

Nor does the mere statement of the case convey any idea of the seriousness of the situation. For it is unfortunate that diseased teeth and dental infections which may result from unchecked decay, seldom incapacitate the sufferer. Thus the victim does not become sufficiently alarmed to take the steps necessary to arrest the progress of the diseased condition.

Yet a single decayed tooth might be compared to a poison factory, distributing its noxious products to every part of the body, and tooth decay may be indirectly responsible for rheumatic ailments, neuritis, dyspepsia or duodenal ulcers. It may even be a contributing cause of heart trouble.

Possibilities of Prevention

Yet there is little or no excuse for the appalling amount of dental decay that afflicts the American people. For in recent years a vast amount of laboratory and clinical research has been undertaken in this field and there is impressive evidence that dental caries, or decay, may be completely controlled by dietary means. Then, too, our understanding of correct dental hygiene has advanced tremendously, and scientifically designed tooth brushes and skillfully compounded dentifrices are available in every town and hamlet throughout the country.

Diet and Dental Disease

Various investigators have advocated different dietary formulas for the control of dental decay. There is a lack of agreement among them as to which single element is the most important in constructing a diet to prevent caries.

But outstanding authorities hold that each of the five following dietary factors has a controlling influence: vitamins A, C and D; an adequate supply, in the correct proportions, of the minerals, calcium and phosphorus; an excess of alkaline or base-forming foods over acid-forming foods; and a generous allowance of raw foods, with emphasis on those that leave an alkaline ash.

Vitamin A and Tooth Structure

Notable research has demonstrated that vitamin A is a definite factor in controlling tooth development. The development of the enamel is governed by a complex structure which begins to deteriorate as soon as vitamin A is withheld. When experimental animals are placed on a diet lacking in this vitamin, their teeth become brittle, chalky and white. This is due to the loss of the enamel, with its orange colored pigment, and the exposure of the dentine.

An English authority also claims that vitamin A is necessary to help prevent diseases of the gums.

Inasmuch as vitamin A likewise has many other important functions to perform in the body, every homemaker should see to it that her meals contain an abundance of milk and other dairy products, and the green, leafy and yellow vegetables which are a good source of this vitamin.

Vitamin C and Tooth Health

Vitamin C is closely associated with the health of both teeth and gums. There is strong evidence that this vitamin is essential to the dentine, enamel, cementum and the bone of the jaw. And there are on record remarkable experiments which demonstrate that dental decay and gum disorders are both prevented and arrested when extra amounts of foods containing vitamin C are included in a well-balanced diet.

Vitamin C is best obtained from the citrus fruits, tomatoes and raw leafy vegetables such as cabbage.

Vitamin D which we get from the sun, from fish-liver oils and concentrates, and from irradiated foods and those fortified with vitamin D concentrate, is necessary for the proper utilization of the calcium and phosphorus, which must be generously supplied if the teeth are to develop properly.

Importance of Dental Hygiene

Thus a carefully calculated diet, beginning before birth and continuing throughout life, is necessary to build teeth that are structurally sound. But even the most perfect teeth require constant care to maintain their soundness.

Thorough brushing is necessary after every meal to remove all particles of food which remain between the crevices and cling near the necks of the teeth. If not removed, this debris may ferment, giving rise to unpleasant odors and creating acids which may attack the tooth enamel.

It is important, however, that the brushing be done correctly, away from the gums and with a slight rolling stroke, so that the bristles can penetrate between the teeth. Never use a horizontal stroke nor brush toward the gums. This may irritate the tender tissues and may also force food particles under the gums at the necks of the teeth.

A Good Dentifrice Essential

The selection of a dentifrice is most important because an agreeable dentifrice encourages thorough brushing—an efficient dentifrice helps to float away minute bits of food not reached by the toothbrush.

It is also advisable to use a paste or powder which helps to restore luster to teeth which have been surface-stained by foods and beverages.

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnnie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 12:45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:15 and that he's been playing bridge at the club. Next morning, while Barbara is telling her mother about her adventure, an urgent phone call comes from Mr. Sentry's office after his departure. Arriving home in the late afternoon, Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers luridly confirm the story, and Sentry takes it hard. Mary, elder daughter, is in love with Neil Ray, young interne at the hospital where she works.

Barbara was called to the telephone, and Endie arrived and came in to speak to them while Mary made last preparations. Mrs. Loran's brother, Endie, had somehow made a fortune in the last four or five years, owned a biatantly large motor yacht on which scandalous parties were reported to occur, was perfectly sure of his welcome everywhere; and he clapped Mr. Sentry on the shoulder and said jocosely: "Well, Sentry, a lot of free advertising, eh? Headlines! Produce House Murder! You and Gus ought to have a flock of sightseers tomorrow. Better lay in a stock of bananas, eh? Sell 'em to people to take home as souvenirs!"

Mary, in the hall, called, "I'm ready, Mr. Endie." They departed. Mrs. Sentry said icily, "He and Mrs. Loran are alike, aren't they?" And as Barbara returned from the telephone, "Who was it, Barbara?" "Johnny Boyd!" Barbara was indignant. "He thought last night was a joke, and he thought all this was funny! I shan't ever give him a date again!"

"I suppose it will strike a lot of people as a joke on us," Mr. Sentry agreed, "I'm glad father isn't alive. He was strong on the dignity of the firm." And he reflected: "I'd better run in and reassure mother. Care to come, Ellen?" Old Mrs. Sentry lived in solitary dignity in one of the Back Bay hotels.

"I think not," Mrs. Sentry decided, but when Mrs. Furness phoned recently to ask whether she could bring Miss Glen over—"She's so anxious to talk to Mr. Sentry about this terrible crime!"—Mrs. Sentry said: "I'm sorry. We're going out!" Others would be telephoning. She and Mr. Sentry presently departed in the limousine for town.

Barbara stayed at home. She was reading the story in the paper again when the doorbell rang. Nellie came to say that a young man wished to see her. "He asked for Mr. Sentry," she explained, "and I told him you were the only one at home."

Barbara went into the hall. The young man said, "Miss Sentry?"

"I'm Miss Barbara."

"I'm Dan Fisher," he explained, watching her appreciatively. "I'm a reporter. My editor sent me out to—well, to see if your father had any ideas about this murder. And to get some pictures and so on." He added, "I'm sorry to bother you. And then he grinned and said, 'If I were you, I wouldn't even talk to me.'"

Barbara liked him. "You're a funny reporter," she protested. "I thought they wore their hats in the house."

"You're thinking of plain-clothes men, policemen," he suggested, chuckling; and he added, surprisingly: "I met you once. You don't remember? You were with Joe Dane in New Haven after the Princeton game two years ago. Joe introduced us."

"Oh! Were you reporting the game?"

"No, I'd been helping coach the Princeton ends. Used to play a little, myself. That was before I went into the newspaper game."

She said courteously: "Why, then we're really old friends! Will you come in? There's no one at home, but father and mother will be back soon."

He hesitated, shook his head. "Thanks," he said, "I don't think I will." And he confessed, a little amused at his own scruples: "Probably a real red-hot reporter would get some pictures out of you, and an interview. If your father were here—I'll tell you, I may come back later."

She nodded, understanding his forbearance, grateful. "I shouldn't know what to say," she admitted.

"If I were you, I wouldn't say anything to reporters," he advised. "Just refer them to your father. 'I don't mean for any of you to be mysterious about it, of course. That would only make it worse.' And he said: 'Thanks a lot. Good-night.'"

Barbara was almost sorry he departed. Her thoughts were terrifying company. But when she heard her father and mother return she met them smilingly.

"Well, you missed it!" she announced in lively tones. "I've been entertaining a reporter!"

"A reporter?" Mrs. Sentry echoed resentfully. "Ridiculous! Barbara, you shouldn't have let him in the house!"

"Oh, he was rather nice! His name's Dan Fisher, and he went to Princeton, and knows Joe Dane." Joe was Linda's brother, at Yale. He and Phil Sentry were classmates there. "But he wanted to see father," Barbara explained, and she added mischievously, "I tried to get him to come in and talk to me."

Mrs. Sentry said in sardonic reproach, "Weren't you—unnecessarily hospitable?"

"Well, he said we shouldn't be mysterious about it," Barbara assured them. "He said that would just make it worse."

Mrs. Sentry spoke to her husband. "Arthur, you'd better call up Carl Bettie, make him stop that sort of thing." Bettie was publisher of one of the morning papers, and an old friend. "I won't be hounded by reporters."

Mr. Sentry shook his head. "We've got to expect that, Ellen."

er, took it hot and cold, hot and cold till his head cleared, thought how all this would distress his mother, thought of telephoning her reassurances, thought he might send her a wire, thought he might go home over Sunday, and then remembered the football game, and did not want to miss it, and in the end did nothing that day at all.

But he did read the papers more carefully. The police had found the young Italian in Freedom, Maine. He had been able to account for all his recent movements. Other young men, friends of the dead girl, were being questioned. The girl's father, who was a scallop fisherman, had hurried to Boston. His picture appeared; a long-legged, sad, drooping little old man.

The police, Phil read, were investigating the fact that Miss Wines had been mysteriously absent from her lodgings for three days in August last. The twentieth, twenty-first, and twenty-second. She had told her landlady that she was going to tory, there was not a normal vocal chord in the bowl.

There was celebrating that must be done, and Phil did it. What had happened in Boston was forgotten for that evening; but it must have stayed disturbingly in the back of his mind, since though it was three or four o'clock in the morning before he went to bed, he woke soon after ten, and remembered, and opened his door to get the Sunday morning paper in the hall outside.

He read it, read every line in it that concerned Miss Wines. There were only two things really new in the story of the murder. The autopsy had revealed a probable motive for the crime; and the hour when Agnes Wines was killed had been fixed. A night watchman in a warehouse nearby had heard the shot. He had thought at the time that it was a truck back-firing, probably two or three streets away, because the sound was muffled; but now he was convinced that it was in fact a shot which he had heard. He was for a day or two. Barbara's right. To refuse would just make things worse."

"Oh, Don't Be So Funny!" Phil Exclaimed.

He added, "And after all, we've nothing to hide."

CHAPTER III

Miss Wines was found dead in the hall outside Mr. Sentry's office at about eight o'clock Friday morning; a Friday in October. The afternoon papers cried the news; the morning papers on Saturday spread the tale over three or four pages.

Phil Sentry, a junior at Yale, would have slept late that morning. There was to be a football game in the afternoon, and the pre-game celebration the night before had in his case risen to a somewhat fevered pitch. He had no early class; but Fritz Rush, his roommate, had; and when Fritz returned to the room in mid-forenoon he pulled the bed clothes violently off Phil.

"Wake up, Phil!" he shouted. "You've got your name in the papers!"

Phil blinked sleepily. "What? What's happened? We didn't start anything last night, did we?"

"Read 'em and weep!" Fritz insisted. "All about the murder in high life! Pretty stenographer foully slain! Here, have a look!"

Phil sat up and peered, blinking, at the headlines; he turned the pages and saw photographs of the dead girl, of his father, of Mr. Loran, and of Sentry and Loran's old brick building in the market district. The history of the firm, founded by Phil's great-grandfather, was related; and his father's clubs were listed, and his mother's charities.

The names of Loran and Sentry, even though the connection was slight, lent a certain importance to this murder of a pretty stenographer; yet an old newspaper man, though the names might have been meaningless to him, would have guessed from the extent of the spread that there was more to come, that there was a whisper of sensation in the air.

Even Phil sensed this faintly as he glanced through the pages; but before he had finished, two or three fellows came in to jest at his expense. Was Agnes Wines one of his conquests, they demanded. What was this power he had over women? Where did he bury his dead? He grinned, and then swore.

"Cut the comedy," he said harshly. "Haven't you guys any sense of decency? She looks like a nice kid."

"Where were you, Mr. Bones, Joe Dane demanded in inquisitorial tones, "between the hours of—"

"Oh, don't be so funny!" Phil exclaimed. He stalked into the show-visit a girl friend in New Hampshire; but this girl—not named—denied that Agnes Wines had visited her, or had even planned to do so.

Much was made of this fact. One of the papers said in so many words that the police were seeking the dead girl's unknown lover, and carried a subsidiary headline:

LOVE CLEW IN PRODUCE HOUSE MURDER

Phil threw the paper aside at last, and finished dressing; but when he went to lunch, more than one comedian asked, "Were you mysteriously absent from your accustomed haunts in August, Phil?" He grinned and took it, as the easiest way to put an end to this rillery; which even the innocent may feel, he tried to recall where he had been on the dates given. He remembered at last that he had returned just then from a cruise on Bill Hoke's schooner, had stopped in Boston to see his father, found that Mr. Sentry had gone to New York on business, and himself had gone on to York Harbor that afternoon.

He was relieved at being able thus to account for his time; and later he forgot the murder for the football game. Yale went into the last quarter trailing by ten points; and when in a feverish fifteen minutes they had fought through to vic-ture of the time, having finished his one o'clock rounds just before. Probably five or ten minutes past one, he thought.

Phil was relieved to see that that blaze of publicity which yesterday had focused on his family and that of Mr. Loran had somewhat abated now. Yet he knew so vividly how they would each react to this ugly experience. His father would be concerned about the effect on the business; his mother would resent the offense to her personal dignity; Mary, like so many persons completely egocentric, would feel personally wronged as though the world had conspired to make her ridiculous and unhappy. Barbara—Phil smiled, thinking of Barbara—would keep her head high, make a joke out of the whole thing, try to make them laugh.

He thought of telephoning them some word of reassurance, but the telephone was unsatisfactory. He felt vaguely that they might need him; that there might be something he could do. And also, an intangible uneasiness oppressed him. There was something in the tone of the newspaper stories that suggested the writers knew more than they wrote. Phil was young enough to want to be assured that everything was all right; he was old enough to want to help and comfort if he could.

Task of Protecting Bathers Has Now Been Reduced to Art by Lifesavers

Now the lifeguard starts to the rescue before the victim knows he's in trouble!

That's how scientific the art of preventing drowning has become on the beaches of Los Angeles county, notes a writer in the Los Angeles Times.

And when it works on 40,000,000 persons it must be a good system.

Furthermore, if a swimmer gets into trouble, swallows some water, passes out and is dragged ashore, he doesn't have to worry about the lifeguard sticking a "hatpin through, or tying a handkerchief around his tongue. The old method of resuscitation is as passe as skirts on a woman's bathing suit. Resuscitation is painless nowadays.

Lifesaving has become a profession. Its members are proud and jealous of their status. They won't even let you drown if you want to. That puts a black mark on their records.

All these things become apparent as the water warms up, the air grows balmy and the crowds start flocking to the miles of patrolled beaches.

From now on the lifeguard has his job cut out for him.

He's ready for it. He has to be. Guards are chosen nowadays on such a strict basis that only the best qualified ever get to the point of being paid members of the various groups functioning from Long Beach around to the Ventura county line.

Rip tides, incidentally, cause 75 per cent of the rescues. And most of the persons who have to be rescued are men. The women are more cautious and their bodies naturally are more buoyant.

Luther League of America

The Luther League of America is a national organization having for its purpose the unification of the young people's religious societies that are connected with the Lutheran churches in America. It was founded at Pittsburgh, Pa., in 1935. The motto is "Of the Church, by the Church for the Church."

Glitter . . .

"Keeping up with the Joneses" becomes a boomerang when we allow snobbery to distort our true sense of values.

By WINIFRED WILLARD

SISTER SUE was invited to be adviser to the rich couple furnishing their new home in New York. That's because she has good sense, eye for values and impeccable taste. The living room after it was blue-printed, lacked snap. It needed a dash of color. The interior decorator had brought as bait two red elephants, price $9. Mistress was charmed; said they were "so impressionistic, so intriguing."

Sister Sue thought they were shapeliness, badly sized and off color. Next day Sister Sue said, "Why pay $9 when you can get a more stunning pair at Covington's for $6.50?" But "no," thought Mistress, "there couldn't be anything so beautiful as these particular red elephants."

A few days later, Sister Sue played a trump card with apparent unconcern. Very casually she said she "couldn't see the point in paying $9 for two red elephants that could be bought identical in every way at Lacy's for $1.49!" In the face of that dismaying information, Mistress wilted. Of course she did not want for her new home what could be bought at Lacy's. She finally acknowledged that she had never quite liked those red elephants. It took a Sister Sue with brains and diplomacy to handle that bit of decorative difficulty.

The 'Million Dollar' Room

The walls of the million dollar room of the Union League club at Chicago are papered with certificates of stocks that were once said to be as good as gold. We believed the people who said they were. Maybe they believed themselves too! The only trouble was that the values just weren't there. We do the same things. We plaster our lives thick with standards of cost instead of worth.

We carry the same sort of standards as far as the schools we choose for our children. Tradition, price, social register, what the Joneses do, all weigh heavily with us instead of where our children will learn the most and become their best.

Over New York way is a family whose educational affections are rooted in one particular exclusive college. Costs $2,500 a year for daughter to go there. Just now that's too much. Family is very sorry for itself at the mere thought that it may have to consider another college to which their daughter may be obliged to go, where expenses are only $1,000. It doesn't seem to occur to family that this school is very high class; a topper in the educational world with faculty as good as the country affords; a great library, a century of associations and traditions, good enough for any blue-blood; a beautiful campus more than a hundred years old. But it costs less. That is the only thing against it. Thereby family concludes that it has to be worth less. Strange that after all our lessons we can't learn to tell gold from glitter.

A Social Killing

A man was buying his wife a wondrous ruby ring. Its color and cutting and setting were perfect. Anything lovelier couldn't be imagined. Much personal and foolish importance was attached to the purchase. The merchant said its price was $3,000. They slipped the money from their purses as if it were a farthing and said to each other so clearly that the merchant heard, that they were sorry; they had hoped that it would cost $5,000. It would be so much bigger a story to tell! And they intended that ring to help them make a social "killing."

They remind me of the man who went to market to buy a big pipe organ, one with chimes and harps and all the modern gadgets. He did not know anything about organs; only something about dollars. This one had a big front and cost a lot of money, many thousands. It was exceedingly short on performance. Another instrument with half the window display at much less than half the cost had real musical merit, had what an organ ought to have—melody and harmony, sweetness, richness and variety of tone. But the man who went to market to buy an organ paid the big price for the poor product. It made such a good story to tell. See how much it cost!

Most of us are like that! We purchase a sensible little string of beads as a gift to some graduating girl! Then we scour around until we find a Tiffany box in which to send it. We buy some perfectly good ten cent store candy for the week-end or as an informal, friendly courtesy. But when we share it with others, if we are clever enough, our candy gets placed in a blue-blood box with a famous trade name which somehow we think takes off the ten cent curse. We just seem made that way. We can't help it apparently, because we judge so frequently by other standards than downright values.

Really it is the same thing with infinite variations as Mistress' two red elephants, highly desirable at $9—impossible at $1.49.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—In Indianola, Iowa, the only member of the Mullican family who stayed that way was

Doc Mullican, the town dentist. One of his daughters married, and the four others became the Lane sisters of Hollywood. Had he lived a few months longer, the father would have witnessed the grand slam success of three of the girls, Friscilla, Rosemary and Lola, in the new film "Four Daughters."

The home background of the Lane girls is such that it suggests Meg, Beth, Jo and Amy, these antecedents somehow easing into the picture, to the delight of the audience and the quite unrestrained enthusiasm of the critics. It is top, bad that Leota couldn't have been the fourth daughter—this without disparagement of Gale Page, who gets a full share of honors. Leota is aiming at the Metropolitan and is now studying at the Juilliard School of Music.

The only sources of excitement in Indianola, 21 miles south of Des Moines on the Rock Island, were the 3:15 train and the Methodist college. The Mullican girls, all musically gifted and all good looking, became locally famous for their home musicals and their party antics.

Lola, eldest of the four, met Gus Edwards, away out on the hosiery circuit, 10 miles from Indianola.

Lola Leads Trek to Hollywood. She persuaded him to give her a tryout. That led to a vaudeville engagement, and later to Hollywood. It was Edwards who tagged her Lola Lane. Leota moved out next, also in vaudeville, while Friscilla and Rosemary were still in school. But, at the ages of 14 and 16, respectively, the two latter rounded out the quartette in Hollywood, in "Varsity Show."

They have a grand house, showy cars, silks and cables and what-not in the Hollywood routine—but their public doesn't begrudge them their slice of the American dream, as long as they so faithfully portray its "Little Women" of poignant memory.

"Four Daughters," of modest production cost, was quietly unveiled without any fuss whatsoever. Critics headline it as a "sensational success." The lesson seems to be that the picture moguls, downhearted about the business and ready to spend until it hurts, are overlooking the pulling power of not necessarily expensive taste, simplicity, and sound dramatic craftsmanship, in lieu of a million dollars.

IF IT hasn't already happened, it is pretty nearly a certainty that someone will give Commodore Robert B. Irving, master of the Queen them almost constantly, and important occasions in his life are usually signalized by the ceremonious presentation of a B.B.—Best British Briar—which type of pipes features his collection of several hundred.

Mary, a pipe for breaking the Atlantic speed record—He collects pipes and smokes

The tall, smiling, wind-and-sun-tanned skipper is a border Scotsman of Kirtlebridge, Dumfriesshire, 61 years old, a sailing man for 47 years, 35 years with the Cunard line, barring time out for war service. He is deliberate, friendly, chatty and easy-going, the last man in the world to pose for the portrait of a speed demon. Next to pipes, his hobby is collecting carvings of miniature elephants.

The son of a retired army colonel, with no seafaring folk anywhere in his line, he went to sea at 12 on the school ship Conway, and, at 14, shipped on a four-masted around the horn to San Francisco. He joined the Cunard line as fourth officer. His first command was the Venonia, and later he was master of many of the crack ships of the line, including the Lusitania, in 1914, and the Aquitania.

In his native Kirtlebridge, he lives in a house built in 1770, tramps through his 1,500 acres of copse and moors, works in his garden and raises spaniels. As one who has ranged the world through nearly half a century, he is happiest when headed homeward, for there he is the killed chief of the ancient Irving clan, and there his heart is.

"We Must Hang Together"

"We must hang together" is one of the famous puns in history and is attributed to Benjamin Franklin. When the Declaration of Independence was signed, John Hancock, president of the continental congress, put his name to the document first. "Now we must all hang together," he remarked as he wrote his name. "Yes, indeed," retorted Doctor Franklin, "we must all hang together or assuredly we shall all hang separately."
