WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK. — Barring world champion prizefighters, Thomas E. Dewey probably has received more publicity than any other American of his years. He is only 38, but almost everything about him is old news.

However, as the New York Republicans nominated him for governor, the whole country seems hungry for information about the cock of his eyebrow, his gold fillings, if any, the set of his suspenders and whether he runs down the heels of his shoes.

He appears to be, to this observer, the answer to Stuart Chase's plea for a new kind of politician. In a magazine article printed about a year ago, Mr. Chase tore all political dogmas to tatters and said we would get nowhere until we began to isolate and attack given problems and settle them according to their immediate requirements, without regard to their political or philosophical context.

On most of the specific political issues of the day, Mr. Dewey's opinion has not been revealed. He has been slotted as "liberal" and "progressive," but, in the days of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too," the country esteemed fighting men and apparently still does.

GREECE has had several associations to get the Elgin marbles from England. They're still there. The Association of Men With Wings seems to have better prospects of reclaiming for Wright planes America's original Wright brothers' airplane.

When and if they succeed, it will be another feather in the flying helmet of Col. Charles Wayne Kerwood. Ever since he stepped daredevilism as one of America's most spectacular and adventurous aviators, he has been plotting to get that plane, even if he has to kidnap it.

He flew and fought with the French in the World War, with the Greeks against the Turks in 1922, was wounded and grounded more than once, turned to barnstorming and sensational knockabout flying, and became president of the International League of Aviators. He is a native of Chicago, big, bronzed, moustachioed, once a flying and fighting buddy of General Franco, against the Rifles.

THIS department would like to come out boldly against something. An unflinching stand against red fingernails looks pretty safe. Magistrate Jeanette G. Brill, Wagon Jurist, We Fall In Brooklyn's only woman magistrate, leads the way for a possible rallying of the democratic powers around a live issue. She reproves a woman defendant for being thus incriminated. Magistrate Brill has been a social worker, club woman, teacher, author, student and lawyer. She works 18 hours a day and sleeps five. She releases subway banjoists, saying we need music in the subway.

Fashion Favors Rich Wool Weaves for Evening Dress

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE fact of woolen materials being media for our everyday apparel, our afternoon informals, for our town and country tailors, our sports and our travel wear is so obvious we are not apt to give it a second thought, but for designers to be fashioning their choicest formal evening attire of "cloth"—aye, there's news for you as is real news.

This new use of woolen fabrics for formal evening wraps and for whimsical little jackets that look too pretty for words worn over party frocks, and for floor-length gowns and for voluminous coats and capes to cover them marks a highly significant movement in the field of costume design.

Now that the new order of things leads us to think of tweeds and velvety worsted and dainty wool sheers going to formal affairs, we call to mind some of the interesting developments growing out of this new gesture. Designers say the new evening woollens are positively inspirational from a color viewpoint.

Intriguing examples of the new formal woolen trends are the exquisite worsteds. These sheers pleat or shir or drape with as much facile as if they were "wisp" chiffon, and designers are making rapturous evening gowns of them.

Big news in evening wraps is the full-length coats and capes made of tweeds and velvety wools that envelope your gauzette or your most stately jewel-spattered gowns not only protectively but glamorously, in that some of the new evening tweeds are gold flecked and threaded with glittering metal, while others take on striking appliques of gold or silver kid done in scrollwork patterning.

The wool evening wrap is raised to heights of glamour in the stunning creation pictured to the left. This handsome coat is of a burgundy red velvet wool weave, trimmed with fox fur in the new smoky-topaz shade. The huge muff is luxurious. The tiny ostrich evening hat exaggerates the high hair-do as fashion intends it should do.

The outlook for short wraps is most exciting. These clever little jackets and short capes are flocking out in endless number. So alluring are they, one can't resist them. The encouraging part is that the woman whose budget cannot stand the strain of a new glamorous wrap can with a little ingenuity fashion her own jacket out of a short length of gay wool fabric, giving it the individual touch via a bit of embroidery or ornate applique. See the enchanting little jacket pictured in the inset. It is fashioned of lime-green tweed, embroidered with flashing peacock-green jewels set in silver.

Describing another jacket for the benefit of those who are inspired to make their own. It is cut of dusty pink wool after the "bush-jacket" style along casual lines of a loose-fitting "sacque." A narrow bordering of embroidery done in gold sequins outlines all edges.

A severely tailored suit made of lame tweed in burnt orange and gold gives a new slant on evening fashions as shown above to right in picture. The jumper blouse is in broche wool in a color scheme of beige, brown gold and dark red.

With plaid coat

"With plaid coat" is becoming a familiar phrase, for the handsome plaid coats brought out this season are selling at right. You may have your coat in as bizarre colorings as fancy might crave, or if you are a black and white enthusiast you may choose a stunning black-and-white plaid such as the young girl in the picture is carrying. For her suit she chooses a trim little tulleur of a silk mixture in black. Her youthful large brimmed hat is black felt.

Everything Bows To High Hair-Do

Everything is being done to conform to the new high hair-do that is creating such a sensation in the fashion world because of the startling innovations involved. The new little hats have entered into the conspiracy with a will. They perch over one eye and tilt as far forward as possible so as to give high-piled curls all the chance in the world to show off.

Inspired by the upward trend, shoulder lines go high via sleeves fluted in so that they stand in a high puff.

Necklines, too, take their cue, even to reviving the fashion of wearing velvet choker bands about the throat. The new gold dog-collars, colorfully jeweled as some of them are, do their part nobly in calling attention to smart "upplish" head-lines.

Lastex Suede or Patent for Shoes

Have you heard the thrilling news? It's about shoes made of either suede or patent lastex that stretches to conform to your foot. Glove-fitting they are, not a wrinkle or unseemly bulge to detract from beauty of line—and think of the comfort! A blessing to womankind and it won't be long before every woman who knows will be calling for lastex footwear.

Jerkies and Vestees Jerkins and vestees of fur fabrics and novelty patterned woollens are the latest means of making an old frock look new.

Tricorns Doll Hats Wee tricorns, a brief six inches across, are an amusing version of the new doll hats.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Correct Diet for Cool Weather; Explains How to Keep Warm and Well

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

MANY people look upon fall weather with foreboding. They cannot observe leaves on the ground without a feeling of vague uneasiness—and the sight of brown and barren fields fills them with desolation.

This, I think, is a throwback to an earlier day when the advent of cool weather foretold long months of bitterly cold days in draughty, inadequately heated houses. And the lack of adequate heat was only one of many difficulties. The principal reason for fearing cold weather is another heritage from the past.

Limited Diet of an Earlier Day There was a time within memory of many of us when the terms "cold-weather diet" and "warm-weather diet" had real meaning. Winter food differed a great deal from summer food, particularly in the absence of fresh fruits and vegetables, and in the restricted use of milk and milk products.

The limited diet of winter was enforced by conditions of that period. Methods of production, transportation, refrigeration and storage of foods, which are commonplace today, were then unknown.

Fruits and vegetables were consumed when and where they were grown, and when cold weather prevented their growth, they were not available. The canning industry was young and the grocery store in cold weather presented a far different appearance from the modern food store in which the shelves are lined, row upon row, with shining cans of the finest fruits and vegetables to be found anywhere in the world, plus an amazing assortment of prepared milks.

It was an accepted fact that fruits, vegetables, and the generous use of milk belonged to the summer months, while in winter everyone ate an unbalanced diet. As a result of lacking these essential protective foods, health went down rapidly from late fall to early spring.

The winter diet was deficient in minerals and vitamins, which science has proven to be the protectors of health, barriers against disease, sustainers of life. But in those days, vitamins were unknown and very little had been learned about minerals. Therefore, when people became ill during cold weather, the natural conclusion was that sickness was inevitable during the winter season.

Cold Weather Really a Tonic Times have changed. Scientific knowledge has increased. The genius of man has asserted itself in mechanical advancement. The expressions, "cold-weather diet" and "warm-weather diet," have lost their former meaning.

Almost without exception, the protective foods are available throughout the year, no matter where we live.

It is therefore possible to protect the health by a balanced diet all the year 'round, and to benefit by the tonic effect of cold weather. For, contrary to popular belief, cold weather is beneficial, and not harmful, to healthy people.

Cold speeds up all the activities of the body. The circulation is improved, muscle tone is increased, and digestion, absorption and elimination are stimulated. Even prolonged cold is thus a tonic to health, provided we do not weaken our bodies by an unbalanced diet.

It is partly because so many people continue to eat improperly, in spite of our newer knowledge of nutrition, that we still find an increasing amount of sickness in the fall, which mounts steadily until it reaches its peak in the months of January, February and March.

Dangers of an Improper Diet Yet winter need have no terrors for the fit. Only the weak, the unfit, surrender and become its victims. That the number of victims is large each winter merely may be provided in the form of easily digested carbohydrates, such as rice, macaroni, spaghetti, noodles, potatoes, cereals and breadstuffs.

In the case of adults, the amount of fats may also be increased and in some circumstances, more sweets may likewise be taken.

To summarize, the cold weather diet should include a quart of milk daily for every child, a pint for each adult; two fruits daily, or one fruit and one fruit juice—and while one serving may be a dried fruit, such as prunes, apricots of figs, there should be one serving of a citrus fruit, or tomatoes, to provide vitamin C; two vegetables besides potatoes, one of which should be of the green, leafy variety, either fresh or canned; an egg daily, or at least three or four weekly; one daily serving of meat, fish or chicken, and a second protein food such as cheese, dried peas or beans or nuts; and enough of the fuel foods including whole grain cereals, to keep the body warm and comfortable.

If you eat correctly and dress sensibly so that you are neither too warmly clad indoors nor too thinly clad out of doors, you can enjoy cold weather and benefit by it to the extent of increased health and happiness.

Ample Protection—Hence Little Concern

Adefine Genee, famous dancer, now retired, tells this story: Two young ladies—nongolfers—who wandered over a golf course and, finding a nice smooth bit of turf with a little flag in the center, sat down to rest. A couple of men in the distance shouted "fore" and madly waved their arms, but not having been introduced, the ladies took no notice.

Soon one of the men came striding up. "Don't you think it's very dangerous to sit here?" he asked gravely.

"Oh, no," replied one of the ladies, with a smile. "You see, we're sitting on a mackintosh."—Kansas City Star.

Your Health May Depend on Your Teeth

An Editorial by C. Houston Goudiss

The reason why some men and women in their middle years look and feel younger today than their parents did at the same age, is because they have learned something of the importance of caring properly for their teeth. In recent years, dentists have discovered that sound teeth are in truth a passport to good health, and that there is as close a relationship between healthy teeth and healthy bodies as between decayed teeth and sickly bodies.

Unfortunately, however, only a small percentage of our population is yet aware of the far-reaching effects of teeth upon health, and a distinguished scientist is so disturbed over our national ignorance in this respect that he has said that unless this trend is reversed, the course of human evolution will lead downward to extinction. That statement is no exaggeration. For it would be difficult to over-estimate the influence of the teeth on human health and happiness.

For many years I have endeavored to explain that a neglected tooth—which soon becomes a decayed tooth—is a poison factory, distributing its noxious products to every part of the body, and that it may lead indirectly to neuritis, rheumatic ailments, dyspepsia, and other obscure complaints.

In many of the "WHAT TO EAT AND WHY" articles, which have appeared in this newspaper over my signature, I have endeavored to point out the close relationship between diet and dental disease; between frequent and thorough brushing of the teeth with an efficient dentifrice so as to remove all food particles, and strong, beautiful teeth.

As a result of these articles, I have received many letters, showing that homemakers are eager for sound, authoritative advice on the proper care of the teeth. To help these and other readers how to properly care for their teeth, I have prepared a booklet on—"BUILDING AND PLANNING HEALTH" which I am offering FREE, because I feel so strongly that this information should be in every home, knowing as I do, that the salvation of the human race may lie in saving their teeth.

IN-MEMORIAM

One who has known and loved her, and lived in close association with Mother Burieson for many years, would give you, her loved ones, a message that I feel, she herself, would give in the hours of sorrow and loneliness that will follow her passing:

"They are not dead who have passed."

"I, who have found infinite joy in the years we have spent together, still live to enrich my Eternity. I take with me, my faith in God; the memory of your thoughtful, loving, tender care; many blessings and pleasures that each of you have strewn along my path to make it smoother when rough places came into view.

"I would not have you grieve at my departure, for grief is fitting only, when life has been an unyielding, weary routine while my life has been a rich and rewarding journey.

"When at times you miss me--as you will--and long to do for me again the loving duties you've performed so faithfully and patiently, and as you've tried to show me how much you've loved and appreciated me--just get busy and do them for some one else. You will thus glorify the Father, and in tribute to my memory you can fill your lives so full of giving love that there will be no room for loneliness.

"If I have left undone anything that would help to smoothe the path of life before you, or give you the priceless gift of character and faith in the living God, I now bless it and take it with me into the heavenly realm--of which little yet is known--but which my faith assures me is good.

"To each of you, I bequeath my living faith in the love of God and the law of life; to you would give the courage to meet all your problems fearlessly, realizing that He, who doeth all things well, will bear you up 'safe in the everlasting arms.'

"Remember, that even as you live and triumph, so did I live to fulfill my destiny--for 'though he die, yet shall he live.'"

Being Happy Fashionable

Saying one is happy seems to be the proper thing in China, according to Dr. Randolph Sailer, psychologist at Yenching university. Of 500 workers questioned, only 60 admitted that their happiness was below par, and none was a complete pessimist. Happiness is not affected by money, education or jobs, Dr. Sailer and his co-workers found. Smokers and non smokers both were happy. And married men were happier as a rule, than bachelors.

We are a little late this week due to the campaign rush and the heavy advertising.

Ham and Eggs From Slot Machines: New Pension Wave Sweeps U. S.

November Election Brings Big Crop of Old Age Assistance Plans, Promising Congressional Debate on 'Little' Townsend Bill

By JOSEPH W. LaBINE

Someone long since established that a man can't pull himself up by his bootstraps, but that does not stop several million aging Americans from clamoring for three square meals a day.

This means that America is again besieged with a deluge of pension plans, economically unorthodox but capable of drawing a huge vote at the November 8 election.

Pension plans have a way of blossoming out each time there's a depression. It happened in 1934, a la Dr. Frances E. Townsend. At the rate it's happening again this year, the 1938 depression is a world beater.

On November 8 the residents of at least 16 states will vote yes or no on old age pensions to be supported by everything from slot machines to dog races. For each of these plans there's a black and white solution that looks good on paper but leaves the economists a little skeptical. You can prove any of them will or won't work.

No enlightened American denies that the pension idea is economically sound provided it can be financed. Under a modern social order it is logical that youth should work and age should rest. But wizened observers are hoping this year's crop of Utopian ideas will die out, that instead next winter's congress will arrange a sensible substitute.

Townsendism Again

But Townsendism is the most favored substitute, and how sensible is Townsendism? At least 100 congressmen are behind the modified version of this plan which calls for monthly $50 payments to old people, financed by a gross 2 per cent transaction tax. This bill is sponsored by Wisconsin's Rep. Gerald Bolleau, Business, already taxed to the hilt, complains that a 2 per cent levy would remove what little profit now remains from commercial transactions.

But the pensioners must be satisfied, or stamped out. Thus far they've shoved from office such prominent men as California's Sen. William Gibbs McAdoo, defeated in the primary by Sheridan Downey, who rode the crest of a new pension wave. Downeyism advocates the scrip plan, despite the failure of scrip in Alberta a couple of years ago. Thirty dollars in scrip would be issued each Thursday to every Californian over 60 years old. To pay for it, a two cent state stamp, bought with real money, would be pasted each Thursday on the back of each $1 piece of scrip in circulation. At the end of a year the scrip would carry $1.04 in stamps and would be redeemed for $1.00 in cash.

Downeyism has spread to other states, notably Ohio, where the chief arguments center around payday. Shall it be Wednesday or Thursday? Ohio's rival pensioners have thus far failed to provide financial machinery. As in California, the battle cry is for "ham and eggs."

A group of Nebraskans hope ham and eggs will come from slot machines, for on November 8 that state will vote on an amendment "relating to public assistance, welfare and social security; to provide revenue for the state assistance fund from the proceeds of an annual tax to be levied on owners and operators of coin-operated devices." Mysteriously, sponsored and cleverly phrased, the Nebraska petition was probably signed by many people who didn't realize that the tax would be on slot machines instead of plain vending machines. The resultant complaint has changed the amendment to read "machines of chance."

Oregon to the Rescue

Oregon has two petitions, one memorializing congress to call a national convention for a constitutional amendment establishing the Bolleau bill. The other calls for a 2 per cent transaction tax to give old people $100 a month. North Dakota is voting on an amendment to pay

LEFT—L. K. Adams of Kansas City, Kan., would give $25 each Tuesday to every Kansan more than 55 years old, and $2.50 for every dependent legitimate child. RIGHT—Roy C. Wallace, independent candidate for governor in Tennessee, proposes $20 a week to all Tennesseans more than 50 years old.

tion has ruined state finances, pointing out that the "guaranteed" $45 a month has never been more than $25. Pensioners argue that economy would produce the full pension.

Conservative Support
But the 1938 variety of pensioner is not always a fanatic. In Idaho the level-headed Sen. William E. Borah has announced himself as not unfriendly to old age assistance movements. In Maine three Republican congressmen elected with Townsend help, have pledged their support to the full $200-a-month pension. Massachusetts Republicans recommend early congressional action on the Bolleau measure.

These campaign promises foreshadow a heated battle in congress next winter, but they may also foreshadow adoption of many state pension plans on November 8. Through the entire campaign, the national administration has maintained a hands-off policy, feeling that if Colorado's sad experience hasn't taught people a lesson, they can find out for themselves. After all, every state has a right to try.

Cornhusking Now Simon-Pure Just Like Any Other Sport!

Pros Get Cold Shoulder In 'Purified' Bang Board Contest

You're invited to compete in the national cornhusking contest at Sioux Falls, S. D., November 3, but be sure of your amateur status! Professionalism, long the bogus of golfers, tennis players and football stars, has at last raised its ugly head on the farm, making husking quite a simon-pure business.

To be eligible for this year's contest, says a resolution of the National Cornhusking Contest association, you must not have "participated for money or other awards or gifts in any cornhusking contest sponsored or approved by an organization or group other than the organizations which are members of this association."

The new ruling was made public just in time to save William Rose, 1937 Illinois champion, from selling his soul for pieces of silver. Rose, who can shuck 175 bushels of corn a day if he sets his heart to it, no sooner entered a free-for-all contest at Barry, Ill., then the state contest sponsor stepped in with a warning.

When this year's strictly amateur cornhuskers step into the field near Sioux Falls, they will have an audience of probably 50,000 fans. Contestants will come from every state in the corn belt, chosen by elimination husking bees. So popular has the sport become that it pushes football off the sports page for one day each autumn and attracts national network broadcasts.

Contest fields are chosen in early summer and tilled carefully to insure a good stand of corn. Shuckers, who have trained like athletes for the 80 minute grind, line up in sprint formation between rows of corn. Each wears a palm hook with which he tears off the ears, ripping off the husks and throwing them at an accompanying wagon. The wagon carries a "bang board" which rebounds the ears into the bin.

The husker who gets the most corn in his wagon during the 80-minute run is usually the winner, but judges trail each contestant in search of abandoned ears. Every ear that's been left behind counts as an error, so the scales don't always give the final verdict.

Unlike some "sissy" sports, a corn husking contest is never called off on account of bad weather. Last year's event was run off in a driving rain with huskers wallowing in slippery mud between the rows. This year it may be dry, with dusk whipping up from the parched corn stalks.

Seasoned huskers look on football players as softies. During the entire 80-minute race they never take time out for rest, occasionally gulping a drink of water on the run. © Western Newspaper Union.

Speed of Baseball

Kan says: According to Dr. Coleman R. Griffith of the University of Illinois, some pitchers are able to throw a baseball at an initial speed of 120 feet a second. An average fast ball travels about 88 feet a second—making the time from the pitcher's hand to the batter approximately a half second. Most out-curves are slow balls that travel not more than 60 feet a second.

when the ball is hit by a driving machine, set for a 250-yard drive, reveals that the ball speeds 214.28 feet per second over a distance of 14 inches, beginning 7 inches after contact with the clubhead.

Circumstances

There are no circumstances, however unfortunate, that clever people do not extract some advantages from; and none, however fortunate, that the imprudent can not turn to their own prejudice.

ALL YOUR CURIOSITY satisfied by Your Mileage Merchant... Ask him exactly how you're sure of fast winter starting and extreme oil economy by changing now to WINTER OIL-PLATING

IS OIL-PLATING just a different name? ... No. OIL-PLATING is what Conoco Germ Processed oil does! The out-and-out difference is this: OIL-PLATING will stay firmly attached—plated—clear to the topmost point in your engine, while any plain mineral oil drains clear down the crankcase at every stop.

Exactly where is your gain? Well, in starting up again—next day or next month—the coldest OIL-PLATED engine is always oiled in advance... pre-lubricated before any oil down in the crankcase could ever stir. OIL-PLATING thus keeps every engine part constantly slippery. The starter speeds... the battery lives and so does the engine, free of fierce starting friction.

But is there any oil saving? Why?... Because less engine wear puts more miles between quarts. And OIL-PLATING itself never passes out during the use of Germ Processed oil. Only the Germ Process, patented, creates OIL-PLATING, the sensible reason for you to switch to Your Mileage Merchant today.

Switch in Time!

Their Political Fate in Hands of Voters

National interest is centered on these men who seek the voters' approval in hotly contested elections November 8. TOP ROW, left to right, Thomas E. Dewey, Republican district attorney of New York, pitted against Gov. Herbert Lehman, Democrat, in race for governor's chair; Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania, ardent New Dealer aspiring to the senate, faces a stiff fight against a revitalized Republican machine; Californians chose Sheridan Downey as Democratic nominee for U. S. senator on the strength of his "530 every Thursday" pension plan which, under political pressure, he later soft-pedaled. BOTTOM ROW, left to right, Leverett Saltonstall, Republican, opposes James M. Curley, Democratic nominee and former incumbent, for governorship of Massachusetts; Gov. Elmer Benson of Minnesota, Farmer-Labor champion, is opposed for re-election by Harold Stassen, Republican "left-of-center" candidate; Wisconsin's Gov. Philip La Follette gives his new third party movement its first test at the polls when he comes up for re-election, with Republican opposition from Julius Hell.

Cranberry Season Is Ever Welcome

Long Absence of Berry Makes Greeting Heartier

By EDITH M. BARBER
CRANBERRIES with their lovely red color add a cheerful note to the markets and, of course, to the table. Perhaps we give them a heartier welcome because they are one of the few foods which deprive us of their presence during the summer months.

Not long ago, when I needed some cranberries for a Christmas photograph, they had to come down especially from Cape Cod, where they had been picked by hand instead of by rakes which gather them in large quantities for market. No cranberries ever tasted so good as these before-season berries.

While we do not judge foods merely for their color, we give them an extra score when they add a decorative note to the meal. We like the flavor because, when we use them as we almost always do with sugar, we get a "sweet-sour" tang which is particularly appetizing. And now we are told that they provide us with important minerals and several extra vitamins so that we have an extra reason, if we need one, for putting them on the menu.

Sauce and jelly still remain the favorite ways of using these berries. We do, however, put them to many other uses among which my favorites are pie, tapioca pudding, steamed pudding and shortcake, for which I use what is known as ten minute cranberry sauce. By the way, a pot roast cooked with cranberries and glazed with sugar before serving is an interesting novelty. And orange and cranberry relish which can be prepared without cooking seems to be designed for serving with baked ham or roast pork.

Steamed Cranberry Pudding.
1/4 cup butter
1/4 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
2 cups flour
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
1 cup cranberries
Cream butter, add sugar gradually and cream together until light. Stir in beaten eggs. Mix and sift flour with baking powder and salt and add alternately with the milk to the first mixture. Stir in cranberries. Pour batter into greased mold, cover and steam three hours. Serve hot with hard sauce.

Cranberry Tapioca.
1/2 cup granulated tapioca
1/2 teaspoon salt
3 1/2 cups boiling water
1 pint cranberries
1/2 cup water
1/2 cup sugar
Cook tapioca, salt and boiling water together until clear. Cook cranberries and water until soft and add to the tapioca with the sugar. Cook five minutes, pour into a wet mold, chill and serve with whipped cream.

Cranberry Cocktail.
4 cups cranberries
4 cups water
1/2 cup granulated sugar
Cook cranberries and water until all the skins pop open (about 5 minutes). Strain through cheese cloth. Bring the juice to boiling point, add sugar and boil 2 minutes. Serve cold. This may be corked and sealed for future use.

Cranberry Jelly.
1 quart cranberries
1 cup water
2 cups sugar
1 cup diced celery
Pick over and wash cranberries, add water and cook until soft. Strain through a coarse sieve. Add the sugar to the juice and stir over fire until dissolved. Remove from fire and add diced celery. Pour into a mold or jelly glasses and cool.

Cranberry Conserve.
4 cups cranberries
1 cup water
1 cup nut meats
1 cup seeded raisins
2 1/2 cups sugar
1 sliced orange
Cook cranberries in water until they stop popping; rub through a sieve and add coarsely chopped nut meats. Add raisins, sliced orange and sugar; and cook for 15 minutes. Put away in glasses.

Candied Cranberries
1 cup firm cranberries
1 cup sugar
1 cup water
Wash and dry cranberries and prick each in several places with a needle. Boil sugar and water together until a little lifted on a spoon spins a thread, or cook to 230 degrees Fahrenheit. Add the cranberries and cook gently until the syrup will jelly when dropped from the tip of the spoon. Remove berries and place on waxed paper to cool and dry. Roll in granulated sugar and use in place of candied cherries.

Heather for All Purposes
The heather which covers Scotland's great hunting moors once had more use than as a protection for grouse. Highlanders formerly used it for everything from walls to beds. Alternating with layers of mortar, it was built into the walls of houses and was also used for thatching. Comfortable beds were once made of it and it was also very popular as a pot scourer. Even a dye was extracted from heather, and in northern Scotland it was often twisted into fine ropes.

Household Hints

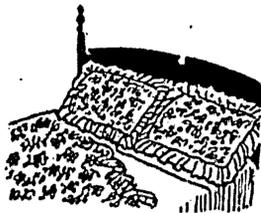

By BETTY WELLS

IMOGENE'S linen closet is my despair—and delight. I always adore taking a peek at it when I go to her house, and yet it makes me green wanting such a one in my house.

There's a separate shelf to hold the linens for each room with gay little labels.

Imogene has night spreads with special pillowcases for her room and for the guest room. They're as dainty as forget-me-nots—made of sprigged dimity with wide ruffles. They're the crowning glory as far as I'm concerned—they're so pretty.

Her bedspreads are all extra nice, too. In the maple room, the twin beds are covered with beautiful creamy crocheted spreads in a tufted design and a well filled in pattern. This is where she uses light blue sheets. In Imogene's room, the mahogany poster bed has a quilted spread in white with applied flower baskets for the design. Her sheets are white with peach applied monograms. Bill's room has a grand spread for a high school boy—it's made of bright green corduroy and finished around the bottom with a thick green wool fringe. His sheets are white with his initial and graduating year embroidered in green. Helen's room has a flowered chintz spread over an eyelet embroidered flounce—the sheets here are white with double rows of hemstitching.

For each bathroom Imogene has towels that match the other decorations. But in addition, she has a small towel rack on the inside closet door where she keeps some extra personal towels. They seem to come in quite handy.

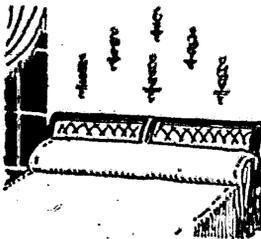

But of course it's her dining-room linen shelf that really makes me covetous. Stacks of snowy damask napkins, yards of lustrous damask tablecloths, gossamer lace tea cloths, jaunty piles of informal colored linens in just the right colors for the room.

Imogene takes pride not only in the quality and quantity of her household linens, but also in how she keeps them. They always look so crisp and smooth and fragrant. Yet she does them up herself, every piece. She's learned to be quite an artist with her mangle—puts them through with never a wrinkle and so that each one is folded straight.

A Master Bedroom.
Jane is a cute little thing. Really much too pretty to be so clever, and so I'm always surprised anew when I see how many things she can do. A tweed suit that looks a hundred dollars' worth is nothing for her to run up on her sewing machine. And you should see the kid glove fit she gets on a slip cover.

Naturally I always like to drop in at her house as often as I can because she invariably has something new and pretty to show me. The other day when I went by, Jane had been doing things to her bedroom, and I came away with a head full of ideas.

She'd done over two old twin beds for one thing, upholstering them in cream quilted taffeta (yes, she did the quilting herself) with spreads to match. (Saying that the same idea could be worked out with slip covers for the head and foot boards.) The carpet in this room is a warm cinnamon brown, walls are cream and the ceiling is a lighter tea color. A chaise longue is upholstered in a dull green and so is the dressing table bench. Curtains in cream are edged with a green fringe and the dressing table skirt is cream with green fringe for finish—and she has amber glass perfume bottles.

But it's what Jane did with the walls that really won us over. Above the bed she hung six little gold brackets to hold a collection of green porcelain Chinese figurines. On either side of her dressing table mirror, she had prim vertical rows of little old family pictures framed in gold frames.

The particular thing we liked about this bedroom is that it has charm without too much daintiness. So that George, Jane's husband, looks as much at home there as she does—in spite of the quilted taffeta beds!

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnnie Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 12:45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:15 and that he has been playing bridge at the club. Next day Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers loudly confirm the story, and Sentry takes it hard. Mary, elder daughter, in love with Nell Ray, young interne at the hospital where she works, goes off to dinner at Gus Loran's. Sentry, with Mrs. Loran's brother, Jimmy Endie, Mr. and Mrs. Sentry call on old Mrs. Sentry, and Barbara, alone, receives Dan Fisher, reporter, who advises her not to talk. Phil Sentry, son at Yale, is disturbed at the possible implications and suspicion of Miss Wines' absence from her rooms for three days during August. He goes home to help. Sentry is arrested and booked for murder. Dan Fisher explains the evidence against him—that the robbery was a fake, the safe opened by one who knew the combination, changed since Miss Wines' employment there—that a back door key, a duplicate of Sentry's, was found in the girl's purse, and that Sentry, too, had been away those three days in August. Brace calls, and backs up Barbara in her denial that Sentry could have done it, because of the discrepancy of time between the slaying and their seeing Sentry on the road. Phil, showing the police over the house, finds his strong box forced open and his gun, which only his father knew of. Meanwhile, the police find the stolen money burned in the furnace. Mrs. Sentry sees her husband, who swears his innocence, and tells her he had known of the robbery and murder the night before, but failed to call the police, and came home at 12:30. Phil and his mother are doubtful of Sentry's innocence, but keep silent.

While they were at lunch, a little later, Dean Hare telephoned to say that Inspector Irons had decided to postpone his interrogations, so for the afternoon they were free. Mary was to see Nell Ray when he went off duty; and as they finished lunch, Linda came to propose that Phil go for a drive with her.

"I have to go out to those mills in Norwood to get some homepump," she explained, "and I hate to go alone."

Phil looked to his mother for consent. "Go along," she said. "Barbara and grandmother will be here." So Phil went, and found a measure of peace and forgetfulness in being thus with Linda. But when she brought him home, in late afternoon, he was reluctant to face them all; instead of going directly indoors, he walked around the house. He heard voices by the muddy stream beyond the pergola and went to look down over the bank. Policemen were there in boats with things like hinged rakes, dragging up debris from the bottom of the stream. One of them saw him and spoke quietly to the others, and they all looked up, silently. Phil went back toward the house, trembling.

He found his mother alone. "Mary's dining with Neil," she explained, "and I sent Barbara in to stay overnight with grandmother. Professor Brace called, drove them in." She smiled reassuringly. "So we'll have dinner together, you and I."

"Professor Brace?" he echoed. He remembered warily that the District Attorney had questioned Professor Brace, but he did not say so, "Fanny for him to hang around."

"I suppose he's naturally interested. The scientific mind, you know." Her tone was edged. "We're under his microscope, like insects."

"He introduced himself to the reporters," Phil recalled. "Almost as if he wanted publicity."

"I see you don't like him either."

"Oh—I like him all right."

Dinner was served and they went in; and since they might here be overheard they spoke of other things. Phil talked at random, steadily, fighting down his thoughts; that his father had taken his gun, that his father had tried to burn money in the furnace, that his father was a murderer! He must not let his mother guess his dreadful certainty.

And she, as intent to hide her thoughts from Phil as he was to conceal his from her, helped him keep talk alive; but when they left the table and went into the living-room and were alone, silence crushed them; and Phil noisily lighted a fire, and Mrs. Sentry telephoned old Mrs. Sentry's apartment to say good night to Barbara. She reported to Phil, when she left the phone, that Professor Brace had stayed to dinner with them.

"I suppose he's taking notes," she reflected. "Like that German tutor at the foot of the table in 'War and Peace.' Remember? There's just a paragraph about him, but he's perfectly clear cut, a complete character in your mind afterward."

Phil did not remember. "But speaking of Russians," he suggested, "how about some Russian Bank?" So they played till Mrs. Sentry said at last that they might as well go to bed. The house seemed very big and empty when they went upstairs, and parted for the night.

Later, Mrs. Sentry, still awake, heard Mary come in; but the girl did not come upstairs, so her mother went down, a dressing-gown over her night garments. She found Mary in the living-room, standing by the hearth, her lips bitten red, her hands twisting.

And Mrs. Sentry tried in an awkward way—they were not a demonstrative family—to take the girl in her arms, but Mary said, "Don't, please!"

So Mrs. Sentry sat down. "Shall we talk for a while?" she suggested. "Or are you sleepy?"

"Sleepy!" The word was fierce with scorn.

"How is Nell?"

"Very sensible!"

Mrs. Sentry said, "I knew he would—help you."

"Oh—help? Of course!"

"He didn't, then?"

Mary said: "Don't worry about Nell! We were practically engaged, but I told him tonight we must forget that. That after all this, I was hopelessly disqualified to be a missionary's wife, even in China!"

Mrs. Sentry waited. Mary said in a flat voice, passionless as ashes, "He agreed with me."

After a while her mother spoke, tentatively. "I wish I could—hold you in my lap, dear, as I did when you were little and were hurt."

"Good Night! I'm Going to Bed."

"No, thanks. I'm not little any more." The girl stood before the hearth, rigid and still, her eyes fixed, her hands clasped behind her. Mrs. Sentry thought of a martyr at the stake surrounded by flames, burned without being consumed. She began to talk, of casual, healing things.

"Some people called this afternoon," she said. "Mrs. Harry Murr, bulging with questions she wanted to ask and didn't quite dare. And Mrs. Furness brought Miss Glen. You could see her memorizing every stick of furniture, every picture on the walls, to use in her next novel."

The girl cried: "Mother, don't! How can you stand it?"

"And that young professor, Mr. Brace, dropped in." Mrs. Sentry persisted. "He took mother and Barbara to town."

"You're driving me crazy!"

Mrs. Sentry sighed wearily, surrendering. "I'm sorry about Neil, Mary. Yet—if he couldn't—stand the gas, isn't it a good thing to know?"

"No it isn't!" Mary cried. "What does that matter, if you love a man? What does it matter if he's weak, a sniveling coward, a drunkard, a thief?" Her eyes widened. "Even a murderer," she whispered. "You go on loving him just the same."

And she cried: "Oh, why is love so deep a part of women, mother? Why can't we be reasonable, sensible?" She spat the word. "Like men!"

And suddenly, seeing the older woman's face, she stopped, said then curtly: "Good night! I'm going to bed." The still room ached when she was gone.

When Mrs. Sentry came downstairs in the morning, Mary had departed, leaving no message; and the older woman felt a deep concern that was half despair.

But she hid it from Phil. They stayed at home, together and yet each one alone. Phil wondered whether his mother knew that the Grand Jury might act today; he thought of a group of strange men, in a secret room somewhere, hearing evidence against his father, and trembled as though he were ill. He thought his mother might suggest that they go again to see his father, and knew that he himself had no strength to face the older man and to pretend he did not know what he did know. But his mother did not make the suggestion; and after lunch they drove in to see old Mrs. Sentry, and heard newsboys shouting the name of Sentry, and Mrs. Sentry shivered at last and said with a weary smile:

"I think we'd better stay at home hereafter, Phil."

On the homeward way—Barbara returned with them—they heard newsboys calling late editions, and one bawling youngster jumped on the running-board when they stopped for a traffic light to thrust a paper before their eyes. A headline, inches high, "Sentry Indicted," Mrs. Sentry closed her eyes, and the light changed, and the car leaped ahead.

At home a knot of people scattered from the entrance to the drive, gaped at them as they drove in. Phil saw that one woman had broken off a branch of rhododendron, and he thought bitterly: For a souvenir!

Indoors, Barbara asked in a shaken whisper, "Mother, what does 'indicted' mean?"

Mrs. Sentry said, "Hush, darling!" And she asked, "Do you know where Mary is, whether she'll be home to dinner?" She felt cold as iron. Barbara shook her head.

"I think Mary's rotten!" Phil said angrily. "We've got to—stick together!"

"She's pretty unhappy, Phil."

She tried to tell herself: He did not do it! Of course, he had lied to her about the time, that night, knowing she was too sleepy to recognize his lie; but naturally he would lie, after that dreadful moment at the office when he found the dead girl. Found her dead! Mrs. Sentry clung to that thought stubbornly, insisting to herself that Arthur did find the girl dead as he had told her, refusing to remember the panic in his eyes, refusing to remember his tone when he reiterated his assertion that Miss Wines was dead before he found her. Found her dead, he said; and was afraid, and left her and came skulking home.

And Mrs. Sentry hoped suddenly that he would not tell the District Attorney that story of chance discovery and craven flight. Anything was better than that shame. She thought that if he did not speak they might find some woman—any woman—to swear that he had been with her during the hours when the murder occurred. That crime at least would be robust, masculine; not weakly cowardly . . .

But of course anything, any story true or false that could be made credible, was better than to see him convicted of murder. If that happened, she could never lift her head again. The pride she lived by was worth fighting for. Even with lies!

Linda came in as they finished dinner, and Mrs. Sentry welcomed her, and proposed a rubber of bridge. She clung to Linda's friendly loyalty. Linda agreed; but Barbara would not:

"I'm sorry," she said, trying to smile. "I'm afraid this is my evening for—letting go." Her tones were tremulously brave. "If you don't mind, I think I'll slip off by myself and cry for a while."

She darted away. Phil would have followed her, but Linda said softly: "No, Phil. Let her go!"

They heard Barbara's door close, upstairs. Mrs. Sentry rose and they went into the living-room, and talk ran somehow, and a little after nine, a car grated on the drive.

It was Mary. She came in without laying aside her hat. Mrs. Sentry realized that the car had not gone away, and she was cold with fear of what Mary would say. The girl was flushed. Mrs. Sentry saw, incredulously, that she had been drinking. When Mary spoke, her tones were louder than usual, harsh, defiant.

She said to Linda, curtly, "This is a family council, Linda." She added carelessly, "Oh, stay if you like, of course."

Phil protested: "Hey, Mary, don't talk like that! What's the matter with you?" He exclaimed, "You're drunk!"

She laughed derisively. "If I'm not it's not for lack of trying." And she asked Linda: "Going? All ashore that's going ashore! The ship's sinking!"

Linda said quietly: "No, Mary. I'll stay."

Mrs. Sentry felt desperately that she must speak, must do something. Her heart was full of a great compassion; but old habit of repression bound her tongue. "Mary, you're not yourself!" she said sternly.

"Myself?" Mary laughed in a shrill way. "Myself? Who am I? Who are you? Who are any of us?" And she said furiously: "Oh, I thought I knew! I thought we were so secure, and settled, and decent, and good." Her laughter rang maddeningly. "Decent? Good? No decent, good people will ever speak to us now."

"Mary!"

Sensitive Springs Spun From Quartz; Tiny Threads Give Precise Measurement

Quartz, which looks like glass and is a sort of glass, is the last material most of us would use to make a spring. But the scientists in the General Research laboratories find nothing but quartz will do for springs in making precise measurements, says a writer in the New York Times.

Steel springs rust; quartz springs don't. Steel springs are affected by changes in humidity; quartz springs are not. Steel springs begin to lose their temper at about 250 degrees Centigrade (482 degrees Fahrenheit); quartz springs never lose their temper except at temperatures not attained in ordinary practice.

A quartz spring has a sensitivity of one milligram. In other words, it can detect a difference of weight as little as one 28,350th of an ounce. And it always snaps back, after stretching, to exactly the original point of rest.

Suppose it becomes necessary to measure the amount of moisture absorbed by cotton or cellulose. The cotton is suspended at one end of the spring and the weight of the sample determined by the stretch of the spring. By introducing more and more water at varying pressures it becomes possible to determine just how much moisture cotton can absorb.

Making a quartz thread is something of a fine art. The first step is to spin a fine thread no more than six one-thousandths of an inch in diameter. This is done by heating a fused quartz rod to more than 3,000 degrees Fahrenheit, and pulling threads from the rod. The threads are measured by calipers. All within a quarter of a mil of the desired six-mil size are saved. (A mil is a unit used to measure the diameter of a wire. It is equivalent to a thousandth of an inch.)

The final step is to place the thread in a long brass trough which leads to a mandrel (technical term for a drum of the right diameter). As it passes over the mandrel the thread is heated to 1,800 degrees Fahrenheit. The mandrel makes two revolutions a minute. After cooling, the coils are ready for use.

Castle of Merry Old Soul
At the old Roman town of Colchester, in Essex, England, tradition places the castle of "Old King Cole" of the nursery rhyme. Many visit the Eleventh century castle because it has the largest keep of any castle in England.

Youth Passes
Too Rapidly;
Use It Well!

By PATRICIA LINDSAY
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

LITTLE sister at the age of three loves to wear mother's high-heeled shoes and powder her nose. A few years later she wants her curls "done up" or cut short like big sister's. When she is entering her teen age she is so eager to be an adult that she gets unruly, and causes herself, and those around her, a lot of trouble.

Are you a little sister? Why do you suddenly want to be old? It's no crime to be young! Youth is glorious—being young is thrilling, if you will just take it in your stride, at the pace you should.

You think mother and daddy are old meanies for keeping you away from some parties and asking you to get home early from others. You get simply furious when mother insists on tow heels and clothes which you think of too sweet, simple and girlish. Big brother is a downright nuisance when he suggests quietly that you lay off heavy make-up and putting in dark corners, "for else."

"Oh," you wail, "will they ever let me grow up!"

Of course they will, sister, just as quickly as you convince them that you are not a reckless, heady little tadpole, so eager for adult life that you are missing today. They know the pitfalls, and because they love you, and so want to be proud of you, they seem over-cautious when they try to steer you clear of them. Why don't you help a bit?

Quit hating the fact that you are still young.

Quit hating the fact that you are still young. Glory in being your age and live each day joyously. Delight in your clubs, your frivolous parties, your many privileges—all yours because you are young! And every minute, sister, cherish and protect your fresh loveliness, for once you lose it, or mar it, you can never recapture it!

These Things Are Essential

Begin right now keeping yourself healthy and lovely. Eight or nine, even ten, hours of sleep each night (see why mother wants you home early?). Use little make-up, for young skins have a definite beauty which should not be covered. A rosy lipstick, a speck of good powder. No mascara, eye-brow pencil, rouge. Why hide that pixie allure with cosmetics meant for fading beauty? (Isn't big brother right after all?) Let your skin breathe unhampered, and keep your cheeks and mouth rushing with color by exercising. Walk in low-heeled shoes whenever you can to develop true and glorious posture, and eat your meals regularly with few sweets on the side!

Don't be stubborn about your clothes. Simple sports frocks for day wear, full-skirted gowns (never too revealing) for evening.

Instead of pouting, and trading against proper restrictions, spend those moments keeping yourself fresh as a daisy, and nicely groomed with hair brushed to shining glory and your nails manicured.

And above all, my dear, live proudly! Don't cheapen yourself through thoughtless acts (like petting indiscriminately) even though you see other girls being foolish! A few years from now when Prince Charming comes along you will be awfully glad you didn't!

HINT-OF-THE-DAY

In your own home are materials for bath which beautify and invigorate. A pound of sea salt, two cups of starch, oatmeal, bran, almond meal or a small package of baking soda thrown into the tub are of great benefit in relaxing the nerves and reviving the spirits. If you have no shower under which to rinse, then put the meal in small cheesecloth bags which you can make yourself. A quarter of a pound each of oatmeal and almond meal mixed is a good combination. Scent your bath if you wish with any scent you have on hand.

BILL-OF-FARE

ONLY the stoutest heart enters a restaurant and proceeds to order filet of beef, lobster Thermidor, or even ham-and-eggs without first consulting the menu-card. For here are suggestions to set the taste-buds a-queer . . . and prices plainly marked.

Shopping for merchandise can be pleasantly conducted in the same manner. The advertising columns are in effect a bill-of-fare, with prices that protect as a bill-of-rights. In the leisure of your home, at the breakfast-table, you may check and choose before starting to town.

And what a varied bill-of-fare it is! Everything your heart may desire, your home may require, and your budget may permit. Presented in a readable and interesting fashion. Sponsored by a merchant whose name you know, whose services you have come to rely upon.

Get the advertising-reading habit. It saves time, temper, and shoe-leather, to say nothing of your hard-earned cash. The advertiser's word is as good as his bond. On no other basis could he hope to hold your custom.

Comments

Charlie Madrid, speaker at the Republican rally last Monday night had a good deal to say about the Democratic Steam Roller. Well, the Republicans can't get up any "Steam," so of course, they can't "Roller" anything.

Hon. John E. Miles will be in Carrizozo and Capitan Tuesday, November 1st, in company with other Demo-State speakers.

Mrs. Margaret Price Hood, of Las Cruces, called at the News Office last Monday. Mrs. Hood was with Mrs. Philip Sanchez and Corona McWhirter, who spoke at the Republican Rally Monday night.

sions, education and other safe subjects, then figuratively, he wept over the opprobrious conduct of W. P. A. officials--which had disgraced the state--even as far off as Jacksonville, Fla. Maybe those W. P. A. officials thought they could hide successfully around one of those corners where Hoover had his chickens and his promises of prosperity hid in 1932.

Anyway people aren't quite so hungry in 1938 as they were in 1932, and won't listen to denunciations just because Republican speakers make them.

Charlie Madrid, Navajo Indian, was the star speaker for the Republicans Monday night. He is very fluent in both English and Spanish. Some way we got the impression that Charlie could have made just as capable a speech for the Democrats as he did for the Republicans.
