The following is a brief resume of the examinations to be given:

The Senior clerical test covers 10 stated mathematical problems which must be answered in 45 minutes.

The Junior clerical test covers 10 stated mathematical problems and two checking problems which must be answered in 34 minutes.

The stenographic examinations cover two articles of 270 words each, which will be dictated at the rate of 90 words per minute, ten minutes being allowed for the applicants to read their notes and then choose the article which they wish to transcribe, with 20 minutes with which to transcribe their notes.

The typist examination covers the transcription of an article for ten minutes and requires a minimum speed of 45 words per minute, such work being graded both on accuracy and speed.

To Feature New Mexico Pictures

Dear Sir:

You will be interested, we believe, in our decision to devote our entire photographic section in an early 1939 issue to photographs of New Mexico.

This is the first time Scribner's "Life in the United States" photographic department will feature a portfolio of pictures from just one state.

The photographs will be selected because of the sharpness with which they reflect facets of New Mexican life. There are no other regulations as to subject matter, however, nor are there any distinctions drawn between amateur and professional work. Any picture taken in New Mexico that has not been published in a major magazine will be acceptable. Glossy prints 8" x 10" are preferred.

Photographs should be sent to Scribner's Magazine, 570 Lexington Avenue, New York City, by December 1st. There is an award of ten dollars for each photograph that is published.

Very truly yours,
Harry O. Diamond,
Art Director.

Most Important Of Foods Is Milk

Utmost Care Taken in Bringing It to Table

By EDITH M. BARBER
 WHILE comparisons are seldom accurate, it is hardly going too far to say that among all our foods, milk is the most important. While no food is absolutely complete, milk scores high on account of its vitamin, mineral and protein content. It supplies also a form of sugar which is easily absorbed.

The utmost care in handling and preparing milk for markets is necessary in order that it may arrive in our kitchens uncontaminated. First of all, the cattle must be inspected so as to be sure that they are in healthy condition. Their quarters must be kept clean. The methods of milking must be particular and the milk itself must be cooled immediately. The farmer receives a bonus if his milk is very low in bacteria count and also if it has a large percentage of butter fat. Grade A milk contains a larger per cent of butter fat than does grade B milk and for this reason it has a richer flavor.

Milk-Vegetable Chowder.
 2 cups diced cooked vegetables
 1 small onion
 2 tablespoons butter
 1 quart milk
 Salt
 Pepper
 Chopped parsley or nutmeg
 Carrots, celery, turnips are diced and boiled together until soft. Chop the onion and cook in butter until yellow. Add cooked vegetables, vegetable stock, milk and seasoning. Heat, sprinkle with parsley or nutmeg and serve at once. The same recipe may be used for a cream soup by blending three tablespoons of flour with melted butter.

Chocolate Blanc Manger.
 3 squares chocolate
 1 cup milk
 1/2 cup sugar
 4 1/2 tablespoons cornstarch
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix the sugar, the cornstarch and the salt, add the remaining milk and stir until thoroughly blended.  1/2 cup sliced onions
 Butter
 Salt, pepper
 1 quart milk
 Put layer of potatoes in buttered baking dish, sprinkle with onions, dot with butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Repeat until potatoes are all used. Add milk. Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

"THERE'S no side to our family," writes Fran R., "so it just wouldn't make sense for us to go in for anything impressive in interior decoration, even if we could afford it. Besides a bunch of growing children would make ducks and drakes out of elaborate materials and pastel coverings. What we want is a friendly comfortable home with restful fine colors and furniture of good substantial design.

"For the first time in years we have a bit of spare money to put on the house, and we want to make it do as much as possible. The living room and dining room will get the main refurnishing. We will do over the walls and get new rugs and curtains for both rooms. The basic furniture will have to remain, but we will be able to buy a few incidental things. We'd like some extra small tables and a nice desk for the living room, and I thought a pair of good-looking armchairs for the head and foot of the dining table would pop up the set and they'd be handy since we have only six chairs—now. The questions are: what colors for walls, rugs, curtains, slip covers? These rooms are sunny and pleasant. I'd be very grateful for your help."

You're lucky that you can just about do what you like as far as colors are concerned. And don't apologize about not going in for the exotic or formal fads in decorating.

For your living and dining rooms, why not have the walls both painted white with ceilings in palest green. Use a flowered chintz at the windows with a white ground and a riotous pattern. For the floors, have two tone beige to brown rugs—both alike—in one of those new indistinct fern leaf designs. The sofa I'd slip cover in a green and beige striped material, a firm washable weave, and for the two chairs I'd choose a plainish green. Make new lamp shades out of stretched chintz (the same pattern as you have at the windows). In the dining room, the two new armchairs (an excellent idea, incidentally) would be best in green I think.

Little Accents That Brace Up a House.

Heloise has such a way with little accents around her house. She always keeps it looking so fresh and different by small inexpensive changes. Vases and flowers are of course a favorite way of doing that. Right now the putty-toned walls of her living room are aglow with the deep lavender tones of chrysanthemums in pewter bowls. While the dining room, with the same color walls, has masses of shaggy yellow chrysanthemums in copper jugs.

Her own bedroom, though, is where she really shines, because she feels freer here to be personal and try out nice notions. The last time I was over, she had just made a new petticoat for her dressing table—this time a light blue pleated linen skirt with big white buttons around the top. Picture that in a room with white walls and the pal-est blue ceiling. The curtains are sheer white muslin with valances of pleated blue linen with the same big white buttons across the top. The bedspread and chairs are in a blue and lavender striped material and the rug is really lovely—an all-over floral carpet. Another new touch was the screen which was covered in handsome floral medallion wall paper in clear soft colors on a white ground.

"Oh, that screen is reincarnated every year," Heloise explained. "Sometimes I use it down in the front hall covered with a formal scenic paper. Sometimes it goes in the living room covered in the cretonne I've got on the sofa.

"But, do you know, I think that a fairly frequent change of pictures does about as much as anything to keep a room out of a rut. Like everybody else, I have a lot more family photographs than I have room for—well, I have some really nice frames, so I rotate the pictures. That way there's always something worth looking at on the walls."

Crochet This Set and Tot Will Be Delighted

She'll be proud as a peacock to wear this set so why not delight her with it? Made of sport yarn, it's mainly single crochet (which gives it a firm body) with picots for decoration. The muff is a combined purse and muff—very grown-up and -stylish! Pattern 6224 contains instructions for making the set shown; illustrations of it and of stitches used; materials required.

To obtain this pattern, send 15 cents in stamps or coins (coins preferred) to the Sewing Circle, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. 14th St., New York, N. Y.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—G. S. Messersmith, assistant secretary of state, consul general in Berlin when Hitler rose to power, used to be a lot more optimistic about Germany settling down to normal trade intercourse than he appears to be now. He predicted that "evolution" would soon follow revolution and urged the world to give Germany a chance to work through a period of stress and confusion. Today he is concerned about "world law and order" in trade intercourse, and says, "We ought to be prepared to protect our interests wherever they may be attacked." German barter activities, particularly in South America, seem to be worrying the traders.

Widely experienced and minutely informed in foreign trade, Mr. Messersmith has been an evangel of Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade policies. His zeal in this is not lessened, but he reveals deep concern over the subordination of the rights of business and property "to the will of individual leaders or nations for expansion and domination."

This writer has just obtained from a friend, an economist returning from Germany, his first close-up of what Dr. Walther Funk, German minister of economics, and his oh-very-hunch-man, Hjalmar Schacht, are doing with their new militarized economics. My informant, who wrote books about the old, mellow, beery, bassoon Germany, had many old friends there and was steered right into the Reichelhouse. According to him, the new German formula is as revolutionary as communism. Every atom of surplus wealth is sluiced into the "dynamics" of expansion, and the Reich outreach is based on jug-handled trade relations which mean commercial subjugation for any short-enders who try to do business with it.

WE REGRET the lack of space to reprint here some merry little poems, such as "The Bird and the Burdock," and "The Tern and the Turnip," by

The Debanker Of Death Ray Goes Poetic

Professor Robert W. Wood of Johns Hopkins, who recently honored by the British Royal society for his work in experimental physics. He tossed off a book of them, along with whimsical drawings, in between takes of "Fluorescence and Magnetic Rotation Spectra of Sodium Vapor and Their Analysis."

He is one of this department's favorite scientific debankers. One of his high scores here was banishing the death-ray bogey—pertinent just now in view of our sensitiveness to Martian attack. In this connection, the British government has good reason to give him a medal. An inventor was demonstrating his death ray to British war office representatives at Dawn. He focused the ray on a cow in a meadow 200 yards away and threw a switch. The cow flopped, dead as a mackerel. The inventor collected and departed. Then they found the cow's feet wired to an underground circuit, connected with the inventor's switch.

Professor Wood, by scientific demonstrations, put the quietus on all death rays and offered to stand up against any of them. He invented tear gas for the Allies in the World war, developed a chemical eye by which "we can see and the enemy can't," and contributed greatly to the development of instruments of precision and spectroscopic research. He was educated at Harvard and the University of Berlin.

THE humanities, like sports and diplomacy, are becoming considerably scrambled these days. Professor Harry D. Gideonse, just taking over as head of Barnard college's department of social sciences, has been up to his ears all his life in dry-as-dust economics, and now, in his first work-out before the undergraduates, he swings on swing as "musical Hitlerism." He says, with the current divorce of reason and emotion, and with the latter going haywire, some "man on horseback" is apt to get us.

Professor Gideonse is of Dutch birth. He is a canny and cagey thinker, the author of several books on world economics and finance, and a sharp and precise critic of erratic trends of our civilization.

He is 37 years old, born in Rotterdam, here at the age of four, educated at Columbia and the University of Geneva, a former teacher of economics at Columbia, Barnard, Rutgers and the University of Chicago.

Coats of Smart Wools Call For Chic Felt or Fur Hats

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE coat theme is teeming with interest this season. The array of fetching models turned out by coat-inspired style creators is making front-page fashion news, and no secret as to the reason why. It is the irresistible new woollens brought out this season that sling challenge to the designer. With such grand tweeds in colors superb, such gorgeous plaids and stripes, such sterling fleece-soft wool monotonies, together with a list unending of intriguing novelty weaves, the reaction could be none other than just one stunning coat after another.

The outstanding feature about this season's coats is their extreme versatility. It matters not whether you are tall or short, slim or given to unwanted curves, whether your hair is piled high on your head in latest approved manner, or whether it defiantly retains its youthful bob, somewhere in the vast model displays you are sure to find your coat affinity awaiting you.

Speaking in general of the new coats, in casual as well as dressy types unfurred models vie with fur-trimmed styles. Then, too, sleeves play a spectacular role.

Color is also newly important. Coats in soft wool fleeces or shetland tweeds are lovely in deep grapevine, teal blue, deep olive green, and in natural beige.

Unfurred coats are in soft textured monotone woollens such as fleeces, shetlands, camel's hair weaves and tweeds. They are cut on simple but clever lines with accent on fabric and color. See the attractive model centered in the group illustrated. Here is the type so well liked this season, in that it invites the woman who prefers to do so, to add her own fur touches such as a separate fur scarf, or a muff to match the fur on her hat. Note that the hat worn with the coat pictured is worked with Persian lamb. A muff of same will look ever so "ritzzy" later on. The squared box lines of this soft fleecy coat are accented by the high collar line and by stitching detail at the high straight-across shoulder yoke and at the squared shoulders.

Sheared beaver and nutria are popular trimming furs this season. The model to the left has a brown nutria collar, rolled high at the back. It is tailored of fleecy wool in natural beige. The big flap pockets and the tailored belt are chic details.

Among the smartest and newest appearing on the style horizon is the coat of dressy type that has a swing skirt as you see pictured to the right. This stylish unfurred coat for town or campus wear is in natural beige shetland tweed. It flares to a wide hemline from the fitted waistline accented by a broad suede belt in deep brown.

And now about the right hat with the right coat. No matter how smart and flattering your coat may be, unless it be topped with the hat that bespeaks unerring taste, you will fall short of making the grade according to the ideals of high-fashion. Which is why we are showing two important hats in the insets, that insure good style. These voguish models by Harryson present two distinct and leading types. As the season advances tall crowns grow taller. The hat inset to the right has the desired sophisticated air about its tall peaked crown. Of gray slate felt, it is effectively trimmed with laurel green ribbon. The other attractive hat savors of the "English walking hat," a type which is quite the rage this season. It is of supple felt in graystone with wine ribbon trim, the newest thing in color being gray accented with bright color touches.

Diamond Pleated

A new achievement in pleating—diamond pleating! This fanciful pleating offers a delightful change from the usual order of either side, box, sunburst or fan pleating with which most of us are familiar. This very attractive dress is fashioned of brown all-silk satin. The jaunty velveteen jacket complements the dress perfectly. The turban worn with it describes the new forward movement that characterizes many of the newer millinery creations.

New Star Appears In Style Horizon

When you read about the new monastic silhouette as you no doubt will, since it is a new and highly important star arising in the style firmament, perhaps it will add interest to become acquainted in advance with outstanding features of this significant trend.

Explaining briefly, the basic idea is a one-piece dress (no seaming at the waistline) with the small waist contour achieved via the belt or girdle or as adjusted by the wearer. Indications are that the influence of the one-piece cut (in many instances a bias cut) will be widely reflected in many types of garments, notably day and evening dresses, coats, and costume tunics.

Veils on Hats Is New Fashion Note

Hats that are completely swathed with veils, not only solve the problem of how to hold the tiny chapeaux on sleek heads, but contribute a quaint note to autumn millinery.

Those old-fashioned double widths of veiling such as grandmother wore when she went motoring many years ago are utilized for these hat decorations.

Often the veil is draped over the entire hat and ties under the chin.

Persians Inspire Coats

There are many interesting coats inspired by old Persian documents. Some of them are braided or embroidered in some fashion and all of them flare.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

Feed Adolescent Correctly or Tragic Consequences May Result, Warns C. Houston Goudiss; Teeth Must Receive Special Consideration

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

OFFHAND, it may seem as if there could be very little connection between a deficient diet during adolescence and painful childbirth in later years. Yet it has been demonstrated clinically that there is a definite link. It has likewise been determined that the kind of food which is fed adolescents has a significant and far-reaching influence upon their teeth in later life, and in the case of girls, upon the teeth of their children when they in turn become mothers.

Preparation for Parenthood

Adolescence is a difficult period at best. And if a girl takes an unbalanced diet at this time, the result may be an unstable nervous system, poor physical development, lowered vitality and inability to fight off infections. This lack of strong resistance may open the way to dental disease and to a variety of other serious infections as well.

It has also been established that if a girl is poorly nourished during these years of rapid development, there may not be the slightest indication of that fact until she first becomes an expectant mother. Then she will pay for her mother's lack of nutrition knowledge.

Results of Calcium Deficiency

If her diet has been deficient in calcium, for example, her pelvic bones may be imperfectly developed, so that she suffers unnecessarily during the birth of her child. And if liberal amounts of calcium have not been stored in her body, she may be called upon to make needless sacrifices from her own body in the interests of her child. It is well known that if an expectant mother's diet is not abundantly supplied with calcium, the substance will be withdrawn from her own bones and teeth in an effort to meet the needs of the developing child.

An Aid to Dental Health

For although expectant mothers are not always aware of this important fact, it is true that the first or "baby" teeth are developed within the jaw during prenatal life, and the foundations for the second set are also laid at this time.

Unless the expectant mother's diet is very generously supplied with calcium, so as to allow adequate amounts for the baby's teeth and bones, nature will endeavor to meet the child's requirements by sacrificing calcium from the mother's own body. If she has no adequate reserve, then she may be forced to lose "a tooth for every child," or suffer even more serious dental ills.

Calcium-Rich Foods Required

Leading nutrition authorities hold that the average American diet is more deficient in calcium, perhaps, than in any other single nutrient. This is especially likely to be the case in the diet of the adolescent. For at that time, boys develop prodigious appetites and a tremendous capacity for carbohydrates or energy-producing foods, while girls become extremely finicky. Either they do not take enough food at meals, or they tend to eat too many rich mixtures between meals. As a result, the diet of both boys and girls is likely to contain an abundance of meat, fish, highly milled cereals and other refined foods, with inadequate amounts of the foods rich in calcium.

The Adolescent's Diet

To balance the diet properly, these necessary protein and energy foods should be supplemented by milk and cheese which are rich in calcium; by green leafy vegetables which are also a good source; by eggs and fruits, valued for their minerals and vitamins; and by bulky foods which supply sufficient cellulose to help promote regular health habits.

Mothers of adolescent children should make a conscientious and determined effort to feed them a diet rich in calcium and vitamins A, C and D—the substances required, especially, for maintaining sound, healthy teeth. If milk and succulent fruits and vegetables figure prominently in the daily menus of the adolescent girl, they will go a long way toward helping to correct the "choosy" attitude toward food from which many older children suffer.

And if careful attention to diet is coupled with careful attention to sound hygienic habits, the health of our teen-age boys and girls will be greatly improved, and they will be more adequately prepared to assume the duties of parenthood.

Correct Dental Hygiene

It is vitally important that the proper care be given to the teeth and mouth. But it is quite unlikely that a correct routine will be followed unless mothers offer tactful advice and suggestions very frequently. For while the tiny child has his teeth brushed for him, and the young school child has his tooth-brushing ritual supervised, too often the adolescent is left to his own devices in this respect. That is a great mistake, as adolescents are sometimes careless in the care of their teeth.

Mothers must see to it that there are two toothbrushes, one for night and one for morning, so that it is never necessary to use a soggy brush. They must watch when the supply of tooth paste or powder runs low, and see that it is replaced. For it is surprising how few children can be persuaded to brush their teeth properly without an agreeable dentifrice! Mothers should take care to choose a dentifrice that will preserve or restore luster in the teeth. For adolescents are extremely sensitive about their appearance and they must not be allowed to permit dingy teeth to spoil their smiles.

If mothers will feed their adolescents a correct diet and supervise their daily dental care, the coming generation will not only be more attractive to look at but should enjoy more abundant health.

Weather during October was favorable for maturing and harvesting of crops both on irrigated and dry land farms

Damage from frost during the past month was very light except in high altitudes. The first killing frost for most crops was received after November 1. Cotton is being picked under favorable conditions with yields about like those of last year. Pastures and ranges are in excellent condition and livestock is entering the winter in good flesh and with an ample amount of feed for the coming winter, according to the monthly crop report issued by Fred Daniels, Agricultural Statistician for the United States Department of Agriculture.

CORN: The 1938 corn production is estimated at 2,702,000 bushels which compares with 2,740,000 bushels in 1937 and 2,909,000 bushels for the 10-year (1927-36) average. The November 1 indicated yield per acre is 14.0 bushels as compared with 13.5 for last year and 13.7 for the 10-year (1927-36) average. Very favorable weather during October aided materially in increasing the grain yield and improving the quality of corn.

GRAIN SORGHUMS: The grain sorghum crop is estimated at 3,940,000 bushels which compares with 4,500,000 harvested in 1937. The indicated yield per acre this year is 10.0 bushels which compared with 12.0 in 1937. The unusually mild fall weather has permitted the crop to mature nicely with the exception of sorghums which were planted late in the spring and were damaged somewhat by the dry summer weather in August.

BEANS: The bean crop as of November 1 was estimated at 534,000 bags which compared with 612,000 harvested last year and 530,000 for the 10-year (1927-36) average. The 10-year average yield per acre is 335 pounds for New Mexico. The decrease in production this year is largely accounted for by late plantings because of a cold dry spring and dry hot weather during August.

FRUIT CROPS: The total apple crop is estimated at 547,000 bushels which is about half the production in 1937 of 1,132,000 bushels. The 10-year average production was 760,000 bushels. Late spring frosts accounted for heavy damages in apple growing communities. The pear crop is estimated at 27,000 bushels which compares with 59,000 in 1937. The grape crop is estimated at 1,240,000 tons which compares with 1,180,000 tons in 1937 and 983,000 tons for the 10-year (1927-39) average.

Looking 'Round the Corner

Government economists are optimistic with assurances that the country is going ahead on the road to recovery. Predictions are that production will reach the 1937 level by the time that 1938 fades into the New Year of 1939. Private industrialists agree in one important particular, which is that the shelves and the stocks on hand--called inventories--are down. This situation indicates that employment and production will increase. With the support of the Government spending next year will likely be a "good year." That looks reasonable.

The Livestock Situation

By J. A. McNaughton

Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, Nov. 23.—There is a sharp reduction in the number of cattle on feed in the far western states, according to estimates made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. This is in contrast with the situation a year ago, when numbers of cattle on feed were very large, California and Arizona feedlots on December 1, 1937, accounting for around 250,000 cattle. While trade estimates vary to some extent, well informed sources at the Stock Yards are inclined to place the present numbers at not to exceed 50 to 60 per cent of a year ago.

The better grades of grain-fed steers are becoming scarce in the Los Angeles trade area, a situation which is accountable for somewhat higher prices on the Los Angeles market. However, the market situation during 1938 has not encouraged the finishing of steers. Prices of medium grades of grass and shortfed steers have been very little below market values of well-finished steers, with the result that feeders have not felt justified in putting concentrates into their steers. Everyone hopes that this situation will be remedied, for the cattle feeding business is of tremendous economic importance to western stockmen and farmers. It is safe to assume that cattle feeders a year ago were utilizing western grown hay, grain and other concentrates to the tune of around $50,000 a day a year ago; probably not more than half that amount is being fed at this time.

Cattle slaughter in California is holding up fairly well, the total for the first nine months under official inspection being 808,000 against 821,000 for the same period in 1937, and 665,000 for the five-year average, 1932 to 1936. In the United States as a whole, cattle slaughter for the first ten months of 1938, according to Federal meat inspection figures, was 8,161,000 against 8,884,000 during the same period in 1937 and 8,908,000 in 1936—the latter the largest cattle slaughter on record in the United States. So it will be seen that the American people, and Californians as well, are eating a more than normal volume of beef.

Hog slaughter in California is 113 per cent of 1937, sheep and lamb slaughter, 102 per cent of a year ago, and calf slaughter 95 per cent of a year ago. Hog slaughter for the first nine months of 1938 at 1,090,000 head is only 3,000 head below the 1932-36 five-year average, indicating that hog production is rapidly approaching normal in California. In the United States as a whole, hog slaughter under Federal inspection for the first ten months of 1938 at 27,926,000 compares with 24,390,000 a year ago, only 20,759,000 three years ago, and 38,193,000 five years ago.

Source of Salt In Ground Water

"Geology and ground-water conditions of the Pecos River Valley in the vicinity of Laguna Grande, de la Sal, New Mexico, with special reference to the salt content of the river water," is the title of a paper, by Thomas W. Robinson and Walter B. Lang that has been released by the Geological Survey, United States Department of the Interior. The investigation upon which this report is based was conducted in cooperation with the State Engineer of New Mexico. The report has not been published, but typewritten copies have been filed for public inspection in the offices of the Geological Survey in Washington, D. C., and Albuquerque, New Mexico, and in the office of the State Engineer in Santa Fe. The data assembled in the course of the investigation are given as an appendix to the report. A copy of this appendix is open to public inspection in the office of the Geological Survey in Albuquerque.

The investigation has led to the following conclusions: - A body of brine consisting of a concentrated solution of sodium chloride occurs at the base of the Rustler formation and just above the extensive deposit of salt known as the Salado halite. The beds containing the brine extend from some locality north of Laguna Grande de la Sal to the vicinity of the Malaga Bend, of the Pecos river. The brine is under artesian pressure and has in general a southward hydraulic gradient. Below Fishing Rock, at the Malaga Bend, the artesian pressure is sufficient to raise the brine above the level of the river at normal stages, and as the confining bed in this vicinity is thin and incompetent, salt water is percolating upward and entering the Pecos river at and near the Malaga Bend.

It is believed that the salt of the brine horizon is derived chiefly from the deposit of salt in the underlying Salado halite. The available evidence points to the

Substitute Is Devised for Chinese Tung Oil

Buffalo.—A substitute for the famous quick-drying Chinese tung oil has been discovered by Dr. Alexander Schwarzman, Buffalo research chemist.

Dr. Schwarzman says that castor oil, a non-drying oil, can be altered by some of its properties and made to do the work of tung oil, which has become scarce. It is produced in China's Yangtze valley, center of the current war zone.

A huge demand already exists for the "Synthetic A" oil, because hundreds of industries require an efficient drying oil. Prior to the Sino-Japanese conflict, China exported 300,000 barrels of tung oil annually.

The new oil is a "scientific and economic achievement, since it can be produced from castor oil cheaper than China wood oil can be obtained," Schwarzman says. The synthetic oil already is in production with carload shipments being sent to all parts of the nation.

America Prepares for Fateful 'M-Day' With Prayer That It May Never Come

Industrial and Military Mobilization Plans Being Perfecting Against Day of Invasion.

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

It can't happen here — but then again, it might. In 1938 Uncle Sam casts a suspecting glance across the waters that separate him from Europe and Asia, just wondering. Will another World war break out? Will the United States be asked to defend South America from invasion? Indeed, will the United States herself be invaded?

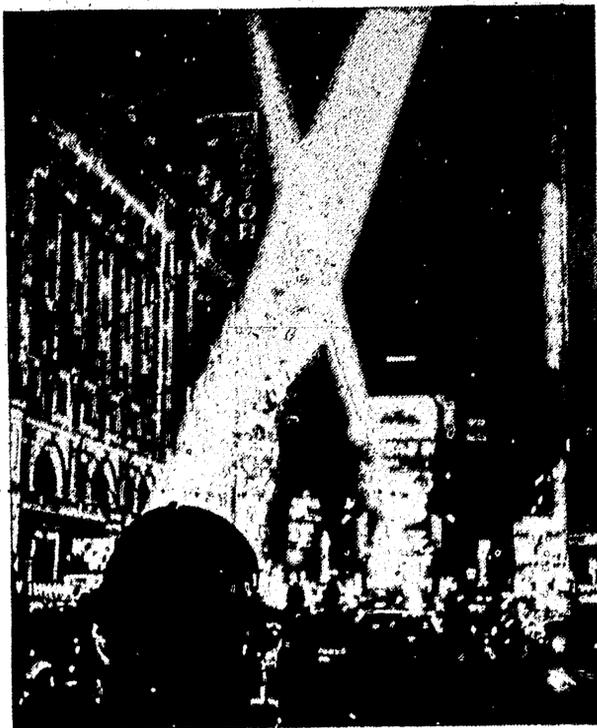

Unpleasant thoughts, all of them, but the "peace" treaty of Munich and Japan's successful conquest of the Far East have convinced most Americans that the Boy Scout motto, "Be prepared," is a good national motto. Since October 1 the government has inaugurated a far-flung program for military and economic mobilization, protection against what the army chiefs call "M-Day."

An early as last winter, congress appropriated funds for expanding our army, partly the result of Gen. Malm Craig's insistence that national defenses be repaired before he returns next year from his post as chief of staff. This is the third year of record army expenditures, the 1938 outlay being $42,000,000. Next year's program will cost an estimated $50,000,000, plus high appropriations likely for navy and air expansion, economic and civilian defense.

Guard Against Uprising.

M-Day may never come, and surely the army cannot predict what part of the nation it would be called upon to defend. Listed in order of their probability, the four causes of American mobilization are (1) civil uprising on the mainland of the United States, (2) war provoked in South America by fascist expansion; (3) any war in Europe or Asia into which the United States might be drawn; and (4) invasion of the United States mainland.

Though most M-Day preparations are naturally secret, it is known that the nation is divided into a large number of possible battle zones, with highways, airplane landing fields and fighting equipment already designated in advance. Depending on which of the four above emergencies the army and navy might be called upon to meet, planes, fleet and all branches of the army are being trained to co-ordinate their movements. One of General Craig's ambitions is to increase our standing army, but not much over the present 165,000 troops. More important to him is a well-trained, well-equipped reserve army. Thus almost overnight it is hoped to mobilize 400,000 men in an emergency. These would include the standing army, 75,000 national reservists and the national guard. Though small, this force could repel an invader four months while an additional million men were being trained behind the trenches.

Air Corps Powerful.

The army air corps now has 1,250 planes, with 1,650 on order and an additional 2,329 slated for completion before 1940. This will place the United States in an enviable air power position, since our bombing planes are already superior to those of most nations. On the infantry side, the army hopes to increase tank regiments and modernize fighting tactics. Only 2 of the 14 cavalry regiments are now mechanized, and field artillery equipment is deficient.

But with sufficient time and large appropriations the cavalry and field artillery handicaps can be overcome.

M-Day preparations place heavy emphasis on industrial mobilization. Directed by Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war, the army has located 10,000 factory owners who will turn over their plants to manufacture war necessities at a moment's notice. With a $10,000,000 appropriation, the army is now placing "educational orders" with these factories and perfecting dies and machinery which will be supplied to processors in the event of emergency. For example, typewriter factories would begin making rifle sights, and beer can machinery would make bomb cases.

Secretary Johnson is also directing plans for mobilization of electricity. Recently announced is a $2,000,000,000 expansion plan for private utility companies, guaranteeing that the nation will have sufficient reserve power on M-Day. There is some talk of connecting all the nation's electric lines.

Plan Rail Defenses.

Since railroads would be a vital factor on M-Day, the government is encouraging carriers to expand their lines. This problem was recently brought to a head by the carriers' plea for a 15 per cent wage reduction. Although the request was denied, it is likely that next winter's congress will vote subsidies to help railroads lay new track and build more powerful equipment.

Less noticeable are M-Day plans to train substitute workers who will replace regular factory workers called to the front trenches. The government would also regulate prices to prevent profiteering, control wages and hours and take other steps to keep the country running smoothly behind its fighting army.

Such preparations require money, and although abnormally large army and navy budgets have heretofore been met out of regular government income, it is just possible that special steps will be taken to meet the new requirements. Bernard Baruch, financier and chairman of the old war industries board of 1917, made news a few weeks ago by speaking emphatically about the United States' responsibility for Western hemisphere integrity. Advocating a huge rearmament program, he suggested that it might have to be financed with a "one shot" income tax. This would be a bitter pill, not only for the public but for congress as well. Yet Mr. Baruch claims we need a two-ocean navy, a standing army of 400,000 men and a greatly increased air force. He cites figures to show our inferiority to German and Italian military preparations.

And the amazing result is that most of America agrees with him. Whereas five years ago this suggestion would have been condemned, the recent developments in Asia and Europe are making America defense-conscious. Incidentally, it is hoped that such larger rearmament expenditures will absorb a large part of the nation's unemployed, thereby reducing relief rolls and encouraging economic recovery.

Perhaps M-Day can't happen here, but talk to a Londoner or Parisian who shuddered through the German-Czech crisis and the possibility becomes starkly realistic. While no American wishes to be a war-monger, we cannot help consider the awful consequences of a combined Italian-German-Japanese invasion into the Western hemisphere. So long as this unwelcome possibility exists it would be comforting to know that America is prepared against it.

Healthy Mind Will Preserve Facial Beauty

By PATRICIA LINDSAY
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

A HEALTHY, clear thinking, energetic mind is not only the nucleus of beauty but it is the nucleus of a radiant happy life!

Had I space to quote famous authorities I could convince you that destructive thoughts, or an undisciplined mind, can rob a woman of her health and destroy her happiness.

As you think, your face and eyes express your thoughts. Catch a glimpse of yourself in a mirror as you converse with a friend. Notice how your eyes sparkle and your lips turn upward when you speak gaily. See how quickly a frown appears and your eyes dim when you talk of sorrow or feel sad. Your lips narrow and your eyes partly close when you give vent to anger or gossip maliciously. Would you have believed it?

Do you know that every unworthy thought registers on your face? Haven't you seen women whose countenances reveal their habitual thoughts of malice, selfishness, jealousy? Of course you have. Over-indulgence of miserable traits have robbed them of their beauty and happiness.

Don't Be A Neurotic

Sick minds, registered on faces, ward off all human sympathy and love.

So don't be a neurotic. Keep your mind active, free, and in order. It is the receiving and sending instrument of your entire body. Let it receive wholesome, pleasant messages. Let it send wholesome, pleasant dictations. You know the old

Your face reflects your thoughts adage that "Beauty comes from within"—well it does, from within your mind!

If you have been in the habit of brooding, of becoming easily hurt at people's thoughtless words or actions, strive to overcome those tendencies. Ignore hurts and discouragements. Realize that brooding—or worrying—is an insidious form of illness which can destroy a lot you hold dear.

Don't be a woman consumed with self-pity. Don't be a girl consumed with self-pity. Every person has a tough time in life. Every person has problems and hurdles to leap. No life is without sorrow nor is any life without joy! Take life as it comes. Keep yourself healthy and let your mind create beauty!

HINT-OF-THE-DAY

The intelligent way to go about changing the style of your hairdress is to sit before your mirror after you have given your hair a thorough brushing away from the scalp. Comb your hair back from the face. Determine which hair-do will accent your good features and soften your less glamorous ones.

If you can afford it, go to an expert stylist and let him take you in hand. Otherwise go to a good barber and get a hair cut once you have decided on the exciting new style. Try to suit your type, your mood, your clothes. Try all sorts of parts until you find one that does a lot for you.

Area of Dominion of Canada
The area of the Dominion of Canada is greater than that of continental United States. The area of United States proper is 3,026,700 square miles, while that of the Dominion of Canada is 3,729,685 square miles. United States proper and Alaska have an area of 3,017,675 square miles. Thus it will be seen that the Dominion of Canada has a greater area than the combined areas of the United States proper and Alaska.

Fear of Ghosts
The belief that a widow who remarries will be haunted by the spirit of her late husband is widespread in both primitive and civilized countries, says a writer in Collier's Weekly. As late as 1912 a man in Macon Ga., was quickly granted a divorce when he explained that the ghost of his wife's first husband bothered them so much they could no longer live together.

Isn't That Enough?

A cross man, like a cross baby, is not well. That's about all that ails him.

No liberal man would impute a charge of unsteadiness to another for changing his opinion.

After all of one's plans have gone to smash, one does not want his own way so persistently.

A Trade Mark Is an Honor Badge and Newspaper Advertising the Sentinel

Substitutes today are the illegitimate children of business. They are fatherless and unknown and they come to the consumer with a "Just as good" label on them which indicates clearly to the thinking buyer that she is buying something which is only "Just as good." The unknown product, the substitute parasite, has no reputation at stake. It is merely advertised for sale on a price basis and if the consumer does not like the quality, the manufacturer has suffered no injury because he is unknown and because he rarely links his name with a product as a standard of quality and a measuring stick of buying. It merely competes on a "take a chance" basis.

The manufacturers of well-known quality merchandise today place their names upon it and advertise it as the best they can offer to the consumer. The name of a manufacturer on an advertised product says this: This is the best product I know how to make. It is pure, good and worthy of your purchase. I think so well of it that I place my name upon it as a guarantee to you of its goodness. If it does not fulfill your wants I will gladly make good its failure.

There is no good reason why you should accept the unknown instead of the known; the untried instead of the tested; the doubtful instead of the sure. To refuse unknown substitutes is a guarantee to yourself of positive satisfaction in buying. If every purchaser will cease his or her purchases to known, advertised quality merchandise there will be little cause for complaint. Trade mark products tell their own story. It pays to look before you buy. Reading the advertisements in the newspaper, looking at trade marks, labels and names on products has pure interest.

U. S. Will Fete British Royalty —But How to Go About It?

MRS. ROOSEVELT
She will not curtsy . . .

QUEEN ELIZABETH
. . . but everyone else will!

If the state department had funds for entertaining royal visitors, and if an arbiter could be found to dispose of conflicting social practices between Buckingham palace and the White House, official Washington would be much less worried about next summer's visit of England's King George and Queen Elizabeth.

Although the state department ceremonial officer crawls under a table when someone asks him how officialdom shall behave, the mistress of the White House avers she will entertain the royal guests in whatever manner the state department dictates.

Since the English visitors will probably enter the United States from Canada, it is expected that Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles will greet them and escort the special train to Washington. There, at Union station, a host of dignitaries will meet the royal couple and a parade-like procession will carry them to their quarters, probably at the British embassy.

Mrs. Roosevelt Won't Curtsy.
Custom decrees that King George and Queen Elizabeth will first call at the White House, after which President and Mrs. Roosevelt will return the call accompanied by naval and military aides. Although there was once talk of Mrs. Roosevelt's curtsying before the queen, it has definitely been decided she will not. But all other American women will be expected to curtsy.

When the royal couple is entertained at a White House dinner the traditional American seating arrangement will give way to English style. Ordinarily the President and Queen Elizabeth would sit at one end of the table, with the king and Mrs. Roosevelt at the other end. This time, however, all four will sit together, beginning with the White House hostess, King George, President Roosevelt and Queen Elizabeth.

Sometime during the visit a 21-gun salute must be fired in honor of King George. If he enters the United States at a point where guns are available, it will be done there. Otherwise the ritual will be postponed until the inevitable wreath-laying ceremony at the Unknown Soldier's tomb in Arlington national cemetery.

Since the Roosevelts have established a reputation of being more concerned with making their guests welcome than with standing on ceremony, observers agree on one thing—King George and Queen Elizabeth will have a good time.

Cross-Stitch Design For Knitted Things

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS
THERE is an amusing story about the mittens and scarf shown here. They were not hand knitted. They were purchased rather hurriedly and sent to a young miss who was away at school. She had wanted something rather gay and a bit foreign looking to wear for skating and these were perfectly plain and pretty drab. She didn't take her disappointment lying down, but decided to brighten up that scarf and mitten set and make it speak a foreign language as well. She found the Swedish cross-stitch design shown here and copied it in all its gay colors on the ends of the scarf and backs of the mittens.

Hand knitted mittens and other knitted things in plain colors may also be decorated with this pert flower pattern. Start at the upper right corner of the large flower and make the cross stitches as at A and B. This flower is a brilliant red, the small flowers bright blue and the stems jade green.

Designed by Ted Weidhaus, the contour curtain in Radio City Music hall hangs in golden folds across the proscenium. It is the largest in the world and required over 2,000 yards of fireproof lining and about a mile and a half of metal cable. The weight is approximately three tons. How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 45), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of hair, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to entire life and soothes and cures nervous and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

For You to Choose God offers to every mind its choice between truth and repose. Take which you please, you can never have both. -Emerson.

SYNOPSIS

Barbara Sentry, seeking to sober up her escort, Johnny Boyd, on the way home from a party, slaps him, and attracts the attention of a policeman, whom the boy knocks down. As he arrests him, Professor Brace of Harvard comes to the rescue and drives Barbara home. On the way they see Barbara's father driving from the direction of his office at 12:45, but when he gets home he tells his wife it is 11:15 and that he's been playing bridge at the club. Next day Sentry reports his office has been robbed and a Miss Wines, former temporary employee, killed. The evening papers luridly confirm the story, and Sentry takes it hard. -Mary, elder daughter, in love with Nell Ray, young interne at the hospital where she works, goes off to dinner at Gus Loran's, Sentry's partner, with Mrs. Loran's brother, Jimmy Endie. Mr. and Mrs. Sentry call on old Mrs. Sentry, and Barbara, alone, receives Dan Fisher, reporter, who advises her not to talk. Phil Sentry, son at Yale, is disturbed at the possible implications and suspicion of Miss Wines' absence from her rooms for three days during August. He goes home to help. Dan is arrested and booked for murder. Dan Fisher explains the evidence against him - that the robbery was a fake, the safe opened by one who knew the combination, changed since Miss Wines' employment there - but of the papers, a duplicate of Sentry's, was found in the girl's purse, and that Sentry, too, had been away those three days in August. Brace calls, and backs up Barbara in her denial that Sentry could have done it because of the discrepancy of time between the robbery and their seeing Sentry on the road. Phil, showing the police over the house, finds his strong box open and his gun, which only his father knew of, gone. Meanwhile, the police find the stolen money burned in the furnace. Mrs. Sentry sees her husband, who swears his innocence, and tells her he had known of the robbery and murder the night before, but failed to call the police, and came home at 12:30. Mary quarrels with Nell Ray, and runs away with Jimmy Endie to the Caribbean. Linda Dane, friend of Barbara and Phil, tries to comfort Phil. Falkran, noted criminal lawyer retained, inspires hope but not admiration. Dan Fisher, whom Barbara has been meeting at her grandmother's, tries to use influence to keep the papers out of the papers, and everyone shields Barbara, on the verge of a breakdown.

One day when Brace was to meet Barbara at her grandmother's for tea, and arrived before the girl, the old woman spoke to him of Barbara's condition, said stoutly: "I wish someone would marry her and take her away from here! She can't stand much more. She hasn't the strength to go through all this. She shouldn't have to do it!" He dissented gently. "People can't shirk such things. Barbara's sister did, I know; but she will always regret it. We have to accept our burdens, our responsibilities. Face them squarely."

She said grimly: "Maybe! No doubt you're a level-headed young man, but I suspect you're too level-headed for your own good!"

He smiled tolerantly. "I'm sorry," he said. "But - dear as Barbara has come to be to me - I can't advise her to dodge or to evade."

"Dear to you, is she?" "Very!"

"Then marry her," the old woman counseled. "Sweep her off her feet. Marry her and take care of her."

He said gravely: "I hope to, some day. But if I asked her now, she might come to me just to escape. I want her to come to me because she wants me."

"Fiddlesticks! If you want her, take her, on any terms at all."

He shook his head. "I shall have to be a witness at the trial, you know," he confessed. "The District Attorney has warned me to be ready. Barbara need not know, yet; but if we were married, and then I testified, she would blame me, never forgive me."

"Get out of the reach of a subpoena while you can."

"I can't do that. I've given my word!"

"Pah! If you've the courage of a -"

But Barbara arrived, putting a period to their words; and after that Mrs. Sentry did not attempt him again.

She found Dan Fisher more to her taste. Between these two something strong and binding had developed. He came to her often, even when Barbara was not there. Once he came dispirited, and she saw this and demanded, "What are you so down in the mouth about?"

He grinned. "Been barking down a rat hole," he confessed, "and the rat wasn't at home."

"Talk sense!" He hesitated. "Well, Linda Dane and I have been putting our heads together, trying to see some way out of this. I thought we had a lead. Old Mr. Wines, the dead girl's father, told me that in her letters home the girl spoke of a man's having asked her to dinner. I started to check on him."

"Who was it?" "I can't very well -"

"Nonsense! I can keep my mouth shut when I choose."

"Well, it was Mr. Loran."

"Gus Loran?" She considered, nodded. "He's an old goat," she agreed. "He never would have married that Ende woman otherwise. Go on. What about him?"

"Dan Fisher said: 'The thing looked possible at first. I found that Mr. Loran was away in August, at the same time Miss Wines was away. But that blew up. Two ways. It turned out that Loran was in Maine. I've talked with his guide. He has a camp on a lake up there. Files up, flies his own plane. He was there."

He added: "And just to make sure, I checked on him for the night she was killed. We know what time she went to Mr. Sentry's office. Mr. Loran boarded a New York train about the same time, went right to bed. The porter saw him in his pajamas a little after eleven; and the porter's sure Loran didn't get off the train after that."

She demanded, "Why couldn't Miss Wines have been in Maine too?"

"Guide says, No. 'Maybe he's lying.' 'Didn't seem like a liar.' 'Maybe she was near there. Maybe he flew over to where she was.' He hesitated, and she said sharply, 'Speak up, man!'"

"Miss Wines wasn't in Maine," he said reluctantly. "They've found where Miss Wines was. She was at a hotel in New Jersey."

The old woman's fingers twitched, her eyes closed, then opened again, shrewd and keen. She said in a ing she interrupted their discussion to say: "Phil, tell me truly, do you think father killed her?"

He was shocked into silence for a moment; countered then, "Gosh, Barb, what do you take me for?"

"Do you?" she insisted. "No, of course not."

"I read all the newspapers," she said. "If he didn't, how could all the things they say be true?"

He said: "But you haven't read father's side of it, Barb. Wait till he tells his story."

"What is his story, Phil?" "Why, he doesn't know anything about it at all."

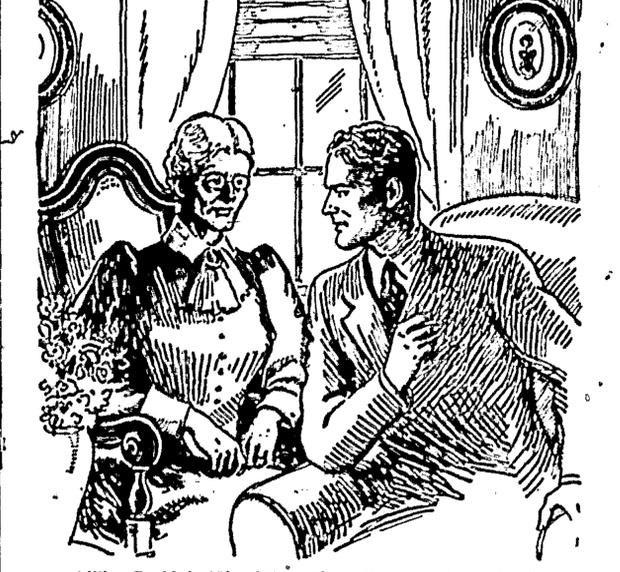

She looked away from him. "Phil, shall we all have to testify?"

"Not mother," Phil replied. "Probably not any of us." He added: "Mother can testify if she wants to, though. She probably will if he wants her to."

"I won't!" "Well, if he wants us to -"

"I won't!" she repeated tensely, eyes still averted. "No matter who wants me to. I won't! I'll - cut out, my tongue first."

Her voice shook, and he said "Whoa, Barb! You're scared."

"Why Couldn't Miss Wines Have Been in Maine Too?"

low tone: "You're not looking at me. I suppose Arthur was with her?"

He nodded. He said miserably: "But it's Barbara that gets me! She'll have to go through it all, the trial, everything. She may even have to testify! I wish I could - marry her, get her out of this."

"In love with her, are you?" "Yes!"

She demanded, "Then why don't you?"

Dan looked at her quickly, and he colored, and then he chuckled. "You're a girl after my own heart!" he declared. "I'd do it in a minute - if she'd have me - but I can't!"

"Why not?" "Money," he confessed. "And - this is the only job I've got. If I could land a promise of a job somewhere else - But these are tough times in the newspaper game."

"I'll finance you."

He grinned, shook his head. "Easy come, easy go," he reminded her. "I've never been able to hold on to money unless I earned it myself." He added: "But I'd like to find some way to keep her out of this. Keep her out of the trial, anyway. Why don't you take her away yourself, to Europe or somewhere?"

The old woman said quietly, "The next trip I take, I shall have to go alone, Dan."

He met her eyes honestly, without denial. "This must have - hit you hard," he assented. "The shock, the worry, the uncertainty."

She said, half to herself: "There's no uncertainty. I've accepted that. It's more Ellen's fault than his, perhaps. She shut him out of her life long ago. He hid to turn somewhere. Yet I don't mean to blame her. At least she went on living with him. This is hard on her; but - it may change her, soften her."

She added: "Yet he is my son! Whatever he has done!"

Dan's eyes filled. He gripped her hand. She said with a sudden faint smile: "Professor Brace thinks it's Barbara's duty to - see it through. I judge you don't agree?"

He shook his head. "Lord love you, no!" And his eyes began to blaze. "Sometimes Brace - Then he checked himself. 'I wish I could take her away!'"

So in these days all their solicitude came more and more to center upon Barbara. Phil sought in every way to cheer her; and as Christmas approached he tried to enlist her interest in planning some holiday observance that could be endured. They were in her room one night, Barbara abed, Phil sitting beside her while they groped for some device, when with no warn-

There's nothing to be scared off!" She looked furtively all around. "Phil," she whispered, "do you know for sure when Miss Wines was killed? The papers said at first someone heard the shot a little past one, but - Mr. Hare said they think maybe she was killed earlier."

Phil hesitated. "I don't think they're sure, Barbara. But - it wasn't a shot that man heard. They've found a truck that backfired about that time." And he said: "They know when Miss Wines ate dinner; and they know about how long it takes food to digest, so they go by that, partly, and partly by - well, things doctors look for."

"What time do they think she was killed?" He did not answer; and she whispered: "Phil, father got home that night at quarter of one. I told Dan Fisher, and Dan told me not to tell anyone, but I had already told Mr. Flood." Her voice rose, was shrill. "I won't tell it again, Phil. Never! I won't! They can't make me!"

He took her, shaking, in his arms, intent to comfort her. "You won't bother you, Barb. I won't let them bother you."

She clung to him. "I'll cut out my tongue first."

"Don't get so excited, Barb!" "But why did Dan tell me not to tell, Phil?"

Phil said almost sternly: "Now listen, Barb! Quit worrying! It's all right. What do you read the papers for anyway? Where do you get them?"

"In at grandmother's," she confessed. "I have to, Phil. No one ever tells me anything, and I have to know what's going on." And she cried desperately: "Phil, I won't tell! They can't make me, can they?"

He evaded answering. "Say, you're doing a great job on grandmother, Barb," he said. "You surely take a load off mother and me. Of course, we miss you at home, but someone has to be with her. Is she all right? Is there anything she wants?"

And the shot at random was successful. "Yes, there is," Barbara remembered. "She told me to tell you, she wants to see Mr. Falkran!"

Phil seized on this. "Sure!" he cried. "I'll get in touch with him; we'll take him in to see her this afternoon. Right away."

And the enterprise at once engaged them. Barbara went in town to make her grandmother ready; and when at half-past two Phil appeared with the lawyer, the old woman received him in state, sitting very erect in her great chair. But at once she sent Phil and Barbara out of the room, and when they were alone she asked Falkran questions, watched him, studied him.

He suggested at last, "You haven't been to see Mr. Sentry."

"No."

"He asks often for you," Falkran told her. "I shall be glad to tell him I have seen you so hale and well."

She eyed him shrewdly. "You want me to go see him?" "I know it would - help him," he admitted.

"Then I will," she promised, in a curiously submissive tone. "The first fine day."

"Splendid!" he said, beaming. "If you do, Mrs. Sentry, I guarantee everything else."

Old Mrs. Sentry tried to carry out her promise to see her son. "But I shall want to be with Arthur alone," she said, then added: "Yet I'd like for you - for all of you - to ride down with me, wait for me outside. My courage is good, but I'm not as strong as I used to be."

They waited for a fair day, but that winter in Boston was a bitter one. Not till the first week of February, on the eve of the approaching trial, did the season serve. Then came a day when spring seemed just around the corner, and the sun shone warm. Old Eli brought the ancient limousine. Barbara and the nurse helped Mrs. Sentry dress; Phil and Barbara steadied her to the elevator and down and into the car. She sat between Barbara and Mrs. Sentry, Phil on the small tip-up seat in front of them. They drove through scant mid-afternoon traffic to the jail; and the old woman's cheeks shone bright and brighter, flushed and hot, and Barbara saw a pulse pound in her thin throat.

But she could not, when the time came, go in. As the car stopped, she collapsed suddenly, not falling, not even toppling sideways, but just shrinking down into herself so that she was small. Even their untrained eyes saw that she was ill; that this was not faint-heartedness. In a sudden terror, uncertain what to do, Phil and Barbara stammered and fumbled; but Mrs. Sentry said steadily: "We'll have to take her home. It was too much for her."

They all stayed in town that night with her; for the doctor had forewarned them. Once the old woman spoke, in a surprisingly strong voice. She said: "Tell Arthur I loved him." And she added, with no irony in her tones, "And tell Mr. Falkran I hope he can use - this - just as well."

Her death, toward dawn, made headlines. "Sentry's Mother Stricken at Jail," said the morning paper. "Mrs. Sentry Dead on Eve of Trial," said the afternoon edition. Her funeral occurred on Saturday, two days before the trial was to begin. The brief and premature wagn spelt clogged traffic. They followed her to the cemetery between banked walls of snow.

Name Lloyd George Was Open Sesame

While motoring through Wales, David Lloyd George was forced to stop in a very small village because of darkness. Seeking a hotel, he stopped in front of a big building, got out and rang the bell. "Sir," he said to the man who appeared, "I should like to find shelter for the night."

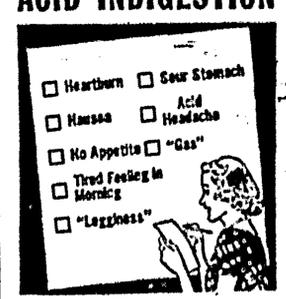

"Shelter? Here?" replied the astonished porter. "This is an insane asylum."

"But I must sleep somewhere. I'm Mr. Lloyd George."

Boys and Girls of 4-H Clubs Protect Animals and Birds of Rural Districts

Few persons realize the important contributions the members of the 4-H clubs are making to the cause of conservation, writes Albert Stoll, Jr., in the Detroit News. These clubs, operating throughout the nation and composed principally of rural boys and girls with the motto, Head, Heart, Hand and Health, have been in a particularly fortunate position to become intimately acquainted with their native plant and animal life and realize just what these resources mean to their communities. In many instances the groups are responsible for reforestation projects and the conservation of farm woodlots. They have encouraged, through protection and refuges, the maintenance of a crop of fur-bearing animals in their communities. Through winter feeding operations they helped carry quail, pheasants and winter song birds through severe periods. In Michigan alone the clubs have been given thousands of pheasant eggs for incubation and after rearing them made liberations when the birds were able to shift for themselves. They have taken on active interest in the preservation of rare wildflowers. They have discouraged the indiscriminate killing of beneficial hawks and owls, a practice which their forefathers considered good preservation. In the more remote districts they have rendered valuable services in the prevention and control of forest and brush fires. In short, they have given a splendid demonstration of what youth can accomplish if it becomes interested in a subject and applies head heart and hands to the task.

Tests Indicate 40-Knot Speed for Ocean Liners

Wallsend, England.—Liners which will cross the Atlantic at 40 knots—almost 10 knots faster than the Queen Mary—are foreshadowed by secret experiments now being conducted on Tyneside.

A firm of shipbuilders is testing a model of a streamlined hull of revolutionary design. It has proved too fast for the Teddington tank of the National Research Laboratory, and to enable it to be tested at full speed, a special tank has had to be ordered.

If the tests are successful, the firm will place on the stocks an ocean-going yacht embodying the new principles.

Engineers believe that the next step will be to build a 40-knot Atlantic liner and destroyers doing up to almost 60 knots. A liner with that speed would cross the Atlantic in approximately three days, compared with the three days twenty-two hours fifty-seven minutes with which the Queen Mary won the record in August, 1936.

Mr. H. M. Maes of Capitan was a business visitor in Carrizozo last Monday.

Observations made in various theaters since the opening of the present slow-moving season brings the conviction that the silver fox population of the world has suffered serious inroads. In fact, silver fox garments, from scarves to jackets, and from jackets to long coats, are far more numerous than last year. And that causes recollection of a remark made by a young woman at a recent performance of "French Without Tears": "If all the foxes in here were alive and running around, I wonder what we'd do?"

At one of the better bars, reports George Evans, a young man was arguing with a girl about his drinking capacity.

"Why can't I have another Manhattan?" he pleaded. "I tell you I act like a perfect gentleman when I'm drunk."

"In that case," slipped the girl, "have ten and get drunk right away."

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Scattered over the city are establishments that cater exclusively to the needs of pipe smokers. Some are mere holes-in-the-wall with the proprietor as the entire sales force. Others are large enough to employ six or more clerks and are in high rental districts. Stocks range from pipe cleaners to the most expensive hand-made pipes, and from pipe-racks to humidors. All stores, large and small, have their own mixtures or blends of tobaccos and have customers who would smoke nothing else. Most of them are ready to produce any special blend that appeals to the taste of a customer. These blends are listed so that no matter where he may be, the smoker may obtain his on order. At least one store supplies briar blocks, equipped with stems. They can be smoked in the rough or the smoker may carve the block into a design of his own choosing, a set of carving tools being included with the pipe.

Some field work leads to the belief that New York's pipe stores are the least hurried places of business in the city. Possibly pipe smoking is associated with leisure, but, no matter how many customers may be waiting, there is no haste on the part of patrons or clerks. Nor does there seem to be resentment at delay. Those waiting inspect stocks or compare notes with other smokers. Clerks as a rule are extremely civil. Many are English and have grown old in the pipe business as have their parents before them. In a swanky Fifth Avenue establishment, they wear smocks. In smaller stores, they stick to tweeds. All smoke while at work. Pipes, of course.

High pressure sales methods are not used in the real pipe stores. Now and then there may be a quiet "May I help you?" but that is all. Nor are all who come in customers—at least at the moment. It seems there are pipe smokers who like to browse around in pipe stores merely looking, just as book lovers browse around in those old Fourth Avenue shops. Pipe store owners don't object. Not infrequently, a smoker who wanders in merely to spend a few minutes, sees a pipe or some other article that just suits his fancy and either buys then or comes back.
