Drowned in Drainage Tank

Little Jett Rustin, jr, age 2 years and 10 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jett Rustin of Carrizozo, was drowned last Saturday between 4:30 and 5:00 p. m. when he fell into an open drainage tank at the CCC Camp. Too young and helpless to battle the icy water, he was discovered a few minutes later by his brother-in-law, Pete O'Rear. Dr. Simpson and Dr. Turner made every effort to revive him, but he was beyond earthly aid.

Rev. J. M. Glazier conducted funeral services at the Kelley funeral parlors Monday afternoon at 2:30. The casket was covered with flowers brought by weeping mothers so crowded were the parlors that many were forced to stand. Frankie Ruth Skinner sang "Near My God to Thee," and "God Calls His Little Children," with Mrs. T. E. Kelley at the piano.

Besides his parents, he is survived by an infant brother, Truman Rustin, and three half-sisters, Mesdames M. O. Longly, Bob Gray and Pete O'Rear; his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. McCracken and other relatives. Pall bearers were Kenneth Sapp, E. D. Casey, O'Dell Baker and Robert Mills. Deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved ones.

There was a large crowd of youngsters as well as we "grown ups." The house was decorated with pretty house plants. Games and contests were the diversion of the evening. Delicious cake and cocoa were served by Mrs. Hightower and was enjoyed by all. After the "wee sma' hours" of the a. m. everyone departed for home wishing Miriam success in her college work.

School Notes

The Christmas spirit is taking hold of the Home Economics Club. Christmas trees, decorations and presents for little folks seem to be occupying the attention of the club.

Tomorrow night the Athletic Association is giving a dance for their financial benefit. Equipment and suits are the need of the hour for a successful Basketball team.

One of our teachers, Miss Fernette Gilbert became the bride of Mr. R. E. Honaker, Thanksgiving day. The high school girls gave a shower in her honor at 4 p. m. Tuesday Nov. 29th.

The Carrizozo Football team played their last game of season Thanksgiving Day against the Captain High School. Our boys displayed great tact and talent in the game, however a report has been circulated to the effect that they received the small end of the score.

Jackie Dixon returned to school Thursday after a three day siege of tonsillotomy.

Among the pleasant events of the Lincoln Co. Teachers Association today was the fine number recited by the Carrizozo High School Band and Glee Club.

Supt. Carpenter issued the following statement regarding the absence of students during the week, caused by various ailments. The cause of absence is grouped under five heads as follows:

Personal illness	38
Illness at home	34
Work at home	42
Attending relatives funeral	19
Unexcused absences	11
Total	144

Illness and work at home are the largest factors causing absence, however it is interesting to note that five families caused 75 cases of absence. Five families sending students school cause more than fifty per centum of all absence.

Attend Anniversary Meeting Roswell

Messrs. McQuillen, Kelley, Blaney, Carpenter and Burke of here and Messrs. G. A. Titsworth and Eddie Long of Capitan went to Roswell last Tuesday evening to attend the 20th anniversary meeting of the Roswell Chamber of Commerce and also the 20th anniversary of the better roads association of Southeastern New Mexico.

Gov. Tingley was principal speaker of the evening and said that if every thing worked out as planned the contract for the last 10 miles of highway 380 between Roswell and Carrizozo would be let by the 14th of this month, which would make the road black topped all the way.

Senate Stands 69 Democrats, 23 Republicans, 4 Independent

The result of the elections leaves the national situation pretty much as it was. More Republicans were elected to the House of Representatives than the Democrats expected but there remains in that branch of Congress an impressive Democratic majority. In the Senate the same effect prevails.

So what? The minority party is in a spasm of enthusiasm because certain New Deal Senators were defeated. In fact, in estimating their gains, the anti-administration spokesmen are wiping out the distinction between New Deal and Old Deal Democrats. They point with overpowering pride to the election of Mr. Robert A. Taft to succeed Senator Bulkley of Ohio, even though Mr. Taft despite his name and the deduction drawn from his success found it advisable to proclaim his progressive sentiments during the campaign. But the Republican press and party leaders are equally edified at the defeat of every anti-New Deal Senator, although in the primary contests before election they were holding them a heroes for their sturdy independence. More logically could the Democrats claim that the anti New Deal Senators went down to defeat because they opposed New Deal policies and argue that if they had not gone off the reservation they would have been re-elected.

In only a single instance was the minority party content in its approval of anti-administration candidates. They did take John O'Connor, Chairman of the Rules Committee of the House of Representatives as their own candidate, and now the New Deal dilemma. Mr. O'Connor has stated and there will be a different Rules Committee Chairman. While I am wondering, let me muse over the question of how many of the new members the Republican minority in the House would be willing to trade for the retention of Mr. Connor at the head of the committee on rules!

Actually, the New Deal was not the determining factor in most of the election. Either the Republican candidates countered by pretending that they, too, were for most of the New Deal policies, or some local political situation eclipsed what should have been the determining element in the election. In Ohio the result was due to the circumstance that Ohio had an unsatisfactory and unpopular State administration, and the sins of an individual were, as usual, visited on his party.

In no other State was the New Deal so completely the issue as in New York, where Governor Lehmann was re-elected and Senator Wagner came through with an old-time majority. Wagner was the particular target of the interests most violent against President Roosevelt and his policies. Not only do we have Wagner back on his old job, but we have given him a colleague, Senator Congressman Jim Mead of equal loyalty to the progressive principles of Democracy, as the successor to the late Senator Copeland, who was a shining light among the anti-New Dealers.

On the whole, Democracy has not fared badly in the election. We have lost a number of Congressmen, as was inevitable after three periods of increase. We lost a Governorship here and there, but we gained two in Maryland and California—so we still have about three out of four State administrations.

The country at large, therefore, again has testified to its confidence in the Roosevelt policies, and the fight for better conditions goes right along.

Incidentally, the stock market opened strong the morning after election day.

Election of United States Senators Tuesday, Nov. 8th, scarcely justified reports in reactionary Republican newspapers: "Slash and burn victory," "New York Herald Tribune," "slaughter nothing less than terrific" (Washington Post). Twenty-two Democrats were elected, only seven in the south. Eight Republicans were elected to succeed only five sitting Democrats. One of the eight, Nye of North Dakota, usually votes with the Democrats; another, Reed, of Kansas, has always been an ardent progressive. As the terms of the ninth and tenth Republicans chosen Tuesday in Oregon and South Dakota expire on January 3, 1939, they will not sit in the Senate.

The Republican Senate gains were less than their losses in any one of the previous elections since the Roosevelt landslide in 1932. In that year they elected only three: Nye, Davis of Pa., and Gibson, of Va., all re-elected Nov. 8. In 1934 they managed to elect only six, including Frazier of N. D., who frequently votes with the Democrats. In the Roosevelt landslide of 1936, the G. O. P. again elected six senators, all from traditional Republican states, all of which again went Republican again this year.

Another circumstance the Old Guard newspapers failed to mention is that the new Senate which convenes next January will contain exactly three times as many Democrats as Republicans; 69 and 23, respectively. The remaining four senators who complete the total membership of 96 are Norris; last elected as an independent; and staunch New Dealer; the two Farmer-Labor members from Minnesota and LaFollette, Progressive of Wisconsin, all three of whom usually vote with the Democrats.

Senator Bennett (Chaplain), himself a possible Democratic presidential nominee, spoke some potent words when he said in a recent interview: "Another Democratic landslide would have wiped out the Republican party. If the Republicans had been wiped out, the Democrats would have broken up of their own weight." Democratic defeat on Nov. 8 will make them a more formidable foe, from that standpoint, in 1940.

Republican election gains in the senate gave New Mexico's three Democratic members of congress a step forward in their committee standings.

Senator Carl A. Hatch advanced his standing on four committees and stayed in the same position on two others. Senator Dennis Chavez moved forward on three committees and remained in unchanged positions on two others.

Rep. John J. Dempsey improved his position on three committees of the house and failed to change his position on the fourth.

Senator Hatch advanced from ninth to seventh on the agriculture and forestry committee, moved up one place on the irrigation and reclamation, moved along two places on the judiciary because Senator Dietrich of Illinois, did not seek re-election and McGill of Kansas was defeated and made his biggest move toward a ranking position by moving up three places on the privileges and elections committee where Senators Bulkley of Ohio, Brown of New Hampshire, and Duffy of Wisconsin, all of whom preceded him in seniority on the committee, were defeated.

Popular Teacher Married Saturday

All members of the Honaker and Gilbert families were present when Mr. Robert E. Honaker and Miss Fernette Gilbert were married at 9 a. m. Saturday at the home of the bride's parents, 217 South Harvard.

The Rev. E. A. Maness, pastor of the Central Avenue Methodist church officiated amidst a setting of purple and yellow chrysanthemums, calla lilies and candelabra holding white candles.

Wedding music was exactly as it had been for the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Gilbert when they were married 31 years ago at Sterling, Kansas.

Miss Elsie Diehl played Schubert's "Ave Maria" and the wedding marches at the piano and "Hearts and Flowers" by Tobini, as the ceremony took place. Miss Nell Patterson sang "O Promise Me" by DeKoven and "Because" by D'Harlot.

The bride was attired in a frock of navy blue crepe, with wine accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of white roses and gardenias.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee A. Jay, sister and brother-in-law of the bride, were attendants. Mrs. Jay wore a teal blue dress, with black accessories.

Thirty guests were served buffet refreshments at the reception which took place after the wedding. The bride cut a decorated three-tiered cake for the guests.

The couple has departed for Corona where they will make their home. Mr. Honaker is the son of Mrs. Emma Honaker of this city. The bride was graduated from the University of New Mexico last spring. She received the Marion Cross Kindness Award and is a member of the Kappa Omicron Psi Honorary Home Economics Fraternity. She is head of the Home Economics Department at the high school in Carrizozo. BANKING LOOKS AHEAD

Our Land of Opportunity

A Mechanic builds a giant automobile empire, a coil winder rises to the top of a great electrical concern, on all sides men of humble origin achieve outstanding success.

The American system holds rich rewards for initiative and ability. And in like manner these traits bring rich rewards to our nation through the progress they make possible.

This bank, as an important phase of its service, stands ready to extend financial cooperation to sound business men who see new opportunities and are able and willing to grasp them.

Annual Goober Derby Draws National Champs

Twenty-five national peanut-pushing champs rooted for honors in an Edenton, N. C., race, celebrating the opening of the largest Tar Heel market. Schnozzle snubbers of adhesive tape were invented to prevent wear and tear caused by friction. Best of the goober raters was James Small, 6 foot 5 inch high school student who won the race by a nose. The event, held yearly, draws huge crowds who cheer their favorite peanut pushers to the finish line.

Men at Work: Czechoslovakia and U. S.

Czech soldiers are now helping scores of farmers plow their fields. Here is one working in a field near Prague. During the crisis a widespread shortage of labor resulted in help from the army. Ray Gordon of St. Louis just missed joining another army—the army of the unemployed—when he was fired from a WPA road job. His fellow workers, who believed he had not been treated fairly, agreed to contribute a nickel a day each until he received the regular WPA wage of $36 a month. He provided the shovel himself.

Winter Vegetables Important in Diet

Take Page From Book of Old-Fashioned Housewife

By EDITH M. BARBER
 MOST of us, it seems to me, are neglecting the good old-fashioned "winter" vegetables. Once upon a time they provided most of the season's supply of fresh food. Every household kept a supply of parsnips, turnips, carrots and cabbage in the cellar. To be sure, flavor and quality deteriorated with the months, but in the absence of other fresh food, they did their bit.

Today we buy these vegetables just as we do the others from day to day and they deserve consideration in our menus. Have you ever tried serving fried parsnips with roast beef? This was always a favorite combination in our family. The parsnips, of course, must be boiled first until they are tender, but they must not be overcooked before they are drained, sliced and fried to a delicate brown.

Then there are turnips, both yellow and white. The former are generally known as rutabagas and they are at their best when they are boiled, drained before mashing with plenty of butter and seasoned. They may also be diced before boiling and served with a sour sauce.

While carrots can be stored as are other winter vegetables today we prefer the young carrots which are so tender and have such a delicate flavor. This makes them appropriate for serving raw as a relish or for a salad ingredient. They may be cooked either whole or sliced and dressed with melted butter, which may be flavored with lemon juice. They may be glazed or served with brown butter. In any case they should not be overcooked.

Sweet-Sour Cabbage.
 quart cabbage
 1 sour apples
 2 tablespoons fat
 2 tablespoons flour
 4 tablespoons brown sugar
 2 tablespoons vinegar
 Salt and pepper
 Shred the cabbage and mix with apples cut in slices. Heat fat, add cabbage and apples. Pour boiling water over them and let cook until tender; sprinkle over the flour, add sugar, vinegar, salt and pepper. Cook four minutes and serve.

Glazed Carrots.
 Scrape carrots, slice and cook in a small amount of water with a dash of sugar and salt in a heavy-covered utensil until tender. When tender, place in a saucepan with two tablespoons of sugar and two tablespoons of butter. Cook over a low fire until sugar is melted. Baste with the syrup and serve.

Rice With Mushrooms.
 2 cups cooked rice
 1 1/2 cups canned tomatoes
 1 green pepper
 1/2 cup mushrooms, canned or cooked
 1/2 cup mushroom stock
 4 tablespoons butter
 Seasoning
 3/4 cup buttered fine crumbs
 Mix the rice with the tomatoes and add the chopped pepper and mushrooms. Stir in the mushroom stock, add the melted butter, with additional seasoning of salt and pepper to taste. Pour into a buttered baking dish, cover with buttered crumbs, and bake in a moderate oven 375 degrees Fahrenheit, until browned.

French Fried Onions.
 1/2 cup flour
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1/2 cup water
 2 tablespoons salad oil
 1 egg white
 10 to 12 large onions
 Mix and sift dry ingredients. Add water, beat smooth; add oil; fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Slice the onion one-eighth inch thick. Separate into rings. Reserve the small rings for other use. Soak in milk to cover one hour. Drain and dry, dip in batter and fry in deep oil about two minutes. Drain on soft paper.

Braised Leeks.
 In the bottom of a baking dish arrange a bunch of leeks. Sprinkle over the leeks one sliced carrot, two sprigs of parsley, one minced celery stalk and a sprig of thyme. Add one cup of meat stock and cook uncovered in a hot oven, 425 degrees Fahrenheit, for about 15 minutes or until leeks are tender.

Russian Dressing.
 1/2 cup mayonnaise
 1/4 cup whipped cream
 1/4 cup chili sauce
 1 tablespoon minced green pepper
 Mix ingredients thoroughly and serve with salad.

Fried Tomatoes With Cream Gravy.
 6 tomatoes
 Salt
 Pepper
 Flour
 Butter
 2 tablespoons butter
 3 tablespoons flour
 2 cups milk
 2 teaspoons sugar
 Wipe, peel and slice tomatoes. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, dredge with flour, and saute lightly in butter, as many as the frying pan will take at one time. Remove to another pan as slices are browned. When they have finished cooking, add the two teaspoons of butter to what is left in pan, stir in flour and when smooth add milk. Stir until smooth and thick. Season with salt and pepper and sugar. Reheat tomatoes, remove to hot platter and pour gravy around them.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

IT'S time we took a little time to think about time. About clocks, to get right down to brass tacks. How many of us are carrying a 99-cent drug store clock from one room to the other? A clock like that doesn't mean much one way or the other . . . certainly it doesn't look like much and I've yet to see one that kept very good time.

As a matter of fact, a clock should be a decorative part of every room as well as an accurate timekeeper. I blame the clock manufacturers for this somewhat . . . they haven't really done right by us lately. They'll answer right back and say we don't buy nicer clocks so it's our fault after all. Mebbe so.

I've been digging around trying to find out just what types of good looking clocks there are available—clocks worthy of being a decorative focal point in a room. Because I'm for utility with decoration wherever possible—so why isn't a handsome clock a better idea than a candlestick for a mantelpiece or chest . . . certainly it serves a more useful purpose.

The most interesting modern clocks I've found are the grandfather clocks for halls—copies of fine old ones. An imposing clock like that would practically furnish the average hall. There are reproductions of old banjo clocks too that would do exciting things to most any wall. They are as authentic in design as they are accurate in time keeping.

The smaller clocks that I've seen and liked included one in an antique silver finish and in oblong shape. The clock is at one end, while a hard chased design of deer and trees at the other end has a certain austere formality about it—it suggests itself for use on a mantel or some other important place.

A smaller jauntier clock is a new sort for a desk. It must have been inspired by old time paper weights—as a matter of fact it's a combination clock and paper weight. It has one of those pieces of heavy round glass in place of a crystal, while the face showing through this is a brilliant emerald green. Of course there are ever so many table clocks of crystal, wood and chromium in modern design.

A Call for Help.

"I'm a business woman," writes L. E. H., "and so I'm all at sea about the subtleties of home decorating. Right now I'm trying to fix up my living room and dining room and need some help. I have a very good taupe sofa and a flowered armchair which harmonizes with the rust draperies at the living room windows. I have a mahogany set with black leather seats and backs which I'd either like to sell or re-finish. I need a new dining room set. What would you suggest that would not be expensive and yet smart? Do I have enough lamps? For the living room I have one floor lamp, one bridge lamp, one table lamp. For the dining room I have only the center ceiling fixture. The walls of both rooms are beige. What rugs would you suggest?"

"Have you any suggestions about the arrangement of furniture? I en-

"I'm all at sea about the subtleties of home decorating." close a rough sketch of the room plan as I have it now. Thank you for your help."

I'd like to see large soft old blue rugs in both these rooms. Then soft blue coverings in place of the black leather on the old mahogany frame pieces. You might add several odd round cushions for them to repeat the note of rust. For your dining room why don't you get a rather smallish dinette set in bleached walnut or bleached maple? About the arrangement of the room, I think that it would be more friendly and graceful if you placed your taupe sofa at right angles to the fireplace (looking toward the dining room) with a big easy chair opposite. Then put the mahogany frame settee against the wall where the taupe sofa is now. This would give a less-crowded feeling around the stairway and would make your fireplace grouping more comfortable. Your living room is difficult to arrange because there is so little wall space.

Much Smoke, Little Fire

The community dinner was over at last and the patient guests who had listened to the long address of the principal speaker breathed a deep sigh of relief.

"The speaker was all right," the toastmaster's wife whispered, "but it seems to me that he didn't put enough fire into his speech."

"I feel the opposite way," answered the toastmaster. "In my opinion he didn't put enough of his speech into the fire."—B'nai B'rith Magazine.

Embroidery Is Lavished on Gowns of Rich Silk Weaves

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE elegance of the past is being revived in fashions of today. Fabrics as sumptuous as looms can produce, luxurious furs, resplendent jewelry, glamorous accessories, plus a lavishness of glittering embroidery, designful applique, cunning quilted motifs and other ornate handwork declare fashion to be in the "dress-up" mood of "a lady." Yes, and the term "lady" has been revived along with other elegancies of the past.

Fabrics especially bespeak a new era of elegance. There is that stately something, that "stand-alone" quality about the new silks that reflect the glories of the romantic past.

Again our gowns and our wraps are being made of stiff "stand-alone" moires and heavy silk ottomans and failles. Again the sweet music of rustling tulle is heard, and again rich brocades and scintillating metal cloths are fashioning the stunning new jacket blouses so beloved this season. Velvets of grand and glorious texture, tailored for daytime suits and for night, sweeping through ballroom with queenly grace are a present fabric highlight.

Commensurate with the beauty of these handsome materials is the lavish embellishment of embroidery and other ornamentation that adorns this season's modes. The trio of high-style fashions pictured expresses admirably the new feeling for decoration that now prevails. The dress of green silk canton-crepe centered in the foreground foretells of dinner parties and theater engagements such as a winter season is sure to bring forth. The sleeves are the new three-quarter length. Note also the fashionable high shoulder line. The gold embroidery that enhances this costume is typical of the new trimming trends. And the ostrich muffs! A muff is inevitable this season. You'll be carrying a muff with your tailored suit or coat by day and by night. Matching ostrich feathers in the hair of the young socialite pictured adds to her endearing charms.

Smart for dinner and theater wear is the black silk crepe dress with a fitted long-sleeve jacket heavily bead-embroidered as illustrated to the right in the group. Note the pert squared shoulders. The simple dress underneath is unbelted and is worn with a large gold pin at the neckline.

The afternoon dress shown to the left is of rust uncut silk velvet with triangle shirring at the waistline. Gold leaf embroidery extends across the flattering bateau neckline with particular accent on shoulder interest. A Persian velvet turban and a velvet bag add beguiling finesse.

One of the most pleasing fashions promoted this season is the afternoon dress styled of fine quality-keen silk crepe on whatever material you may choose, the sleeves of which are entirely and elaborately allover embroidered. With a touch of embroidery at the waistline and wearing clips or other costume jewelry at the simple untrimmed neckline, you'll be gowned most becomingly.

Gay Campus Knits

Get busy knitting these cunning sweater and cap sets. Very inexpensive if you make them yourself. The classic skating sweater at the top goes fancy and gets itself ornamented with gay bits of colorful embroidery, with a trick little calot hat to match. Here it is done in brightest red—knitting—worsted—warm and durable. The little cap is "different" and notable for its practical earflaps that will defy the coldest breezes. The campus cardigan jacket below is also knit of warm germtown wool. It features bold horizontal stripes in two contrasting colors.

Indian Beadwork Popular in Paris

Beadwork is once again poking itself into the fashion foreground. Old Indian Joe himself would grunt with surprise if he happened along the Avenue Victor Hugo and saw a certain beaded belt, wide, supple and fringed and tasseled at its ends. Only non-Indian feature of the belt is the fact that its beaded design is more like an old French tapestry than a Navajo rug!

Another bit of beadwork seen on the boulevards is a beaded bolero jacket with solid turquoise background and a geometric pattern of gay colors made more brilliant by the addition of a few violet sequins.

Hoods Will Keep Your Ears Warm

Hoods to wear with sports clothes will be leading accessories this season, so there's no reason to freeze your ears. Molyneaux makes big beaver and nutria hoods to go with cloth sports coats. Schiaparelli makes closely fitted ones of bushy fur that lie under the chin.

Alix has her own way, which is to combine sidecurtain ties with a pillbox hat. One model is a black pillbox hat with combined tawny ocelot fur and black wool jersey making the curtains that tie under the chin and keep the ears steam-heated even in the worst cold snap.

For Evening Clothes The new beaded and paillette trimming which Schiaparelli indorses for evening clothes is reflected in evening bags that shimmer and are brilliantly colored. The bags are covered with bugle beads, iridescent paillettes, enameled paillettes.

"Fly-Away Hats" Tiny hats with "fly-away" effects are the newest and most striking fashions.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—In Europe, a few years ago, this writer met a friend who had just interviewed Gen. Ismet Inonu, who is today Turkey's new dictator, succeeding Kemal Ataturk, who died recently. "He's the smartest hombre I ever met," said my friend. "He talked to me for two hours, frank and honest, looking me right in the eye and never holding out on anything. He was charming and brilliant and he didn't ask me not to print anything. I thought I had a great story. But, when I started to write it, there was just nothing there. I saw him several times after that, and realized that he was a master in heart-to-heart talk which left no commitments whatsoever. I saw cagey diplomats kissed off just as I had been. The man is a marvel of brains and ingenuity."

The small, fragile, deaf, ingratiating General Inonu is the hero of the Turkish army, premier until a year ago, when he was mysteriously benched by Kemal Ataturk. There were rumors that he was engaged in international negotiations of such subtlety that he found it necessary to keep out of office and off-stage.

It was in 1920 that young Colonel Ismet joined Mustafa Kemal in Anatolia. By 1922, he had driven the Greeks out of Anatolia and Smyrna and in this period and thereafter he was Kemal Ataturk's chief military aide. He added to his laurels, when, at the 1923 Lausanne conference, he ran rings around British and Italian diplomats and won for Turkey virtually its demands.

He was one of few men who retained the confidence of Ataturk to the end. He was a firm and exacting and, at times, ruthless ruler of the army, and is said to lack none of the traditional specifications of the iron man.

It is apparent that Ismet Inonu is intent on keeping Turkey diplomatically liquid, that he fully realizes the bargaining power of Turkey's hegemony over the Moslem bloc, and that he probably will use this and other strategic assets in making some shrewd bargains.

TALL, austere Sumner Welles, a deft precisionist in career diplomacy, is merely undersecretary of state, but off-stage he's the key-man of a critical international counter and a policy draughtsman in whose hands a chart of our South American procedure is taking shape. He helped initiate and has diligently fostered the "good neighbor" policy in Latin-America, and his radio address urging a get-together in the Western hemisphere received a good press in those countries. But a bad press in Germany.

His plea for joint defense against "any threat of attack" is an interesting contrast to his speeches of a year ago, when he appealed to the "nations of the world for a new world order, based on justice and law." He weighs the actualities of trade, finance and the collective safety and solvency of the Western world.

Something like a picture of a western league of nations begins to emerge as the great imperialisms turn toward the vast raw material storehouse of South America.

After his graduation from Harvard in 1914, Franklin D. Roosevelt, then assistant secretary of the navy, helped him enter career diplomacy. In his early thirties, he was high commissioner to the Dominican Republic, the author of "Naboth's Vineyard," a two-volume study of that country. He was made ambassador to Cuba by President Roosevelt in 1933. He became undersecretary of state last year.

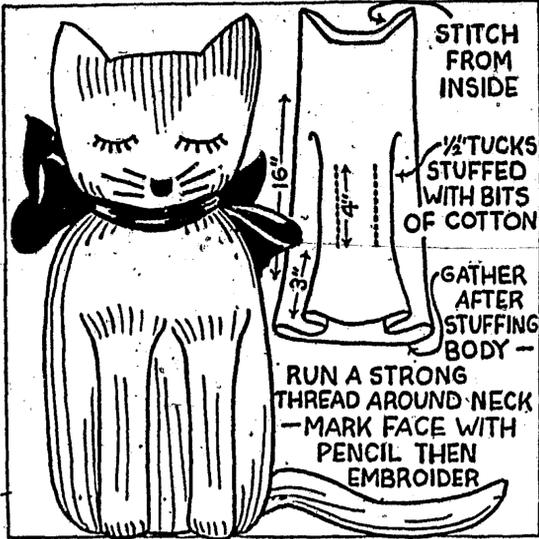

ROBERT DONAT, the English actor on the up-take in "The Citadel" and other films, made so many unsuccessful tries at the screen seven years ago that they called him "Screen Test" Donat. A competent actor, he met hard luck and was all but desperate, as something always went wrong. One day, in what he was sure would be his last try, the director told him to register despair. The irony of his merely imitating despair sent him into demonic laughter. Alexander Korda, in another room, heard him.

"Sign that man up, whoever he is," said Korda. "That's a great performance." He had what it took, and they routed him right through to fame and riches. He won by challenging a homily—"Do not despair!"

HOW TO SEW

Money making ideas for Christmas.

AN INTERESTING letter this morning says, "Our church bazaar is over and in winding up the last details and balancing my accounts I feel that I would be neglecting something if I did not express my appreciation for your Sewing Book No. 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery. We found many ideas in it that were real money makers. Our annual Christmas sale is now in course of preparation. Could you publish some new ideas for toys in the paper soon?"

Unusually attractive toys may be made quickly and at little cost from cheap cotton stockings. This demure yellowish tan kitten with bright red or blue ribbon is made from a stocking leg. The secret of giving toys of this type character is in making the stuffing firm and tight. Cotton or small pieces of clean, soft rags may be used. Push the stuffing firmly in place with a blunt stick.

Complete directions for cutting and making the body are given here. For the tail, cut a piece 6 inches long and 2 inches wide. Stitch the lengthwise edges together, tapering toward the end, then turn right side out, stuff and sew firmly in place. It is easy to draw the face. Notice in the sketch how the eyelids curve, the shape of the mouth and how the whiskers slant.

Either wool yarn or mercerized cotton embroidery thread may be used—black or brown for the eyes and whiskers and red for the mouth. Be sure to save the scraps of stocking material left from the kitten. We will make a doll out of them later. If you are not ready to make Christmas toys now, clip and save this lesson as it is not contained in either of the books offered below.

NOTE: Are you ready for Christmas? Birthdays? And the next church bazaar? Do you turn time into money with things to sell? Mrs. Spears' Sewing Book 2 has helped thousands of women. If your home is your hobby you will also want Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator. Order by number enclosing 25 cents for each book. If you order both books, quilt leaflet with 30 different stitches will be included free. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

"POOR TRUST IS DEAD—BAD PAY KILLED HIM"

This sign with picture of "doggie," gone where all "doggies" go, hanging on the wall of a small store in a little North Carolina town which was plenty years ago, was my first acquaintance at the time to pay cash. Some need a hint while others need a kick to make good their I. O. U's. The owner of that North Carolina store the kids called "OLD MAN CASIL." What the grown-ups called him, I don't know.

It was said that he was a mind reader because he was always able to arrange to be at the spot where you had to look at that sign, and him, too, when you wanted credit. His cold stare and that sign caused stammering of "the promise to pay tomorrow." It was said that some could not even utter the stammer when facing him and his sign.

In later years, after his retirement, speaking of his experience, he said, "There was a time when I was a Santa Claus and some folks seemed to think every day was December twenty-fifth, and no week had a pay day and no month, a first. It was then I decided to change my store habits and if possible the habits of some of my towns-people."

After thinking things over awhile, I made up my mind to advertise. I reasoned it out that a general alarm in the WEEKLY, the only paper in town, to tell about my store, the goods and the new policy of paying, would hit everybody and it would help me save shame-faces—some might feel sheepish while reading my advertisements and have a heart.

I got interested in advertising. I found other people, some of them my customers, read advertisements, so I helped it along the best I knew how. I put ginger-nap words in my advertisements and some humor, and that's how the idea came for the POOR TRUST IS DEAD sign.

I also found that good-name goods had repeat sales and that started me concentrating on staples with the result that fussiness over what kind, no longer confused or irked. Dilly-dally selling efforts, wasting time and costing money passed out.

Customers bought baking powder, soda, flour, soap and other articles bearing identification marks. Kids called them pictures. Products put up in neat, convenient, honest weight and measured cartons, boxes, bottles and cans. What an improvement in business and the dispositions of the customers. I even improved with conditions so greatly changed for the better.

The Livestock Situation

By A. McNaughton

The tremendous amount of real good that a livestock show of the proper sort can do is indicated by the Great Western Livestock Show that was held at Los Angeles from November 20 to 25. Auction sales of fat lambs, barrows, steers, feeder steers, and registered Hereford bull were an important part of the Show. In addition to the sales made through the auction, ring, a number of sales of various kinds of breeding stock were completed at private treaty. Through these sales, a livestock show encourages more efficient livestock production by disseminating seed stock of improved type.

The auction of range and herd bulls was considered one of the best ever held in the western part of the United States, with prices high enough that sellers felt that their animals were properly appreciated, and yet not out of line with the worth of the animals. Twenty-three herd bulls averaged $243, and 129 range bulls averaged $152. A sale of this sort, to my mind, is as valuable as any single feature of a livestock show. Not only is it educational in illustrating a difference in quality, but it provides an opportunity for cattlemen to buy the bulls they need, of the quality they desire, at prices they are willing to pay. And through the improvement of their herds by this new blood, they are fortifying themselves for the future with every prospect of better financial returns.

Exhibits of fat steers, barrows, and lambs, bred and fed in western states, not only afford a barometer of comparison that is useful in improving types of livestock, but also show what can be accomplished by western breeding and feeding. Western feeding is largely a development of the past few years, and with it has come a greater appreciation of good breeding, both being encouraged by our livestock shows. Those who have attended western shows for several years have seen a wonderful change in type and uniformity of meat animals, as well as in methods of feeding. A visit to the latest Great Western Livestock Show, with its displays of excellently-bred and highly-fitted fat stock, is convincing proof that the west is second to no other section of the United States in producing meat animals of the finest quality. Packer buyers have encouraged the fat stock shows and auction sales by paying a premium for show animals, and without substantial cooperation these events could not take place.

Livestock and the meat food business is the biggest national institution and by the same grace it is the biggest local institution. The success of agriculture has always depended upon livestock. We are getting a better appreciation of the importance of cooperation between industry and agriculture. We now have a new feature to add, namely: Chemistry—apparently a growing institution and many think that through chemistry we may work out many things of benefit to agriculture in the way of salvaging or getting better value out of many of our farm products. Let us at least be open-minded, encouraging those who have made a big start in introducing chemistry into our farm life.

Western Grass Cattle Trade At Kansas City

Grass cattle trade at Kansas City for the season of 1938 from the standpoint of most producers will be recorded as very satisfactory. Prices, however, were not as high as in 1937 and profits were of similar proportions. In contrast to last year, grass-fed were more plentiful and the supply of grass slaughter cattle materially lighter. The chief depressing influence in the market was a rather sluggish demand for beef, the outlet during late September and October especially slow due to the unseasonably high temperatures. Peak prices for slaughter classes were paid early in July while the low spot came in October. There was a potentially strong demand for stocker and feeder classes throughout the season, as there was ample rainfall to assure a corn crop and most all sections reported an abundance of rough feeds.

The spring movement of cattle into the Kansas Blue Stem Pastures was about twenty-four per cent less than in the spring of 1937, while the Osage pastures received about six per cent more cattle than a year ago. Fewer aged steers were placed on pasture last spring; this condition was attributed to the 1934 drought which made for a small calf crop in 1935. Lease prices were about the same as last year, ranging from $8.00 to $9.00 for steers and cows and $4.00-$6.00 for young cattle. Cattle were placed on pasture earlier than last year and remained in good condition throughout the season with ample stock water at all times.

In the stock division, trade was marked by a fair demand for plain butcher heifers and the cutter grades of cows with prices on such offerings averaging slightly higher than last year. Medium and good grass fat and shorted heifers, however, were from 50c-$1.50 lower and prices on good heavy cows were off from 50c-$1.00. Plain and medium grass heifers bulked at $5.50-$7.25, while kinds of medium to good grade that have been given a limited amount of grain, sold from $7.50-$8.50. Good heavy fat grass cows early in July brought $7.00-$7.25, but throughout most of the season offerings of plain, medium, and good grade sold from $5.00-$6.50. Low cutter and cutter cows were absorbed from $3.50-$5.00, only light sholly low cutters having to sell under $3.75.

Receipts of calves were larger this season, but numerous shipments were on through billing, so that the market supply was slightly under a year ago. For the most part prices on slaughter calves compared favorably with a year ago, good to choice grades from 50c-$1.00 lower and plain to medium lots selling at about the same levels. Good to choice 450-550 lb. lots cleared from $8.00-$9.25 with choice 620 lb. fed calves up to $10.25. Good to choice 275-400 lb. weights cashed from $7.00-$8.25 and plain to medium grades cleared from $5.00-$6.50.

Pilot Saved Passenger

An airplane zoomed crazily over the Marine Corps flying field at San Diego, Calif., in March, 1932. It careened and wobbled in such a fashion that the watchers on the ground knew that something had gone wrong.

They had no knowledge that far overhead a life-and-death drama was being played with two human lives at stake. The principles in this dilemma were Sergeant Ori S. Hofer, the pilot, and the other his passenger, Corporal Himer N. Torner, who was unskilled in the management of airplanes.

Torner, from his seat in the cockpit, saw his pilot lurch forward over the controls; the plane began to spin dizzily. The corporal realized that his pilot had fainted and that both were faced with a sudden and horrible death unless he took prompt action.

The plane began to make a quick but erratic descent toward the ground. Torner stood up in his cockpit, pulled the unconscious sergeant away from the controls, and began to maneuver the machine himself. With less than a rudimentary knowledge of air, he managed to gain more altitude.

When the plane responded to his first efforts to straighten it out and avoid an immediate crash, he gained more confidence. Finally he managed it sufficiently to bring it to the ground on a fair landing field. With the motor still running the plane swung around in circles, until Torner eventually found the throttle control and brought it to a stop.

Sheer courage had saved Torner's life and the life of his companion. When watchers rushed to the side of the plane Torner had already removed the unconscious pilot and was applying first aid.

The Difference Between Tweedle-dum and Tweedle-dee

Although it is against the law in Washington for a young man to drive a car with one arm while holding his "sweetie" in the other, there is no law prohibiting the young lady from being affectionate while her loved one does the driving. This paradoxical attitude of the state law relative to spooning inspired one newspaper poet in the northern state to admonish young people in the following verse:

"If the driver encircles her neck with his arm,
He's in danger of going to prison.
But don't be despondent, the law sees no harm
If she puts her arm around his'n."

My father says the paper he reads aint put up right, He finds a lot of fault, he does, perusin' it at night.

He says there aint a single thing in it worth while to read, And that it doesn't print the kind of stuff the people need.

He tosses it aside and says it's strictly on the bum--
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come,

He reads about the weddin's and he snorts like all get out,
He reads the social doin's with a most derisive shout,

He says they make the paper for the women folks alone,
He'll read about the parties and he'll fume and fret and groan.

He says of information it doesn't have a crumb--
But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He's always first to grab it and he reads it plumb clean thru,
He doesn't miss an item or want ad--that is true.

The Golden Text is: "I am the Lord, your Holy One, the Creator of Israel, your King." (Isaiah 43:15)

Among the citations which compromise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall stand forever: nothing can be put to it, nor anything taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him." (Eccl. 3:14)

The Lesson-Sermon includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Cause does not exist in matter, in moral mind, or in physical forms."

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

Five years ago, on December 5, 1933, America pulled the cork out of prohibition to the strains of "Happy Days Are Here Again."

This year's anniversary finds liquor consumption leveling off for the first time in a half-decade that has brought the federal government almost three billion dollars in alcohol taxes.

During the 1930-37 fiscal year alone, some $2,000,000,000 worth of the cup that cheers lubricated America's collective tonsils. This was $300,000,000 more than we spent for education the same year.

Poured out equally for every man, woman, child and infant in the nation, last year's per capita consumption of alcoholic beverages would be something like the following:

- One and a half pints of light wine.
- Four gin cocktails.
- Four Scotch highballs.
- Three pints of sherry.
- Two and a quarter quarts of Bourbon, rye or corn whisky.
- Fourteen gallons of beer or ale.

A lot of us didn't drink our share, but somebody drank it for us, which accounts for the growing alcoholism problem now facing the nation. On one side of the repeal picture is the scene of men brought back to work in a thousand industries inspired by the consumption of liquor. This scene also shows an annual income for the United States treasury of some $600,000,000 a year from liquor taxes, approximately as much as the entire nation pays in personal income levies.

Enter the Female Barfly.

On the other hand are indisputable statistics connecting liquor with automobile accidents, crime and immorality. And not the least of these woes is the feminine barfly, whose birth is chronicled by the Keeley Institute of Dwight, Ill.

Mr. Martin Nelson, secretary of the institute, points out that while total patients increased 45 per cent during the first 10 months of 1933, as compared with the similar period in 1932, women patients have shown a gain of 150 per cent during the same period.

"It is undoubtedly true that an increasing number of women have become habitual drinkers in recent years," Mr. Nelson comments. "Prohibition removed drinking from the bar room to the living room, where wives learned to tipple. Repeal returned drinking to the saloon and wives followed their husbands there. Today public complacency about women drinking openly at bars is making the problem of the female inebriate a tragically serious one."

ABOVE—Whereas almost all pre-prohibition drinking was confined to the saloon, much post-prohibition drinking takes place in the home. Liquor stores like this do a big business. RIGHT—Andrew J. Volstead, Minnesota congressman whose prohibition amendment to the Constitution made America a theoretically dry nation.

The Keeley Institute treated more patients of all classes in 1930 and 1937 than at any time in the previous years. But Mr. Nelson does not place all responsibility for this condition on the open saloon or the ease with which liquor may be bought at retail stores.

"We feel," he reports, "that the country's improved financial condition is also responsible. Our experience over nearly 60 years, including four major depressions and recoveries, has shown that in time of prosperity the number of patients increases. During depressions it declines."

Drys Are Still Strong.

This would indicate the problem is getting worse, despite a leveling off in liquor consumption this year. With business definitely on the upswing, taverns and retail stores are destined for greater patronage. But this increase will come in metropolitan centers, not in the small towns.

It is significant that the United States can still boast a strong dry faction whose grass roots are in rural areas, with special emphasis on the Midwest and South.

Temperance forces have grown stronger since repeal. In that year state referendums showed 30 per cent of us were dry. A 1930 private survey raised this figure to 33 per cent and last spring it stood at 34. This looks like a steadily growing sentiment, but it is counteracted by consumption figures, also by the steady decrease of dry states. Today there are but four commonwealths refusing to legalize liquor.

Fundamentally, the Eighteenth amendment was repealed because (1) bootlegging had developed into a horrifying crime menace, and (2) since people appeared determined to drink, it seemed feasible to legalize liquor and put men back to work, also adding materially to tax revenue.

Bootleggers Still Busy.

If repeal has succeeded in the latter respect by netting federal, state and local coffers several billion dollars, it has not wiped out bootlegging. Else "revenooers" in South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama and Florida would not be wrecking some 350 stills each month, nor would 56 men have been indicted in New York last December 21 on a charge of defrauding the government of $1,800,000 in liquor taxes. If anything, legalized liquor has minimized the difficulties of engaging in illicit liquor trade, despite everything state and federal agents can do.

But bootlegged liquor is cheap liquor, and this year aged whiskey stocks were so increased that prices could be lowered. If men must have alcohol, they can now get it from legitimate dealers for about the same price a bootlegger charges.

Distillers are not completely blind to the evils of repeal; in fact many of them boast a "social responsibility" for urging temperance.

Too often the gull lies with local law enforcement officers and the tavern keepers. At Chicago a group of educators surveyed 3,023 taverns and found one or more laws being violated in 2,122 of them. Most were improperly lighted, many sold liquor to intoxicated persons or minors, others remained open after closing hours.

Psychologists point out that under strict law enforcement our per capita liquor consumption will show a steady decline through the years as men and women learn how to "drink intelligently." Perhaps the 1933 leveling off is a turning point, but after five years of repeal John Barleycorn is still giving America a headache—and too many hangovers.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Describes Some of the Functions of Vitamin B₁—Reports Recent Discoveries of Its Relation to the Gastro-Intestinal Tract

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

PERHAPS no more dramatic chapter has ever been written in the history of nutritional science than the discovery of the chemical structure of the vitamin now known as B₁ and its artificial synthesis.

Inasmuch as a deficiency of this vitamin may have extremely far-reaching effects upon human health and happiness, it is important that every homemaker should learn something of its functions, its characteristics and its sources.

The Anti-Neuritic Substance

Vitamin B₁ is known to prevent and to cure a nerve disease called beriberi.

The disease was known in ancient times in the Orient. It occurred in other countries during the Nineteenth century. And even in the Twentieth century, some of the British troops stationed in Mesopotamia and the Dardanelles during the World war came down with the disease.

Even before this vitamin was identified, a European investigator was seeking to determine why a small portion of milk added to a diet containing protein, fats, carbohydrates and minerals successfully nourished individuals who did not enjoy good health when the milk was omitted.

Chemical Identification

Many investigators sought for years to fathom the secret of this mysterious substance.

After long research by many distinguished investigators, two Americans reached a milestone in the history of nutritional science when they discovered the chemical structure of vitamin B₁ and learned how to synthesize it.

A Regulator of Body Processes

In the course of their work with vitamin B₁, nutritional scientists have discovered many other important functions of this vitamin.

It has been determined that this substance is essential to growth and that it is also necessary to promote normal appetite. Laboratory experiments with animals revealed that when fed upon a diet lacking vitamin B₁, the animals lost their desire for food and refused to eat until the vitamin was restored to their diet.

There is also some evidence that vitamin B₁ is necessary for the maintenance of normal muscular tone of the large intestine.

Aids Gastro-Intestinal Tract

Chemical studies on 75 patients led one investigator to conclude that a continual slight shortage of vitamin B₁ leads to definite changes in the motor and secretory mechanism of the gastro-intestinal tract.

There is also evidence that the vitamin B₁ requirement increases with the rate of growth and with increased energy expenditure.

For this reason, active working men and women should be amply supplied with this vitamin, and growing children should also have generous quantities.

Further investigations are now in progress and it is quite possible that many significant new facts will be unearthed in the near future.

In the meantime, there is enough evidence to warrant the belief that the absence of vitamin B₁ results in cellular alteration in the nervous system, intestine, pancreas, stomach, salivary glands, liver and other tissues.

The whole power of the body to resist infection appears to be decreased. This is especially true in the gastro-intestinal tract, probably owing to the action of the bacteria on its passage through the impaired alimentary tract.

Some Peculiarities of This Vitamin

Vitamin B₁ is soluble in water. For this reason, a large percentage of it may be lost if the water in which a food is soaked or cooked is discarded. Other ways in which this precious vitamin is lost are through refining cereals too highly, or when the natural acidity of a food is lowered by the addition of an alkali.

Preventing Vitamin B₁ Deficiency

It has been suggested that the health department of every village, town and city should not be content with protecting the local community against infectious diseases, but should be equally militant in endeavoring to safeguard its people against the dietary deficiency diseases which have been discovered through the recent advances in nutritional knowledge.

That is because many people who can easily afford the foods that furnish vitamin B₁ are consuming a diet deficient in this respect. This unfortunate situation may arise because they believe that their customary diet is adequate. Or, they conclude that appetite is a reliable guide to the meals that should be consumed.

Sources of Vitamin B₁

Investigation has established that foods yielding a good amount of vitamin B₁ include bran, milk, eggs, bananas, orange juice, carrots, spinach and cabbage.

One of America's outstanding nutritional scientists has stated that foods can be made to provide the necessary daily requirement of vitamin B₁ if half of the needed calories are taken in the form of fruits, vegetables, milk and eggs, and if at least half of the breads and cereals consumed are taken in the whole grain form. This suggests the advisability of adding some bran to muffins, waffles, and other quick breads when they are intended for the dietary of normal individuals. The same procedure can likewise be followed in serving hot or cold cereals.

Another distinguished authority holds that adequate amounts of vitamin B₁ can be furnished at a low cost if the homemaker will utilize larger quantities of the whole grain cereals and legumes. If the calories supplied by these foods are not desired—as when one is endeavoring to avoid gaining weight—vitamin B₁ may be obtained from suitable quantities of bran and the germ of the grain.

Foods That Help Promote Regularity

In addition to providing vitamin B₁, which helps to serve as a sort of intestinal tonic, bran and many fruits and vegetables help to add cellulose or bulk to the diet. Their fibrous framework is a great aid in promoting regular health habits.

Some foods are richer than others in cellulose or bulk. Good sources of this substance being notably bran, whole grain cereals, most raw fruits (dried fruits, such as prunes, figs and raisins; raw vegetables; such cooked vegetables as onions and leafy greens; and legumes, that is, dried beans and peas.

These foods, therefore, have a definite place in the diet of normal individuals. The homemaker should see to it that they are included regularly in her daily menus.

If that task is performed faithfully, it should help to develop a healthier and more vigorous race.

Questions Answered

Mrs. S. T. L.—Yes, you are correct. All kinds of flesh food furnish protein, and usually they also contain fat. The amount of fat, however, varies with the cut and with the kind of animal from which it was obtained. Many flesh foods have more fat than fall cream.

Mrs. T. A.—If a year-old infant receives a quart of milk daily, he should obtain sufficient protein, calcium, phosphorus and vitamin A to meet his requirements. He will likewise receive substantial amounts of vitamins B and C, but he needs a supplementary source of vitamin C.

CHAPTER VII —16—

Sunday afternoon, the day after the funeral, Falkran came to see Mrs. Sentry, to remind her that the trial would begin next morning. And he said: "You will of course be in the courtroom every day. I had better tell you what to expect, so that you may show no emotion. The jury will be watching you."

"I shall show no emotion!" He hesitated. "We ought to discuss," he suggested then, "what you will wear. What is your opinion? Will you be in mourning for Mr. Sentry's mother? That might be effective."

"I think not," she replied. "I dislike—pose. I should not normally wear mourning for Mr. Sentry's mother."

"Perhaps not," he agreed, faintly disappointed. "But—some quite simple dress. And no jewelry?"

She smiled mirthlessly. "No jewelry," she assented.

He said: "Mrs. Sentry, to succeed before a jury requires a careful handling of intangibles. I shall not ask of you very many questions, but my hope is that the State on cross-examination will adopt toward you such a tone that the jury's sympathies will turn in your direction." He confessed, "I even hope that you and Miss Sentry may actually break down, on the stand."

Mrs. Sentry was silent for a moment. "I shan't break down," she said. "I shouldn't know how. But Barbara—She's really so young, and—she hasn't seemed to me well lately. Is it absolutely necessary?" She added, "We haven't let her go to the fall, you know."

"Quite right," he agreed. "You were right not to subject a sheltered, lovely girl to the ordeal of entering those surroundings. But a courtroom is not so bad." And he conceded, "She need not be there till the jury has been selected; but after that, yes." He added, watching her warily, "And if she comes face to face with him in the courtroom, no one will be surprised to see her kiss her father, clinging to him, perhaps burst into tears—"

Mrs. Sentry said quietly, "I should be surprised. We are not a demonstrative family."

After he was gone, though he had insisted on the necessity of Barbara's appearance in court, she hesitated to tell the girl. When at last she did so, Barbara tried to speak. She swallowed hard, cried, "No! I won't, mother!"

She seemed to be hoarse. Mrs. Sentry asked, "Are you catching cold?"

"Yes," Barbara said eagerly. "Yes, my throat is sore."

"You'd better go to bed. A cold compress will fix that throat of yours; and some hot lemonade—"

Barbara came quick to her feet. "Yes, yes," she agreed. "I think I'm going to be sick! I feel sick, mother, awfully."

Mrs. Sentry touched her forehead. "You've no temperature," she said. "It will clear up by morning."

But in the morning Barbara was unable to speak at all, and Doctor Minton found that she had two or three degrees of fever. "A day or two in bed, and drink lots of water," he prescribed. Downstairs afterward, with Mrs. Sentry, he spoke reassuringly. "Her throat is normal," he said. "No inflammation. I suspect it's excitement, nervous strain."

"But people don't run a fever unless they're sick!"

Doctor Minton smiled faintly. "Our small daughter runs a fever whenever Mrs. Minton is away from home overnight. A temperature above normal may be a symptom of mental or spiritual as well as of physical ills. Just keep her in bed, don't argue with her—"

So Barbara in the morning stayed abed, with Nellie in solicitous attendance. Some time after Phil and Mrs. Sentry had left for the courtroom, for the opening of the trial, Dan Fisher appeared, laughed Nellie out of her objections, came up to see Barbara propped in pillows. Her eyes lighted when she saw him.

"Hallo, Barb," he said. "Phil told me you were under the weather. They'll be all day getting a jury, so I thought I'd run out and see you. Feel pretty rocky?" Her lips moved, but no intelligible sound emerged.

"What's that?" he asked. She shaped, elaborately, the words, "I can't talk!" He echoed, "Can't talk?" And she nodded in violent assent, and he said: "Why not? Lost your voice?" She nodded again, and he said heartily:

"Why, that's fine! You know what I'd do if I were you? I shouldn't find it for a while. Let the darned thing stay lost!" He sat down on the edge of her bed, touched her hand. "And if it comes back," he advised with a chuckle, "try to manage a little appendix, or some gall stones. Or maybe break a leg!"

She smiled faintly, and pressed his hand; and he said more seriously: "But don't get too sick, Barb! This—your father—is one of those things that might happen to anyone. It has happened to you, no getting around that. But you're going to go on living just the same, afterward; and living's fun! Life's fun, if you know enough to let it be. And—this will all be behind you, by and by."

She spoke, clearly, in normal tones. "Honest, Dan?"

He was surprised. "Hallo, cured already?"

Her color drained away; her lips moved, but no sound came. He said regretfully: "Say, you're tired. I'm bothering you. I'll run along."

But she held his hand, would not let him go.

"Want me to stay?" he asked. She nodded, and he sat down again, and talked on at random, cheerfully, and once or twice she smiled, and her lids drooped till they closed.

A little later her fingers relaxed their grip, and he eased his hand free and stood up, and for a moment looked down at her, sleeping. His eyes dimmed; he brushed them with his hand, whispered something gently. Then his fist clenched hard till the knuckles were white. He shook this clenched fist at nothing, at the house perhaps, at the tragic silence all around the lovely, sleeping girl.

"I Think I'm Going to be Sick! I Feel Sick, Mother, Awfully."

Afterward, he went quietly away. Phil, sitting beside his mother in the courtroom, on the fourth day of the trial—Barbara was still abed at home—heard Mrs. Sentry sigh deeply as though with relief, and leaned to whisper, "What is it?"

"I just remembered something."

"What?"

She shook her head for silence, for attention to the witness just then on the stand. The witness happened to be Miss Randall, office manager for Sentry and Loran; and she was testifying that after Miss Wines' actual employment by the firm was ended, the girl came several times to the office, and on one occasion was for a few minutes alone with Mr. Sentry. Mrs. Sentry, after that relieved sigh which had caught Phil's attention, heard Mr. Flood's question:

"Whether you saw Miss Wines after she talked with Mr. Sentry?"

"Yes."

"Did you observe anything about her condition?"

"She was crying desperately."

District Attorney Flood surrendered the witness; and Falkran rose.

"Now, Miss Randall," he said, in that confident and friendly tone which was so effective with the jury, "you say Miss Wines came to the office on more than one occasion, after her work there was finished?"

"Yes."

"Did she see Mr. Sentry on any other occasion than this one of which you have just spoken?"

"No, she never asked to see him."

"Was Mr. Loran in his office on the occasions of her visits?"

"No, never."

"How can you be so sure?"

"Because she always asked for Mr. Loran."

"But if she always asked for Mr. Loran, why did she finally see Mr. Sentry?"

"She seemed so anxious to see someone, I suggested that she see him."

"Did she quickly agree?"

"No, I persuaded her."

"You persuaded her to see Mr. Sentry?"

"Yes."

"And now, Miss Randall, about the amount of money in the safe—"

But Mrs. Sentry's attention did not follow him. It went back to his first questions, with their startling and incredible suggestion of a relationship between the dead girl and Mr. Loran; and her thoughts explored the avenues of possibility thus revealed.

This daily attendance at the trial of your husband for murder was like being hypnotized! You were immune to emotion; you sat bolt upright in a straight chair, with your eyes wide open and your face expressionless, and people hurt you in many ingenious ways, but you felt no pain.

She wondered whether she would be black and blue tomorrow, through all the tomorrows, as she had been the next day after that other occasion so long ago. But meanwhile it was a boon to feel no pain. Not even when they showed the dead girl's coat with the small blackened hole in it where the revolver muzzle had been pressed when it was fired. Not even when they showed the weapon itself, and Phil—poor Phil, so white and brave—had to testify that someone had taken it from his room at home. Then there was a man who testified about something mysterious called "lands," and said that a certain bullet had surely come from this gun. And a hotel clerk from some New Jersey mountain resort swore that two people who registered as Mr. and Mrs. Hume spent three days last August at his hotel, and that Mr. Hume was Mr. Sentry, and that Mrs. Hume was—by the photographs shown him—Miss Wines.

Mrs. Sentry felt no pain even at this. Mary had forewarned her. But she paid curious attention when Mr. Falkran gave the witness a great stack of photographs.

"Will you please select from this collection all the photographs you find of the young lady who stayed with Mr. Hume at your hotel?" he suggested.

The clerk spent a hurried fifteen minutes at the task. Twice or thrice he protested, "I don't think I can."

But Falkran urged, "Oh, come now; if you remember the girl who was with Mr. Hume so well that you can recognize her in a photograph which the State showed you, you can surely recognize her in the photographs which I show you."

Mrs. Loran—who was also Jimmy Endle's sister—attended the trial with some regularity, listening with a lively interest to the testimony, sometimes smiling and whispering to her companion of the day. Once when Mrs. Sentry and Phil came along the corridor for the afternoon session, Mrs. Loran stopped them, volubly explaining:

"Of course I know you don't want to stand here with people staring, but I thought you'd like news from Mary. Jimmy's here in town, but naturally Mary didn't come. She's staying on at Palm Beach and Jimmy's going back in two weeks." She was watching Mrs. Sentry. "Jimmy says Mary's wonderful, so gay, dancing, playing around; says you'd never think she had—anything on her mind."

And when Mrs. Sentry could not speak, she added maliciously: "I told Jimmy he should have stayed there to keep her company, but he said she has all the masculine company she can handle. A different man for every hour of the day or night if she wants them. Of course she always was so beautiful!"

Dan Fisher came up quietly behind her. He said casually: "Hallo, Mrs. Loran. I'm Fisher, of the Herald. Is it true Mr. Loran's thinking of buying a ticket to Reno?" She stared at him furiously and whirled away, and he said: "Phil, you need a guardian! Don't let women like that stick pins in your mother."

Mrs. Sentry nodded gratefully. Dan had been throughout the trial a source of strength, managing somehow to reduce all this to the level of an everyday human experience, making them realize that others, all over the world, had been from time to time pilloried as they were pilloried here. Mrs. Sentry assured herself that this was small comfort; yet it was comfort just the same, making her feel not so completely alone. She admitted to Phil on the way home one day, "You know, I begin to like Dan Fisher."

"Sure," Phil accepted. "Dan's a good scout."

She asked: "What does he think, Phil? About the trial?"

"Why, he said today that unless the State proves father was down there that night, their case won't hang together."

She looked at him in quick, springing hope. Arthur's guilt seemed to her so certain that she could not believe anyone else might doubt it. She protested:

"But all that about the key, and the bullet, and the gun, and—what the New Jersey hotel man said—"

"I know," he assented. "But Dan says that isn't enough, just—suggesting motive and premeditation and all that isn't enough—unless they can prove that father was down there that night, between eleven and twelve."

"But he wasn't!" she cried, for a moment almost believing her own words. "He was at home at quarter past eleven."

Phil, about to speak, hesitated, then held his tongue. Let his mother cling to this straw if she could. "Sure," he agreed. "So he couldn't have been down there—"

But next day listening with dull ears, and as though from a very great distance, Mrs. Sentry heard Professor Brace testify that on the night of the murder he was driving Barbara home from the North Shore. Questions and answers struck her like dull blows.

"Did you come through the city?"

"Yes."

"How did you cross the Harbor?"

"Through the Tunnel."

"Do you know the location of Sentry and Loran's place of business?"

"Yes."

"How far is it from the city end of the Tunnel?"

"A few blocks."

"If you were driving from their place of business to the Sentry home, what route would you take?"

"Past the mouth of the Tunnel, down to the station, out along the river."

Christmas A Year Late
By Edith Kirkwood

"TOMORROW'S Christmas day, tomorrow's Christmas day," little Dorothy was singing as she was prancing about the dingy apartment. She'd stop to roll up the sleeves that were continually slipping down over her hands. No wonder they didn't stay up, for the dress was one that Helen, two years older, had outgrown. Mother had meant to make it over, but she was too tired when she got home from cleaning house for other people all day.

"Hush up, Dorothy. Mother will be coming in pretty soon, and she'll cry if we say anything about Christmas," Helen reminded her.

"I don't see why. Christmas is a time to laugh, and not to cry," Dorothy responded philosophically.

"Don't you remember last Christmas, and how daddy didn't come home with our packages?" Helen couldn't believe that even so little a sister as Dorothy should forget that. For daddy had never been heard from, since that Christmas eve.

As Dorothy started to reply, Helen warned her: "Sh—, there comes mother," and the youngsters were silent when she entered. Mrs. Bond, tired and absorbed in her own anxious thoughts, did not heed their un-childlike quiet. Her apathy had developed that trait in them, and she was unaware of what her sorrow was doing to her children. She bustled herself with the simple meal, and Dorothy's faint, "Mother, is Santa coming tonight?" was the cause of her only break: "My poor baby, I'm afraid Santa doesn't even know you exist," she sobbed. She was getting them into bed, and they were soon asleep, their pillows wet with their tears that Santa was not coming. Too tired to sew, and in deepest depression, Mrs. Bond was roused from her inert brooding by a rap at the door.

Mrs. Bond was roused by a knock at the door.

A caller was unheard of. No one came to see her, for she had repelled all kindly offers of assistance when her husband disappeared. She ignored the knock. When it came again it was a significant signal, two short raps, repeated three times. Her husband's knock!

Quivering with excitement, she moved toward the door. Her fingers were trembling so that she could hardly turn the key. The door opened, and she gasped, "Tom!" as the sturdy, well-dressed man exclaimed, "Barbara!" and took her in his arms. Then, after a long embrace, he led her to the big chair she had just quitted, and drew her on his lap while they talked together.

"I left you Christmas eve to do the last-minute shopping. But an icicle struck my head, and knocked me unconscious. I couldn't remember who I was or where I lived. I went to a hotel and after a few days got work as a salesman. I told my boss my predicament, and he has been very kind. Today, Christmas shopping somehow brought back to me who and what I was. And I couldn't wait to find you!"

"But how did you ever trace us?" Barbara asked. "I thought I left no clues. I thought you had deserted me, when we found you weren't an accident case."

"Deserted you? You? My poor child," and he drew her close again. "I did have a heck of a time, but old Jack, the baggage man, finally told me where you had moved to. But now we must get ready for last year's Christmas. And next week we'll get out of this hotel." Tom's affluence was apparent.

"My dear, my dear. I don't mind the hotel, now that you are safely home," Barbara whispered.

"All right, Babs, old girl. But stop crying down my neck if you are really glad to have me back," but his tender kiss belied his joking words.

Popular Christmas Carols
Probably the best known Christmas carol is "Adeste Fideles," composed in 1700 and sung in Roman Catholic churches ever since. It was adopted in England in 1841 and sung in Protestant churches as "O Come All Ye Faithful." Among the more popular Christmas carols are "While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night," "Christians Awake," and "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." St. Ambrose is said to have written one of the first Christmas hymns in 340 A. D.

Penalized for That Which Was Unavoidable

W. B. Maxwell tells a story about the venerable Lord Halsbury, whose caddie had forced the famous lord chancellor to count a second stroke after his ball had been pulled out from under a bush. "A harsh decision," soliloquized the jurist, "and I cannot but strongly urge that if the ball was playable in law it was not playable in fact. Then how can one equitably be penalized as if committing a misdemeanor, when only doing that which is unavoidable and inevitable? I would submit that if golf be really a game of skill, and not merely a game of chance . . ." he went on until the green was reached.

Wait, Mother—Ask Your Doctor First

Never give your children unknown "Bargain" remedies to take unless you ask your doctor.

A mother may save a few pennies giving her children unknown preparations. But a child's life is precious beyond pennies. So—Ask your doctor before you give any remedy you don't know all about.

And when giving the common children's remedy, milk of magnesia, always ask for "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Because for three generations Phillips' has been favored by many physicians as a standard, reliable and proved preparation—marvelously gentle for youngsters.

Many children like Phillips' in the newer form—tiny peppermint-flavored tablets that chew like candy. Each tablet contains the equivalent of one teaspoonful of the liquid Phillips' 25¢ for a big box.

A bottle of Phillips' liquid Milk of Magnesia costs but 25¢. So—anyone can afford the genuine. Careful mothers ask for it by its full name "Phillips' Milk of Magnesia."

Sees Better Business

T. B. Gallaher, passenger traffic manager of the Santa Fe System Lines, and one of the best known transportation officials in the Southwest, predicted increased passenger business for the forthcoming year.

Gallaher, with other officials of the Railway, has just completed a survey over the company's lines, including the Southwest and, his former home and headquarters in Amarillo.

He based his predictions on a passenger upswing upon enthusiastic interest in the Exposition in San Francisco and New York, troubled foreign conditions, and speedier and more comfortable train conveniences and service.

FACE to FACE,
Your Mileage Merchant can frankly give you these same straight reasons for positive winter starting and big oil savings with your engine OIL-PLATED... more than an oil-change!

SEE how refreshing it is, the way Your Mileage Merchant—here in the paper and at his Conoco station—backs up his statements about Germ Processed oil. It brings you more than an oil-change, because right after it is pumped up from the crankcase like any oil, it does something any oil cannot do. Energized by the Germ Process—patented—it bonds to every working part and stays up lastingly in the form of OIL-PLATING. Even grindstones can scarcely remove OIL-PLATING, so it certainly cannot drain down while your car stands cold—no matter how long. Therefore the instant you want to start up, every engine part swiftly and safely slides into action on its ready OIL-PLATING—the lubricant that plainly can't be held back by any cold; that can't hold back your battery. The quick starts tell you there's no grinding wear in your OIL-PLATED engine. It won't get hoggish with your Conoco Germ Processed oil, another good straight reason for you to change to Your Mileage Merchant today.
