Ft. Stanton Rodeo Winners Announced

"The most successful celebration ever held and the best one-day rodeo in the west," was the verdict of all who attended Fort Stanton's 26th Annual Rodeo and Barbecue, July 4th. The threat of rain about noon only served to make the day more cool and pleasant and arena conditions were perfect for the rodeo which occupied the afternoon.

Ohio Miller and John Parker, Alamogordo, and Claude Brannum, Carrizozo, served as judges in the riding events. Hunt Hobbs, Captain, judged ties in the calf roping.

By late afternoon there were more than 4,700 on the grounds, according to conservative estimation based on the following: 3,330 paid admissions; 1,270 free admissions which included children, patients and other complimentary admissions; total 4,700. Almost one and one-half tons of barbecued beef, 1,800 pounds of potato salad, 4,600 buns, 4,600 individual cups of ice cream, 165 gallons of coffee and 2 barrels of pickles were consumed at the barbecue dinner.

The only accident to mar the day resulted in a broken leg for contestant J. C. Payne. While he was being taken to the hospital hats were passed about the arena and a total of $23.30 collected for the injured man who was resting easily at the U. S. Marine Hospital, Ft. Stanton, when the money was turned over to him.

BANKING LOOKS AHEAD

America is on the March!

On all sides headlines bear the glad tidings that America is marching forward again. From north, east, south and west comes news of better business, higher wages, more jobs.

Like a trained army that finds a weak spot in the enemy's defense and then attacks in full force, let us bring our united strength to bear against our common enemy—depression.

We believe that a new era lies ahead, one of close cooperation among all groups including government, workers, banks and business men. Our bank is ready to help in every way it can.

Farm Editor Visits Carrizozo

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Beyer of Elkhart, Indiana arrived in Carrizozo Wednesday; Mr. and Mrs. Beyer were married on July 1st and are on their wedding trip. After visiting points of interest in New Mexico, they intend to cross the border for a day or two of sightseeing. Mr. Beyer is farm editor of the Elkhart Truth and is gathering farm and ranch items for his paper on this trip. When we told him Lincoln County contained 3,000,000 acres he was very much impressed. The size of our farms and ranches and wide open spaces and the height of our mountains have a wonderful appeal to all people from the east.

New Location For B. & M.

Mr. E. A. Bellinger, owner of the B & M store was in Carrizozo yesterday. He states that they will be located in their new home in the Scharf building before the fall season opens. Their quarters will be commodious, lighting facilities will be perfect and a cordial greeting will be extended to people whether they buy or not. This store carries a complete and up-to-date stock of ladies' ready-to-wear and gent's furnishing goods. Just as they are located in their new home they promise a showing of advanced styles, and a larger variety of reasonable merchandise at reasonable prices. The new building will be equipped with hardwood floors, fine display cases, rest rooms, etc. Mr. Bellinger appreciates the patronage which has been given him which made it necessary to move to more roomy quarters. He expects to be in the new location and hold an opening before school starts.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Walker are the local managers, and they invite you to call at their store when in need of anything in their line.

Beauchamp-Gibbons

Friends in Carrizozo have been notified of the engagement of Miss Wilma Beauchamp and Lieut. Robert Gibbons of Marysville, Kansas, the marriage to take place, July 15. Miss Beauchamp formerly lived in Alamogordo and conducted dancing classes here for two or three years. Her dance recitals given in the Lyric Theatre were always excellent. They will live in Marysville.

Mrs. Howard Simpson and family from Tecolote, were in this week visiting.

Famous Church Dedicated

The Most Reverend A. J. Schuler, of El Paso presided at the dedication ceremonies of the famous church which has been under construction for over 20 years, and which was dedicated at Mesalero on the 4th of July with several hundred people present.

A number of priests of both the Franciscan and Jesuit Orders were present.

Father Braum, who is missionary to the Apaches and Mesaleros, and to whose patience and devotion the credit for the structure is due, could not be present on account of illness of his sister in Los Angeles.

The building is entirely native rock and was carried by hand and built without the use of any kind of tools.

The Indians in full regalia took part in the ceremonies, which were impressively beautiful.

HISTORIC MANSIONS FAST DISAPPEARING

Soon Photographs Will Be Only Record of Them.

New Orleans, La.—Richard Koch can't save his charges so he is taking pictures of them instead.

Koch, head of Louisiana's division of the WPA historic American building survey, is making records and drawing of the state's old plantation homes and historic buildings before they fall to pieces from age and neglect. He has photographed 120 of them.

The days of Louisiana's great plantation mansions are a thing of the past. The old homes, some of them built of marble and having 75 rooms, are crumbling. Their window panes are smashed and their roofs caved in. Their beauty, however, still is apparent. It is Koch's job to record it in the congressional library in Washington.

The popular conception of the Louisiana cane country is one of great manor homes with fields of cane stretching out from all sides. The planter established on his front porch sipping a mint julep. All that has gone. Today most of the cane is raised on huge, highly commercialized and mechanized plantations greatly exceeding the production of the state's 9,540 small farms averaging 100 acres each.

There are a few scattered plantations on the Mississippi river in Louisiana which are kept up in their antebellum style, Koch points out, but for the most part they have been divided into small farms. Usually amid these farms, with their humble dwellings, stands an old plantation home—magnificent in its decay, but useless to the small farmer.

Just as the ruins of the Forum at Rome and the Acropolis at Athens were caused by poorer people who "borrowed" their stones and wood to build smaller residences, so are the old Louisiana mansions being stripped of their woodwork and masonry.

Dates For Hearing By Tax Commission

Below is the itinerary of the State Tax Commission showing dates for hearings to determine the budgets for Lincoln County for the year beginning July 1st, 1939. Please note the dates for the hearings.

The opportunity is hereby afforded for citizens and taxpayers to learn something about the administration of local public affairs. At these budget hearings there will be determined the amount that will be estimated as needs for the several funds of the various units of government and also the amount and sources of revenue to be made available therefor.

Budget hearings are of the nature of a conference among State and local officials and citizens and taxpayers. It is to be hoped that all will feel the need of practicing economy and efficient management to the end that taxpayers and that means all of us, may receive the best service for our contributions for public expenditures.

Mr. Manuel R. Baca and Mr. Hugh L. Sawyers will accompany the State Tax Commission on this itinerary and will furnish such information to local taxpayers as may be desired and as it may be possible for them to give.

Play Clothes Smartly Styled Of Dependable Wash Fabrics

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

PLAY clothes have come to be a theme of themes with costume designers. The idea of wearing just any old duds when you go out to play or to rough it in camp life or mountain climbs or just simple cross-country hikes is completely taboo these days. No woman of modern outlook can afford to sidetrack the issue of being smartly and appropriately garbed wherever she goes. There's absolutely no escaping the new demand for "style" tuned to environs of the time, the place and the game. Indulge in any outdoor pastime you will, but be sure you "look the part" in the matter of correct attire.

Designers have shown no reluctance to the occasion of creating an entire wardrobe of play clothes that all one has to do is to go to specialized departments and make your needs known and you will be outfitted to the nth degree of correctness for this sports occasion or that.

However, there is more to the play clothes challenge than just style, for dependable wearability that will withstand the ravages of roughing it is of such vast importance one needs must meet the issue with all the art and science at command. Which is exactly what fabric manufacturers are doing.

Note the play clothes pictured. They are extremely fabric conscious we can assure you, demonstrating perfectly the fact of their non-shrinkableness and their color fastness. Describing these timely modes, from left to right, the perfectly tailored cloaks and shirt on the standing figure is of a wool and cotton flannel which has been scientifically sanforized shrunk in Switzerland.

A dark blouse with lighter skirt, both of sturdy cotton gabardine that has been pre-shrunk, as shown centered in the group will undoubtedly be a first choice with outdoor girls who know their 1939 fashions. Note the impeccably tailored pockets.

The Gay Nineties dressmaker bawling suit comes back again. Full skirt, basque bodice, snug-fitting waistband and tiny puffed sleeves with touches of narrow black velvet ribbon against demure yellow and white and black printed cotton describes the 1939 version of this quaint type as illustrated above to the right. Underneath this sanforized-shrunk cotton outfit jersey tights fit snugly making a complete trim and ship-shape ensemble.

Full of Nineteenth century charm, yet intensely modern with its brief bras is the beach ensemble on the seated figure in the foreground. It can be relied on to give perfect wear in that the flower print cotton which fashions it is pre-shrunk and fast color. Quaint ruffles edge the snug shorts and finish the formal little semi-fitted basque-like coat. The platform shoes are also interesting. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Hats, Tiny or Big

There is no excuse for not having a flattering hat this summer for every type is included in the showings from finest toques to brims that go to extremes in the matter of size. The diminutive hat for dinner and evening wear, as shown below, gains daily in popularity. It is here interpreted in soft iridescent feathers with a touch of shell pink velvet. The black veil is strikingly embroidered. Compared to some of the new brims the large mushroom hat shown here of black Milan is in reality quite conservative. There's no limit as to brim dimensions.

Favor Tweed-Like Liners for Suits

Although this year's lines abound in the traditional smooth finishes of the sort that denote well-bred aristocracy, many new versions are appearing. Something for the home make-your-own-clothes designer to get excited about is the smart new slubbed, nubbed and tweed-like linens which combine the celebrated coolness of flax with a fine aptitude for tailoring that insures a suit of distinction and comfort for town or travel wear.

Fruit Trims New White Straw Hats

Perfectly charming among summer-girl fashions are the new, usually large, rough white straw hats that are trimmed with clusters of gay colored fruit instead of the usual flower garnitures. This new fashion is wonderfully effective whether the hat be worn with an all-white costume or with a gay and festive silk print. It adds to the glory of this mode to carry a matching white straw handbag that is similarly fruit-trimmed.

Deck White Suits In Brass Buttons

There is a tendency to impart a military air to summer dresses and suits, made of white sharkskin or white gossamer sheer wool by the use of handsome brass buttons, and in some instances epaulets of gold braid have been added. The fad for all white with gold trimming is also carried out in that gold kid belts are being worn with classic white dresses the draping of which takes on a sculptural beauty.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

Novelty: She's not unattractive, yet no heads turn at the passes. Three years ago, she came here from a well-known woman's college with an ambition to make journalism her career. Though she made a diligent search, she couldn't find a job. Being broke, she turned to writing love stories. Though in all her life she had never had the slightest heart flutter, in fact not so much as one man friend, she succeeded in putting into her work that for which pulp paper magazine editors pray. Not only did she sell her first story but her success continued, the demand for her work being greater than she could supply. A year ago, she met a young artist. A few months later they were married. They are still supremely happy, in fact, quite mad about each other. There is just one drawback. Ever since she met the man she married, she hasn't been able to write one love story an editor would accept.

Illegal: Beggars, vendors, musicians and bootblacks have found the subways a fertile field of endeavor for quite some time. Rush hours they did not work for the simple reason that they could not pass among the loosely packed passengers. But at other times they have proffered their wares, solicited alms, shined shoes and even put on concerts and collected, the collection in each instance of course being important. And passengers locked in speeding cars simply couldn't escape. Various efforts were made to root them out but nothing much happened save an occasional disorderly conduct arrest which brought only a conduct reprimand. Recently a new state law, which makes it a misdemeanor to sell, beg, sing, dance or shine shoes in subways went into effect and now passengers have to endure only usual underground discomforts.

New York Mysteries: How taxi drivers continually quarrel yet seldom, if ever, fight... How people can stand all day watching an excavation... How New Yorkers can be squeezed to a pulp in subways yet never complain to the authorities... How thousands of small retail merchants can eke out an existence... What one night's electric bill on Broadway amounts to... How police officers escape injury in the midst of the traffic maelstrom... How movie theater doormen bark raucously all day long above the roar of the passing traffic throng without getting a sore throat... The stillness of a Sunday morning on Broadway... All of which puzzle Jean Edwards no end.

Showmen: George Jessel figures that during the last 20 years he has played more than 1,500 benefits and has served as toastmaster at 300 banquets. He recalls the time when having played his fourth benefit in one night he was on his way to play his fifth along with Eddie Cantor. Naturally it was pretty late and when Cantor and Jessel arrived at the theater, they found that everybody had left. But they had a great routine prepared and didn't want to waste it. So they called in the door man and went through the entire sketch for him. Both claim that though he was their smallest audience never had they had one more appreciative.

Don't Stop Me: The story is making the rounds concerning the actor who was reading a new book about Lincoln. Lucille Manners, the soprano, had read the book and to make conversation, during a little few minutes in a rehearsal, started to talk to the actor about it.

"It's a swell book, isn't it?" remarked Miss Manners. "Have you come to the part yet where Lincoln was assassinated?"

"Don't tell me!" shouted the actor. "Do you want to spoil the story?"

End Piece: When Mill Herth moved to his present apartment, neighbors seeing his electric organ being carried in and knowing his reputation as a swing organist, believed themselves in for a lot of sleepless nights. So imagine their surprise when they learned that Mill, when home, plays only the softest and sweetest church hymns. He used to be a church organist back in Kenosha, Wis., and likes the hymns because they remind him of old days. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

Horses Pass Speed Limit And Law Bars Pursuit

PACIFIC GROVE, CALIF.—This city, which has many antiquated "taboo" laws, ranging from prohibition against the tango to pulling down the curtains, had another one violated for the first time in many years.

It fixes the speed of horses in the city limits at six miles an hour. All the peace officer was able to ascertain was that the horses were driven "like mad" by a movie company on location, but he could not overtake them without violating the law himself.

BAKED EGGS IN HAM NESTS
See Recipe Below.

Meals That Are Different

A slice of golden-yellow cheese with a time-mellowed sharpness of flavor is the perfect accompaniment for a piece of rich, juicy, apple pie—but all too often we forget that its usefulness doesn't stop there. There are so many varieties of cheese, and so many uses for each, that menu making with this versatile food is fun.

There are rich, full-flavored cheeses, cheeses with a tempting sharpness of flavor, and delicate, mild cheeses—cheeses to suit every taste, and for every use, from appetizer to dessert.

Because cheese is high in food value and comparatively low in cost, meals built around it are nutritious and economical, too. And if you're feeding a family that won't drink milk, remember that serving cheese is an excellent way of getting more milk into the diet, for most cheese is concentrated whole milk (or milk which has been partially skimmed).

This group of cheese recipes, which I've found temptingly delicious, will help you to plan meals that are different and very good to eat. There are new flavor combinations—the sharp tang of mustard added to the mellow taste of old cheese, pungent chives with cottage cheese, and an old favorite—ham and eggs with richly flavored cheese to bring out the best in both. These recipes, which have been tested in my own kitchen, are practical and easy to use.

Swiss Cheese French Toast.
8 slices bread
1/2 cup butter
4 square slices Swiss cheese (1/2-inch thick)
3 eggs
3 tablespoons milk
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
Dash paprika
1/4 cup butter
Remove crusts from bread. Spread one side of each slice of bread with creamed butter. Make sandwiches of cheese and bread, firmly pressing edges together. Beat eggs and add milk, salt, pepper and paprika. Melt remaining butter in a skillet. Dip sandwiches in egg mixture and fry in hot butter. When golden brown on both sides, remove from pan and serve very hot.

Macaroni and Cheese.
1 cup macaroni (uncooked)
1/2 cup grated cheese
1 teaspoon salt
Black pepper
2 tablespoons butter
1/4 teaspoon paprika
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
Break macaroni in short lengths, cover with boiling salted water, and cook until soft (25-30 minutes). Drain thoroughly, and place layers of the macaroni, grated cheese, salt and pepper in a baking dish. Dot with butter. Garnish with paprika. Mix the milk and prepared mustard together and pour over the macaroni. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) about one-half hour.

Baked Eggs in Ham Nests.
Baked or boiled ham
Eggs
English muffins
American cheese (grated)
Line custard cups with thin slices of baked or boiled ham. Drop a raw egg into each cup, and bake them in a moderate oven, 325 degrees Fahrenheit, 15 to 20 minutes, or until the eggs are done. Split the muffins, toast them, then sprinkle each half generously with grated cheese. Return to a moderate oven, 325 degrees Fahrenheit, to melt the cheese. Remove the egg and ham nests from the custard cups and place one on each muffin half. Serve immediately.

Cheese Souffle

(Serves 5)
1 1/2 cups milk
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1 tablespoon butter
1/2 pound American cheese (sliced thin)
4 eggs (separated)
1/2 teaspoon paprika
2 drops tobacco sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt

Combine milk, bread crumbs, and butter in the upper part of a double boiler and heat. Add the cheese, and stir until the cheese is melted. Beat egg yolks until very light, add paprika, and tobacco sauce, and gradually stir in the cheese mixture. Add salt to egg whites, beat until stiff, and fold into a hot cheese mixture. Pour into greased baking dish and bake in a slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Serve immediately.

Hot Cheese Dreams

(Serves 4-5)
6 slices bread
6 slices American cheese
1/2 cup chili sauce
6 slices bacon

Remove crusts from bread. Toast one side of each slice. On the untoasted side place a slice of cheese and a tablespoon of chili sauce. Cut bacon slices in halves and arrange two strips of the bacon on each sandwich. Broil until the bacon is crisp and brown. Serve with small sweet pickles.

Tomato Jelly Salad With Cottage Cheese

4 cups canned tomatoes
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1 bay leaf
1/2 cup celery (chopped)
1 tablespoon onion (chopped)
4 whole cloves
2 tablespoons gelatin
1/2 cup water
1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Combine the tomatoes, salt, pepper, bay leaf, celery, onion and cloves. Cook gently for 10 minutes and strain. Soak gelatin in cold water and add to the hot tomato mixture, together with Worcestershire sauce, stirring well. Chill until set. Turn onto a large platter and serve with cottage cheese with chives in lettuce cups.

Appropriate Draperies

Linens, chintz and homespun draperies are appropriate in a colonial room, such as early American bedrooms where poster beds, patchwork quilts, hand-hooked rugs and roomy mahogany highboys furnish charm. Rooms furnished after the Southern colonial manner in lovely Chippendale, Sheraton or Heppelwhite pieces need flared damask or satin draperies and upholstery.

Scratched Furniture

If furniture becomes scratched take a small paint brush, dip it into iodine and paint the place marred. When dry, polish with any good furniture polish.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as filters intended and the result is a toxic condition that is fatal. Many people do not know that their kidneys are weak and that they are poisoning the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be itching backache, nervousness, dizziness, indigestion, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs are a swollen face or bladder disorder may be burning, sandy or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is the best remedy. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a national reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

Kansas City Tots Scorn Modern Swing Music

Swing music is definitely out as far as members of the Kansas City Toy Symphony orchestra are concerned. Appearing recently at the Golden Gate International exposition in San Francisco, the orchestra was led by young Lloyd Frederick, playing marimba, xylophone and orchestra bells in a series of difficult numbers. The tots, from 3½ to 9 years of age, are members of a Kansas City musical school.

Pedal Plane Speedy—At Least on Ground

Resembling a winged baby buggy, this peculiar looking contraption is the invention of Paul Fouilleul (right) of Paris. The propeller is powered by pedals. M. Fouilleul has not as yet attempted to take off, but has high hopes that the plane will fly. Ground tests have shown a possible speed of 35 kilometers per hour.

Too Much Water Will Make Plants Appear Scraggly

If your house plants appear scraggly and sickly, it may be that they get more water than they can assimilate. If you use a jardiniere, put the plant in an ordinary florist's pot with drainage vent in the bottom, and be sure that the jardiniere is large enough to permit the pot to rest on small blocks of wood or stones so that excess water may drain away from the roots. Keep the soil loose with a small claw tool or fork, but be careful not to injure the roots when loosening the dirt. The ideal way to water plants, of course, is to set them in a tub of water and allow the roots to absorb the moisture through the bot-

ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

By

Elmo Scott Watson

The First Rebel

JAMES SMITH led the first uprising of American colonists against England, drew the first blood in actual battle and all this 10 years before the Revolution began.

At the age of 18, young Smith was captured and held prisoner for four years by the Caughmawaga Indians. During this time he not only acquired their skill in woodcraft and their cunning in warfare but also learned to hate the traffic in whisky and rifles that both the French and British were carrying on with the Indians. He could see the disastrous effects on the red man of the white man's greed for money.

Smith organized a band of frontiersmen called "Black Boys," in 1763. Their purpose was to keep the drunk and bloodthirsty Indians out of Conococheague valley. But two years later, Smith decided that the best way to fight them was to cut off their source of supply for whisky and arms. Accordingly, his "Black Boys" held up a pack train and burned the goods.

On May 6, 1765, a platoon of British Highlanders, members of the Forty-second regiment of His Majesty's army in America—the famous "Black Watch"—marched on the town of Fort Loudon, Pa., to preserve law and order and put this lawless band of "Black Boys" in their place.

But when the British soldiers reached Smith's forces and Sgt. McGlanham ordered them to "Halt! In the king's name, halt!" a pitched battle followed in which the soldiers were driven into the cabin of a certain Widow Barr. The rebels kept them there until the British agreed to march back to Ft. Loudon from whence they came. And so the truly first battle of the American Revolution, fought 10 years before the famous battle of Bunker Hill, was won by America's first rebel, James Smith.

Sky Pilot of Deadwood

AMONG the thousands of adventurers who took part in the gold rush to the Black Hills of South Dakota in 1870 was Connecticut-born Henry Weston Smith.

Smith arrived at Deadwood when the town was at the height of its untempered glory. But he was not ceasing gold. He picked rip roaring Deadwood to try out his preaching talents.

He preached in the streets, but received no money for it, supporting himself by manual labor such as cutting trees, chopping wood and firing a sawmill boiler. Even his preaching was not only spiritually but physically difficult—he had to shout at the top of his voice to be heard above the faucous calls of the gamblers and entertainers.

On Sunday, August 20, 1870, after his usual morning services in the main street of Deadwood, he started out for Crook City, 10 miles away. He put his Bible in one pocket, the copy of his sermon in another and pinned a note on his cabin door that said, "Gone to Crook City, and if God is willing, will be back at 2 p. m."

God wasn't willing. When about halfway there, he was stalked and killed by a Sioux war party. For some strange and unknown reason, the Indians did not rob him or scalp him, but crossed his hands peacefully on his breast and put his Bible in them.

The Railroad Raider

ON THE morning of April 12, 1862, a train stopped at Marietta, Ga., en route from Atlanta to Chattanooga. An unusually large number of men passengers came aboard, claiming they were refugees from within the Yankee lines and wanting to join the Confederate forces.

When the train stopped at Big Shanty for breakfast, James J. Andrews, a citizen from Flemingsburg, Ky., and one of the large party of alleged refugees, cut away all but three cars, climbed into the cab and steamed away.

Capt. W. A. Fuller, who was in charge of the train, dashed to the telegraph office to warn the station agents up the line but found that the telegraph wires had been cut. Andrews really was the leader of a group of Union soldiers in civilian clothes who started out to paralyze traffic on the Western and Atlantic railroad—one of the vital arteries of Confederate transport.

Captain Fuller got a handcar and with a couple of men started in pursuit. But Andrews burned 10 bridges, pulled up many sections of track and placed several obstacles along the right of way, all while keeping ahead of his pursuers who finally abandoned the handcar when they were able to board a locomotive.

About to be overtaken, Andrews set fire to the last freight car, left it on a bridge and ran into the woods with his crew. Mounted militia finally captured all of Andrews' party and he, with several others, was executed as a spy.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Oilcloth Folders for Your Cooking Booklets.

EVERY efficient kitchen has a book shelf. The paper back booklets that all homemakers love to collect may be placed in bright oil cloth folders so that they will make a brave show along with the bound cook books.

The prettiest folders of this sort that I have seen were made in green and yellow to match the kitchen-color scheme. The diagrams given here show exactly how they were made. It is generally best to sort the booklets according to subjects rather than size.

The folders are stiffened with cardboard so they hold booklets of different sizes neatly. The cardboard should be cut the size of the largest booklet in the group. The fabric side of both pieces of oilcloth should be entirely covered with paste to make it stick smoothly to the cardboard. Letter or write the general subject of the booklets on a label and paste it on the back. Place the folder flat under something heavy until it is dry.

NOTE: Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties, and Embroideries, are now 15 cents each, or both books for 25 cents. Readers who have not secured their copies of these two books should send in their orders at once, as no more copies will be available when the present stock is sold. Your choice of the QUILT LEAFLET illustrating 30 authentic patchwork stitches; or the RAG RUG LEAFLET, will be included with orders for both books for the present, but the offer may be withdrawn at any time. Leaflets are 6 cents each when ordered without books.

Everyone should have copies of these two books containing 98 HOW TO SEW articles by Mrs. Spears, that have not appeared in the paper. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Clean Ice Trays.—Each week wash the ice tray with a baking soda solution. This prevents the development of stale and musty odors in the ice cubes.

Mother Should Manage.—Youngsters should not be allowed to manage their money at first, while wisdom and character are still developing. Better to increase the pocket money and make them responsible for small things such as stockings, ties. After about two years the young people will have gradually learned how to manage for themselves.

Keeping Mustard Fresh.—Mustard will keep fresh and moist much longer if a pinch of salt is added during the mixing.

Storing Honey.—Store honey in a warm, dry place. It should not be kept in the cellar or in a damp place as it will absorb moisture and ferment.

For Yellowed Knife Handles.—If the handles of knives become yellow soak them in peroxide for four hours, then place out of doors in the sun.

A Proclamation
By the Governor

WHEREAS, the forest and water resources of New Mexico are items of the highest importance to the welfare of the State; and

WHEREAS, the forests and waterheds are seriously threatened by fire through a culmination of adverse climatic conditions which make them inflammable to an extent that an emergency exists; and

WHEREAS, there have been numerous dangerous forest fires during the past week, some of which are still being patrolled as a preventative measure and all of which were started through human carelessness; and

WHEREAS, the situation is so acute that the Forest Service has taken emergency measures including the closing of the National Forests to the discharge of any type of fireworks or firecrackers; and

WHEREAS, I have instructed State departments and officers to take measures to prevent forest fires;

NOW, therefore, I, John E. Miles, Governor of the State of New Mexico, appeal to all citizens in the State to use adequate precautions to prevent forest, brush and grass fires, and particularly to avoid acts of carelessness such as dropping matches or burning tobacco and leaving camp or other fires before they are completely extinguished.

Done at the Executive Office, this 21st day of June, 1939. Witness my hand and the Great Seal of the State of New Mexico.

Vacuum Gearshift

Rarely has a new automotive feature scored a hit with the public as has the new vacuum gearshift with steering column control, introduced by Chevrolet on its 1939 models.

Car buyers everywhere have shown overwhelming preference for it, as against the conventional shift. Approximately 90 per cent of the 1939 Chevrolets sold have been equipped with the vacuum shift, according to sales figures released by Central Office statisticians.

Simplicity characterizes this new gearshift, according to Ed. Hedner, national director of Service for Chevrolet. The vacuum principle is not new, since trucks for years have had vacuum-powered brakes, but its application to the gearshift is a distinct advance in engineering. The new shift is relatively fool proof, and trouble-free mechanically.

Regulations Governing Registrations

The first permanent registration of voters in New Mexico is to be begun July 3.

Between this date and July 31, registration clerks, one Democrat and one Republican, will make a house to house canvass in every precinct or voting division in the state to register the voters.

Each bi-partisan team of clerks will have a supply of blank affidavits for this purpose.

So that the voting public may be fully informed as to the operation of the new law, Miss Violet C. Hoffman, director in charge of registration for the state, has sent "mats" to The Lincoln County News with the request that they be published.

The "mats," published herewith, show a facsimile of the original affidavit. Two have been furnished to illustrate the different ways in which they are to be filled out, according to whether the registrant is the resident of a city or a rural precinct, and also according to whether he is able to write his own signature or has to have a mark (X) made for him. Looking at one of these you can tell how your affidavit should appear when it is filled out properly; likewise ascertain what information will be required of you by the registration clerks.

The affidavit comes in sets of three—the original, the duplicate and the triplicate copy. All are to be filled out at the same time, in the case of each voter, by means of carbon paper. You, the registrant, will get one copy, the triplicate or blue copy. The others are to be left with the registration clerks, to be turned in later to the county clerk. On election day one, the original, will go to the election judges in your precinct, the other will stay in the county clerk's office.

Instructions sent out to the registration clerks by Mrs. Gonzales, Secretary of State, and Miss Hoffman say:

"Be sure to impress upon the elector the necessity of keeping his copy of the affidavit as it is evidence of his right to vote and when presented to the judges of election will insure his receiving a ballot on election day."

The affidavit must be filled out by a registration clerk in the presence of the other, say the instructions.

The registration will be permanent and personal.

Everybody has to register himself, if he is registered at all, whether it is by signing his own name or merely making his mark in the presence of witnesses. Your wife can't register for you, nor you for her.

In view of this Miss Hoffman believes it will be necessary for the registration clerks to do quite a bit of night work, to catch working people at home. She has asked them to keep a careful record of those whom they fail to find at home, in their house to house canvass, and to return to their places again and again if necessary.

Registered at this time, it will not be necessary for the voter to register again during the rest of his life at any primary, general, city or special election unless his registration is cancelled for cause.

A married woman must register under her husband's name, as: Brown, Mrs. G. W., and not Brown, Mrs. Helen.

Registration clerks have been instructed to ask the voter if he wishes to register as a member of any political party, but to disclose no information and make no unnecessary remarks. If a person wishes to vote in the primary he must be registered as a member of a political party; if he doesn't he need not state his party affiliation to be eligible to vote at the general election.

At the primary there will be two ballots, one Democratic and one Republican. To get one or the other you must be registered, under the primary law, as a member of one party or the other. The registration law had to be shaped with this in view.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

BUT IT'S JUST AS GOOD

YOU have had the experience, haven't you, of going into some stores and asking for an advertised brand of goods, only to have the clerk hand you another brand and inform you, "But it's just as good."

Sometimes, to your regret, you bought the "just as good" item but sometimes you walked out of the store and searched until you found the merchandise you had asked for in the first place. When you got it you were satisfied.

You had confidence in the advertised goods, because you read in the honest pronouncements of the advertiser what you might expect his product to do for you. This gave you assurance. You bought because you had confidence.

But when that clerk palmed off something different on you, you had misgivings, you had doubts, you had fears, you had lack of confidence.

Maybe they were justified. Maybe they were not. It doesn't matter. The fact remains that advertising had invested the advertiser's goods with a confidence which made your buying a pleasant in place of a fearful duty.

Usually, but not always, these "just as good" goods are not as good—they are inferior and the merchant sells them because they carry more profit for him. He does his level best to get rid of them, because it is more to his advantage to do so than it is to yours.

Many stores pay their salesman a commission for selling unknown and unadvertised goods, because the salesman would not sell them without some special inducement.

It is much better for you as a consumer to put your reliance absolutely in advertised goods and in stores which advertise, and to patronize both exclusively.

When a man advertises his goods and tells frankly and publicly what they will do for you, he seeks your patronage on the basis of actual value.

It may be that some manufacturers or merchants can offer just as good value in unknown or unadvertised goods. But the chances are ten to one that they can't—because advertising not only increases the distribution of goods, but at the same time increases the production, so that advertised goods cost less to make; hence, gives more to the buyer.

In the long run you get more for your money when you buy advertised goods. You get more in actual value. And also get more in that intangible value, known as confidence.

And confidence is one of the chief satisfactions of life.

White Man Must Eventually Leave Orient But Japan's Current Attempt Is Doomed

Danger of Another War Expected to Change Tokyo's Program.

By HAROLD KINGSLEY

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Once upon a time there was a stubborn little Japanese boy who wanted to make an impression on a little Chinese girl. He offered her presents but they were refused. He even whipped her, which was ungentlemanly, but her spirit remained unbroken. Finally the little Jap boy discovered the little Chinese girl had stronger love for a little white boy whose father might have been French or British and whose father was American. So the Jap boy decided the only way to win his maiden's heart was to get rid of competition—chase the white boy back to his own block.

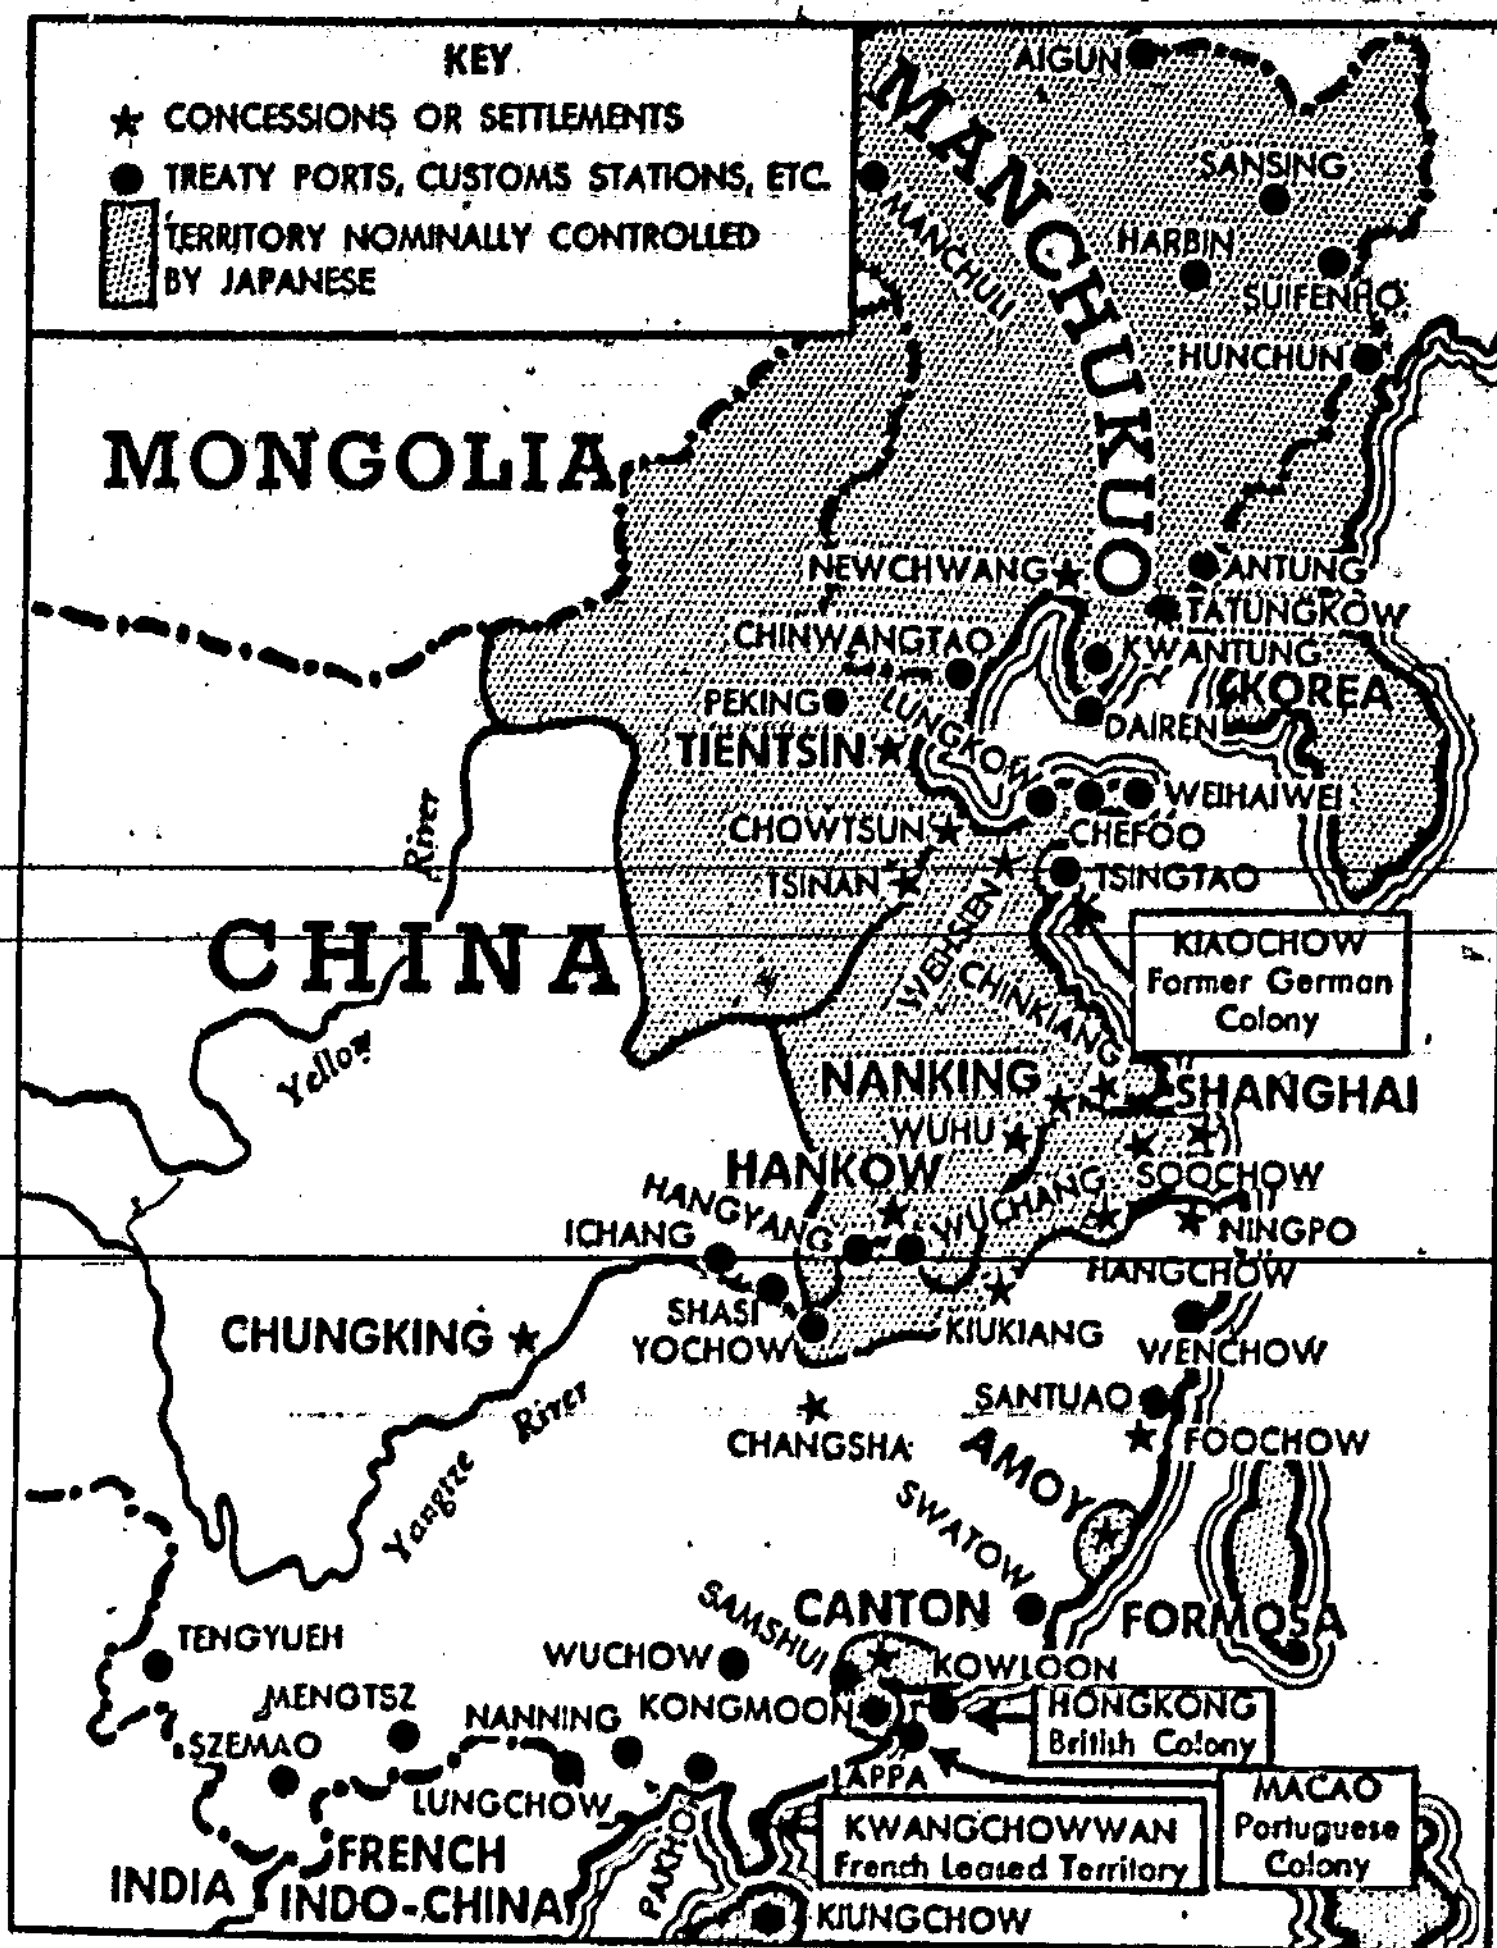

Such, in storybook language, is the situation in China today. It popped into headlines a few weeks ago when Japan threw a barricade around the British concession at Tientsin, but the very nature of that move revealed that Tokyo was merely looking for an excuse.

Make Mountain of Molehill:

Japan demanded surrender of four Chinese charged with murdering a native official sympathetic to the Jap cause. The British refused, claiming insufficient evidence. When Jap protests were met with offers of arbitration or mediation, Tokyo replied with demands which made a mountain of a molehill and enlarged the Tientsin incident into an argument involving Britain's entire Far Eastern policy. The Japs demanded that London give no aid to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, give up 50,000,000 Chinese dollars held by a bank in the British concession, and co-operate "loyally" with North China's new Japanese government.

Tientsin, therefore, was merely part of a deliberate campaign to embarrass Britain and force her into concessions at a time when she was busy shooting off Hitler and Mussolini on the European front.

Why? This goes back to the storybook tale of the Jap boy, the Chinese girl and the handsome young white lad, who, incidentally, had a pair of dirty hands. It goes back exactly 100 years to 1839 when Britain waged its infamous opium war precipitated when Chinese mandarins protested against British import of opium from China. From this victory came the 1842 treaty giving Britain the highly coveted island of Hongkong. At the same time China opened Shanghai, Canton, Amoy, Foochow and Ningpo as treaty ports for world traders.

Trend Changed in 1920.

Thus began the new era in China. Through subsequent years the white man's exploitation grew until 1920, when Chiang Kai-shek came to power and began demanding that Occidentals be denied the unusual privileges which had made them practically overlords of China. But Chiang changed his tune in 1934 when Japan's new imperialism forced him to begin seeking help of Americans and Europeans.

That search has continued in the two years since Japan invaded Peking, flattened Shanghai and crushed Hankow. Driven ever westward by the mighty Tokyo war machine, the Chinese government has not collapsed as the victor planned, but has gained new strength from the support of western democracies. Today, though thousands of square miles rest under Jap domination, China is paradoxically more united than when the war started!

No nation is blameless in China. All have exploited this ancient land to its utmost, so Japan need have fewer compunctions about the job she must do. This is no license to wage war and bomb innocents, but with her maddening self-righteousness she feels obliged to wipe out the white man in China. The reason is clear: So long as he remains, just that long will the Chinese have faith in Japan's inability to capture their nation.

Conflict With 'New Order'

Banks in the British concessions shelter Chinese silver which has longed to governments supplanted by the Japanese, and which Tokyo needs to establish yen currency in China. Moreover, Japanese soldiers must move cautiously around foreign concessions lest international incidents result. In short, Japan plans a "new order" in which China will be swallowed politically and economically. So long as Occidentals get the cream of Chinese trade, this new order cannot be realized.

But the Land of the Rising Sun has a foolishly stubborn philosophy, a patriotism that often borders on insanity and a disregard for tradition that may some day lead to a smack on the chin. Already starving from her two-year war in China, Japan now risks involvement with the western democracies and Russia at a time when a new war would be national suicide.

She wants no alliance with Italy and Germany, yet the stubborn resistance of Britain and the U. S. over the Tientsin incident is good evidence that only a European war can force London to capitulate to her demands. Such a development would hasten the inevitable pact between Russia and Britain, thus bringing the Soviet into full play on Japan's Manchukuan border. Surrounded by enemies and inevitably meeting revitalized resistance in China, Japan would be in poor shape.

But what of the inevitable? Can white men continue to keep "face" in a modern, industrialized Orient? Immediate issues notwithstanding, both Chinese and Japanese are disgusted with a medieval system of foreign concessions. Eventually they will feel their strength and arise. On that day the white man must go back home and the Orient will return to its honorable fathers.

Steamer Travel Was Big Adventure in Old Days

Among the objects seen by visitors to the Maritime museum of Gothenburg, Sweden, is a steamship ticket issued in 1858. It contains these regulations:

"Each passenger will be furnished the following rations weekly: Seven pounds of ship's bread, two pounds of salt pork, two and one-quarter pounds of flour, one pound of salt herring, and a daily ration of one can of water for drinking and washing purposes. These rations are furnished from the ship's supplies, but each passenger must furnish his own butter, sugar, mustard, syrup, pepper, and vinegar. Each passenger is responsible for bringing his own bed clothing and tin dishes for eating, drinking, and washing purposes. The ship's master has the right to withhold water cations until the promenade deck has been swept and cleaned each day by the passengers."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK—Filming of Kipling's "The Light That Failed" on the New Mexico desert, near Santa Fe, was delayed the other day when a savage wind blew the tents away. The pugnacious William Wellman, the director, long known as "Wild Bill," enjoys fighting sandstorms, having licked one almost single-handed when he was filming "Beau Geste," in Arizona. He probably got a few good shots of the storm and will work them into the film, with his gift for improvisation.

He was the flying partner of Tommy Hitchcock, the polo player, in the Lafayette Escadrille in the World war, and revealed an instinct for showmanship by playing tunes on German tower bells with a machine gun as he zipped around the beirly. It was said that, before the Germans dropped him in a tree and sent him home, he could peg out "Silver Threads Among the Gold" without a sour note.

In aviation films, he has employed effectively both his histrionic talents and his training in air acrobatics. His film, "Wings," of 1920, touched off his expanding fame. "Men With Wings," of last year, rated by discerning critics as a top-bracket film, told the story of aviation from the day of the Wright brothers' first flight.

He was known at times, around Hollywood, as "Screwball Bill," but has slimmered down considerably since he married Dorothy Coonan, finding a desert sandstorm only mildly diverting, considering his rough-and-tumble past.

He is, however, as Irish as ever, and his famous aerial flight with an unknown Paris antagonist probably will continue. On leave in Paris, he found it necessary to re-buke an offensive stranger by knocking him stiff as a plank. Late, in Chicago, the stranger, spying Mr. Wellman on the street, did the same to him. A year or two later, in Hollywood, seeing his unknown sparring partner crossing the street, Mr. Wellman put himself one up by a blow to the chin. There have been other encounters. I believe the score is now even. But he bears no grudge. It is just a detail of his native ebullience, which leads him to such devices as galvanizing the chairs on the lot so his working crew can't sit down.

With Capra, La Cava and Hitchcock, he is achieving a sharp characterization and finished technique, as the movies get into long pants and offer adult entertainment. He grew up in Brookline, Mass., tried to sell chocolates and woolen goods, but didn't, went to the war with an ambulance unit and won the Croix de Guerre with the Lafayette Escadrille. His friend, Douglas Fairbanks Sr., steered him to Hollywood, soon after the war, as a messenger boy for Goldwyn. In 10 years, he did almost everything for every studio in Hollywood, before he hit his stride with "Wings."

He is 43, slender, whippy, with a touch of gray in his curly brown hair, and is apt to sock anybody in an argument and then affectionately buy him a drink. "A Star is Born" hiked his fame considerably.

THIS reporter asked several informed persons if they knew that a woman was assistant secretary of the United States treasury.

None of them did. Mrs. Blair Banister, who holds that office, would find encouragement in that. She tells the Regional Conference of Democratic Women at Washington that the decreasing public excitement about women in office is a good sign. Their status in public life, if that's what interests them, is so assured that they no longer are "glaring headlines" when they are put in a responsible post.

Mrs. Banister is a sister of Senator Carter Glass, one of a family of six boys and six girls, all following their father's business—newspaper work. Her sister, Dr. Meta Glass, is president of Sweetwater college. Mrs. Banister left Lynchburg, Va., in 1919, to assist George Creel's committee on public information. She was appointed to the treasury post in July, 1933.

'America,' Largest U. S. Boat, Is Launched at Newport News

JULY 15 is the proudest day in American maritime history. On that day the "America," new flagship for the United States lines and largest liner to be built in this country, slides down the ways at Newport News. How is a modern steamship built? These pictures tell the story.

Above: Blading the low pressure turbines. Some 15,000 of these delicate metal blades are required for the turbine casing shown here, arranged in semi-circular parallel rows. Some 15,000 more blades will be fitted into the rotor which fits into this casing. Left: An early construction picture at Newport News where seven cranes swung to and fro amid a clatter of riveting machines that would put most July Fourth celebrations to shame. Here the ship rises slowly as months go by.

Finally, the christening and launching of the finished vessel. Scheduled to enter service next spring, the "America" is 723 feet long, 93 feet in the beam and 75 feet deep from the promenade deck. It will accommodate 1,219 passengers in all three classes, and a crew of 639.

Pharaohs Also Had Refugees; Solved Problem With Slavery

CHICAGO—Ancient Egypt, no less than the world today, had a refugee problem, Prof. Harold H. Nelson of the University of Chicago's Oriental Institute has discovered.

Professor Nelson, field director of the epigraphic and architectural survey of the institute, made this disclosure on his return from Egypt where he has been directing work of deciphering records on the walls of the temples and palaces of Ramesses III at Luxor.

The ancient Egyptians were faced with a refugee problem when people of neighboring countries were dispossessed by invading barbarians and attempted to overrun Egypt. These refugees were made slaves.

Dictators Held Sway. "It is interesting to note historically," said Professor Nelson, "that these ancient governments were actually dictatorships, though not of the totalitarian types of Germany and Italy."

In conflicts among the ancient states, people of less developed countries usually "moved in on" more developed countries, Professor Nelson pointed out. Today, the trend is for highly developed, industrialized countries to seek to move in on less developed countries and exploit their resources.

"The motives, however, of the old and new dictators, it seems, were the same," said Professor Nelson. "They might and seek plunder, to better their own conditions, to take over the good things the other countries have."

Propagandists Were Active. Professor Nelson revealed that in the "old days," 1500 B. C., the same type of political propaganda practiced today was known and used. No record, for example, was publicized of defeats, and mistakes were carefully concealed.

Ramesses once admitted his army was defeated but said that he, personally, turned the tide," commented Professor Nelson. "We have found records of the 'other side' and the same event takes on a new appearance. Ramesses took a licking."

The refugee problem of the ancients differed in another important respect from the situation today. Then there was no conflict of political ideology, as exists in Spain. There was no public sentiment on the subject. People were merely driven out of their countries by invaders, and superior numbers had more weight than today, when mechanical advantage looms so much more important.

Refugee Problems Created. "Populations also were deliberately shifted and a refugee problem created in ancient countries also to break the national power of rival states. The Assyrians practiced this in the Eighth and Seventh centuries B. C.

"Other nations, notably the Romans, shifted populations for a double purpose: To reward or pension soldiers and at the same time garrison strategic border areas. This practice was carried on virtually up to the World war as evidenced by the Turks' shift of Circassians to defend the desert frontier against attacking Arab tribes."

Professor Nelson revealed that the inscriptions on the walls of the ruins at Luxor, when transcribed and annotated, will fill seven huge volumes. Four of these volumes are completed.

Comma Outweighs The Mere Period On Super Scales

PITTSFIELD, MASS.—The power behind a mosquito's bite is the punch of a super-lightweight, an explanation point is four times heavier than a period, and there are about 3,300,000 grains of sugar per pound.

Such irrelevant information has arrived from weight studies by Dr. Harry F. Miller, General Electric microscopist, with super-sensitive scales, a microchemical balance.

The throbbing sting of the mosquito-bite results from a small object indeed, according to Dr. Miller's figures. The mosquito's stinger weighs only .000018 of a grain, or .0000008 of an ounce.

Punctuation is also lightweight matter. Dr. Miller's measurements disclose that a period weighs only .0000001 of an ounce. This comma (,) is twice as heavy and an exclamation point weighs all of .0000008 of an ounce.

Art's thumb jerked backward. "I want to know who is that girl! And is she married to that Jasper?"

Following the thumb, Breck looked through the open doorway, seeing a section of tourist pasture fence. Irene and Toby stood there, coaxing horses with bunches of grass. The animals held off suspiciously.

"Her name is Miss Sutherland," he answered, then added with deliberate purpose, "they aren't married—not yet."

Without a word Art turned and sauntered back to his camp. He waited there a moment, then threw down his hat and continued on until he halted next to Irene. Breck saw her smile, and saw Art hold something over the bars. At once the horses came to his hand, nodding their heads comically as they took lumps of sugar.

Irene shrieked and clutched the fence. Art laughed with her, wiping his hands on his trouser legs.

Breck left the door open when he resumed work, and between pages of his diary watched the progress of events outside. He saw Toby go back to the Senator's camp; probably upon Irene's order. She strolled over to young Tillson's packs, where he whirled a rope for her, displayed his horse-hair bridle, his saddle with silver trimmings, his white silk square which she allowed him to knot about her throat.

Even the brown salt-bags interested her. At that Breck slammed the door and finished his writing in grim seclusion.

He gave the tourists until one o'clock to be sufficiently aroused, then walked up to their camp. Irene had come in and was lying on one of the pine-needle beds. From her position flat on her back, she called, "Hello, Gordon! Where have you been all morning? Glorious day, isn't it? I should think a ranger would be riding the trails."

Breck went over to her. "He will be riding them this afternoon. I want you and the Senator to come along."

"O dear!" Irene propped herself upon one elbow. "I would adore it; but Arthur promised to take me fishing."

"Arthur did," Breck mimicked. "How nice."

Irene smiled dreamily. "He's so genuine. A perfect specimen of a man. He can braid the cutest ropes out of leather."

"And of course you need a leather rope!"

"Now, Gordon, I do believe you're being sarcastic," Irene lay back on the bed, looking up at him.

"What's that about riding?" The Senator ambled from his tent and sat on a stump near them. "Gordon, did you say ride? Boy, what do you think I'm made of! Give me time."

"It's better if you get in the saddle every day," Breck advised him. "Stiffness wears off quicker. I've got some trail signs to put up west of here this afternoon. We'll get a look at Kern River gorge."

"All right. But I need a derrick to hoist me on that animal!"

Half an hour later when Breck and the Senator rode west toward Kern River, Irene was still in camp. Breck wondered if her talk had been purely to annoy him.

He had planned this trip for the double purpose of putting direction signs along the trail, and doing a little missionary work on Sutherland. They rode into a beautiful part of the country, rugged, thick with giant fir, often coming over ridges that raised unlimited vistas of the Sierra roof.

But it was a trail that had not been worked for three years. Fallen trunks and slides of earth repeatedly blocked it, forcing them to dismount and lead their horses along the mountain slope. Covertly, Breck watched the Senator. He had tourists' knees, that once bent, refused to straighten. The continued climbing off and on became exasperating.

"What the devil's wrong here! He turt out at last. This is worse than no trail at all. Hasn't it ever been cleared?"

Breck halted, hooking one knee about his saddle horn. "Not for some time, Senator. A shame isn't it? They tell me this used to be camper's paradise. But, thunder, no one can get into it now."

Sutherland glowered along the particular trunk that sprawled its hundred foot length in front of him. "Why not put a gang of men to work? They could open it."

"Who would pay them?"

"Why, the government, of course."

"On seventy-eight dollars?"

"What do you mean seventy-eight dollars?"

"That's exactly the amount my chief was allowed for trail work this year."

"The deuce it was!"

Breck laughed, and deciding to let that one point sink in, wheeled his horse toward home.

The shadows were lengthening before them when they came into Rock House. Breck's thoughts returned to Irene, and a little later were materialized by two figures sitting on a boulder where the meadow creek began its descent. The trail led close to them. Irene looked up, waving one hand as her father passed. Art Tillson kept his eyes on the stream.

"Who is that fellow?" the Senator asked, riding on to the corral.

"A cowboy," Breck answered. "Owns a herd north of here."

"Safe enough, I suppose? He looks like a pretty determined customer."

Breck considered. "Safe enough for Irene," he said then. "I only hope the boy doesn't take it too seriously."

He might have told Sutherland more, but felt the time had come for him to explain things to Irene herself.

That night he went to their camp with a Dutch-oven supper of roast meat, potatoes and carrots that he had left buried in the coals all day; and after the meal, passed time with heels. He did not go out and she went directly to the corral where Art had brought up her horse.

Breck understood the game. Perhaps Irene could not lope cowboy fashion, though she knew how to center well enough, having been taught that by various young men on the social paths of Flintridge. Now she was sweetly helpless. Art saddled for her, readjusted her stirrups, let her put one dainty boot on his knee in assisting her to mount.

Then he handed up a leather quilt, the braiding of which must have taken half the night.

Side by side they moved out across the meadow, heading toward a level spot beyond the stream.

Breck left his cabin. The Senator came down from his camp to meet him.

"Well, my boy," he chuckled, "your treatment worked. I'm not nearly as stiff this morning. Where do we go today?"

Breck had intended a trip into country where Sutherland could find tree and surveyed the meadow, following with his eyes up a narrow arm that disappeared behind a ridge of rock. For a moment he stood doubtful. Perhaps he was making too much of the whole affair. He strode back to work.

It was half an hour later when two figures came from the gap and turned toward his station. Immediately Breck saw the unusual distance between them. Irene rode in the lead. Art held back. They kept that position across the meadow and at the stream Irene swung up to the camp alone.

Art loped into the tourist pasture, brought out his mules and saddled them. Then he lashed on the salt bags, drawing cinches savagely and cursing any animal that moved.

With packs secured, he flung himself into the saddle and pushed his train in a fast walk north toward Sulphur Creek.

"And that," Breck wondered, "means what?" It could mean much, and he knew the waste of time in trying to guess. One thing he felt would follow now. Irene would come back to him. She usually did. Give her time.

He cooked his noon meal, loitered in sight about the cabin, then went back to finish his shoeing. Goof was the last. Breck had three shoes on the mule and the fourth fitted, when a small voice behind him said:

"You don't know how poetic you look! The village smithy!"

He dropped the hoof and turned. Irene was perched on a log.

"How long have you been there?" he asked.

"Hours. I thought you would never look around."

Breck picked up the hoof again and tacked on the chop. "Where's Arthur?"

"That cowhand?" Irene corrected. "O, he couldn't stay any longer. Had come important business tonight." She drew her shoulders together in a little disdainful shrug. "I can't stand a brag."

Breck bent the nails and clinched them, then finished off with the rasp. He wanted to let Irene continue of her own accord.

She did presently; moving nearer and sitting on the anvil. "He was an interesting fellow. But he misunderstood my motives."

"Of course," Breck agreed. "How could he know that you were doing it mostly for me to watch?"

"Why, how can you say that?"

Before answering, Breck released Goof, picked up his tools and put them in the box. Then he sat down beside her. "Irene, we're not children."

Suddenly she put both hands on his arm, laughing. "You are, Gordon! Just a big boy. You're not really disturbed, are you?"

Breck frowned. "You haven't helped matters by sending Tillson off like that."

"Pooh! I'm not afraid of him."

"That isn't what I mean."

"You're afraid of him?" Irene smiled.

Breck ignored her. "I don't like to have things more complicated, that's all."

"He's just a big brag, Gordon. I found that out. And my woman's instinct tells me a brag is usually harmless."

"Not this one," Breck asserted. He paused midway in rolling a cigarette, then crushed the paper in his hand. "What did Tillson brag about?"

"Oh, what a man he is in these mountains. How many cows he owns and how he is the big boss here. Except for a brother, who is boss too. He can even forecast events, like—oh I can't remember. I was tired of it by that time."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

"How long have you been there?" he asked.

stories of his work, waiting until he was alone with Irene.

"Now," she said, facing him from her seat across the fire when all others had finally gone to their tents, "I know what you're going to do. You're going to lecture me. Save it."

"Why should I lecture you?" Breck asked.

Irene gave a little shrug, half impatience, half the manner of a naughty child. "Oh, I suppose it's your job. The ranger keeping tabs on his people and all that."

"All right," he agreed, "it is part of my job. But not the way you put it. He knew he could talk to her openly. Her instincts were well-bred; she would not betray his confidences. Things have happened up here, Irene; serious things. I'm not trying to frighten you and this matter needs concern you at all. Only—don't play up to that boy any more."

Irene's eyes opened wide in the fire's glow. "Play up to him?"

"Oh, come now, we understand each other! He's nothing to you."

"He interests me."

"So does a queer bug."

"Gordon!"

"Sorry; I'm not trying to be rude. Will you drop him?"

"The bug?"

Breck stared at her, exasperated. She had never so put all her effort into being antagonistic. "You'll have to mind me, Irene," he vowed.

"That boy is not friendly to the forest service. He's dangerous. I can't let you bring on any more trouble. Things are close to an edge already."

For an instant she seemed to comprehend. But her sardonic smile banished that. "It makes a man awfully dangerous if a girl cuts him, Gordon. You understand how that is."

"You mean you have a date with Tillson?"

"Tomorrow. He promised to teach me how to lope. I certainly cannot refuse."

"You'll have to."

"Oh pooh! You can't prevent us from riding on your meadow." Irene paused, frowned, smiled brightly.

"Really," she finished, "if you are so worried, you can invite your cowboy friend and go with us."

Breck stood up, concealing his flare of anger. He knew, with Irene in this mood, any further argument was futile. He could only appeal to her reason.

"Think it over," he asked. "I'm not fooling."

Any thought she may have given to it during the night did not change her action the next morning. About nine o'clock Breck saw her come down to the tourist pasture, dressed in fresh riding habit, with little black-need spur jingling at her golden trout, but now canceled it. "I'm sorry. I'll have to put off our ride. My horse has cast a shoe and I might as well go over the whole bunch at once."

He felt it unwise to leave the station as long as Irene was nearby, courting trouble. His fear was not for her. She could freeze a man when the time came. Yet if Tillson realized she had deliberately made a fool of him, there was no telling what way his vengeance would turn.

"Anything suits me," the Senator answered genially. "I'll take Mary for a walk up the canyon. The fish can wait."

"Tomorrow, maybe," Breck suggested, but gave even that with mental reservation.

When Sutherland had gone back to camp Breck tied his stock under a pine and went to work. He had attempted the job only once before, and that was at headquarters with Sierra Sim's help. Now he had no envy for the village blacksmith.

At times when he straightened from bending over a hoof, he glanced off across the meadow. Irene's lesson was progressing. He saw her lope short distances with Art close at her side.

Breck finished with Kit, then began on Custer, and as the big gray objected, his whole attention was given to the job. When he did look up again, Irene and Tillson were not in sight. He stepped out from the

The long supporting rods do not touch the roof. They are connected with steel springs set in rubber to prevent them from acting as sound and vibration conductors.

One result of this kind of work is super quiet electric fan blades. There's not a single entirely-flat area on their faces. Neither do their curves at any cross section equal those of any other area. Their greatest width is almost at the tip.

Hallucinations

About 95 per cent of all hallucinations, or imaginary perceptions, reach the individual through either the eyes or ears, while one is seldom misled in a similar manner by the senses of taste, touch or smell, says Collier's Weekly.

Soundproof Laboratory So Quiet a Dollar Bill Makes Noise When It Falls on Floor

A dollar bill makes a noise when dropped on the inch-thick carpet of a new soundproof laboratory room, writes a Schenectady, N. Y., correspondent in the Boston Globe.

The bill gives out a sharp whack if it falls flat; it can be heard scraping if it comes down at an angle.

The room is something new in soundproofing. It weighs 30 tons, and is hung from the roof of the research laboratory by four rods.

Sleeves make a creaking sound when they brush against a coat. A watch chain clinks when its wearer walks. Tightening a trousers' belt sounds like harnessing a horse.

The idea of the room is to take the last small noises out of rotating machinery. It was built after scientists thought they had all the noises out, because none could be heard in the ordinary laboratory quiet.

But these same motors, taken into the country on a quiet night, were still audible. The hanging room was thereupon constructed to imitate the country at its stillest. In cities and large buildings there always is a slight rumble of noise even at the quietest moment.

LUCIA simply couldn't resist the temptation to stand for a while before the gorgeously decorated windows of the building which she had been in such haste to reach. She had boarded the 7:30 downtown car in order to be among the first to enter the doors, yet here she stood transfixed as usual by the beauty displayed in the windows. Standing in bold relief was an old Chinese vase; Lucia knew nothing of its value—that its reign mark showed it to be a genuine Ming—but she did know that its old green enamel against that background of dark blue drapery was a thing of beauty which satisfied some need within her. A jolly, fat, round pewter bowl, of which she was particularly fond, was still there, and a duck of an old tea-caddy with brass handles and an ivory knob; some wonderful goblets—Jacobite had she but known it—a pink luster tea-set and an old sampler with exquisite stitching. How she loved them all! She had formed the habit of coming to these windows every time she had occasion to visit this downtown section.

Time had flown faster than she realized and so it was that upon reaching the offices of the building she found five men ahead of her. The switchboard operator nodded to them one by one to enter a door marked "Private." While Lucia waited each one of the five came out of the inner room within five minutes of his entrance.

"He wants a man," the girl at the switchboard told her when she asked to see the manager about the position advertised.

"I know, but you see I'm going to try to persuade him that I'm just the person he needs," said Lucia with the friendly confidence that had won her friends ever since she was three years old. "That is," she coaxed, "if you'll only let me see him."

The girl seemed appreciative but dubious. She motioned for Lucia to enter the private office, however, saying, "Good luck to you, dearie, but take it from me, he's no easy mark."

"I came to see about your ad," began Lucia, "for a salesperson in your art shop."

"How did you get in here?" barked a voice from behind a big desk. "I advertised for a man and that—that girl at the board knows it. She's paid to keep people out of here and this is the way she does it." The voice had grown more and more irritable as Lucia made no move toward the door.

"But you really don't know how badly I want to work for you and I thought perhaps if I made you understand you'd let me try."

"Work for me? Why for me any more than for someone else, I'd like to know? I never hire women when I can help it. They can't appreciate things that they don't own."

"Oh, but I do," cried Lucia. "I love your shop," she went on passionately. "Your windows have been just—just—meat and drink to me."

If nothing else Lucia had captured the attention of the manager and owner of the famous art shop.

"What do you mean, 'meat and drink'?" he asked curiously.

"Did you ever," inquired Lucia, "live in one little back room, with horrible red and green and yellow paper on the walls and with battered golden oak furniture and a view from the window of back stairways, milk bottles and grayish-white washings on clothes lines that are worked by pulleys?"

"That's why your windows are meat and drink to me. I love the soft colors of the draperies and the pottery. Of course I don't know the names of the old china and the beautiful glassware, but I could learn them quickly—really I could. There are art books there in the library and I could read them at night."

Lucia was breathless with emotion.

"How old are you?" he asked abruptly.

"Nineteen," said Lucia, her cheeks growing redder and her eyes brighter.

"You don't look it," said he meditatively. "It's the short hair and short skirts, I suppose. By the way, what makes you think you could suit me? I've a reputation of being a hard man to work for."

Lucia smiled in her friendly fashion.

"I've always felt that you must love your beautiful things in just the same way that I do," she said eagerly, "and people who love the same things always get along well together."

"If you really mean all that you've said—" he began.

"Oh, I do mean every word of it," interrupted Lucia fervently. "I—I think I've been starved for beautiful things."

"I can use you," was the terse reply.

"I did it," whispered Lucia joyously as she passed the friendly switchboard operator.

While sitting idly at the big desk the bachelor proprietor of the art shop was thinking that of all the women he had ever met in the 34 years of his life little Lucia, who had sought meat and drink in his windows, would make the ideal companion for his wanderings in far-off lands in search for the beauty that he loved.

Grave Guards

Considerable sums of money have been spent by the war department of the United States in guarding the graves of Presidents and ex-Presidents until mausoleums were completed and permanent guards provided by a memorial association. The military guard of one officer and 25 soldiers that was maintained at the grave of President Harding in Marion, Ohio, for almost five years cost nearly $135,000.—Collier's.

Tests Indicate 40-Knot Speed for Ocean Liners

Wallsend, England.—Liners which will cross the Atlantic at 40 knots—almost 10 knots faster than the Queen Mary—are foreshadowed by secret experiments now being conducted on Tyneside.

A firm of shipbuilders is testing a model of a streamlined hull of revolutionary design. It has proved too fast for the Teddington tank of the National Research Laboratory, and to enable it to be tested at full speed, a special tank has had to be ordered.

If the tests are successful, the firm will place on the stocks an ocean-going yacht embodying the new principles.

Engineers believe that the next step will be to build a 40-knot Atlantic liner and destroyers doing up to almost 60 knots. A liner with that speed would cross the Atlantic in approximately three days, compared with the three days twenty-two hours fifty-seven minutes with which the Queen Mary won the record in August, 1930.

Red Coral Always Prized

It is red coral that is and always has been prized, not solely for jewelry and buttons, but as a charm to bring safety, health and secrets not revealed to the ordinary person. As ancient Gauls rushed headlong into battle, they trusted their safety to their swords, strength and the "magic" coral imbedded in their shields or helmets. Many Italians and Indians regard coral as protection against the "evil eye." The world's red coral comes from the reefs off the Mediterranean coast of Africa, says the Washington Post, and is obtained chiefly by Italians.

Finds Parading Oxen Profitable Business

Benedict, N. D.—E. E. Simmons has added a new job to the operation of his 600-acre farm near here by taking advantage of interest in the old ox-drawn covered wagon.

Simmons and his four oxen make a profit each year appearing in historical parades. His portable historical exhibit, Simmons said, has never had an accident in 250 miles of parading.

Simmons denies he is "old-fashioned to the core." "I bought an automobile 26 years ago and have used a car for business and pleasure ever since," he said.
