Seventeenth Annual

Eastern N. M. State Fair

Roswell, New Mexico, Sept. 21, As inquiries began this week to come in to Roswell officials of the Eastern New Mexico State Fair on the contest for bowlegged cowboys, on details of the parade, and on various exhibits planned at the North Main Street grounds these officials have issued a summary of events covering all four days of the big show.

All livestock and agricultural and domestic arts and other exhibits will be held as usual at the North Main Street grounds, with prizes of $8,000.00 they pointed out. The rodeo will be held on the new west Alameda grounds.

The big parade will be held on the morning of Wednesday, October 4, with at least seven out of town bands competing for the $25 and $15 prizes. Roswell's band is not eligible for these prizes. Gov. Miles will lead the parade. The parade's several $50 and $25 prize contests are open to all.

That afternoon the rodeo will open. A Queen of the Rodeo will have been selected in a ticket-selling contest, and will be introduced each afternoon at the rodeo, Oct. 4, 5, and 6.

Thursday morning, October 5, the contest for bow-legged cowboys or former cowboys will be held, for a $10 prize.

On Friday, October 6, Old Timers Day, the Governor will address those who have lived in New Mexico for thirty years or more and they will then march to Cahoon park for their annual barbecue.

Saturday will be devoted to final awards, merrymaking, and patronage of the 25 shows and rides of the carnival at the Main Street grounds.

Singing Sunday

The regular all day session of the Lincoln Singing Convention will convene at Lincoln, Sunday Sept. 24th and Saturday night before. Everyone is cordially invited to come and bring lunch for basket dinner. Singers from practically all over the State are expected to be present including noted quartets from Texas.

B. & M. To Move Saturday Nite

It was announced today by Jack Walker, manager of the B & M Mercantile Co. that the store will move into their new location Saturday night, Sept. 22, opening there Monday Sept. 25. The store will be a modern up-to-date store.

There has been no expense spared in building this building, to make it ultra modern. This store will be heated in the winter and cooled in summer by the most modern heating and cooling units on the market. It is lighted by in-direct lights and will maintain a ladies rest room and lounge for the convenience of the ladies of Lincoln county.

After the store is ready and the many new fall lines of merchandise are on display they will have their formal opening inviting Carrizozo and Lincoln county to visit the store and see the newest in fall styles. In the mean time Mr. and Mrs. Walker asks every one to remember this change in address and visit them there.

This new building is one block east of their present location in the new Scharf building. Mr. Scharf is to be congratulated on the erection of this modern building and for his belief in Carrizozo and Lincoln county.

Carrizozo Woman's Club

The opening meeting for the 1939-1940 season of the Carrizozo Woman's Club was held Friday afternoon, Sept. 15 at the Community Hall. The new president, Mrs. Selma Degitz, presided over the business session, with appropriate and interesting remarks.

Programs for the year distributed and were given favorable comments.

The October meeting will be held on Oct. 27, due to the out-of-town speaker being unable to be present at the regular meeting date.

Mrs. Albert Ziegler was program chairman for the day, by invitation. Mrs. Blancy read the program for her and with a few well chosen words introduced the speaker. The program follows: Duet "The Village Blacksmith" ... Mesdames Burns and Hall. "Resume of my European Trip" ... Mrs. John Gutknecht. Duet "Spirit of The Hour" ... Mesdames Burns and Hall.

The musical numbers were very fine and enjoyable. The address given by Mrs. Gutknecht, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Ziegler, was excellent. Her descriptions were so vivid that one felt he had been there and had seen the cathedrals, the mountains, the cities and streets, the people and their costumes. Mrs. Gutknecht has been our guest speaker before and her choice of language, her subject matter and her pleasing manner has endeared her to us all.

At the close of the program delicious refreshments were served by the officers: Mesdames Turner, Don English, Lemon, Snow, Stimmel, Degitz and Miss Ruth Petty.

175 Attend Cattle Grading

175 ranchmen faced heavy showers and muddy roads to attend the cattle grading demonstration held at Capitan, September 14.

The conservation tour held in connection with the demonstration was shortened due to muddy roads. Visits were made to Mr. T. A. Spencer's spreader dams near Carrizozo, and to a restoration under the soil conservation service near Capitan.

The program for the day included:

TOUR--- Talks by E. F. Redding, State Extension Engineer; L. D. Merchant, and A. T. Pfingst, County A. C. A. Committee men; and S. Crosby, Contractor.

A barbecue lunch was served at noon by the Capitan Woman's Club.

DEMONSTRATION--- Current Marketing Problems, by Ed Garrison, Field Representative, Kansas City Stockyards Co. Native Grasses, Poison Weeds of New Mexico (accompanied by display), by K. W. Parker, Southwest Forest and Range Experiment Station, Tucson, Arizona. Efficient Production on the range --- by Geogre F. Ellis, Extension Animal Husbandman. Cattle Grading Demonstration, by Ed Garrison (cattle furnished by Geo. A. Titworth)

Mr. and Mrs. John McDaniel of Nogal moved into the Smith home on Elm street, Wednesday of this week. Mr. McDaniel is planning to open a Variety Store in the old stand of the B & M Mercantile Co., in the Doering Building.

Fair Crowd Attended The Horse Races

Last Sunday, inspite of rain and a muddy track, local racing fans were on hand. The results were as follows:

Brown Beauty, owned by Mr. Chas. Page won over Sox, owned by Mr. Walter Burnett.

Jet Rustin's horse lost to Dewey Stokes horse.

In the bare back race (Fatty) Cox won over Bill Ham and Preacher Dobbs.

Bumper, owned by Mr. Marvin Roberts won over Dewey Stokes' horse.

Live Stock Situation

(By J. A. McNaughton.)

Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, Sept. 20. Livestock prices have been maintained on a firm basis since the advance in price which followed the outbreak of the war in Europe. Cattle and lamb price advances were not unexpected, in view of the market earlier in the summer, and a relative deficiency in fat cattle and lambs brought on by extremely dry weather in most parts of the western range country. There was no surplus of cattle or lambs in sight and prices appeared to be on the upgrade without benefit of any increased demand brought on by war conditions.

The situation in the hog market is much different. Hog prices were low in August, and averaged about 30 a pound below 1914 levels. Hog producers were receiving prices considerably below their costs of production, and every indication pointed towards disastrously low hog prices during the fall and winter, due to greatly increased supplies of hogs in the middle west. War conditions have changed America into an exporting country, which accounts for a greatly improved pork and lard market. With Poland now unable to export pork producers to the British Isles, the British have dropped quotas and are encouraging United States pork and lard imports.

While there may be some talk of profiteering, and some actual examples of relatively high food prices, certainly meats do not come under such classification for livestock prices generally are relatively low in comparison with prices of 25 years ago, previous to the first world war.

Livestock feeders and range men are anxiously studying the trend of the livestock feedstuff markets. They feel that some livestock feeds have advanced to an unreasonable extent, which is adding to the cost of producing meat and milk.

Ice Cream Social

The Ice Cream Social sponsored by the Rainbow Girls and held on Freeman's lawn last Friday night was a success.

The musical program consisting of two vocal solos by Mrs. Margaret Elliott, accompanied by Mrs. Riley at the piano and Sat Chavez with his violin, and a vocal number rendered by Mrs. Kelley's pupils, Joe Devine, C. A. and Veda Lou Branum, Ann Eaker and Janie Hall, was highly appreciated.

Mr. Phipps is constructing a new garage in back of the New Mexico Mechanical Equipment Company's office this week.

Carrizozo School Notes

A very interesting and educational talk on Europe was given by Mrs. Gutchneck at assembly Tuesday morning. She gave a graphic description of her travels in the European countries which she visited this summer. Mrs. Gutchneck witnessed the feverish excitement of Europe on the verge of war.

In the same program, Mrs. John E. Hall and Mrs. Burns rendered a piano duet.

Mr. J. P. Caton, our coach, suffered a painful injury to his left leg Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Caton is unable to walk except by the help of crutches. Mr. Burke Stiles is taking Mr. Caton's coaching duties meanwhile.

Gold class rings for the seniors were received by the class this week. The rings were ordered last spring.

LaRue and Helen Cathey, former students here, have transferred to St. John's, Arizona. The Cathey sisters were juniors last year.

The junior class has lost two members by the withdrawal of Marilyn Hemphill and John Herron. Miss Hemphill will enroll at Orogrande, and Mr. Herron is reported living in El Paso.

All the students of CHS are requested to help the Junior exchequer by patronizing their candy sales, which begin next week. The sophomores have all their textbooks. Now we can get a good start in their work for the year.

Mr. Susman is starting a senior orchestra, which will play popular music. They are practicing "the Beer Barrel Polka", "Sugar Blues" and other popular ditties.

Hondo and Carrizozo will meet on the football gridiron for the first game of the season, Friday afternoon, Sept. 22nd. Let us help the boys by being there.

Special Election

The Special election held last Saturday to vote $1,450,000.00 worth of State bonds to repair and rebuild some of the State's self supporting institutions met with overwhelming defeat in Lincoln County. Total against 543. For: 64. In Carrizozo District A 48 against and 0 for, District B 64 against and 4 for.

The T & G Grocery announced this week that beginning Saturday, with every $1.00 purchase they will give a ticket and on Saturday Sept. 30 at 8 p. m. they will hold a drawing. Read their ad on page 8. You must be on hand with your ticket to win. In event that the first number called is not present drawing will continue until someone wins.

Mrs. Prior and Ted have returned Wednesday evening from Hastings Michigan, where they were at the bedside of Mrs. Prior's mother who was ill.

Word was received here that Mrs. Wm. Nickels who has been in a Chicago hospital, is much improved and will be taken home some time within the next two weeks.

Large crowds are attending the revival at the Baptist church.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—If this means "the end of civilization," it might be better just to hand Herr Hitler the works now, accept a slave state, save a lot of lives, pick up the goose-step and hope for some future Spartacus to lead us into a return engagement. The phrase, "the contemporaneity of the past," is, I believe, Dr. Charles Beard's. Along with Dr. Beard's book, "The Rise of American Civilization," it has reminded this onlooker that no madman ever has wrecked the world and that the creative and humane spirit has never failed. History did not sustain Lord Grey when, in 1914, he said, "The lights of the world have gone out, and I doubt if they ever will be lit in our lifetime."

In the spirit of these meditations, this department will, in the forthcoming dark days, keep a sharp eye out for lamp-lighters, men of creative intelligence, and their names will be carried on this mast-head whenever possible.

For a start, here's Eduard Benes, former president of Czechoslovakia, an old story in personality columns, but news today as a wise, calm spirit in a world of howling demagogues. The belch of the guns in Poland was answered almost to the minute by his book, "Democracy Today and Tomorrow." Here is what he says about "the end of civilization":

"We hear very often the slogan that war or revolution in Europe will mean the end of human civilization. That is a mistake. Modern civilization cannot be destroyed. One can destroy in one country, through war or revolution, some of the remarkable monuments of human culture and civilization, ancient and modern; but the present organization of the world does not allow anybody to destroy human civilization. Human civilization is, first of all, the moral conception of modern mankind, although including, of course, all economic values, all achievements of technological progress, all great cultural monuments, buildings, cities, universities, libraries, museums of art and science; many of them are of inestimable value, and could, of course, be destroyed in a great catastrophe. And that would be a loss which could never be replaced. But that does not mean the destruction of human civilization. The human spirit, in its great creative power, having saved in innumerable places the results of modern science, technology and progress—material and moral—will continue in any case its great creative work."

There is no bland optimism in Mr. Benes' book. He invokes no easy formulas and sees salvation only in the collective work and intelligence of men of good will—in desperate endeavors, perhaps, but sure to win in the end because they always have. At another moment of tension, when the "end of civilization" seemed near, I remember talking to the great Dr. Masaryk, Mr. Benes' intellectual and political mentor. He curtly refused to discuss the particularized rights and aspirations of Czechoslovakia.

"We could state them only in terms of world morality and justice," he said. "If we are right in thus conceiving our undertakings, we may be assured that they will prevail. If our hopes are not so based, they should not prevail."

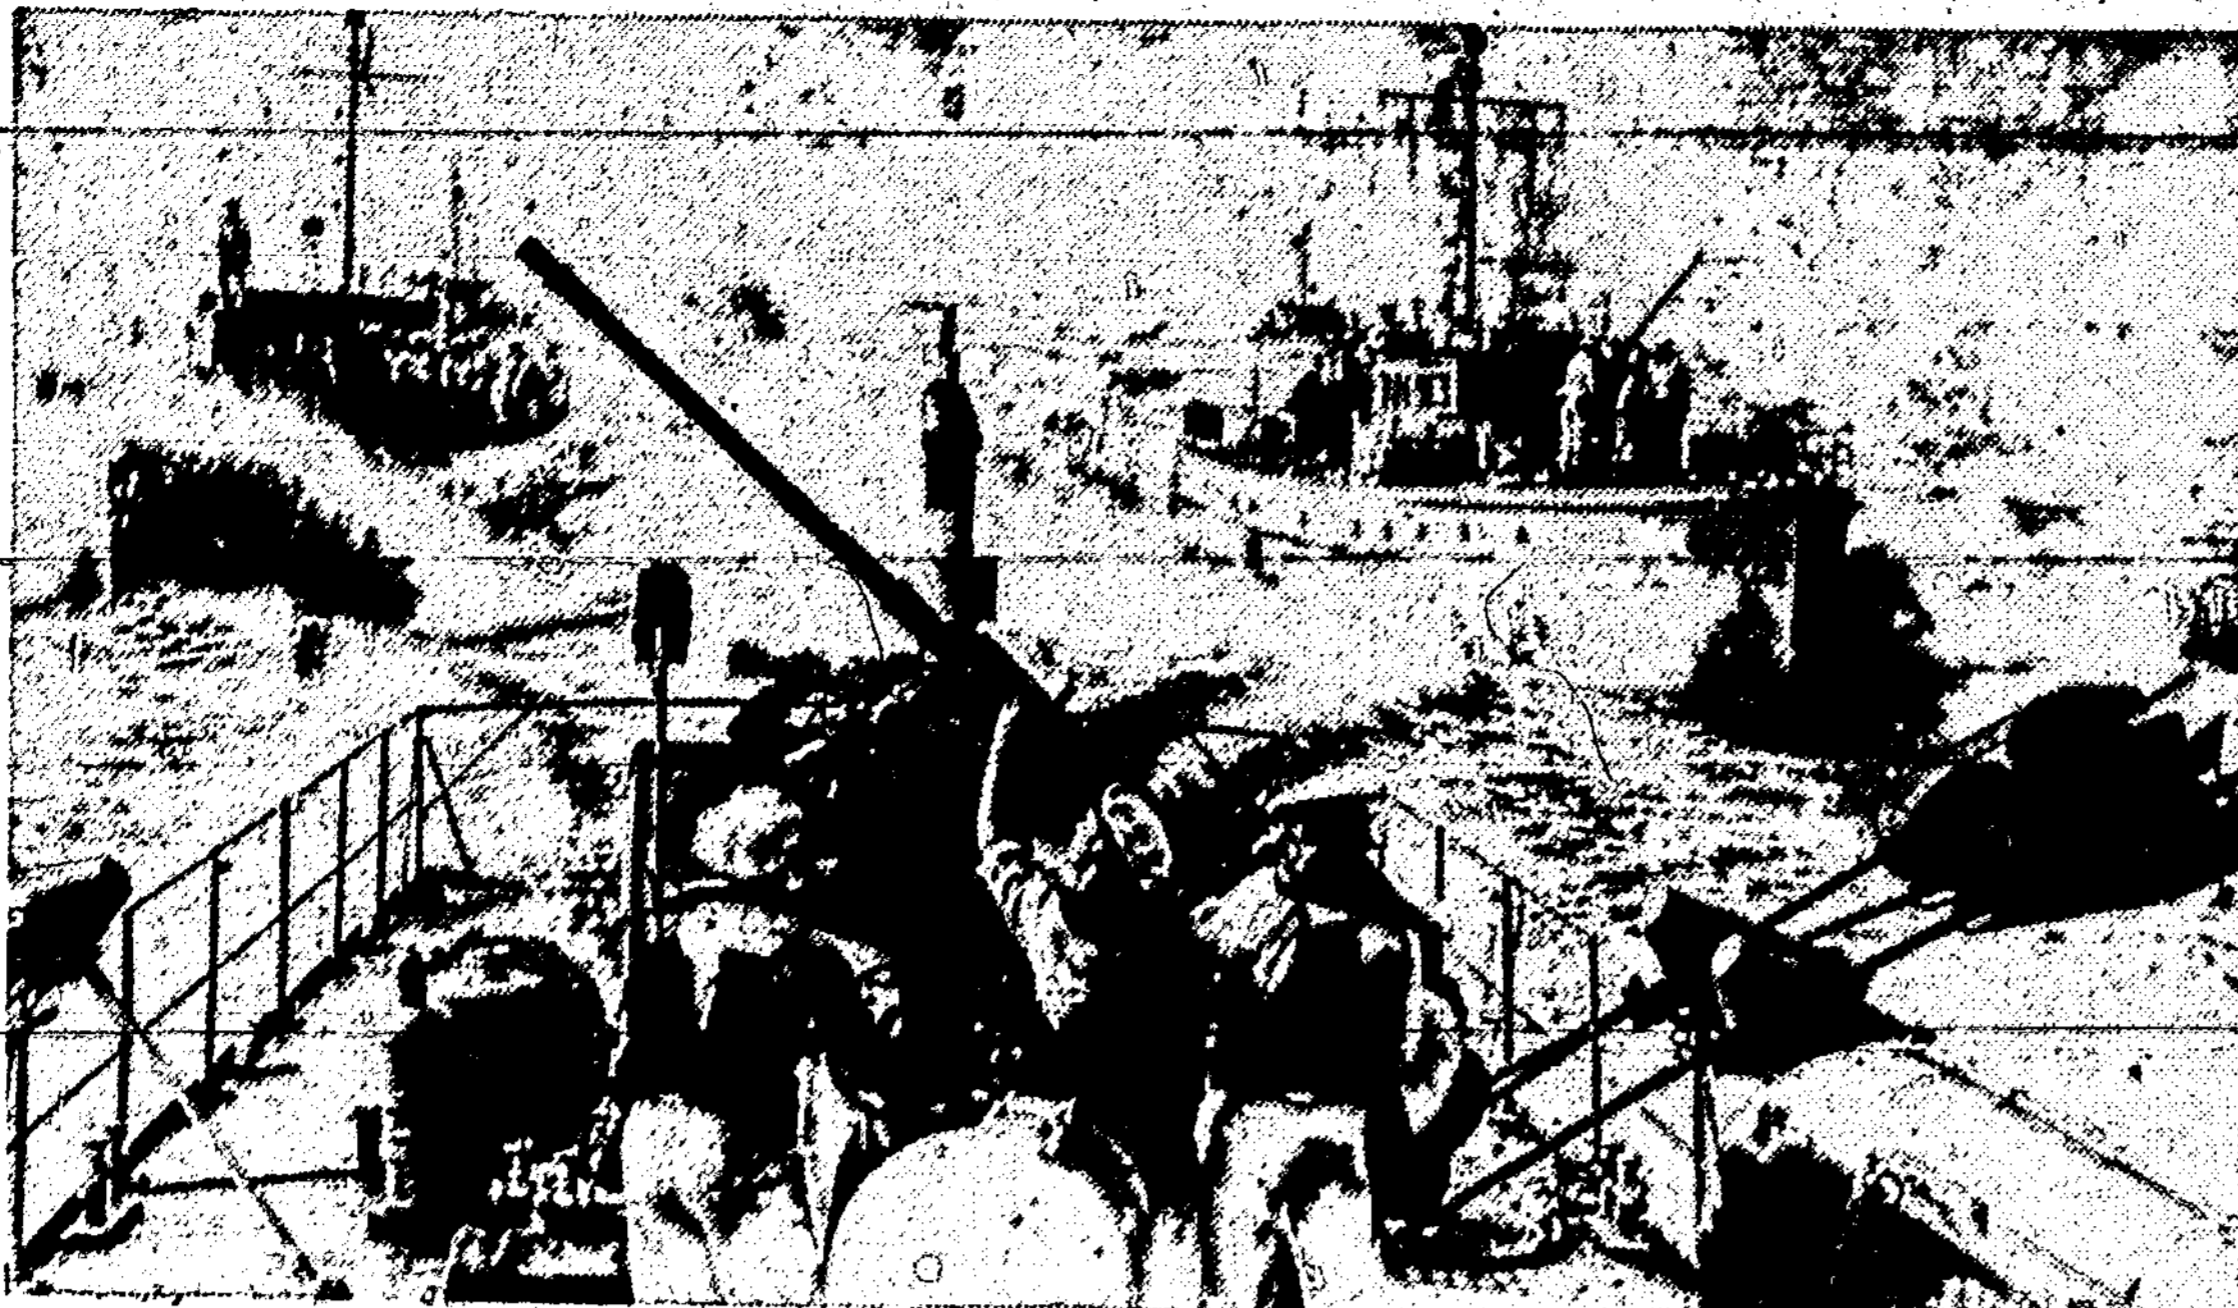

Without a hint of bitterness for powers recreant to their obligations to his country, or to its assailant, Mr. Benes puts his hope for freedom and democracy—and for Czechoslovakia—in this same wide context, and he is calmly assured of the high destiny of human personality because "This is the nature of man and of human society."

Mr. Benes is unique among statesmen in that he did not resort to any single trick of the demagogue. In fact, he expressed and displayed contempt for such artifice. Fragile in person, careless in dress, blunt in speech, he is conspicuously lacking in what is called personal magnetism. In the pre-war and war years, he was a conspirator against the Austrian captors of his country. He was arrested as a spy six times.

Feasant born, youngest of eight children, brilliantly educated in law and the humanities, stubborn and tireless in his championship of the humane spirit, Eduard Benes believes civilization will, in the end, be saved by a new leadership which will be both informed and enlightened.

Urge Children To Help Plan Own Activities

INDIVIDUALITY should be recognized. Parents should allow children to develop own tastes without imposing their own. Too much supervision dulls the edge of the greatest enthusiasm.

By RUTH ARNOLD NICKEL

"I JUST ran in to tell you that I won't be at the meeting, tomorrow," said Mrs. Mitchell, as her neighbor came out on the porch to greet her. "I'm going to take Lillian to the museum."

"How nice," commented Mrs. Gracie, giving her a chair. "Well, it's rather a hot trip," Mrs. Mitchell admitted, "and Lillian isn't very enthusiastic, but I think she ought to take advantage of such things. Besides, she never knows what to do with herself during vacations. I simply have to arrange a program for her, or she would waste her time or mope. How did you manage to get Gladys interested in so many worthwhile things?"

Mrs. Gracie smiled. "Gladys? Oh, she and I take turns in choosing special undertakings now. I used to insist that she work out certain projects. When she was 12 years old—that was two years ago—I decided that the time had come to teach her all sorts of things. She had learned to sew a little and loved to make doll's clothes, but I wanted her to make something useful. I bought some fine white cloth and started her on a slip."

"Gladys never wore the slip," said Mrs. Gracie ruefully, "at least not until I had made it over. She disliked working on it. This started a kind of struggle between us."

"But she sews now, doesn't she?" "Yes, she sews beautifully," said Mrs. Gracie. "When the slip was finally finished, I said nothing more about sewing—I didn't want to fix the dislike that I had started. Then the next summer she begged me for a pink tennis dress. It was early in the season and the ones she liked were too expensive. Then she said, 'Mother, I think I could make one, if you'd help me with the binding around the neck. I tried not to show my delight! We found a remnant of goods and she made the dress with very little help from me; you see she wanted it. She read the directions and made it carefully.'"

"But that implies that mother shouldn't try to direct their children," objected Mrs. Mitchell. "Imposing Their Own Views."

"I wondered about that," said Mrs. Gracie, "and I talked it over with Tom. He had been trying to improve her reading, but when he brought books home from the library she never seemed to care for them. Then we concluded that we weren't accomplishing our purpose. 'Maybe you are right,' said Mrs. Mitchell. 'Tell me what you did.' 'We decided to stop imposing our tastes upon Gladys and let her develop her own. We had kept her too busy. As I thought about it, I remembered my own early summer vacations. I had regular work to do, but I was allowed to create most of my own pleasures. I remembered long hours of reading—discovering books that I learned to love, hours of play, and gardening in the back yard. Whenever I got bored, I began to look around for something new and interesting to do. 'I told this to Tom and he remembered the same conditions with regard to his own childhood. We decided that we had been supervising Gladys too much. So we planned to be ready to share experiences with her part of the time, but to leave her many hours each week when she would be entirely free.'"

"Gladys had to do some housework, of course, and that kept her busy in the mornings. During the first week she seemed a little bored in the afternoons. Then one day she asked me to teach her to knit a sweater! The next week she began voluntarily looking for something to read and before long she was interested of her own accord in some of the very subjects her father had hoped she'd like!"

"But wasn't she ever idle?" asked Mrs. Mitchell. "Yes, she used to lie in the hammock on the porch sometimes for hours. One day she said to me, 'Mother, I love to lie and look up at the sky in the summertime. In the winter I'm too busy to think and get things straightened out in my mind.'"

"Gracious!" said Mrs. Mitchell, rising—"I think I'll drop the museum outing. Perhaps if I drag Lillian there on a hot day when she doesn't want to go, she will dislike it."

"I'm afraid Gladys would" laughed Mrs. Gracie sympathetically. "She often joins me in my enthusiasms if I don't try to force them on her. But she's an individual, too, and I can't expect her to be exactly like me. We take many trips together and take turns deciding where to go. A museum trip is always the result of an urge to see some special thing. Both of us enjoy it, but I'm always careful to bring Gladys home while she is still interested, and before she gets tired."

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 35 to 40), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dilly spells, upset nerves and moodiness. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helping you more vivaciously to enjoy life and warding off the many nervous and disturbing symptoms that often accompany the change of life.—WILLIAMS' WORTH TRYING!

AMAZONS Women Employed in New Role As Men March to Battlefield

War is no longer a man's business exclusively. The United States is almost the only major power which has not drafted women to perform some military duty formerly left to men. Women now fly, drive ambulances and carry rifles, ready to take their places on the battlefield. Above: Two members of England's women's ambulance corps are shown in uniform as they canvassed for recruits during London's first national defense display. MAYBE FATHER WILL LIKE THESE?
(Recipes Below.)

Household News By Eleanor Howe

Foods Men Like to Eat

What are the foods that Father likes best—the fine, old-fashioned dishes—tasty, full of flavor, and perfectly cooked! He likes a meal to be composed of only a few foods; he wants to know what he is eating, and he does not want foods swathed in a blanket of whipped cream. In a word, fancy cooking is apt to be wasted on Father but he'll appreciate good cooking to the limit.

Left to his own devices, many a man would choose a diet of meat, potatoes, and pie. They're not particularly fond of vegetables—these men of ours—and when it comes to salads, it's a sheer waste of energy to serve them anything fancy. So a little judicious planning is necessary on our part in order to give Father his favorite foods and provide a wholesome, well-balanced meal in the bargain.

Each of these recipes, tested in my own kitchen, has been found to be primo favorites with men. Well prepared and attractively served, they'll go a long way toward establishing your reputation as a good cook.

Vegetable Soup.

- (Serves 6)
- 2 pounds soup bone
 - 2 tablespoons fat
 - 2 quarts cold water
 - 1 tablespoon salt
 - 1/4 teaspoon pepper
 - 2 tablespoons barley
 - 1 cup canned tomatoes
 - 1 onion
 - 1/2 cup carrots (cut in cubes)
 - 1/2 cup celery (cut in small pieces)
 - 1/2 cup potatoes (cut in cubes)
 - 1/2 cup peas

Remove a portion of meat from cracked soup bone and cut into pieces. Brown in hot fat. Place browned meat, soup bone, seasonings, and barley in kettle and add cold water. Cover and cook until boiling point is reached. Then simmer about 2 1/2 hours or until meat is tender. Cool and skim off excess fat. Add vegetables and continue cooking until vegetables are tender.

Devil's Food Cake.

- (Makes one two-layer cake)
- 1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
 - 2 ounces chocolate
 - 1 1/2 cups milk
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 - 1/2 cup butter
 - 2 eggs
 - 2 cups cake flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 3 teaspoons baking powder

Place 1/2 cup sugar, chocolate and 1 cup milk in saucepan and cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Add vanilla extract and cool. Cream butter and add remaining sugar. Separate eggs, beat egg yolks and add slowly. Then add the cooled chocolate mixture. Mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the remaining milk. Bake in 2 well-greased layer-cake pans in a moderate oven (375 degrees) for approximately 25-30 minutes. Ice with boiled icing.

Apple Pie.

- (Makes 1 pie)
- Cheese pastry
 - 6 cooking apples
 - Flour
 - 1/2 teaspoon salt
 - 3/4 cup granulated sug.
 - Cinnamon
 - Nutmeg
 - 1 teaspoon lemon juice

Line a pie tin with pie crust. Peel the apples and cut in slices. Sprinkle the bottom of the pastry with flour, salt and granulated sugar. Fill in the apples, filling very full. Dot with butter and sprinkle with cinnamon, nutmeg, sugar and lemon juice. Cover with pie crust, crimp the top to allow the steam to escape. Bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 40 minutes.

Pigs-in-Taters.

- (Serves 6)
- 6 large baking potatoes
 - 6 tablespoons margarine
 - 4 to 5 teaspoons milk
 - 1 1/2 teaspoons salt
 - Paprika
 - 1/2 pound small sausages (cooked)
- Wash and dry potatoes. Place on rack in hot oven (500 degrees), and bake for about 45 minutes, or until the potatoes are done. Cut a slice from one side of each and scoop out the inside. Mash thoroughly, add margarine, salt and paprika. Refill the potato shells. Make a depression in the center of each, and arrange in it 2 or 3 sausages. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 10 minutes, or until brown.

Harvest Moon Doughnuts.

- (Makes 24 doughnuts)
- 1/2 cup butter
 - 1 cup sugar
 - 2 eggs
 - 1/2 cups flour
 - 4 teaspoons baking powder
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon nutmeg
 - 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
 - 1 cup milk
 - 1 teaspoon vanilla
 - Fat for deep fat frying
- Cream butter and sugar. Beat in eggs. Sift together dry ingredients and add alternately with milk. Add vanilla. Roll dough 1/4 inch thick and cut with doughnut cutter. Fry in deep fat at 325 degrees until doughnuts are golden brown on both sides. Drain on absorbent paper. Sugar lightly, if desired.

Hot Water Cheese Pastry.

- (Makes 1 2-crust pie)
- 1/2 cup shortening
 - 6 tablespoons boiling water
 - 2 cups general purpose flour
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
 - 1 cup American cheese (grated)
- Place shortening in warm bowl, pour boiling water over it, and cream thoroughly with a fork. Place flour, salt and baking powder in flour sieve and sift gradually into the creamed mixture. Add cheese. Mix thoroughly. Make up into doughball, then chill in refrigerator. When ready to bake remove from refrigerator, divide dough and roll out. Line pastry tin with one portion of the pastry and proceed with desired pie recipe.

WORTH KNOWING

Split hard rolls. Butter and then stuff them with chicken or fish salad. Chopped ham may be added to waffle batter and served with pineapple-orange sauce. Try combining two or more kinds of soup. The resulting mixture may be served in the regular way or used as a sauce for other dishes.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Patchwork pot holders hanging in a row.

A GREEN and white kitchen is as fresh and crisp as a lettuce leaf. I stepped into one the other day with white walls, green floor and green organdy curtains. Everything was green and white, and over the stove hung a set of patchwork pot holders like a row of bright green and white tiles. All of us love old quilt patterns. For those of us who do not have the time to make quilts, here is a modern way to put your favorite designs to use.

Perhaps you were put to bed as a child under this eight-pointed star? The sketch gives the dimensions for the patterns for the two triangles used in making it for the pot holder. Piece eight small squares of two triangles; then eight oblong blocks of three triangles. A layer of sheet wadding is used for padding. The backing for the holder is white. The three layers are quilted together by sewing just inside the white triangles of the pieced top.

Have you sent for your copy of the new Sewing Book No. 37? Every homemaker will want a copy for it contains useful ideas for home decorating; as well as original ideas for things to use as gifts, and to sell at bazaars. You will be delighted with this new book. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Farmers Should Follow Balance Plan of Operation

Farmers who are following a balanced plan of operation are in a much better position to withstand the onslaught of a drouth which is spreading into many large areas over the Great Plains region, according to L. H. Hauter, regional director of the Farm Security Administration, with headquarters at Amarillo, Texas.

At a meeting last week in Amarillo, FSA field employees gave reports on conditions which lead many Department of Agriculture officials to believe the drouth may become as severe as the one in 1935.

"Those farmers," Mr. Hauter said, "who are dividing their operations into various sources of income have experienced the fastest recovery from the last period of crop failures and depressed prices for farm products. It is reasonable to assume that those families having more than one source of income will fare better than those who are dependent on a one-cropping system."

Emergency conditions were reported in parts of Colorado, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, the Panhandle Plains area in Texas and in several counties in New Mexico. Several counties in Southeastern Colorado, specially along the Kansas line, were said to be in a severe condition. Prowers County is considered in a critical stage. Both irrigated and dry land farms are suffering. Only traces of moisture were received there this summer, and wind erosion is expected to be quite serious because much of the land is subject to blowing. Although a drouth condition exists in practically all counties, the most severely affected are Prowers, Kiowa, Cheyenne, Kit Carson, Bent, Huerfano, and Las Animas.

Winford M. Griffin, district FLSA supervisor in Southeastern Colorado, said there is a health problem among the low income farmers of that section.

Morton, Stanton, Stevens and Grant counties in Kansas failed to make a wheat crop last spring and have no prospects for field crops this fall. The dust is blowing at the present time. Just recently that area suffered one of the worst dust storms in three years. Other Western Kansas counties affected include Ford, Gray, Meade, Moss and Seward.

Union, Tazewell, McKinley and the western part of Valencia county are reported in a stricken condition.

Applications from farmers for loans and work grants from the FSA showed an increase in August over July in practically all affected counties, according to officials of the regional FSA office at Amarillo.

Farm Security is now serving 5,616 farmers in Colorado. In the nine most seriously affected counties in Kansas there are 1,796 farm families being assisted by this agency. There are 3,448 farm families being served by FSA in the seven stricken counties in the Oklahoma Panhandle and in New Mexico. The total number of families working with FSA in the eight drouth-stricken counties in Texas, is 1,790.

Mr. Hauter said that although the Farm Security Administration's program is designed to help low income and distressed farmers over a period of years in their plans of rehabilitation, it is also able to meet emergencies such as might arise from the present threat of drouth. He said FSA has farm and home management specialists working in all counties and that needy farm families should make application at the nearest office.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

ADVERTISING'S NO MYSTERY

SOME of us remember well when John Slattery started in business. He couldn't have been over 25 and he had only a few hundred dollars in capital. But he did have a wife and two fine boys. He wanted to make them comfortable. He quit his job, went in on his own.

Charles Roth

At first he would come to us and in his frank, likable way ask if we would buy from him. We liked John. It flattered us to have him invite us to become his customers. We began trading with him.

He treated us so considerably and so honestly; he gave us such good service; he was so grateful for our patronage, that we enjoyed being his customers. It made us feel good. Others felt the same way. His business grew.

Then he began asking more people to trade with him than he could reach in person. He had to run small advertisements in the newspaper, which he wrote himself after store hours.

As he grew larger he ran larger advertisements, and where in the beginning he had a handful of customers, now he had several hundred.

He continued to advertise in the newspaper. His business continued to grow. He couldn't know all his customers by name now, of course, but they felt that they could buy from him with confidence because he had been recommended to them by another friend whom they had always trusted.

This other friend who recommended John Slattery was the newspaper which carried his advertising.

Whatever you read in the newspaper you naturally feel you can believe, because you know that a reputable newspaper will not accept advertising from any but honest and reliable concerns.

Because this young man starting in business made use of that aid he built his business. As his business grew he was able to give his customers better service and more for their money.

Although few of the persons reading his advertisements and becoming his customers realized it, they were all indebted to the newspaper for its service in bringing to their attention an opportunity of getting more for their money by publishing advertisements of this enterprising young man.

Advertising is serving us in this same way every day, by bringing information of where we can buy most advantageously, by helping us to find what we want at the lowest possible prices.

Chevrolet Service Mechanics

Detroit, Sept. 20.—Chevrolet service and mechanical department this week set in motion machinery which will furnish more than 27,000 Chevrolet service mechanics, all over the United States, with complete knowledge of the company's new 1940 product before the latter's introduction to the public next month.

The program, believed to be unique in several respects, opens with the schooling of nine product representatives by the service department personnel and the Chevrolet engineering staff. This initial phase of the operation is now in progress, and will last eight days. It takes place here and in Flint, and covers not only every detail of the new models' design, but the whole field of servicing and adjustment, with emphasis on special equipment available for proper servicing of the cars.

The second phase of the program opens with these men's return to their respective territories, which each will hold a two-day training session for the zone service personnel. The latter will then conduct meetings with a still larger total attendance, covering, among them, the entire field of dealer service managers. Finally, the service managers will return to their dealerships and school their respective service shop personnel.

Training of the countrywide service organization through a series of progressive steps, each class of "graduates" dispersing to train a much larger group in the field, will enable Chevrolet to accomplish in one month a program of tremendous scope, Ed Hadner, national service and mechanical manager, pointed out. Every dealer's service mechanics will be familiar with the car from bumper to bumper before a single unit reaches the public's hands.

New Placements in Private Industry

Included in the 1634 placement in private industry made by the New Mexico State Employment Service during August were workers in such widely varied occupations as industrial chemist, circulation manager, artist's model, telegraph equipment man, acetylene welder, taxi driver and lumber jack, according to statistics released today by Roy L. Cook, Chairman of the Unemployment Compensation Commission.

A breakdown of these private placements into some forty selected occupations indicates that for women, jobs as maid, day worker, waitress, or salesperson constituted the bulk of the placements. Among the men, laboring jobs predominated, with agriculture and building construction ranking first and second respectively.

Many skilled and semi-skilled occupations were also represented in the placements. 43 sales people and 67 craftsmen such as painters, carpenters, plumbers, etc., were included. Men outnumbered women in the listing by a count of 1287 to 347.

Mrs. J. H. Fulmer and son Bill of White Oaks visited here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Lucky and daughter of Nogal were in town Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Aguayo were in Monday from their ranch near Nogal.

Is Moscow-Berlin Axis Being Formed? Europe Can't Decide, But Has Doubts

Soviet and Germany Still Suspect Each Other Despite Shouting Over Non-Aggression Pact; But Does Hitler Hold the Upper Hand?

By RONALD CAPPER
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PARIS.—While France and Britain look one eye down a rifle barrel at Germany, the other eye never veers from the most enigmatic question mark facing war-mad Europe—Soviet Russia. Will the Old world's No. 1 diplomat, Josef Stalin, come to Germany's aid under the trade and non-aggression treaties those nations signed just before the war? Is Comrade Stalin merely playing Germany for all she is worth? Or has Adolf Hitler outsmarted his new friend, forcing Stalin to aid the Nazi cause?

The implications of a German-Soviet alliance are tremendous. Indeed, this possibility has worried European observers ever since Adolf Hitler came to power, for together these military juggernauts could be formidable.

There is no longer any problem of ideology standing between the nations, although American Nazis and Communists would have us believe the two theories are at sword's point. Ten years ago this was true, but through the ensuing years Germany and Russia have approached a similarity.

Waters Surprisingly Alke
Nazism thrives on a principle of racial superiority which states that an individual race is entitled to rule the world. Bolshevism operates on the opposite principle, that all men are equal and without distinction. Since neither idea is practical in application, both the Reich and the Soviet can overlook their theories to settle more realistic problems.

What really counts is Nazism's seven-year swing from an attempt to save capitalism to a concept of state-controlled capitalism that is not far removed from the Russian system. From this parallel purpose might spring almost anything.

Yet a study of Soviet history during post-World war history will show its foreign policy has pursued one aim consistently and with considerable success. That aim has been prevention of a German, Italian, French and British alliance opposed to Russia. So long as this "gang" is prevented, the Soviet will be free to complete its big task of internal development. Here's how they've accomplished it thus far:

Didn't Like Hitler.
In 1922 the Soviet signed a trade treaty with Germany, then susceptible to any sort of back-clapping after its rough treatment at Versailles. But as a matter of expediency Russia drifted away from Germany when Hitler came to power. They didn't like him.

Science Seeks Clue To 'Misplaced' Vein Of Volcanic Lava

BOULDER DAM, COLO.—Ten miles south of this massive concrete structure geologists have discovered a "missing link" in volcanic history—a lava "dike" formed in gravel.
How it got there is the problem worrying Prof. Ian Campbell of the California Institute of Technology and Dr. E. T. Schenk of the national park service, who have decided the "dike" is a more geological youngster of some 23,000 years. Never before has lava been found cutting through gravel, and how it forced its way into a porous rock of this type in such clean-cut fashion is a big mystery.
"It is difficult to believe," the geologist have reported, "that a open fissure four feet wide could have been formed or maintained in these gravels while the dike magma was pouring in from below."
"A possible explanation may be that the first surge of lava was rapidly chilled by contact with the cold and perhaps water-filled gravel. This chilled glass then solidified to form a seal which prevented any side escape as the remaining bulk of the magma pushed in.
"Spectacular too, is the texture of the dike itself. Most dikes that are intruded into the shallower parts of the earth's crust are very fine grained."

Here's New Way to Cut Taxes In Your Town: Grow a Forest

WASHINGTON.—Raise a forest if you want to lower your taxes. That's the advice of F. A. Slicox, chief of the United States forest service, who suggests that American communities might follow the example of European towns in licking the tax ogre.

The idea is already catching hold. Some 1,500 cities, towns, villages, counties, school districts, churches and townships now own about 3,000,000 acres of forests, and now plots are being reported to the forest service almost every day.

By selling fuel, pulpwood, Christmas trees, maple syrup, nuts and other forest products, communities can take a substantial cut from their annual tax levy. What's more, the forests offer new playgrounds, fish and game reserves and recreation facilities, besides protecting city watersheds and providing employment.

Swedish Forest Runs Street Cars.
The community forest idea started in Europe, where such famous preserves as Germany's Black forest and those at Fontainebleau and Versailles have been producing revenues for years. At Orson, Sweden, the forest provides enough to pay all local taxes and supply free street car and telephone service.

America's oldest forest is at Newington, N. H., which was started in 1710. Since 1832 it has provided fuel for the church, the poor people and the school, plus $5,238 in cash which paid community debts, improved the village buildings and helped build a library and school.

Seattle Forest Shows Profit.
Wisconsin has adopted the program scientifically. Each year the state pays 10 cents an acre to the county owning the forest, until the production stage is reached. Then the state gets its money back as timber is cut.

denly and signed the treaty with Germany.

Two Schemers Work.
This is the supreme test of Soviet diplomatic wisdom, for Josef Stalin, smart though he may be, is dealing with another smart schemer in Adolf Hitler. There is good reason to believe Germany got the upper hand during the tense pre-war days when Russia hesitated over ratifying the non-aggression pact.

Gloating over her spotlighted position, holding the balance of peace or war, the Soviet might have maintained this enviable status if Hitler had not been equally alert. Der Fuehrer knew the British ambassador to Berlin has always favored a policy of Anglo-German friendship against Russia. Furthermore, he knew Russia was aware of Sir Neville's ambitions. That is why the ambassador was kept busy commuting between Berlin and London with diplomatic notes which might have led to an Anglo-German settlement.
So uneasy did Russia become that the supreme Soviet council met hurriedly and ratified the German non-aggression pact within 20 minutes after Premier Vyacheslav Molotov introduced it.

Suspect Each Other.
But this hesitancy, this obvious "squeeze" play, does not speak well for future Soviet-German relations. Only a few days before the ratification, Russian deputies applauded a mock battle in Red square where young Soviet fighters routed an "invading force" and in German field-gray uniforms. The big question now is whether Hitler has outsmarted Stalin to such a degree that the Soviet cannot regain its former position.

Russia has things to fear from Germany. Should Poland fall, the convenient "buffer" territory between the Reich and the Soviet would disappear, bringing Hitler closer to his long coveted Ukraine. Should this issue develop into war between the two nations (much to the democracies' glee) no one can tell whether Russia's mammoth but untried army could stop the highly efficient Prussian military machine.

New Look Is Given to Autumn Styles by Bustle Silhouette

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHAT'S in a name? Well, plenty, judging from the consternation and furore the mention of "bustle" in connection with the new fashions for fall and winter has caused. Immediately, at the mere suggestion of bustles being revived in modern styling, came visions of the amusing monstrosities we of this day have come to associate with the "has been" fashions of the long ago.

As a matter of fact the bustle motif that has succeeded in giving to contemporary fashions such a decidedly new look is far and away from the antiquated bustle of our ancestresses. A more accurate way of expressing the bustle theme as is today, is to speak of it as back-fullness, to achieve which designers are most ingeniously introducing clever drapes, bows, and peplum-effects done in a conservative manner.

The emphasis given to back-fullness in current styling has opened avenues of thought to designers, in consequence of which the dresses and coats and jackets shown in the season's collections have taken on an entirely different and refreshing note of interest. With the new back-fullness the simple black dress that is heralded as a perfect autumn "first" becomes a model of high-style distinction.

The various treatments of the back-fullness theme as demonstrated in the illustration conveys the message that there are back-fullnesses and back-fullnesses being interpreted throughout the mode, with not necessarily any two being alike.

See the afternoon dress of voguish velvet—shown to the left in the picture. It shows clever manipulation via the peplum method. The spectator sports dress centered in the group, of lightweight woolen, modifies its peplum fullness to a conservative degree.

The sheer black afternoon dress to the right has a wide ash technique which arrives at back-fullness in most pleasing fashion. The hat, designed to complement the bustle silhouette of the dress, has its own bustle, which goes to show that milliners are also subscribing to the bustle theme.

In the inset a pretty evening formal again illustrates the prevailing idea of bustle effects. The bustle is detachable, to be worn at will. Silk, crisp silk, taffeta—yields beautifully.

This matter of back-fullness is not confined to dress design. The new coats have had to be tuned to the bustle-like fullness of the gowns over which they must be worn. In consequence many of the smartest coats of the season are styled with that thought in mind. Some take on fullness-at-the-waistline; others are made with lines that flare from neckline to hem at the back. Unfurled dressmaker coats of this type, made of fine broadcloth or velvety surfaced woolens, rank at the height of fashion. With them a separate fur piece is inevitable which is met in the revival of long fur boas and stoles that recall quaint fashions such as our revered grandmothers wore.

Reaction to the new bustle vogue is seen in the revival of stiff, handsome silks as they so successfully yield to brilliant drapes and bows. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Becoming Designs Smartly Individual

IF YOU take a large size, then you'll find 1800 one of the most becoming dresses you ever put on! The long, slim lines of the paneled skirt make your hips look much narrower, and the bodice gathers give correct ease over the bust. With its touch of lace, this will be very smart for bridge parties, luncheons and club affairs. Make it of flat crepe, thin wool and, later on, sheer velvet.

Coat Style Dress.
The "something different" about this practical dress is the way the closing is cut sharply over at the waistline. The design (1631) gives you plenty of lap-over, so that you needn't sew buttons and make buttonholes all the way down. And of course you don't need to be told how easy the coat style is to make, to get into, and to iron.

The Patterns.
No. 1800 is designed for sizes 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 39-inch material, with short sleeves; 4 1/2 yards with long sleeves; 1 yard for vestee.

No. 1631 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material without nap; 1/2 yard contrasting; 2 1/2 yards edging.

Amber in Fashion

Featured colors this season include a series that ranges from lightest beige and cinnamon tones to vibrant copper tones, with special emphasis on browns from light to dark. Paris plays up these colors both in fabrics and in furs, and then to carry out the color scheme in perfect harmony adds amber jewelry. The revival of amber will prove welcome news to women who dress with distinction. Note the attractive bracelet, necklace and clip of amber as worn by the fashion-wise young woman pictured.

For Slim Lines
To give slim lines to your dressy fur coat, long-haired and bulky furs are being combined with bands of all types of material.

Satin-Top Jacket Dress for Autumn

For a neat practical dress of accredited style, a dress that will serve admirably for immediate wear, and that will start the season off in the right direction, choose one of the very smart daytime jacket dresses, preferably of black, either silk crepe or lightweight wool. These are shown with either the separate black satin blouse or the satin is worked into the dress itself in a blouse top. With this comes a cunning bolero of the identical material that fashions the dress. Sometimes there is an applique of the satin on the bolero. The advantage of the separate satin blouse and skirt is that it gives opportunity for interchangeable blouses.

The combining of satin with other materials is significant fashion news. Topcoats as well as dresses are trimmed with satin this year.

Sweater Collars In Great Variety

Bengaline and faille are fall favorites for neckwear. There is a little satin and there are taffeta ruffled collars and full three-quarter Bishop sleeves with wrist frills that are in put-on-over-a-sleeve or with short sleeves to give a new juvenile look to a plain dress.
There are deep cuffs with double rows of box-plaited ruffing, deep Dutch collars with the same finish. Bibs are still shown and sweater collars are imperative both for the school girl and the older woman. This fashion gives a clean, fresh, laundered look to our woolly-butler knits that make them seem feminine and less casual.

THE STORY SO FAR

Beautiful, young Kay Forrester has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one of the women, Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera. Kay is very fond of her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a gambler of Beverly, Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer, Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she realizes something is wrong. She tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrester, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly, with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him, but he marries Reynolds. She refuses to tell him why she married the gambler, but he promises to try to understand. Meanwhile, Miss Soth ("Babe") Henkel, Beverly beauty operator of questionable morals, and intimate friend of Kirk Reynolds, berates him for marrying Kay.

sessing great technical skill, he had planned and supervised.

Margaret Hamilton was young, slender and unobtrusively beautiful. Her hair was ash-blond, and she wore it close against her small, perfectly shaped head. Her eyes were gray, like those of her brother. At the moment they were soft and gentle, perhaps because her hand rested confidently on the muscular arm of the young man at her side.

He helped her into a little bateau which was tied informally to a stake. He seated himself beside her, and handed her a paddle. "We'll both have to navigate this craft," he said lightly. "Unless you want me to sit in the back."

A boat came out of the darkness and lurled gently past them. A woman's voice, freighted with a sigh for the things that might have been, came to their ears. "The voice said, 'Did you see that young couple? It must be wonderful to be young—and to be here in the moonlight.'"

Margaret Hamilton touched the hand of the young man. The place was overpowering in its beauty. Unbelievable. Tiny islands, flaming with blossoms, seemed vague and unreal. There were no dimensions.

Jim Owenby propelled the little craft into a sheltered bayou. Here they were sheltered by a midnight blackness, and his arms went about the girl. He said nothing. He did not kiss her. Here was a communion which transcended the desire for demonstration and caresses, and if their bodies were vitally alive—if they were acutely conscious of each other—that was because they were very young and very much in love.

And then he said, gently, "I thought we could talk out here . . ."

"I understand. Let's go back, because we must talk."

They found a seat in an arbor which was mantled with wisteria, and Margaret said, "Now we can talk."

He took her hand. "It's about Kay Forrester," he said.

Margaret nodded. "I knew that." "I'm sorry for her. Sorry as hell."

"So are we all." "I understand. Let's go back, because we must talk."

"She couldn't know that. She'd only know that you'd be willing to do your best."

He said gravely, "In this State a woman may testify against her husband. The law merely says that she cannot be compelled to."

"You mustn't, Jim."

"But I must."

"Why?"

"Because Harvey was my best friend, that's reason number one. Secondly, I'm fond of Kay."

Margaret was staring off into the night. She hoped that her voice was steady. "Suppose you knew that Kirk killed Harvey. What would you do?"

"I'm not sure." He paused briefly. Then, "Listen, dear—and try to understand. A man can't just sit back and do nothing. I can't . . . and neither can Barney."

"Of course?"

"Of course. He's all shot by this marriage of Kay's."

"You and Barney have been discussing it, haven't you?"

"Of course. As a matter of fact, we haven't talked about much else."

"And so?"

"We feel like a couple of prime saps. Or perhaps that sounds more flippant than I intend. What I'm driving at is that—for everybody's sake—we don't intend to let Reynolds get away with this."

"You know he's dangerous."

"What of it?"

"This, Jim . . . and I'm trying not to be selfish. The past few years haven't been easy for us. You didn't know Dad—do you really understand what his death really meant. Then the financial collapse and the sympathy of our friends—which was the wrong kind of sympathy. And Mother's worry over Barney which led to our coming down here so he could get away from wealthy friends who were too kind."

She paused and he touched her hand reassuringly.

"I know. Plenty tough sledding."

"It is. Beverly has done a lot for all of us. I've been happy—maybe because I found you. But whatever the cause, I'm jealous of my happiness. I don't want it destroyed."

CHAPTER VII

Barney said, "I'm proud of you, Kay. My mother is proud of you. Margaret is proud of you. The cook is proud of you."

Kay laughed in spite of herself. "The third waffle?" she inquired.

"Plus grils and chrimp and what have you."

The girl rose from the breakfast-table and joined Mrs. Hamilton on the veranda. The morning was brilliant; pleasantly cool and crystal clear. Dozens of tiny bateaus were waiting patiently for passengers, and already several could be seen nosing quietly through the placid lagoons.

Barney came from the house and joined his mother and Kay.

Kay looked up into the clean-cut, boyish face. "Going into town?" she asked.

"Needs must. Heavy business."

There was a shadow of apprehension in her eyes. "Shopping?"

"Yes. For Mother." Strong fingers closed about her arm. "And that's all, Chica. My word of honor."

Kay followed him into the house, leaving Mrs. Hamilton alone on the veranda.

A bateau approached the shore, navigating an eccentric course. In the double, high-backed seat amidships, Mrs. Hamilton saw an elderly couple, and even at this distance it was apparent that the woman was more than a trifle nervous. The boatman was white, a long, angular individual who paddled the little craft viciously, to the further discomfort of the passengers.

Mrs. Hamilton recognized the man, Jeff Butler, she remembered—and she had never liked him. He had seemed a sullen and resentful person. She knew instinctively that something was wrong, and this suspicion became certain when Jeff drove the nose of the boat far up on the sloping bank with a last powerful stroke of his paddle.

Mrs. Hamilton rose to greet them. "Anything wrong?" she inquired.

"Yes." The man spoke in a high, excited voice. "Who's in charge around here?"

"I am. Why?"

"That fellow who had us in his boat . . . He gestured toward the lagoon. "He was drunk."

Ruth Hamilton's eyes narrowed. "I'm terribly sorry . . ."

"I was so frightened," interjected the little woman. "I didn't know what was going to happen. I thought every minute he might drown us."

"That wouldn't be likely. The water is very shallow in most places. But that doesn't rectify matters. Sit down . . . She designated chairs.

"Tell me just what happened."

"He acted queer right from the beginning. And when we got into the boat, he was ugly—"

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Miss Mary A. Shanley, who recently became the fourth woman in the history of the police department to reach the rank of first-grade detective at a salary of $4,000 a year, didn't start out deliberately to follow a career in criminology. Back in 1928, she was a secretary in a law office earning $35 a week and supporting an invalid brother, who died a short time ago, and her mother. A city job appealed to her because of security and pension rights. Noting a police department opening listed among the civil service positions, she applied and was accepted. Since then she has made more than 50 arrests. Her specialty is catching shoplifters. Each morning, she reads the newspapers to see where the best bargains are offered. Shoplifters do the same thing because they know the ads will attract crowds.

Born on West Thirty-eighth street just two blocks from Hell's Kitchen, Miss Shanley is now 37 years old. She likes her work in the police department. That liking has brought her more than half her arrests. Having completed a day in a department store, she goes home, has dinner and rests a little. Then, if she feels a hunch, she starts out in her free time for a stroll in midtown. One night while walking along West Forty-fifth street, she saw two men "mugging" a man in a doorway. "Mugging" is when one holdup man holds the victim with his arm around his throat while another goes through his pockets. "Muggers" are tough citizens. In some instances they have strangled their victims. Not so long ago, a man was killed in that manner in a washroom of the Independent subway's Forty-second street station. Miss Shanley captured the "muggers" she saw. She knows how to handle a revolver.

In a Herald Tribune interview, just after her promotion, Miss Shanley said that the hard part of her job watching for shoplifters in department stores was the temptation to which she was constantly subjected—the temptation to take advantage of the bargains she saw day after day. She's become hardened now and is able to pass come of them up. But it is still rather tough going.

Speaking of police, here is a story not so pleasant. The other evening in the Forty-second street station of the Independent subway, a drunk was amusing a crowd. I don't know whether he intended to undress and sleep in the station, but at any rate, he had one shoe off when a cop arrived. The officer endeavored to get him to put his shoe back on. The drunk was good-natured but stubborn. He was willing to buy everyone a drink but he didn't want to put on his shoe. Finally the policeman grabbed him and his shoe and started away with him presumably for the station house.

Now that was all right enough. The officer certainly had shown no little patience and the drunk, a young fellow, was in no condition to take care of himself in a subway. But as the cop propelled his prisoner up the stairway, he beat him over the head with his shoe—and he put real force into his blows. Unfortunately he moved too fast for his number to be obtained. But unless I am mistaken, he was the same dark young officer whom I saw recently bang a drunk in the nose at Eighth avenue and Forty-third street. And I'm not in favor of that kind of policemen.

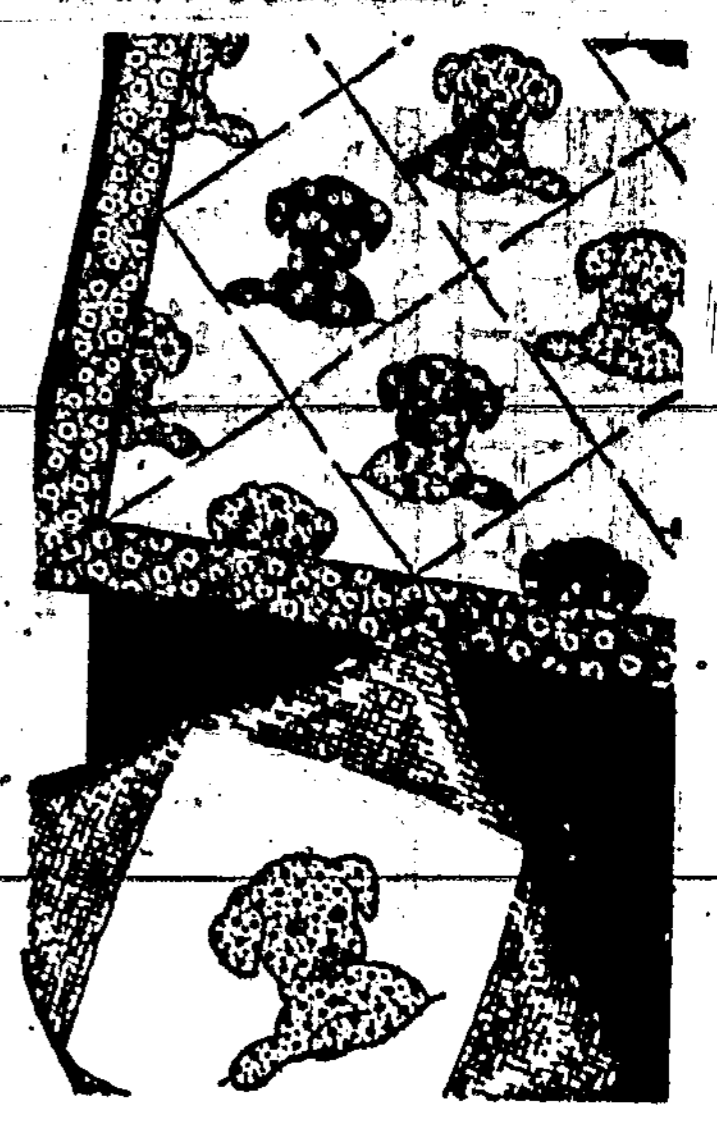

A ccut just came rushing in with the information that on Broadway between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth streets, he saw a woman with purple hair. He was certain of the color because he had walked behind her the entire block. As there didn't seem to be anything he could do about it, he came up and told me. And his breath was perfectly clear too.

Alice Frost is looking for a new maid—one entirely devoid of theatrical ambitions. While on vacation, Miss Frost received a telephone call from an agent who wished to discuss a part he had for her in a new Broadway production. The maid took all the information for her employer, then dropped around to see the agent herself. Result: Miss Frost lost the best maid she ever had and the maid has been given a bit part in a forthcoming show. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

Babe was thinking aloud. "So you did kill Harvey Jackson."

He spoke acidly. "Pine down on that."

"She was with you that night."

"What of it?"

"Plenty. Now get this, Kirk, and get it straight. I don't give a hang what you do with other women, but when you throw the harpoon into me, I get sore."

"So what?"

"So plenty. I know why you married this girl. And there are some things I'm not standing for. This is one of them."

"You're not threatening me, I hope."

"Take it any way you want. Where is she now?"

"None of your business. It just happens. I don't mind telling you that she went out to the Gardens with that Hamilton kid."

"Making you look cappy, eh?" Her voice cut into him.

He shrugged. "If that doesn't suit you—"

"It suits me all right. What doesn't suit me is that you didn't tell me what you had up your sleeve."

"Since when did I start shooting off my mouth to you? Now grab this, Babe, I'm in a tough spot, and you might as well know it."

"Okay."

"In this State," he said flatly, "a wife cannot be made to testify against her husband."

She said, "You did kill him, didn't you?"

"I'm telling you for the last time. Lay off that 'I'm not talking' to anybody, see, not even you."

"I'd like to help . . ."

"Then keep your trap closed. I'm saying nothing. Let the cops talk if they want. But don't you join in the chorus." He looked up at her. "And don't go soft on me."

"I won't. I've played around with you a pretty long time, you know."

"Yeh, I know. You're on the level . . . and I'm glad you're not doing a run-out. Though if you feel that way—go to it."

She said, "I don't though. It's just that this marriage of yours ain't easy to swallow all of a sudden. Also, whether you like it or not, I don't enjoy the idea of you being in a jam."

He took her hand with what was, for him, a great demonstration of affection. "You're not so bad yourself, Babe. So snap out of it."

"I will." She waved and went out the door.

"So he ditched me for a country kid." Her fists clenched. "Well, he can't get away with it."

CHAPTER VI

The Lotus Gardens were nearing completion. It was understood that they would be ready for the public as soon as the azalea season had passed its peak. More reclaimed swamp, greater and more bewildering beauty. More tourists. Business men were delighted, non-business persons didn't quite know how to accept it—and godly souls who lived in the very rural districts considered it a disgrace. Country preachers declaimed against this imported iniquity from the pulpits of cross-roads churches, hands were held high in horror, the name of the Devil was handed freely and with unctious. And—town and country alike—the people pointed unwaveringly at what had occurred since the completion of Ruth Hamilton's scheme to beautify ugly swampland and at the same time earn a fair income for herself and her two children.

There had been, for instance, the murder of Harvey Jackson on a lonely country road.

The Harvey Jackson Mystery, it was called that at supper-tables, at club-meetings, at church socials. It was thus dubbed in front-yard conversations and at gat-irring places like the Fair Play Store and the Bon Ton Pool Room. It was denounced as a shame and disgrace, and the public inquired frequently and vehemently why Gabe Dixon didn't do something about it.

Mr. Dixon was Solicitor of the Seventh Judicial Circuit, of which Beauregard County was a part. He was a resident of the town of Beverly; a man who was tall, lean and nervous. He had misty, shifty eyes and large, restless fingers and feet. He was addicted to stiff white collars and ridiculous lifts.

In times of stress his emotional reactions were betrayed by an excited hobbling of his collar-butt beneath a prominent Adam's apple. He was a keen politician and a member of a family which controlled at least half the votes in Beauregard County.

He was shrewd, keen and conscientious . . . whenever and wherever conscientiousness was not calculated to deprive him of votes. In a court-room, his very awkwardness made him effective, and he held the reins of office tightly, doing the major portion of his job with astonishing efficiency.

For instance, he was genuinely anxious to find and convict the killer of Harvey Jackson. That, he felt, would be an excellent move. Harvey Jackson had been one of the most popular young men in Beverly, son of ultra-respectable middle-class parents, an able young engineer and a man highly regarded by maidens and others. And because Mr. Dixon was sincere in his desire to convict, he—at first—said nothing about the odd little compact which had been found on the road beside Harvey Jackson's dead body. Of course, the whole town knew about the compact, and discussed it avidly. The man who had found it failed to keep the secret.

Solicitor Dixon investigated shrewdly, endeavoring to make sound evidence of that compact. He learned that it possibly belonged to Katherine Forrester—daughter of Andrew Forrester. He couldn't prove it, of course—not then—because he understood that it was a type of compact which could be purchased in any of several New York cosmetic shops; the sort of compact that touring ladies might have carried. Then he discovered that on the night of Harvey Jackson's demise, Kay Forrester had gone riding with Kirk Reynolds. The evidence was still too circumstantial, but it indicated several things to Mr. Dixon. He believed that Reynolds had killed Jackson and that Kay Forrester had witnessed the affair.

Beverly's hard common sense, plus verbose interpretation by Solicitor Dixon, gave a fairly proper picture of the tragedy. Mr. Dixon was puzzled.

"You reckon Kirk Reynolds killed him, Gabe?"

"He might have."

"Then why don't you have him arrested?"

"No chance of convictin' him. Not on what we've got."

"You knew all the time that was Kay Forrester's compact. Why didn't you light on him before?"

"Fain of gadgets like that. Any of these tourists might have lost one similar."

"But you could have tried him, couldn't you?"

"That wouldn't have been smart. He'd have been acquitted, and then he couldn't be touched again."

"Well"—with a hopeless gesture—"Look what he's done now. He's gone and married her."

"He sho' has. And I can't make her testify against him. Smart boy, this Reynolds."

"Smarter'n you, eh, Gabe?"

Mr. Dixon was unperturbed. "No-o, I wouldn't be sayin' that. This here marriage—with them not even livin' together—tells us plenty. It's just about the same as sayin' that Kirk killed Jackson and Kay Forrester saw him do it. They might's well have advertised in the Gazette. And listen, when you know a man has done a crime, when you know it, mind you, it's just a question-of-time before you git the evidence to convict him with."

Cathedral Gardens was bathed in silver glow. Moonlight limned the old house sympathetically. A sign, tacked to a pine at the entrance to the Gardens, announced that inasmuch as this was the last night of the full moon, no tourists would be admitted on succeeding days after seven o'clock.

A young man and a girl left the house and walked toward the water. The young man was tall and straight and broad of shoulder. He walked slowly and gazed through the almost unearthly beauty of the Gardens with pardonable pride.

Jim Owenby, landscape engineer, had designed and built Cathedral Gardens. To a Beverly man had been given the distinction of having created this beauty spot. Working from Mrs. Hamilton's original idea, freed by youthful ambition and pos-with blossoms, seemed vague and unreal. There were no dimensions.

Jim Owenby propelled the little craft into a sheltered bayou. Here they were sheltered by a midnight blackness, and his arms went about the girl. He said nothing. He did not kiss her. Here was a communion which transcended the desire for demonstration and caresses, and if their bodies were vitally alive—if they were acutely conscious of each other—that was because they were very young and very much in love.

And then he said, gently, "I thought we could talk out here . . ."

"I understand. Let's go back, because we must talk."

They found a seat in an arbor which was mantled with wisteria, and Margaret said, "Now we can talk."

He took her hand. "It's about Kay Forrester," he said.

Margaret nodded. "I knew that." "I'm sorry for her. Sorry as hell."

"So are we all." "I understand. Let's go back, because we must talk."

"I see . . . And so?"

"And so," he said bitterly, "I can't let matters stand where they are. I want to talk to Kay—want to see if she'll tell me the truth."

Margaret pressed his hand. She said quickly, "You mustn't."

"Why?"

"It isn't fair. Kay came here to get away from the nasty gossip in Beverly. She's our guest . . ."

"But suppose she knew that she was going to be protected?"

Offending Signs to be Removed from Hi-Ways

Owners of illegally erected signs along the highways in New Mexico were reminded today by State
Highway Engineer, B. G. Dwyre, that they have only until October 1 to remove these offending signs or obtain written permission from the highway department to retain them on their present sites.

In case such permission is not obtained by the owners before October 1, the signs will be removed by highway department crews, Mr. Dwyre said.

"Many of the signs," Mr.
Dwyre stated, "are erected near intersections, on curves and other places where they constitute a real traffic hazard. Mr. Eccles, Highway Safety Engineer, has recommended that such signs either be brought to conformity with law or be removed altogether.

"While our purpose in making this drive on illegally erected highway signs is chiefly to guard against accidents on the highways we also wish to do our part in preserving the beauty of our roadways.

Mr. Dwyre stated that the highway department had been reluctant to move against owners of the offending signs until they had been given ample warning to comply with the law, and for that reason had given them two months warning.

A GRANDFATHER

Albert Ziegler is in receipt of the information that a girl arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs.
Charles Coplin, Seattle, Washington, Wednesday, January 16.
Albert is, therefore, a grandfather and bears the responsibility with dignity. Mrs. Ziegler is visiting the Coplins.

U. S. Marshal Hudspeth is here this week in the discharge of his duties. He brought in a young man from Arabela today a charge of having failed to register being filed against him. The non-regis-trant avows his willingness to join the army and may at once be inducted into service.

William Cole, Guy Kirby and Henry Hoffman have returned from El Paso, where they went to enlist in the naval reserves. They were accepted and expect to be called soon after the 15th. Kirby and Hoffman will go to the Pacific Coast, while Cole has put in an application for transfer and, if granted, will go to the Atlantic Coast.

Messrs. Finley, Reilly and Stim-mel of the Carrizozo Live Stock Commission Co. purchased a car load of horses from Fred Neighbour and others and loaded them out Tuesday for Oklahoma. They sold them to Babe Jones an Oklahoma buyer.
