Mr. Herman Kelt, District Deputy Grand Master was installing officer for the Alamogordo and Carrizozo Lodges. After installation a delightful social hour was enjoyed, at which more than 50 were served. The menu consisted of turkey sandwiches, three kinds of cake, and coffee. Talks were made by Dr. Kibbe, Dr. Grissom and several others. Several past grand officers honored us with their presence.

Notice

The regular 2nd Sunday afternoon singing convention will be held at Ancho next Sunday, Jan. 8 at 2 p. m. Everybody invited. The Music-Drama Study Club will meet at the home of Miss Thelma Shaver Thursday, January 12, 1939.

News Notes of Carrizozo Schools

We students are happy that Xmas. Holidays are over and we are back in the harness once more. We are ready to play when we play and work when we work. On the whole we have the finest school in New Mexico and a great opportunity is ours. We have good teachers and 99 percent of the students are good. We hope the next five months will be as pleasurable and profitable as the last four months.

The semester Examinations are to be given next Thursday and Friday. Exemptions from examinations will be few; Students with an Average may be exempt providing they have not more than eight absences and record is clear of all breaches of etiquette.

First year Home Economic Girls are having an unusual test Friday. They are going to eat their own cooking. The members of the class are taking their dinner in the Home Ec. Room.

It would be well for all students to remember to get reinstatements for each absence before going to class. It was reported that this week Mr. Carpenter gave two Juniors an object lesson for attempting to enter classes when they had forgotten to get reinstatement for their absence.

The Senior Band will play at the Basket Ball games this season this will add greatly to the spirit of the game. No doubt it will help the attendance.

The attendance race in the sixth grade is now finished. We chose sides and took an airplane trip around the world. The losers were the Reds and they have to give the Blues a party. We will have it Friday morning.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Once, at an alley's end in Guayaquil, this reporter then young and indiscreet, became involved in an argument with certain of the native citizens, who insisted that North Americans ate only dog meat. Your correspondent knew only enough Spanish to get him into trouble, and was using it diligently to that end when Dr. Robert Entwistle, once of Philadelphia, later a student and practitioner of tropical medicine along the west coast fever ports, appeared. He calmed the excitement and saved his countryman much embarrassment and possibly a broken head. It was like magic, the way he piped everybody down. They loved and trusted him and he was their authority on everything from international relations to beri-beri.

So, today, it seemed almost like old news to read in a dispatch from Lima that it was an American doctor and not a statesman, who, possibly more than any other one man, has insured respect and good will for this country, down around and below the equator. With a number of other American doctors, Dr. John D. Long, of the United States Public Health service, has been carrying on a fight against the bubonic plague, malaria, chagas fever and other tropical curses in Ecuador, Brazil, Peru, Chile and other countries. He and his colleagues have served only in response to specific requests for their services, and the sum of their efforts has been to allay ill will, dispel prejudice and misunderstanding and promote friendly relations.

Doctor Long, 64 years old, quiet, precise, unassuming, is a typical American professional man, whose home town was Mt. Pleasant, Pa. After his graduation from the medical school of the University of Pennsylvania, he entered the national public health service, became its assistant surgeon, and, assigned to the Philippines, won eminence in his profession in his work in sanitation and in fighting disease. In 1926, he was loaned to the Chilean government for a similar encounter there.

In this writer's observation of South American countries, particularized instances of civilized behavior, fair dealing and regard for native traditions and amenities, once the fear of predatory designs had been overcome, were effective where all else failed, including our most eloquent offerings of official friendship.

THE New York aquarium gets three African fish which have high foreheads and bigger brains in proportion to their size than any other creatures.

Plan I. Q. Rating below the Pri-Rare Fish With mates. This Out-Size Brain makes them skittish and doesn't seem to get them anything, although they manage to keep out of aquaria and frying pans. These are the first ever brought to this country.

Dr. Charles M. Breder Jr. plans to go to Africa as soon as possible to check up on their I. Q. The ancient Egyptians revered and protected them, in the belief that their huge brain cavities were inhabited by the souls of departed men. Doctor Breder thinks a study of their intelligence, if any, in relation to their out-size brain, might be enlightening.

Doctor Breder was a boy ichthyologist at Newark, where the family was apt to find the bathtub full of kills and sticklebacks. In his examination for a biologist's job in the fisheries bureau, he confounded his elders and beat out Ph. D. entrants in the competition. He was assistant director of the Aquarium for 14 years and became director a year ago.

Doctor Breder is said to rank all other scientists. He is 49 years old, a fragile, clerical-looking man, with blue eyes and yellow hair. But his appearance is deceptive. On the Richard Oglesby Marsh expedition, to the Chucunague river country in southern Panama, in 1924, in which Dr. J. L. Baer of the Smithsonian institution lost his life, Doctor Breder came through swimmingly, with no chagas fever or beri-beri and a brand new fish. Its name, Rivulina Chucunague Brederi, is in his body type, five-sixteenths of an inch longer than the fish.

See the New Suede Fashions, They're the Smartest Ever

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THE style program for midseason and the soon-to-follow spring definitely stresses the importance of apparel made of handsome colorful suede. A most significant achievement in the field of modern costume design is the use of suede in a fabric way. Time was when imagination carried only as far as novelty hats and bags, gloves and belts, and perhaps a few added accessories.

These small beginnings of suede are past history now. Today designers are working with it as easily and creatively as if it were cloth or any other material. A dress, a coat, a jacket or blouse, in fact an ensemble entire of this supple, caressing-to-the-touch and superbly colorful medium is no longer a novelty but a grand and glorious fact.

Up to this season a dress of suede or a coat was more or less a luxury. It's going to be different this year, for in anticipation of a widespread vogue, leading shops and stores are featuring fashions that dress you in suede from tip to toe. And are these new suede clothes good looking! Just go to your nearest dealer and ask to see the newest in suedees and you will have the answer.

In these advance showings, daytime dresses in delectable colors (suede takes dyes so beautifully) are tailored and dressmakered and style-detailed so artfully, you know then and there as you gaze on them you will never be satisfied until you own something of suede, perhaps a frock with innumerable little pockets and a decorative slide-fastener or a swagger coat that is tailored to perfection or a bolero with the tie-sash that you can wear with any dress.

Out Hollywood way the fashion alert colony has gone in wholeheartedly for suede apparel. A suede jacket, suede hat and suede blouse make up the striking casual costume selected by Lynn Bari. See this ensemble pictured to the left in the illustration. The three-quarter length coat of suede in a luscious wineberry color has padded shoulders with four interesting pockets extending from the wide fold down the front. The 16-gore skirt is matched to the coat while the slide-fastened waistcoat is in pink suede. With this outfit Miss Bari wears open-toe wineberry calf pumps.

To brighten her black wool dress Eleanor Hansen wears a teal blue suede bolero with contrasting embroidered motif and belt that ties. See this attractive two-piece shown to the right in the picture.

The hat in the inset is of suede combined with felt. Mary Carlisle wears it. The felt part is in nut brown while the upward suede side is a moose rust tone to match a 14-inch long suede bag which is so capacious it carries everything.

Suede evening fashions are thrilling. A graceful cape of white suede trimmed in white fox makes a most beautiful evening wrap. A formal gown of delicate pink suede is bewitching. A long coat tailored of colorful suede with richly furled collar is eye-filling. Then there are charming jacket blouses of suede and waistcoats and boleros with bags and sash girdles to match and the latest is to add a whimsical muff of matching suede.

You can get cunning and very inexpensive collar-and-cuff sets of suede to add a sure style touch to your sports outfit. These are swank to wear with your about-town shirt-maker frocks.

Skating Outfit

This happy skater is darting about like a bird of gay plumage in a fetching costume introduced at the Merchandise Mart of Chicago. The jacket front has red and white scroll work and is interwoven with a cellophane thread to give the appearance of snow. Her matching skirt is red lined and flares decidedly as fashionable skating skirts are supposed to do this season.

Soft Styling New Trend in Fashion

An interesting movement among designers is that of styling the new dresses and likewise coats with extra fullness. The dirndl skirt and the very new monastic silhouettes are ways of achieving the extra fullness. However many of the incoming costumes show a restrained handling of fullness that easily maintains coveted slenderness.

It is not only skirts that are taking on artful fullness. Fashion's demand for soft styling extends to waists and blouses and large full sleeves in both coat and dress.

Favor Wool for Teen-Age Frocks

New daytime frocks for teen-age after-school occasions often are fashioned of lightweight wool—gray, brown or teal blue. One is a dark jumper frock worn with a gaily flowered, challis blouse and another is made of light gray wool brightly smocked at the hipbones in red. Black or dark colored velvet or velveteen dresses trimmed with a pleated neckline frill of striped ribbon seem to be favorites for daytime holiday occasions.

Waistline Prediction
A lower waistline on your spring dresses will be indicated mostly with a ribbon sash tied in a bow.

Elegant Blouse
An elegant blouse is becoming essential to the completeness of a wardrobe.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the Diet of Expectant Mother. Some General Rules for Wise Eating at This Important Time

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

DISTINGUISHED writers and sociologists, both here and abroad, have concerned themselves in recent years with the writing of a Children's Charter and a Baby's Bill of Rights. These efforts are commendable because they demonstrate a forward-looking attitude... a genuine attempt to better the lot of the next generation. Indeed, they represent a concerted effort to do for children in general what mothers have always tried to do individually for their own children.

Before a Baby Is Born

But not every mother realizes what all nutritionists know—that to a not inconsiderable degree, the very foundations of good health for the child are laid down before he is born. For it has been well said that good nutrition for the infant begins with good nutrition for the mother.

Unfortunately, many people, even in this enlightened age, still cling to superstition and old wives' tales when it comes to choosing the proper foods for those important months before a baby is born.

Some Common Fallacies

As a result, some expectant mothers overeat, frequently of the wrong kinds of food; others do not take enough of the foods that are required to maintain top health for the mother and build the baby's body soundly; while still another group believes such antiquated notions as the idea that a woman may eat whatever she "craves" during this period.

In view of the fact that recent nutrition work has given us more knowledge than ever before of how and what the expectant mother should eat, dietetic errors during this period are particularly deplorable.

Building Better Babies

Every expectant mother should be under the care of a physician, and usually he gives specific advice concerning the foods that may be eaten and those that might better be avoided. But every woman will be a better mother if she understands something of the functions and fate of foods, with particular reference to this period.

Don't Overeat

Generally speaking, the same foods that are required for a well-balanced diet under ordinary circumstances are the ones that will best serve the needs of mother and child during the months before a baby is born. There are, however, certain modifications of the diet that may well be taken into consideration.

First, a word about the amount of food consumed: It is not necessary to eat more than is required to satisfy the normal appetite, in the belief that large quantities of additional food are needed. Nutritionists have demonstrated that the energy requirements of the expectant mother increase only during the last three months of gestation. Thus, it is not necessary to increase the caloric intake for the first few months, though toward the end of the period a gradual increase in caloric intake may be made under the direction of the physician. It is advisable, however, to emphasize that the character of the additional food consumed, as well as the amount, should always be taken into consideration.

Building Materials

It is important to pay special attention to the amount and kind of protein that is eaten, since over the entire period the baby grows quired in significant amounts and this may well be obtained from eggs, dried fruits, whole grain cereals and green leafy vegetables. It has been found that the thyroid gland is unusually active in the expectant mother. And in those sections of the country where the drinking water and soil are deficient in iodine, physicians frequently recommend the use of some food such as iodized salt.

Adequate Bulk or Cellulose

It is most desirable that enough bulky foods be included in the diet to help maintain regular health habits.

This requirement should be taken care of automatically if generous amounts of fruits, vegetables and whole grain cereals are consumed. For in addition to their minerals and vitamins, all these foods likewise supply bulk which aids in promoting regularity.

The wide use of fruits and vegetables will also help to build up a liberal alkaline reserve, which helps to safeguard health during the period of gestation.

If all these factors are taken into consideration, the expectant mother will not only help to preserve her own health, but will take constructive measures to give her baby the blessings of a sound start in life. Then as the healthy, contented infant grows into the healthy, happy, active toddler, and later becomes the healthy, well-adjusted school boy, the mother can indeed be proud of her handiwork!

Questions Answered

Miss E. D. M.—Yes, in most of the foods containing vitamin C, this vitamin is associated with vitamin B. White of egg is the only food in which it is definitely known to date that vitamin G occurs without vitamin B.

Mrs. S. D. L.—It is true that nuts furnish protein similar in quantity to that found in cream and top milk. Nutritionists do not agree, however, that the protein in the complete equal of milk protein in quality.

Indoor and Outdoor Ideas

ONE of these designs gives you four gay little extras to freshen-up your dark dresses and suits—an accessory set comprising a fitted jacket, a soft, roomy bag, a tailored ascot scarf and a pair of those new boxy-figured gloves. The other is a practical house dress, so comfortable and so good-looking that you'll want it for shopping and runabout as well as for home work. Make the frivolous accessory set—make the useful house dress! Both are easy, and you'll enjoy them both!

Four Matching Accessories.
It will make your clothes seem like lots more, if you vary them with bright accessories in just the colors you want. Don't be afraid to tackle the gloves. They're easy, with the detailed sew chart included in your pattern and so smart! Lots of women who haven't sewed any more than you have are making their own, with this design. Choose flannel, jersey, or suede.

Slenderizing House Dress.
This is such a trim, tailored style, with darts at the waistline for slimmness, and a gathered bodice to give fullness over the bust. The skirt has an action pleat for greater comfort. The plain V neckline, finished with edging, is very becoming. All in all, this dress fits so well and looks so well that you should have it in flat crepe or polka dot print as well as in tubfast cottons like calico, percale, gingham and linen.

The Patterns.
No. 1652 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. With long sleeves, size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material; with short sleeves, 4 1/2 yards; 2 1/4 yards of edging.
No. 1643 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 1 1/2 yards of 64-inch fabric for the jacket; 1/2 yard for the gloves, with 1/2 yard contrast; 1 1/2 yards for the scarf and 1/2 yard for the bag.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

QUESTION
You never seem to have a cold, Ethel.

ANSWER
Perhaps I'm just lucky. But I always use Luden's at the first sign. They contain an alkaline factor, you know.

Shining the Stove.—Before blackening the kitchen stove go over it with a cloth dipped in vinegar to remove all the grease.

Scotch Marks.—Bicarbonates of soda is useful for removing scotch marks from white silk. Make into a paste with cold water and leave on the stains until dry.

Hints to Carpenters.—When driving nails into hard wood touch the end of the nails with lard or tallow, when they will be found to go in much more easily.

Squeaky Carpet Sweeper.—If your carpet sweeper squeaks, apply oil on a feather or from a small oil can. Use the oil on the bearings and around the wheels. Then run the sweeper over a paper to catch any surplus oil so it won't drip on your rugs.

Wash Gloves Often.—Gloves should be washed often to prevent hard rubbing, which injures the finish and loosens the dye.

A Blanket Note.—To keep the tops of blankets and quilts clean, bind the edges with pieces of cheesecloth about 16 inches wide. These can be tinted to match the blanket, and removed when soiled.

For New Griddle.—To prepare a new aluminum griddle for use, first wash well in warm water and soap suds and remove any labels. The griddle is hot enough on a range when a small piece of paper placed on top will brown. Lower the heat and start baking. Cakes often stick if the griddle is too hot. Wash the griddle after it has been used in plenty of hot soapy water and wipe perfectly dry before storing.

Being Happy Fashionable

Saying one is happy seems to be the proper thing in China, according to Dr. Randolph Sailer, psychologist at Yenching university. Of 500 workers questioned, only 60 admitted that their happiness was below par, and none was a complete pessimist. Happiness is not affected by money, education or jobs, Doctor Sailer and his co-workers found. Smokers and non-smokers both were happy. And married men were happier as a rule, than bachelors.

PERILOUS SPORT OF DARK AGES REVIVED

Wild Boar Hunting Is Being Tried Out in South.

Washington.—Uncle Sam himself is reviving the sport of kings. Not horse racing, but something a great deal more exciting and hazardous.

Back when plumed knights wielded lance and sword for ladies fair the sport of kings was the wild boar hunt. This savage and stout hearted adversary was a true test of royal mettle and royalty carefully protected this beast with the great razor sharp tusks. Norman kings once forbade anyone to kill wild boars without royal permission. The penalty was to put the culprit's eyes out.

The first experimental wild boar hunt last fall down in the Tellico Plains, Tenn., district of the Cherokee national forest worked out successfully and another was arranged for this fall.

Just the Thing for a King.

The reason for these hunts is that bears are becoming too numerous in Italy's Hell and other wilderness sections of the national forest—a condition that would have warmed the royal hearts of Henry II (1154-'87) and Charles I (1625-'49).

In those days Englishmen and Frenchmen hunted the boar on horseback, with the help of boaters and great boarhounds. The hunters would go ahead into brush, trying to stir up the boars. Trained dogs were held back until one was sighted. A dog unskilled in the art of bear fighting would rush in and be ripped to ribbons by the quick turn of the tusks.

In Germany the boars were hunted by sportsmen on foot, armed with short, strong spears and aided by large hounds. When a hunter approached the boar often would attack. The hunter would either spear it or wait for it to rush onto the point of his weapon.

Take the Place of Bears.

British sportsmen in Bengal liked to go bear spearing until the beginning of the Nineteenth century when bears became scarce. They decided to hunt wild boars and found the experience just as thrilling. They called it pig-sticking.

The boars in India are of a large species. One of the largest boars ever recorded in India was killed in 1827 in the Gogra Kanjly jungles by the Pyzabad Tent club. It measured 37 1/2 inches at the withers and weighed 325 pounds.

Nevertheless, it really was not any larger than one killed near the Tennessee-North Carolina line by Ben Ellis. His trophy also weighed 325 pounds.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

Scattered over the city are establishments that cater exclusively to the needs of pipe smokers. Some are more holes-in-the-wall with the proprietor as the entire sales force. Others are large enough to employ six or more clerks and are in high rental districts. Stocks range from pipe cleaners to the most expensive hand-made pipes, and from pipe-racks to humidors. All stores, large and small, have their own mixtures or blends of tobaccos and have customers who would smoke nothing else. Most of them are ready to produce any special blend that appeals to the taste of a customer. These blends are listed so that no matter where he may be, the smoker may obtain his on order. At least one store supplies briar blocks, equipped with stems. They can be smoked in the rough or the smoker may carve the block into a design of his own choosing, a set of carving tools being included with the pipe.

Some field work leads to the belief that New York's pipe stores are the least hurried places of business in the city. Possibly pipe smoking is associated with leisure, but, no matter how many customers may be waiting, there is no haste on the part of patrons or clerks. Nor does there seem to be resentment at delay. Those waiting inspect stocks or compare notes with other smokers. Clerks as a rule are extremely civil. Many are English and have grown old in the pipe business as have their parents before them. In a swarthy Fifth Avenue establishment, they wear smocks. In smaller stores, they stick to tweeds. All smoke while at work. Pipes, of course.

High pressure sales methods are not used in the real pipe stores. Now and then there may be a quiet "May I help you?" but that is all. Nor are all who come in customers—at least at the moment. It seems these are pipe smokers who like to browse around in pipe stores merely looking, just as book lovers browse around in the old Fourth Avenue shops. Pipe store owners don't object. Not at all. A smoker who wanders in merely to spend a few minutes, sees a pipe or some other article that just catches his fancy and either buys it or comes back.

World Looks Forward to New Year, Fearing Democracy-Dictator Battle

MUSSOLINI CHAMBERLAIN ROOSEVELT HITLER KAI-SHEK

Will the headlines of 1938 continue to make headlines in 1939?

Europe and Orient Arm Against Possible War, as Totalitarian States Press Their Advantage Against Weaker Lands

By JOSEPH W. LUBINE

Father Time closes another volume in his checkered career and the world pauses to conjecture. What will 1939 bring? Can civilization look forward to 12 months of comparative peace after the hectic year just drawing to a close? Or will the trumpets of Mars blent louder than ever, bringing this battle-scarred globe even nearer to the long-predicted general warfare?

Will new heroes and villains appear to replace names already engraved on the horizon? Or will men still read of Hitler, Mussolini, Chiang Kai-shek, Daladier, Roosevelt and Chamberlain?

From the puzzling maze of headlines blazing across the world at year's end, one safe prediction can be drawn:

The year 1939 will bring unprecedented economic warfare between totalitarian states and democracies, forcing one nation after another into the ultimate political lineup from which they will rise or fall. On one side, the side of authoritarianism, will stand Germany, Italy and Japan, aggressively seeking to extend their power to new frontiers. On the other side will stand France, the United Kingdom and those Western hemisphere nations who will cast their lot with the United States to protect the New World from this new threat to security.

Far East Fears War,

Already the die is being cast. In the Orient, as nowhere else, world powers are consolidating their positions and preparing for a showdown that may come during the next 12 months. Great Britain and the United States, insulted because Japan has discarded the nine-power treaty guaranteeing China's "open door," have come out in the open with financial assistance to sorely pressed Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

At the same time China is drawing nearer an alliance with Soviet Russia, Japan's mortal enemy. Recognizing this threat, admitting that conflict with the Soviet must eventually come, Japan has hitched her bolt and made increased armament appropriations to cope with the new and greater challenge to her domination over the Far East.

Will this potential dynamite keg explode in 1939? Observers fear it fallen into the German sphere of influence, and this program will be intensified in 1939.

France May Capitulate,

Meanwhile, at the other end of the Rome-Berlin axis, Italy's Premier Benito Mussolini looks for the new year to bring him new territories in the Mediterranean. Though he has "demanded" that France give him Tunisia, Corsica, Savoy and Nice, he is expected to settle for much less. But France will undoubtedly make some concessions in 1939, principally providing for joint French-British-Italian control over the Suez canal and giving Ethiopia an outlet to the sea through Djibouti.

This particular problem is expected to draw attention during January, when England's Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax visit Mussolini in Rome. France is Great Britain's closest ally, and since Chamberlain has taken the lead in the 1938 program of "appeasing" dictators, he is expected to arrange a settlement of the Franco-Italian problem.

In Spain, where the civil war is now more than two years old, a settlement is expected during 1939. Loyalists, who have lost ground steadily, will probably capitulate to Rebel Generalissimo Francisco Franco. Not only does Franco have the active support of Germany and Italy, but also of the strong Spanish royalist faction. He has just restored citizenship and properties taken from ex-King Alfonso, and Prince Juan is expected one day to become a puppet monarch with Franco as premier.

Democracies on Guard,

Dictators cannot stand still, and Hitler and Mussolini must either rise to new glories or fall in the estimation of their subjects. That is why no sane European observer can predict a cessation of the diplomatic conflict now waging. If Great Britain and France expected their appeasement policy to bring a permanent European peace out of the chaos of 1938, Italy and Germany are now showing there is no such thing as permanent appeasement. Therefore the democracies are now stiffening their attitudes.

Many are the commentators who predict general European conflict early in 1939. Sir Oswald Pirow, defense minister for the Union of South Africa, made such a statement after completing a discouraging tour of continental capitals.

Meanwhile the Western hemisphere cannot ignore the threat of totalitarian propaganda. At the Pan-American conference in Lima, Peru, the United States joined with other New World nations in a program to keep Italy, Germany and Japan in check. How well the plan will succeed is problematical, since it is based on nothing more concrete than well-intentioned resolutions. But the United States has apparently convinced those South American nations who fear "dollar imperialism" that Uncle Sam has good intentions.

Trade Battle Predicted,

This is the background for 1939's battle of democracy versus totalitarianism. The battle itself will probably be an international trade war, since Nazi-Fascist states depend on foreign trade to expand their political domination. But as Germany's export-import activity grows greater, so does that of the United Kingdom, whose reciprocal trade treaty with the United States goes into effect this year.

From behind the scenes in every nation will come the clatter of steel against steel as men forge the weapons of defense and aggression—battleships, tanks, airplanes and cannon. Never since the World War have armament appropriations been so large. Not the least of these is our own United States, which may embark on a military-naval program plus industrial mobilization—providing congress provides the cash.

So there is a rumbling of cannons and a raucous babble of propaganda to mingle with this season's New Year's celebration. Will war emerge, or will common sense prevail? Only the infant 1939 can tell, and he's too young to speak!

Poise Begins With Proper Care of Feet

By PATRICIA LINDSAY

YOU'VE seen them, perhaps you are one of them. Women smartly-dressed limping along with tortured expressions on their faces, or surreptitiously slipping off their shoes for a few moments of foot ease! All their poise destroyed; all facial beauty sacrificed for shoes that are in fashion.

Ill fitting shoes are the chief offenders to foot health. It is appalling how few women have good feet, and rare is she with beautiful feet! Wrong lasts, have deformed them, and constant constriction in leather since infancy has weakened their muscle tone.

Look at the shoe you are wearing. If it is run down badly at the heel, if the lining is worn through, the too scuffed or the sides bulging it is a safe bet that you are not fitted correctly.

Your Shoe Tells The Story

To begin with, a good shoe has a straight inner line which keeps the big toe straight and prevents a bunion from forming. It should be wide enough to give your toes ample room for gripping when you walk, and the heel should allow good posture as well as comfort. Learn whether you should wear a long vamp shoe or a short vamp shoe. Choose a model with strong arch support and don't let style or color influence your purchase. Just any shoe which is pretty, is the wrong philosophy—in fact that is flirting with ruined health.

For general wear, I advocate a heel no higher than one and three-quarters inches. The pretties with heels three inches or more, should be kept for times when you are not depending upon your feet to get you there! Or for dancing.

Ignorance of foot care is another offender to foot beauty. Regular treatments by a registered pediatrist, or a chiropodist, are strongly commended if you have the means, otherwise you must learn to exercise your feet at home, daily, and give them a pedicure at least once a week. Walk around bare footed or sandal shod, as frequently as possible, and whenever you can (without drawing attention) sit with your feet resting higher than your body. Up on a table or the back of a chair.

HINT-OF-THE-DAY

Importance of Sleep

There's much wisdom in the advice of Kitty Carlisle, lovely singing star of the stage and screen: "Enough sleep and not too much alcohol—and you can keep your face looking 18 right up to the day you are 35."

By way of taking her own medicine, Miss Carlisle averages nine hours sleep a night. She is equally religious in her exercise and has developed her own method for specific exercises.

"When I do an exercise that makes me sore, then I know I've hit the right muscles for that spot," she explains.

One of Miss Carlisle's favorite exercises is designed to benefit the arms and shoulders. You place one clenched fist in the palm of the other hand and then hold the hands at chest level, elbows out at either side. Push against resistance and force, the hands first to one's side, then to the other.

As for keeping the waistline slim and the tummy flat, here's the exercise recommended by this star:

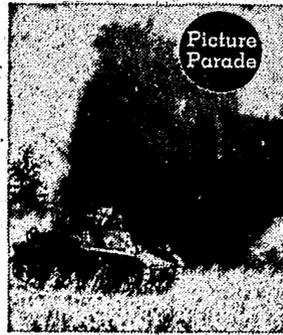

Lie on the back on the floor with hands braced at either side, and flop both feet back over the head. Keep the knees straight, legs together, and slowly lower the feet back over the head until the toes are on the floor. The trick is to lower the legs very slowly, and if you can do that you are not so rusty on exercise after all. Return to the original position and repeat the exercise three times.

CONGRESS GOES TO WORK

Faced with more than its usual quota of world and domestic problems, congress opens a session which will continue far into the summer months. Picture Parade gives you a glimpse of the work at hand.

Picture Parade

DEFENSE—To guard against what he considers a threat from aggressor nations, President Roosevelt favors throwing a defensive ring around the entire Western hemisphere. The war department wants a greatly enlarged air force. Also planned is industrial mobilization.

LABOR—Charging that the national labor relations act as now constituted is unfair to employers, congressmen will seek revisions. Two proposed amendments would (1) require employers to ask for labor board elections and (2) permit review by the courts of findings of the labor board.

TAXES—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau's budget requests will possibly be smaller for the fiscal year starting next June. Seriously considered as a new revenue source is reduction of income tax exemptions for single persons from $1,000 to $500, and for married persons from $2,500 to $1,000.

AGRICULTURE—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace may ask congress to approve his "two-price" plan for domestic subsidies, whereby surplus American agricultural products would be sold at a lower-than-standard price to needy families. A general farm revolt is expected over acreage reduction plans.

IMMIGRATION—Because Germany is persecuting Jews, some congressmen will ask a partial lifting of American immigration restrictions. This plan is opposed by Senator Borah, among others, on the theory that an influx of new population would only add to America's unemployment problem.

PENSIONS—Although the November elections saw defeat of many unorthodox pension proposals, many congressmen were elected with the backing of such groups as that formed by Dr. Francis E. Townsend, above. The original Townsend proposal calls for $200-a-month pensions, but a modified version is expected.

Navy Assembles in Atlantic For Huge Battle Maneuvers

This week a steady parade of Uncle Sam's "battleships" begins moving eastward through the Panama canal, bound for the fleet's first Atlantic maneuvers since 1934, and the second largest gathering of ships and men ever held under the American flag.

From now until next spring, 140 combatant ships plus auxiliary vessels, accommodating a total of 40,000 men, will work on "Fleet Problem No. 20," directed by Admiral Claude O. Bloch, commander-in-chief of naval forces. Ships will range up and down the coast from Cuba to Brazil. Divided into two units, the problem will find a "black fleet" defending the coast against a "white fleet" which is attempting to establish a base on that coast.

The 140 combatant ships include battleships, cruisers, aircraft carriers, destroyers, submarines and 600 airplanes, including all types of fighting, scouting and observation planes.

Following maneuvers, the fleet will meet in the vicinity of Guantanamo to practice gunnery. Later ships will be sent north to visit the New York world's fair.

Though no public pronouncement has been made, it is quite obvious that the Atlantic maneuvers are destined as protection for Uncle Sam against any possible invasion from Europe, in accordance with President Roosevelt's proposal for United States initiative in a program to protect the entire Western hemisphere.

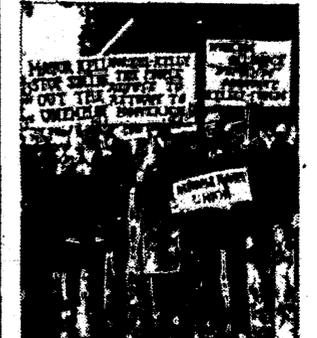

Admiral Claude Bloch, commander-in-chief of the United States naval forces, who is in direct charge of the Atlantic maneuvers.

Coming immediately after the Pan-American conference at Lima, when European attention is focused on New World solidarity efforts, the maneuvers will serve as a warning that the United States will tolerate no European aggression in South America.

CHAIN STORES—Texas Congressman Wright Patman will introduce his bill to tax chain stores out of existence. But the bill is confronted with mounting public opposition from such groups as the American Federation of Labor, National Association of Real Estate boards, farm and consumer groups, who believe it would cut the farmer's market 30 per cent, raise living costs, increase unemployment.

RELIEF—Originated by Democrats but claiming Republican support, a measure will probably be introduced to return administration of relief to states, where bipartisan boards will be in charge. Enlarged defense appropriations, together with the predicted upswing in business, may preclude a repetition of the large relief appropriations which congress has made every year since the New Deal began.

Falkran cleared his throat. "Well," he said, "Mr. Sentry stood the cross-examination surprisingly well. And as Dan Fisher moved, the lawyer insisted, smiling: 'Of course, for our friends the reporters this was the high spot of the trial, and they made the most of it. But as Mr. Sentry's counsel, I was proud of him.'"

Mrs. Sentry nodded without speaking. Falkran challenged Dan. "Wasn't that your impression—as a friend of the family?" Dan started to answer honestly, but he caught Phil's eye with entreaty in it, and said only: "I was too busy taking notes to think of that side of it. Our job is to report the case, not to decide it." He added guardedly, "But I thought Mr. Weldon shook him once or twice."

Falkran said: "I'm glad to have your opinion, Weldon is of course a skillful cross-examiner, makes every possible effect. It is conceivable that some of the jurors may still be undecided; but Mrs. Sentry's testimony tomorrow will turn the scales our way."

Dan protested, "I don't think you should call her."

"I know," Falkran agreed. "You and all her friends have a natural desire to spare her. That is to be expected. And believe me, Dan, I do not insist. But Mrs. Sentry understands that an acquittal may depend upon her testimony; and of course she wishes to do whatever she can for her husband, no matter what the cost to herself."

Mrs. Sentry watched them both, her face expressionless, saying nothing. Phil came to sit on the arm of her chair, his eyes holding Dan's, dreading what Dan might say.

Dan said, "You claim her testimony may acquit him?"

"I have promised her it will."

"What can she say that will help?"

Falkran hesitated. "Well, Dan," he answered at last, "you heard Mr. Sentry's testimony this afternoon. You understand that the only motive the State can suggest was Mr. Sentry's fear of his wife's attitude. But if Mrs. Sentry testifies that he had no cause to be afraid of her, and that he knew it, then that motive disappears."

There was a silence that extended for long minutes. Dan watched Mrs. Sentry. She sat with her head a little bent.

And she looked at them, at Dan and then at Falkran. Dan stared in quick surprise. There was something in her eyes he could not read; something like serenity. "So I must decide," she said quietly. Then to Falkran: "You wish me to testify?"

"Yes." Her eyes held his for a moment. Then she said, half smiling, looking up at Phil, "Son, a curious thing has happened to me." The room was very still. "Phil, I have suddenly fallen in love with your father. He's so alone, so helpless. I must help him." She met Falkran's eyes; she said: "I want to do everything I can. Ask me whatever you wish!"

He came leaping to his feet, smiled that great blustering smile of his, "Splendid!" he exclaimed. "I counted on you, counted on your strength and courage. Be easy, Mrs. Sentry. Your testimony will set your husband free."

She rose to face him; but, on her feet, weakness swept her. She leaned on Phil, said to them all: "Forgive me. I am tired, Phil, will you take me upstairs?"

In the morning Falkran did call Mrs. Sentry to the stand. At her name, she rose and walked steadily to the witness box. She was sworn, and Falkran approached her.

He asked simply, "You are Mrs. Arthur Sentry?"

"I am."

"The wife of the defendant?"

"I am."

Falkran turned, he bowed to the District Attorney; he said, "You may inquire."

And the District Attorney said instantly, "No questions."

Falkran smiled triumphantly; but Mrs. Sentry stood dazed and incredulous. Strong for the ordeal she had expected, this deliverance drained all her strength away. Falkran came to lead her to her seat again.

Through the remaining days of the trial, she listened inattentively, even when Mr. Loran, during the State's rebuttal, took the stand. His testimony was brief. He denied any personal relations with Miss Wines; said he never saw her after her work in the office was ended. He testified that on those days in August when she was out of town, he was fishing in the Maine woods; and he testified that on the night she was killed he went to New York on the 12:30 a. m. train, boarding it at about eleven, and going to bed at once in his compartment. His guide, in Maine, and the Pullman porter, corroborated his testimony.

The trial sped; the arguments began. At half-past three on Thursday afternoon, the jury retired. To wait for the verdict, Mrs. Sentry and Phil went to a hotel, took a room: At five, and at seven, Falkran telephoned; and at a quarter of ten, he phoned again to assert that the jury stood ten to two for acquittal.

At eleven, he came himself to say that the jury, still unable to agree, had been locked up for the night.

"So there will be no verdict till morning," he said. "A verdict in less than first degree, or a disagreement, is possible; but I expect acquittal. I will give odds that tomorrow night Mr. Sentry will sleep in his own bed! You can go home and rest easy."

Mrs. Sentry and Dan went down in the elevator, out to where old Eli waited with the limousine, and so came home.

CHAPTER X

Mrs. Sentry woke next morning wearily, from sleep that had brought no repose. While she dressed, she thought: I must hurry, hurry. Perhaps already the jury has decided. I must hurry, hurry to be there. Her breath was short; it was a conscious effort to fill her lungs; and within her body there seemed to be a crawling, writhing knot, as though her nerves were in actual physical motion like the tentacles of an octopus.

She came downstairs bravely; but while they were at breakfast Dan telephoned to urge them not to come to court. "It can't possibly do any good now, you know," he reminded Phil. "The thing is settled, one way or the other."

Phil, returning to the table, repeated this advice. Mrs. Sentry cried instantly: "No, Phil! No. I must be there, must do everything I can."

"Being there can't do any good, mother," he reminded her. "When the jury does come into court again, they will have decided. The sight of you can't change them."

She looked at Phil acutely. "That means you think they will convict him? Find him guilty?"

"Gosh, no!"

"But Phil, if there's any least chance of his acquittal, I must be there. There to take him in my arms." She colored like a girl.

He put his arm around her. "I'll be there," he promised. "To bring him home. If he can come. If he cannot—then for you to be there would just break you down. And he, miserly with your strength; mother. Keep it to spend when it will do real good."

It may have been two hours before he came home. Mrs. Sentry had waited in a surface calm, consulting with cook about meals before she went upstairs to sit with Barbara. When she heard the car, she descended, slowly, holding to the stair-rail, walking carefully. Each step was a voluntary action that required to be carried with the utmost caution and care.

She met Phil in the front hall, so that his back was to the light and she could not see his face clearly. Nevertheless she saw that he was alone. So no word from him was necessary.

She swayed toward him, and he held her close.

He said in a low tone, evading the direct statement: "Mr. Falkran wants to see you, to discuss the appeal. I told him to wait to come in a day or two."

So she knew; and after a moment she shivered suddenly, as a sleeping dog shivers to keep warm, and she felt him stiffen into a frozen rigidity and knew he was afraid for her; so she freed herself, and smiled to reassure him.

"I'm all right, son," she said.

"But I shall lie down for a little while. I'd rather be alone just now. You might go sit with Barbara."

"He nodded, assenting; and they parted in the upper hall. When he came into Barbara's room, she turned her head on the pillow to look at him, and he thought how thin she was, her eyes lustrous, her lips pale; and he thought, almost grateful for this task to do: Barbara needs me. We've left her too much alone. I must be with her now."

And he sat down on her bedside and held her thin fingers tight in his, and felt them cling and tug. She croaked something, some question; and he said:

"Yes, Barb, old girl. And now we've got to help mother, take care of her. That's our job, yours and mine."

She muttered: "Yes; mother." This was one of those days when she could manage half-formed syllables, could make herself intelligible in brief phrases. Then after a moment she said, in a sudden passion, her voice a husky croak:

"But he didn't do it, Phil!"

Phil nodded automatically, more to content and quiet her than in assent.

He stayed a long time with Barbara; and she lay watching him, and one of you stay with her. If she tries to talk, answer her; get her to confide in you. I could come myself; but she's been afraid of me, afraid of being cured. It had better be one of you, whom she trusts."

"You think she'll be all right?"

"Try," the doctor repeated, and drove away.

Phil did not at once return to doors. He stood under the porte cochere for a moment, thinking of Barbara; and then he realized that even without an overcoat, he was comfortably warm. The sun shone, there was no wind, and the air had promise in it. He walked at random down the drive to the street, noticing without emotion how the shrubbery was broken where curious children or adults like ghouls had broken off souvenirs; and old Eli had neatly clipped the ragged ends and touched them with paint to protect them against decay. Here and there he saw buds swelling; and returning by the other side of the drive he noticed in a sunny corner crocuses just bursting through the sod. March was well begun. Four months till July. In less than four months, the week of July 1 would have come—and gone.

The week of July 1! The Judge's phrase slid like a snake through the dulled channels of his mind. He walked out toward the garage, of which the doors stood open, and saw the cars there. The old limousine which was Eli's pet and pride. The depot wagon which he and Barbara were apt to use. The roadster which his father had driven that night. The limousine and the roadster had low number plates, three digits in the one, four in the other; one of the mild forms of ostentation in which he knew his mother took a secret pride.

He went in to look at the roadster; and he stared at it with a rooted physical distaste. He made a sudden decision to be rid of it. Eli came in from the garden, and Phil started to speak to him and then remembered that he would have to shout, because Eli was deaf; and if he shouted, his mother, even in the house, might hear. Instead, he took an envelope from his pocket and wrote on it orders for the old man to drive the roadster into the country; find a dealer somewhere who would buy it at any price, then surrender the number plates, give them up for good and all. He realized as he wrote that the plates had been renewed since his father last drove the car; but the number was the same, had been the same each year since before he himself was born. Get rid of them!

Eli read the instructions, and he nodded his assent, silent as always. Phil took the registration, endorsed the report of transfer of ownership in blank, scribbled a note giving Eli authority to sell the car. He brushed his hands together in a deep relief and turned away, and it did not occur to him till years afterward, looking backward on these months, that the moment was a milestone. It was the first time in his life that he had ever made a concrete decision involving definite action on an adult plane and carried the action through. He thought in later years that his own maturity dated from that moment when, almost without consideration, he assumed the headship of the family.

He left Eli and went out past the tennis court, littered with last year's dead leaves, the remains of a drift of snow still persisting in one corner; and he stood in the little summerhouse above the muddy stream on which stained and rotten ice still persisted, and looked down where his father that night had thrown the gun.

"You've had a long siege, Barbara," he said. "But now you've turned the corner. You're going to be better right along. Be yourself again soon, won't you?"

Phil went downstairs with the older man, and he asked, "Is she as sick as she looks, Doctor?"

The other said gently, "She was worse yesterday morning than she had been at any time; but she's better today." And he asked simply, "Did you tell her your father was convicted?"

Phil said, "Yes." And he said: "A strange thing—it seemed to make her feel better, to reassure her. But she believes he is innocent, of course."

"Fine!" Doctor Maitland agreed. "You stay with her, Phil; and if she shows any inclination to talk, encourage her. Miss Dane has been much with her, hasn't she? And you and your sister are pretty close to one another?"

"Yes, sir."

"Try the clock, this afternoon;

High School Drivers Take Toll; Traffic Deaths Up 130 Per Cent in Eleven Years

Motor car drivers of high school age are involved in ten times as many fatal accidents, per miles driven, as the driver of forty-five to fifty years, according to an analysis of road accidents published by the American Magazine.

"Furthermore, the high school record has been getting worse," the magazine states. "In the last 11 years there has been a 25 per cent decrease in traffic deaths of children five to nine years old, and only a slight increase in those ten to fourteen. That is, the safety campaigns to teach children to watch out for themselves in the streets are having their effect. But in the ages of fifteen to nineteen, the high school age, there has been in this same period an increase of 130 per cent in traffic deaths. The reason is obvious. Fifteen is about the age when children begin to drive."

Pointing out that this age of greatest danger is also the best age for teaching motor car operation, the article urges wide extension of such work as that now being done by Amos Neyhart, former professor of Industrial management at Pennsylvania State college, who is heading up a national program for training high school students to drive. Nearly 200 high schools are now using this plan of instruction, and this summer between 60 and 70 colleges will have courses for high school teachers in the technique of teaching automobile operation.

"Ultimately," the article predicts, "a motor car for teaching driving, or a fleet of such cars, will be as much a recognized part of the equipment of any progressive high school as is today the kitchen equipment in the domestic science course or the tools in the manual training shop, and a driving course will be required before graduation from a high school."

Early Study of Sunspots

The ancient Chinese saw sunspots and speculated about their significance. Fritz figured sunspot spots back to 300 A. D. But it was not until invention of the telescope in the early Seventeenth century that study of spots was possible in a scientific manner.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

THINGS that will have a ready sale at a fair or church bazaar; things that may be made quickly from odds and ends of material on hand; colorful, useful things for gifts—these are the requests that come in the mail.

Here is another suggestion that has stood the test of practical use—a flat case that holds six pairs of stockings. What a relief not to have them all mixed up with underwear and other things in dresser drawers.

This case may be made quickly on the sewing machine. A piece of cretonne or bright ticking or other cotton material of the dimensions given here, and about two yards of contrasting bias binding are the materials needed. The diagrams given here in the sketch, explain each step in cutting and making the case.

If a more elaborate case is desired, silk may be used with ribbon for the bindings. A quilted silk case of this type would make an exquisite gift. Machine quilting may be used for this purpose.

Be sure to clip and save these locations as they are not in either Book 1 or 2. These books are full of still other useful ideas, with complete cutting and sewing directions for each item clearly illustrated. They save the price of many patterns and you will use them constantly for references and inspiration.

NOTE: Mrs. Spears' Book 2—Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery, has helped thousands of women to use odds and ends of material; and their spare time to make things to sell and to use. Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, is full of inspiration for every homemaker. These books make delightful gifts. Mrs. Spears will autograph them on request. Books are 25 cents each. Crazy-patch quilt leaflet is included free with every order for both books. Address Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Wore Prince Alberts
In the "nifty nineties," most United States senators wore Prince Alberts. The frock coat was a symbol of statesmanship and a beard was the mark of a man of maturity and substance.

The Livestock Situation

By J. A. McNaughton

Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, Jan. 5.—Hog prices have held up remarkably well in the face of increased slaughter in all sections of the country. Here at Los Angeles, the market Christmas week, contrary to trade expectations, advanced after prices earlier in the month had touched the lowest levels in about four years. Prices at this time are about half a cent a pound lower than at the opening of the year. However, feed prices are considerably lower, barley being about 50 cents per cwt under a year ago. Thus, figuring about 500 pounds of barley to produce 100 pounds of pork, hog feeders are computing their gains at a cost of about 2.5 cents a pound less than a year ago. After all, it is the cost of production that counts rather than the selling price alone.

Government reports indicate 1938 pig farrowings at 15 per cent above the 1937 level. The 1938 fall pig crop was much larger than had been estimated, the gain being around 4,220,000 head, the total fall crop being the largest since 1933 and only 3 per cent smaller than the average fall crop from 1929 to 1933. Thus we are getting back to "normal" hog production in the United States, following the years of scant production during the period of drouth, short crops and government crop reduction programs. The entire production for 1938 is estimated at 71,088,000 head, about 12 per cent below the 1929-33 average.

Further increased hog production is forecast for the spring of 1939, crop reports indicating a gain of 31 per cent over the spring of 1938. While this is one of the largest increases on record, the total farrowings would still be 6 per cent below the 1929-33 average. Thus the marketable supply should not prove a serious burden, providing that business and industrial conditions continue to improve, for that should assure sufficient buying power to absorb larger tonnages of pork. A further strengthening prop under the market is the increasing export demand, coupled with an expected reduction in the beef supply. The manner in which pork is now going into retail meat channels is encouraging, for it increases a broad consumer demand for the product at prevailing prices.

In the western country, there are indications of increased production, and even the estimated increase in spring farrowing would still leave far western pork production well below averages in the twenties; and we are still producing only a fraction of the pork actually consumed in California.

HISTORIC MANSIONS FAST DISAPPEARING

Soon Photographs Will Be Only Record of Them.

New Orleans, La.—Richard Koch can't save his chargos so he is taking pictures of them instead.

Koch, head of Louisiana's division of the WPA historic American building survey, is making records and drawings of the state's old plantation homes and historic buildings before they fall to pieces from age and neglect. He has photographed 150 of them.

The days of Louisiana's great plantation mansions are a thing of the past. The old homes, some of them built of marble and having 75 rooms, are crumbling. Their window panes are smashed and their roofs caved in. Their beauty, however, still is apparent. It is Koch's job to record it for the congressional library in Washington.

The popular conception of the Louisiana cane country is one of great manor homes with fields of cane stretching out from all sides, the planter established on his front porch sipping a mint julep. All that has gone. Today, most of the cane is raised on huge, highly commercialized and mechanized plantations greatly exceeding the production of the state's 9,540 small farms averaging 100 acres each.

There are a few scattered plantations on the Mississippi river in Louisiana which are kept up in their antebellum style, Koch points out, but for the most part they have been divided into small farms. Usually amid these farms, with their humble dwellings, stands an old plantation home—magnificent in its decay, but useless to the small farmer.

Just as the ruins of the Forum at Rome and the Acropolis at Athens were caused by poorer people who "borrowed" their stones and wood to build smaller residences, so are the old Louisiana mansions being stripped of their woodwork and masonry.

There is snow on the Rocky mountains all the year around. Sometimes, if the summer has been exceptionally hot, it will only be found in crevices and shadowed places which the sun seldom reaches.

Ancient Theory True

A theory advanced by a Roman writer in the first century, that cows fed legume hay also more and richer milk, has been proved true by United States Department of Agriculture experiments.

Colonial Furniture

Colonial refers merely to the time before the Union was formed. Now England and Virginia were settled by the English, New York by the Dutch and Louisiana by the French. The Colonial furniture of each section resembled the furniture which had been brought to that part of the country. Almost all Colonial furniture was a simplified reproduction of the more elaborate furniture made abroad. A few designs originated in this country.
