CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, MARCH 31, 1939

NUMBER 40

Steelman-Sanders

Dr. R. E. Blaney returned from Santa Fe last Wednesday where he had been to attend a meeting of delegates with the Highway Commission, and the State Engineer.

Representatives were in attendance from Alamogordo, Carrizozo, Vaughn, Corona and several other towns in the interest of Highway 54. Dr. Blaney states that much enthusiasm was shown by the entire delegation and all were unanimous in believing it would eventually become an outstanding highway of the state when made more passable and safe. A number of delegates asked that at least two projects between Tularosa and Santa Rosa be promised for this year. No definite promises were made, but, Dr. Blaney and others were assured that a start would be made before long.

The Highway will eventually become a section of a transcontinental highway from the northern border of the U. S. to Mexico City.

Mrs. Blaney accompanied Dr. Blaney and then they went to El Rito to visit Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burleson.

Wednesday of this week the ladies of the Missionary Union held an all day quilting party and covered a lunch on at the Baptist pastor's home.

Colonial Furniture Colonial refers merely to the time before the Union was formed. New England and Virginia were settled by the English; New York by the Dutch and Louisiana by the French. The Colonial furniture of each section resembled the furniture which had been brought to that part of the country. Almost all Colonial furniture was a simplified reproduction of the more elaborate furniture made abroad. A few designs originated in this country.

Meetings on 1939 Range Program

Educational meetings on the 1939 Range Program will be held at Carrizozo and Corona next week. The meeting in Carrizozo will be held at the court house, Tuesday, April 4, at 2:00 p. m., and the meeting in Corona will be held in the High School building, Friday, April 7, at 2:00 p. m.

These meetings will be conducted by the County and Community Committee, the County Extension Agent, and the A.C.A. Secretary.

An example of establishing a range allowance will be worked out, and individual practices that may be used to earn the allowance will be discussed in detail. The deferred grazing practice, as well as other changes in the 1939 program, will be discussed, and the ranchmen given an opportunity to clarify questions pertaining to the program.

It is hoped that these meetings will bring about a better understanding and will speed up the 1939 Range program in the county. Since these are the last of a series of educational meetings on the 1939 Range Program, ranchmen are urged to attend.

Their Battle Smashed Czech Democracy

Dr. Joseph Tiso, left, premier of the new "independent" nation of Slovakia, whose demand for Slovakian autonomy in defiance of Dr. Emil Hacha, right, president of the Czechoslovakian republic, precipitated the 20-year-old democracy's destruction. Supported by Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler of Germany, Dr. Tiso established an independent Slovakia. Meanwhile the easternmost Czech province, Ruthenia (Carpatho-Ukraine) was overrun by Hungarian, Rumanian and Polish soldiers, each seeking their share of spoils. The central Prague government, left with only Bohemia and Moravia, was subdued under Hitler's thumb.

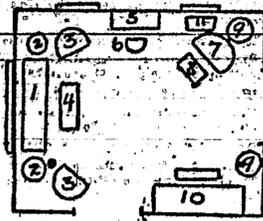

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

"WE'VE just moved into a big, rambling farm house," writes Mrs. Floyd J., "and it has me down. I would appreciate your help in furnishing it. The living room, dining room and hall all open together through wide arches. They all need to be papered and I want new curtains and draperies for all the windows. Woodwork in hall and living room is varnished—in the dining room, it's painted white.

"For the living room, I have a piano, a rust sofa and club chair, a blue mohair wing chair, two floor lamps with beige shades, a gray and blue rug. What other furniture would you suggest? What slip cover? The room is 14 by 17 feet. It is rather gloomy. I enclose a diagram. How would you arrange it?"

"The dining room is bright and sunny. It has walnut furniture with chairs upholstered in blue. What do you think of linoleum-rugs for dining rooms? They are so practical and yet don't seem quite nice enough for my furniture. What would you advise?"

I rather think I'd have all these three rooms papered in a light creamy yellow, with all white woodwork. And then gray rugs for hall and dining room. A good marbled or jasper linoleum would be all right in the dining room if it is laid formally with an inlaid border, but I wouldn't use the oil cloth type of rug. I believe a two-tone all over wool rug would be better.

For the curtains, I'd have white ruffled backs for both rooms with draperies in a floral chintz on a yellow ground. You could use this same chintz for the sofa slip-cover. Two easy chairs I'd have in plain blue. In the living room I'm suggesting that the sofa (1) go in front of the double windows with end tables (2) for lamps beside it, and a coffee table (4) in front. The two easy chairs (3) I'd draw up to this end of the room. Then add a secretary desk (5) with chair (6). Another easy chair (7) with hassock (8) I'd add for the radio (11) with floor lamp (9) for reading. The piano (10) I'd place on the other side of the room with another floor lamp (9), preferably an indirect three-way light to illuminate the room.

A French provincial buffet.

French Provincial Furniture The gentle charm of French provincial furniture dawned on us some years ago after we had learned to appreciate the simple sincere beauty of early American maple and pine. There is about both a friendly livable quality, a dignified informality.

But French provincial furniture bears a much nearer kinship to the court furniture of Seventeenth and Eighteenth century Paris than early American bears to its English ancestors. For in America, the colonists were concerned with stern utility and had to use tools and materials at hand. While in France at this time, the provinces had reached a more leisurely prosperous standard of living. And so they copied court furniture in simplified versions, retaining a certain grace and adding an honest directness to the designs.

French provincial furniture, therefore, has a good deal of refinement for all its pleasant domesticity, its respect for its homely role. Its curves and flow of line has none of the elegant pretense of French court furniture, though its family resemblance is obvious. The panels and grooves, the turns and pulls have an asymmetric rhythm of curves. The hardware is detailed, hearty, but always utilitarian. The provincial cabinet makers borrowed freely from Louis XV designs but never look much to the straighter subtler lines of Louis XVI styles.

The repertoire of furniture in this style seldom ventured far from the necessities.

Walnut, fruitwoods and oak were the most familiar woods used for French provincial furniture. And usually in natural waxed finishes without elaborate dressing of the wood. Accessories that traditionally go with this type of furniture are equally as pleasing as it is. The popular table de Jolly printed fabric and wall papers belong to the same home and place.

Vegetables Vital To Perfect Health

Formerly an Accessory Now a Necessity for Diet

By EDITH M. BARBER

NEWS headlines informed us recently that life could be prolonged through diet. Of course, the experiments which brought forth this statement were made upon some of the smallest members of the animal kingdom—flies. While there can scarcely be anybody who is interested, except from a scientific standpoint in prolonging the life of this annoying insect, we are more than interested in the application of the research work.

The attention which nutrition research has called to the relation between diet and health has caused noteworthy changes in the food habits of this country. No change has been more marked than that which demands the inclusion of vegetables in variety and liberal quantities in our everyday meals. Once looked upon as merely a pleasant accessory to meals, we now realize that the mineral and vitamin content, as well as the bulk, which they provide make them an important component to a meal. Some raw vegetables, such as lettuce, carrots, celery and cabbage should be used each day. Other vegetables should be cooked in such a way that the natural food value will be preserved. It should be noted that potatoes, which we have always used in this country as accompaniments to meat, are well endowed with minerals and vitamins.

Casserole of Vegetables.

- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 tablespoon chopped onion
- 1 tablespoon chopped pimiento
- 2 tablespoons flour
- 2 cups canned tomatoes
- 1 cup canned peas
- 1 1/2 cups boiled rice
- 1 tablespoon chopped parsley
- 2 teaspoons salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper.
- 1/2 cup grated cheese

Melt butter, add onion and pimiento. Cook slowly for five minutes. Add flour and mix well. Add tomatoes and cook until mixture thickens slightly, then add the other ingredients. Put in greased baking dish and sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) 20 minutes.

Scalloped Potatoes.

- 1 quart sliced raw potatoes
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 1 teaspoon or more of salt
- Pepper
- 1 tablespoon butter or other fat
- 2 cups milk

Slice the potatoes one-quarter inch thick. Arrange them in a buttered baking dish in layers, sprinkling each layer with flour, salt, pepper and butter. Add the milk and bake in a moderate oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) until the potatoes are soft.

O'Brien Potatoes.

- 4 cups potato cubes
- Deep fat
- 1 small onion
- 2 pimientos
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 2 teaspoons minced parsley

Fry potato cubes in deep fat (300 degrees Fahrenheit), drain on soft paper and sprinkle with salt. Mince the onion and cook in the butter one minute. Add the pimiento, cook one minute more, add parsley and pour over potato cubes in a hot dish.

Split Pea Soup.

- 1/2 pound split peas
- 3 cups beef stock
- Salt, pepper
- 1 sprig parsley
- 1 bay leaf
- 1 tablespoon flour
- 1 tablespoon butter
- 1 large onion, grated

Minced parsley. Soak the peas overnight, drain, add stock and seasonings, and simmer about two hours. Press through a sieve, return to saucepan. Rub flour and butter together and stir into the soup, stirring constantly. Cook for five minutes and serve with a sprinkling of grated onion and minced parsley on top.

Tomato and Pea Soup.

- 1 can tomato soup
- 1 can pea soup
- Dash of nutmeg

Tomato Rabbit.

- 1/2 pound American cheese
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Paprika
- 1/2 teaspoon mustard
- Pepper

1 can tomato soup. Shred the cheese with a fork, add the mixed seasoning and stir over a low fire until melted. Add the tomato soup and stir until smooth.

French Fried Onions. Select large, sweet onions, peel and cut in one-quarter inch slices and separate into rings. Dip in milk, drain and dip in flour. Fry in deep fat (375 degrees Fahrenheit) until golden brown; drain on soft paper and sprinkle with salt.

String Beans With Corn.

Cook frozen string beans in a covered vessel with a little water and a dash of salt and sugar. When tender add one small can of whole kernel corn, or one-half pound of frozen corn. Add one-fourth cup of cream, or three tablespoons of butter, heat and add pepper and more salt if necessary.

SAFETY TALKS

'Pedestrian Faults'

THE National Safety Council has charged 'pedestrians' with a large share of the responsibility for traffic accidents that killed 39,600 persons in 1937. Of this total 15,400 were pedestrians.

In "Accident Facts," a statistical review of 1937, the council said: "Many pedestrians show utter lack of caution in their use of streets and highways. Combined state reports for 1937 show that in 67 per cent of all fatal pedestrian accidents the pedestrian either was violating a traffic law or was acting in an obviously unsafe manner. In non-fatal accidents pedestrian faults appeared in 69 per cent of the cases."

The council described such things as jay-walking, failure to observe traffic lights, drunken walking, walking with instead of against traffic on rural highways, crossing streets in the middle of a block as "pedestrian faults."

Oldest Vessel

The Gufa, still in use for the conveyance of passengers and goods on the River Tigris, is the oldest type of vessel in the world. It is a circular basket of reeds coated inside and out with pitch from the bitumen wells of Hill, and thus rendered waterproof. Herodotus, in the history of his travels (over 400 B. C.), speaks of these river-craft, and describes them exactly as they appear today.

Real Propaganda

Twice recently, ships loaded with refugees from Germany have touched at Baltimore on their way to other ports. On both occasions the same thing has happened. The passengers, given shore leave, have made a rush to the Baltimore restaurants to eat butter. The reason is that at home most of them had not seen butter for months, or years, so when they found that any amount was available here they went wild.

The speeches of the statesmen, the charts and graphs of the economists, and the statistics of the military experts are sometimes hard for the ordinary man to understand, so frequently he disregards them and misses their implications altogether. But tell him that under Nazi rule ordinary folk are not allowed to have butter, and you have told him something significant, something that he understands, something that gives him a solid, tangible reason for opposing Nazi rule. Absence of butter in propaganda that works—Baltimore Sun.

IT'S HAPPENED AGAIN: The Secretary of a not-so-important government executive looked up from her desk a few days ago to see a gentleman walking toward the office door of the executive. She called the gentleman to task. When he said he wanted to see the said executive, the secretary chirped efficiently:

"Well, you'll just have to wait. He's busy now."

After several minutes of heel-cooling the gentleman informed the young lady secretary that he was in a hurry; that his mission was important. But this failed to influence her. After more minutes of waiting, the gentleman departed, but with this reminder to the secretary:

"Just tell your boss that the Attorney General of the United States was in to see him!"

Are you a safe driver? That is the real test of good driving.

The chancetaker is on his way to the undertaker.

Apply brakes carefully and not suddenly. Don't take chances.

The front end of the car may go through--will the rear end make it?

Immigrants Agitate In U.S., Says Farley

Providence, R. I., March 30. --Agitators seeking to overturn American democracy should "pay the small price of a trip across the water" to live under their preferred form of government. That is the advice of Postmaster General Farley.

Farley accused agitators of abusing the liberties they found here when they sought refuge from foreign tyrannies.

He accused immigrants, "who could no longer tolerate the tyranny of their mother country," of "using their liberty to create distrust for American institutions, to arouse religious intolerance, race hatred, class conflict and even a denial of the God who created them."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—When James D. Ross was appointed by the President as chief of Bonneville, the biggest dam in the world, in October, 1937, it was believed in some quarters that his selection would sharpen the disagreement between the administration and the power companies.

Mr. Ross, for 20 years head of the municipal power development of Seattle, has human traits which perhaps account for his expedient rather than doctrinal trend.

He was a consulting engineer for the New York power authority and the St. Lawrence seaway, a consultant for PWA power development and later a member of the SEC before the President made him the Bonneville boss.

YOUNG America is naturally envious of Capt. Harold E. Gray, who will be at the controls when the Yankee Clipper, huge Pan-American Airways flying boat, takes off for its flight across the Atlantic.

WARREN LEE PIERSON, head of the Export-Import bank, appears to rate an assist in the Nazi put-out in Brazil.

That seems to be about par for the lad who would be a skipper on one of these new leviathans of the air.

WARREN LEE PIERSON, head of the Export-Import bank, appears to rate an assist in the Nazi put-out in Brazil.

The young and energetic Mr. Pierson, who became head of the bank in 1935, toured the Latin-American countries last summer and fall and returned with a lot of sizzling new ideas about hopping up South American trade, and resisting the totalitarian drive, by employing credit judiciously where it is needed most to grease the trade run-around.

When it came to Brazil, he got eager attention from both the state department and the administration, as Brazil is an important consideration of naval geography as well as trade.

In Harvard law school Mr. Pierson was obsessed with foreign trade and directed his studies to practice in this field.

Electricity Reaches the Homestead; Farming Regains Favor With Youth

Rural Depopulation Trend Reversed as Agricultural Industries Begin Developing New Cultural and Mechanical Opportunities

By JOSEPH W. LABINE

"How ya gonna keep 'em down on the farm?" We used to have a lot of fun singing that good-humored old ballad in the War days.

Everybody sang it, nobody believed it and it was well propagated for raising an expeditionary army.

Today it's not so funny. Keeping 'em down on the farm is a serious problem. Better educational opportunities, lean times and the broader sophistication for which that same war was largely responsible have lured to the city many a young man who would otherwise have proudly aspired to the farming tradition.

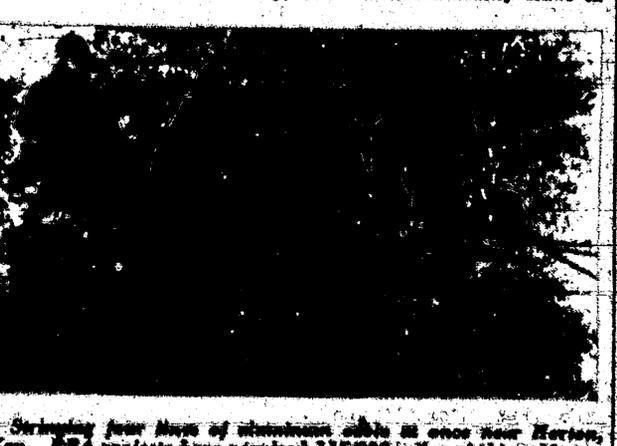

Land Up, Population Down. In 1925, some 48.6 per cent of the land area of the United States was in farms.

But in a real democracy the social and economic pendulums do not swing too far out of line before a way is found to bring them back.

The Rural Electrification administration, organized in 1935, and "feeling its way" for the last two or three years, is getting into full stride with plans to electrify 500,000 American farms between now and June 30.

During the first six months of this year it will have lent or allocated funds to bring the benefits of electricity to a number of farms equal to more than one-third of all the electrified farms there were in this country at the end of 1934.

Cloaked in these statistics are implications certainly far vaster than the figures themselves, portents far beyond the power of any allegorical string of electric light bulbs seven times the girth of the globe to illuminate.

Stripping four tons of aluminum wire at once near Horton, Kan. REA projects have required 115,000 miles of this cable.

Above: REA and Co-op officials rode beside modern power lines in an ox cart symbolizing the inconveniences of rural life in a bygone day, as Center, Ala., paraded to celebrate its new electric service.

tensive benefits. Twenty-nine million dollars will have gone into poles; $6,500,000 into line hardware and cross-arms; $1,500,000 into insulators; $27,000,000 into transformers; $18,000,000 into cut-outs and brackets; $1,500,000 into grounding equipment; $49,000,000 into conductors and $8,000,000 into guy wires, clamps, rods and anchors.

Aluminum: A Sample.

The effect upon industry is easily seen by making a brief analysis of any one of these items. Take the largest—conductors—for instance: The United States has consumed some 600,000 tons of aluminum cable, steel reinforced—and 115,000 miles of this have been required by REA in four years!

Still further good news for industry, as well as an indication of the fuller life in store for the half million farms to be added to REA lines in the remainder of the fiscal year, is an immediate demand for $30,000,000 worth of appliances which the program is expected to create.

On the face of past records it may be prophesied that 130,000 families will buy refrigerators; 230,000 will buy washing machines; 85,000 water pumps; 30,000 vacuum cleaners—and 425,000 will buy radios, which is just one more indication, perhaps, that it is the cultural benefits of electricity that appeal to the farmer, for only 400,000 will buy electric irons.

Small Towns Profit.

Profit has come, also, to the small urban communities which exist as marketing and recreational centers for surrounding farm areas.

Even with the vast nature of this year's program there will be much left to be done. When REA first began to function, only one farm in nine had electricity; when this year's program is carried out to its fullest extent three farms in five will still be without it.

It must not be imagined, either, that REA's path has been entirely easy. REA makes no grants; it lends money only, and theoretically cannot be counted as one of the "Santa Claus" agencies.

But of all the millions loaned up to March 1, 1939, less than $100,000 in principal and interest had been repaid.

Now John M. Carmody, REA administrator, hopes a remedy will be found in legislation by the states which will be favorable to REA co-operatives experiencing financial difficulties.

How successful Carmody will be remains to be seen. It seems plausible to expect remonstrances from utility companies whose rural lines are beneficiaries from the such leniency.

ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

Unlucky North Pole Seeker

ON OCTOBER 25, 1933, an automobile in Washington, D. C., struck down and killed a 71-year-old man who, for 20 years, had defied the numerous pitfalls of death in the frozen North and who once just missed sharing in the honors of discovering the North pole.

Baldwin first went beyond the Arctic circle in 1893 as meteorologist with Capt. Robert Peary's second expedition to Greenland. On a previous expedition, Peary found what he thought was a "royal road to the pole," via Independence Bay.

In 1897 Baldwin was en route to accompany the famous Andree halloon expedition to find the pole when Andree, suddenly favored by good weather, decided to start, without waiting the arrival of Baldwin's ship next day.

But this narrow escape from death did not daunt Baldwin. In 1898 he was second in command of the Wellman expedition which reached the then "farthest north" of 81 degrees and 30 seconds before turning back.

In 1901 he made his supreme attempt to reach the pole with the Baldwin-Ziegler expedition. It failed because his supply ship did not arrive in time and only good luck prevented the entire party from perishing.

Tenderfoot Triumph. If EVER Americans deserved the title "tenderfoot," it was the band of emigrants, led by John Bidwell, which left Missouri in May, 1841, for the West.

Guided by Thomas Fitzpatrick, the fur trader, and Father De Smedt, the missionary, they reached South pass to Wyoming safely.

Soon they were in a bewildering country of salt plains. Food and water supplies ran low. Cruef railroads lured them on.

Six weary months after leaving Missouri they reached the rich San Joaquin valley. Theirs had been an epic journey.

AMONG the Pilgrim Fathers who came over on the Mayflower was John Billington, accompanied by his wife and two sons, Francis and John Jr.

After the Pilgrims had settled Plymouth, young Johnny got into another scrape. He wandered off into the woods one day by himself.

His mother shed tears of gratitude when friendly Indians brought him back, but some of the Pilgrims were "sorely vexed" because he had put them to all this bother.

MOUNTAIN MAN

A Banner Fiction Serial
By HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

SYNOPSIS

Jim Cotter, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed in the pursuit of his duties. Gordon Breck, his best friend, takes over Cotter's job, hoping to avenge his murder. "Mad" Cook, forest superintendent, warns Breck that the Tillson brothers, mountain moonshiners, are apt to give him trouble. Before leaving for his mountain station, Breck buys a outfit and decides to attend the public dance run by the Tillsons in Lone Tree. At the dance Breck dances with Louise Temple, pretty "sawgirl" for whom he takes a liking.

Another man edged through the mob and glowered out of a flushed face. "Something wrong?" "Yes, you are!" Louise answered, giving him a little shove. "Get along. Why spoll a dance?" Behind them the group broke up as quickly as it had formed. Men returned to their partners and swung on with the music. But when the wait ended Breck felt a heavy grip on his shoulder. He whirled from it and confronted Art Tillson. It was a handsome, arrogant face that he stared into; not much more than a boy's. It had the sharp-featured-Tillson strength, save for dull, somber eyes. Even this moment's rage did not hide that deep brooding.

"Is this fellow botherin' you, Louie?" he asked. "If he is—" "Art!" she broke in. "You're a little bit drunk. Go outside for a while." It was a command, given as if she expected to be obeyed, and for a second the boy seemed on the verge of going. But then he looked at her sullenly. "Throwin' me down?" "No, of course not!" "You cut a dance," Tillson swayed unsteadily, clutched her wrist and started to draw her close. "Come on, Louie, this is mine." Breck saw her hold back. He stepped between them, forcing young Tillson away with his elbow. The boy whirled, his face livid and tightened into knots over his jaw. He stood with eyes narrowed in the way Breck had already seen Jud narrow his.

"Buttin' in, are you!" he snarled. "Want to fight about it?" The music had stopped. Everybody had turned, waiting. Breck's mind worked swiftly.

"Well, he heard Tillson sneer, "are you crawlin' off?" "Not a bit."

"Come outside then!" "Why outside?" Breck demanded. "What's the matter with here?"

Outside, in the dark with few to see, was not what he wanted. He glanced at the stage, then beckoned to a grinning cowboy in the crowd. "Get up there and clear a ring! You're going to have a show!"

The puncher yelled and others joined him. They leaped across the old footlight trench and booted the orchestra from their chairs. A squared circle was made in the wreckage of broken scenery. They tried to roll the curtain up but it stuck halfway.

"All right," Breck cried, springing ahead of young Tillson. "This act's ours!"

Half a dozen cowhands had appointed themselves seconds on each side; one stepped into the square to referee. None was too steady on his feet. Tillson's first plunge at Breck knocked the referee into the scenery and after that no other volunteered.

Breck had counted on his knowledge of boxing. He found instantly that this was a fight. Tillson came with head lowered, right arm driving with killing force, and followed up with a left equally powerful. When Breck struck, it was as if his fist had crashed into iron. He saw a brown, mallet-like thing rise, and partly turned that blow from his jaw, yet faces spun about him dizzily. A roar filled the room.

Stepping back, he gained his balance, judged his position better and closed in before Tillson had recovered for a fresh attack. He jabbed as their bodies locked, heard a grunted oath, took a terrific thrust against his own side. Two arms tightened about him, crushing his ribs. Tillson's head rose under his chin, snapped his head back, butted upward until breathing was stopped. He tried to struggle out, found himself powerless, and then the truth of this fight came in a mad surge of strength. Art would kill him if he could.

With that, all semblance of what the city was pleased to call civilization slipped from him. He had no sight, no feeling, no thought save one—tear off this thing.

Locked in Tillson's arms, he let himself drop backward, equipped from the embrace as Tillson relaxed in falling and was free as they struck the floor. Instantly then he sprang up, took the advantage and struck the other down the moment he rose.

The rear that had killed the room died suddenly. Silence made him conscious of things outside his belt. He heard a warning voice say, "Ted, Ted, stay out of it!" There was a rustle and an immediate shifting of men. They seemed to be taking sides, some back of Art Tillson, a good many others behind himself. What happened then passed actually over his head.

He had crouched to meet a blow. At once the space that had been a ring, was a crush of men, drunken curses, the spat of flats upon flesh. In a wave of bodies he was borne on, knocked down, cast over to the edge. Before he could move, the house was plunged into darkness. Someone had pulled the light switch.

A match flared at one end of the stage and in its short glow Breck saw a grinning face. The man's voice was lost in the tumult of belated shouts, but his mouth framed a word: "Fire!" Laughing crazily, he dropped the match into a pile of boards and scene canvas, and danced about as the flames shot up.

Breck lunged to his feet. On the floor below him the mob surged to the exit. One girl stood over at the side, alone, motionless against the wall. In springing toward her, he jerked the ropes that held the stage curtain. It crashed down and about them was piled with boxes of provisions, fire tools, telephone supplies and other equipment ready to be packed to the mountain station. A silver truck stood outside the door. And beyond that, past the first fifteen miles of sloping desert and red rock hills, rose the granite wall of the High Sierras.

"You'll ride the cushions today," Cook said, when the meal was finished, "but tomorrow you'll be forking hard leather." He crossed to a plank chest and unlocked it, asking over one shoulder, "Have you a gun?"

"No," Breck answered. "I intended to buy one in town this morning." "Don't do it," Cook stooped, dug in the chest, then came back with a German Luger.

Breck lifted with recognition. 1918! In a flash of memory he saw that same round, cold bore thrust between his own eyes; then a vision of Cotter, himself wounded, a struggle, the gun turned, its sharp spat muffled, and only Cotter rising where there had been two. He saw ly, "Howdy, Ranger." At which one of a pair who might be from the mountains, or the desert, or neither, offered a low grunt.

Breck climbed into the truck, asking as soon as Cook started on, "Who are those two at the end of the line?"

"In black ranch hats? They're nesters from the Pothole country. The Potholes are a bunch of small meadows along a mountain just south of the district you're going to take over. These people homesteaded before it was put in the forest reserve."

"Not very friendly to the service, are they?" "No, I guess not. The Tillsons use them one way and another. But we don't have much trouble except over a brush fire now and then if their grub runs low."

"How do you mean?" Cook's gray brows drew together in his quizzical smile. "Why, they get thirty-five cents an hour for firefighting. Easy money at that if they keep their fires out of big trees for a time the house was again black.

His hands found the girl as he stumbled along the wall. "Quick!" he ordered. "This way!"

When she did not move, he picked her up bodily, thrust her feet-foremost through an open window and let her down outside. He followed, saying again, "Quick!"

The high board fence was not far off; he struck against one plank, crashed through, managing somehow to drag the girl with him.

Suddenly the girl halted. "You might," she said, "tell me what it's all about. And please stop hugging me. You hurt."

Breck stared. Looking back, he saw there were no flames from the building. Someone must have thought to stamp out the fire. He could hear motor cars being started, and through the trees casual voices called: "So long. Adios. See you later." He felt stupid. Apparently most of the tumult was in his own head.

"I thought Jud Tillson—" he began.

She cut him off with a laugh. "So that was it! That's good enough for me, really. Louise Temple, rescued! Having to be rescued. And from the Tillsons!"

Breck met her laughter with a shrug. She leaned toward him, smiling. "Of course I'm grateful. Even if it wasn't necessary. It only seemed so funny for a minute. Good night."

He offered his arm formally. "I'll see you home, if you wish."

"No, thank you again, but I'm staying at the hotel, and so are the Tillson brothers. I think you have seen enough of them for one evening."

At this moment he could work up a good rage when he thought of Louise Temple. He could easily hate her. Yet he knew that after a while he would remember her eyes, with their half-amused, half-unhappy look, the tilt of her small dark head, and that in the dance she had been a wholly satisfying partner.

CHAPTER IV

"Say, Dad, who is Louise Temple?" Breck paused in his early morning meal and glanced across the table at the ranger.

"Old man Temple's kid," said Cook, continuing with flapjacks, ham and eggs.

Interesting, Breck thought, but not very complete. Yet he did not press the question, for there were more immediate things to occupy him. Both he and Cook had been up at daylight, and by this time the room the grin on his distorted face and heard him say, "I'll keep this. Might bring good luck sometime."

Cook placed the gun on the table without speaking. Breck picked it up, feeling the old familiar balance of the brown grip in his hand.

"I've seen this before," he said. Cook bent over the gun with fond eyes. "I suppose so. And I guess Cotter would want you to have it. So it's yours."

He straightened, turned and gazed toward the mountains before he spoke again. "I'm a peace-loving man, Breck, but I hope you get a fair chance to use that gun—and use it plenty!"

By midmorning they had the silver truck loaded to its top, had made last-minute purchases of more tobacco, and locking the Lone Tree house, left it to a summer of desolation.

At the postoffice where Breck stopped to give orders about forwarding his mail, he caught quick glances from a line of men who squatted along the board walk.

Most of the men were cowhands, though a few in mixed garb were not to be definitely placed. When he came out of the postoffice one of the cowboys looked up with a friend-

where it would make real work." "Am I hearing you right—they set them?"

"I reckon they do, son," Cook laughed. "They're twenty-five miles from your station. What's to keep 'em from sticking a match in the brush?" He shrugged and his smile faded into serious eyes. "In a way it's a good thing. If they burn off little patches of brush every year, we'll never have a big area go up all at once."

"Well I'll be darned!" Breck was beginning to sense that this ranger business was something more than riding a horse and carrying a gun. He shot a glance at the man beside him. Cook's seamed, angular face had the fighting set. He would not be one to cross. And yet he winked at these deliberate fires!

"You see, son," the ranger went on, as if answering Breck's mental question, "you don't want to have too many enemies on your trail at the same time. Right now the Tillsons are plenty. After awhile we'll get around to the nesters; though I think removing this other crowd will settle that too. The head gun in the Potholes is a man named Waller. You'll meet up with him soon enough."

Average Height of American Woman Is Set at 5 Feet, 4 1/4 Inches, With Shoes

According to the dictates of high fashion, we understand, the American woman is 5 feet or 7 inches tall. Now that the Gibson girl is back in fashion the fundamental rules (on high authority) are about the same—still the perfect 36, tall, slim waisted and long legged, comments the Kansas City Times.

This might seem to be a rather unhappy situation for the American women. According to a recent study by a life insurance company the average height of the American woman is 5 feet 4 1/4 inches (with shoes). It coincides admirably with the Venus de Milo; but the Venus has been deposed as a standard of fashion. She is too pleasantly plump, so nothing else need be said to explain the fall of her influence.

Many persons have rather counted on the idea that the height of the whole population is increasing. This hope is contradicted by the fact that a similar study 40 years earlier shows approximately the same height for women. In the height of college women Vassar reports an increase of 1 1/2 inches in 27 years. Maybe this means something. Or it may simply mean that more tall girls happen to be going to Vassar.

The women of average or less than average height can find comfort in the fact that they have lots of company. Incidentally, the men seem to be perverse about the whole business. They have a way of falling in love without consulting the fashion dictators or a yard-stick. We even know some men who admit that small women excite their protective instincts. They like to beam down from a masculine height of 5 feet 11 inches with a complacent sense of their own strength and stature. It is all a rather complicated business, once you venture past the safe pages of a fashion magazine.

Locating the Heart

The heart, a four-chambered conical flattened muscular bag about five inches long, is located in the cavity of the thorax between the lungs. It lies obliquely behind the lower two-thirds of the breastbone, with the base pointing upward, backward and toward the right and with the apex pointing downward, forward and toward the left.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Beverages of Various Kinds; Explains Their Role in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

FOOD and drink are inseparably linked in any consideration of the nutritional needs of man. It is, therefore, in response to a fundamental need that we include some kind of beverage in every meal, no matter how simple or how elaborate the food may be. For primarily, beverages contain water which is as necessary to the human body as air.

Approximately two-thirds of the body is composed of water. It is found in the muscles, in the brain tissue, in the various organs such as liver and kidneys, and even in the bones. Every cell in the body is dependent upon water for its proper functioning.

Body's Need for Liquids

This precious fluid acts as a solvent of food materials and makes possible their digestion and absorption. Since it is an essential constituent of the blood, it helps to transport nutrients to every cell—this function alone requiring about 10 pounds of water in constant circulation. Finally, it helps to eliminate waste products from the body through the lungs, skin and kidneys.

The daily losses of water from the body must be replaced regularly or the consequences may be extremely serious to health. It has been shown that headaches, nervousness and indigestion may result when the intake of fluids is diminished below normal requirements.

Beverages Classified

The quantity of water needed by each person varies with the dietary and with the season of the year, much larger amounts being required when the temperature is high. But it is generally agreed that everyone should consume several glasses of water daily, in addition to the water obtained from foods, chiefly fruits and vegetables. Part of the need is met by milk, and by coffee, tea, cocoa, fruit juices and various other fruit-flavored drinks which add pleasure to mealtime, serve as wholesome, between-meal pick-me-ups, and provide a gracious method of extending hospitality to guests.

Alkaline from milk, which belongs to a classification by itself, and fruit juices which are consumed chiefly for their minerals and vitamins, beverages fall into two groups which overlap somewhat: those that are refreshing and those that are stimulating.

Refreshing Beverages

The refreshing beverages include fruit juices, fruitades and carbonated drinks, such as ginger ale and sarsaparilla. They are effective in quenching thirst and their appetizing flavors encourage the drinking of generous amounts of water. They also contribute energy values to the diet in proportion to the amount of sweetening used in their preparation.

Fruit juices are most frequently served as an appetizer at breakfast, lunch or dinner. Fruitades are useful as between-meal drinks and when entertaining. Children like to display their hospitality to friends and this type of beverage, served with a few crackers or simple cookies, makes an attractive snack.

Mothers will find it convenient and economical to utilize for this purpose beverage crystals which come in a variety of fruit flavors. These make wholesome, refreshing beverages at a minimum cost; the amount of sweetening may be determined by individual preference; and they are so easily prepared that children may do the mixing themselves.

Stimulating Beverages

The stimulating beverages are coffee, tea, chocolate and cocoa. When made with milk, chocolate and cocoa are rich in nutritive values, though their fuel value varies with the product used. Chocolate is much richer in fat than cocoa, and products labeled "breakfast cocoa" usually contain a larger percentage of the natural cocoa fat than products simply labeled "cocoa."

The food value of coffee and tea depends entirely upon the cream or milk, and sugar with which they are served. However, they have an important place in the dietary because their flavor and aroma add greatly to the enjoyment of other foods and they give a comfortable feeling of well-being.

The stimulating principle in these beverages is known as caffeine in coffee, and thein in tea. Doctors may forbid coffee because of some abnormality in health which makes a stimulant undesirable. But competent authorities hold that the effects of the moderate use of coffee by normal individuals may be disregarded. Neither coffee nor tea, however, should be given to children. First, because they do not need stimulants, and second, because the use of these beverages will tend to reduce the consumption of milk which is so important to their nutritional welfare.

Guard Against Staleness

The subject of coffee has been investigated from many angles by competent scientists, whose findings should be of interest to homemakers. The flavor and aroma of coffee are derived chiefly from a volatile oil, which is developed during the roasting process. But it has been established that this substance is rapidly lost from the coffee upon exposure to air. Moreover, each pound of coffee contains about two ounces of fixed oil which may become rancid in the presence of air. These changes occur whether the coffee is ground or in the bean.

Since stale, flavorless coffee may have an adverse effect upon appetite, it is important to buy a product that is protected against the air, or to choose one that is freshly roasted. The homemaker should also buy coffee in small quantities so that it can be used up quickly once it is opened. After the coffee has been made, there may be a further escape of its flavor and fragrance with both heat and steam. That is why coffee should not be allowed to stand, but should be served the moment it is made, and why it should not be reheated.

Tea also deteriorates when it is stored for long periods. It should therefore be bought in small quantities and kept in air-tight containers.
