Specialist Urges Care of Vitamins

Well-Balanced, Varied Diet Prevents Much Illness

By EDITH M. BARBER
"IF YOU are building a house, would you rather have tiles or window panes or floor boards, or cement or plaster or girders or rafters?" asks Dr. Leslie J. Harris in his book, "Vitamins," published by the Macmillan company.

Doctor Harris' question was actually an answer to some one who had asked him to name the foods most important to good nutrition.

Doctor Harris makes the point that through the consumption of a well-rounded diet, much unnecessary illness can be eliminated and that health, strength and, therefore, happiness may be at least partially insured. With the exception of vitamin D, all necessities for the normal person will be provided by the proper choice of the daily food.

Plenty of milk, eggs, vegetables and fruits, with some meat, fish, sugars, starches and fats, just those things which provide us with attractive meals are needed daily. For vitamin D in these days in this climate, when our bodies are not directly exposed to sunlight, we must depend upon fish liver oils or upon irradiated food products to provide the necessary amount. This is particularly important during childhood and for expectant and nursing mothers.

Extra amounts of other vitamins may be required if certain conditions of undernutrition or disease exist because they have been lacking. Vitamins have curative as well as preventive characteristics.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

REALLY we sometimes get pretty mad at all the people who tell us how to raise our baby. Because they each have a different idea and how are we to know!

The only thing we're sure about is that the baby is entitled to a room of his own. Not for style or luxury but just for everyday convenience and comfort. Where baby can rest in quiet away from the confusion and noise of the family. Where he can learn the first principles about order and privacy. Where mother can keep all his things together and handy. Where she can care for him without interruptions or diversions.

Now with so many excellent new improvements in children's furniture, it behooves a conscientious parent to "manage" some of these reasonably priced pieces of furniture for the littlest one.

There's a table and chair that are built to develop proper posture and correct eating habits. The chests and dressers are designed to bring orderliness come naturally by being of size and shape to be handled easily by a small child. Then they are planned that various pieces can be combined into a more grown-up ensemble as the child grows older.

The new type crib can be jiggled into a bed when baby days are over. What's more it's built so solidly that it doesn't rattle and it is equipped with picture springs.

And this furniture is quite gay—some pieces have numbers painted on the drawers; others have Scottie dogs leashed to the knobs.

Effectual Fences

America is about the only country I've been in that leaves her yards open to public view. And there's a lot to be said for that idea. For one thing, it doubtless reflects the fact that we haven't needed high walls to protect our homes, as have the peoples of most other parts of the world. And then, too, open yards with nice lawns and gardens make a town look so much more attractive than when you can only see blank walls. . . . the better sections of an American town look like parks for everyone to see and enjoy.

But there's a lot to be said for the old-world custom of enclosing a place in a high wall or an effectual fence. It gives privacy that enables you to use a yard like a part of the house. This may even quite a small plot of ground serve very usefully as an outdoor sitting room or dining room in fine weather. Without an enclosure you would feel too public to use a yard fully. Not to mention the relief of being able to enclose a toddler safely.

We've been looking into the fence situation lately—the stone or brick wall is prohibitive in cost for all but the plutocrats. Woodworkis very popular now—that's that French provincial fencing that looks like small trees put together (it is). This is available in various heights and makes a most attractive wall at not too great cost. Good metal fences aren't cheap but they are excellent permanent barriers which provide adequate privacy if you grow vines over them. Lattice fences or lattice-and-batten wood fences are good solutions of the fence problem. So is a good picket fence. As cheap as anything and very attractive for the right property is the post and rail fence, which of itself doesn't make privacy, but with wire netting behind it you can have vines that do a fine job of closing off the public view.

In a nutshell, a high fence simply means that you'll get much more use out of your yard, whatever its size.

Some Simple Rules About

The Hanging of Pictures

A few simple rules will help solve many a picture hanging problem. First remember that the size of the picture depends on the size of the wall space. An ordinary studio couch oravenport, for instance, needs a large, rectangular picture or mirror, or a group of small pictures so long that they form a unit and are relatively the same form as the furniture over which they are hung.

Small Waists and Becoming Necklines

THE neckline is a very important detail in making your dress becoming. Thus No. 1719, designed for large figures, has a plain, deep V-neckline which is especially slenderizing. Darts at the waistline tend to make you look inches slimmer. This is a particularly comfortable dress to work in, with its deep armholes, slashed sleeves, and easy waist. It's easy to put on and to iron.

too, thanks to the button-front. A diagram design, it may be all finished in a few hours. Calico, gingham, percale or seersucker are nice for this.

For slender, youthful figures, the heart-shaped, frill-trimmed neckline of No. 1726 is perfectly charming and as flattering as can be! The pointed basque bodice diminishes your waistline to practically nothing, and the wide-shouldered sleeves and flaring skirt accent the slender youth of the silhouette. Make this pretty dress of silk, crepe, taffeta or print, and see if it doesn't win you many compliments!

The Patterns

No. 1719 is designed for sizes 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch material; 4 3/4 yards of broad.

No. 1726 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 14 takes 4 1/2 yards of 33-inch material; 1 1/2 yards of pleating or ruffling.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 35 to 40), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vitality to enjoy life and ward off nervous, pituitary and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. 'Batter Up!' Echoes Once More —But Woe to the Poor Batter

The sharp crack of bat against ball resounds throughout America April 17 as another big league season starts. All summer long the fans at the plate and the fans behind it face two of baseball's toughest assignments. The photo-diagram below shows how easily a catcher or batter can be beaten by a pitched ball which goes 60 feet, 6 inches in less than half a second. Both must think with lightning rapidity. No wonder that Mickey Cochran lost track of the pill two years ago.

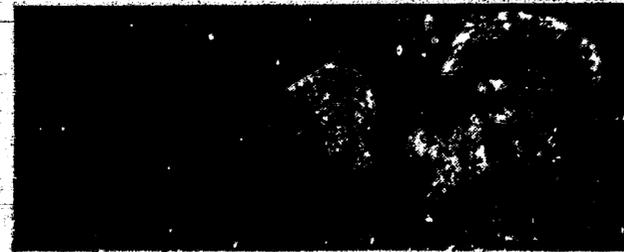

Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankee slugger, demonstrates a batter's coordination of mind and muscles. Especially noteworthy for both safety and success is the way Joe keeps his eyes riveted on the ball from the time it leaves the pitcher's hand.

In the above two pictures DiMaggio illustrates how he puts his shoulders and full weight behind the bat as he brings the old hickory around to connect with the ball. Notice that full attention is still focused on the ball, a rule that holds true in any sport.

Jolting Joe's strong follow-through is shown to advantage in these last two continuous action pictures of his swing symphony.

ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

Gabriel Arthur, Wanderer

IN THE spring of 1673, Capt. Abraham Wood of Fort Henry (now Petersburg) in Virginia sent James Needham, a South Carolina gentleman, and a lad named Gabriel Arthur into the Southern Appalachians to trade with the Cherokees. They were warmly welcomed but later Needham was murdered by a treacherous Occaneechi brave.

The Cherokee chief promised Arthur to escort him home the following spring. In the meantime he took Arthur to a village of friendly Mohetons on the banks of the Great Kanawha. Returning from this visit the Cherokees went out of their way to attack a village of Shawnees. In the battle which followed the English lad was wounded twice by arrows and taken prisoner by the Shawnees.

Because he had long hair, the Shawnees suspected that their captive was not a Cherokee and when they scoured off the accumulated dirt they were amazed at his white skin. When he told them, by sign talk, that he would return to trade with them if they would release him, they promptly sent him on his way to the Cherokee country.

Reaching the town of his former friends, he set out for Fort Henry the following spring accompanied by 18 Cherokee laden with furs for trading. Narrowly escaping death at the hands of the hostile Occaneechies, Arthur reached his home after one of the most eventful experiences that probably ever befell an English lad of his years. He had penetrated farther into the Ohio country than any of his fellow-Englishmen but history does not record whether or not he lived to see his people triumph over the French in their contest for that rich land.

America's 'Prime Minister'

IN 1736, Christian Pribber arrived in the Cherokee Indian village of Great Tellico in what is now east Tennessee. He had left in South Carolina everything he owned except some books and writing materials.

Pribber soon won the friendship of the Indians by adopting their dress, and mode of living and insured their further confidence by marrying the daughter of Moytoy, chief of the tribe. Then, as one of their own, he taught the redskins to read and write.

Having won their deep respect and encouraged their dependence upon his plans, he staged an impressive ceremony. While war drums thumped, he, the mild-mannered teacher, short in stature, unimpressive in appearance, "crowned" the tall and stately Moytoy "Emperour" of the "Kingdom of Paradise." Diplomatically, he created other titles for the lesser chiefs and there was a colorful ceremony as they paraded before the throne of their "emperour." But, most important of all, was Christian Pribber's own appointment as "prime minister."

His next step was his undoing. He sent an "official" communication from Great Tellico, capital of the Cherokee "kingdom," to the governor at Charleston telling him that the English must leave America. Not because they took him seriously, but because they feared French influence, the English military authorities captured America's only "prime minister" and kept him prisoner in Frederica, Ga., until he died.

Schermerhoorn's Ride

Listen my reader and you shall learn of the midnight ride of Schermerhoorn.

PAUL REVERE didn't have such a hard time of it in April, 1775, when he rode 15 miles on the best turnpikes in the colonies to be the inspiration for Longfellow's famous poem. But when Symon Schermerhoorn, on the night of February 8, 1690, rode from Schenectady, N. Y., to Fort Orange (Albany), he made the most courageous ride in American history.

Symon was in the village of Schenectady on the night it was destroyed by the French and Indians. He knew that the small garrison of 24 men could not resist very long and that the attackers, flushed by victory, probably would go on to Fort Orange for more plunder.

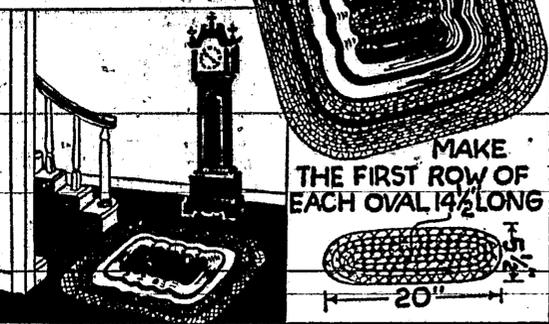

It was bitter cold and the snow was coming thick and fast. Although wounded in the thigh, he seized a stray horse and started the 20-mile ride of warning. Schermerhoorn rode for six hours plunging through drifts that were impassable a few hours later. In spite of his wound and the severe weather and the fact that he passed many farm houses where others could have taken over his mission, he kept courageously on until he reached Fort Orange. In front of the gates, gasping with warning, he collapsed.

The severe conditions under which he made his ride are shown by the fact that the French and Indians were unable to continue their foray and were forced to return to Canada.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

3 BLACK AND 2 PEACOCK BLUE OVALS — BORDER RUST RED BLACK AND PEACOCK BLUE

Grandmother Surprised Everyone.

YES, a certain grandmother surprised everybody—even herself. She had always enjoyed making hit and miss rag rugs in cheery colors. Then one day her favorite grandson brought home the girl he was going to marry. She was a bright young thing, and chattered away about color schemes for her new home.

The living room and hall were to be peacock blue and rust with touches of black. "Well, peacock is just a greenish blue," thought Grandmother, "and rust is a brownish red." So she got out her dye pot and her best wool rags, and she mixed and she dipped and dipped again. Then, instead of sewing her braided rags into one big oval, she made five ovals of the size shown here—3 black and 2 blue. She sewed these together, then around them came 4 rows of rust; 2 rows of black next; then 4 of rust; 1 of black; 4 blue; 2 black; then 8 rows of blue around the outside.

When the wedding day arrived this gift was a great surprise; even Grandmother was amazed at how handsome it looked at the foot of the stairs in the new house. Women everywhere are using their leisure to make their homes more attractive, with slipcovers; curtains; bedspreads and lampshades. They are again taking up embroidery and handwork so that they may beautify their homes and there is a revival of interest in old time hand-crafts. Mrs. Spears' Book 1, SEWING for the Home Decorator, and No. 2, Gifts, Novelties and Embroidery, clearly chart the way for you. If the old craft of rag rug making is your new hobby, you may have free Mrs. Spears' leaflet on rag rugs with your order for both books at 25-cents each. Address, Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

First Great Advantage

If a child admires and respects you, you don't have to exert it very much to influence its behavior.

People who never make excuses seem to get along as well as those who do. Variety makes us spend as much money as necessity.

They Hold Him

The obstinate man does not hold opinions.

Perhaps we are happiest in planning to soon "take life easy" than we would be if we did.

There's always a bright side. By the time the horn stops working, people can hear your car a block away, anyhow.

Boring From Within

He who aspires to be captain of his soul must expect mutinies.

You can't keep a good man down, but he may have to go to some other place to come up.

SAFETY TALKS

Defective Cars in Accidents

COMPILATION by the National Safety Council of state motor vehicle accident reports shows that 9 per cent of the motor vehicles in fatal accidents were reported as defective.

In non-fatal accidents defective vehicles numbered 4 per cent.

The council commented that "it seems certain that mass statistics underestimate the true importance of this problem. A careful study made several years ago indicated that vehicular defects were at least a contributing cause in 15 per cent of the accidents.

Chevrolet Sales Show Advance

Chevrolet dealers' retail sales in the last 10 days of March turned sharply upward, reaching the highest total for any similar period since the new model introduction, and making March by long odds the highest sales month in that period. The March total was 88,986 units, as compared with 59,760 in February and with 62,880 in March of last year. The percentage of increase over March 1938 was 41.2, and over February 1939, it was 75. There was an increase of 70.1 per cent over the sales for the preceding 10-day period, the records indicate.

At the same time, used car sales showed a substantial gain, both over the previous 10 days and over the same period last year. They reached a total of 141,696 for the month of March, giving Chevrolet dealers a grand aggregate, new and used, of more than 230,000 units.

How the plus of OIL-PLATING brings you more than an oil-change

YOU KNOW right off that the fresh oil needed in your crankcase today, isn't to lubricate the crankcase. Either your oil is in the bearings and up to the cylinder head every turn of your engine, or your lubrication isn't 100%.

Now what's the chance for any of the general run of oils to stay up while you've parked the car, for instance? Just about as much chance as there is for a geyser to stay up all by itself! Then every time you start, don't pistons get up to the top before oil gets up from the crankcase? You kill that risk by changing now to OIL-PLATING.

The "magnetic action" of Conoco Germ Processed oil—patented—makes OIL-PLATING stay on inner engine surfaces throughout all your stops, starts and runs this Summer. Your Germ Processed oil keeps a steady hold on the "Full" mark, too, as you'll see—by hanging today to Your Mileage Merchant. Continental Oil Company

Farm Security Administration

Farmers in Lincoln County who expect to borrow funds through the Farm Security Administration to finance their operations this year are urged to file their applications immediately. G. Melvin Waters, County FSA Supervisor, announced today.

With farmers already engaged in their current year's operations in many sections of Region XII, the county officers are in the midst of their usual spring rush of writing farm plans and making loans. As planting season nears, it is essential that applications for loans be filed immediately.

Mr. Waters said sufficient funds are available in the county to meet all current needs of farmers who can qualify for rehabilitation or cooperative loans under the FSA program, who are able to secure sufficient credit from other sources.

Loans, he said, may be made for livestock, farm equipment,

Toothache? Try Sitting on a Stove —Or Solicit Your Neighbor's Opinion

Ancients (and Moderns, Too) Offer Deluge of Panaceas Ranging from Garlic to Zulu Cherries; Even Shakespeare Philosophized About It!

The next time you have a toothache here's what not to do: "Place a snip of garlic ground with oil and salt on the thumb-nail on the ailing side and apply the concoction to the gums surrounding the aching tooth. Be very careful, however, to surround the garlic with dough to protect the flesh from leprosy."

If that doesn't work—and it won't—here's another prescription that's just as useless: "Gather a number of earthworms and place them in a dish filled with moist sand. Strew over it the minced yolk of one egg. The earthworms shall eat it. After some time they are cleaned, put in a pot, which should be covered well, placed in a hot oven and dried."

"About two egg shells full of this powder are rubbed to form a salve with bloodstone and red sandal, two ounces each, unadulterated musk, two scruples, lard obtained from a he-bear, lard from a boar, five ounces each."

"Smearing" Is Helpful. "If you wish to use the remedy, you should first scratch the tooth

In Bavaria toothache sufferers were sometimes advised to chase a cat over a plowed field until the animal perspired. After catching it, the aching molar was to be rubbed with perspiration taken from the cat.

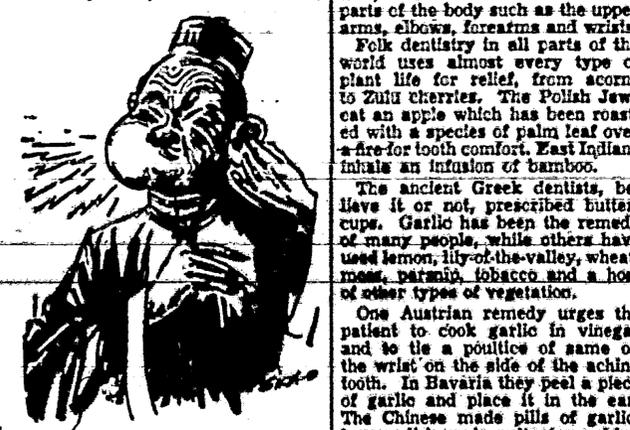

with a splinter of aspen wood and then smear the salve on it." If the tooth still aches—and it will—don't bother to try this:

"An eel, a spiny hok, True indeed, indeed, True in sooth, in sooth, You must eat the head Of said spiny hok, To ease the aching tooth."

This whole business may sound silly, and of course it is, but up until a hundred years ago in most parts of the world, and even in some remote corners today, toothache remedies such as these noted above were and are prescribed conscientiously for the relief of dental pain.

Looking into the history of aching molars and remedies, there is no evidence available that Adam ever had a toothache, nor is there any case history on the dental health of Eve, but it is a safe assumption that there have been sore teeth ever since the time of our common ancestors and it is almost as certain that there have been as many remedies as there have been toothaches.

"Dentists" in Abundance. One time, history relates, a fellow was asked to name the most widespread profession. With little hesitation he replied there are more dentists in the world than representatives of any other field. When called upon to prove his statement, CHINESE CURE—Garlic and saltpetre should be applied in the left ear to ease an ache in the right side of the jaw, and vice versa. So runs an ancient Chinese toothache cure.

He tied a handkerchief around his jaw and sat himself in front of a church on a great holiday, moaning and groaning with feigned pain. Almost everyone who entered the church stopped to prescribe for his distress—practically everybody who entered the church was a "dentist." He proved that everyone is a "dentist," and what's more he showed that there are as many recipes for toothache relief as there are dental advisers.

plants, animals and inorganic substances, have been called upon to stop dental pain.

But before we learn more about the weird remedies of magic, superstition and ignorance, it is fitting, perhaps, to find out just what a toothache is and how to cure it. Any member of the American Dental association will tell you that toothache is not a disease in itself—rather it is a symptom of disease, the most common of all human ailments, tooth decay.

Only One Way to Stop Pain. Decay results because there is a break in the hardest substance in the human body, tooth enamel. When decay exposes the nerve of the tooth, pain results. Medicaments will give temporary relief, but modern thought is that the best way to stop a tooth from aching is to relieve its nerve from exposure.

Of course ancient people knew little of the whys and wherefores of toothache and even today many people know little of the pathology of the tooth, with the result that many of the ancient recipes based on superstition are still being prescribed today. The ancients did know, however, that toothache is a painful thing.

There is a story told of a Turk in Bosnia, who upon encountering a weeping child, asked, "Why are you crying?" When the child replied, "A snake bit me," the Turk said, "That's nothing. I thought you had a toothache."

The English of old had a proverb which pointed out that "He Who Hath Aching Teeth, Hath Ill Tenants." The proverb embodies more truth than the author realized, for modern dental and medical study has shown that aching and diseased teeth can upset other tenants in the human structure, such as the heart, eyes, tonsils, joints, etc.

Shakespeare Was Right. Shakespeare immortalized aching molars in "Much Ado About Nothing," when he said:

"For there was never yet philosopher That could endure the toothache patiently."

The majority of toothache remedies since time unrecorded have been applied to the aching member of the dental arch, but relief of pain has been sought by the application of toothache cures to cheeks, nostrils, ears and even to more distant parts of the body such as the upper arms, elbows, forearms and wrists.

Folk dentistry in all parts of the world uses almost every type of plant life for relief, from acorns to Zulu cherries. The Polish Jews eat an apple which has been roasted with a species of palm leaf over a fire for tooth comfort. East Indians inhale an infusion of bamboo.

The ancient Greek dentists, believe it or not, prescribed butter-cups. Garlic has been the remedy of many people, while others have used lemon, lily-of-the-valley, wheat, moss, parsnip, tobacco and a host of other types of vegetation.

One Austrian remedy urges the patient to cook garlic in vinegar and to tie a poultice of same on the wrist on the side of the aching tooth. In Bavaria they peel a piece of garlic and place it in the ear. The Chinese made pills of garlic, horse-radish seeds, saltpetre and human milk, which they inserted in the nose.

In Brandenburg a dental genius "discovered" tooth ailments could be relieved if the sufferer ran around a church three times without thinking of a fox. The Ruthenians placed their hopes in a concoction of dog tooth powder. Once people were convinced that oral pain would disappear if the teeth were picked with the nail from the middle toe of an owl.

Milk and Lion's Teeth. Another Central European physician of the Middle Ages advised his patients to bite the head of a mouse, and then suspended said head from the neck. It was believed, too, that a youth would be free from aching teeth for the remainder of his life if he wore the canine tooth of a lion around his neck.

Just as "herb" as plants and minerals were available cures for toothache, so were treatments with MOST FANTASTIC—According to an anonymous humorist, all one has to do is take a mouthful of cold water and sit on a hot stove until the water boils. The toothache's then supposed to be gone.

human organs and secretions considered sure-fire relief, for example: "To ease the tooth, you seal night, Visit the graveyard at midnight. Make sure you dodge the morning sun—Then bite the bone of a skeleton."

In Prussia it was believed that the index finger of the right hand had greater healing power than the other fingers, so the Prussians, among other remedies, urged that the index finger of a corpse be placed against the aching tooth, with the plea:

"To thee, the deceased, I complain of my pain. Take my toothache from me And keep it in thy grave."

The inorganic substances used for toothache cures run from agate to zinc, with demand for arsenic, iron rust, lead, salt and water. Water, perhaps, is involved in the most fantastic of tooth remedies. All one has to do, according to the advice of an anonymous humorist, is to fill the mouth with cold water and sit on a hot stove until the water boils.

And that advice is just as good for the relief of toothache as any mentioned above.

Modern science, "which has released the mind from the oppressing grasp of mystical bugaboos, which has liberated our surroundings from the presence of spirits and ghosts, of demons and devils" has demonstrated that toothache is merely the symptom of a disease, namely: dental decay.

The moral of our story is that when a tooth aches the nerve is either exposed or in danger of being exposed. Permanent relief is assured only by relieving the nerve from exposure or losing the tooth.

Douglas Brings New Color to Supreme Court

Freckle-Faced Justice Is The Youngest Since Joseph Story

Twenty years ago a sandy-haired young Scotchman pushed a lawn mower and stoked a furnace at Whitman college, Washington. Today the same sandy-haired Scotchman, a little older but still a "kid," is the youngest United States Supreme court justice since Joseph Story of Massachusetts was elevated to the bench at the age of 32, in 1811.

William Douglas, at 40, looks back on a meteoric rise from the day he "mothered" a box-car-full of sheep from Washington to Chicago on his way east from Yakima, en route to enter Harvard law school.

With a short-lived teaching career behind him, Douglas changed his mind about Harvard and studied law at Columbia under Harlan F. Stone, who is now his colleague on the court. After teaching at Columbia, Douglas met Robert Hutchins who was then the "boy dean" of Harvard's law school. Offered a post of assistant professorship at Harvard, he was soon made Sterling professor of law at Yale. In 1935, when he accepted a post on the securities and exchange commission, Douglas was said to be the country's highest paid law professor.

Mrs. Douglas, the girl he kissed good-bye back in Yakima, became his wife the next year. They have two children, Mildred, nine, and William, seven.

Douglas is regarded as the most extraordinary character placed on the Supreme bench in many years. He is a New Dealer and a close friend of Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold, a former Yale faculty member whose specialty is opposing monopolistic practices. Although accused of being a "left-winger," the new justice denies radicalism and simply insists government must be "mobile, bold and intelligent."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK—On August 2 of this year, Dr. Gustavus Adolphus Eisen will be 92 years old. It was his research that established, so far without authoritative challenge, the Challice of Antioch as the "oldest surviving record of the faith of the Apostles." The challice was exhibited during holy week at St. Thomas Episcopal church, New York, with the conjecture that its inner cup may have been the beginning of the legend of the Holy Grail. In a book published in 1926, Doctor Eisen established the use of the chalices in the Church at Antioch not later than the end of the first century of the Christian era.

At the age of 85, Doctor Eisen learned to decipher cuneiform inscriptions, to write a treatise on Mesopotamian cylindrical seals, or glyptics. In 1936, he published 15 volumes summarizing his research in legends of the Holy Grail, and is now at work on studies of early portraits of Christ and the apostles. His eyesight and hearing are still good and he puts in a full working day.

Doctor Eisen has published more than 160 books covering his amazing range of inquiry in a half-dozen sciences, including studies of earthworks, fig culture, archeology, ancient grass, portraits of George Washington and geological, zoological and botanical subjects.

Born in Sweden, he was a frail child, unable to attend school, frequently in the country, with his tutors who stimulated his scientific interests.

In the University of Upsala, he wrote a thesis on earthworks which attracted the attention of Charles Darwin. His correspondence with Darwin put him in touch with Alexander E. Agassiz, the American naturalist, and, when he obtained his doctorate in 1873 and removed to America, the two men formed a long and fruitful association. For 40 years, Doctor Eisen was on the Pacific coast, working at times with the late Luther Burbank on plant research.

Last year, the California Academy of Sciences honored him as the founder of the state's great fig-growing industry. Myrran figs frequently had been taken to California, but there was no yield. Doctor Eisen studied this problem and reached the conclusion that the failure was due to lack of fertilization. Male trees were brought over and California began gathering fig crops.

The challice, which had been found in the ancient ruins of Antioch in 1910 and placed in the Louvre, in Paris, was brought to this country in 1914, to safeguard it during the war. Doctor Eisen's conclusion was that it had been made by a great Roman artist, Apollodorus, who lived from 80 to 120 A. D.

Doctor Eisen's avid scientific studies continue on, unabated, into his tenth decade. He is a bachelor. None has ranged farther into the past, while prying eagerly into the future, in his zest for knowledge.

ON A cotton patch in the high mountains of North Carolina, a lad leaned on his hoe, and, in his imagination, followed out in the world the 11:15 Gyroscope Aids in the Led With Hoe in valley far below. One day, he did follow the lingering plume of smoke and that is linked, in the long chain of causation, with the Sperry corporation's harbinger of one more spring. The lad with the hoe, one Thomas A. Morgan, president of the corporation, announces a net income of $4,981,366 for 1938, against $2,949,860 the year before.

He joined the navy when he hung up his hoe, qualified as an electrician, and, running a gyroscope, sank his career in this magic whirling. That geared him in with the Sperry company, and, just as the great war was breaking, he chased the Navy's navy all over the far-eastern seas to sell its gyroscopes. He caught up with it and rang up a sale, in one of the episodes of free American enterprise.

Thereafter he planted gyroscopes on all the great fighting ships of the world and called a true course to the presidency of the Sperry corporation in 1928. He became one of the grand panjandrum of aviation. He says he got where he is by thinking of today, and its demands, rather than of yesterday or tomorrow. He had ten months' schooling when he trailed the train in the valley.

Hats With Veiling Galore Are in a Capricious Mood

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

MILLINERY has indeed come into its own this spring. The new hats are everything a spring hat should be—the most refreshingly springlike hats that have graced fashion's stage for many a season. In them romance in millinery has been recaptured.

The very ecstasy of spring breathes through the flowers that bedeck the pretty straws and through the ribbons and fantastic scarf trimmings on colorful felts and suédés, likewise through the dainty lace and immaculate lingerie trims, new this season, and through the glorified spring colorings and beyond all the final touch of charm is achieved via mists of frivolous whimsical veiling that swirls and whirls and cuts pretty capers throughout the entire picture.

You can be as choosy as you like in selecting your spring bonnet. Whether you decide on one of the very new and amusing elfish tall crowns that style the latest models or whether you declare in favor of a crownless type, whether your hat be bugle-of-brim-or-hava-na-brim-at-all (flower toques with pert bon-bon colored veils are quite the rage) whether it be a breton or Gibson girl sailor you choose, or if you are ultra enough to want one of the very smart Paris-inspired bonnet types that tie under the chin, no matter in what direction fancy leads you, you can't go wrong in fashion's eyes.

New in crowns is the postillon. See it pictured in the group to the left above. This model in miniature blue (an attractive blue featured this season) felt is trimmed with contrasting plaid taffeta ribbon and an allover crisp blue veil. Plaids and stripes have invaded the millinery world with great display. Hat and bag sets of striking plaids or stripes are among the fetching concoctions that tune to the enthusiasm shown for high color.

Veilings galore are enlivening the

Bouquet Bracelets Combining Jacket Being Modernized

The fussy "combining jacket" that mother used to wear has been superseded by a trim rubber cape which has many other uses besides keeping stray hairs from settling on a clean dress or blouse. Slipped on and off in a jiffy, it is ideal for repairing complexion and for washing up at odd moments when there isn't time to disrobe.

One of the newest make-up capes on the market has a little pocket in the form of a flower for holding hair pins, powder puff, or comb. The soft rubberized fabric takes to soap and water like a dish cloth, thus making it possible to keep its delicate pastel colors flower-fresh.

Fashion Designers Turn Lilac-Minded

Each season this flower or that flower is especially featured. Paris milliners have turned lilac-minded this spring, either trimming with lilac clusters or in some instances making toques and even tiny sailor hats of them. Wear a lilac spray on your dark or light coat, it is one of the popular flowers of the moment in fashion's realm. Carnations are also worn.

Checked Costumes. It is considered smart this season to have at least one Shepherd's checked costume in the wardrobe.

Stik for Action. Washable and noncrushable silks for active sportswear have been endorsed by Paris.

Shells for Lapsels. Tiny bouquets of flowers are made entirely of shells and are to be worn in your lapel.

MOUNTAIN MAN

A Banner Fiction Serial
By HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

SYNOPSIS

Jim Cotter, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed in the pursuit of his duties. Gordon Breck, his best friend, takes over Cotter's job as forest ranger. Breck buys a outfit and decides to attend the public dance run by the Tillsons in Lone Tree. At the dance Breck dances with Louise Temple, pretty "cowgirl" for whom he takes a liking. Unknown to Breck she is being courted by Art Tillson, youngest of the three Tillson brothers. Angered by Breck's attentions to the girl, he picks a fight which ends indecisively when someone sets fire to the hall. Breck and his chit set out for the mountain station. Halfway, they are met by Sierra Slim, moss-back mountaineer who is also in the forest service. Around the campfire that night, Breck learns from Sierra that tracking down Jim Cotter's murderer must be done cautiously and by devious methods. Cook, Breck and Sierra continue their ascent of the mountains. Stopping to rest they sight the Tillsons, returning to their hideaway. Next day, Cook sends Breck and Sierra in one direction to repair the telephone line, and in another to another. Over the campfire at night Sierra tells Breck more about Louise Temple. "That kid's a thoroughbred," he says. He also believes that Art Tillson is not essentially "bad," but is the victim of circumstances. Returning to Cook's camp, Breck is directed to go to Rock House Meadow, his permanent base. On his way, he is the target of a pistol shot from an unseen assailant. The bullet misses, but his frightened pack animals bolt and Breck goes in pursuit. Finding a deserted cabin, he takes shelter from the rain. A moment later one of the Tillson brothers arrives and Breck hides in the cabin loft. Then Art Tillson arrives. Breck hears the three Tillsons discuss a plot against his life.

Breck covered it, keeping himself in the dark. "Stop there!" "No need for that, stranger," came Jud's voice. "You, Art and Hep," he called over his shoulder, "stow away your guns and come here." A movement sounded outside. "Keep your hands up!" Breck warned them. He watched the oblong of dim light that marked the doorway. Three forms appeared. He stood back against the end wall. "One of you uncover that stove." It was Jud who obeyed, and then spoke first. "Howdy, Ranger?" Breck nodded, surveying the man for any sign of what the next move might be. Yet if Jud suspected he had been in the cabin for some time, he hid it. Art and Hep squatted on their heels and held empty hands to the fire. Breck felt the need of opening matters at once. "Too bad I killed your dog," he began, indicating the gray shape stretched on the floor. "He charged from around the corner as I came in." Jud kicked the carcass to one side. "Ain't going to be any trouble about that. Suppose we talk things over while we're all waiting rain, no longer beat upon the cabin. "I suppose you figure to head in with the cattle drive and take count at Rock House?" Jud observed. "That's about it." "Then your quickest way would be south from here, meetin' the bunch at Long Canyon." "No doubt there was a double purpose in this directing, steering him out of Sulphur; but Breck knew he would have no immediate trouble. Jud had given him a week. "Get out of here, boys," Jud ordered. "We've got to be on the summit when they come over. So long, Ranger, see you at the count." He strode off without a look backward. Art followed, arrogant disdain on his young face as he passed. Only Hep shot a sidelong glance; furtive, evil-eyed, his puffed mouth drawn down sneeringly. Breck watched him beyond the door, tense with a feeling that had grown strong and certain through the night. Hep had killed Jim Cotter! He had no more proof than his own reading of treachery in the man, and the retort Art had hurled at him; yet he was convinced. His thoughts mullied on it as he returned to the stove, stripped off khaki shirt and breeches and hung them up to

That was according to Jud's order last night. Breck turned in his saddle. What had become of the other two? Ten o'clock brought him to the blazed Rock House trail, and a little before noon he topped a ridge that flanked Long Canyon. What he saw then gripped him with swift wonder. Thousands of cattle had come over the eastern summit and were pouring down the canyon in a red, following stream. Cowhands, looking like black specks from this distance, darted along the line, pushing back bunches that broke from the main flow. Dogs raced in with them. The animals moved on endlessly, slowly heading down until Long Canyon could spew them into the bowl of Rock House Meadow. There they would be held over night. In the morning Breck's job of allotment would begin. He could see no real chance for trouble. A book in his pocket told the exact number of cattle on each man's permit. Cook's instructions had been: "Allow twenty over your count—you might make that much of a mistake—but no more." To which he had added a word of warning: "Go out on patrol the night the drive reaches Rock House. Someone usually tries to push a few bunches ahead of the release day." When all the animals had come over the summit, the stream was a mile long and a quarter wide, entirely filling the grass bottom of Long Canyon. Breck rode down to fall in behind the drive, coming into the roar and hooah, above which the cowboys' "Hooshi Hooshi" burst constantly. Some of the hands were Plute Indians from the desert, short dark fellows on paint horses. They nodded to Breck's greeting. Cattlemen shouted "Howdy!" as they flashed by in their ceaseless charging against rear animals. It was in one of these rushes that he saw Art Tillson astride a chestnut horse. Then came a roll of dust and he could see no more than the rise and fall of red backs, white horns, lashing tails. Behind him his packs snorted out the thick air. He followed the example of other men and hung a bandana over his nose. The drive flowed on. At times the bunchers dropped out to talk and drink at the creek; then dogs alone kept the line moving. Some of the cowhands came around Breck, sizing him up, but for the most part they were aloof and he knew that any friendship must start from himself. One in particular swung often within a certain distance, remained there for a moment, then darted off, riding a tall blue horse with more than the usual cowboy's abandon. Finally this figure approached closer in the dust and he realized it was not a man. He turned his mount that way. Louise Temple lowered the handkerchief from her face. "Hello there, Ranger!" "We meet again," Breck laughed. He held out his hand to her. She grasped it across the space between their saddles. "You're surprised?" she asked, adding, "So am I. You didn't tell me you belonged up here." They rode together for a time, and he made conversation in order to keep her near. He wanted to watch her. She was prettier than he had thought at the dance that night; at least more picturesque. She wore a roll-brim Stetson of deep brown. It went well with her tanned skin and dark eyes. A man's shirt of white silk lay open against her firm slender throat, and was drawn down tightly over her breast to be tucked into blue denim jeans. Her cowboy boots were black with short spurs jingling at the heels. (TO BE CONTINUED)

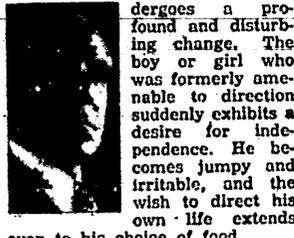

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Gives Practical Advice on Feeding Teen Age Child; Describes Some Special Food Needs of Both Boys and Girls

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

BEGINNING around the twelfth year in girls and the thirteenth year in boys, the rate of growth is greatly accelerated. Then children require large quantities of food to meet the needs of their rapidly maturing bodies and they usually develop huge appetites. Unfortunately, however, they are often inclined to overlook the foods that are most necessary to health, to eat at odd hours, and to stuff themselves with rich combinations that may severely tax the digestive system.

Mothers may find it exceedingly difficult to deal with their offspring all through the teens, when physiological changes are taking place which mark the transition from childhood to maturity. For along with the development of his fast growing body, the child's emotional life undergoes a profound and disturbing change. The boy or girl who was formerly amenable to direction suddenly exhibits a desire for independence. He becomes jumpy and irritable, and the wish to direct his own life extends even to his choice of food.

Mothers must mobilize all the patience and forbearance at their command—must make it their solemn duty to see that their adolescent children have the foods they require for growth; for stamina, and for building resistance to disease. For the stress and strain of adolescence will be far more easily weathered by boys and girls who are properly nourished.

Quality Important as Quantity
During the years of greatest growth, boys and girls frequently require more food than their fathers or mothers. But it is essential that the diet be well balanced and of the highest nutritive value. It should include an abundance of easily digested energy foods, such as breadstuffs, potatoes, cereals and macaroni products, as well as liberal quantities of the more concentrated fuel foods, such as butter or margarine. There must be an ample supply of high quality protein—which is furnished by meat, fish, eggs, cheese and milk—to build the new muscle tissue required to cover the lengthening frames of the boys and help build the rounded contours of the girls.

Need for Minerals and Vitamins
There must be ample amounts of the various minerals—especially calcium and phosphorus for the teeth and bones, and to help build sound, healthy nerves; iodine for proper functioning of the thyroid gland; iron for building increased quantities of rich red blood. Every vitamin must be included in the adolescent's diet to promote normal health and development, but vitamin A is especially valuable at this time of rapid growth, and vitamin B is also required in liberal amounts to meet the extra demands of increased activity and growth.

A Quart of Milk Daily
It is highly desirable that the diet should include a quart of milk daily, because milk is such a splendid source of calcium and vitamin A, as well as other necessary nutrients.

sary minerals and vitamins. If children have been brought up with a wholesome respect for this master food, they will continue to drink it during their teens.

However, if they complain about taking it as a beverage, mothers should see that it is supplied by way of cream soups and sauces, with cereals, and in nutritious pudding desserts, which can be enriched with eggs, thus providing additional proteins, minerals and vitamins.

Fruits and Vegetables
Fruits should be eaten freely—at least twice a day—and the high-caloric dried fruits, such as prunes and dates, may be used to advantage along with bananas, oranges, grapefruit, apples and other fresh fruits, as well as the many varieties that come in cans. Cooked and raw vegetables should be provided liberally—if possible, at both lunch and dinner. Dressing cooked vegetables with butter or margarine will increase their fuel value, and make them more satisfying for hungry boys.

Girls, who are often finicky eaters during their adolescent years, can usually be tempted with crisp, raw vegetables served in the form of salads; and protein can be added by means of eggs, cheese, fish or chicken.

Boys Need More Food Than Girls
There is a marked difference between the fuel requirements of teen age boys and girls. Both must have a well balanced diet. But the boys need many more calories, and therefore should have a more generous allowance of highly concentrated foods which supply necessary fuel with a minimum tax on the digestive system.

They should have cereals in generous-size portions—and it's advisable to choose part of the cereals from those retaining the bran and the germ. And they'll welcome nourishing desserts, such as custard, tapioca, bread and cornstarch puddings.

Girls Warned Against Reducing
Girls, on the other hand, may become fussy and try to cut down radically on the fuel foods, with the foolish idea of keeping fashionably thin. This must not be permitted, because it may result in under-nutrition, which opens the way to fatigue and nervousness, and may lead to serious disease.

In addition to wholesome, nourishing food, teen age boys and girls should have plenty of rest, sunshine and healthful outdoor exercise. And they also deserve the sympathy and deep understanding of their parents.

Hep lunged. Art doubled his fists. Jud halted both with a look from narrowed eyes. "Art," he said, and the cold quality of his voice carried meaning far beyond his words, "you made a mistake. I told you to stop that fellow, and you know what I meant." He paused, rigid, save for a slow movement of jaw muscles. "Next time you do it!"

Art turned impulsively. "Damn it, Jud, ain't I had enough of this? What's it going to get me anyway?"

"It has already got you a herd of a thousand cattle. I'm giving you that."

"Yeah, with a fine lot of strings! I've got to keep 'em here on Sulphur Creek and work for you whenever you say. To hell with it!"

"Just the same," Jud urged, "they're yours."

Art rolled a cigarette, surveying Jud from over the edge as he licked it. "All right, if they're mine I can do what I please with them. So I'll just stop the bunch tomorrow and graze this season on Temple Meadow."

A sneer came across the stove from Hep. "Sweet! I reckon that would just suit Louy."

"You leave Louy out of this. I know what you're thinkin'!"

"And I know what you're doin'!" This time Jud made no move to interfere. Art's fist flashed over the fire. Hep slumped and when he rose Art followed, knocking him back into one corner.

Breck found his own teeth clenched. He looked down upon Art Tillson with new understanding.

In a moment Hep got up, wiping a bloody mouth and muttering under his breath. Art ignored him.

"Now then," Jud said casually, "if you two fools have got it over with, we'll talk business. We might as well keep in here until daylight, then you'll go meet your herd at the summit, Art, and shove 'em down Sulphur. Hep and I'll go direct to camp and fix things there. As for that fellow—next time I lay out a job, you work on it. No more mistakes!"

Hep drew a box near the stove and sat down, closing his eyes. Jud remained standing, hunched over the fire. Art went outside. He was gone only a minute then reappeared in the door.

"Jud, there's a couple of packs at the corral!"

Instantly the stove was covered again. Hep sprang from his box. Jud gave orders. "You two go to the fence. I'll stay off in the shadows."

Art followed, knocking him back into one corner.

for the storm to blow past. You're the new guard at Rock House, ain't you?"

"Yes; and I'm willing to talk—as far as the Forest Service is concerned."

"That's what I mean. My way is to come out in the open with new rangers. Right now you strike me as being a fair-minded sort. Understand?"

"Not yet," Breck answered, "but I'm a good listener."

"Then here's what I'm getting at. Don't let yourself have any call to ride this Sulphur country. I want full use of it."

Breck nodded. "I understand, Tillson. Am I to keep out just because you say so?"

"I pay for what I get!" Jud paused. Breck felt the cold gray eyes measuring his price.

"What does the government give you for riding this range?" Jud went on.

"One hundred and five a month."

"Making four hundred and twenty for the season," the other added. "All right, in that same season I'll pay you two thousand to stay out."

dry. Then came a clear realization. He had entered into this forest job to fulfill a pledge. That was no longer the whole of it. Tonight he had brought all things squarely upon himself.

Firelight picked out the badge on his shirt and a warm pride possessed him as he stared at the lone pine tree, flanked by the letters: U. S. Since the war he had often recalled those letters. Something of the grim eagerness of first enlistment days returned to him now.

CHAPTER IX

With the break of dawn Breck caught his stock and rode into a deer trail beyond the meadow. The Tillsons had gone by the same route. Tracks of three horses showed in the wet ground. They led up a ridge, then climbed a backside some distance before they descended into the next canyon.

Water was fresh in the first stream he crossed, but the second flowed warm and odorless. Here the trail marks changed. They thinned out, only one animal having passed where there had been three. Art was the one who had continued.

'Progress' Cited in London by Changing Names of Many Streets, Lanes, Alleys

Expatriated Londoners will be sadly confused should they return again to the metropolis. In many ways which appear almost as vandalism the grand old city has been yielding to "progress," says the Toronto Globe and Mail. Haunts familiar to citizens of a century, or even a generation, are gradually disappearing; and now it is announced that town planning—inevitable associate of improvement and expansion—has resulted during the last three years in the changing of 1,867 street, lane and alley names. Little respect has been paid to the sentimental objections of the denizens. One argument for these changes is the confusion for postal and fire brigade services created by 20 High streets, 67 Church streets, nine Lovers' lanes and so on.

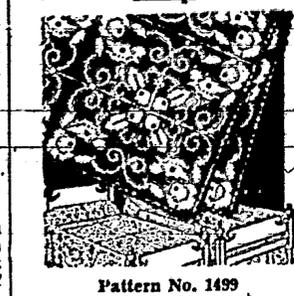

With characteristic English thoroughness residents are provided with several methods of objecting to these changes. First they are notified by a subcommittee of the general town planning committee, and may protest in writing or by petition. They may also enlist the aid of their borough council, which has the right of protest. But town planning committees are not swayed by sentiment, and most of the name changes go through.

It is, of course, inevitable that there be such changes in a great city, the growth of centuries, which gradually has absorbed district after district with similar street names. The chief difficulty of the town planning committee is reported to be the finding of suitable new names for so many hundred streets, lanes and alleys bearing titles that have come down through the years, and which all have something of a personal interest for those whose lives have been spent in the neighborhood.

We can measure weight by the ton or by the grain or dram. We can measure distance by light years or inches. We use the unit most convenient for the objective at hand. But at present we use only one commercial measure for electricity—the kilowatt-hour, which is 1,000 watt-hours.
