The Carnival spirit reigned supreme last Friday afternoon at Santa Rita School. The soft drinks and candy were sold out in a short time. The fish pond drew the attention of many of the children. Many prizes were raffled off at the paddle wheel. But the main center of attraction seemed to be "Maggie", where one was given three chances to put a ball through her mouth or a fish, thereby procuring a prize. Anyone present seemed to be having a good time.

On Sunday, May 7, at the 8:00 Mass, the children of Santa Rita Parish will receive their First Holy Communion. There are about forty boys and girls in the class. Their parents are urged to attend the Mass and receive Holy Communion with the children.

BANKING LOOKS AHEAD

UNITY AND STRENGTH

A father in one of Aesop's fables, wished to prove to his sons that unity is strength. He asked each of them to break a single stick, which they did with ease. However, when he gathered several sticks into a bundle, none of the sons could break it.

The same principle of unified strength applies to our country's progress and prosperity. As long as separate groups such as business, labor and government stand alone, the structure is weak.

But when all groups decide to go ahead together, nothing in the world can stop us.

Rabbit meat was served.

Household Hints

By BETTY WELLS

ONCE upon a time in London, we visited the home of Mrs. Belloc Loundes, the English novelist, whom Alexander Woolcott once described as Queen Victoria with a French accent. And it was her French ancestry that Mrs. Loundes credited with her affection for a big bedroom, where a lady could write and rest, have tea or just sit and ruminate.

We sense a trend toward bigger bedrooms in the American scene after all the "master bedroom" indicated in all plans for the newer houses is quite a spacious room. And pleasantly this room is assuming a feeling of rural leisure in its furnishings. Braided rugs and flowered walls, the addition of desk, chaise longue and fireplace give a gracious ease to such a room—make the space serve as secondary sitting room, morning room or study.

Another French influence on current bedroom styles is the prevalence of upholstered beds. Not the formal types that probably come to mind when the subject comes up—the upholstered beds we mean are unpretentious and provincial in mood, and often they're covered in chintz cretonne, sateen or twill. Watch also for them in pastel leathers and leatherettes. Two bedrooms in Lily Pons' country cottage have upholstered beds—her own bed is covered with quilted blue chintz. Another room has twin beds upholstered in gray-and-yellow flowered chintz. Consider this idea when you are refurbishing because the new upholstered beds aren't out-of-sight in cost.

A Bride's House With Lasting Quality

Oh me, oh my . . . I remember when Nell R. was born. So it was quite a blow to find her grown up and married when I went back to my old home town recently.

Her new little house is very fresh and bride-y. Yet very practical and livable, furnished with chests, tables, cabinets, chairs that she won't blush for 50 years hence—simply finely made pieces of authentic design. Style and smartness are there in the pieces that will be changed more often, the upholstered chairs, the curtains, the accessories.

The walls throughout the little cottage are painted cream, but Nell hasn't let this spell "commonplace" in her home. Instead, she's made the most of it. In the living room, for instance, the curtains and slip covers are in a large scale flowered chintz with a cream ground, and the rug is a soft sage green. For accent odd cushions in a deep, red and silver for accessories.

All chairs to match in floral chintz

The dining room and the guest room are both done in the same colors and material—which gives a feeling of spaciousness and poise to a small house.

Nell's room has curtains in cream nixon draped softly and fully and tied back in big sweeping loops, and the bedspread is cream and black. The furniture, painted light green, has small flower garlands painted on it, and the rug is an all-over floral.

Because of the subtle simplicity of the decorative scheme, you have a feeling that the house itself has more dignity and size than it really has.

USEFUL HINTS

To clean mica in a stove that's been blackened with smoke, wash with vinegar.

Keep your brown sugar in the bread box.

If kitchen drawers are lined with oilcloth they look much neater.

When metal tips come off shoe-strings, dip tips in hot paraffin and twist ends.

To force rosebuds to open out, put a lump of sugar in the water of the vase.

To give apple sauce a good flavor add two slices of lemon while it is cooking.

Use left-over ceiling paper for pantry shelf lining paper. It stays clean longer.

When baking squash, place pieces in oven upside down. It will bake much faster.

Vegetables should be cooked in a minimum amount of water.

Always wash rice before cooking. Keep goldfish cool. The air in the ordinary living room is too warm.

Bread Goes Well With Vegetables

Adds Appearance and Flavor to Many Dishes

By EDITH M. BARBER

BREAD blends with vegetables as it does with most other foods. It adds both flavor and appearance to creamed vegetable dishes with which it is served in the form of toast or cut into "points." In the form of croutons, bread cubes, large or small, it adds to the attractiveness of service of the vegetable in this form. Browned, dry crumbs added to melted butter and flavored with lemon juice make a good sauce for vegetables such as cauliflower or broccoli.

Soft bread crumbs combined with seasonings and vegetable pulp make a stuffing for tomatoes, green peppers and egg plant, which are always favorite ways of serving these vegetables, and also for onions, carrots and beets.

Almost any vegetable may be "scaloped" by seasoning and baking with buttered crumbs. It takes about two slices of soft bread, one-third inch thick, to make one cup of crumbs.

Stuffed Onions.

1 quart medium onions
1 cup soft bread crumbs
1/4 cup minced ham
Salt
Pepper
Butter
1/2 cup cream

Parboil onions and remove part of center, leaving the root end intact. Fill cavity and stuffing made with onion pulp, bread crumbs and ham, seasoned with salt and pepper and moistened with melted butter. Place the onions close together in a greased baking dish, pour one-half cup of cream around them and dot with butter. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) until browned, about 20 minutes.

Baked Stuffed Tomatoes.

Remove thin slices from the stems of smooth, medium-sized tomatoes. Take out the pulp, add an equal quantity of breadcrumbs, season with salt, pepper and onion juice, and refill the tomatoes with the mixture. Place in a buttered pan, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and bake 20 minutes in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit).

Creamed Fried Onions.

1 dozen medium-sized onions
3 tablespoons fat
3 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper
2 cups milk

Slice and fry the onions in fat. When light brown dredge with flour, stir well and add milk and seasoning. Cook until thick and serve on french toast made by dipping bread in milk and frying until light brown.

Avocado and Grapefruit Salad.

3 avocado pears
3 grapefruits, cut in sections
Lettuce
French dressing
Slice avocado pears and cut to correspond to grapefruit sections. Arrange sliced pear and grapefruit sections on lettuce and serve with french dressing.

Baked Carrots.

4 bunches carrots
1/4 teaspoon salt
Pepper
2 tablespoons butter
1 cup milk
Bread crumbs
Slice the carrots and put in a greased baking dish. Season with salt, pepper and butter. Pour the milk over the carrots, cover with fine bread crumbs and bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees Fahrenheit) three-quarters of an hour.

Fried Potatoes, German Style.

Peel potatoes and cut into very thin slices. Put three tablespoons of lard, bacon fat or butter in a frying pan, put in potatoes, about an inch deep, sprinkle with salt and pepper and add half a cup of water and cover pan tightly. Let cook over a medium fire until water is absorbed. Uncover, let brown, turning slices occasionally.

Orange and Onion Salad.

3 oranges
2 Spanish or Bermuda onions
Lettuce or endive
French dressing
Slice the oranges after peeling and arrange with slices of onion on a bed of lettuce or endive. Dress with french dressing and let stand at least one hour before serving.

Hashed Browned Potatoes.

3 cups cold boiled potatoes, cut into fine cubes
Salt, pepper
1/2 cup bacon fat or butter
Season potatoes to taste. Heat fat in frying pan, add potatoes, mix and stir until fat and potatoes are hot and well blended. Press down with a pancake turner. Let cook until well browned underneath, then fold with a spatula and serve.

Beans Bretonne.

1/2 cups pea beans
1 cup stewed and strained tomatoes
1 cup chicken stock
6 pimentons rubbed through a sieve
1/4 cup minced green pepper
1 onion, finely chopped
1/2 cup butter
2 teaspoons salt
Soak beans overnight in cold water, drain and parboil until soft. Put in a baking dish or bean pot with other ingredients and cook in a slow oven (250 degrees Fahrenheit) until beans have nearly absorbed sauce.

Buy Wash Fabrics That Are Fast Color, Non-Shrinkable

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT IS no wonder that smart cottons and other wash materials have attained to dizzy heights of style prestige, which is especially true this season, for they are amazingly lovely and versatile, and tune to every occasion, formal or informal.

However, their attractiveness is by no means their chief lure, for the really grand and glorious thing about most modern washables is the promise they carry of being both fast-color and non-shrinkable. Modern science has worked miracles in this particular. Which should be particularly encouraging to mothers who are outfitting little daughters with pretty new dresses for spring and summer. For peace of mind it is only necessary to demand, when buying wash materials, the kinds that carry non-fade and non-shrink assurance.

The materials that go to make up the charming dresses pictured take on added interest when you know they will not fade neither will they shrink. For everyday wear in classroom and happy carefree hours of the day the shirtmaker dirdndi type dress shown to the right couldn't help but satisfy the pride of most any little style-alert girl. It is made of a sanforized-shrunk slub broadcloth in a smart triple stripe design, with white collar and trim on the sleeves.

Shopping in wash-fabric sections these days is as refreshing an experience as walking through gardens abloom with spring flowers. The Swiss voile florals especially make you feel just like that, they are so realistically flower-patterned in colors that are breathtaking in beauty. If there is one sort of frock more than another that will make a dainty little maiden look her prettiest it is a dress of flower-printed sheer and to prove it the adorable child to the left in the picture says invitingly, "look at me!" She is wearing a dress of fairyspun lawn, which, being pre-chrunk, will wash like a dream, and what's more the beautiful print is fast color, assured by the use of vat-dye. You can get these dainty, sheer lawns in the newest color schemes, both in flowered and conventional patternings. The shops show dresses made up that are surprisingly inexpensive, and so pretty you will want several.

Which all goes to show the chic, the charm and the dependable wearableness of the wash materials that go to make up the new showings. By the way, had you heard that gingham is making style-high fashion news for spring and summer? Not only are little girls wearing it with their usual enthusiasm for this ever attractive and colorful wash weave, but mother and big sister are ordering tailored suits made of it, for fashion decrees gingham as fashionable to wear about town, at the club and to bridge parties or wherever you go during the active rounds of the day. Gingham also is the "pet" of the teen-age for party and prom evening frocks.

Speaking of frocks for party wear, when you go fabric-seeking be sure to look over the showings of cloque organdies.

Yoke and Pleats

Pleating continues to add infinite charm to the majority of print silk dresses. Here is a fashionable Persian design silk print in bayadere striped treatment. The silk for this attractive afternoon frock has cool lime green and black as its color scheme. Novel pleating lends interest to the skirt front. The patent leather belt of corselet interpretation repeats the colors of the print. Notice the waist is made with a yoke which is a styling greatly emphasized this season.

Ribbon Ruffles to Trim Chanel Suit

Chanel trims a superb dressy suit with applique of tiny ribbon ruffles, around the collar, down the front, and around the lower edge of the jacket and sleeves. The jacket doesn't meet, so a sparkling white gilet shows at the front. The skirt is slightly gathered and has a row of ribbon applique down the front.

From Molyneux comes a suit that combines a rose-colored box jacket with a skirt of soft brown. The jacket has revers and pockets of brown.

Hat Shapes Most Important Item

This spring the shape of a hat will be more important than its trimming. Straws are spreading out, enormous brims in odd shapes—palletes, or shovels or fans. Others, halo style, are tied on with bandanas, mummy style. Doll hats—if you still like 'em—in straw with stiff starched veils; the inevitable school girl sailor; their crowns blocked in odd shapes; straws with brims like royal crowns, will all be good.

Recent Arrival in Millinery Realm

One of the latest arrivals in the domain of hats is the black felt sailor with rolled brim—the padre style with very flat crown and slightly upturned brim on each side. To relieve its severity and give it a distinctly feminine touch, it is draped with a cyclamen-pink mesh veil gathered at the shallow crown to fall loosely over the face.

ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

An American Spahi

FEW Americans have ever heard of Marius Van de Weghe. He stays pretty close to his-tallow and caustics, test tubes and chemicals and other scientific apparatus in his laboratory at a soap company in Chicago.

You wouldn't suspect that Marius, a young man of less than 40 years, is an Ouissam Alaouite Cherifien. But that is what you are when the Sultan of Morocco gives you a medal and says that's what you are.

Because Van de Weghe, while a soldier in Morocco, displayed unusual bravery under fire, the sultan knighted him. Van de Weghe was a spahi in the Moroccan army right after the World war. A spahi is a cavalryman. During a fierce engagement with rebel natives, Van de Weghe rode back two miles into enemy territory to bring back the body of his slain commanding officer.

The kind of men the soldiers were fighting were those who tortured their live captives and mutilated those who were killed. Van de Weghe's heroism prevented the natives from burying the body of his commander with his head protruding to be eaten by insects.

But there is nothing of the hero in Van de Weghe's present demeanor, now that he is an American citizen and the head of a family. Whenever anyone expresses amazement that he would risk his life to retrieve a dead body he adds his own amazement, stating that neither can he understand how he happened to do it.

'Prince of Trinidad'

"JAMES I, PRINCE OF TRINIDAD," is an impressive title. The holder of it was an American who married the daughter of a Standard Oil company magnate. He presented her with the entire kingdom of Trinidad which they ruled together with a firm hand.

Trinidad was easy to rule, of course, because Mr. and Mrs. James Harden-Hickey, the American names of the rulers, were the only human inhabitants. Their subjects were the land crabs, sea fowl and snakes with which the place was infested.

Trinidad is an island 100 miles east of Brazil in the South Atlantic. Discovered by the Portuguese and visited by the British, no power had exercised active possession of it at the time "Mr. and Mrs. James I" went there and proclaimed themselves rulers in 1834.

But their reign over this small domain that reeked with the odor of dead fish, ended in January of the following year when the British sent the warship Barracouta there to take over possession.

This wasn't the first time James Harden-Hickey was thrown out of a country. He established a newspaper, Le Triboulet, in Paris in 1878, and was so obnoxious in his criticism of the republican government that he was expelled from France in 1880.

He died a suicide in El Paso, Texas, in 1893, just plain James Harden-Hickey, American citizen.

Audacious Robert Stobo

HOUDINI was famous for his ability to escape from almost anywhere; Sergeant York was noted for his ability to capture enemies by the wholesale; but in pre-Revolutionary days, Mai. Robert Stobo was famous for both.

The French from Canada were constantly arresting Stobo for supplying Washington with confidential information about their plans. But regardless of where he was imprisoned he always managed to escape.

After breaking out of a cell in Quebec, he paddled up the St. Lawrence river with three companions. Camping one day on the bank, he noticed a small boat leaves a French ship and make toward them.

He could easily have retreated into the woods until they gave up the search. Instead he and his companions surprised the party when it landed and captured the group that had been sent out to capture him!

Then, after waiting for darkness, he had the further audacity to order them all into the boat and with guns at their backs, row back to their ship as if he and his party were captives. They were all aboard the vessel before the crew realized that it was Stobo's party, not theirs, that held the guns. Once aboard, he had the upper hand and forced the entire crew of 18 to surrender.

But this was only a good beginning. In command of the ship, he set sail and pulled alongside another French vessel a mile down the river. Without warning, he fired a broadside against the unsuspecting vessel and forced its surrender too. Then he set fire to it.

Proudly he set sail up the St. Lawrence and returned triumphantly to Colonial territory, having performed one of the most adventurous feats of his time.

The pockets themselves are made from four dish towels with bright red borders and are hooked onto the door with brass rings. All the dimensions for cutting, and directions for making are given here in the sketch. If towel by the yard is used, 3 1/4 yards will be required.

These directions are not in either Book 1 or Book 2, so be sure to cut them out for reference. Each of the books contains complete directions for making dozens of other useful things for yourself, your home and to use for gifts and bazaars. Farm Security Administration Families Keep Records of Operations

Farm and home inventories, budgets and accounts are helping over 50 Lincoln County farm families chart their course to greater security through the Rehabilitation program of the Farm Security Administration Mrs. D. T. Whitman Home Supervisor, Alamogordo reports.
Each family receiving an FSA loan for necessary livestock, farm equipment, household goods or other operating items agrees to keep careful records to guide its enterprise and place the farm on a business-like basis. This forms the basis for placing in effect practical farm and home plans that will insure maximum returns for the year's operations.
Starting out with a complete inventory of land, equipment, household goods, livestock, feed and seed, quickly reveals what operating goods will be needed for the next year, determines the farm and home plans and provide for an accurate check of these facilities at the end of the year.
Budgets serve as the road map for the farm and home plans. Income and expenditures based on normal yields and prices for livestock and crop production are carefully estimated to determine how much can safely be spent for new equipment, building repairs, livestock and similar items as well as for clothing, transportation, medical care, food staples, recreation and insurance.

Daily records of receipts and expenditures, compared each month with the farm and home budgets provide a quick check as to the progress being made and indicates where savings can be made or receipts increased for the following month. Adjustments in farm and home plans can

The Livestock Situation

By J. A. McNaughton
 Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, May 1. Marketings of fed cattle during the late spring and summer months are expected to be larger than during the corresponding period a month ago, states the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. The chief reason for this is that in the Corn Belt, cattle on feed are estimated to total 13 per cent more than last year. Large supplies of feed in the Corn Belt are responsible for this, and will also probably influence feeders to hold their cattle longer. It is expected that the proportion of cattle to be marketed from April through June will be larger this year than last, but will be far below the proportion in any of the preceding 10 years. Likewise, the proportion of fed cattle to be marketed after August 1 will probably be the largest in ten years, except for last year. Prices for the better grades of steers and heifers frequently decline during the spring months with seasonal increases in marketing while prices of the lower grades of slaughter cattle usually advance because of small supplies. A factor that is expected to hold the slaughter of cows and heifers down this year is the tendency on the part of cattlemen to increase their herds.

Cattle prices have averaged $2 higher so far in 1939 than in the corresponding period of 1938, partly due to reduced volume in slaughter, and to stronger consumer demand.

Here at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, a new top for 1939 was established during the latter part of April by 1122 lb. steers from the New Mexico State Agricultural College, which sold at $10.50 per cwt. Most fed steers grading good to choice are selling at $9 to $10 per cwt. at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards last year on May 2, the New Mexico College steers also set a new top for the year, bringing $10 per cwt.

The success of the New Mexico College in regularly producing market topping steers is typical of the good work being done by Western universities and experiment stations in developing the most efficient methods of Western feeding. Partly because of the educational work being done, there is a growing movement to pen feed cattle in our western states that in the past have turned out range cattle only. Additional dry-lot feeding will result in a larger, more stabilized supply of well-finished beef, as well as give the farmer a better market for the feed he raises, and an opportunity to build up the fertility of his soil.

Texas Offers Garner for President But 'Cactus Jack' Holds His Tongue

Recuperating Congress Discovers Leader in 37-Year Veteran

By THOMAS WALKER

They used to tell the story of a woman who had two sons. One went to sea and the other became vice president of the United States. Neither was heard from again.

But Cactus Jack Garner is not like Alexander Throttlebottom, the musical comedy vice presidential candidate who ran on the ticket with one Mr. Wintergreen in "Of Thee I Sing."

For six long years the Sage of Uvalde has dimmed his light under a ten-gallon Texas sombrero, but the sombrero itself has been known to official Washington since 1902 so Jack Garner couldn't retire to the abyssal obscurity which traditionally befits a vice president.

Today they're booming this 70-year-old southwest plainsman for President. It's a boom which light thinkers call a slap at Rooseveltian spending, but to congress it means much more. Any member of the Capitol Hill Garner club will explain it this way:

Congress Feels Its Oats.

Since 1933—indeed, for a half century—congress has slowly surrendered its power to the executive branch of government. Today's trend demands a restoration of that power and Jack Garner is the logical veteran to lead the battle. That's about all there's to it, except that the boom has reached alarming proportions in the four months since congress convened.

Down Texas way, where they've had a native son boom of their own for many years, no less than Son Elliott Roosevelt recently told his Texas State Radio network listeners: "John Garner is in the driver's seat right now, well in the lead as a likely Democratic candidate for the presidency in the 1940 election."

The American Institute of Public Opinion shows Garner stock rising from 20 per cent (of all Democrats) last December to 42 per cent in early April. And Emil Hurja, Jim Farley's political statistician, believes that early leaders in popular polls invariably stay in the lead.

How Texas Judges a Man.

What kind of a President would Jack Garner make? Folks down Uvalde way test a man's mettle by the way he behaves on a camping trip, his poker playing and his ability to judge whisky. They give the beetle-browed president of the senate 100 per cent on all three points, and it therefore stands to reason he must have a lot of horse sense.

Economy, for instance. Like most westerners who go to Washington, he's a lawyer and a banker. Jack

CAN HE BE STOPPED?—Nation-wide Democratic polls show Vice-President John Nance Garner holds 42 per cent of the party strength. Political Analyst Emil Hurja believes early leaders invariably hold their lead.

Garner is so successful that he owns a ranch and holds a basketful of mortgages on Uvalde. He drives a Chevrolet of 1930 vintage—his only car—and lives in a plain yellow brick house. When he goes camping with Ross Brumfield, Ben Franklin and Mon Fenley (two garagemen to four rooms, hot and cold water, bath and natural gas heat. They have no basements, no felt under the flooring, and less paint on the weatherboards and roof.

It Fits the Character.

In other words, there are fewer doodads and thingumabobs, which is a good indication of the Garner philosophy. He's old-fashioned enough to question some of the more unusual features of the New Deal. And he's the classic type politician who holds party solidarity above immediate expediency, which explains why he doubts that the Democratic party will hold together unless it regains the confidence of business.

Garner independence didn't assert itself until the winter of 1937 when the vice president demanded action to curb sit-down strikes. It gained strength the following spring when he refused to participate in the Supreme court enlargement fight.

If John Garner is elected President, December 17, 1938, will go down in history as the day his boom started. It was then he returned to Washington and found conservative Democrats trying to "decipher" handwriting on the wall. Did the November election defeats mean a national trend to Republicanism? President Roosevelt thought not, maintaining local issues alone were involved. Jim Farley thought otherwise and it was time for all good Democrats to come to the aid of their party.

Mr. Garner Talks Harmony.

What happened during Jack Garner's two-hour conference with Mr. Farley may never be known. Neither will the 3 1/2-hour discussion with President Roosevelt be divulged, but when Cactus Jack emerged it was quite obvious the nation's No. 1 and No. 2 citizens had been talking party harmony.

Subsequently the Garner club grew. Paths were beaten to its door by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, Treasury Undersecretary Hanes and many a big and little congressman. Sometimes they came singly, at other times in groups, but always they came. It could mean only one thing: Cactus Jack had been chosen leader of the conservative Democrats.

This leadership is a peculiar thing, almost a negative quantity because Mr. Garner doesn't make speeches against his boss, indeed has never committed himself in public. Some arch-New Dealers think he's plotting craftily to overthrow Mr. Roosevelt, but the man who knows him understands better. It's the magnetic charm of a man who's been mellowed and wizened by 37 years in congress, and who today is more than just a vice president but a patron saint as well.

His hobby is helping congressional youngsters get a start in the world. If you've any doubts about this, count noses among Texas' numerically insignificant representation and you'll find a powerhouse. In the house, Marvin Jones heads the agriculture committee, Milton West the elections committee, Hatton Sumners the judiciary committee, Fritz Lanham public buildings and grounds, Joseph Mansfield rivers and harbors and Martin Dies, un-American activities. Sam Rayburn is majority floor leader.

In the senate Morris Sheppard heads both military affairs and campaign expenditures committees while Tom Connally heads public buildings and grounds. Both make their voices heard often in other committees.

The 1940 campaign is still far from cut and dried, but there is no better watchword than ex-President Hoover's admonition in 1929 to a fledgling Washington reporter: "There's one man on Capitol Hill you will always want to watch. He is that red-faced bushy-browed man from Texas, John N. Garner—one of the shrewdest and ablest men in American political life."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Progressive education has been pushed around a lot lately. The Bellwether Lincoln school of New York has been backtracking as other Daniel Boone of the educational wilderness. From the right came the charge that they just let the youngsters fool around with toys and tools, without rubbing in any real education.

Here's a field goal for the other side. At the somewhat ultra Fountain Valley progressive school of Colorado Springs, the boy, David Hare, scion of a highly placed New York family, was given carte blanche to build his education around a $2 camera. The idea, as in all progressive schools of those few years back, was to give the green light to any creative impulse.

But, at 22, here is Mr. Hare with a New York exhibit of camera portraiture, with President Roosevelt among his subjects, and with famous artists and photographers, including Arnold Genthe, cheering him as the "Leonardo da Vinci of the camera." Specifically, they agree that young Mr. Hare has proved indisputably that the camera not only may be, but now is an instrument of the highest artistic expression, and that he demonstrates an absolutely new method and medium of color portrait photography.

His three-lens camera allows the superimposing of color images, in the manner of the color-printing process, and makes possible shading and emphasis in the service of mood. His is the first and only color portrait exhibit in the country. Artists and prominent society folk are boiling with enthusiasm over Mr. Hare's achievement.

He is a tall, shy, personable young man, somewhat inarticulate, as he filters life through a lens, and hesitant in any other form of expression. As was the young Lindbergh. There is the same "we" combination here. Whether he knows the prepositions used with the ablative or whether he stumbled across the "Bridge of Asses" is not revealed.

OUT of the limbo of the past rises "Ole Bill," Bruce Bairnsfather's famous walrus-mustached cartoon character of World war days, to adorn recruiting posters being displayed throughout the United Kingdom. Bairnsfather says his revised character reveals signs of age, but, for that matter, so does the cartoonist.

The slow attrition of 20 years since a slender youngster created "Ole Bill" in a trench in Flanders, has added to his bulk, had taken toll of his thatch of wavy black hair. Bitterness came, too, as when he returned all his war medals to the British government in protest against its treatment of veterans.

Somewhat, despite the wide and varied exploitation of Bill—books, lectures, a play, "The Better Ole"; a syndicated piece and so forth—Bruce seemed to get the short end of it all. He is said to have received some $10,000 out of $300,000 earned by his black and white creation. Fattening on his own review, "Bill," he lost $40,000, and after that event led him straight to bankruptcy. Liabilities—$15,000; assets negligible.

He was born in India of a long line of army forebears and began life as an electrical engineer. Of recent years, what with lecturing, writing and drawing, life is said to have dealt more amiably by him.

SELECTED for transfer from his post as ambassador to Argentina to the government of Gen. Francisco Franco in Spain, Alexander W. Weddell, 63 years old, bears with him such assets as are implied in the long experience of a career diplomat, a man of tact and diplomatic deftness, combined with broad humanitarian sympathies.

Mr. Weddell was educated at George Washington university law school and the University of Catania in Italy. Appointed private secretary to the minister to Denmark in 1906, he entered the consular service two years later as consul at Zamalbar. He spent two years, 1912-14, as consul at Catania, going thence to Athens as consul general.

Retiring from the diplomatic service in 1926, he returned six years ago, filling various consular posts until his appointment as ambassador to the Argentine.

Big Top Hits Trail Once More With Bigger Bundle of Thrills

Shut down last mid-season by bad business, Ringling's "greatest show on earth" expects its biggest run this year thanks partly to Charles LeMaire (left), noted designer who planned unique costumes, air-conditioned big top and restyled it with a blue ceiling, gold and silver center and quarter poles.

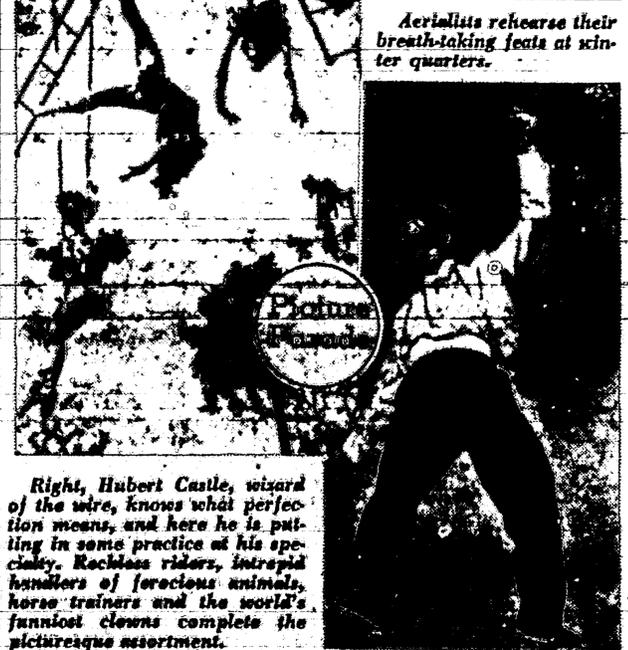

Elephants are always good circus attractions. Madoc, an acrobatic pachyderm, pulled this head-stand from her trunk of tricks at the show's winter quarters in Sarasota, Fla.

Horses are also good attractions. Above, Tex Elmlund, famous trainer of liberty horses, puts a quartet through their paces. Below, Achmed, the performing horse, performs for William Hoyer. He leaps directly up into the air and lands in the same spot. This is probably the first time such a stunt has been accomplished or photographed.

Aerialists rehearse their breath-taking feats at winter quarters.

Right, Hubert Castle, wizard of the wire, knows what perfection means, and here he is putting in some practice at his specialty. Reckless riders, intrepid handlers of ferocious animals, horse trainers and the world's funniest clowns complete the picturesque assortment.

College 'Hides' Chestnut Trees From North Carolina Plague

RALEIGH, N. C.—Like modern Noahs fleeing before the deluge of a deadly blight, botanists at North Carolina State college are rearing young chestnut trees here, tremulously hopeful that the Asiatic blight will not find them out this far from the chestnut's natural habitat. When the scourge has killed the last tree in the highlands and has no further victims to feed upon, the young trees thriving on the campus here will be available for the long task of replenishing the earth.

They will not have long to wait. Two decades ago the chestnut was one of North Carolina's most lordly trees. Highly prized as lumber, it also was valuable for chemical extracts, and for pulp. But chiefly it was beloved because of its fruit—the succulent chestnut. Twenty-five years ago, mountain wagons, drawn by oxen, brought full loads of the chestnuts down into the foothill towns, making trips which lasted a week or two.

Once Faraled Bread. Large, easily cracked (and, alas, oftentimes wormy), the chestnut was almost the official nut of North Carolina. To the Cherokees of the Smokies, the chestnut was a traditional food, and the meat of the nut was dried, ground into a meal and made into bread. Destruction of the chestnut was a calamitous event to the Indians.

About 1904 an Oriental fungus known as Endothia Parasitica appeared on the trees, and with appalling speed swept through New England and entered the South. It attacked the bark of the American chestnut, girdled the trunk, and killed the tree with amazing dispatch. The fungus was very prolific and its seed so light that every breeze wafted it on its lethal journey.

Now in 1936, great splashes of gray trunks in the live forests of the Blue Ridge mountains bear witness to the arboreal tragedy. More than 95 per cent of North Carolina's chestnut trees are dead or dying. A few survive, but rather by chance than resistance; and they, too, are doomed.

Every effort to halt the scourge failing, forestry men at the state college several years ago transplanted healthy trees here, 200 miles from the chestnut belt. After four years, the young trees are healthy and thriving, and their guardians speculate that when the blight has run its course, their thin little line of sprouts will be the progenitors of another mighty chestnut forest in North Carolina.

Navy Represents Second Largest U. S. Expenditure

WASHINGTON.—With the exception of emergency relief agencies, the navy is Uncle Sam's greatest expense, representing an investment of approximately $4,000,000,000 by the end of the next fiscal year on June 30, 1940.

This is the estimate included in the navy's annual expense account, a modal summation of income and outgo whose 86 pages itemize every piece of equipment from live stock valued at $3 to the aircraft carrier Lexington, listed as an item of $44,500,000. Other listings include expenditures for agricultural implements, cigarettes, pills, hay for live stock and airplanes.

A summation of annual naval appropriations since the nation was founded shows a marked increase from the $798,000 spent in 1794. During the entire period since then the navy has cost American taxpayers $16,634,000,000, of which $13,082,000,000 has been spent since 1917 and $3,552,000,000 under the present administration.

MOUNTAIN MAN

A Banner Fiction Serial
By HAROLD CHANNING WIRE

SYNOPSIS

Jim Cotter, forest ranger, had been mysteriously killed in the pursuit of his duties. Gordon Breck, who had been in the cabin over Cotter's job, hoping to avenge his death, "Dad" Cook, forest superintendent, warns Breck that the Tillson brothers, mountain mountaineers, are apt to give him trouble. Before leaving for his mountain station, Breck buys an outfit and decides to attend the public dance run by the Tillsons in Lone Tree. Breck dances with Louise Temple, a beautiful girl, whom he takes a liking. Unknown to Breck, she is being courted by Art Tillson, youngest of the three Tillson brothers. Angered by Breck's attentions to the girl, he picks a fight which ends indecisively when someone sets fire to the hall. Breck and his chief set out for the mountain station. Halfway, they are met by Sierra slim, moss-back mountaineer who is also in the forest service. Breck learns from Sierra that tracking down Jim Cotter's murderer must be done cautiously. Cook Breck and Sierra continue their ascent of the mountains. They sight the Tillsons, returning to their hideaway. Next day, Cook sends Breck and Sierra in one direction to repair the telephone line, while he takes another. Sierra tells Breck more about Louise Temple. "That kid's a thoroughbred," he says. He also believes that Art Tillson is not essentially "bad," but is the victim of circumstances. Breck is directed to go to Rock House Meadows, his permanent base. On his way, he is the target of a pistol shot from an unseen assailant. The bullet misses, but his frightened pack animals bolt and Breck goes in pursuit. Finding a deserted cabin, he takes shelter from the rain. A moment later the three Tillson brothers arrive and Breck hides in the cabin. There he meets Louise Temple who is running her own cattle. Trapped in a narrow canyon before the onrushing steers, Breck's quick action saves her from being trampled. He takes her to his cabin over Art Tillson's protest.

She started at the sound of her own name softly spoken. Her dark eyes met his scorchingly. "Why?" At once Breck realized there was no explicable reason for his assurance. He hesitated and Louise spoke first.

"No pity, thank you. I didn't fish for that. I'm a ranch woman now, and I'm going to make money at it. Sometimes I'm sure that's the most important thing anyway."

Breck answered bluntly from the depths of his own experience. "It isn't!"

"You seem to know."

"I do." She leaned back from the table and away from him. Color of excitement left her cheeks, her eyes held only their level gaze.

"Who are you?" she asked. "Why are you here?" With regret Breck felt their warm contact of common interest slip away. "I'm a forest ranger," he answered, "working at my job."

Outside a thunder of hoofs sounded over the meadow. He stood up and opened the door. The drive was coming through the opposite canyon notch, spreading in a great dark wedge into the bowl until, reaching the drift fence, it halted.

Louise left the bunk and stood beside Breck. "I guess your job has come," she said, "and mine too." "I'll turn this cabin over to you tonight," Breck offered. "You'll rest better." "Don't you think I've learned to rest with my back on a rockpile, if only my face is to the stars?" She smiled, adding, "Thanks just the same. An Indian boy is bringing my camp pack. I always spread it near the creek above this station. Cowhands camp on the meadow."

The boy came before dark, leading a mule and the girl's blue horse. Breck watched her ride up stream until her small figure vanished in a shelter of pine.

For two hours, while he moved his possessions into his room, he could hear a rumble of cattle entering the meadow. It was eight o'clock before the last of them poured in and cowboys' fires began to pierce the shadows.

By nine full dark had come. He went to the telephone hung in its iron box on a post just outside the cabin door, cranked four rings, to call headquarters, and when Cook answered, gave him report. "The drive is in, Dad. I'm going out now and take a swing around."

"All right," the ranger's voice returned. "One circle ought to be enough. Show yourself in a few camps; to let them know you're at it."

Breck hung up, mounted Kit and sat scanning the meadow bowl. Campfires were mostly at the further end, near where the black mass of cattle lay against the drift fence. His eyes swept these camps; then, contemplating back of the station, fell upon one alone and yet far away. Even as he watched, the light blinked as one figure crossed in front of the flames, then another.

He wheeled his horse, stopped. None of his business who was up there. He shouldn't see the girl again tonight. But that feeling of dissatisfaction was still upon him, sully irritable. He moved ahead, reasoning he would only ride by on patrol.

At his side the stream talked noisily, human in its wide range of tone, from low guttural voices to silvery laughter. It covered the sound of his horse's hoofs and also any words that might have come from the camp, until abruptly a man's quick retort broke through. There was anger in its suddenness, and a threat in the silence that followed.

With no hesitation Breck pushed past the thicket and into the girl's camp. He saw Louise sitting on her saddle, chin propped in both hands, Art Tillson standing before her. Tillson whirled as he approached and on his face was jealous rage.

Breck looked at the girl. "How are you, Louise?"

"She's all right!" Art cut in. "Don't need anything now." With scoffing sarcasm, he added, "Thanks for comin' up!" Then he turned his back.

Louise lifted her face to Breck, but he could not read through the shadows upon it. She might be telling him to go.

Art wheeled. "Well?" he snapped. Breck dismounted, dropped his reins and cast a casual gaze about. The girl had a comfortable camp; bed roll laid on dry pine needles, a small fire for cooking lighted between two rocks, and a larger blaze for warmth. When his eyes returned to Art Tillson, he saw a set determination tightening on the boy's jaw.

"If you've been sneakin' around," Art blurted, "I suppose you heard what I said just now."

Breck had heard only indistinct words and the heated retort, but replied, "If you don't want the whole meadow to know your business, don't yell so loud."

Art took a step toward him with fists doubled. "All right, I meant what you heard. Suppose we settle it here. Just take off your badge and I'll muss up that smooth face of yours. There ain't anyone to pull the lights out on us like they did down below. We'll go through with it!"

Breck guessed what he was supposed to have overheard. Some jealous boast before Louise. He looked at young Tillson, more amused than angry. There was little enough to be jealous about. What could be settled by a fist fight? Nothing; unless Louise thought he was a coward.

She stood up. Breck shifted his glance to her, met her eyes and searched them, yet felt nothing in their level gaze.

"Look here, Art," he said at last, "you and I have nothing to settle with fists. One of us gets whipped tonight—tomorrow things are back where we started."

"Yeah, but someone hereabouts would know who's the best man."

Breck laughed. "She can probably tell that without a battle. And if you want to ask her, I'll be on my way." He paused, one foot lifted to his stirrup. "Just one thing. Don't say you backed me down. You'd have to prove that later."

Art shrugged indifferently. Argument had cooled him somewhat and had drawn the flush of rage from his face. He rolled a cigarette, and also went to his horse.

"You're pretty good at talkin', mister," he flung back. "I reckon I'll have to go packin' a dictionary instead of a six-gun!" He mounted in a lilt, spring-doffed his hat to Louise, let his horse rear once and dashed away, proudly erect and showing his full sense of victory.

As Breck swung to his saddle Louise crossed the firelight to him. "You did a fine thing just now, Gordon Breck, and I thank you for it. Don't consider why I say so—you might only make a wrong guess."

With that she turned away and Breck rode from her camp. She had thanked him for keeping out of trouble with Art. She had thanked him for Art's sake! In spite of her asking him not to, he did consider why she had said it; and guessed the only thing possible. She was in love with the boy.

He shook off a stab of jealousy. Why shouldn't she be? Art was handsome. He was hot-headed and looking for trouble most of the time, but no fool. Probably would make something of the cattle business if he had the chance. He wondered if Louise knew about the other business. Of course she did.

Truth came suddenly. She knew and was trying to pull him out!

His hands clenched the saddle horn. Savagely he asked, "What's all this to you? You didn't come for a girl!"

He had ridden preoccupied, with sight dimmed by visions of a small dark face, until now, abruptly, something pulled him back to his job. His horse, going for a time unguided, had with keen instinct followed fresh marks that would have been undiscovered from the saddle.

Breck's first warning was an odor of dust and sweat that pierced the fragrance of pine. He halted, peering ahead. The ridge had come to a short notch, with Rock House Meadow down on the left and a stringer of green running into broken, wooded country to the right. Wind was blowing from the stringer, bearing that unmistakable stench of cows. Still there was no sound of their movement. But when he rode out on the strip of grass, where trees parted and starlight fell through, tracks of many animals were plain enough.

He followed in the direction they had gone, saw the stringer begin to widen, with pines sweeping away and a stream forming itself from boggy ground, then came suddenly to the edge of a small pothole meadow. A black huddle of steers showed against the floor.

Breck approached slowly, circling to pick up the night rider. These animals were too well quieted to be alone. He shifted in his saddle, and then like a trumpet-blast in the silence, an old cow bawled at him.

White faces swung in his direction; horns tossed above the dark mass. It began to move, suddenly, like a great pool of water released. He spurred Kit upward to prevent the drive from going over the

He found J. G. Jackson sitting with his back against a granite boulder, alone, a gray-haired veteran of the cow country, hard-faced in the flicker of firelight. But when he dismounted and came close to the man, that hardness was gone.

Jack's greeting was the usual, "Howdy, Ranger. Have you et?" Breck sat down across the fire from him, laughing. "This sure is a well-fed country. I've just turned down one meal."

"Ain't no call for a man to go hungry up here," Jackson asserted. He paused over lighting his pipe, then added, "No matter who he might be."

For a moment Breck hated the thought of duty. Here was friendliness; a time for listening to an old-timer's yarns. Devil take the cows! Yet the job drove him.

"Jackson," he said, "I have just brought down more than a hundred head from the saddle."

"The old man's eyes twinkled over his pipe bowl. "That so? Hell! You oughtn't to have took the trouble."

"I guess they're strays," said Breck.

"Yeah, I reckon so." "With a night rider behind them." Jackson put down his pipe. "Meanin' which?"

"They were being shoved out of Rock House before the count."

"Any of my stuff among 'em?"

"More than half the bunch." (TO BE CONTINUED)

Diver Takes Walk in Undersea Forest While Searching for Long Lost Vessel

Have you ever wandered alone through the green, silent depths of a dim forest? It's an eerie experience. But it's like walking down a busy street compared with wandering through a nightmarish forest discovered by John Childs—a forest which no man but he has entered, save through the gates of death, observes a writer in Pearson's London Weekly.

Peopled by fearsome monsters, its green silence is enough to strike awe into anyone's heart. For this forest lies 240 feet under water, on the sea-bed off Green Cape, New South Wales, where Childs, a deep-sea diver, was searching for the sunken steamer Cumberland.

Childs found the submarine forest when, losing his bearings, he was dragged over the hard sand of the sea bed. Suddenly he saw, through the dark green water, just ahead of him, what he describes as "the black shape of a fantastic forest," made up of gently-swaying deep-sea undergrowth about 12 feet high.

As he walked into it, mutton-fish and sharks swam around him, and octopuses crawled about on the sands. They came the most startling aspects of all. In the heart saddle. Simultaneously a rider broke from the herd and dashed into the nearest pines. Breck raced after him. Blackness of the forest closed in. He could hear the other horse scramble over rock, tried to follow, came to a granite barrier. A game trail must be there, but it was a blind thing, and he was blocked. Behind him, a stampede had started in the meadow.

Wheeling, he cut back across the upper end as a wave of cattle reached it, and plunging into them, turned the rush downward. Once on the move they were easily handled. As they quieted to a walk, he flashed a light on the flanks of those nearest. The brands were varied, yet one appeared on more than half the lot. J.G.J. Satisfied, Breck fell back, pushed the bunch rapidly down the canyon and in an hour shoved them into the main herd at Rock House.

Campfires still glowed there. Breck went to one close by, swung off and squatted on the ground with a half a dozen cowhands.

A gray-whisker offered greetings for all. "Howdy, Ranger?" He turned to a boy at his side. "Dud, cut off a steak and stick it on the fire."

"I ate awhile ago," Breck said. "Thanks." And to the boy. "Don't bother, son." He traded news a moment before asking, "Who's outfit is the JGJ?"

"JGJ?" the boss repeated. "That's Jackson, John G. Looking for old John G., are you?"

"Yeah," Breck answered, "I'd like to see him. Camped near here?"

A lean, worn finger pointed into the night. "Yonder. See a fire next that rock? That's him."

Breck did not rise at once. He wanted the companionship of these men and a share in their talk. But none spoke; no one looked his way. Presently a cowboy stood up, went to a bed roll and began to pull off his boots. Another followed.

"Well," said Breck, moving over to his horse, "sorry I wasn't hungry. Thanks again."

After he had ridden a short distance from camp, he looked back. The two cowboys had left their bed rolls and were returning to the fire.

He found J. G. Jackson sitting with his back against a granite boulder, alone, a gray-haired veteran of the cow country, hard-faced in the flicker of firelight. But when he dismounted and came close to the man, that hardness was gone.

Jack's greeting was the usual, "Howdy, Ranger. Have you et?" Breck sat down across the fire from him, laughing. "This sure is a well-fed country. I've just turned down one meal."

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Considers the Question: How Often Shall We Eat? Suggests That Some People May Benefit by More Than Three Meals

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

ONE of the questions I am frequently asked is whether or not it's advisable to eat between meals. Any answer must take into consideration a number of factors. It is true that many people experience a desire for food in mid-morning, mid-afternoon or before going to bed. Some begin to nibble as soon as they feel hungry, and often they continue to eat in excess of their needs. Others, trained to more self-restraint, refrain from eating, because they have been brought up with the idea that no food should be eaten except at regular meals.

Unfortunately, it frequently occurs that neither procedure is based upon actual food requirements.

Consider the Day's Food Needs

In arriving at any decision concerning between-meal eating, the day's ration should be regarded as a whole. If the foods served at breakfast, dinner and lunch or supper are carefully chosen, with a view to meeting bodily requirements, there should be no need for many adults to eat between meals.

On the other hand, it should be borne in mind that dividing the day's food into what we Americans so often call "three square meals," is primarily a convenient custom. One reason that it has grown up over a period of years is because it allowed the maximum free time to pursue our various occupations in a number of countries, a fourth meal is an accepted part of the day's routine. No Englishman, for example, would consider going without his afternoon tea; and workers pause in offices, stores and factories, as well as at home, for a brief rest and welcome refreshment.

How Many Meals?

In recent years, several scientists have advanced the idea that some of us may benefit by eating more than three meals. At a leading university a few years ago, two distinguished investigators concluded that smaller and more frequent meals would promote general health and well-being for many types of individuals. They suggested lighter meals, but proposed as many as four, five, or even six feedings a day.

Another well-known authority has performed various experiments which effectively demonstrate that a light additional meal in mid-afternoon, consisting principally of a milk beverage, increased the efficiency of workers and helped to reduce fatigue. Relieving Late Afternoon Fatigue. Many people experience a tired feeling about four o'clock in the afternoon. During the working day, they gradually utilize available food energy, so that by late afternoon, the supply may be greatly reduced—along with both mental and physical energy.

Here is a case where eating between meals is regarded as a decided advantage, provided the food is carefully chosen. A glass of milk and a few crackers, or some other carbohydrate food, will help to renew energy, relieve the feeling of fatigue and bridge the gap to dinner. It must be remembered, however, that the extra meal should be composed of light, easily-digested foods so as not to destroy appetite for the following meal.

Young Children and Elderly People

Children of certain ages, as well as adults, may benefit by a schedule that includes an extra meal. Very young children—in the toddler stage—are frequently given a mid-morning feeding of orange juice, or a mid-afternoon cup of milk with one or two crackers. And some school children also make better weight gains if they pause in the middle of the morning, or take an after-school snack, of fruit juice, or milk, and crackers.

Aged persons often require more than three meals. That is because large, heavy meals might overtax their digestions, and three light meals do not usually provide adequate nourishment. For this reason, nutritionists advise that they have a light, mid-afternoon pickup of a hot beverage and crackers; and perhaps a cup of hot bouillon before going to bed.

Don't Overeat

Thus, it is evident that there are numerous instances when there is justification for departing from the accepted routine. But it must be remembered that as the number of meals is increased, the amount of food taken at each one should be decreased. Otherwise, an undue strain may be placed upon the digestive organs.

Then, too, no matter how the day's food is divided, it must provide all the substances required for sound nutrition. Otherwise, the body will be improperly nourished, no matter how many meals are consumed.

The diet should be built first of all around the protective foods—milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables, which are such an important source of necessary minerals and vitamins. It must also supply protein for growth and repair, carbohydrates and fats for adequate energy, and sufficient bulk or cellulose to promote normal elimination.

Keep the Diet Balanced

Whether you serve three hearty meals and forego eating between times, or follow the plan of providing a mid-morning or mid-afternoon pickup, you should meet the requirements for a balanced diet. This, you will remember from previous discussions, includes a pint of milk for each adult, a quart for every child; an egg for each member of the family, or at least three or four weekly; one serving of a whole grain cereal; one serving of meat, fish or chicken plus a second source of protein, such as meat, nuts or dried beans or peas; two vegetables besides potatoes, one of which should be of the leafy green variety; two fruits or one fruit and one fruit juice.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Fresh Doughnuts.—Put freshly made doughnuts into a covered dish while they are still warm and they will stay fresh longer.

Wash Chamolils Often.—Chamolils in which silver is stored away should be frequently washed, if the silver is to be kept bright.

Keeping Cream Fresh.—Cream will keep fresh for a day or two if placed in its carton in a basin half filled with cold water. Muslin placed over the carton with the ends touching the water will help.

Washing Hints.—Never use soap on white silk. The soap should first be dissolved in water before laundering is begun.

Stains on Fingers.—Pumice stone is useful in removing cigarette and ink stains from the fingers. Simply wet the stone and rub it against the stain.
