Forest Service of Lincoln National Forest

Capitan, N. M., May 22, 1939.

We are in the midst of another fire season. Already we have had several fires, most lightning it is true, but some few are caused by carelessness. Contrary to common belief, most of the fires caused by men are due to the carelessness of local residents rather than tourists. We all know that people depending on the forest resources for a livelihood would not deliberately destroy them and knowing as much as they do about the danger of fire are usually careful, however, there is that occasional lapse which sometimes results in a bad forest fire.

Why not make this resolution? Be sure your cigarette is out and break your match before throwing away.

J. G. Gray, Forest Ranger.

Lace Tunes to This Summer's 'Lovely Lady' Fashion Trends

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S fashions that trend to "lovely lady" types that will hold the spotlight during the coming months. Which brings us at once to the theme of this story—lace, lovely lace! With the new styles going in so enthusiastically for feminine prettiness in hat, gown and accessories, the logical answer needs must be lace, as has been the answer throughout the centuries of fashions that have gone before.

With the craze for lace trims on hats, for billowy masses of lace at throat and at wrist, with the return of the "baby waist" that is exquisitely sheer and entrancingly lace-trimmed, with tailored laces for daytime wear, with sheer pleated laces for dress-up wear, with picturesque period frocks enchantingly detailed in lace, with lace playing a star role in "couture" fashions, with accessories even to gloves and bags and boutonnieres of lace, the current message of lace has become too vast, too all-inclusive for words. You just have to let the blingness of the lace theme grow upon you as the pageantry of present and coming modes pass in review.

The important thing to say about modern laces is that they are so versatile in character that there's a lace for every occasion no matter what the challenge may be. For that matter it is not an exaggeration to say that an entire wardrobe could be planned of lace. There are fabriclike laces for tailored use, stunning laces for afternoon frocks, laces of grand dame elegance for formal evening wear, sheer laces of cobweb mesh that drape up beautifully, two-way stretch laces for bathing suits and so on and so on without end.

The responsiveness of lace to every mood of fashion accounts for the fact that designers are acquiring the lace habit with an increasing enthusiasm as the possibilities reveal the growing tendency of lace producers to supply a type for every need.

Smart Rainwear

That adage, "prepare for a rainy day," ever instilled in the minds of the young, has been taken literally in the realm of fashion. The modern interpretation of stylish rainwear is reflected in the very attractive rain cape here pictured. Surely some little girl's geography book must have inspired this all-America raincape in that it is printed with a map of the United States, rivers and mountains and borderlines included. It comes either with a babushka to match, as pictured, or if preferred you can get it with attached hood.

The illustration presents three distinct types of frocks fashioned of lace. A new medium for the tailored sheer dress which will be found ever so practical for summer wear, is an interesting conventionally patterned two-tone lace as pictured to the left in the group. Bruyere designed this dress which has a grosgrain ribbon belt and two ribbon bows on the shoulder.

Utterly feminine and charming is the afternoon dress shown in the foreground to the right. Vera Borea designs this lovely frock of a delicate but firm lace that delineates big florals with cheer mesh between. The ruffles around the neckline and on the sleeves are indicative of Paris trends. In this dress of horizon blue lace the ruffles lend a beguiling feminine note with no suggestion of fussiness. For summer afternoon wear and informal evenings, there is wide favor expressed for pastel laces.

An interesting feature of sheer afternoon lace frocks is that many are worn over costume slips in contrasting color. Dark laces, very sheer, are also worn over light foundation slips. The monotone effect that demands a matching color for the slip is equally good style.

The model in the center shows an evening dress designed by Molyneux. It demonstrates how pleasingly sheer lace yields to pleated treatments. The straight-fitted sheath skirt is finely pleated, and the dramatic balloon sleeves are likewise pleated. The deep square décolletage is noteworthy.

Pleated Skirt in Summer Fabrics

Skirts and blouses are usually on the wane by the time really warm weather sets in and the lightweight outfit usually is the only opportunity for continuing this casual style. But not so this year, at least if the prominence of spun rayon, linen and cotton skirts are any indication.

The pleated all-round skirt is especially good in summer fabrics, which may account for the increased popularity, and not only the skirt departments but the blouse and summer sweater departments are preparing for much activity.

The practicality of the skirt and blouse or sweater is undeniable. It is easy to have a number of changes at little outlay and there is less necessity of laundering than with a number of one-piece frocks.

Feminine Frills On Shirtwaists

Sportswear is not being neglected, even among the frills and ruffles of the majority of feminine clothes, and the shirtwaist is making a conspicuous appearance, changed in some cases by the addition of pleated and gathered fullness, but still basically the same.

In some instances this style is seen with additional color contrast, among them one shirtwaist dress with rose top and navy skirt, another with a pink and white striped top and pink skirt, and others with pastel shirtwaist frocks with contrasting bright cummerbunds around the waist.

Pocket Interest
Watch for peg-top pockets in daytime and evening skirts.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

The "puller-in," a picturesque, and sometimes quite bothersome, feature of East Side merchandising for many years, has joined the hurdy-gurdy, the sandwich man and a great number of pushcarts. The sandwich men were banished by the simple expedient of a police order. The hurdy-gurdy disappeared on orders of the mayor. The pushcart men in certain sections were put into indoor markets. The "puller-in" was abolished by a recently passed ordinance one which Mayor LaGuardia held should have been passed 20 years ago. Under the terms of the ordinance, anyone who pulls a prospective customer into a store may be fined $50 or sent to jail for 10 days or both. So the "pullers-in," most of whom worked on a percentage, though certain experts were paid a salary of $5 a day, are now scurrying around looking for other jobs.

Away back in the days when the immigrant flood was rolling into New York and the newcomers were settling on the lower East Side, the "puller-in" came into existence. Rivalry among merchants was keen and the immigrant was easy picking. So to get business, men were stationed outside the doors of the various establishments. If a passerby so much as paused, he was gone. Before he knew it, he was inside. If he escaped without making a purchase, he was more or less of a superman. Salesmanship was more than high pressure, it was dynamic, even forceful. In fact, when rival "pullers-in" concentrated on one victim, he not infrequently was so pulled and hauled that the coat was torn from his back. This was especially true in the district along the Bowery from Chatham square to Canal street, known in the old days as "the Bay."

Canal street in later years has been the happy hunting ground of the "puller-in," in fact just about his last stand. On occasions, some cheap Broadway stores have employed "pullers-in" but owing to prejudice against them by other merchants they have had to work with more discretion. But on Canal street they worked just as they did in the days of the immigrants, though not quite so strenuously, depending more on eloquence and persuasiveness than brawn to get a victim into a store.

Speaking of vanished links with the past, there is the Sixth avenue elevated railroad. It is now among the missing, the last of the steel structure that cast various streets in deep shadow having been removed some time ago. Sixth avenue is vastly different to eye and ear from what it was when trains rattled overhead. But what I had in mind was the new view of Trinity churchyard. In former days, it was hidden by the elevated structure. Now it is out in the open. And the resting place of Alexander Hamilton, Robert Fulton and others is now undisturbed by noisily trains.

Now that Sixth avenue has been relieved of what for many years had been an eyesore and a blight on property values, there is no question as to the future of that street. Development is already taking place and more is sure to come since the thoroughfare has emerged into the light. The question is whether the development will be along the lines of Broadway, with the emphasis on amusement, or whether the city will have another Fifth avenue, with the emphasis on fine shops. At any rate, the city will benefit through more taxes because of the rise in property values.

My sympathy goes out to those 11 lads who ran away from a Brooklyn institution to see the circus. None of them had any money but they were confident they could gain admittance without having to buy tickets. In other words, they planned to sneak under the tent. And it wasn't until the police found them after hours of searching that the boys learned that in Manhattan there is no tent, merely a big building with entrances and exits fully guarded.

Business Skill of Girls
Displeases an Educator
HOBERT, AUSTRALIA.—Before the Parents and Friends' association, E. J. Ogilvie, minister of education, deplored the modern tendency of girls who "preferred to punch the typewriter instead of dough."

"I would prefer that a girl relation of mine," he said, "ranked high in domestic science instead of trigonometry and decimals. I would rather see her education directed toward balanced diets and kitchen problems."

California Woman Still Drives Buggy

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.—Whenever Santa Barbarans hear the clop clop of horses' hooves and the roll of buggy wheels they know that Mrs. A. D. Brinkerhoff has come to town.

Persisting in remaining No. 1 old-fashioned citizen, Mrs. Brinkerhoff declares that the very thought of driving an automobile gives her "cold chills."

AROUND THE HOUSE

Heat Brown Sugar.—If dark or light brown sugar is too hard to measure, heat it in the oven, then measure it quickly while it is soft. Store it in the refrigerator or bread box, where it will remain soft.

Prevent Soiled Curtains.—Paint patent clothes pins the color of your decorations in different rooms and use a pair to pin back curtains at night or during showers. This keeps the curtains from being soiled by the screens.

Sharp Kitchen Tools.—One of the most effective aids to speeding up cooking preparations, is to see that paring knives for fruits and vegetables, and knives for trimming up meats and fowl, are kept sharp. Dull knives not only waste an unbelievable amount of time, but they are disconcerting to thoughtful planning.

An Appetizer.—Celery stuffed with crabmeat salad can be used for variety on an appetizer tray.

Burnt Aluminum.—If you burn an aluminum saucepan when cooking, boil an onion in it. The burnt part will rise to the top like scum and leave the saucepan clean.

Life's Battle

WE ARE constantly speaking of the "struggle for life," and calling life "a battle"; but we do not see that our very existence, and the fact that we have a battle to fight, are due to the struggles and triumphs of those who have gone before us. We think that some strange thing has happened to us, and that our lot is an unusually hard one.

But such thoughts are altogether unworthy. Our fathers found life as hard a battle as we do, and if they had not fought we should not be alive to fight. Every stage of human history is the outworking of the same destiny; and it is in fulfilling ours, and entering well into the struggle for life as arranged for us, that we do our part toward perpetuating the moral life of humanity.

We are descendants, and somebody is responsible for us. We are progenitors, and we are responsible for somebody.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

Oilcloth Scallops and Red Rick Rack.

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: The curtains I made from your Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator, are so smart and modern looking that they have given our living room an entirely new appearance. Right now I need an idea that will pep up my kitchen windows. Everything is up to date but the curtains. They look old fashioned. The color scheme is red and white, but please don't tell me to use red and white checked gingham because I have done that before.—J. B."

Alright, no checked gingham! How about some nice crisp dotted swiss with the widest red rick rack you can find for the edge? Then make a border around the top and sides of the window by pasting scalloped red oilcloth on the window frame, using wall paper paste. Cut the oilcloth in strips first, then mortise the corners by cutting them on the bias. Start marking the scallops at the corners, as shown here, making the center top scallop wider than the others. The tie-backs for the curtains may also be made of the red oilcloth.

With the help of Book 1, SEWING, for the Home Decorator, you can make many of the things you have been wanting for your home. Book 2—Embroidery and Gifts, is full of ideas for ways to use your spare time in making useful things. Books are 25 cents each. Enclose 50 cents for both books, and leaflet illustrating 36 authentic embroidery stitches will be included FREE. Address, Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

Work of Stonecutter

Most modern sculptors do not produce their own marble statues. They merely make small models in wax, clay or plaster and then turn them over to a stonecutter or carver for reproduction. Sometimes the sculptor adds a few finishing touches, but these are not necessary when the marble worker is an expert.—Collier's.

Beauty is Contagious

A librarian in a small town, beloved by the whole community, had a vision of making her town more beautiful. Aunt Mary had been librarian for years, and at 70, alert and interested in the world's events, she gently guided the reading habits of many.

She pondered the problem for some time. The village could be made truly beautiful without much expense, if interest could be aroused. "I remember," she once said, "that Mother used to say if she could get one room papered and painted, Father would see how much better it looked, and have the whole house done. I'll try that idea."

So she began with the library grounds. A boy whom she had befriended offered to spade the lawn. The storekeeper contributed the grass seed; a farmer sent fertilizer, and brought some beautiful young spruces and hemlocks for a foundation planting around the walls of the building. A few maples and elms were set out in appropriate spots. A group of boys offered to build a new walk.

Then the storekeeper, seeing the beauty of the library grounds, improved his property. Up and down the village street, the lawns were improved, and shrubs and trees were set out. The selectmen had the common ploughed and reseeded, and more trees were set out. The school committee beautified the school grounds. The Grange held a "bee" after haying was over, and many hands made light work of preparing a picnic ground and park on the shore of the beautiful little pond at the edge of the village.

Soon the village became well known as a town of exceptional beauty, and a Village Improvement Association was a common meeting ground for all who eagerly discussed ways and means of further improving this environment.

Aunt Mary again felt that love for her people which made her a community force for good. "People are good," she would say. "Show them loveliness and goodness, and they are eager to follow."—Christian Science Monitor.

Farm Security Administration

Seven borrowers from the Farm Security Administration in Lincoln County repaid $497.21 on their loans during April, according to G. Melvin Waters, F.S.A. Supervisor for this county. Increased production of livestock products is spreading farm income over all twelve months of the year, besides reducing the risks in farming which accompanied dependence on one or two cash crops, he commented. The farm and home management plans, which form the principal security for F.S.A. loans, emphasize diversification and home production of subsistence needs. Mr. Waters said.

Fact About Cremation
The public health service says that it is not true that in cremation the heart remains unburned. The heart usually burns last, due to the fact that it is the best protected organ in the body. This, of course, depends upon how the heat is applied.

Red Coral Always Prized
It is red coral that is and always has been prized, not solely for jewelry and buttons, but as a charm to bring safety, health and celerity not revealed to the ordinary person. As ancient Gauls rushed headlong into battle, they trusted their safety to their swords, strength and the "magic" coral imbedded in their shields or helmets. Many Italians and Indians regard coral as protection against the "evil eye." The world's red coral comes from the reefs off the Mediterranean coast of Africa, says the Washington Post, and is obtained chiefly by Italian

Chevrolet Schools

Detroit, Mich., May 24.—Chevrolet's service and mechanical department took the initial step this week in a program of service education, which, between now and July 1, will result in the training of some 17,000 dealers' service mechanics, in the latest and most up-to-date methods of keeping Chevrolet cars and trucks in condition to yield maximum satisfaction to their owners.

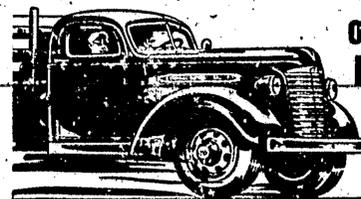

The first of nine product training schools to be conducted by Central Office service and mechanical department executives, for zone service and mechanical personnel throughout the nine Chevrolet regions, was held here all day May 10. Similar meetings will be conducted immediately, in eight other regional cities, to train the company's entire service personnel, in the 45 zones throughout the country, for the task of schooling dealers' service managers.

The service managers conduct similar meetings for the Chevrolet mechanics in their own dealerships every two weeks, using the material shown at the managers' meeting. One or more specific service problems are discussed at each meeting. Reports of these meetings are filed in Central Office, so that the Service and Mechanical Department can quickly distribute throughout the field any specially useful information developed at the sessions.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—An ecstatic young newspaper woman, reporting on Dr. Herbert Fels of the state department, averred that his dream-eyes "reflected the soul of a young Shelley."

John Macfield had some such thoughts in mind when he wrote "Cargoes." This poet, however, seems only trade-balances, and his dreams are precise and statistical.

The news from London is that the barter deal is under way, Prime Minister Chamberlain having informed parliament that negotiations have been opened.

He is a hold-over from the Hoover regime, appointed to his present post by Secretary Stimson, who was impressed with the insight and information in Dr. Fels' book, "Europe the World's Banker."

Dr. Fels is a New Yorker with a Harvard Ph. D. He was professor of economics at the University of Kansas and the University of Cincinnati and director of research for the council of foreign relations.

PHILOSOPHERS getting on in life are apt to think in T-time, as contrasted with our workaday Tau time, both of which are currently explained by E. A. Milne, the distinguished British mathematician.

Such is the 23-year-old (in Tau time) Lucius N. Littauer, whose $3,000,000 Littauer center is dedicated at Harvard.

It was Mr. Littauer who, as a congressman from New York, sponsored and established the United States bureau of standards. It worked out nicely.

Like the late Chauncey M. Depew, he has been honored by a statue in his own town, during his lifetime. The town is Gloversville, N. Y., where, after his graduation from Harvard, he picked up his father's glove manufacturing business.

His father, a native of Breslau, Germany, passed on to him a heritage of Carl Schurz liberalism—which perhaps could be fittingly measured against Fritz Kuhn's imperialism.

Yugoslavia Is Europe's New Tinder Box; Minority Problem May Force Its Collapse

Repetition of Czech Coup Seen for Dictators; Italy's Turn Now.

By JULES DORMIER

Last year it was Czecho-Slovakia. This year it's Yugoslavia. The cast is different, the locale changed. But the drama is the same—a stubborn minority versus the strong central government.

This is what happens when uninformed treaty makers disregard centuries of tradition, tossing cats and dogs in the same pen.

Just as Sudeten Germans could legitimately complain that Czechs and Slovaks were purposely subduing them, so can Yugoslavia's Croats claim discrimination on the part of the more powerful Serbs who run the Belgrade government.

But the pressure of war sometimes makes strange bedfellows. In 1917 the Croats—anticipating break-up of the Austro-Hungarian empire—joined the Slovenes and Serbs in formation of a new state in which all three groups were to have equal constituent rights.

Yugoslavia's army has 202 generals, only two of whom are Croats, though there are about 6,000,000 Croats and 9,000,000 Serbs in the nation. Croats have no hand in running the state—and they say—regarded by Belgrade as good for only one thing: paying taxes.

Last December came the crowning blow. At the regular election Dr. Matchek's forces won at least 90 per cent of all votes cast by Croats, but were not given seats because Yugoslav election laws—allegedly "framed" by Belgrade politicians—provide that the party winning a bare majority automatically gets two-thirds of the seats in parliament.

Feeling that his regularly elected deputies have a right to speak for the people, Dr. Matchek founded an extra-legal Croatian national assembly which sits at Zagreb and refuses to recognize the present Yugoslav government.

A settlement was almost reached April 27 when Dr. Matchek claims he signed an agreement with Premier Dragisa Cvetkovich under which Yugoslavia would be divided into three autonomous provinces as shown on the accompanying map. Dalmatians and Croats would form one group, Slovenes a second, and the rest of the nation a third state in which would dwell a confusion of Moslems, Serbs, Montenegrins, Albanians, Bulgarians and Rumanians.

SIGNS OF TIMES

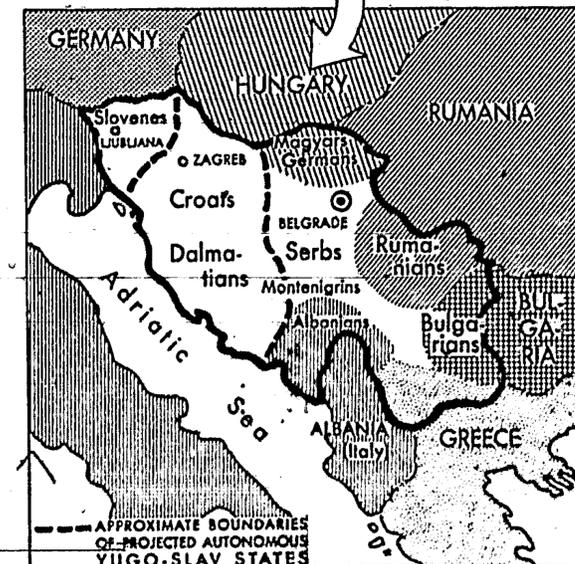

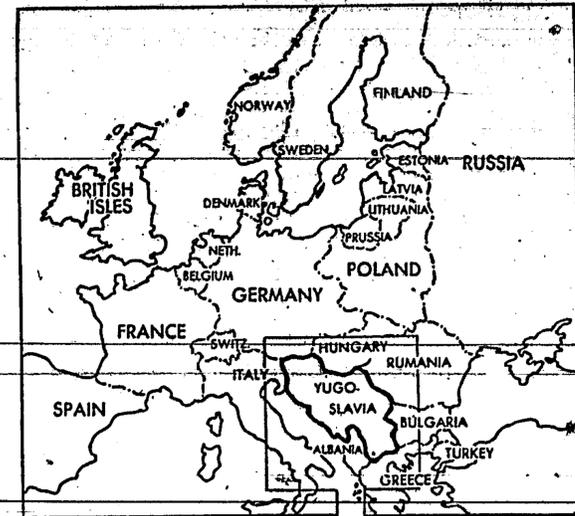

- 1. 'Luxury' Goods on Upswing
2. 'Good' Music Is Coming Back

MINNEAPOLIS.—Pianos, phonographs and records have renewed the sensational comeback which they began in 1934 and 1935, with the American public "going in" for good music and higher priced records; sales are running 20 to 40 per cent ahead of last spring and are close to 1937 levels, according to a quarterly study of demand for luxury and semi-luxury goods by Northwestern National Life Insurance company.

The public are also buying more luggage, furniture, furs and costume jewelry than this time last year, the company figures for 238 department stores show. Also men's clothing, which usually leads the trend of department store sales, made its best comparative showing in March, with sales 10 per cent over March of a year ago.

Sporting goods sales still lag behind the spring of 1938, but are gaining. Favorable golfing weather is having its effect, and the centennial of baseball's beginnings has resulted in gains exceeding 25 per cent in that field.

Classics Revived. Dollar sales of phonographs and records for March climbed to within 1 per cent of March, 1937, and exceeded March, 1938, by 40 per cent. With the sales tempo speeding up in April, preliminary figures indicated that that month would ex-

TROUBLE AREA—Map shows Yugoslavia, with minority groups which might be "liberated" by Greece, Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary in case internal revolt developed from the Croatian issue.

This plan for a strong federated state might have saved Yugoslavia but Prince Paul, senior regent until 15-year-old King Peter comes of age, is said to have rejected it.

Stages Is Set for Italy. This is the typical powder-keg situation which aggressive Germany and Italy love to "solve" by sending in troops to "keep peace."

Unsettled Settlement. A settlement was almost reached April 27 when Dr. Matchek claims he signed an agreement with Premier Dragisa Cvetkovich under which Yugoslavia would be divided into three autonomous provinces as shown on the accompanying map.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Pianos, phonographs and records have renewed the sensational comeback which they began in 1934 and 1935, with the American public "going in" for good music and higher priced records.

Pianos shipments of 25,548 instruments in the first quarter of this year far exceeded the 19,911 total for the first quarter of 1938, and almost equaled the 1937 figure of 25,649 pianos shipped in the first three months of that year.

Though department store sales of luggage were down 1.4 per cent for the first quarter compared with a year ago, March was up 7.4 per cent over March of 1938.

Classics Revived. Dollar sales of phonographs and records for March climbed to within 1 per cent of March, 1937, and exceeded March, 1938, by 40 per cent.

ADVENTUROUS AMERICANS

By Elmo Scott Watson

Immortalized by a Dam

BONNEVILLE dam in the Columbia river perpetuates the memory of an adventurous explorer who was both a great success and a great failure. In 1832 French-born Capt. Benjamin Bonneville of the United States army obtained a leave of absence to engage in a fur trading expedition on condition that he explore the trans-Missouri West and obtain information concerning the Indians, the topography of the country and its economic possibilities.

Two years later he set out at the head of a party of 110 men. Commercially his venture was a complete failure. He built forts in such poor locations that the frontiersmen called them "Fort Nonsense." Some were so high in the mountains that they were cut off from the outside by the first snows of winter.

After his return to the East he met Washington Irving at the home of John Jacob Astor and the result was the book "The Adventures of Captain Bonneville" by that famous writer. The book was a "best seller" of its time but it did not help Bonneville's reputation greatly.

Bonneville proved them wrong by his conduct during the Mexican war which won for him a citation for gallantry in action. In 1832 he became commandant at Fort Vancouver which stood 30 miles down the river from the dam that now bears his name.

'A Message to Garcia' OUT in California lives an 82-year-old retired army officer whose name was once on every American's lips.

Rowan proved that the confidence of his superiors was not misplaced. Making his way through the steaming, insect-infested jungle, drinking germ-filled water, living on such food as he could find and in constant danger of capture and execution by the Spaniards as a spy, Rowan found Garcia, got the information he sought and safely made an equally perilous return trip.

Rowan was taken to the White House where he received the thanks of the President and promoted to the rank of lieutenant-colonel of volunteers. But the thing which made him famous was an editorial, written by Elbert Hubbard, for his magazine, the Philistine, the following year. This editorial, published under the title of "A Message to Garcia," was translated into 20 languages, reprinted all over the world and is one of the best known pieces of English prose ever written.

As for the man who inspired it, not until 1923 did he receive public recognition from his country in the form of the Distinguished Service Cross for carrying the "message to Garcia."

Death Valley Samaritan LOU WESTCOTT BECK went into Death Valley to seek wealth but almost perished. He stayed there to devote his life to saving others.

Beck became known as the "Good Samaritan of Death Valley," piling up rocks and putting signs on them directing prospectors to water holes. He went out searching for those who were known to be lost and guided them to safety.

For 13 years, aided only by Rufus, his Newfoundland dog, Beck braved the hardships of the Colorado and Mojave deserts, as well as Death Valley, and saved between 300 and 400 lives. In 1917, although warned not to by his dog, Beck drank from an infected spring and never recovered from the resulting illness.

Although comparatively unknown today, Lou Westcott Beck is probably one of the most self-sacrificing of all the great American adventurers.

CHAPTER XIII

In the morning Breck found his telephone dead and patrolled the line until mid-day before discovering the break. Returning to Rock House late afternoon, he was halfway across the meadow when he caught a movement in the pines around his cabin. A horse whinnied. His hand had learned the habit of dropping to his gun. He went on, alert and tense in his saddle. Shadows about the station hid the animal tied at his rack until he approached within a short distance, then he saw the blue color. A moment later Louise rose from the log where she had been sitting and took a step to meet him.

He swung down beside her happily. "I didn't expect a visitor, or I would have left the cabin unlocked. How are you, Louise?"

"Oh, able to be about."

There was but a momentary warmth in her greeting, then she seemed to draw within herself. Her manner was again casual as she said, "I came this way to tell you something that is really none of my business."

"What?"

"There's to be a meeting tonight in Jackson's camp at Bear Trap. I rode that way coming up from the Potholes, and talked to JG himself."

"A cattle meeting?" Breck asked.

"Of course."

He frowned. A meeting of cattlemen was not his affair. They would not welcome him, uninvited. He said so.

The girl shrugged. "All depends on how you go into it. But there, I thought you probably wouldn't be interested." She moved toward her horse.

"Louise!" Breck caught her and turned her about until she faced him. "Tell me, be wide open for once, is this something I ought to have a hand in?"

"It isn't on the ranger books," she answered, "but it is something you ought to have a hand in, very much." She paused, hesitating over her next words, then finished gravely, "You could do a lot tonight—or nothing, I wonder. . . ."

Abruptly she gathered her reins and mounted. Then in the instant before she wheeled her horse and loped away, she looked down and completed her thought. "I wonder if I have judged you right."

Breck lost no time in making a decision. He would take Louise's advice and go to Bear Trap, though she had not said what the meeting was about, nor why he should have a hand in it. Some way to turn the cattlemen back into his friendship? They were in trouble?

He fed Kit, cooked a hasty meal, and in half an hour was headed into the Bear Trap trail. Dusk closed the forest about him, bringing that sense of loneliness so often a part of the day's end. It was increased tonight. He thought of Louise. She too at this moment was riding alone somewhere across the mountains. Safe? Of course. She was a mountain girl.

His horse clattered on up the ridge. Breck continued to think of her, until suddenly in glancing about, he was swept by the feeling that he had just become awake. Louise must have ridden miles out of her trail if she had come this way. She might have waited hours at the station to give him a chance with JG.

She cared enough to do that! She believed he could prove himself one of the men.

"Idiot!" he flared, "you didn't even say thanks!" Impulsively he wanted to wheel Kit and follow her. He looked up through the pine tops at the stars, seeing a strange new beauty in them. Moonlight and shadows lay in soft lace patterns underfoot. Swiftly a yearning possessed him. More—there was a great deal more he could say to her tonight!

He turned upon himself. "You roughneck, you'll do well to keep your head on one job at a time!"

About midnight he rode onto the table-land of Bear Trap and was guided to Jackson's camp by a solitary point of light. He approached the cabin, then even before he could dismount, the door opened a crack and a voice demanded: "Who's there?"

"Ranger," Breck answered. He swung to the ground, secured Kit to a tree and moved toward the chink where JG peered out. "Howdy, Jackson," he said casually, "how's everything?"

Breck felt a steady scrutiny, then the door opened. He entered and at once a dozen faces confronted him, some questioning, others openly glaring. None were faces he could recognize, though no doubt they had all been at the count and were for the most part cowhands employed by Jackson.

They sat about the room, all occupied in a singular way. That was what Breck saw first. Guns were out; sixshooters, assembled, loaded; sixshooters, mostly, though some were rifles. Unopened boxes of cartridges lay on the table; enough, Breck observed, to equip this band of a dozen men for a long battle. Rags littered the floor. An odor of oil and grease mingled with cigarette smoke. The room, after he had entered, turned uncomfortably silent.

Jackson spoke first. "Grub in the box yonder, if you're hungry. We've had ours."

"Thanks," said Breck. "I've had mine too." He crossed to the stove, held out his hands to warm them, then turned abruptly to face the gathering.

"What's up, Jackson?"

About the room men put down their guns, and sitting motionless, waited for their range-boss to speak. The old man moved nearer the stove. "It's business," he began, "plumb serious, maybe, and you oughtn't to have come riding into it." He paused. Behind him, the men took up their jobs of gun-cleaning. "You oughtn't to have come," JG repeated, "because you can't stop us."

Breck remained silent. There was a grim tenseness in the room, something that went well with the odor of fresh ammunition and the click of hammers being drawn and let again into place. He knew the an-luck, the drift fence would be ordered moved and the permittees given their full measure of range land. Meanwhile cattlemen on government meadows were losing money.

He felt the dozen faces turned toward him, and recognized the drama of this moment. The whole thing appeared as a stage; the men with dark, shadowed faces, singly or in groups. Their guns. The dim lamplight. The closed door and blackness outside the windows. Yet, looking once more into J. G. Jackson's determined eyes, he knew this was a drama of real life, and death if need be.

His next movement was no gesture of the stage. He drew out his gun, put it on the table, then pushed out a seat and sat down. Without a word a man at his elbow offered cleaning rags and oil.

"Well now, by God!" said old JG. "Boys, let's get along!"

West from Bear Trap meadow rose the high, rounded top of Black Mountain, and up its wooded slope, shortly after midnight, rode a line of men who went with no words spoken between them. Breck found Jeff to start right behind us and keep comin'. We'll have the fence down before the burch gets there." He named three others to accompany the boy. They rode over to join the men already holding the herd. The rest of the party continued up the mountain.

Breck glanced over a dim mass of backs in passing. The cattle were quiet enough now, but once get them on the move they would be hard to stop. That was Jackson's plan. Cut the fence. Start the stampede upward. Spread his animals on the disputed grass lands before the Middle Fork outfit could turn them back.

"Looks like we ain't been discovered yet," the man observed, riding close.

They went on in silence. Presently Breck put a question that had been growing in his mind. "Will you hold your men back while I go up to the fence?"

"For what?"

"To do the job of cutting. I'm a government man. I'll take the responsibility and answer for what happens tonight."

Jackson's oath came across the dark between them. "Damned if togetherness against him and weighed his next words carefully.

"It isn't on the ranger books," she answered.

"Can't we get on the same level, Jackson? You placed me wrong at the count. I understand. From your angle of things I looked bad. Take my word when I say all that is going to be explained, and right now meet me wide open. Will you?"

Slowly Jackson's expression changed. "You seem wanting to be on the square, sure enough," he admitted, "and for the time being I'm takin' your word. But what I said, goes. You can't stop us tonight we're goin' out to do a little fence bustin'. Up behind Black Mountain where the forest boundary ends and the Middle Fork range country begins. Anything been said to you about that fence?"

"No," Breck answered.

"Well, it ain't within a mile of the forest line. True boundary takes in the whole of Black Mountain, but the drift fence was put along the backbone. That was five years ago and we didn't think much of it at that time. I guess the big fellows that own Middle Fork ranch had something to do with the wrong survey. Anyhow, years have been dry lately and up there is a grazing strip a mile wide and several long that belongs in my permit."

"Why hasn't the fence been moved?" Breck asked.

Jackson gave him a wry look. "You're sure new in the government! Startin' three years ago I've tried to have it done. Hell! I reckon my paper ain't got through the first office yet."

"But I think Cook—"

"Cook's all right," Jackson broke in. "Ain't his fault. He's got to wait for the supervisor, and the super has to wait for someone else, and God knows when any action will be done. Meanwhile we're short of grass. Well, what do you say? Ain't three years long enough to wait?"

Breck nodded.

"We've got three hundred head on a shelf this side of Black Mountain," Jackson continued. "We're ridin' up there tonight, and come dawn we'll have that bunch pushed through the fence and scattered on top where one man or two can hold them this season." He glanced around the room at his men before finishing. "Maybe the Middle Forkers know what's comin' off. If they try to stop us there's goin' to be some shootin', that's all."

Breck's decision was made by the time Jackson ended his argument. He knew government methods. In another five years, with himself in a position near the lead, with J. G. Jackson's broad back next ahead. They climbed steadily, passed the first slope and came onto a more level shelf-like part of the mountain. Here a distant sound came into the pad of their horses, increasing, until at the moment of emerging from pines onto an open space, Breck caught the restless tramp of hoofs and low crooning of men.

Jackson halted the line and rode on. Two figures met him before he reached the herd and after a moment he came back.

"All right so far," he offered, as his cowhands gathered around him. "Now then, we've got to cut the wire first. No use crippin' up any of these critters if we can help it. Some of us will have to stay here and help Jeff and Wade push the bunch across. Johnny, you for one, trot over there."

Instantly a young voice burst out in protest. "Aw hell, JG, let me go up in front!"

"Time enough for fightin'!" Jackson told him. "Get along now. Tell that ain't white of you, Ranger! But you're riskin' too much."

"My job, you mean?"

"Hell, no, your neck! Those Middle Forkers are a hard lot." "Perhaps they don't know as much as you think," Breck insisted. "They aren't here, or they would have stampeded your cattle from the shelf. I'm going ahead anyway."

Jackson did not answer. In a moment he held up one hand, checking his line of cowpunchers. "All right, Ranger," he said, "you go up. We'll wait here. The fence is just as you top the ridge."

Breck moved on in the dark, climbing until timber ended and the slope became an open grass-covered dome of the mountain. Here the fence, four barbed wires stretched on posts close together, ran lengthwise along the ridge. Halted by the barrier, he sat for a moment listening, and even as the pad of his own horse ceased, he heard the sound of others approaching rapidly below him.

Once Candy Was for the Kings and Very Rich; Is Not 'Bad for Teeth'

When grandfather was a boy he bought candy at the general store. Selection was easy, for there were few varieties, mostly hard candy. Today there are more than 2,000 different kinds, states a writer in the Philadelphia Record. Today candy is made by the hundreds of tons, when once it was made by the ounce. More than a billion pounds are produced in the United States each year, enough to supply every man, woman and child with a pound a month. Once candy was for the kings and the very rich. Today everyone can afford candy.

And it seems almost yesterday that mothers forbade candy to children "because it's bad for you," and that candy was "bad for the teeth." Both were superstitions, and both have been exploded by science.

As to its being "bad for the teeth," scientists at the University of Michigan ended that legend in a year's test with white mice. At the end of a year those fed candy had no more tooth cavities than the ones not fed any.

While the basis of all candies is sugar, so many other ingredients are used that a pound box of assorted candies may represent products from 29 different countries, and virtually every continent. American candy-makers use more than a million tons of sugar a year. It comes from Cuba, the Philippines, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and Louisiana. Beet and maple sugar are domestic products. Candy-makers use 400,000,000 pounds of corn syrup each year. The American industry uses 200,000,000 pounds of nuts a year.

Hard candy is made of sugar, water, corn syrup and flavor. Nougats are made with egg whites. The most important ingredient in caramels and toffee is milk. Butter, corn syrup, sugar and flavoring are included. Marshmallows are made almost entirely of gelatin. Licorice is made from licorice paste, extracted from the licorice plant, and sugar and flour. Chocolate penny candies are made of sugar, corn syrup, gelatin, water and chocolate.

Bauxite, Aluminum Oxide
Bauxite is over 50 per cent aluminum oxide, but for years chemists were unable to find a practical way of extracting the aluminum. Bauxite melts at over 2,000 degrees; at that temperature, any iron or steel refinery tank would itself melt.

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Role of Phosphorus In Nutrition; Tells Where to Obtain This Mineral

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THERE are at least 11 different mineral salts which are essential to the structure or functioning of the human body. But of these, only four—calcium, phosphorus, iron and iodine—require the careful consideration of the home-maker. That is because a diet which furnishes adequate amounts of these four will automatically provide the others. But when the diet is deficient in any one of these four minerals, disastrous consequences may result.

It is therefore of the utmost importance that every homemaker should know something of their functions, and what foods supply them. In this article, we shall deal specifically with phosphorus.

Versatile Phosphorus

It has been said that if the biographies of the elements could be written, that of phosphorus would be the most interesting of all. That is because there are 14 different ways in which compounds of phosphorus may function in the body. In fact, it is doubtful if any other inorganic element enters into such a diversity of compounds or plays an important part in so many functions.

This mineral is indispensable for all the active tissues of the body and likewise helps in regulating the neutrality of the blood. It is found abundantly in nerve tissue. Needed for Teeth and Bones.

Its most significant role, however, is to team with calcium in giving rigidity to the bones and teeth. Approximately 90 per cent of the total phosphorus of the body and 99 per cent of the calcium are found in the bones and teeth.

Both these minerals are required in generous amounts, but almost twice as much phosphorus as calcium should be supplied every day. Moreover, children should have about one-and-one-half times as much phosphorus as adults, to meet the requirements for growth. The muscles and soft tissues need phosphorus as well as the bones, and in the dietary of the child, they must share with the bones, the phosphorus that is provided by the food. Hence, the greater need for this mineral during childhood.

Phosphorus and Rickets

If a child's diet is deficient in phosphorus or calcium, or if conditions are not favorable for their proper absorption, rickets will occur. This devastating nutritional disease may result in deformities of the chest and pelvic bones, as well as the more familiar bow legs and knock-knees.

Investigators have spent many years in discovering how to prevent and cure this disease which has made life miserable for so many children and which has far-reaching effects that carry over into later life. For example, adults who have bow-legs or a pigeon breast as a result of childhood rickets, are always self-conscious because of their defects. And motherhood may be far more difficult for young women whose pelvic bones were deformed by rickets in their early years.

A Low-Phosphorus Diet

It was found that rickets may be associated with a low-phosphorus diet, even when the calcium content is high. And investigations also determined that there is a seasonal tide of blood phosphorus which corresponds to the amount of available sunlight. This led to the realization that sunlight—which we now know helps the body to manufacture vitamin D—is closely related to the proper utilization of phosphorus. And today it is well established that rickets can be prevented, or cured, by a diet containing liberal amounts of phosphorus, calcium and vitamin D. Vitamin D can be obtained from direct sunshine, but where this is not available in adequate amounts, cod-liver oil, irradiated foods, or those fortified with a vitamin D concentrate will supply this necessary substance.

Make Use of Sunlight

As we approach the season when the greatest amount of sunshine is available, homemakers should see to it that not only the children, but every member of the family spend as much time as possible in the sunlight. This will help to promote the proper utilization of phosphorus and calcium. And both teeth and bones will benefit, as well as the general health.

Where to Find Phosphorus

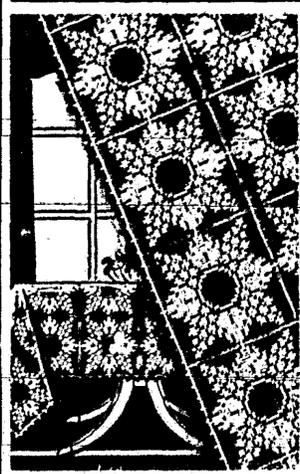

Every homemaker should acquaint herself with the foods that supply phosphorus most abundantly, so that she will be prepared to include this mineral in the diet every day. Egg yolk and dried beans are both valuable sources of phosphorus. So are whole grain cereals and lean meats. In fact, cereals and meats have this in common—both are rich in phosphorus and deficient in calcium. Whole grain breads are likewise important for their phosphorus content. And on a percentage basis, cheese ranks very high as a carrier of this mineral.

Cocoa also contains a large percentage, though it must be remembered that, as a rule, only small quantities of cocoa are consumed at one time. Many nuts, including almonds, peanuts, pecans and walnuts, furnish significant amounts. And this mineral is found in dried fruits such as raisins, figs and prunes, and in much smaller quantities in vegetables, such as spinach, cauliflower, string beans, carrots and Brussels sprouts.

Milk supplies phosphorus, though not in such generous amounts as calcium. However, if you follow the rule of a quart of milk daily for every child and a pint for each adult, you will contribute materially to the phosphorus and calcium content of the diet.

HISTORIC MANSIONS FAST DISAPPEARING

Soon Photographs Will Be Only Record of Them.

New Orleans, La.—Richard Koch can't save his charges so he is taking pictures of them instead.

Koch, head of Louisiana's division of the WPA historic American building survey, is making records and drawings of the state's old plantation homes and historic buildings before they fall to pieces from age and neglect. He has photographed 150 of them.

The days of Louisiana's great plantation mansions are a thing of the past. The old homes, some of them built of marble and having 75 rooms, are crumbling. Their window panes are smashed and their roofs caved in. Their beauty, however, still is apparent. It is Koch's job to record it for the congressional library in Washington.

The popular conception of the Louisiana cane country is one of great manor homes with fields of cane stretching out from all sides, the planter established on his front porch sipping a mint julep. All that has gone. Today most of the cane is raised on huge, highly commercialized and mechanized plantations greatly exceeding the production of the state's 9,549 small farms averaging 100 acres each.

There are a few scattered plantations on the Mississippi river in Louisiana which are kept up in their antebellum style, Koch points out, but for the most part they have been divided into small farms. Usually amid these farms, with their humble dwellings, stands an old plantation home—magnificent in its decay, but useless to the small farmer.

Just as the ruins of the Forum at Rome and the Acropolis at Athens were caused by poorer people who "borrowed" their stones and wood to build smaller residences, so are the old Louisiana mansions being stripped of their woodwork and masonry.
