Funeral services were held in Capitan last Saturday morning, followed by interment in the Carrizozo cemetery.

She is survived by one brother, Mr. William Peters and two sisters, Mesdams Burl Sears of Carlsbad and Dennis Cooper of Capitan. She enjoyed a wide acquaintance and was highly esteemed by everyone. Deepest regret is felt for her untimely death.

Meets Good Roads Committee

Dr. R. E. Blaney, Carrizozo, New Mexico came down to attend the joint meeting of the Chamber of Commerce and the Gateway Club. Dr. Blaney conferred with the Good Roads Committee of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce relative to a meeting to be called in the near future at Corona, New Mexico sometime in October.

Highway 54 is unquestionably the shortest route from the east-central states starting at Rastoul, Illinois where it connects with several important East and West, North and South transcontinental highways and ends at El Paso, Texas.

There still remain several short sections of this highway unpaved and it will be the purpose of the delegates attending the Corona meeting to use their influence with state highway commission having unpaved sections of this road to put them on the progress of paving at an early date. The completion of this highway will bring more tourists to the Southwest, and the passing through the many towns along the road too will be of tremendous value to the communities.

We therefore, earnestly urge that every community get behind this movement at once. The president of the El Paso Chamber of Commerce, Mr. W. H. Peterson, has pledged his fullest support to this movement.

Dr. Blaney announced that an additional 450 feet had been granted Skousen Bros., which will mean a good connecting link with the old road at end. —Contributed.

John E. Harrison

Relatives here have been notified of the death of Mr. John E. Harrison, which occurred in a hospital in Los Angeles on Aug. 28, after an illness of three months.

Mr. Harrison was born in this county at Lincoln on May 16, 1883. He lived here and at Alamogordo until his departure for California in 1925.

In September 1905, he was married to Miss Esther Aguayo, who preceded him in death, a year ago last June.

He became ill last February and recently underwent an operation from which he died.

Mr. Harrison was a printer and was employed by a large printing firm there until recently.

For years he had been working at odd times on a die, that would have been perfected had he lived a little longer. His invention had been tested by the Los Angeles Examiner, and they wanted to buy the device but he decided to finish and patent it himself.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Nabora Harrison, who made her home with him and also one daughter, Mrs. Victor Valencia; and five sons, Albert, Alphonso; Eugene, Louis and Arnold, all of whom live in Los Angeles.

Burial was in Los Angeles beside his wife.

Mrs. John Guteknecht of Chicago will arrive this week to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Ziegler. Mrs. Guteknecht and her husband are just back from Europe; and consider themselves quite fortunate to be back, as so many other Americans were unable to engage passage in the present stress. They had engaged their passage on the steamship line which took them over so when things became unsettled they returned at once.

Woman's Club Cake Walk

The Woman's Club of Carrizozo really staged some excitement last Saturday night, when they furnished an unusual Cake Walk in front of the post office. Charges were 10c per walk. Each cake brought practically $2.00. Every body in town was there and most everyone walked one or more times. The ones who decided to walk until they won a cake, came in for some badinage from the crowd but eventually won a cake; also the club gave the orchestra a cake, and the painter who chalked off the circles and numbers received one.

BANKING LOOKS AHEAD

Forward March

AMERICA will march steadily ahead only when its many groups are ready to fall in line and keep step, in a spirit of mutual confidence and cooperation.

NO one group—farmers, laborers, employers, or any other—can go its own way without regard for the rest, and expect to see America continue to grow and prosper.

FOR it has been repeatedly demonstrated that we can go forward only when we pull together. This bank urges cooperation as the key to progress. We are always ready and willing to do our part.

'Last Red Hot Mama' Wins Labor Battle

The weighty conference between Miss Tucker, last of the "red-hot mamas," and president of the American Federation of Actors, and Harry Richman, must have been successful, for shortly afterward the American Federation of Labor ended a labor dispute centering around Miss Tucker. The A. F. of L. ordered that her organization be reinstated into the Associated Actors and Artists of America, from which it had been previously expelled. The decision was "pleasing" to Miss Tucker.

Using hoist-moving technique, workmen move the original 300-inch glass disc of a Corning, N. Y., glass works through a gap which was cut in a railroad trestle. Strange Facts

200,000 Descendants Sat on Their Liquor Simple Life on Coins

The total number of descendants of any colonial family that settled in this country between 1620 and 1640 is estimated to be more than two hundred thousand.

England's aleconners, who practiced their profession of testing ale and beer up to a few years ago, determined the sugar content by pouring some of the liquor on a wooden stool and then sitting on it. If their leather breeches stuck, they considered the brew satisfactory.

All fees of American attorneys are not left to their discretion. The United States Code, for example, prohibits a lawyer from charging his client more than $10 for prosecuting and obtaining a claim for a pension.

Today many oil tankers plying the West coast do not have to "come in" for loading, reports Collier's. They get their cargoes through a buoy-marked flexible hose attached to a huge pipe that runs out into the Pacific from a point near San Luis Obispo.

Instead of dignifying their new coins with engravings of political heroes, the Irish make them gay with pictures of pigs, hens, plants, and other farm produce. Collier's.

Black or Print Jersey Frock Is Ideal for Immediate Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ABOUT the grandest thing that has happened in the land of fashion is the dress of either silk, rayon or wool jersey. In the rayon jerseys that are printed in discreet patterns the career girl who must live a studio or office life has met her ideal. These new dot-patterned or striped suave sleek jersey frocks have a way of laying siege to your heart the moment you see them. And what's best of all they "improve on acquaintance," when you discover how slenderizing they are to the figure and how they give you the well-dressed appearance all through the active hours of the day.

Not the three jersey frocks in the picture. Choose the one you like best and then confide in your dealer that you feel the urge for a jersey frock—slenderizing within and forthwith you will be shown a collection of jersey dresses, each and every one of which will impress you with its charm and chic.

The frock centered in the picture is a refined and fetching model, the kind that will grace office, schoolroom and studio to perfection. This dress is made of black crush-proof (emphasis on crush-proof) black rayon jersey printed in white pin dots. This model is charming in wine or dark green with white dot print. The trimming is white pique and the smart hat is of black satin. Wear this frock and you will be graciously gowned for any daytime occasion.

Very popular this season is polka dots overprinted on checks. Can you conceive of a more intriguing dot-on-check print than a black smooth lustrous rayon jersey patterned in black and white check, splashed with huge dubonnet red polka dots as pictured to the left in the illustration? Just such eye-appealing effects can be had in a long list of color combinations. The dress buttons from neckline to hem. A crushed black patent waistband adds the touch supreme from the cartorial standpoint.

Something new in a fall afternoon frock is pictured to the right. The skirt is a 1939 fashion favorite. It is of soft-black silk jersey fashioned according to the latest, which calls for lots and lots of flare about the hemline with snug-fitted hips. In sleek jersey such as this designers have discovered a fabric of matchless draping quality that performs miracles in the way of slenderizing the figure. Striped white jersey is used for the top given a diagonal treatment.

The emphasis placed on the all-black frock as a fashion "first," for fall leave no alternative to the woman who would be well dressed. A classic black this season becomes an essential. Why not a black silk or rayon jersey? The gown of draped or shirred black silk jersey will prove "a thing of beauty and a joy forever" all through the fall months and on into the winter to wear under your fur coat.

With it you wear, if you are fashion-wise, massive gold jewelry preferably one of the gorgeous gold bib necklaces come of which are resplendent with colored stone settings. These necklaces are so wide they remind of deep yokes. And keep in mind there must always be added a matching gold bracelet.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Modish Black

The new blacks impress with their striking smartness. The chic of a black costume such as centers the style stage at present depends upon the sophisticated simplicity of its styling. Spongy black wool crepe has been used for the jacket dress pictured. The skirt which flares in latest approved manner is topped with a pert youthful double-breasted jacket which accents the new brief walking length. The vestee of white crepe shows a tucked front and Peter Pan collar.

Unrelieved Black

Fashion's Latest

Black unrelieved, save for a dash of bizarre jewelry, is being carried out by those who go in for extremes in striking ways. For instance, with a dull black crepe dress a noted Paris couturier partners a lustrous black satin blouse, adding a tall hat with drape-manipulated towering crown of matching satin. The handbag is also of satin. The effect is stunning.

Reversing the order of things with a lustrous silk jersey frock, smart accessories worn include hat, bag, shoes and gloves of soft black anisole, gorgeous gold jewelry highlighting the ensemble.

Many of the new sheer black woollens are being trimmed with black velvet for collar and other details. Of course, the logical hat to wear must also be of black velvet.

Black sequins glitter on evening gowns of dull blacks in a blaze of glory. French designers are using quantities of black passementerie and braiding on black fabric giving an air of elegance that bespeaks a new dignity in fashions for the coming months.

Massive Jewelry Is Current Style

Jewelry is playing a tremendous part in current fashion. The trend is toward massive gold and jeweled necklaces and bracelets, which, worn with the new black gowns that make simplicity their theme, is startlingly effective.

Size is all-important in necklaces. The deep collar types are in the lead. In other items of jewelry the idea of size also is stressed. Brooches are very large as also are earrings and clips.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—With Edward R. Stettinius Jr. as chairman, the newly announced war resources board can be expected to function smoothly. The chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation goes from his home at 21 East Seventy-Ninth street to his office at Broadway and Rector by subway to save moments. He eats no lunch to save more time. He cuts through formalities with his many business callers and saves more.

Stettinius is that reputed rarity, a rich man's son who has made good. His father became an industrial leader in St. Louis, and was invited to become a Morgan partner. The son lost little time after his graduation from the University of Virginia in beginning his business career, not because he had to, but because he wanted to work. He was 24 years old when he went into General Motors in 1924, 31 when he became vice president, 34 when he was made vice chairman of the finance committee of U. S. Steel and 38 when he took the top job as chairman of the board.

Modernity stands out in the strong lines of his figure, his crisp speech, and his attitude toward problems of politics and business. They say he nearly fainted when he first saw the office furniture of the 21 floor of the Steel Corporation building after he became chairman. The rolltop desks and similar items were unchanged since the days of Judge Gary. The refurnishing began immediately under Stettinius and was thorough.

Mr. Stettinius plays neither bridge nor golf; he takes his exercise on the bedroom-floor, and occasionally goes out to his 500-acre farm in Virginia.

OWEN A. TOMLINSON, the man who forbade the building of an 11-foot mound on the top of Mt. Rainier so that it might retain its laurels as third highest mountain in the United States, was once a captain in the Philippine scouts under Gen. J. G. Harbord. Before that he was a buck private in the United States army, in which, altogether, he served 14 years, participating in the Filipino insurrection. He was born in Whitestown, Ind., 57 years ago, and in 1923, after leaving the army, he was appointed superintendent of the Rainier National park.

When Tomlinson, sorrowfully, refused to permit the Tacoma chamber of commerce to pile, as it were, Pellon on Ossa, thus bringing Rainier a foot higher than Massive of Colorado, he underwent some of the tribulations that used to be his when, as lieutenant-governor of the sub-province of Ifugao in the Philippines, he had some 120,000 head-hunting savages to handle. However, report has it that public clamor is dying down, a tribute to Captain Tomlinson's persuasive tact in convincing his fellow statesmen that little of the genuine honor lies in the artificial adding of cubits to stature.

GEN. JUAN YAGUE is named by Generalissimo Francisco Franco as minister of air in the new cabinet he has formed and of which he has named himself as premier. So far as Spain are concerned, this is the most favorable news concerning Yague heard since the fall of Toledo.

Outspoken always, he is the man who, in preliminary maneuvers of the advance upon Lerida, accused Franco of sanctioning the bombing of open cities and of sounding off too frequently in praise of German and Italian contingents in the Rebel army. For this contumacious report had him behind bars and later a suicide—both, to quote Mark Twain, greatly exaggerated.

Later, when he was removed from command of his Moroccan corps, a personal disaster, specifically, the garrote, was reported to awaiting him.

And so what? Nothing short of bestowal of the aerial portfolio and the consequent strengthening of the falange as the backbone of post-war Spain.

'Swing Style' Reading Not New; The Greeks Had a Word for It

Every now and then, the newspapers report a "brand new" idea or a "brand new" discovery. Take, for instance, the report about "swing reading." According to recent headlines, "swing reading" is the latest thing imaginable—the invention of two smart eye doctors in Los Angeles.

As the papers say, the doctors disclosed their "idea" a short time ago at a national convention of the American Optometric association. Advocating a new system of printing in "swing style," the doctors said they had something that would help the eyes. In short, they urged this type of thing:

Many of the convention delegates a rof moisses dennulls yadreysey day on the golf course. The weath-. onj saw re along the next, and so on.

Well, we don't like to make ourselves seem scholarly, but the doctors have unwittingly dug up something pretty old. As a matter of fact, the ancient Greeks had a word for it, used the system and gave it up. They called it boustrophedon, and you can find the word in a good dictionary even to this day. Pronounced boo-stro-fee-don, with the accent on the third syllable, it means literally "turning like oxen in plowing." It is a compound of two Greek words—bous, meaning ox, and strepheln, meaning to turn.

P. S. Incidentally, the excerpt quoted above reads normally this way: "Many of the convention delegates yesterday shunned sessions for a day on the golf course. The weather was fine."

Anybody else got a new idea?—Pathfinder.

Finally Name Was O. K. Though Not 'O,' but 'K'

A gentleman had completed his purchases, and the clerk, in filling out the sales slip, asked:

"What is the name, please?" "Jepson," replied our hero. "Sixteen twenty-one West—"

"Your first initial, please." "O. K."

"O. K. Jepson," "I said 'Oh.'"

"O. Jepson." "No. Rub out the O."

The clerk began to look haughty. "Your initials again, please?"

"I said 'K.'"

"Pardon, you said 'O. K.'"

"I said 'Oh.'"

"Just now you said 'K.'"

"I said 'Oh,' because I didn't understand what you were asking me. I didn't mean it was my initial. My name is Kirby Jepson."

"Oh."

"No. Not O, but K. Here, give me the pencil and I'll write it myself. There, I guess it's O. K. now."—Annapolis Log.

Dispelling The Fog

There must be a deep conspiracy underway among all the statistical authorities of our fair land to make us believe that business is pretty good and that economically things are surprisingly satisfactory.

These authorities—Chambers of Commerce, financial writers and Government reports, to name a few—must be wrong because we have it, on the authority of the chief gloom-dispenser of the Republican National Committee, that the poor old United States is in a terrible condition.

"The volume of unemployment," says our distinguished contemporary, is approximately the same as in 1933."

According to the National Industrial Conference Board, which does research for many of the big corporations, there are 5,000,000 fewer people out of work today than there were in 1933, and in this connection it should be noted that approximately four million people have come to working age, so the employment figures would seem to be even better than that.

But the chief mourner over the awful plight to which the New Deal has reduced the United States does not limit his woe to the unemployment figures, for he announced in the last column from his pen that "the income of millions of persons has been reduced substantially during the last six years through a deliberate cheap money policy, restricted profits and diminished interest rates." And yet the obtuse statisticians tell us that in 1932 the per capita income was about $321 and for last year it was $491. Allowing for the increase in population, this indicates an increase in national income under the New Deal of over 30 billion dollars.

Now, as to that cheap money thought. It must be admitted that if you went out to buy gold you would have to pay more dollars for it than you would have had to pay for gold six years ago. But if you want to buy anything else you find that the dollar buys just about as much of any given product as it did then. If you wanted to buy pound sterling or guilders or francs, or any of the other standard currency, you would find that you get as many of them for your dollars as you ever did, and in most cases, this dollar that the propagandist is so disturbed about, is at a premium.

What Is a Mere Fact to the GOP

"Farm prices," says the Republican purveyor of grief, "are not much better than six years ago."

According to the Bureau of Economics of the Department of Agriculture (July 15, 1939), the prices on the seven leading farm products are higher now than they were in 1932 by from 32 to 75 per cent. Milk is 32 per cent higher than in 1932; beef cattle 47 per cent, hogs 48 per cent, potatoes 65 per cent, wheat 50 per cent, corn 60 per cent, cotton 73 per cent.

Statistics, of course, make dull reading. Fictional statistics have, however, within themselves elements of humor and imagination. So when you read the story of the G. O. P. economist you learned that the New Deal had put business in a strait-jacket and prevented it from functioning. The real humor of this is apparent when you look over the Dun and Bradstreet figures, which show more than $600,000,000 worth of building permits, at against $123,000,000 in 1932; bank clearings in 22 principal cities 32 billion dollars higher than in 1932; fewer than half as many business failures, etc. Business must be pretty bad when Sears, Roebuck in July of this year sold $277,000,000 worth of goods, against $108,000,000 in 1933

TRUTH about ADVERTISING
By CHARLES B. ROTH

AN EXPERIMENT IN HORSE-FEEDING

THERE'S an old story I have always liked. It is about the parsimonious Frenchman who raked the money he spent in feeding his horse. After scheming and planning he hit upon an idea which would enable him to stop all that.

It was beautifully simple: Each day he would gradually cut down the amount of feed he gave the horse. He would cut it down so gradually, in fact, that the animal wouldn't ever realize he was being cheated.

The horse would thus become used to getting along on less. Eventually he would need no feed at all. Think of the money that would save!

The French genius scientifically set about carrying on the experiment. Several months later he was telling about it with pride in his voice. Did it work? asked a friend. "Work? Oh, yes, indeed, it did!" he exclaimed. "It worked perfectly. Beautifully. The only trouble was that just about the time my horse got used to going without feed, he died."

We laugh at the heightened condition of a man with an idea as foolish as this, but many business men try to stop feeding their business "horse" by eliminating or cutting down on their advertising.

The fact is that advertising is the feed which keeps their business in robust health and full of energy and strength.

Many examples can be cited of the inevitable result of stopping advertising. Two will do. Forty years ago there was a remedy on the market which was America's biggest seller. It was widely, intelligently, consistently advertised. Its name was a household word. Then the founder of the business died. His heirs decided to cut out advertising because "our product is so well known people will have to buy it." The product passed out of the picture entirely.

Another was a fine, honest, well-made, well-advertised toilet soap, with all the good will any product could possibly need. The management of the business changed. The advertising stopped. Soon the product was no longer on the market.

The reason why advertising must be a continuous process is that we human beings need constant reminding. We're not fleckle. But we are so filled with our own ideas and plans and businesses that if a man who wants our trade doesn't ask for it regularly and often, we drift elsewhere to the man who does.

The advertiser is faced by the problem of asking his customers to buy from him, but he also has to consider the most economical way of extending his invitation.

He finds the answer to both parts of this problem in the newspaper. No other form of advertising has ever been discovered which will carry his message so effectively for so little cost.

4-H Club Delegates To State Encampment

According to Carl P. Radcliff, County Extension Agent, 4-H Club members from Lincoln County are attending the State 4-H Club Encampment this week at Las Cruces.

Niceta Buck, Bill Hamesek, and Charles Fruit, of the Capitan, Corona, and Hondo Clubs, were awarded the honor of representing Lincoln County and their club at the encampment.

The club members will be chaperoned by Mrs. Pallie Dishman, Local leader for the girls at Corona, and the County Agent.

Approximately 275 4-H Club delegates and leaders are expected to attend the State Encampment. In addition to special daily programs, delegates will have an opportunity to attend conferences on seed treatment, building the ration for baby beeves, egg grading, tile for sub-irrigation, care and use of farm levels, homemade furniture, table service and etiquette, line and design in clothing, dairy demonstrations, and a group discussion on "Choosing the Vocation."

Education Goes 'Gadget-y'

OPENING of the new school year brings new methods of teaching, involving eyes, hands and ears . . . otherwise, learning by doing. Above: This Chicago youngster uses a reader dictionary. She puts the word opposite the drawing, thereby fixing spelling and meaning in her mind. At right: Boys and girls investigate the world. Here they build a miniature postoffice to find out just how letters travel from mail box to a friend miles away. As they work, they keep a written record.

Ideas are built up in step-by-step sequence with this book of thin cellulose sheets superimposed upon each other to form a composite whole. It was invented by Dr. Theodore Jonas, a dentist, who got the idea while studying medicine.

Picture Parade

Radio is becoming increasingly important in American education work. Music and current events subjects are taught with this instrument as well as with phonographs and newspapers. Radio often proves valuable during stormy weather, epidemics and other times of stress when children cannot get to school. This picture shows a mother in an epidemic-bound city helping her children with lessons broadcast from the local radio station. For this purpose studies in all grades must be standardized in the broadest version.

Western Railroads Pioneered the Way, Now Entire Nation Enjoys Fast Trains

America Gets New Thrill From Streamlined and Modernized Flyers; Lines Enjoy Higher Passenger Revenue.

By WILLIAM S. PERKINS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—Speeding across Nevada the other night, a glistening, streamlined train struck the rail which a demented saboteur had purposely moved out of position. Twenty died and three score were injured in the ensuing wreck, but this tragedy nevertheless focused a national spotlight on the strides American railroading has made these past few years.

Blazing a pioneer's path across the continent, modernism and speed in rail transportation have caused the public to respond—with cash out of its pocket.

This encouraging state of affairs is indicated by the reception given the lightweight, streamlined unit railroad train and its more frequent encountered step-brother, the "modernized" standard train, as these mile-a-minute innovations of American progress near their fifth year of accomplished fact.

Five years ago there was not a single streamlined train—of either the unit or "modernized" variety—in service on all the quarter-million miles of American railway which make up one-third of the world's total. It appears from statistics issued by the Association of American Railroads.

Today, their rise to popularity has been so meteoric that we accept them as a common fact. And, by the time two all-aluminum streamlined units now being built for Missouri Pacific are delivered, there will be nearly 100.

Just to prove that it pays to give the American people what they want, every streamlined train operating in the United States has in its short lifetime produced additional passenger traffic and substantial earnings for the road placing it in service. Operating records of these trains show that on virtually every railroad on which they have been introduced, their net earnings have been from half to three-quarters of the gross, with the gross earnings rising steadily.

Speed Startles a Nation. Yet it was not until February 12, 1934, that Americans got their first glimpse of a real "streamliner." That was when Union Pacific's all-aluminum "City of Salina" began its 13,000-mile, nation-wide tour. It seems incredible that citizens of the U. S., better accustomed to speedy train travel than any other inhabitants of the earth, would make up parties to drive down to the tracks and watch the trains go by, but this was the common thing with the advent of the earliest "streamliners." The Burlington's first stainless steel "Zephyr" was completed and went on tour in May of the same year.

Both these streamlined trains were of the unit-classification which engendered the real revolution in present day railroad travel. That is to say, engineering principles involving new standards of lightness, speed and safety and thus blazing new trails for the roads to follow, required that the new trains be operated as self-contained units which could not be broken up and interchanged with the old, existing equipment.

Ideas Spread Quickly. Previews of the two pioneer trains at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago scored an immediate hit that was not to be minimized or denied. And when their success had been demonstrated in actual service by U. P. and Burlington in the winter of 1934-1935, other railroads were quick to take advantage of the obvious appeal to the public taste, and the race was on.

With the western roads leading the pack, more streamlined trains were rushed to completion, trains of both the unit type and the type attained by "modernizing" standard equipment with some streamlined features of design and more attractive and up-to-date decoration, but still built to permit interchange with the older cars on the roads.

Within a year, a total of 13 more streamlined trains in both classifications had been placed in service, to be followed by another 13 in 1936, 20 in 1937 and 39 last year. Now nearing the century-mark, America's streamlined fleet has rapidly left the other railroads of the world biting the clinder dust. Thirty-one trains of the unit type have been introduced in this country and 60 of the "modernized" type have made their bow.

U. S. Leads in Speed. For many years the U. S. set the world's pace in railroad safety; now it can claim definite speed supremacy. There are only eight trains in the world which maintain a 60-mile-an-hour average for a run of 900 miles or more, and they are all in this country. Their speed records are soon to be augmented by the new Missouri Pacific streamlined twins under construction by the American Car & Foundry company. These newcomers, claimed by the builders to be the "last word" in streamlined unit construction from both engineering and artistic points of view, will also run on virtually a mile-a-minute schedule, although over a shorter route—from St. Louis to Kansas City and Omaha.

Streamlined trains have clipped hours, almost days in some cases, from trips that have known schedules virtually stationary for years. They now speed from Chicago to Los Angeles in 39 hours 45 minutes, 17 hours faster than their feeblest predecessors; from Chicago to Kansas City in 7 1/2 hours, and from Chicago to New York in 16. It might be noted here that trains of the unit type are prevalent in the West, while the eastern roads depend more upon the "modernized" version, although this is not always true.

Demonstrate Value of Research. Streamlined trains are visible proof, railroad officials say, of the ability of industry and research to create new improvements with an appeal to practicability as well as imagination. Especially is this true in the metal industries, which have produced the lightweight aluminum alloys and stainless steel which make the trains of today possible. Aluminum has come into its own on the railroads since they have taken advantage of its lightness combined with strength, durability and economy of maintenance, and employed it to meet today's demands for high speed and increased safety.

Approximately one-third of all the virgin aluminum produced now goes into the transportation field, and the competition between this metal and others such as stainless steel is a first-line skirmish in the "bloody battle of the metals." Union Pacific's huge streamlined fleet is all aluminum, while Burlington's new trains are built of stainless steel, which likewise has found a ready market in streamlined train development.

Probably in the end all trains will be built neither of aluminum nor of steel, but of both. Even now, every stainless steel train contains some aluminum and every aluminum train uses at least a little steel. Tomorrow all trains will use each metal in the places where that metal's characteristics are most advantageous.

Czech Foreign Legion Reborn, Recalling 1917 Siberian March

PRAGUE.—The Czech foreign legion lives again. Famed for its 5,000-mile trek across Russia and Siberia during the World war, the legion is again carrying Czecho-Slovakia's banner of independence in an under-cover plot to recapture the Fatherland from Germany.

In 1916 Czech troops which deserted to Russia from the Austro-German front were finally forced to flee half-way around the world before they could return home through friendly territory. This time they've deserted to Poland under leadership of a veteran of the Russian trek, Gen. Lev Prchala. There, while the folks back in Czecho-Slovakia watch excitedly, they are drilling 8,000 strong against the day when their homeland can be free.

Last March, when Germany marched in, hundreds of Czech army officers and men, some of them with equipment, fled to the vicinity of Cracow, Poland. In the far-eastern Carpatho-Ukraine, Gen. Prchala led his men in a hopeless battle against the Hungarians, a Nazi-Ukrainian organization and a frightened central Prague government. Realizing it was a futile fight, he disbanded his men, sent some to Poland and some to Rumania, and went back to Prague to watch the proceedings. The Czech foreign legion was thus born, and a few weeks later Gen. Prchala joined his men in Poland.

Czech Youths Disappear. Reliable reports indicate the legion is growing rapidly. From almost every Czech village youths are mysteriously disappearing, crawling through the border and appearing in Cracow a few days later. Each volunteer receives the equivalent of $240. If he brings a Czech plane to Cracow, he gets up to $3,000. Meanwhile, branches of the group are springing up elsewhere. About 4,000 of the Czech soldiers now in Poland are reportedly being transferred to French Morocco. At Sid Bel Abbas, Algerian headquarters of the French foreign legion, a new regiment composed almost exclusively of Czech army veterans has been organized. In Paris two regiments are reported.

What the legion will ultimately gain by this apparently futile maneuver is hard to visualize. But legionnaires are content merely to try, hoping the day may come when their added strength may turn the tide against Germany in the war they believe is inevitable. On that day, they believe, the independent Czecho-Slovakia will be born again.

Sew a Bag to Keep Your Ball of Twine In

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WHEN you want to wrap a package do you always know where to find twine? A ball of it in a bag like this one hung over the kitchen table will be ready for use. After trying this you are sure to want to make some of these twine bags to sell at the next bazaar or to use as gifts.

Scraps from your piece bag may be used in this way. The bag is just big enough to cover the ball loosely and is made of a straight piece of goods with the ends seamed together with a French seam. The top and bottom are bound with prepared bias binding. A single cord is run through the binding at the bottom. It is drawn up to leave a small opening and the ends are tied and sewn securely. Two cords are run through the top with a loop of each cord left on the outside so that the bag may be drawn up by pulling them. The ball of twine is placed inside with the end running through the bottom opening ready for use.

Did you see the good news in the paper last week? About the new Sewing Book No. 3, which is now ready for mailing. It contains 32 useful ideas for home decorating; and things to use as gifts, and to sell at bazaars. You will be delighted with it. The price of this new book is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and doped, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the cause of the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't converted into body, but leaves a soft "bulk" in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek, Sold by every grocer.

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures in the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy.

Kay's hands were clasped in her lap, her figure racked by dry sobs. "Oh, Kirk . . . it was so awful . . ." "Lay off that. I'm trying to be kind, but you won't let me." "She said, 'Will you go away?'" "No. That'd be a dumb play. Then they'd know I did it." "But if you stay in Beverly . . ." "I've got to. And you've got to play along with me." His hand fell on her wrist. "You've got to see?" His voice frightened her. The kindness had gone from it. It had become the sort of voice he had used with Harvey Jackson. Cold. Bitter. Involving no argument.

"She said, 'I don't understand.' " "Murder is murder," he explained flatly. "A man can only be hanged once. Does that tell you anything?" "No." "Then listen. You saw something tonight. You know I don't bluff. If you open your mouth to anyone you'll get the same dose Jackson got."

Calmly. Quietly. Just like that. If you say a word to anybody, I'll kill you, too. She was like one hypnotized . . . but the recent tragedy had been too vividly seared on her young brain to admit of doubt. "I'm scaring you because you need to be scared." His tone was conversational. "I want you to realize just what you're up against."

"But Kirk . . . you couldn't!" "No?" He laughed mirthlessly. "A man will do a heap of things to save his own hide. You're just a kid. You're all shot to hell by what you just saw. You're figuring you've got to talk to someone. Right?" She said nothing; made no gesture. He continued.

"You'd be likely to tell your father. Or this Hamilton guy. I'm warning you . . . don't!" "Still she did not answer." "Here's why," he went on. "And I don't want to make it any tougher on you than I can help. Only you've got to understand. For your own sake." His hands were light on the wheel. "It won't be safe for anybody to know what happened tonight. If you tell your old man—or Barney Hamilton—they'll try to do something about it. That won't be healthy for them."

"But they had nothing to do with it." "They'll be in it the minute you spill a word. And remember what I said before: they can't kill me any easier for killing three men than for killing one." That damnable logic again. Cold statement of cold fact.

view the fruit of their literary activities with pride. Entering the town from east or west, you are confronted by this:

WELCOME TO BEVERLY

Departing, the tourist glimpses the reverse side of the same archway and is edified by another literary confection:

PLEASED TO HAVE MET YOU
COME AGAIN TO BEVERLY

Artistically and perhaps esthetically the signs are intriguing, however little they might seem to blend with the sleepy tranquillity of the little southern town. They are wrong, however, in one important respect, the optimistic Chamber of Commerce being inclined to ignore cold facts.

Some few persons resent an exaggeration which defies the Federal census of 1930. Government figures proclaim to the world that the municipality of Beverly has 4,376 residents. Members of the Chamber of Commerce declare frequently, officially and vehemently that this count is untrue and that there has been deliberate and unforgivable discrimination. They appear to believe that such an undercount is a cataclysmic thing, affecting the well-being of the entire world, and their assertion that sixty-five hundred persons reside in the little town is merely a method of answering this libel. "All right," is the effect of their statement, "we'll tell the world how many people we think we have."

These sign-boards are a direct and proximate result of the successful launching of Cathedral Gardens. With the Gardens completed, the gravel road leading to them freshly scraped, the White Star Hotel newly papered—in spots—leading citizens and business men conceived the idea that tourists might come to visit awhile. The signs were therefore erected and casual arrangements made to entertain a few strangers.

But for some reason which Beverly never could quite understand, the fame of the Gardens spread overnight. There were other beautiful Gardens in the South, many of them, whose fame had been broadcast for decades, but there was something about this new place of Mrs. Hamilton's which intrigued the fancy of tourists. They came not singly, but in battalions. They descended upon the somewhat little town and swarmed about its streets. And since Beverly was a considerable distance from any large city—being therefore a metropolis of sorts—the tourists usually remained for two, three or four days.

They visited Cathedral Gardens in the early morning. They flocked there during all the daylight hours. And, almost invariably, they remained in anticipation of moonlight nights when the Gardens reached the zenith of enchantment. Visitors wrote to their friends:

"Of course Cathedral Gardens are beyond description. You must see them. But when you do come, plan to stay a few days. This is a queer little town, but lots of fun. The hotel isn't half bad and there's dancing every night. One good picture house, and several places along the roads serve barbecued sandwiches which are worth driving a few miles to get. There are other things, too. The proprietor will tip you off if he thinks you're safe—believe it or not—to a dice game on the second floor. Regular crap-table, and it's fun, provided you don't mind losing a little. We have stayed five days and we're coming back when the azaleas are over and the lotus season begins. They say that's going to be breathtaking."

And, on more than one occasion, letters were despatched from gentlemen tourists to other gentlemen who might become tourists. These letters touched on another point: " . . . And in addition to all that, Jim, old man, there's plenty of hotcha here. If you're lonely, meet Miss Henkel, the beauty operator in the hotel. She's easy on the eyes—and boy! how tropical! The rest is up to you. As a matter of fact, the whole thing is a miracle. I can't help wondering what the old-timers in this burg think of the jazz invasion." "P.S. This Henkel dame answers to the name of Babe. What she answers is something else again. A word to the wise is foolish."

It had taken Beverly no time at all to become tourist-conscious, nor to exploit its visitors. Robbie Morse raised the price for his best rooms to two dollars a day, and never quite oriented himself to the fact that it was paid without question.

Pleasant homes on streets jutting off from Monument Square placed signs in their front yards: "Tourists Accommodated" and some of them assumed names: "The Gray House—Meals & Beds for Tourists," "Welcome to Ye Olde Inne. Chicken Dinners and Comfortable Rooms," "Rooms. Meals. Free Parking. Make This Your Headquarters While Visiting Cathedral Gardens."

And all of this had happened suddenly and bewilderingly to a town which for more than two hundred years had dozed placidly under southern skies; a town which was bordered on the east by Big Moccasin Swamp and on all other sides by tradition; a town where business had been depression-proof and boom-proof; a town unaware of the outside world except on those infrequent occasions when the nation had indulged in warfare. Beverly was startled, business men applauded.

A little roadster, having as passengers Kay Forrest and Barney Hamilton, approached Beverly from the east, bumped across the railroad tracks and moved slowly up Palmetto Avenue toward Monument Square.

The Square was crowded. Outside the White Star Hotel was a fleet of cars, most of them wearing the license plates of other States. The general trend of passenger traffic was eastward, toward Cathedral

"A man can only be hanged once."

Gardens. Farmers, in from the country in rattle-trap flivvers, searched despairingly for parking space and cursed Beverly's new popularity. The Constable on duty at the Square made large and frantic gestures in an entirely futile effort to regulate traffic.

Barney asked a question. "Home?" "Yes."

"Right away?" "Yes."

He said, "You're funny. You haven't even been to town in two weeks, and now you have to run home. Why?"

"I must. Really."

"Before you get out—" he started. "What?"

"Well, I suppose it's none of my business and I swore I wasn't going to butt in . . ."

"Go ahead, Barney."

"All right." He drew a deep breath. "What's wrong?"

"What's wrong with what?" "With you?"

The smile died from her eyes. She said, "Nothing."

"Tell that to somebody else. I know there is."

"What makes you think so?" "Lots of things. It started the day after you went to the dance with Kirk Reynolds two weeks ago. You've been different. And you haven't even wanted to come to town until this morning. It's almost as though you were afraid of something."

She said, "Maybe I am."

"Then spill it. You know how I feel about you."

"How?" She tried to relieve the tension.

"Let's put it that I'm a sap, which might explain why I love you . . ." Her face flushed and she touched his hand ever so gently. "But darn it! don't you see where that puts me? I want to help and you won't let me. You're stalling."

She was startled. "What makes you think so?" "I've got to think it. Whatever the trouble is, it started the night you went to the dance with him." "Yes." Her eyes were somber. "As a matter of fact, Barney, that's why I'm in town today."

"Why?" "To see Kirk."

"But why? What's the big idea of wasting your time on a louse like him?" She said, "I've got to talk to him, that's all I can tell you."

The boy's eyes narrowed. "That telephone call you got last night, was that from him?" "Yes."

"He told you to come in this morning?" "He asked me to."

"And you won't explain what's eating on you?" "Barney! I can't! It isn't that I don't want to."

"I see." He spoke gently. "Listen, honey—there's a lot of nasty talk going around regarding Kirk Reynolds. You haven't heard it because you haven't been in town in the last two weeks. And I haven't told you. But I'll tell you this much—I don't like the idea of your playing around with him."

She said, "I don't either, Barney. But this morning I've got to see him."

"Check! I wish you'd tell me what's what."

"I would . . . if I could." He lighted a cigarette with fingers which were none too steady. "Going back to the Gardens tonight?"

"Yes." "With me?" "I hope so."

"I'll pick you up here at five. Oke?"

"Right. So now . . ." She put a warm hand over his in brief caress. Then she jumped out of the car and moved up the walkway toward the veranda of her home. He looked after her with troubled eyes.

"Something's awful wrong," he told himself, "and I'm going to find out what it is."

CHAPTER IV

Mrs. Emma Forrest was a fine woman. Her friends agreed that she was fine; that she had an overplus of those sterling and pious qualities which make for social success and domestic happiness in a town like Beverly.

No one, or at least very few, persons ever criticized Emma Forrest. She ran her home immaculately, dressed well and plainly, did ardent church-work, belonged to a reading circle, and was inordinately fond of helping neighbors when there was illness in the house, though it was not unknown that after these neighborly excursions she invariably had something to talk about: something personal and intimate, like the dearth of bed linen or the condition of kitchen plumbing or the shocking failure of the ill woman to have stocked her pantry shelves with preserves.

Mrs. Forrest was forty-eight years of age. She was not fat, but she definitely was heavy. Solid. Not comfortable at all, but solid. Folks asserted that her face showed strength of character. Her manner was positive—so positive that Andrew Forrest, her rather smallish husband, had acquired a chronic submissiveness. He never—or very seldom—argued with Emma, and on such rare occasions as he did, he never won. At least Emma never acknowledged that he had. She was that sort of a woman: a thing was right because she said it was right.

The good upper-middle-class housewives of the town admired Emma Forrest. They admired her sterling qualities, her goodness of heart, her efficient management of her household, her success in having molded her twenty-two-year-old son, Andy, into a stalwart masculine edition of herself. And they wondered why a thoughtless Providence had inflicted upon her such a daughter as Kay. "She's wild, that's what she is—in spite of everything her mother has tried to do for her." They said, "She'll come to no good end, mark my words." They said, "It's a pity Kay couldn't have turned out to be a fine girl. Emma didn't deserve to have that sort of daughter."

By that, Beverly did not mean to infer that Kay Forrest was immoral, although there were some few who, without particular conviction, hinted that they wouldn't be so terribly surprised to learn that she was.

This morning the family had finished breakfast. They were waiting, Mrs. Forrest and Andy rather grim and pious. Andrew Forrest who, by original selection and biological chance, had become nominal head of the household, uncertain and ill at ease. He knew that Kay was to be greeted with a barrage of criticism, and inasmuch as there existed between him and his nineteen-year-old daughter a bond of friendship and sympathy and understanding which was beyond the comprehension of the virtuous Emma . . . he waited gallantly to give such meager support as lay within his power.

They saw Kay step out of Barney Hamilton's little car. They saw her move up the walk; cross the veranda. They saw her come through the front door and approach the dining-room. Mrs. Forrest greeted her with a remark which was not unoblivious.

Mrs. Forrest said, "We've been waiting for you, Katherine."

Kay caught an almost imperceptible warning flicker of her father's right eyelid. Therefore she answered meekly, "Yes, Ma'am."

Disobedience Often Sign of Forgetfulness

● IMPULSIVE ACTS OF child are made without thought either of being obedient or disobedient. Help in remembering often much more necessary than any form of punishment.

By GEORGIA LOTT SELTER

"OH, WHY need children be quite so heedless and disobedient?" sighed Mary Lance wearily. "I wonder if they really are," answered her neighbor, Mrs. Jaynes, comfortably. "They behave as they do because they are children. They usually act on impulse, without any thought either of being obedient or disobedient. You must expect such conduct until they begin to acquire the knowledge—that experience brings."

"I am convinced that children need real help in remembering much more frequently than they need punishment. This belief is based partly on my own never-to-be-forgotten childish experience with a detested red apron. My aunt, with whom I lived, made me a big red apron from one of her old house dresses and said: 'Lucy, you are to put this apron on over your school dress each morning until your work is done.' I had no objection to that, but several times each week I rushed heedlessly away to school, flaunting the apron's faded ugliness for all to see. My aunt always sent a message by an older girl who was our neighbor, reminding me to remove the apron. And no reproach was ever considered complete until these episodes of the red apron were held up to me as evidence of my disobedience!"

"I've never forgotten the unhappiness and embarrassment they incurred. Yet how easily my aunt might have prevented them. She could have said, 'Always come to me before you start to school to be sure you look nice.' Or, 'Always kiss me good-by, Lucy.' My love-hungry little heart would never have allowed me to forget to do that, you may be sure! And there would have been no hurting apron episode."

"But Henry's case is different," said Mrs. Lance. "He is a boy and should learn to take responsibility. Yet he never remembers his chores or his errands."

"Appreciation lightens labor," "He just needs the help of a little reminder," insisted Mrs. Jaynes. "Suppose you mention it casually before his father each time he does his work well and without being reminded? Even we older folks find that appreciation lightens labor."

"Try to make work pleasant. Never use it as a punishment."

"Let work lead naturally to suitable rewards. If Henry helps you with the dishes and tidies the house, it would be quite evident that you would have more time. Perhaps you could both go to the movies or for a ride. When he has learned to prepare food he can have picnics and parties. If he keeps his room in order, let him know how restful you find it when you go in to spend a few moments with him. If he takes good care of his clothes, brushing them and hanging them up neatly, he would be happy indeed if Mother should buy for father and him two articles just alike."

"If Henry is apt to forget his duties, do not credit it to disobedience but study how you may make it interesting and profitable for him to remember. Children dread to work alone, so make his duties, so far as you reasonably can, something that you can share. Do not expect results beyond the ability of his years. Praise him when he does well. Reward him in a natural and sensible way. Help him remember for he honestly needs your help."

And presently you will have the satisfaction of seeing that he has acquired the habit of reliability and accepts work as a pleasant and necessary part of normal living." National Kindergarten Association (WNU Service.)

Ben Jonson Burial

Tradition says that Ben Jonson was buried in a sitting position because the plot provided for him on the north side of the nave in Westminster abbey was not large enough for the body to be placed in the grave in a horizontal position. According to a legend, King Charles I personally promised Jonson that he should be interred in the abbey in any spot that he might choose. After his death August 6, 1637, it was found that the space he had selected for burial was already occupied except about "eighteen inches of square ground." Charles kept his promise and Jonson was buried with his head toward the sky, the only occupant of the abbey to be so honored. The famous inscription, "O Rare Ben Jonson," was cut in the slab over his grave. Many years later a portrait bust to his memory was placed in the Poet's corner.

Two Souls, One Thought—Escape—Stirred Them

Two explorers, bearded and coiled, met in the wilderness, and crouched over a fire of brushwood. Said the first: "I came out here because the urge to travel was in my blood. The drabness of the towns irked me, and the ever-present smell of exhaust gas sickened my rebellious heart! I wanted to see the sun rise over mysterious horizons, hear the peeped flutter of birds flit to strangers to human footsteps, leave my footprints on sands unmarked before I come along, see Nature in the raw!" Why did you come out here?"

Said the second: "My wife's talking vocal."
