Wm. Nickels Plays With All-Star Band

Bill Nickels son of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Nickels won the honor of playing in this year's All-Star Band at Chicago. Bill played first cornet and was the 15th man selected out of the 185 that played. The Band was selected from 550 students representing 44 colleges and Universities from all parts of the Country. The Band members carried lights on their instruments and caps and at the half they furnished the only light in the stadium as they marched.

Bill informed us that among notables at the game was Mr. A. H. Kudner owner of the O-O ranch west of town.

Bill has accepted a position in the Chicago city schools.

We invite every one to come to the services, but especially are we concerned in those who do not profess christianity, and want you to come to the service.

Rev. R. E. Harrison, Pastor of the First Baptist Church of Hagerman is coming on Sept. 18, to do the preaching during the meeting. We feel that Brother Harrison's coming to us will be a great blessing. He is a good preacher, a consecrated christian gentleman, whom you will enjoy hearing and cannot afford to pass the opportunity of hearing God's word proclaimed.

We are thankful for the fine growth in our Sunday school and Church services, however, we have room for you to come also. We extend a hearty invitation to everyone to come to Sunday school and church.

The music department has a much larger enrollment in all its branches than last year. The baton twirling classes are going to be in charge of Miss Sylvia Gresham and Miss Janice Hall.

It is urged that parents interested in having their children start the band, baton class, or violin class get in touch with Mr. Susman, the music teacher, as soon as possible so that all children have an equal and fair chance by beginning with the fundamentals of music.

Loans Reach an Old Time High

Outstanding loans of the Wichita Bank for Co-operative, one of the units of the Farm Credit Administration, reached an all time high of $5,585,000 on August 31, according to the monthly report of Ralph Snyder, president.

Loans at the end of August this year totaled approximately $2,300,000 more than the corresponding period last year, Snyder's report shows. August business this year increased almost $800,000 over the previous month.

Practically all of the increase in August business was due to advances to grain co-operatives, according to Snyder, but the big jump from last year he credits to a general increase in the use of the Co-op Bank by farmers' marketing and purchasing organizations.

Grain marketing associations have a far larger percentage of the Bank's total loans than any other of the various farmer co-operatives at the present time. The second largest users of credit from the Wichita Bank for Co-operative are the mutual irrigation companies. Commodities handled by the co-operative marketing and purchasing associations financing their operations through the Wichita Bank for Co-operatives, include fruits and vegetables, dairy products, poultry and eggs, grain, cotton and petroleum.

The Banks for Co-operatives makes three types of loans to qualified farmers' organizations: Commodity loans to store products; merchandising loans for operating capital; and facility loans to buy, construct or lease physical properties required in the operation of the co-operative's business.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUËL P. PARTON

NEW YORK.—On his record, it would appear that Gen. Edward Smigly-Rydz, Poland's strong man, might be more inclined to fight Germany without Russia's aid than with it. He made his career fighting the Bolsheviks, and news dispatches of the last few weeks have hinted that he has been considerably embarrassed at being drawn into the new apparently broken fellowship with Russia. It has been clear that being saved by Russia was the least and last of his ideas.

He is beyond doubt the ablest of Poland's military leaders, and, once the bell rings, there is no question that he can and will fight, as he proved in the campaigns to free Poland and in his forays against early-day Bolshevik Russia.

He never has quite come through as a dictator. In 1936 there was one of those "ideological" build-ups in which he was to emerge as the head of re-constructed Poland. Handsome and imposing, of dominant bearing, he looked the part, but he couldn't seem to manage the big talk necessary for the job. The best they could get out of him was something to the general effect that nobody would ever be allowed to take a single button from Poland's robe.

On August 6 of this year, when it appeared that Germany might just take the robe and leave the button, he was expected to make a sizzling speech at Cracow. His audience was howling for a knockout punch, but the speech was mostly shadow-boxing, with nothing specific about what he proposed to do about Danzig.

Fifty-four years old, with an engaging personality, he has been a popular dinner guest and holds the honorary presidency of the Polish academy of letters. The old Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, nearing the end of his life, anointed the general as his successor. He has been supremely efficient in his army job, but, as a strong man, has been somewhat overshadowed by the showier, more facile and adroit Josef Beck, the foreign minister. But fighting is his main business and knowing observers figure that, talking little, he is more apt to fight.

A MICHIGAN friend of this writer reports that Gov. Luren D. Dickinson's war on sin may turn out to be good political medicine out there.

War on Sin May Be Very Cate Politics While big-town political leaders are said to be somewhat embarrassed by the aged governor's alarmed discovery of wickedness in high places, the word is that his forces have been entrenched and widened since he let loose about the drinking and dancing orgies of the Albany conference of governors. His Bible class at Eaton, Mich., is crowded to the doors and he is besieged with requests for lectures and participation in revival campaigns. Currently he tells a gathering of Chicago and Detroit "pupils" that this Albany conference was pretty much like Belshazzar's feast and that our Babylonian wasters will drag us down if we don't mend our ways.

For 23 years, Mr. Dickinson has held in fee simple the anti-sin vote of Michigan. It has held steadily around 200,000 votes, undivided in its allegiance in his repeated forays against evil, chief of which has been his still-continuing prohibition battle. He is a spare, bald exangel of righteousness, his friendly eyes glinting behind his octagonal rimmed glasses when he is aroused, his meager frame shaken with pietistic fervor. He employs much of the lexicon of the late Dr. Parkhurst of New York, in assailing sin, and some of his philippics seem to voice again the pious horror of the author of "New York by Gaslight," written 60 years ago.

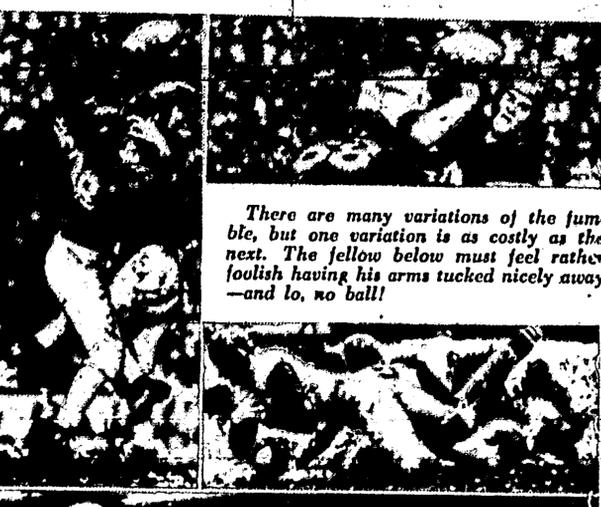

He is a native of New York, born near Lockport in Niagara county. His parents removed to Eaton, Mich., when he was a small boy. There he still lives, happily engaged with his Methodist church Bible class, and, more recently, with the state of Michigan and, unhappily for his peace of mind, in a bout with evil which he never knew existed before.

Shays' rebellion of 1786 jolted the big-town politicians with a realization of what a mixture of agrarian discontent and old-time religion may amount to. In Governor Dickinson's compact voting phalanx, things are something like that. His allied conservative-Republican organization appreciates all this.

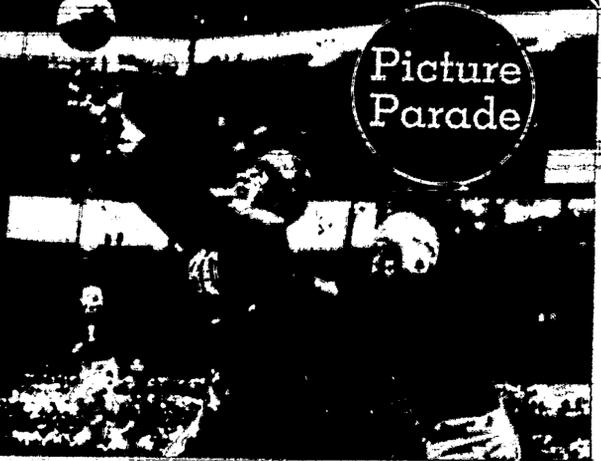

AUTUMN SPORTS Football Is Serious Business But Here's the Funny Side

Each autumn, at risk of smashing their cameras, sports photographers get a classic assortment of pictures from the gridiron. They catch beautiful action plays, freak accidents, fumbles, penalty plays and quite a bit of rough stuff generally. The above pose, for example, is not one of endearment. Jack Williams of Santa Clara is merely using a high tackle to down St. Mary's giant, Mike Klotovich. Jack is probably saying, "Beg your pardon, Mike." And Mike answers, "Not at all, Jack" . . . maybe, but we doubt it.

There are many variations of the fumble, but one variation is as costly as the next. The fellow below must feel rather foolish having his arms tucked nicely away—and lo, no ball!

Picture Parade

I'll huff and I'll puff and I'll shove—and blow your ballplayer down. This is one way to break up a punting attack, but don't try it while the referee's watching. The trick, preserved for posterity by your photographer, cost Georgetown a neat 15-yard penalty in its game with Hampden-Sidney last autumn. Yes, Sylvia, it's against the rules. But Georgetown won 51 to 0, anyway.

To prove football's a rough game: Left: This chap just collided head-on with a brick wall of the grandstand and is being carried off the field with severe head lacerations and a fractured wrist. No, Camelia, we don't know why he did it. Just got mad, perhaps.

Right: Spectators get it, too. Here is Miss Thelma Quinn, Tennessee cheer leader, after being k.o'd when she got mixed up with a bunch of players in last year's Orange Bowl game. Which proves the safest place to watch a game is over your radio.

TASTY SUNDAY NIGHT SUPPERS (See Recipes Below)

Sunday Night Suppers

Even though you expect everyone to have had a noon meal with staying power on Sundays, people do like to eat when Sunday evening rolls 'round! To be sure, they like food that's somewhat lighter, and food that's out of the ordinary. So it's a grand time to leave the beaten path and serve something a little different.

If you serve left-overs, be sure to serve them in a new way or with an unusual accompaniment like the jellied chili sauce I've suggested in menu No. III. If you plan a meal especially for Sunday night, plan one which can be served "help-yourself" style and arrange foods, dishes and silver on the table so that guests may serve themselves. Appetites will be quickened by the eye-appealing arrangement of the table, and the air of informality makes Sunday night supper a sociable affair.

These menus are suited, too, to serving larger numbers. Lodge groups, church organizations or clubs. Recipes for the main dish and salad in every menu are easily increased. Unless you have special recipes and equipment, cakes and pastries are likely to be better if the single recipe is used.

- Lettuce and Tomatoes with Roquefort Cheese Dressing. (Serves 6)
1 head lettuce
2 tomatoes
1/4 pound Roquefort cheese (crumbled)
French dressing
Remove coarse outer leaves from head of lettuce. Cut into wedges. Peel tomatoes, remove stem end, and cut into eighths. Place in salad bowl with the lettuce. Add crumbled Roquefort cheese and French dressing. Toss lightly until well mixed.

- Cocoa Marshmallow Cake.
2 tablespoons cocoa
1/2 cup sweet milk
2 cups brown sugar
3 eggs (separated)
1/2 cup butter
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup sour milk

Place cocoa, sweet milk, 1 cup brown sugar, and 1 egg yolk (beaten) in top of double boiler. Cook over hot water, until mixture is well blended. Cool. Cream butter, and add remaining cup of brown sugar while beating constantly. Add the two remaining egg yolks, together with the vanilla extract and mix thoroughly. Then mix and sift all dry ingredients and add alternately with the sour milk. Beat egg whites stiff but not dry, and fold into the cake mixture.

Place in 2 well greased layer cake pans and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) approximately 30 minutes. Ice with boiled icing to which 8 marshmallows (cut in quarters) have been added.

- Jellied Chili Sauce.
1 tablespoon gelatin
2 tablespoons cold water
1 cup chili sauce (or catsup)
Soak gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Add to chili sauce, which has been heated to the boiling point, and stir until dissolved. Pour into tiny paper cups, individual molds, or small pan from which the chili sauce may be sliced or cut in attractive shapes when firm. Chill thoroughly before serving.

- Tuna Casserole.
1 7-ounce can tuna
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup-cooked peas
1 can-button mushrooms
2 cups cooked noodles (medium width)
Salt, pepper and butter
1 cup milk

Butter individual baking dishes. Sprinkle tuna with lemon juice. (This brings out the tuna flavor). Arrange alternate layers of tuna, peas, mushrooms and noodles, putting noodles on top. Season each layer with salt and pepper. Dot top generously with butter. Pour milk into dish and top with buttered bread crumbs. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) 30 minutes. (Serves 4-6.)

Toasted Loaf.
Trim top and side crusts from a loaf of unsliced white bread. Cut through the center of the loaf, lengthwise, cutting just to the lower crust, but not through it. Then cut crosswise, spacing the cuts about 2 inches apart. Brush top and sides generously with melted butter. Toast in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees) until the loaf is golden-brown. Serve hot.

There are so many points to be considered in planning meals. One which is all too likely to be overlooked is this—that the dessert is more than something to satisfy the family's "sweet tooth"; it really plays an important part in the menu.

Next week in this column Eleanor Howe will tell you why—and will give you, too—some of her favorite recipes for "Desserts That Are Different."

- Clam Chowder. (Serves 6.)
1/2 cup carrot (chopped)
2 tablespoons onion (chopped)
1 1/2 cups potato (chopped)
1/4 cup celery (chopped fine)
1 pint clams
2 cups water and clam liquor
Salt and pepper to taste
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 tablespoons parsley
1/2 teaspoon paprika

Chop the vegetables in small pieces and place in large kettle. Chop the clams and add together with the clam liquor, water, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook about 1/2 hour, or until vegetables are tender. Scald milk. Make a smooth paste of the flour and water. Add half of this flour paste to the clam mixture and half to the scalded milk. Cook each, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Combine and add butter, parsley and paprika. Serve very hot.

Shelf Edging Dresses Up Kitchen Windows

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SOME of us can remember seeing our mothers cut scalloped shelf papers. Dextrously they folded and snipped the edge in points or curves; sometimes adding a cut out diamond in the center of each scallop. For many there is more satisfaction in this creation of their own hands, than in using fancy lace edge paper by the roll. Today, we find that same satisfaction when we choose cloth shelf edgings—thinking in terms of color has a fascination even beyond scallops with diamonds in the center.

The suggestion sketched here for using shelf edging to dress up kitchen windows was sent in by a reader. The busy homemaker will appreciate the fact that the curtains are perfectly straight and plain and easy to remove for laundering. When windows and shelves match the effect is especially good. Banded towels may be of the same color, and tin containers for bread, sugar, and spices may be painted with bright enamel, to match.

The new Sewing Book No. 3 by Mrs. Spears is packed full of useful, money saving ideas, that almost any homemaker may put to practical use. Every idea is clearly illustrated with large sketches. You will be fascinated with the variety of interesting things to make for the home and for gifts. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Send coin with name and address to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 42), who fears that her appeal to men, who worry about her health, is on the wane. It's not just a matter of diet, but of the way you live. Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good rest, try the new Doan's Kidney Pills. E. Finkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vitality to enjoy life and makes calling attention to your health a matter of pride. It often accompanies change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Wastes
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not let Nature give you a warning. To remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging headache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up at night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder may be burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is vital. Doan's Pills have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. They are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

He Really 'Worked Like a Horse'

Rail Mileage Equals Four Trips to Moon

BELLEVUE, OHIO.—James Furlong, dean of Nickel Plate railroad engineers, retired after nearly 51 years of service during which friends figured he had traveled a distance equal to four round trips to the moon. Furlong estimates his total mileage at 2,000,000 miles. The mean distance to the moon is 238,857 miles. On this basis he has traveled on rails a distance equal to more than four trips to the moon and back.

Who Has the Buttons? Collector for 72 Years

PINE RIVER, MINN.—Way back in 1867 when she was seven years old, Mrs. Anna Underleak began a habit of collecting buttons. Today Mrs. Underleak has 12,000 buttons—45 pounds of them—collected from every section of the United States and from the larger countries in Europe and Asia.

Among the outstanding buttons in her collection, which are made of everything from blood, vegetables and pewter to gold and silver, are lead buttons taken from Custer's battlefield and those from the coat of Emerson Hough, author of "The Covered Wagon."

NOW SHE CAN WALK

Gloria Barton of Port Richmond, N. Y., 11 years old, shows how she can walk from her home. During the celebration of her eleventh birthday she surprised her friends and family by walking more than 20 feet, the farthest she has walked since 1937, when she was stricken with infantile paralysis. It is now hoped that the child will be completely cured.

Miss College Girl Is Engaging Attention of Fashion Designers

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT'S no secret as to who has been chosen to play the part of fashion during the early fall days—College Girl is her name. To this important personage all fashiondom is paying homage at the present moment. On every side you are reminded that the idea is motivating to cater to the whims and wardrobe needs of the girl who is going away to school.

The style program arranged for Miss College Girl and her younger schoolgirl sister fairly teems with excitement. For instance, there is the new bustle dress. The idea has taken the collegiate set by storm. The quaint bustle dresses that grandmothers galvanized in as girls in the '20s are actually proving inspiration for frocks that the modern girl will wear this fall.

The highpoints of these oldtime silhouettes are being revived such as waistlines of vanishing inches, slim corseted midriffs and wide back-swirling skirts interpreted in novel bustle treatments but modified so cleverly they are made thoroughly practical and wearable for this day and age. Then there is the new vogue that calls for a velvet or velveteen jacket worn with a gay plaided wool skirt or a contrasting or matched cold color as fancy dictates. The decided military air that the new fashions take on is also a big factor in the new mode and most outstanding of all is the importance attached to fine materials.

These and other significant style trends were revealed in their grandest best in an advance fall fashion revue staged by the Style Creators of Chicago. The three models pictured were especially applauded by the audience of visiting merchants as fashions that are representative of what the up-to-date fashion-alert girl will be selecting for her going-away-to-school wardrobe.

The clever little date frock of shepherd check velveteen shown to the left in the group is sure to enjoy

A gay campus career. Its cunning tunic bustleback and its full circular-cut skirt gives it swank and distinction such as collegiate fashionables demand. Its red suede belt supplies a fetching dash of color. Approval for the new bustle-back dresses is assured for being interpreted in simple words, bustle-back is merely a way of saying "back fullness" achieved in ingenious ways that are conservative and wearable without being overdone.

The suit to the right is very eye-catching, stressing as it does the continued triumph in the mode of richly colorful striped woollens. The stripes, the plaids and the marvelous artistry with which designers combine them with monotonous in related tone simply hold one spellbound. The gorgeous striped wool that fashions the costume suit keys to the smartest fall colors, harmonizing vibrant greens with luscious blackberry tones. The skirt is all-around pleated. The boxy jacket tops an emerald green velvet blouse closing with novel key-and-keyhole ornaments. An oversized quilt tops the moss green collar hat.

You may expect to see gay little velvet jackets dotted all over the college campus. The girl centered in the picture wears a snug black velvet jacket quite military looking as so many of the newer fashions are, with a plaid-pleated skirt that introduces an artful blend of grape, pink and yellow tones, rimmed with a sweater in warm yellow hues. Juniors, likewise college sophisticates, simply dot on the new plaids and stripes. A Scotch cap of black velvet with satin-ribbon steamer, together with the plaid carries the message that fashions for young folks have gone very Scotch this season.

High Color Tweed Offers Solution

Here is a smart version of the costume suit that combines plain woolen with gay tweed. The fitted jacket is of yellow and black tweed in a diagonal weave. Yellow and gold tones are held in high favor according to what is showing in advance Paris collections. The costume includes a jacket, swagger coat and skirt. This idea of both jacket and topcoat done in matching color scheme is very practical. The saucer brim hat is of black felt.

Offers Solution For One Problem

For many women, the most trying coat length of recent inspiration is the rather popular just-below-the-waist length that nips in at the midriff and hugs the hips. It is a good style for a slender woman with a streamlined figure and is being shown in any number of varieties, of which one of the most popular is a monotone wool jacket worn over a gay print dress. But the problem is not so simple for those who border on plumpness. One suggestion is that the slightly swallow-tail version deals more kindly with the heavy woman.

Two-Skirt Outfit Real Money-Saver

A money-saver for the bride consists of a two-skirt-suit of very sheer wool or crepe, designed with a suave fitted jacket. The street-length skirt can be worn with the jacket and printed-crepe-or-organdy-blouses to make a smart runabout costume by day.

A floor-length skirt of the same material, combined with the jacket and a sheer chiffon blouse make a chic dinner costume for boat and hotel wear in the evening. New Coat Silhouettes Coats are no longer a simple matter of straight boxy lines or fitted and flared effects, for Parisian designers are showing intricate details of cut and design in their most recent collections.

Wealth in Ships Lies on Erie Bed

Items in Sunken Cargoes Range From Cash to Locomotives.

LORAIN, OHIO.—Rich treasures—not gold doubloons but everything from cash to whisky and locomotives—lie on the bottom of Lake Erie, a survey of records here shows.

The wrecks of ships lie scattered over the bottom of the shallowest of the Great Lakes—whose average depth is less than 100 feet—but are neglected by treasure hunters who go instead to tropical islands to search for legendary pirates' gold.

Valuable cargoes have gone down on the ships that travel the inland sea.

One of the better-known lake tragedies was that of the ship Erie, commanded by Capt. T. J. Titus.

Sailing from Buffalo for Chicago on the afternoon of August 9, 1841, an explosion rocked her decks as she was about 33 miles out.

Flames spread throughout the rigging on the old sailing ship. There was a panic and most aboard were drowned or burned to death. Scores of immigrants aboard died, and their life savings—amounting to approximately $10,000—sank with the charred ship in 70 feet of water.

No one thought of the fortune until 1855, when an enterprising group from Buffalo found the hull of the ship, towed it to shallow water and recovered the wealth, which was mostly in foreign coins. Not all of the treasures have been recovered. The bulk of the Dean Richmond still lies between Dunkirk, N. Y., and Erie, Pa. All hands were lost when the Richmond sank, and $50,000 worth of iron ore was lost in her water-logged hold.

The Young Lion sank during the last century with a valuable cargo of railroad iron, near Walnut creek.

Off Point Pelee, Ont., lies the Kent with a money cargo, and somewhere between Cleveland and Detroit the Clarion is sunk with a cargo of locomotives.

Finders of the steamer Atlantic, which went down off Long Point in Lake Erie with a loss of 200 lives, were made richer by $20,000.

Much Whisky Lost. Not a little of the valuable cargo on the rocky bottom of treacherous Lake Erie is whisky, some lost in wrecks but much thrown overboard from rumrunning smugglers' boats. During the days of prohibition the bootleggers—many of them boys in their teens out for adventure and profit—piled the lake with their bottled cargoes.

One of the most popular routes was by way of the Lake Erie islands—past Put-In-Bay, where Admiral Perry harbored his fleet before his famous encounter with the British.

In the shallows near the islands the rumrunners hastily dumped their liquor whenever the vigilant coast guard appeared. Many cases of whisky still rest on the sandy bottoms.

Edward A. Nagel, a young Toledo yachtsman, last summer anchored his catboat off one of the islands, descended in an open-bottom diving helmet, and recovered many cases of liquor.

Featherless Chicken Is Clad in Cotton 'Shirt'

CHERRY VALLEY, OHIO.—Babe, a little White Rock chicken pet of Mrs. George Davis, never has grown any feathers—but the chick is comfortable in a cotton shirt.

Mrs. Davis made "Babe hasn't a feather," Mrs. Davis said. "The other chickens used to peck him so I made the shirt from old stockings."

The shirt also protects Babe from the blistering sun.

Mrs. Davis cut holes in the stockings to allow his wiry legs to slip through and made a drawing of the shirt would fit snugly about the neck.

Mastodon Bones Found Under St. Louis Street

ST. LOUIS.—Bones of a mastodon, prehistoric elephant that roamed the American continent during the glacial age, have been found by WPA workers excavating near a busy thoroughfare here.

Sailors Look for Thrills at Grand Coulee Dam.

SPOKANE, WASH.—A decade or so ago it was the barnstorming aviator who always drew the looks of the farmer, but now it's the unsettled sailboat enthusiast, who loads his craft on a trailer and hauls it from lake to lake until he finds suitable winds.

Unlike the fier, he's seeking pleasure instead of fortune, and with at least 70 lakes, large and small, puddling the Pacific Northwest's inland empire, he's almost sure to get it. He has two states to play in—eastern Washington and northern Idaho—and makes the most of it.

Putting the ol' bucket—as sailboaters affectionately call their craft—on a trailer and plopping it into one lake after another until a favorable air current prevails just became popular this spring, but the sport itself has had plenty of devotees for four years.

The canvas sportmen anticipate the 157-mile-long lake to be created by Grand Coulee dam with enthusiasm. Winds have followed the gorge made by the Columbia since the stream began cutting it. In the past come have been too treacherous but the lake is expected to smooth them.

The commodore of the Spokane Sailing club, William Stockdale, believes the slim, sterile lake will be an ideal sailing ground and especially attractive to those who want an outing of two or three days. Stockdale said the lake should be in good condition by 1942.

At present more than 100 trim sailing craft dot lakes surrounding Spokane. More than 30 have permanent moorage on beautiful Lake Coeur d'Alene, 35 miles to the east in Idaho. A score or more other lakes are among those attracting the come-and-go sailors.

The types of sailboats range from the Moth, a midget of international design, to the 24-foot auxiliary. The larger boats can carry eight or ten persons while the Moths have room for only one. Costs range from $50 to $2,000, with the average being $250.

Family Misses Diploma First Time in 12 Years

ST. JOSEPH, MO.—For the first time in 12 years Mr. and Mrs. Paul Westpheling have no diploma to hang on the wall.

But the family has collected almost enough sheepskins to paper the wall. The diploma collection so far includes 16 from nine different schools. They were collected by six children.

Four children are still in school and the diploma yield is expected to start again next year. They expect at least eight more graduating certificates.

Desert House Haunted

Blamed on Radio Waves

SALT LAKE CITY.—A haunted city—haunted by radio waves, not ghosts—is used by shepherds for their headquarters on the alkaline salt flats west of Salt Lake City. The house—a one-room cabin—has as its main attraction a stove which the shepherds declare plays music while it cooks and electric lights that burn without being directly connected to a power line. But these weird performances do not bother the herders. They explain that their shack is only a few feet from the transmitting terminals of a 50,000-watt radio station and that the radiating radio waves operate the singing stove and connection-less lights.

Report of 5,000 Whales Found in Old Ship Log

NANTUCKET, MASS.—That the blow! Sighting of 5,000 whales, believed the largest number ever seen at one time, is recorded in whaling entries in the log of the ship Walter Scott, which left here October 31, 1840, bound for the Pacific. The whales were sighted in the South Pacific in 1841. The entry was discovered by WPA historical records survey workers poring over the antique collection of Augustus L. B. Fisher.

Profits vs. Politics

Incidentally, the most recent report of the earnings of the Gannett Company, Inc., of Rochester, N. A., publishers of 19 papers, showed a net profit of $1,165,000 for last year, an increase of $40,000 over the net of the year before.

Moreover, Roger Babson, Wall Street's pet economist, has just issued a statement that the newspaper headlines in this way "Business Near Best of '29," etc. "Security holders are finding bigger checks in their dividend envelopes this September than a year ago; the total of dividends paid were 40 per cent greater for the first six months of 1939 than for the same period in 1938."

Along the same line, the Treasury reports show that the $142,000,000,000 gross income of 478,000 corporations was the largest since 1929.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

AN EXPERIMENT IN HORSE-FEEDING

THERE'S an old story I have always liked. It is about the parsimonious Frenchman who rued the money he spent in feeding his horse. After scheming and planning he hit upon an idea which would enable him to stop all that.

It was beautifully simple: Each day he would gradually cut down the amount of feed he gave the horse. He would cut it down so gradually, in fact, that the animal wouldn't ever realize he was being cheated.

The horse would thus become used to getting along on less. Eventually he would need no feed at all. Think of the money that would save!

The French genius scientifically set about carrying on the experiment. Several months later he was telling about it with pride in his voice. Did it work? asked a friend. "Work? Oh, yes, indeed, it did!" he exclaimed. "It worked perfectly. Beautifully. The only trouble was that just about the time my horse got used to going without feed, he died."

We laugh at the benighted condition of a man with an idea as foolish as this, but many business men try to stop feeding their business "horse" by eliminating or cutting down on their advertising.

The fact is that advertising is the feed which keeps their business in robust health and full of energy and strength.

Many examples can be cited of the inevitable result of stopping advertising. Two will do. Forty years ago there was a remedy on the market which was America's biggest seller. It was widely, intelligently, consistently advertised. Its name was a household word. Then the founder of the business died. His heirs decided to cut out advertising because "our product is so well known people will have to buy it." The product passed out of the picture entirely.

Another was a fine, honest, well-made, well-advertised toilet soap, with all the good will any product could possibly need. The management of the business changed. The advertising stopped. Soon the product was no longer on the market.

The reason why advertising must be a continuous process is that we human beings need constant reminding. We're not fickle. But we are so filled with our own ideas and plans and businesses that if a man who wants our trade doesn't ask for it regularly and often, we drift elsewhere to the man who does.

The advertiser is faced by the problem of asking his customers to buy from him, but he also has to consider the most economical way of extending his invitation.

He finds the answer to both parts of this problem in the newspaper. No other form of advertising has ever been discovered which will carry his message so effectively for so little cost.

Garner Organization Claims 461 Delegates on First Ballot

DALLAS, Texas.—John Nance Garner, vice-president of the United States, will go into the next Democratic national convention with over 461 votes pledged to him, according to E. B. Germany, chairman of the State Democratic Executive committee and co-chairman of the Texas Garner-for-President committee. "We are convinced, from the deluge of pledges we have received at the Dallas headquarters, that there is a genuine popular demand for the nomination of Mr. Garner on the Democratic ticket. This comes, not from one section or group of states, but from the entire nation. From Oregon and Vermont, and from Georgia to the Southwest, we are getting the most enthusiastic protestations of friendship and admiration for our stalwart Texas statesman."

"Mr. Garner's way of thinking has captured the public imagination of the middle ground of America's straight-thinking citizenry. If the politicians do not listen to the voice of the people in 1940, I predict that the Democratic party as an organization won't be worth anything. I have heard many comments that the politicians are going to pick the next candidates for both the Democratic and Republican parties. My advice to them in both parties is to listen to what the people are thinking. If they don't heed the deep longings of the mass of America's citizenry, they will be politically dead after the next election. I repeat: If the Democratic politicians attempt to thwart the will of the people in the next convention, the party of Jefferson and Jackson won't be worth the effort to put it out of its misery."

In outlining the strength that he claims for the Texan, Mr. Germany pointed out that out of 1,100 votes in the Democratic convention, the south and border states will furnish Mr. Garner with 266, the chief block of which is represented by the 40 votes from Texas. The southwest and western states, without counting California, and taking but two of the farm states, Nebraska and Wisconsin, will yield Mr. Garner a total of 461 votes. "Now I am not including in this forecast of 461 the 210 additional votes indicated from the states of New York, Pennsylvania and California," declared Mr. Germany. The Gallup poll in the last three weeks has printed definite forecasts of public opinion from these three states, which together have 19 percent of the total convention strength. These polls show, assuming that the President will not be a candidate which is the only way that Democrats believing in the continuance of his traditional party policies can think that Mr. Garner is the choice of over 50% of the Democrats in New York and California and of over 60% of the Democrats of Pennsylvania.

Out of these three states, two will give Mr. Garner a clear majority of the convention, the Texas leader pointed out. "There is no question in my mind," declared Mr. Germany, "that the people of the United States have very definite convictions on the coming presidential campaign. The principles involved weigh deeply on citizens everywhere. They embrace Mr. Garner because he stands for a principle that finds welcome reaction in every human being who worries and sometimes wonders on the future of his country."

"Mr. Garner's nomination by the Democrats of this country is inevitable. It is ordained in the hearts of the American people, and I view his nomination and subsequent election as certain, with the present trend of events."

As Amazed Britishers Viewed Runaway Launching

H. M. S. Formidable, new British aircraft carrier, rides serenely off the Belfast, Ireland, ways after launching herself a half-hour ahead of time. The 23,000-ton craft started sliding down the ways as workmen were knocking out the props preparatory to the launching. As it picked up speed, careening wildly into the water, it hurled timbers in all directions, killing one woman and injuring 28 other people. Lady Kingsley Wood, sponsor of the boat, managed to hurl the traditional bottle of champagne at the retreating craft. The new craft is considered one of the most modern of its kind in the world.

Rural America Leads New 'Dry' Trend As Nation Deserts 'Beer Barrel Polka'

By JAMES HARRISON.
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
WITH the national pendulum swinging from tipping to temperance, rural America is climbing back on the water wagon.

There's little fanfare or hurrah about this new prohibition crusade. The traditional temperance groups are apparently playing but a minor part. The movement is growing in spite of campaigns by enlightened elements among the distillers urging temperance in drinking.

Local option is the process which is making the wet spots dry. More than 4,000 communities have voted "dry" since prohibition was repealed 5 1/2 years ago, a prominent research organization estimates. The majority of these have been in rural areas.

Counting the districts that remained steadfastly dry in the face of repeal, there are today at least 10,000 communities in which beer and booze are outlawed. This represents about one-fourth of all the townships, rural precincts, counties and villages in the United States.

Rapid Growth Significant?

An America only one-fourth dry might not be regarded as ominous to the wets, when compared with the situation preceding the adoption of the Eighteenth amendment. At that time 90 per cent of all townships and rural precincts, 85 per cent of all counties and 75 per cent of all the villages in the United States had their own form of prohibition.

But the rapidity with which the new dry movement is gaining ground today is significant of a changing public sentiment. Thousands of local option elections are scheduled for ballot this fall. In Pennsylvania alone 492 precincts will hold wet-dry contests.

Some ardent drys predict that when the votes are counted this autumn, at least 8,000 communities will have entered the dry belt since repeal. This may be overoptimistic, but it is not being entirely laughed out of court by impartial observers.

Dries Win 50 Per Cent

How the dry forces have triumphed so far this year is indicated by results in Illinois. Out of 341 local option contests last April, the dries won 273 or 79 per cent according to a survey by the American Business Men's Research foundation.

Illinois now has 720 dry areas, of which about 600 represent communities that have voted that way since repeal. "It is estimated that there are now more than 1,000,000 people in Illinois living in areas made dry by local option votes," says an official bulletin of the foundation. If the results elsewhere are similar, it would mean that more than 10,000,000 Americans now reside in territory from which liquor is barred.

AUF WIEDERSEHEN TO PROSIT?—In 1933 it was believed that return of legal beer would conquer the nation's taste for hard liquor. One of the strangest features of today's dry surge is that beer consumption has dropped. Meanwhile, more hard liquor is being consumed.

Why has the dry movement spread so rapidly in the farming districts? The answers range all the way from the rural accident problem caused by drunken drivers and tipsy pedestrians, to increases in crime and rising juvenile delinquency. But that doesn't tell the entire story.

Follows Tradition, Says Authority.

One of the most plausible explanations was given by Martin Nelson, secretary of the Keeley institute, of Dwight, Ill., sanitarium for the treatment of alcoholism. Rural America, he says, is simply running true to form.

"In banning intoxicants," Mr. Nelson declared, "farming areas and smaller towns are for the most part returning to the status they occupied before prohibition. They have been traditionally dry for a century. It is only natural they should lead the parade today."

"That rural America to dry in practice as well as theory is indiated by the records of patients treated for alcoholism at the Keeley institute. A recent survey showed that only 10 per cent of the habitual drinkers come from farms and country towns. And although farmers rank near the top numerically among our patients, this can be explained by the fact that farmers as a class far outnumber any other single occupation or group of occupations.

Cites 'Public Disgust'

"But while the country districts are following their normal disposition on the wet-dry issue, it cannot be denied that one of the major factors encouraging the spread of prohibition in rural areas as well as in cities is public disgust over the way drinking establishments are operated. People were told that with repeal the saloon was never coming back. But it did come back in many states and in a form far more vicious than ever before."

Whether big cities will follow the rural districts in going dry depends to a good extent on whether the growing resentment of law-abiding citizens against rowdy saloon operation can be stemmed.

Apparently the saloonkeepers are like the old Bourbon kings of France who never learned a new thing nor forgot an old one, for even the Chicago Tribune, arch-enemy of prohibition recently barked: "The cause of temperance will be served if the saloonkeepers are given a kicking around. They have learned nothing and presume too much." The Tribune was angered when the tavern owners and politicians of Chicago connived to legalize a later closing hour in return for higher license fee.

Beer Down, Hard Liquor Up

The increase in dry sentiment throughout the country in the past year has been accompanied by a decrease in the total gallons of alcoholic beverages consumed. One of the anomalies of this situation, however, is that while beer drinking has registered a marked decline, the consumption of hard liquor has actually shown a rise. Beer consumption fell off 73,282,016 gallons in the 11 months ending May 31, 1939, compared with the corresponding period of 1938. At the same time hard liquor consumption increased by 6,632,785 gallons. The net decline in all alcoholic beverages consumed amounted to 72,756,228 gallons.

"Fading popularity of beer is one of the tragic jokes of repeal," said a leading dry official. "When the agitation for the repeal of the Volstead act was at its height a few years ago, the wets argued that if beer and light wine were restored, America's thirst for hard liquor would vanish. They said people would drink more beer and less whiskey. But the fact is that Americans prefer booze to beer."

But even with the inroads of prohibition, past and imminent, the liquor industry is definitely to be considered in the ranks of big business. A statistician has figured that six times more money jingles across bars or is rung up in liquor store cash registers annually than is dropped into the Sunday collection plates of America's 246,000 churches.

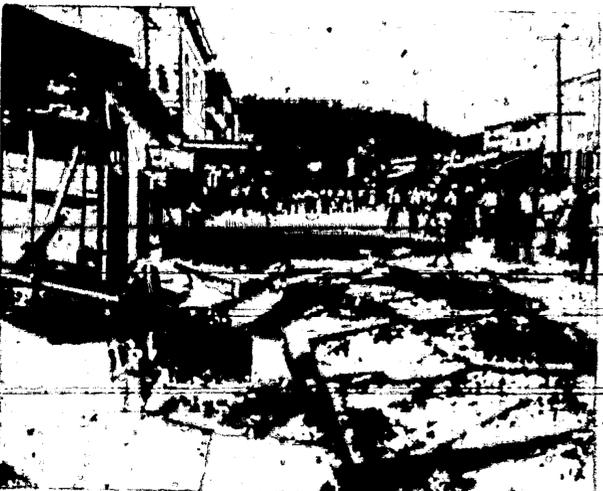

Uncle Sam's yearly liquor bill is approximately $3,000,000,000. At the same time Americans contribute about $650,000,000 to the support of churches. It is estimated that there are 636,000 places in the United States where liquor, beer and wine can be bought, including taverns, cocktail lounges, retail liquor stores and hotels.

'Rumors' Cost Dime a Dozen In Secretive Dictator Lands

ROME. — Those "unconfirmed reports" and "rumors" your newspaper brings from Rome, Berlin and other totalitarian cities may prove in the end to be false—but don't blame your newspaper!

In both Germany and Italy, where news must filter through a ministry of propaganda before painstaking censors decide whether it should be released, the most fantastic rumor may prove to be true. On the other hand, a very logical report from some distant province may have been entirely false. The foreign correspondent has a choice of waiting several days until the story is "dead" and thus having it denied or confirmed by the propaganda ministry, or he can take a chance and release it as a rumor.

Mystery of Eye Doctor.

Mussolini and Hitler are both men of mystery whose comings and goings make big news. Yet lucky indeed is the foreign correspondent who can pierce the veil of secrecy and send his paper an authenticated story. Recently Mussolini made a secret visit into northern Italy which produced three rumors for correspondents. Take your pick: (1) He was going to Switzerland to consult an eye specialist; (2) he was meeting Hitler in the Brenner pass; (3) he was meeting a German diplomat and the Swiss eye specialist at Venice. Not until almost a week later did the ministry of popular culture (known as "Pop Cult" to correspondents) give reporters the story. Several of them got severe dressings-down for having issued false reports, yet no one could have expected them to ignore Il Duce's trip.

'Troop Train' Panic.

Similarly, the world was startled several months ago by reports that German troops were passing southward through Brenner pass for shipment by boat to Italian colonies in Italy. This was a sensational story, substantiated by a respected private German citizen who said his cousin had seen the troop trains one night at Genoa. Similar rumors came from many villages along the line.

IL DUCE—Did he visit an eye doctor, Herr Hitler, or just a diplomat?

In the end these "troop trains" proved to be shipments of German-confiscated Czech army equipment being sent to Libya in trains guarded by German sentries.

Recently Italian newspapers made capital out of false rumors printed abroad, publishing a list of them under the heading, "An Anthology of False News." It included stories growing out of the seemingly fantastic report that foreigners were being evicted from the Italian Tyrol. This story, denied by "Pop Cult," was true.

So while Germans and Italians blame democratic malice or panic for the melange of rumors surrounding their comings and goings, foreign correspondents put the blame elsewhere—on a blanket system of news suppression which has made the task of checking rumors almost impossible.

CHILD OF EVIL

By OCTAVUS ROY COHEN

SYNOPSIS

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous, swamper, has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tries to reassure him, but tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, looks upon herself as being completely righteous. She is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming.

CHAPTER IV—Continued

Mrs. Forrest found it necessary to make her point more impressively. "Andy hasn't gone to work yet." Kay glanced without particular enthusiasm at the sturdy figure of her brother. He was clad in the habiliments of a garage mechanic. But she merely said, "I see he hasn't."

"Sit down, my dear. We wish to talk to you." Emma's requests were always unmistakable commands. Kay seated herself, but not comfortably. She was grateful for the presence of her father. . . . How ever unable he was to render assistance in this domestic crisis.

"Do you realize," inquired Mrs. Forrest, "that this is supposed to be your home?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Then why don't you stay here instead of gallivanting all over the country all the time?"

"I wasn't gallivanting, Mother. I've been staying with the Hamiltons."

"And driving out every night with that worthless Barney Hamilton?"

"She said, 'Barney's all right.'"

"He doesn't work," interjected Andy virtuously. "Just plays around. I've got no use for them

Mrs. Forrest had risen. She was a purposeful and dominant lady, overflowing with righteous indignation.

"Will you promise me never to talk to Kirk Reynolds again?"

Kay met her mother's eyes squarely. "No, ma'am."

"Why not?"

"Because I don't make promises that I can't keep."

"Can't! Can't! You hear that, Andrew?"

"Now, Mother—aren't you a trifle hard on Kay?"

"No! Certainly not! I'm only doing my duty as a mother. . . ."

From outside came the insistent honking of an automobile-horn. Four pairs of eyes quested through the window toward the curb. Mrs. Forrest said, "Of all the nerves!" and Andy gasped, "It's Kirk Reynolds."

Kay rose. Her face was white. She walked from the room and onto the porch. Her voice came back to them—clearly. She called, "I'll be with you in a minute, Kirk."

She walked up to her room; not hearing—or not noticing—her mother's statement that she positively was not going riding with that ruffian. She did ring, faintly, her mother's protests that this was more than any good woman should be called upon to stand. She heard her mother stating to husband and son that this was an unbearable disgrace—her own daughter riding around in bright, broad daylight with a professional gambler. She called upon Andrew Forrest to do something about it, and Mr. Forrest—glad enough to escape—plodded up the stairs after Kay.

Andrew Forrest was a meek person, albeit a gentle and kindly one. By profession he was a lawyer, a keen student who was consulted on intricate matters by his less-learned contemporaries. His practice was arduous and not very remunerative. He was short and slight and on the verge of baldness. His eyes were gentle and not too strong. He was a student and a philosopher; a man of scrupulous integrity—both of thought and deed.

He came now into his daughter's room and touched her shoulder affectionately. He said, "Must you, Kay?"

She nodded. "Yes, Dad."

"I'm sorry. Your mother isn't entirely wrong, you know. Kirk is bad medicine."

"Yes, Dad."

"And you still feel . . ."

"Just this once. I'd rather not, but I can't help it."

His eyes clouded. "Something serious?"

"Yes."

"And you can't tell me?"

"With I could."

He smiled bravely. "Don't forget we've buddies, Kay."

She kissed him, hard, on the lips. "You know how much I love you, don't you, Dad?"

"I know." He patted her shoulder gently. "Watch yourself, Kay. And don't forget you're mighty young."

She walked downstairs, swiftly, purposefully. Mrs. Forrest made a last, desperate stand. "I order you not to go out with that man."

Kay's glance was unyielding. "I'm sorry, Mother."

She passed through the front door, climbed into the little coupe beside Kirk Reynolds and rolled west on Chicago Avenue. Her lips were tight set.

Kay said, "You sent for me, Kirk. What's wrong?" And he answered, "Plenty."

They rode in silence, Kay's eyes cloudy with trouble; Kirk's face inscrutable. The sapphire sky was brilliantly clear, the April sun bright and warm, yet Kay shivered.

A car approached them, coming from Chicago. The driver saw Kay as they passed, and her face flushed. It was a brief passing, a quick recognition—yet Kay knew, without looking around, that the driver of the other car had been startled—and that he had turned to look after her. She said, somewhat bitterly, "It would be that way."

Kirk said, in a flat voice, "Who was it?"

"Barney Hamilton."

"The lad whose mother owns the Gardens?"

"Yes."

They reached the intersection of the concrete Federal highway and Kirk swung to the right. His voice was toneless, almost disinterested. "What's the setup there, Kay?"

"Where?"

"Between you and that Hamilton guy?"

"What difference does it make?"

"None. I just asked."

His eyes did not leave the broad ribbon of road which unwound under their wheels.

Kay said, "I like him—a lot."

"So I imagined."

"What made you think so?"

"Your expression when we passed him. That faint, mocking smile passed briefly across Kirk's lips."

"Has he gone for you?"

"I don't know."

"Okay. But he has."

Kay's body felt uncomfortably warm. "I'd rather not talk about Barney."

"—To me, you mean?"

"Yes." Her own voice had become edged. "And I might as well tell you something else, Kirk. This is my last ride with you."

"That so?"

"Yes. People are talking . . ."

His voice was sharp. "Who?"

"Everybody. My family and—"

"What are they saying?"

"That you're not the sort of person a nice girl should be going with."

He laughed mischievously. "That not. Then, after a brief pause, 'Are they saying anything else?'"

"I don't know."

"I mean about the last time we were out together?"

She shrank away from him.

"Please, Kirk . . ."

"They will," he remarked acidly, "sooner or later."

She said, "I know it. That's why I'm not going out with you any more."

He didn't answer that. His foot depressed the accelerator ever so slightly and the speedometer moved ahead to forty-five. The road was broad and smooth, cars buzzed by, farm cars and trucks and several big sedans headed toward Beverly and Cathedral Gardens. Kirk said dryly, "Your boy friend's mother has done quite a job."

"Please, Kirk . . ."

"She has, really. The town was dead until she came into the picture."

"I'd rather not . . . Why did you send for me?"

"Reasons."

"Nothing wrong, is there?"

"Yes."

"You mean . . . ?"

"You'll find out."

She pressed her lips together. "Please take me back."

"Not now."

"But it's getting late."

"Not now yet."

"Where are you taking me?"

"Springdale."

"To Springdale? But Kirk—I can't!"

"Yes, you can. You can do exactly what I say."

She glanced at his face. It was like granite. Hard. Unconcernably hard and dangerous. She asked, "Why are you taking me there?"

There was no emotion in his voice. He made a flat statement. He said, "You and I are going to get married."

Kirk Reynolds drove on in silence. He might have said, "The weather is pleasant." He might have said, "We're going to Springdale for lunch." Instead, in just a casual manner, he had stated that they were about to be married.

Kay's hazel eyes were wide and frightened. Unconscious of the gesture, she pressed one hand against her lips. She didn't even ask whether he was serious. Kirk was not addicted to making statements which he did not mean. But she did say, "I don't love you" and he answered, tersely, "That has nothing to do with it."

Words were a relief. "It's impossible," she declared—and he smiled again; that merciless, smacking smile. He said, "I don't think so." Then she asked, "But why? Do you think that you care for me?"

"No."

"And yet . . . Oh, Kirk! You're joking, surely?"

"Not exactly. Here's the license." He tossed it into her lap. It had been issued in Springdale, that prosperous agricultural county which adjoined Beauregard on the north. The names stared up at her: Kirk Reynolds, age 28; Katherine Forrest, age 19. "We'll be married by a magistrate or a preacher. It's your wedding. Take your choice."

The thing was too startling, too bewildering. She said, without conviction, "I won't do it!"

"Yes, you will."

"But why?"

"Because I say so."

"I can't!" she cried desperately. "It isn't possible. I—I'm in love with someone else."

He shrugged. "That makes no difference." He turned his cold eyes upon her. "Perhaps you've forgotten that night?"

"No! I couldn't forget that."

"Then try to remember exactly what happened. Perhaps then you'll understand whether I'm fooling."

She turned frightened eyes upon him. "Is it really necessary, Kirk?"

His explanation was, to him, sufficient. It was made without interest, a mere cold statement of fact. "In this State," said Kirk Reynolds, "a wife cannot be compelled to testify against her husband."

The preacher, a rather gaunt and unkempt individual, pronounced Kirk Reynolds and Katherine Forrest man-and-wife. Then, gratuitously, he intoned a long and sonorous prayer, during the course of which Kay kept her eyes fixed upon the minister's wife; a nondescript person in a long coat which had been donned hurriedly in the present emergency to cover an unceremonial wrapper. Behind her stood a service—as a second-witness.

Kay had ceased to think. She had ceased to feel. She knew that something terrible was happening; something of awful finality. She knew the same cold fear which had paralyzed her that night on the road when a gun had spoken harshly from Kirk's hand, and now she sensed, rather than saw, Kirk produce a wallet and press a bill into the far-from-unwilling palm of the preacher.

She wanted to laugh. Or to cry. She was audience and actor. It was as though she were preparing to leave the movie theater in Beverly after having suffered through a dreadful and unreal tragedy. She heard the whispered, surprised comment of the portly Negro, "Golly! Don't look as if he's even gwine kiss the bride."

When they were in the car again, headed home, Kirk drove slowly. Once he even smiled, thinly, as he said, "Snap out of it, Kay."

She nodded, waiting for him to speak again.

"Do you understand why I did it?" he inquired.

"No."

"Had to. You're not a bad kid, but you happened to be in the wrong place at the wrong time. Now I'm afraid Beverly is wising up."

Conversation—even this sort of conversation—was a relief. She said, "What do you mean?"

"You pulled a dumb play that night. You dropped your compact near Jackson's body."

"My compact . . . ?" She remembered faintly. "But it wasn't marked."

"Folks knew it was yours."

"It could have belonged to any tourist, couldn't it?"

"It could. But it didn't. Where'd you get it?"

She said, "Barney Hamilton gave it to me."

"I thought you. Now like it in Beverly. Swank stuff. And there's not a woman in town who hasn't noticed it. I only found out yesterday it had been picked up—cut there."

"They—they couldn't prove it was mine."

"They could try," he stated dryly. "But I promised you I'd never tell what I saw."

"Sure you did. You'd have been too wise to blab. But you're a kid. Smart enough in some ways, but dumb as hell in others. The Solicitor for this circuit is shrewd. He's been asking questions. Lots of folks remember we were at the dance together and that we went riding that night. If you had been picked up suddenly and had a bucketful of questions thrown at you, you'd have given yourself away."

"But can't they still do that?"

"Sure. And where would it get 'em. You might even be tricked into telling the truth. Not meaning to, of course. But what good would it do? What you tell the Solicitor ain't evidence in this State. They've got to get it out of you on the witness stand, and they can't make you take the stand against me—now that we're married."

"You think they'll try you for killing Harvey Jackson?"

"Not now they won't. No witnesses. Couldn't possibly convict me."

"But if they're sure . . ."

"They're never sure. And if they were, that ain't evidence. You're the only person who could convict me. And you won't."

She was silent for a long time. Then, "What are you going to do now, Kirk?"

"About what?"

"Us."

He shrugged indifferently. "Nothing."

"You mean . . ."

"Living together? Hell—I didn't marry you for that. So long as you keep your mouth shut, you can do what you want."

Your Children Can Help You; Let Them Try

● GOOD JUDGMENT needed in delegating household tasks. Even older children may be too immature to do difficult or too continuous work. Wise mother will keep close watch over youngsters.

By EMMA GARY WALLACE

WHERE there is a family of children and the means are limited, it often becomes necessary for the older children to give as much help as they possibly can, not only with the household but with the care of the little ones, and the tasks are usually accepted cheerfully.

But good judgment is needed in such situations. The mother must remember that the older children are still immature, and that they should not be called upon for work that is too difficult or too continuous. What may seem light—not at all overtaxing—to older persons may be quite tiring to a boy or girl, and a child is entitled to a happy youth as far as can be managed. Then the little ones—even a single little one—may become quite demanding and tyrannical. The wise mother will keep a close watch of the general situation and see to it that each child is dealt with fairly.

In order that the mother herself shall not be overtaxed and made irritable by too many demands upon her strength and time, it may be necessary for her to simplify the household program, as far as possible.

Part of the ironing, for instance, may properly be left undone. Many garments and sheets do not actually require ironing. If they are sweet and fresh and clean, pulled into chape just before they are quite dry and smoothly folded, that is all that is necessary. The beds will look better, of course, if pillow cases are ironed.

Even such ironing as may really need to be done, can be accomplished with less fatigue if there is a high stool to sit on—preferably with a back—and one of these costs little. There is no reason why dishes cannot be washed, or part of them at least, while using the same stool. If they are thoroughly rinsed and a drainer is used most of them will not need to be wiped.

Meals can be attractively served and yet be simple and nourishing. A baked custard takes less time and work than a pie. Baked apples, simple rice puddings, unfrosted cakes and "one-dish meals" each cut down a little on the work, and every little helps. A "one-dish meal" is one where vegetables and meat are cooked in one container and served in that container.

Don't Let Work Become Humdrum.

Some sort of a play can be devised so that the work the older children do loses its humdrum character. For example: the living room is to be put in exceptionally nice order, because the Queen of Hearts is coming for supper, and as the children do the work, they could chant to some well-known tune,

*The Queen of Hearts
She made some tarts
All on a summer day.
The King of Hearts
He found those tarts
And stole them all away.*

One of the children could pretend to be the Queen of Hearts who will come in with a bright red scarf around her shoulders or a gilt paper crown and inspect the dusting. The King might wear that crown at supertime when lights may be covered, but of course he would not be given a chance to defraud the others.

Taking care of the baby should be carefully supervised. Slender older children can wheel the baby or draw him about on a little cart or sled, but they should not be expected to carry him. The little one, who is being cared for by the older children, should not be allowed to impose upon them by demanding toys of which older brothers and sisters are choicest, and perhaps are justified in not liking to lend if the baby is likely to break or spoil them.

It is not to be wondered at that older children sometimes look upon the little newcomers as very much of a trial. But under the right management, with sympathetic understanding, they may easily be led to love and willingly help care for the new babies. It should be made plain that they continue to hold, even more securely than before, their own special places in the affection and confidence of parents and relatives.

Lightweight Diving Equipment

Charles Edwards, 23 years old, who has dived for pearls in lightweight equipment invented by himself, is diving for gold in the deep pools of New Zealand's swift mountain rivers. He went from Sydney, Australia, to New Zealand with a mining engineer, who invited him to make the venture. Prospectors are recovering large quantities of gold from margins of New Zealand rivers, but deep pools have never been explored because the streams are too swift to permit dredging and the country too rugged for transporting heavy diving apparatus. Edwards' complete equipment weighs only 100 pounds.

Moral: It's an Art To Know When to Fight

A loud, noisy and particularly objectionable drunk, obsessed by its own prominence and the attention paid to it, challenged a lion to single combat. The challenge was promptly declined by the lion.

"Huh!" sneered the skunk, "You're afraid to fight me."

"Ho," answered the lion, coolly, "but why should I fight you? You would gain fame from fighting me, even though I gave you the worst licking of your life, as I would do. How about me, though? I couldn't possibly gain anything by defeating you while on the other hand, everyone who met me for a month would know I had been in the company of a skunk."

Live Stock Situation

(By J. A. McNaughton.)

Los Angeles Union Stock Yards,

September 5. Larger beef supplies are in prospect for the United States, according to latest U. S. Department of Agriculture forecasts, which indicate the cattle population January 1 will show an increase of around one million heads. The actual increase will depend to a great extent upon western range feed conditions. It is believed that the total slaughter of beef cattle in the United States this year will be 4 to 5 per cent smaller than in 1938, due in large degree to the fact that a larger number of cows and heifers are being held back for breeding purposes.

With market prices of cows relatively high, it would seem good business for many cattlemen to take advantage of the present situation to cull their cow herds closely to realize cash income; to improve the efficiency of their output; and to improve the quality of their calf crops. It is also a splendid opportunity to make replacements with good, modern, registered bulls, for the market value of worn-out or plainly bred bulls is now exceptionally high. During the past week on the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, we have seen many range bulls sold for beef at prices ranging from 6 1/2 to 7 1/2 cents a pound. This means as much as $100 or more in beef value for bulls, meaning that replacements of good, registered bulls can be made at very reasonable costs.

I have been interested to learn that a good many more weaner calves are being sold in California than for several years. Some California cattlemen have turned to the breeding of high quality feeder calves, and with the market value of these feeder calves at around $85 to $40, it means a good return where growing conditions are such that cows can be handled efficiently the year around. However, this production by no means answers the California demand for replacement cattle, and it may reasonably be assumed that California cattlemen are in the market for a quarter million stocker and feeder cattle from outside the state during the next four months.

There is a sincere desire on the part of California cattlemen to buy their replacement cattle this fall on the open market, for they believe that by making their purchases at the public stockyards, they are assured of buying their stockers and feeders at fair market prices, arrived at by competitive bidding. Trading on the open market also means a greater price range in favor of the better quality animals.

Local Casualty List

Two weeks ago we published a statement to the effect that Tom Burleson of Lincoln, James Howard and Carl Fisher of Capitan, had been wounded. It develops, however, that the report concerning Tom Burleson was erroneous; at least no confirmation of being wounded has been received by his family, on the contrary, the family has received information that forces the conclusion that he is unharmed.

However the other two, Howard and Fisher, were in the casualty list, both having been wounded and to their number added this week three more Lincoln county boys, viz: Charles Bell, Picacho, reported missing; Marshall St. John and Lieu. Henry Lutz of Carrizozo, wounded; the former on the shoulder and not thought to be of severe nature, while the latter, quite seriously.

Dr. P. M. Shaver arrived this week from Vaughn and has located here in the practice of his profession. Dr. Shaver purchased Dr. Johnson's office fixtures and equipment, including X-Ray machine and all, and may be found in the Braum building on Alamogordo Avenue. The doctor is a very pleasant gentleman, has had many years of experience and comes well recommended. We are glad to welcome the doctor to Carrizozo.
