Carrizozo Boy Scouts Meeting

At the regular meeting of the Carrizozo Boy Scouts in the community hall Thursday night a special musical program was given by two of the scouts. Pick Worden entertained on his accordion and Herbert Harshman played several numbers on the cornet. Phil Bright, former scoutmaster of the troop, gave an interesting story.

Plans were completed to hold a hike to the Mal Pais in the near future to explore caves. A series of test passing meetings were outlined so that the scouts would be ready to receive badges at a Lincoln County Court of Honor to be held at Capitan in October or November.

Patrol Leaders, Dan Conley, Eugene Hines and Herbert Harshman, directed the activities. Melvin Waters, Boy Scout District Commissioner for Lincoln County, was in charge.

Mr. Waters states that all visitors are welcome at all meetings.

Birthday Party

Mrs. R. E. Berry entertained about 40 of her Sunbeam Class with a party Monday afternoon, Sept. 25, from 4 to 6.

The occasion being the ninth birthday of her daughter, Era.

State Fair At Roswell

October 4, 5, 6, and 7

Roswell, N. M., Sept. 28.—Two have already entered Roswell's contest for bow-legged cowboys, and officials of the Eastern New Mexico State Fair this week issued an invitation to all cowhands or former cowboys of all range communities to send their names in to the Roswell Chamber of Commerce.

The only rules are that the bow-legs of every entrant must have been acquired "from choking the middle-section of a horse", and that each contestant must wear cowboy boots.

The prize is $10. The competition will be held at 10 a. m. Oct. 5 at Third and Main sts. Roswell and each pair of shanks will be measured with a tape-measure by a committee.

Meantime Claude Simpson, manager of the Chamber of Commerce, returning from a tour of the Pecos Valley and other New Mexico communities, said that interest in the Fair this year was higher than ever before.

Outlining the various events of the big show, he pointed out that this years the rodeo has been restored, and that there will be performances early every afternoon at the new W. Alameda grounds. The Fair itself, however will be held at the old N. Main st. grounds.

The opening parade, with a new series of floats and with half a dozen rich historical costume contests, will be held on Oct. 4, and Oct. 6 will be Old Times Day, with a program downtown and barbecue at Cahoon park. Saturday, Oct. 7, will be the closing day of the Fair, and through all four days there will be a carnival with 25 rides and shows at the Main st. grounds.

A feature this year is the contest for the selection of the Queen of the Rodeo now under way.

"Monte Carlo" Carnival

There is a "Monte Carlo" Carnival coming to town, Oct. 14th. Don't miss the fun, watch for posters and paper advertisements for all the details.

Sponsored by American Legion and Auxiliary.

Mr. Sam Bigger of Capitan was a pleasant caller in the News office the latter part of last week.

School Notes

The fast and furious football game of Hondo vs. Carrizozo ended in a tie of six to six. A good crowd attended. This Friday Carrizozo plays Tularosa here.

The Junior High boys are playing six man football and are expecting to play a number of games with Capitan and San Patricio.

We thank Mrs. Turner for the football shoulder pad and helmet she gave the athletic department.

The Business Men's Club donated about $60 for new football suits. The athletic department and school extend you men our appreciation.

Come one! Come all to the big Thursday night football rally to be led by the band. Beat Tularosa! Time: 7:30 p. m.

We were honored by a visit and interesting talk given before all high school students by Miss Nina Lamkin, the Health Consultant of the State Board of Health situated at Santa Fe, New Mexico. Her talk included pointers on student activities as well as hints for healthful living. At this same assembly the student body was entertained by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra led by the famous Stakowiki in transcribed form on our new General Electric Radio-phonograph combination. This radio-phonograph is one of the most important additions to the music department of all times as it will expose many children to a form of music appreciation that they have before never received.

Ralph Pruett has returned to school after a severe case of tonsillitis.

On the last day of freshman initiation each class in high school will give a fifteen minute program.

The children in the First grade are practising on their original version of "The Three Bears" and have completed a free hand cutting blackboard frieze of the story. They plan to entertain the second grade with a "Three Bear Party" on Friday afternoon.

The Junior High library was enriched by the addition of many new books.

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. May were business visitors to Las Cruces last Friday.

Mrs. Helen Meeks, was in town from Lincoln Tuesday. While here she paid this office a pleasant visit and renewed her subscription for 1940.

Business Men's Club

Mr. J. W. Kerkpatrick, promotion manager of the El Paso Times and Herald Post was the visitor at the Club meeting Wednesday night. He was securing donations and data for Carrizozo portion of the promotion edition of the El Paso Times to be published on or about Oct. 28th. Carrizozo will have about 1/2 page of descriptive matter.

Next Wednesday night the club will entertain the teacher.

Importance of Your Social Security Account

Albuquerque, Sept. 28.—Many young workers do not realize the importance of their Social Security Account numbers. They know that old age pensions will not be available to them for many years, and do not attach sufficient importance to their Social Security card.

Social Security Account Numbers are used to identify an unemployed worker's credits when he files a claim for unemployment insurance, and unless his wages have been reported with his correct Social Security Account number, he may experience much delay in establishing his claim for unemployment benefits.

Whenever a worker takes a new job, he should give his new employer a record of his correct Social Security Account number so that the employer may report his wages promptly and accurately to the Unemployment Compensation Commission and to the Social Security Board in Washington.

Unemployed workers may file claims for unemployment insurance at any of the office of the New Mexico State Employment Service which is a division of the Unemployment Compensation Commission.

The Football Came

Last Friday afternoon the local high school gridsters met Hondo eleven in an exciting and entertaining game before a large group of spectators.

Hondo scored the first touchdown but did not get their extra point. Carrizozo's fast moving, hard playing team got one touchdown to tie the score, 6-6.

While this was the first game of the season, fans witnessed a good game and have every reason to expect fast and entertaining games the remainder of the season.

See us for your job work.

BANKING LOOKS AHEAD

Planned Security

Two-thirds of the men and women who reach 65 depend upon others for their support. The remaining one-third are independent and secure, largely through their own thrift and foresight. In a great many cases, these fortunate men and women planned their old-age security far in advance by making regular deposits in their bank accounts.

We will welcome you as a depositor

Old Cars Safer Miles Declared

Santa Fe.—Calling for lessened speed as a major factor in reducing highway death tolls, Governor John E. Miles appeared on the stage of the KiMo Theater Saturday night in a special safety program.

Gov. Miles said slower and more careful driving were the best solution to the problem of mounting traffic casualties throughout the state.

His emphasis on slower driving was echoed in his reference to the new light and break tests, in which he said the object of the examination never had been to drive poorest motorists off the roads.

"The old cars are less dangerous than the fast, high-powered ones," he asserted.

Fanciful Names

In earlier centuries, observers thought that land animals had counterparts in the sea, and so they named seals "sea-wolves," for seal "sea-bears," manatees "sea-cows."

Dispelling The Fog

Senator Vandenberg, campaigning on two fronts—one objective being the Republican Presidential nomination, the other a defense movement to bang onto his job in the Senate in the not improbable event of the first objective failing—chose the neutrality as the text of his major political speech so far.

There has been a general expression of desire and hope to have partizan politics adjourned so far as possible, while the administration and the country generally are concerned with the effort to keep us out of war, but the Michigan senator does not think that way. He told the country in effect that the complications and perils begotten of the European war were unimportant compared with the necessity of electing a Republican administration next year.

Senator Vandenberg was one of the Republican members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee who prevented the revision of the present embargo law during the closing days of the recent session of Congress. Every Republican on that committee voted the same way, Senator Borah insisting that because of some inside information he had he knew that there was no European war imminent. The result was to leave this country, when the declarations of war came on with our hands tied despite the nation-wide sentiment that any bill that gave an advantage to the totalitarian combatants was anything but advantageous to the United States of America. Incidentally it involved the calling of an extra session of Congress, with the expense that involves, which is peculiar, to say the least, for a group to do that is clamoring for national economy.

Actually the issue is simple and should not take a great deal of time in its presentation. Senators like Vandenberg, Borah and Nye contend that to remove the embargo puts us in peril of war. Those who favor the removal of the embargo contend that the so-called neutrality enactment encouraged the gangster powers to begin the war, because of the advantage these powers received by our restriction of the democracies ability to buy what they needed from America and that continuance of the embargo would be hostile and harmful to those whose struggle has the sympathy of nearly all Americans.

Mrs. Jim Pruett

Mrs. Jim Pruett passed away in Roswell last Wednesday night, after an illness of several years and had been bedfast about two weeks. She leaves to mourn her passing 3 sons and 8 daughters all of whom were at her bedside when the last came. Mrs. Ben Greisen her sister was present. Interment will be in Roswell Saturday.

HIDDEN OGRE Does the Tax Collector Lurk Beside Your Breakfast Table?

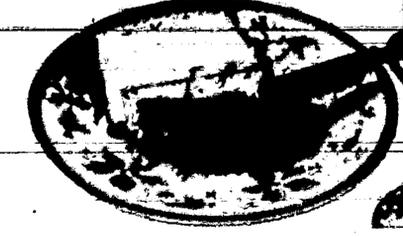

What's this about hidden taxes? Do they really take a healthy slice out of your family income? Analysts of the National Consumers Tax commission, who keep records of taxes in every state of the Union, claim the hidden tax takes from the average family's budget each year the equivalent of 578 loaves of bread or 165 pounds of butter or 144 dozen eggs or 156 pounds of bacon. Of an average $495.13 spent annually for food, each family is said to pay $35.15 in hidden taxes. On a national average, here's what the above breakfast is taxed:

Above: Cost of toast is raised 6.4 per cent by 53 hidden taxes—11 federal, 42 state and local. The orange juice at the left costs the average family $14.74 a year, including the tax collector's $1.25 squeeze.

On bacon there are 40 taxes (30 federal, 10 state and local) boosting the cost 39 cents a pound. Of $20 spent annually for table eggs, about $1 goes to the tax collector.

There are 46 taxes on a pound of sugar (29 federal, 17 state and local). Average family uses 71 pounds a year, pays $2.70 in hidden taxes. Tax collectors swallow 10 per cent of the sugar cost, or one of every five and one-half pounds.

On coffee costing 23 cents a pound, 3.3 cents goes to hidden taxes. Cream and milk: Of $59.89 spent annually, $4.15 goes the same way.

Diversions of 1737 Entertained Col. Byrd

"A Library, a Garden, a Grove and a Furling Stream are the innocent scenes that divert our Leisure," William Byrd II wrote to a friend in England, as he sat in his palatial residence, Westover-on-the-James, one of the most celebrated and beautiful of all Colonial homes. As for the library, it numbered nearly 4,000 volumes, the largest private library in the colonies. It was in April, 1737, that Colonel Byrd advertised in Virginia Gazette that on the north side of the James river, a little below the falls there had been laid out by Maj. William Mayo, a town called Richmond, with streets 65 feet wide. A pleasant and healthy situation and a well supplied with springs of good water." As the founder of Richmond, a writer, and as a statesman he is one of the most important men of his time. Westover is still used as a residence.

Faith Essential If Youngsters Trust Parents

MISTAKES WILL HAPPEN and children often regret them as much as their parents. Confidence comes much easier if child is sure he will receive fair treatment for self-admitted mistakes.

By MARION BROWNFIELD

BETTY, aged 11, was in the kitchen washing the dinner dishes while her father and some relatives were visiting in the breakfast room adjoining. Betty often "did" the dishes alone. She now proceeded methodically to stack them as she had been taught to do. Then she prepared the soapy dishwater and placed a second pan to rinse the dishes in. All the time, however, one ear was straying toward the pleasant conversation nearby. Mother was across the hall putting the last stitches on a dress-Betty was to wear on the morrow, and the little girl was dawdling in order to enjoy the chat Daddy was having with the "company."

Suddenly, Betty breathed a prolonged, "Oh—!" Daddy's head appeared in the kitchen doorway. "Break something?" he inquired. "The hot water did!" explained Betty replacing a tea kettle of hot water on the stove.

The guests in the breakfast room smiled at the explanation. But Betty bravely held up a cracked tumbler.

"Too bad," said Daddy sympathetically.

"I'd better go and tell Mother," Betty marched gravely out of the kitchen.

"I'd give anything if my boy, George, would own up when something like that happens," remarked Cousin Harriet. "I could hira and scold him, but it doesn't seem to make any impression."

"H'm," said her husband, "it makes him afraid to confess."

Betty, back in the kitchen, approached the breakfast room door, holding the cracked tumbler. She smiled at her father. "Mother says I must be sure to have the rinsing water cool enough to put my finger in. But she says not to worry about this particular glass, because it was a cheap one." Betty resumed her dishwashing humming softly to herself.

"Well, it's a sort of habit, I think," her father said in an undertone to his relatives, "this 'fessing up,' but Betty's mother never makes it hard for a child to tell her anything. She says confidence is the one thing she wants from the children. And we find that they themselves are as regretful over a mistake or an accident as we are. We simply talk it over and sometimes, not too often, use it as a basis for a future reminder to avoid repetition.

Honesty Is Natural for Ted.

"When we gave Ted his new bicycle I told him to be careful where he parked it—not to leave it long in unfamiliar surroundings. He was pretty careful the first month. Then he forgot the day and left his wheel in a vacant lot down near the railroad tracks, while he pitched an impromptu ball game."

"And it was stolen?" inquired Cousin Harriet.

"No, when he went for it, apparently it was all right. Then he discovered about half a dozen of the parts were gone!"

"Well," said Cousin Harriet's husband, "I expect he didn't relish telling you!"

"No," said Ted's father with a laugh, "he didn't. He commenced, though, by saying, 'You were right, Dad, about my bike.'"

"It's expensive," complained Cousin Harriet, "the things these youngsters do; I would whip George if he disobeyed me like that!"

Ted's father shook his head. "That's out of date, Harriet. I said to Ted, 'What happened, Son?' He then told me just what had happened and what was missing. Well, I told him it was his job to earn back those missing parts."

"I've been thinking it over, Dad," he said, "so I asked Mrs. Clark, down the street, if I could mow her lawn, and she said she would like to have her car cleaned. It'll be every two weeks, Dad!"

"To have to work for something, like that, will make a man of him!" approved Cousin Harriet's husband. "We must go." Cousin Harriet arose.

Betty hurried from the kitchen and soon returned. "Mother wants you to see my new dress!" she said. Cousin Harriet looked around the kitchen. It was unmistakably in order. "Your wife must take a lot of time and trouble training the children." She sighed.

Betty's father hesitated. How much dared he say? "Well, an ounce of prevention—" he ventured. "But after all, children are people—they are seldom intentional miscreants—that is if you treat them as if you expected them to be responsible.—If you—well—take it for granted, you know."

College Classics in Sports, Classroom, Dress-Up Clothes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT IS intensely interesting to note the comradeship, the spirit of mutual endeavor and co-operation that exists these days between merchantman, designer and the college girl as to the planning of a program of clothes that must be practical first of all, at the same time they must date smartly for the varied types of activities that crowd the life of Miss Modern.

It was a happy inspiration that moved merchandiser and style creator to call into consultation groups of typical college girls, to take these young people into partnership, so to speak, in their efforts to assemble wardrobes of smart apparel that would meet the demands of every occasion in a thoroughly practical sense as well as a highly fashion-correct way.

In the illustration we are showing three apparel choices of a typical college girl who considers these clothes classics as indispensable for her alma mater. To be sure they simply represent the initial numbers that lay the foundation of a well organized wardrobe.

Centered in the picture Miss Collegiate is properly attired in a twin sweater set topping a circular plaid skirt plus the inevitable common-sense oxford. And here's something about plaids to keep in mind, you can't wear 'em too bright this season, the more red in their color scheme the better.

To the right in the picture this fair co-ed is wearing a skirt and sweater combination topped by a classic water-proofed clan plaid coat with gabardine lining. Her sports hat of felt is a perfect college-girl type. She wears the typical saddle oxfords and wool ankle cox. Have your Sox initiated in fashion's latest message. You can know that the coat here pictured will attend football games this fall, which was in the mind of the designer who styled it with an idea for warmth and comfort as well as good "looks." This coat is likewise the type that will go to town often, will stand the test of motoring and prove a friend indeed throughout wind, rain, sunshine and the vagaries of weather that mark autumn and winter days.

Miss College Girl's choice to wear on a date with her best beau is a trim, very smart, very practical outfit in black as illustrated to the left in the group. Her crepe frock has the pinched-in waistline such as fashion demands this season; also the new-back fullness. In her trunk she has tucked away one of the new detachable bustle bows which she wears now and then to add an extra note of chic to her frock. Her felt beret (small, it won't slip out of pose in dancing) has the new forward tilt and she brightens the whole with a flamboyant necklace and matching bracelet set in eye-thrilling colored stones.

Not that choice must be restricted to a black dress with massive gold and colorful stone-set jewelry for keeping dress-up dates. To be sure the big idea is black for your autumn "first," but the gorgeous colors on the way are simply breathtaking. The new wool dresses and the very chic and fetching velveteen dresses make striking color their theme.

Jeweled Buttons

Elegance is the keynote to fashion this fall and winter. Feminine whims and fancies add infinite charm to the mode. Seeing that we have gone back to the gay nineties for much of our inspiration it was inevitable that the vogue for big-glittering jeweled buttons should be revived. And here they are glorifying the bolero spirit of diartreux wool crepe as here pictured. The jeweled buttons of amethyst and gold are matched with a lapel ornament.

Mask Evening Beart
You can feel yourself a dashing sororite this summer if you wear one of the new white mesh scarfs wrapped Spanish style about you with your cotton evening dresses.

Glacier White Is Latest Lace Tint

Glacier white, which has a pale bluish cast, was one of Patou's favorite colors for evening gowns in the most recent Paris showings, while Moynaux showed a vivid bright shade of blue. Moynaux not only did the new pencil-slim silhouette in lace, but made quite a sensation with his double-swing skirts for dance frocks, which were often ankle length. One of these in black lace had three flounces at the hem, with a deep square décolletage at the back edged with three ruffles. Another gown in the full-skirted group was in black net with a lace top.

In a gown by Patou with long, slim lines, fullness in the back was achieved by means of godets, and the effect was quite sophisticated in lace over a silver princess slip.

Elegance Is Word For New Handbags

Handsome is the word for the new handbags. Even the bags carried with practical daytime costumes will sound a note of elegance in their general finish and fine mountings. Emphasis is on suede bags in interesting shapes and expert workmanship.

The more formal types announce revival of ornate frames, and many trimming touches in way of braiding and embroidery.

Evening bags are all aglitter with sequin handcraft, bead embroidery and other "whimsies" that tune to a song of elegance that will be heard throughout the winter social season.

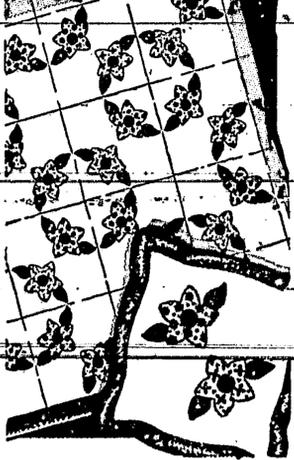

New Colors
Artichoke green is new on the fall color card. Blackberry tones as shown this season are really beautiful as are also the rich dahlia shades.

Strange Facts

Beggars' Paradise
Too Lazy to Breathe

Among the Arabs of Africa and Near Eastern countries, the gratuity or tip, called "baksheesh," goes to the poorer man whether he renders a service to you or you render a service to him. Even if you save a man from drowning, he will demand his "baksheesh" if you appear to be in better circumstances.

One of the most lethargic animals in existence is the tuatara, Sphenodon punctatum, a two-foot, lizardlike reptile of New Zealand. It breathes so slowly that, usually, the creature appears to be lifeless. Those in captivity have been known to stop breathing for more than an hour at a time.

A number of Christian altars in various parts of the world do not include the figure of Judas in the statuary of Christ and His disciples.—Collier's.

'Battle of Lines' Brings First Test Of German-French Defense Strategy

World Debates Question of Hour: Can Either Wall Be Conquered?

By ROBERT THIERS
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
PARIS.—"Underground battlements" along the entire German-French frontier are getting their first test under fire these days as military experts await the answer to 1939's greatest wartime question: Are the West Wall and the Maginot line really impregnable?

When France's early advance brought her armies flush against the great German wall, formerly called the Siegfried or Limes line, the invaders faced a truly stupendous offensive job. Newer than the Maginot line, Germany's fortifications are nevertheless a hopeless maze of underground fortresses, moats, barbed wire entanglements and tank-infantry traps equal to anything the cunning French ever devised.

The West Wall is not simply a wall, ahead of it for several miles are auxiliary fortifications, and behind it are slanting, knoblike tank barriers interspersed with concealed pits in which tanks may be trapped. The whole system ranges from 25 to 50 miles in depth, swarming with anti-aircraft emplacements to drive off enemy bombers.

Relief Rushes Construction.
No French officials know whether the West Wall has been completed. Last year, during the crisis preceding Munich, Adolf Hitler revealed 500,000 men were working on it, night and day. A few days after the current war began Nazi Labor Leader Robert Ley is said to have wired Field Marshal Hermann Goering, promising to rush the project to completion.

By contrast, France's Maginot line has been completed several years. It was from the French that Germany got the inspiration for the West Wall, which was not started until 1934. The Maginot line was conceived in 1925 while Andre Maginot was minister of war. Originally planned to cover only the frontier area between Belgium and the Rhine, it has since been expanded to protect the entire frontier from the Atlantic to Switzerland.

Both lines are really a series of forts, each with their own electric kitchen, washrooms, water reservoirs, electric generators and storage rooms. Miles of underground narrow-gauge railroads carry men and ammunition, the latter stored in giant reservoirs hundreds of feet underground.

Seek to Disprove Theory.
It is an axiom among military men that no army can build a fortress so impregnable that no other army can take it, yet each of these nations has built its first line of defense with the idea of disproving the theory. So well are the forts concealed, and so discouraging are the cunning obstacles placed in an invader's path, that the defenders would nominally be expected to enjoy a wholesale slaughter while their enemies were attempting to find a strategic point of attack.

Once the fortresses are reached (they are invisible from a few yards' distance) the enemy must reckon with a bombproof, shellproof opponent. Each part of the Maginot defense system, and probably of the West Wall as well, is arranged so that every other part can be covered, even to the tops of turrets upon which attacking infantrymen might leap to avoid the rifle and machinegun fire from the embrasures.

It took the French army only 10 days from the declaration of war to pierce advance fortifications leading up to the Siegfried line at Saarbruecken, which probably meant a good deal. Evidently the Maginot line was considered safe from flanking counter-attacks, whereas the West Wall was unfinished and therefore vulnerable. But the West Wall itself is no pushover. Many portions of it are protected first by a deep moat and barbed wire, while gun emplacements are concealed immediately behind.

If the Maginot line is truly safe from conquest, France may make appreciable gains through the German wall without fear that its own frontiers will be violated. But at what loss of life either line may be taken is anybody's guess.

up to the Siegfried line at Saarbruecken, which probably meant a good deal. Evidently the Maginot line was considered safe from flanking counter-attacks, whereas the West Wall was unfinished and therefore vulnerable. But the West Wall itself is no pushover. Many portions of it are protected first by a deep moat and barbed wire, while gun emplacements are concealed immediately behind.

If the Maginot line is truly safe from conquest, France may make appreciable gains through the German wall without fear that its own frontiers will be violated. But at what loss of life either line may be taken is anybody's guess.

Frenchman Had Honor Of First Loop-the-Loop

Adolphe Pegoud, a Frenchman, was the first aviator to loop the loop, on September 21, 1913. The plane used by Pegoud had an engine of small power and wings of large surfaces with a speed of only 45 miles an hour. Lincoln Beachey shortly afterward made a loop the loop at a speed of 75 miles an hour, carrying a greater weight, using a small-surfaced machine. He accomplished this feat on November 10, 1913, in a Curtiss machine at Los Angeles, Calif.

Balloon Tests Aid for Pilots

New Technique Cuts Down Errors in Studying the Tricky Currents.

TROY, N. Y.—Meteorologists who watch vari-colored balloons float into the sky are responsible for the most accurate method devised for guiding airplane pilots through hazardous winds, according to Elbert F. Corwin, Rensselaer Polytechnic institute meteorologist.

The new technique, with its narrowed margin of error, is expected to prevent pilots from encountering violent upwinds and treacherous downdrafts that sometimes suck planes into mountainsides. It guides them by enabling the pilots to know at which levels they may fly to avoid the currents.

Corwin said the new method utilizes a geometrical principle, determining distance through angles. Weather observers at present base calculations on an assumption that balloons always rise about 600 feet a minute.

Work With Weather Bureau.
Corwin and two student assistants, at the request of the United States weather bureau, for months sent colored balloons into the air and observed their flight to heights of five miles and distances of from 10 to 17 miles.

It was found that "up and down" winds accelerated, slowed or even reversed, the balloons' normal rate to climb. Thus, the Rensselaer findings showed, the pilot of an airplane might encounter violent winds by trying to avoid them, because winds, reported at 10,000 feet, might really be at 8,000 or 12,000 feet.

The R. P. I. meteorologist's method utilizes a small balloon tied by a 100-foot line to the main, "sounding" balloon. A special theodolite, similar to those used by weather observers and surveyors to study angles, would then measure the angle between it and the two balloons. Calculations then determine to within relatively few feet their height.

Error as High as 33 Per Cent.

"We checked the positions of the balloons each minute and later compared these with what they would have been assumed to be under the assumption of constant rate of ascent," the professor said. "On still days we found the assumed rate correct enough, but on other days with up and down winds the actual rate was much faster or slower than the assumed, frequently as much as 25 per cent. In one instance the error was 33 per cent."

"The principal value of this new method is that we may learn more about the frequency and violence of high winds in different sections of the country, particularly in mountainous regions, and report accurately to those who fly what to avoid or take advantage of on any particular day."

Surgeon Tests Gas Mask Successfully in Operation

LONDON.—An account of a successful operation for appendicitis performed by Col. E. M. Cowell, of Wimpole street, while wearing a general service respirator is printed in the Lancet.

"Before starting," it said, "Colonel Cowell carefully applied antiseptic to his glasses and to the eye-pieces of the respirator both within and without."

"The respirator was donned before washing, and was worn for the 45 minutes till the dressing was applied. No difficulty was experienced in comfort, efficiency or visibility. The wearing of the civilian-duty type of respirator would, Colonel Cowell thinks, be much more comfortable and easier for all concerned."

New Orleans Will Use Tin Cans Under Streets

NEW ORLEANS.—Traffic soon will roll over streets made partly of metal, but it won't conflict with the city's antinoise campaign.

The metal-tin cans—will be on the bottom. The scheme, a money-saving idea of Mayor Robert S. Maestri, will salvage the over-supply from city dumping grounds.

The idea is, the mayor said, to provide a base for paving. Due to the low, swampy nature of city land, paving without an upholding base, often buckles and sinks.

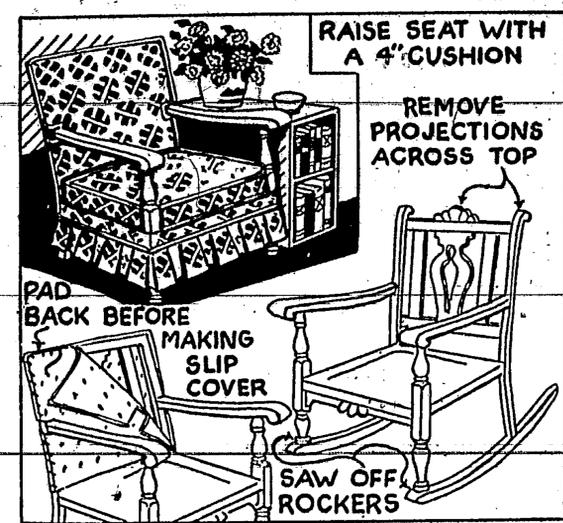

Once before, Maestri experimented with a paving base. City workmen dumped sand into prepared ground in marshy sections of the city. Sinking was reduced to a minimum.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

New life for an old rocker

THERE were rocking chairs hanging from the ceiling of a certain second-hand furniture store. "Nobody wants them any more," mourned the dealer. "I'd sell any one you see for 50 cents." The little bride with me promptly chose one. Perhaps she would paint it for the porch.

What she actually did is shown here in the sketch. The result was the small but comfortable, modern looking chair at the upper left. The bride raided mother's attic for two things that went into the making of this chair. One was an old quilt that she used to pad the back. The other was feathers from an old bolster which were used to stuff a seat cushion tightly so that it would raise the seat which had been lowered by removing the rockers. Cotton basted to muslin could have been used for the back padding and a cotton substitute for the cushion filling.

The new sewing book by Mrs. Spears contains 32 other useful homemaking ideas, with all directions clearly illustrated. You will be delighted with it. The price is only 10 cents postpaid. Enclose coin, with name and address, to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Deplained St., Chicago, Ill., and book will come to you by return mail.

Whatever price you pay per pack, it's important to remember this fact: By burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—CAMELS give a smoking plus equal to

5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK

YES, there's not only extra pleasure in Camel's costlier tobaccos, but extra smoking, too, because Camels are long-burning. Recent impartial laboratory tests of 16 of the largest-selling brands confirm the superior burning quality of America's favorite cigarette. Here is a summary of the scientific test findings:

- 1 CAMELS were found to contain MORE TOBACCO BY WEIGHT than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.
- 2 CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!
- 3 In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

Camel's long-burning, costlier tobacco also give you cooler, milder smoking... topped off with a superb aroma and delicate taste that have no equal. Get smoking pleasure at its best and more of it per pack in Camels, the quality cigarette every smoker can afford. Penny for penny, Camels are your best cigarette buy!

FRANCES WILLARD

WCTU Observes Birth Centennial of First Temperance Worker; 'Tomboy' From Wisconsin Once Led 'Praying Bands' in Campaign Against Saloons After Starting Career in Academic Seclusion of Female College.

1 She was born September 28, 1839, at Churchville, N. Y., and grew up a lively tomboy on a pioneer Wisconsin farm. Revolving early against men's restrictions on women's activities, she trained a pet calf to carry her when her father forbade horseback riding. Most of her early schooling was at home.

2 Later she entered North-Western Female college in Evanston, Ill.—She taught in many seminaries and was the first woman college president to give degrees to women. She was the first dean of women at Northwestern university, and a nationally recognized educator when only 35 years of age.

3 She left this successful profession in 1874 to cast her lot with the infant but growing temperance movement, joining the historic women's crusade in which "praying bands" invaded saloons. The result was that in 56 days alcoholic beverage sale was prohibited by some 250 communities.

4 From 1875 to 1886 she was national W. C. T. U. president, and for seven years also headed the world group. Through the W. C. T. U. she taught women to organize to achieve social reform. In 1893 she organized walks across the country, traveling through the West by stagecoach over roads infested by Indians and highwaymen.

5 She was interested in all angles of social reform and of equality for women, and left not a stone unturned to promote every angle. Lecturing and organizing, she led formation of many of our great women's groups. All have joined this year in a centenary tribute to her, with observances throughout the land.

6 Before her death in 1898, she had been honored by many nations. Memorials to her dot every state. Her statue is the only one of a woman in Statuary hall at Washington, D. C. Ten thousand W. C. T. U. units are joining on her birthday in simultaneous national tribute to her memory—Frances Willard, pioneer educator and reformer.

Seasoned Timber

The athletic contests of the world usually are won by young men. Seldom do we find in men over forty that combination of physical strength, endurance, and speed that makes the champion.

In times of war the men who go "over the top" are young men, as are the men who fly our fighting planes and man our battleships.

In industry and in business there are certain types of work that can best be done by young men at their zenith in physical dexterity and stamina.

But it is a different matter to outline the policies of a giant corporation, to lead a country at war, to understand and solve the complex problems of a great nation; to be able to win the confidence and the full cooperation of leaders in thought and action. For such important tasks thoughtful persons demand men of broad experience—"seasoned timber."

The biggest job in the world today is the management of the United States of America. Greatest country that it is—in material resources and in the brains to develop them—it has social and economic problems that can be coped with only by a man of keenest insight; knowledge obtained by many years of close touch with governmental affairs; and long study of agriculture, industry, and finance from a national viewpoint.

Virile, practical, influential, forceful John N. Garner is the man of the hour today. For thirty years in the House of Representatives and for six years in the Vice-President's chair—thirty-six years of power and of leadership—he has fought for constructive liberalism in government; for true democracy; for social justice; for economic independence of the American citizen. Seasoned in statesmanship, he has the wisdom, the practicality, the understanding of men, the insight into great problems, the extraordinary technique of politics, and the human sympathy that only the years can bring—those qualities that this great nation so vitally needs today.

Galileo made scientific discoveries after he was 70.

Henry Ford, at 75, is still improving the Ford car.

Judge Gary, at 83, headed the giant United States Steel Corporation.

Clemenceau, the Tiger of France guided his war-weary people at 77.

Benjamin Franklin, at 81, helped to frame the American Constitution.

Gladsstone, when 81, was Prime Minister of England.

Justice Holmes, at 80, wrote important and exceedingly clear Supreme Court decisions.

John N. Garner, in his intellectual prime, at 83, is being called to the Presidency in 1940 by all classes of the American people. He has the confidence of the farmer. He has the confidence of the working man in town and country. He has the confidence of the man of the head of an industrial empire and the man of financial power. Vigorous of body and mind, powerful of conviction and courage, wise in the affairs of state, he will carry on all of the sound legislation that has been passed during the term of President Roosevelt.

A great patriot, a great progressive liberal, a great Democrat, a great leader, John Nance Garner will be the next president of the United States!

Expressive Gestures
Highly emotional people frequently express themselves by gestures. Primitive man used gestures to make himself understood, as languages were simple and did not express the full meaning he wanted to convey. Gesturing as an accompaniment to speech seems to be more natural and inherent in the Latin races, and may be termed a racial characteristic.

Chevrolet Second Pre-Announcement Story

Detroit, Sept. 25—Chevrolet's new 1940 models will make their public bow on Oct. 14, W. E. Holler, general sales manager, announced here today. The cars, he said, will be shown simultaneously at the National Automobile Show in Grand Central Palace—where, as volume leader in the industry, Chevrolet again had first choice of space—at the General Motors special showing in the Waldorf-Astoria, at several important local auto shows, and in dealers' salesrooms throughout the country.

In line with the company's experience in recent years, Mr. Holler said, an important part of Chevrolet's announcement advertising has been scheduled in newspapers. Some 6,800 daily and weekly papers from coast to coast are on the schedule, other media being used to supplement and round out this effort. Pre-Announcement advertising has already begun to appear, and space will be increased as the new car introduction date approaches.

Formal presentation of its new product, and the selling program for 1940, will be made to Chevrolet's wholesale field organization and the Central Office sales department staff at the annual national sales convention scheduled to open here Sept. 28. The sessions will last two days, and will be attended by about 350 key members of the organization.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

TODAY ONLY: $5 BILLS FOR $1.98

MANY times, on a wager, men have tried to sell $5 bills to strangers for as little as $1.98—legitimate $5 bills worth $5 anywhere. They have usually failed.

The reason is simple to see: Lack of confidence. Their proposition sounded too good to be true, failed to arouse the confidence of the prospects, who were afraid to buy.

No one trusted the seller because no one knew him. He might be a counterfeiter. Who knows? He might have some trick up his sleeve. Who knows? Better have nothing at all to do with him.

Confidence is the mainspring of business. Without it no business can succeed and no product can be sold. Because before any one of us is willing to part with a penny, we must have confidence that that which we are going to buy will give us value received.

Confidence is not a matter which can be bought. It must be earned. It is a process of growth. The idea of confidence grows from one customer to the next one. It gives vitality to everything about a business.

When confidence enters into a business transaction, everything about it becomes pleasant. But whenever confidence is absent, no amount of any other qualities can take its place.

You have often bought something from someone you did not know, say a solicitor who succeeded in taking away your money at the door. Will you ever see him again? Will you get the goods you have paid for? Was it a miniature swindle? You wonder and worry.

You spend hours in painful doubt. Perhaps everything turned out all right. Even so, the profit went out of the transaction when you had to worry about getting your money's worth. Buy goods that are advertised from merchants who advertise. There lies confidence.

One of the chief services of newspaper advertising to consumers is that it denotes which merchants or products are worthy of confidence.

Because newspaper publishers are so jealous of their advertising columns and are quick to reject anything which does not live up to their standards, readers know that if a thing is regularly advertised in the newspaper it is worthy of their confidence.

As a matter of fact, the appearance of an advertisement in a newspaper is a recommendation of the character and quality of the goods being advertised.

U. S. Navy Recruiting Station

The Navy Department has announced a decision to continue elimination flight training at the Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Oakland, California, throughout the year.

Up to the present time this elimination flight training has been conducted for a six month period only, commencing May 15 each year. From now on classes will convene at the Naval Reserve Aviation Base, Oakland, California, on the 15th of each month throughout the year. This in effect will double the United States Navy program for training of aviators in the Naval Reserve.

Cadets successfully completing the training for a Naval Aviator will be commissioned ensigns and will become eligible under the present law for seven years commissioned service with the United States Fleet. To qualify for this training applicants must be citizens under 28 years of age, single and have completed at least two years of college.

Cadets undergo training and are paid at the rate of $105.00 per month and are uniformed and quartered by the Navy. Upon successful completion of their training, they are commissioned and receive the pay and allowances commensurate with their rank as an officer of the Navy.

Men who have previously applied and were informed that no vacancies remained in the present years quota, and candidates having the necessary qualifications are invited to contact the Commanding Officer, Naval Aviation Base, Oakland Airport, Oakland, California, immediately.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Mahatma Gandhi has indicated that, in his opinion, a world war against Adolf Hitler would be justifiable and possibly necessary. The British, with their imperative job of keeping their great Indian empire in hand, probably aren't worrying about Gandhi. More important is the attitude and activity of his vigorous and popular understudy, the 44-year-old Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. The latter has been boldly resistant to British rule, spent six years in jail, and has acquired popularity and leadership as Gandhi reaches his seventy-second year.

Meager news reports from India indicate that Nehru has been calming down in his agitation against British imperialism, and that, a few weeks ago, he was vehemently denouncing fascism and the new German aggression. London is reassured, but watchful, as Asia may become a balance of power in the clash of world dominions and Nehru has been an active propagandist of pan-Asiatic doctrine, summoning browns and blacks to resist what he believes to be the aggression of the whites.

Born of a noble caste, Nehru was educated at Harrow and Cambridge, taking honors in the classics. His father, the Pandit Motilal Nehru, was a lawyer and the richest man in Allahabad. He gave away his mansion and moved into a shabby little house when he became a convert to Indian nationalism.

His son, reared in splendor, had no such ideas when he came home from England. He was a strong supporter of the British regime until the Amritsar massacre of 1919. Then he burned his 50 British suits, donned native dress, and became an agitator for the Nationalist cause. However, he was no devotee of loin-cloth asceticism. He was all for fighting and it was as the most belligerent of all the Indian leaders that he came to the presidency of the all-Indian congress in 1935.

Nehru was at times sharply opposed to the non-resisting Gandhi, but apparently their differences have been resolved. He is handsome and engaging, a vigorous assailant of the ancient caste system of India.

IT WAS not until a year ago that Romain Rolland returned to France, after more than 20 years' exile in Switzerland. He had opposed war. Several years before he finished his "Jean Christophe," Tolstol had called him "The Conscience of Europe." He is a pallid old man now, with thinning hair and deep-set eyes, but still "above the battle" and still trying to arouse the conscience of mankind.

He dispatched to the New York international congress of the American Musicological Society a message of good will. It is quoted here in accord with this department's wartime alertness to such men and messages. He says:

"In the field of art, there is not—there should not be—any rivalry among nations. The only combat worthy of us is that which is waged in every country and at every hour, between culture and ignorance, between light and chaos. Let us save all the light that can be saved. There is none more refractory than music. It is the sun of the inner universe."

It was this sun that illumined "Jean Christophe," one of the greatest books of all times, published here just before the World War, profoundly moving to multitudes of Americans as an avocation of the creative and aspiring spirit of man. Many times in recent years, Romain Rolland has written that the world had little hope of escaping another and possibly last devastating war. But, described as "an old man, broken and despairing," on his return to France last year, he has continued his plea for peace, decrying hatred, pleading for understanding.

His has been a lone voice, never identified with "movements," or political groupings, right or left. He opposed Henri Barbusse and his Clarte group, and the various "united fronts," as he did the leaders of violent reaction on the right.

He was educated in music at the Ecole Normale, became a devotee of Wagner and then of Tolstol and Shakespeare. He is the evangel of the humane spirit in a day when it is hard pressed.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Better Waffles.—The flavor of waffles is enhanced by the simple addition of the grated rind of two lemons to the batter.

Removing Stains.—Lemon juice will remove a red ink stain. A paraffin stain should be covered with oatmeal, then brushed after 24 hours. Soot marks should be covered with coarse salt.

For Rust on Porch Lamps.—To remove rust on metal porch lamps rub them with fine sandpaper or steel wool and then apply a thin coat of lubricating oil.

For Cooking in the Open.—Two fires often are more convenient than one. One may be used for the coffee and the other for roasting or frying.

Economy in Meat.—In buying a roast it often is economical to get a large one and cut off several chops for the first meal. The roast will keep for several days in a mechanical refrigerator.

For More Juice.—Heat a lemon thoroughly before squeezing and you will obtain nearly double the amount of juice.

THE STORY SO FAR

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures—the background of which will be the Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantly clad while posing for the camera. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom she is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out the young, popular engineer, Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him, but is married to Reynolds. She refuses to tell him why she married the gambler, but he promises to try to understand. Meanwhile, Miss Sonia ("Babe") Henkel, Beverly beauty operator of questionable morals, and intimate friend of Kirk Reynolds, berates him for marrying Kay. Jim Owenby, land surveyor and engineer in love with Margaret Hamilton, discusses the affair with her. He is sure Kirk has married Kay so she cannot be brought into the case. But he is afraid of what might happen if he and Barney confront Reynolds. Barney decides to discharge Jeff for drinking.

up at the young man. Barney had not spoken. It was obvious that he did not intend to turn this affair into any part of a debate.

A great fury overcame Jeff Butler. He had been insulted, discharged and attacked. Corn liquor gave him a courage which he did not naturally possess. He said several very profane things, clambered to his feet, and lurched forward.

Again Barney's fist found his face, but this time Jeff was prepared. He wrapped long sinewy arms around the young man's body and they crashed to the floor together. Hands groped for holds, legs flailed; there were sighs and grunts and the heavy thud of fists on flesh.

It was a brief but epic battle. And when it was over Mr. Butler lay on the floor—more nearly sober than he had been in twenty-four hours, but with his countenance considerably the worse for wear. Barney Hamilton leaned against the counter, mouth open, left eye badly bruised. He still had not spoken, and he did not speak as the three swamp angels helped their fallen brother out into the street. Then Barney became articulate. He said, "Thanks, Mac."

Kay was frightened. From the window of her bedroom she had seen Barney approach the house from the parking space. At first she had felt an inexplicable sense of relief at his return.

And then she felt herself grow cold. She saw now that he was walking none too steadily and that he was dabbing at the corner of his mouth with a handkerchief which was stained with blood. He circled the house and entered the front door. Kay heard him mount the stairway; heard him pass the door. She was frightened. She stood motionless, still holding her negligee about her slim figure. Then, impulsively, she turned away and crossed the hall to Margaret's room. She needed someone to reassure her. Margaret was not there, and she sat down, emotionally exhausted.

Jeff Butler let himself down without a thank-you at the depot.

She turned quickly as the door opened and closed again. But it was not Margaret. Instead, Barney stood there, coatless, his shirt open at the throat; smiling somewhat painfully with lips which were bruised and puffed. He was gay, making light of whatever it was that had happened to him. He said, "How now, honey?"

He crossed the room and she forgot everything save the fact of his presence. She moved to meet him and his arms were about her. She clung to him and tried—oh, so hard—not to cry. She heard him talking, bantering, though with a nuance of seriousness which was gloriously unmistakable. And she was sobbing then and saying things which she had not meant to say. She was saying, "Oh! Barney, I was so frightened . . . and I love you so."

He pressed bruised lips against young eager ones. He looked down at her—infinitely feminine and appealing—beautifully young and youthfully beautiful. And because he, too, was trembling, he tried to be gay. He said, "Snap out of it, sugar."

"I—I'm trying . . ." She looked up at him. "What happened?"

"Oh, nothing."

"Please tell me." Her eyes widened. "Was it Kirk Reynolds?"

"No. Forget that, can't you?"

"But you were in a fight?"

"An affair of sorts. But not romantic, my dear."

"You'd say that anyway. And I'm still scared."

"Don't be silly."

"I'm not." And she tried not to be. She said, "Dad came out here again today."

"What's unusual about that? He's a pretty swell egg and he wants to be sure that you're happy."

"I know. But he's worried, too. He wants to do things."

"What sort of things?"

"He wants to see Kirk Reynolds."

"So do I."

"But you mustn't. I told Dad that, too. He's a grand person, Barney. And I've hurt him without wanting to. He talked to me for two hours. He thinks I'm just a silly kid because I won't tell him the truth."

"I'm complaining about the same thing."

"I can't tell anybody. If you knew . . . or if Dad knew . . ."

"Don't you think we do, honey?"

"You don't know! You can only guess."

"Check, honey. And I'm not going to intrude any more. When you're ready to tell me—or your Dad . . ."

"I wish I could." She brushed her lips against his mouth. "Tell me about it, Barney. Who was it?"

He shrugged. "Someone you don't even know. A swamp angel named Jeff Butler. This morning he was drunk and I had to fire him. This evening he was twice as drunk, and we had a little trouble when we met in Mac's Bar-B-Q."

Her forehead crinkled. "He didn't attack you, did he?"

"No—no not exactly."

"You attacked him?"

"Oh! Quit asking questions."

"But I want to know, Barney. Jeff didn't attack you . . . and you don't run around assaulting men like that without cause."

"Smart female, aren't you? Well, have it, then. Mr. Butler was indulging in some very obscene conversation. I walked in on it and got sore."

"Conversation about the Gardens—or about me?"

"What difference does that make?"

"It makes lots of difference."

He drew a deep breath. "You're either very foolish or very courageous, Kay. Or just dog-gone curious."

"Tell me."

"All right." He spoke slowly. "Jeff Butler has been spying on you and Miss Maynard. He was describing to certain friends of his the details of . . . well, of the picture-taking. That's all."

Her face was chalky. "I see . . . And by now the whole county knows."

"What of it? Get this, honey: I don't want you to kid yourself that you tricked me into telling you the truth. I told you because I knew you were going to hear it anyway, and I figured it was better for you to get it first-hand. But now you know. We'll agree that the yokels will gossip and that they'll be terribly shocked. But, Mother will start telling folks about what you and Miss Maynard have been doing, and that will spike several guns. The main point is that you're here with friends who would do anything for you that you'd let 'em do. So what more could a shy young maiden want?"

CHAPTER VIII

Beverly buzzed with excitement. Good ladies abandoned housewifely duties, or reduced them to a minimum, and gathered to discuss this latest and most sensational outgrowth of what they were pleased to call Kay Forrest's carryings-on.

The general meeting place for those who could afford the time and money was the Woman's Exchange and Tea Room, an eminently respectable place on Monument Square, facing the White Star Hotel and operated by that elderly and unmistakably maiden lady, Miss Deborah Barton.

Miss Deborah, at this moment, engaged in vigorously defending Kay Forrest for no particular reason except that she did not like some of the ladies who were sipping tea, munching pop-overs and enjoying themselves by ripping Kay's character to shreds.

She said, "Disgraceful—that's what it is! Running around the country naked!" They said, "I knew no good would come of all this. Murders and immorality and drinking and debauchery."

They would have said a good deal more had it not been for Miss Deborah, who had been hovering over the table like a dragon. Miss Deborah said, "Tommyrot and rubbish! It's just a lot of lies."

"But Miss Deborah: we know it's true that Kay was posing without any clothes on. Mrs. Hamilton admitted it was true. She said—"

"—and the speaker sniffed virtuously—"that it was artistic."

"Hmph! You-all wouldn't ever understand anything beautiful. It seems to me that the fact that Ruth Hamilton knew about it all the time would settle everything."

Doc Morrison was consulted by several gossip persons, but with none-too-satisfactory results. Doc was a venerable old man, gentle and kindly, a person who was—at one and the same time—both pious and unregenerate.

Doc had obtained his M.D. many, many years before when medical schools demanded little preliminary education of their matriculating students, and not too much of those who graduated. For thirty years he had practiced in Beverly with great moral success and small financial returns. He lavishly dispensed his cure-alls, calomel and quinine. He owned a battered, asthmatic old car in which he bumped over bad roads day and night, bringing cheer and solace and some degree of skill—borne of long practice—to those who were ill and poor. Not alone in Beverly, but all through Beauford County, he was known and loved. Even those townfolk who scoffed at his ability held him in high personal esteem. Men and women and children loved his kindly, quizzical good nature, his serene philosophy, his broad charity.

DON'T THESE LOOK AWFUL GOOD?

My Favorite Recipes

Lucky, indeed, is the homemaker who has among her treasures . . .

peas Aunt Martha's "receipt" for soft molasses cookies, Mother's rule for old-fashioned apple pan dowdy, or grandmother's instructions for making home-baked beans. Those old, favorite recipes are the mainstay of many a tempting meal.

Each one of us has our own prized collection of just such recipes—some old, some new, but all of them tried and approved by a critical family.

The recipes I'm giving you today are some of my own favorites—family "hoirlooms" and contributions from friends and neighbors who are excellent cooks.

When you're a "seasoned" or experienced cook you may take liberties with a recipe or with directions, but if you're a beginner, or if you're trying a new dish for the first time, it's better to stick to a proven recipe and the accurate measurements it calls for.

Accuracy in cooking means level teaspoons and tablespoons and cups in the amounts the recipe specifies; it means sifting flour once before measuring; combining ingredients by the method given, and cooking or baking according to time and temperature recommended.

Gingerbread-Waffles.

(Serves 6)

1 cup molasses
1/4 cup butter
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup sour milk
1 egg (beaten)
2 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons ginger
1/2 teaspoon salt

Heat molasses and butter to boiling point. Remove from fire and beat in the soda. Add sour milk, beaten egg, and the flour which has been sifted with the ginger and salt. Mix well. Bake in hot waffle iron. Serve with whipped cream and a dash of nutmeg.

Honey Spice Cake.

1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/2 cup strained honey
2 eggs
3 cups cake flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/2 teaspoon cloves
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg

1/2 cup butter-meats (broken)
1 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream shortening. Add sugar and beat thoroughly. Add honey. Separate eggs, beat yolks and add to mixture. Mix and sift all dry ingredients to nuts and add to cake mixture. Add remaining dry ingredients alternately with buttermilk and vanilla, beating between each addition. Beat egg whites until stiff. Fold into mixture. Place in well-greased loaf pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) for 45-50 minutes.

Clam Chowder.

1/2 cup carrot (chopped)
2 tablespoons onions (chopped)
1 1/2 cups potato (chopped)
1/2 cup celery (chopped fine)
1 pint clams

2 cups water and clam liquor
Salt and pepper to taste
1 pint milk
3 tablespoons flour
3 tablespoons butter
1 1/2 tablespoons parsley
1/2 teaspoon paprika

Chop the vegetables in small pieces and place in large kettle. Chop the clams and add together with the clam liquor, water, salt, and pepper. Cover and cook about 1/2 hour, or until vegetables are tender. Scald milk. Make a smooth paste of the flour and water. Add half of this flour paste to the clam mixture and half to the scalded milk. Cook each, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Combine and add butter, parsley, and paprika. Serve very hot.

Whipped Cream Fluff.

(Serves 6)

1 cup rice (cooked)
1/2 cup shredded pineapple
1/2 cup canned red cherries
1 dozen marshmallows (cut in pieces)

1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup whipping cream
Chill rice thoroughly. Then add fruit and marshmallows, and sprinkle lightly with sugar. Just before serving, fold in whipped cream. Serve in sherbet glasses.

CHAPTER VII—Continued

"I can't have that sort of man around here." Ruth Hamilton looked up at Barney who had come from the house and had caught the end of the conversation. "My son," she explained, not without pride.

Barney said, "It's about time."

Mother. "I'll go down and pay Jeff off."

The idle white boatmen were reclining against the wall of their cabin, awaiting calls. They were a lackadaisical lot, notable for their inertia.

Two or three of them nodded to Barney, but without waste of effort though their eyes narrowed slightly when he inquired for Jeff Butler. They indicated direction with lazy jerks of their heads.

Mr. Butler looked up cullenly from the foot of a live oak. His watery eyes were clouded with liquor, his attitude sullen and resentful. Barney's voice was pitched low. He said, "You've been drinking again, Jeff."

"Well, what if I have?"

"You know that doesn't go around here."

"The man's voice was whiney. 'You-all ain't got no right tellin' a feller what he can an' can't do.'"

"I suppose not. But we can tell him whether he's got a job here. And you haven't."

"What?" Mr. Jefferson Butler unrolled himself. His bony figure towered over Barney's adequate height, and his voice took on an unpleasant edge. "You ain't drin' me?"

"I'm doing precisely that. You scare your passengers half to death. You've done it before. But you're not going to do it again."

"Ain't no man goin' to tell me what I can do."

"I believe you made that remark before. Here's the money I owe you. Now—get out."

Mr. Butler's dignity had been ruffled. He suspected that his companions on the other side of the log-cabin could hear the conversation. He said, "I'll git out when I'm good an' ready."

"So?" Barney's laugh was hard. "You'll get out damned quick."

"And if I don't?"

The young man's gray eyes were cold. "I'm advising you to get out, Jeff. That's all."

So far as being deprived of the privilege of daily labor, Jeff did not really mind. He had for some time resented the necessity of reporting for work every day, of being subjected to the task of paddling awe-stricken tourists through glades which were to them incredibly beautiful, but which—to him—were a lot of dawg-gone foolishness. For one thing, his role placed him (or so he thought) on a definitely lower social plane, and Jeff was fond of declaring (though not actually believing) that he was as good as anybody that walked.

Now he was fired—cast out. Discharged. He had been spoken to sternly by that no-count kid . . . that uppity, Barney Hamilton. He had been insulted, degraded and otherwise rendered more than slightly ridiculous. His resentment mounted as he traversed the miles into Beverly. It became deep and bitter after he had borrowed a ride from a colored man who was driving a battered old flivver and who was afraid to refuse Jeff's request.

Arriving in Beverly, Jeff Butler let himself down without a thank-you at the depot. There he encountered a friend of his, a gentleman of similar ilk, to whom he related his troubles. It appeared, according to Jeff, that he had personally built Cathedral Gardens, and that he had been pitched out without rhyme or reason.

Two other denizens of Big Occasin Swamp joined the group, ostensibly to sympathize with Jeff's woes, but actually to share his corn liquor. Throughout the balance of the morning and well into the afternoon they discussed the affair. Occasionally Jeff went off into a portentous silence. On each such occasion he made gestures and announced that if he wanted to tell everything he knew, the whole dawg-bit county would be tore up by the roots. He said this so frequently and so earnestly that he was eventually (though not immediately) believed. He crossed urged him to divulge this devastating information, and Jeff—being instinctively a lover of the dramatic—withheld his tidings and so successfully that his three companions pooled their cash resources and invested in another quart of corn, price fifty cents.

The afternoon wore on. Jeff and his three friends sat on the railroad right of way and debated social problems.

Eventually the four gentlemen— all more or less intoxicated—became hungry. Jeff Butler, drunk and expansive, and having in the pockets of his ancient corduroy trousers the money which Barney Hamilton had given him . . . created a sensation by inviting those present to join him at Mac's Bar-B-Q place for sandwiches.

Mr. McCants was not particularly glad to see them. He observed that they were none too sober and risked insult by demanding cash with the order.

Mac's Bar-B-Q was a Beverly institution. It perched on the side of the street leading from the Square to the railroad station, and attracted all classes. Mr. McCants, a sad-looking gentleman with a long face and melancholy eyes, at times resented the popularity enjoyed by his establishment. Customers demanded service and speed and effort, to none of which was Mac addicted.

The four swamp angels were conversing. The tall one, Jeff Butler, was doing most of the talking. Mac tried not to listen. Much gossip flowed across his counter and toward all of it he tried to maintain an attitude of professional aloofness.

"And this beach thing I been a-tellin' you about," Jeff Butler was stating, "it's turrible."

"Sho' is, Jeff. 'Splain it."

"It's all on account of them Gardens. They're the work of the Devil, sho' nuff."

"Uh-huh. An' what else, Jeff?"

"You wouldn't believe—not hardly."

"You tell us."

"Well," Jeff choked down the last colossal mouthful of hamburger. "What would you-all say was I to tell you that in the early mawnin's out yonder, they's wimmin runnin' around 'thout any clothes."

There were exclamations of shocked surprise and very considerable interest.

"No?"

"You ain't drin' me?"

"Yes I am. I seen it with my v'ry own eyes."

"How many?"

Jeff did some swift thinking. It would have been pleasant to exaggerate, but he feared to lose dramatic power. He said, "One!"

"Which one?"

"You wouldn't believe—"

"We sho' would, Jeff. Which lady is it?"

"Kay Forrest!"

Mac's face was red, but he said nothing. He heard indignant comment. "That gal!" "She's a shame an' a disgrace!"

"Wouldn't put nothin' past her . . ."

"All the things she's done! Married Kirk Reynolds . . . Most likely helped kill Harvey Jackson . . ."

"Ought to be tarred an' feathered. That's what she ought!"

"But she's a dawg-gone purty gal . . ."

Mr. Butler, vastly pleased by the interest he had aroused, elaborated on his story.

Then Jeff—not wishing to relinquish the spotlight—went into greater detail.

"Bet that gal sho' is pretty?" commented one man.

They were absorbed in their discussion, so absorbed that they did not see the door of the diner open, did not notice the startled look which appeared on the face of Jerry McCants. They heard—and Barney Hamilton heard—Jeff Butler's comment.

"Kay Forrest purty! Boy! She is! Mawnin' after mawnin' I seen her git out on one of them islands."

Jeff was jerked from his stool. He had a fleeting glimpse of a blond, boyish face . . . and a pair of eyes which were hot with fury.

Then Barney's fist exploded against Jeff's mouth. It wasn't a slap. It didn't invite hostilities. It started the battle formally and efficiently.

Mr. Butler crashed to the floor. His three friends rose, and Mr. McCants vaulted the counter brandishing a heavy iron poker. Mac said, "You-all keep out of this."

Jeff blinked, squirmed and looked

Live Stock Situation

(By J. A. McNaughton.)

Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, Sept. 29.—California livestock markets were temporarily weakened during the past week by a prolonged spell of high temperatures. The meat business is sensitive to changes in weather. During extremely high temperatures, meat sales are inclined to fall off, at least for a few days. With colder weather, the public eats more meat. Thus there has been some temporary decline in cattle and hog prices, but members of the meat trade generally are of the opinion that the livestock markets are definitely on firm ground.

Greatly improved business and industrial conditions, brought on partly by war in Europe, may be expected to stimulate demand for meats. As buying power improves, it is believed likely that the demand for better quality meats will increase, although so far, retail meat demand appears to be centered on the lower costing meats.

Higher prices for hides, wool, tallow, lard and other by-products of the meat packing business are a decided strengthening factor in livestock markets. Livestock producers are carefully watching developments. For the most part, they are hopeful that present prices will be maintained, and many believe that war conditions may tend to cause improvement in the price structure.

On the other hand, livestock feeders are fixed with higher costs of production, which may tend to restrict livestock feeding in some areas where feedstuffs have advanced sharply. However, since the first sharp advance in prices of grains and other livestock feeds, the market has reacted somewhat as the realization grows that there is an abundance of most grains and feeds in the country.

Apparently livestock producers are in no way inclined to permit war conditions to retard the program of livestock breed improvement that has been going on in the western country during the past several years. It is well to give due credit at this time to the fairs and stock shows held in the western states for the greatly improved quality of western-produced meat animals. Just now, interest in California centers in the 48th District Agricultural Association Great Western Livestock Show, which will be held at Los Angeles, October 28 to November 8. An important feature of the exposition will be auction sales of high quality, registered range bulls. The Hereford show and sale at the Great Western has become one of the most important influences in the western cattle business.

Oct. 31 Final Date For Applications

October 31, 1939, has been designated by the State AAA Committee as the final date for acceptance in the county offices of applications for payment in connection with the 1938 Farm Programs, according to a statement made by J. Minor Beene, Chairman of the State Committee. This date also applies to supplemental applications under the 1938 Farm and range programs. The Committee also designated October 31, 1939, as the final date for accepting adjustment applications under the 1938 Program in the county offices, or 15 days after delivery of the check to the applicant, whichever date is the later.

"It vitally important to farmers and ranchers in New Mexico who are co-operating in the Conservation Program" said Mr. Beene, "That they have their applications for payment filed prior to this designated date. All applications for payment must be in the county office on or before October 31, 1939, unless it is a case where a co-operator has received a check and desires to file a claim for adjustment."

"This designated closing date has been established by the State Committee and the Regional Director of the Western Division, in accordance with Section 17-(b) of the 1939 Agricultural Conservation Program Handbook, and Section 7-(b) of the Range Conservation Handbook, in order that the schedule of work relative to the 1939 and 1940 Program will not be delayed as the result of work pertaining to the 1938 Program."
