New Pastor Arrives

The Rev. H. I. Wheeler arrived in Carrizozo last week to become pastor of the local Methodist church, succeeding Rev. J. M. Glazier, who retired from active work and went to California to live. Rev. Wheeler has been pastor at Mishalena the past two years. He manifests much interest in local church work and a desire to co-operate in all Christian labors, not only with his own flock, but with other Christian and Charitable organizations.

Bakers Cafe Moved To New Location

Baker's Cafe moved yesterday from the building they formerly occupied into the Reil building recently vacated by the Re-Sale Store. They have added new equipment and with larger quarters will be better prepared to serve their customers and friends. They appreciated the liberal patronage which they have enjoyed and ask a continuance of same.

Tommy Hughes has been employed as boiler maker's helper for the Southern Pacific in El Paso.

Auto Accident Fatal

Last night, while driving between Carrizozo and Roswell, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wolfe had an auto accident in which Mr. Wolfe was killed instantly, and Mrs. Wolfe, who was formerly Mrs. Sallie Mae Reynolds, was so seriously injured, her recovery is doubtful. She is now at St. Mary's hospital in Roswell. Deepest grief is expressed by their many friends.

Small Farmers Benefit By Livestock Insurance

Many borrowers of the Farm Security Administration this year are protecting themselves against death of their livestock by insurance through replacement associations. These nonprofit co-operative associations will replace at small cost a farmer's livestock in case of death. The plan is of special benefit to small farmers.

Members pay 4 1/2 percent of the appraised value of the animal as premium each year. If the animal dies or is killed, the farmer will be paid 80 per cent of its appraised value by the association. At the close of the year after losses and operation expenses are deducted, the balance is returned to the members of the association as refunds.

Farm Security borrowers, in those states where replacement associations have been set up, are taking advantage of insurance against a loss that may be disastrous.

Chonita Greigo

Mrs. Chonita Greigo, age 28, passed away at her home on the southside of town after a long illness.

School Notes

The all school party given at the Community Hall October 21, was a huge success financially and socially. There was a gross income of $77.00 and net income after all expenses were paid was $45.50. The money was used to pay for instruments now in use in the band work of our school.

Miss Dorothy Kenshenbach of Hot Springs, N. M. joined our Freshman Class Monday. We wish for you a pleasant and profitable stay in our school.

The Carrizozo Business Men's Club will be entertained by the Faculty next Wednesday evening in the Banquet rooms of the Home Economic Department of the High School Buildings.

The faculty members look refreshed after their meeting in Albuquerque of last week. So we infer that the intellectual feast was well patronized.

A superior Musical program is being prepared by the department for next Friday evening. There will be a very nominal charge to defray the expenses and any surplus will be used for paying on band instruments.

Mr. Carpenter is driving a new car this week. He reports to be in favor of taxing the house trailers off the highway after his recent accident. The weaving house trailers are a growing hazard on our highways.

The Senior Class is going into the business of selling Xmas cards. This will replenish their treasury and give some needed experience in salesmanship.

The fourth grade enjoyed a Halloween party last Wednesday.

Marian Pruitt a recent sufferer from Appendicitis was operated on last Saturday. Marion is doing well and will return to school in a few days. She is now convalescing at the Turner Hospital.

Friday we will journey over to Alamogordo, and watch our Football team score on the Alamo High Team.

A very enjoyable time was had by the freshmen and their invited guests Friday evening October 20th. The party was of unusual importance because it shows that the Freshmen are good sports and entertainers. The costuming was fine; Betty Beck in full dress as an Indian and Lucio Vidarri in full dress as an Italian Sheik were outstanding.

Mrs. Sarah C. Hughes

Beautifully impressive funeral services were held at the Baptist church yesterday afternoon by Rev. L. D. Cochran, for Mrs. Sara C. Hughes, one of the best known and most highly esteemed pioneers of Lincoln county.

Mrs. Hughes had lead a long, and useful life and her charitable deeds were well known to all.

She had been ill the greater part of the time for two years, but by sheer determination kept up and around most of the time until last Sunday, at which time it was known she could not recover. She passed away, at 4 o'clock last Wednesday. At her bedside when the end came were her family and friends.

She was born at Dallas, Texas Jan. 22, 1855. She was married to George M. Hughes in 1882 at Jordan City, Texas.

They moved to Lincoln county; New Mexico in 1902. Mr. Hughes passed away many years ago. Four sons, Tom, Harvey, Fred and George, also preceded her in death.

New Chevrolets

Detroit, Mich.—Public demand for the new 1940 Chevrolets, introduced in the company's 8,600 dealerships throughout the country Oct. 14, has hit a record high for immediate post-announcement orders, it was announced by W. E. Holler, general sales manager.

Mr. Holler reported that the new cars have won instant approval of the car-buying public, interest being expressed not only in the offerings as a whole, but in individual models of the most comprehensive line ever introduced by Chevrolet.

"Never before in my experience have I seen such a heavy demand for all models of the new car," Mr. Holler said. "The unusually strong backlog of orders built up during the pre-announcement activities has been further bolstered by purchasers who were simply waiting to get a glimpse of the new car before selecting model and color."

The ladies of the Baptist W. M. Union entertained at the church on Oct. 25 in honor of Mrs. L. D. Cochran's birthday. The guests present numbered 97. She received so many gifts, including Bible, cake chest, birthday cake.

Finland to Safeguard Hold on Aaland Islands

Thousands of tiny islands, some of them no more than reefs, make up the Baltic archipelago that shows on the map as the Finnish-controlled Aaland Islands. Though Russia has not formally voiced demands that it be allowed to establish a naval base on the islands, it is expected the request, when it comes, will be rejected flatly by Finland. Rulers of the other three Nordic powers, Sweden, Denmark and Norway, met in Sweden recently to study mutual war problems.

U-Boat Raid on U. S. Recalled

Lone Successful Attack on American Shipping by German Submarine.

ORLEANS, MASS.—Renewal of German submarine attacks on merchant shipping in the present war recalls the lone successful raid on United States coastwise shipping in the World war.

The raid occurred July 21, 1918, two miles off this Cape Cod town and resulted in a loss of $945,000.

It was Sunday morning and bathers were enjoying the calm, warm waters. Others lolled on the beach, some watching a tug steadily towing three barges southward.

A cry from a sharp-eyed bather suddenly drew the attention of all on the beach to the tug.

A black object had risen above the surface and the booming of a cannon was heard. Binoculars were trained on the strange sight off shore and spectators quickly identified the object as a German submarine.

Attacking with determination but without accuracy, the U-boat fired three torpedoes—none reaching its mark. Its deck gun made an occasional hit, but one shot was so wide that it landed close to the spectators on shore.

Escaped in Boats.

Three women and five children were among the 41 persons aboard the tug and barges, but they escaped harm. During a lull in the attack, they escaped to small boats.

For nearly two hours the submarine's deck gun rained shells on the tug and barges before the craft started to founder. Shrapnel seriously wounded Captain Ansell and two crew members, John Botovick and John Vitz.

Vitz's hand was severed by a flying piece of steel, while part of Botovick's arm was blown away.

Word of the attack meantime had been sent to the Chatham air station and three seaplanes appeared on the scene. What followed was ineffective but amusing.

Instead of dropping bombs on the U-boat, the pilots flung out hammers, screwdrivers and other tools available from their kits. They hoped to damage the periscope of the submersible, but not a hit was called.

Hours later more hydroplanes and patrol boats had reached the scene, but the submarine was not to be found.

Care for Wounded.

The wounded were removed to the coast guard station and Dr. James P. McCue was summoned from Orleans. He walked a mile and a half over sand dunes to reach the station and there found complete confusion.

The casualties had been given first aid but they needed further attention. They were placed on mattresses and carried over the dunes to a boat, rowed across the river, and placed in the doctor's car which carried them to the McCue home.

Their wounds were dressed and an ambulance moved them to the Massachusetts General hospital in Boston.

The summer visitors to the Cape gathered in small groups excitedly for a while of the unusual sight they had seen, and then resumed their restful routine.

Experts Report Progress

On Plans for Space-Ship

LONDON.—Designs for the construction of a "space ship" in which scientists hope one day to be able to travel to the moon, are published in the current issue of the Journal of the British Interplanetary society.

That a lunar voyage will be possible in the not too distant future is the belief of a group of men who are working steadily and unobtrusively toward their goal, states an accompanying article which gives some idea of their progress.

The pioneers point out the necessity for extensive ground experiments before the construction of a space ship could be undertaken.

Books Still Stained With

Blood of Jean Paul Marat

BAYON ROUGE, LA.—It may not be the most expensive autograph in the world, but it possibly is the most unusual—that which is composed of the blood of Jean Paul Marat, French physician and scientist of the Eighteenth century.

The autograph, as it is called, is the blood of Marat which fell on a copy of Pere Labat's "Voyages de l'Amerique" when he was stabbed by Charlotte Corday in 1793. The book is part of the collection of Louisiana State university.

Bogus Money Is Found

In British Prison Cell

LONDON.—Changing of a counterfeit bill in a Newport, Isle of Wight, club led to the discovery of 12 more imitation notes in a cell in Parkhurst prison. The bills were found when a convict serving a sentence for forgery was removed to the hospital. Further search revealed that camera-lens, plates and a quantity of sensitized paper had been stolen from the photographic department.

Prison officials are trying to learn how the bill got out of the prison and into circulation.

Lights of New York

by L. L. STEVENSON

New York's latest big free show is rapidly reaching its last act. It won't be long now before the old Hippodrome, a Sixth avenue landmark, like so many of New York's buildings that formed links with the past, will be merely a memory. It is to be replaced by a structure, part of which is to be a garage. Thus a throwback to former times since, away back in the old days when New York was much newer, there was a street-car barn on the site of the Hippodrome. But what's on my mind at the moment is not history but the present. Next to watching a building going up, New Yorkers like to watch a building coming down. No matter how fast the tempo of the city presumably is, there are always those who can take enough time out from their regular business to inspect construction or demolition. So from the start, the wrecking of the old Hip has had its audience.

Among those who have seen the time-stained walls come down have been many who knew the Hip not as customers of the box office or mere passersby but as performers. Among them was an ancient clown who drew $200 a week for his appearances there but who is now living on charity. There were those who took part in the great spectacles and who know why girls who apparently marched into the great pool did not get wet. They simply went down a stairway. There have been also those who took part in more recent productions, the great "Pascion Play" presented by Morris Gest, and the still more recent "Jumbo." And pugs and wrestlers from the last days of the Hip still hang around.

In their eagerness to see construction or demolition, New Yorkers, wise though they are supposed to be, forget the safety factor altogether. That's why when a building is going up or coming down there is a roof over the adjacent sidewalks. Safety is also the reason why there is usually a tight board fence around the job. If it weren't for that fence, a lot of New Yorkers would be buried under bricks or find themselves in a hole.

The ever-present curiosity of New Yorkers concerning building wrecking was well illustrated when the old post office building, next to City Hall park, reached the end of its days. Daily hundreds stopped on Broadway or Park Row to see what was going on. That was one of the better big shows. The old post office building was built of granite and was so tough ordinary methods made no impression. So a big steel ball was used to break down the walls.

Long after the steel ball had ceased swinging, New Yorkers were still interested in what was going on. One afternoon I noticed a long line waiting to peek through a hole in the high green fence. All that could be seen was a hole in the ground. I know that is true because it took me a full half hour to get up to the opening.

An incident observed the other afternoon on the way to Grand Central bears out an assumption that New York's alleged hurry is more or less bunk. A man who looked to be a typical, time-harassed New Yorker, instead of waiting for the light at Sixth avenue, dodged into the street and, after narrowly escaping being mowed down by taxis and trucks, reached the library side in safety. Then, instead of hurrying on his way, he sauntered into Bryant park, sat down on a bench, lighted a cigar leisurely and started to read a newspaper.

A midtown school employs as instructors three Russian princes who, because of the changed conditions in their country, have been forced to turn their knowledge of ballroom dancing into a means of livelihood. Employed in the same building is a Russian grand duke. He made the mistake, however, of not learning to dance so he is only a porter. Yet when nobody happens to be about, the three princes still salute their former superior.

ALTURAS, CALIF.—The three

Housewives Lose Out

To Male Cake Baker

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—California housewives were humbled in their own domain, the kitchen, when a mere male took more first places than any woman in amateur baking competition held at the California State fair.

Harry S. Franks, of Manteca, won first places with his chocolate cake, pound cake and nut bread; second with panocha, and third with filled cookies, gingerbread, and prune pie.

Correct Constipation Before—Not After!

An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of emergency relief. Why let yourself suffer those dull lifeless days because of constipation, why bring on the need for emergency medicines, when there may be a far better way? That way is to KEEP regular by getting at the cause of the trouble.

If it's common constipation, due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, a pleasant, nutritious, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran—goes straight to the cause by supplying the "bulk" you need.

Eat this crunchy toasted cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—In more than four decades, Louis M. Ellshemius made 5,000 paintings and drawings and never made a cent out of them. 'All Vanity' Cries Now, three big galleries give exhibitions of his work. One gallery is reported to have sold $150,000 worth of his paintings. All his canvases are in demand at high prices.

But Mr. Ellshemius, an irascible little man with a ragged beard and a testy way of speaking, is bedridden in his gloomy, gaslit old house in East Fifty-seventh street, and he asks, "What's the good of the whole damn thing?" He's 75 years old. He warned the world many times that it was going hell-for-leather down the skids, and now he thinks it's on the last stretch of the greased chute, and nothing else matters—not even money and fame.

The late Ralph Blakelock lost his mind after years of failure to stir critical or popular interest in his work. He was hailed as a great painter, and his pictures were bought by great galleries when he no longer knew or cared about money or recognition. There is an interesting parallel between his career and that of Mr. Ellshemius, although the latter is still bright and smart as a chipmunk.

But he can't even look out of his narrow bedroom window. He wants no outlook on a world turning itself into a madhouse. Pictures on the floor, covered with dust and cobwebs, may be worth a fortune, pictures of moods, dreams and memories, but that doesn't interest him. He had renounced the "pomps and vanities of this wicked world" long before it beat a path to his door.

The parallel between Blakelock and Ellshemius is also marked by the amazing diversity of their talents. Blakelock, the son of a physician, was trained in medicine, gifted in music and almost made a career of the piano and musical composition.

Ellshemius has composed a small library of songs, operas and etudes and used to give piano concerts in his youth. He painted feverishly for 40 years, quitting in 1922 when no one would buy his pictures and no galleries hang them. But, in his varied abilities, he far outshone Blakelock. Here are a few of his achievements:

When he was a student at Cornell university, he discovered a new species of ichneumon fly. Later he announced a new law governing the fertilization of trees.

He wrote somewhat more than 50 volumes of plays, novels, novelettes, essays and verse. The verse, byronic in tone, was written in English, French, German, Italian and Spanish. He published them himself and, like his pictures, they gathered only cobwebs and dust.

He invented a new kind of "magic" indelible ink and several studio devices for artists.

He explored various diseases and offered methods of therapy.

He was born in Laurel Hill, N. J., near Newark, the son of a wealthy glove manufacturer. He attended Cornell two years and was a roommate of Robert W. Chambers in Paris when they were studying art under Bougereau.

His is a blue-book family of Dutch antecedents, and his name is there inscribed, but that interests him no more than the hanging of his pictures in the Metropolitan, the Luxembourg and the Whitney galleries.

IN HIS book, "Dynamite," Louis Adamie says the Los Angeles Times explosion of 1916 forever ended militancy in the American labor movement. In that year Sam-

Put an End to Labor Militancy uel Gompers and Frank Morrison were sentenced to prison terms on charges growing out of the Buck stove case. This was lost in the shuffle, with the dynamiting excitement. The terms were never served. Thereafter neither Gompers nor Morrison was militant. Currently, Mr. Morrison, the highly esteemed secretary-treasurer and conservative elder statesman of the A. F. of L. retires from office, after 43 years in that post. He will be 80 years old next month.

A native of Frankton, Ont., he is a doctor of laws of Lake Forest university. He entered law practice, but turned to the printing trade and became a member of the Typographical union in 1873. He is a member of the executive council of the Churches of Christ in America. (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

Make Everything of Chic Wool: Hats, Bags, Evening Clothes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DAYTIME suits, dresses and coats made of handsome wool fabric are taken for granted, but hats, handbags, gloves and even footwear fashioned of intriguing wool materials is real news. Shoes with plaid wool spat tops is the school girl's pride this season.

Then there is this matter of evening clothes, the swank idea is to make the long evening coat of handsome wool. Young girls adore the floor-length coats tailored of bright red tweed or duvetyne, quite unfurled but fastening with jewel or military brass buttons. Coats and capes of handsome tweed in rich blackberry tones make appeal to the more mature.

A dinner gown of a luxurious wool is considered "tops." See the stunning dinner costume to the left in the picture. It is fashioned of red wool in that the vogue for red is outstanding this season. The dress has an enormously full skirt with front shirings, slit pockets and a gold kid belt. The short snug jacket has unusual buttons of clusters of gold colored beads with chain attachment. A two-strand gold bead necklace, gold earrings and bracelets are smart jewel accessories.

The sophisticated young woman to the right in the group is obviously very wool-conscious in that her swank jacket, blouse and skirt, her hat and her handbag are made of high-style wool weaves. Her stylish hat is of fine wool jersey. It has the very new full draped mood. The over-arm bag has a strap and trimming of wool felt appliqued with tiny multicolored wool discs. Novelties of wool such as ensembled in this costume made of ray, wools are everywhere present in the style parade.

liners designed the dinner hat shown in the inset below to the right of cheer wool. It is sprinkled with sequins and boasts of a smood (most hats have either snoods or bustle backs) made of soft feathers.

The stunning dress which you see centered in the picture is styled of a cheer wool in the now-so-fashionable grape color. It has the very new and important bustle effect. Rows of shirring make the detail at the neckline. A huge velvet ribbon bow animates her tiny felt pill-box chapeau.

New textures, many of which are sheer and dainty as chiffon, make wool an all-year-round fabric that tames to occasion perfectly. Then, too, the fascinating color range provided in modern wools has a lot to do with wool's popularity. New "old" fabrics like melton, duvetyne, broadcloth, flannel, serge, wool bengaline and ottoman vie with really new weaves in sheer woolsens. Even tweeds are much lighter in weight than they used to be.

Among new finds in the wool fabric realm, one of the most appealing types is that of printed wools, some of them done in hand-blocked gorgeous florals, others in conventional sports motifs. Metal-touched wools answer the call for fabric elegance also. These are effective for handsome evening jackets. Jackets of pastel wools, either sequin embroidered or needle-worked with yarn or chenille, are worn with flaring skirts of crepe or velvet. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Far Off Teacher—Tommy, can you spell "fur"? Tommy—Yes, ma'am—"f-u-r," fur. Teacher—That's correct. Now tell the class what fur is. Tommy—Fur is an awful long way off.

Then He'll Know Willie—Say, Dad, why do they call English the "mother tongue"? Dad—Just observe who uses it the most around this house.

Their Misfortune The chairman rose to propose the toast. "Gentlemen, let us drink to the health of our colleague, William Brown, who is leaving the town. He was born here; he was married here; and we all hoped that he would die here. But it was not to be."

Point of View "Ah, so you are the man who is giving my wife lessons in elocution," said the long-suffering husband. "What kind of a pupil is she?" "I find her very apt, to say the least," answered the teacher. "Strange," came the reply. "I always find her very apt to say the most."

Fitting Candles.—A candle may be made to fit any candlestick if dipped for a moment into very hot water. This will soften the wax and it can then be easily pushed in.

Improving Veal Roast.—Veal roasts are improved by rubbing them with powdered ginger, black pepper and onion salt before cooking.

Care of Lamp Shades.—Silk and parchment lamp shades should be dusted frequently with a soft brush or the vacuum cleaner.

When Baking Apple Pies.—To prevent the juice in apple pies from boiling over during baking, mix the apples and sugar and let them stand covered for five minutes, then drain off the juice from the apple slices.

Lengthening Short Blankets.—If blankets have become too short by shrinkage or mending they can be lengthened by sewing at one end a strip of muslin 12 to 18 inches wide. This extra length will tuck in under the mattress at the foot and leave the woolen part on top of the bed.

Town Coat

Your black town coat, if trimmed with brown fur, will credit you as among the best-dressed. The type pictured has a detachable fur plastron with softly flaring revers of the brown fur. It goes without saying that with this smart black-with-brown coat there must be a plentiful gleaming of gold jewelry. In this instance milady responds to the call by wearing effective two-tone gold hoop earrings and pin together with a striking wide gold link bracelet. Hat and bag are suede.

Flair for Fringe Is Style Message

Again a revival of fringe is foreseen. Very new evening dresses are enhanced with rows of fringe detailing sleeves and neckline. Also smart shops are showing both blouses and jackets that make fringe their theme. Long fringed tassels finish off the streamer ends of the girdles. With evening fringe-covered jackets tiny muffs also fringe-covered will be carried.

Simple Styles in Shoes Is Favored

Now that designers of shoes have turned their thoughts in the direction of simplicity in styling and are working out the idea of lower heels, there is prospect of wearied women enjoying style plus comfort in the new footwear. The outlook is also for some very intriguing shoe fashions that make the approach to low heels in strikingly clever ways.

Motor vehicle inspection is compulsory in 17 states, including New Mexico. Permissive legislation in 12 other states has resulted in enactment of local inspection ordinances in approximately two dozen cities.

Governor Miles is to be commended for his order that State-owned cars may be driven only by authorized officials or employees and by others only with special permission. The Governor has said that "State cars have been purchased and made available to State officials and employees to expedite the business of state departments, not for the comfort or convenience of friends, relatives, or acquaintances."

Upon publication of a charge of One Dollar to be made for inspection of brakes, lights, etc., on automobiles Governor Miles sent out a request that the Maximum amount should be limited to fifty cents and also urge garages not to interpret the new regulations as being "more strict than they actually are."

Since January 1, 1939, 7 states have adopted the so-called "deferred registration" measures, changing the registration date from the first of the year to a later time. The results of these measures are to provide a more convenient time for motor vehicle owners to buy licenses and to bring greater revenue to State Highway Departments without increasing the taxes.

21 YEARS AGO

(From March 1918 Files)

Sergeant William W. Gallacher came in last Saturday morning on a short leave from Camp Funston, Kansas. Sergeant Gallacher looked every inch a soldier and met the glad hand of every one. A successful military career, sergeant, a safe return, full of honors are the wishes of all our people.

Mrs. Edith E. Crawford, Miss Georgia Leaset and Allan Johnson went to Roswell Saturday and returned the following day.

A nine-pound boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Kelley Saturday morning. The newest member of the firm is a husky fellow and makes demands that must be heeded.

Dr. and Mrs. C. E. Freeman were here yesterday from their home in Coyote Canyon, beyond white Oaks.

Last Words

Last words of dying persons are like the mutterings in a delirium. Why then are they so treasured? asks Dr. J. Shelton Horsley in an article in Hygeia Magazine. The melodramatic picture of relatives hovering over a deathbed is based on the wrong conception. Last words are of no value when they come from a mind benumbed by approaching death.

Carelessness is Costly

The common English blackberry, carelessly imported into New Zealand, spread so fast there, covering thousands of acres of the dairy lands, that thousands of dollars had to be spent in an attempt to destroy it.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

'PLEASE PASS THE CUSTOMERS'

THERE'S one muscle in the human anatomy which was named by a humorist with boarding-house experience. It is called the "boarding-house muscle" because it is the muscle which enables you to extend your arm—and reach.

It took its name, of course, from the dining-tables of boarding-houses, where to reach far was to get more to eat at a table where everybody was as engrossed in his plate as he didn't have the time or the inclination to pass anything to anyone else. Reach won.

In business it is reach also that wins. One of the chief values of advertising to the advertiser is that it gives him a reach for customers. Every business must both reach customers and reach for them if it is to exist.

The business man whose reach is longest and most skilled is the man who brings the most customers into his store. And those who reach the best have the best stores and can give the best values.

The chief concern of every business is his customers. Who are they? Where do they live? Why would they trade with me? How can

I tell them of the advantages of my business? Every business man asks these questions. Every successful business man answers them. In the reach for customers, it isn't a muscle which does the trick. It is advertising.

A man starts a store. Somewhere are men and women who should buy from him. He is sincere in his desire to serve. But unless he does something about it, his store will fall before enough customers find their way to his doors.

He has to reach out for them. He begins to advertise where customers will see—in the newspaper. One reads. He is convinced. He goes to the store. He is well-treated. He buys. He likes what he bought. He returns to buy again.

Gradually, as more advertising appears, more customers come, buy, return to buy again. The reach for customers is building a great business.

But don't you see that the business man is not the only one who has benefited in the process?

Every customer who found there a better place to buy, a place where he could get a little bit better merchandise and a little bit better service at a little bit better price, also benefited.

The customer benefits as much from advertising as the business man, if not more.

U. S. Navy Recruiting Station Nautical Notes

A total of 24,455 time signal broadcasts are made annually by naval radio stations for the benefit of ships at sea.

Lieutenant Maury, U.S. Navy, was in charge of the survey that was made for the laying of the first Trans-Atlantic telegraph cable.

It has been proven that Naval battles took place thousands of years before the Christian Era. On the walls of ancient Egyptian tombs are depicted such events.

The longest ship in the world is the old U. S. S. Main which was sunk in Havana Harbor in 1898. Its foremast now stands on the Reina dock at Annapolis, Maryland, while its mainmast is in Arlington Cemetery, thirty miles away.

The luckiest vessel of the United States Navy, next to the Constitution, was the schooner Enterprise, in eight months, during the West Indian War against French piracy, this vessel captured 6 privateers and recaptured 11 American vessels.

When a United States naval vessel meets an American merchantship at sea visual messages involving flag hoists, semaphore or flashing lights are exchanged. This practice permits merchant ships to obtain proficiency in signaling not often used in their normal occupation but highly necessary in emergencies.

During the first part of November, 70 young men will be called from the Rocky Mountain District to be enlisted in the United States Navy.

The above Nautical Notes were furnished and additional ones will be furnished each week by the United States Navy Recruiting Station.

A half-hour since the doors of the Bon Ton Pool Room had swung open and Mr. Ernie Watts had barged into the smoke-laden atmosphere. His first question was directed at the house in general, and induced a solemn hush. He asked, "Who tore down that pitcher I pasted on the window this afternoon?"

A lanky young gentleman, clad in a blue flannel shirt and decrepit trousers, answered eagerly. "Andy Forrest tore it down."

"How come?"
"He seen it on the window an' come in. He ripped it right off. An' then he said things."
"What kind of things?"
"Pool-games ceased. Cues were racked and Mr. Watts found himself the center of an avid group. The situation appealed to him, since he considered himself a rather tough person. He hooked thumbs through belt-straps and worded his question again. "What sort of things did Andy Forrest say?"

"Ernie," declared the tall one sadly, "he said terrible things. He called you out of yo' name."

"Me?"
"Well, he didn't say you ezactly, on account of we didn't admit you done it. . . . but he said the feller which did it was a—was a—"

"Was a what?"
"Well, I reckon you can guess what he said. He was mighty hot up."

Ernie tried to look grim. "What else did he say?"
"He said some day he was goin' to find out who put that pitcher on the window, an' then he was goin' to beat that feller up."

"Oh! he said that, did he?"
"Ho cho' did, Ernie. Honest. Of co'se we didn't tell him it was you."

"Why not?"
"We—o-ell, we didn't aim to git you in no trouble. We didn't know was you scared of him or not."

Mr. Watts rose to the crisis. He announced in a large and booming voice that he wasn't skeered of nobody, an' least of all Andy Forrest. Somebody said, "You better had be. Andy said he was going to mop up with you."

Ernie fancied himself a brave young man and a considerable fighter. He realized that he was on trial. That his reputation for courage would stand or fall on the manner in which he handled this situation. He inquired, loudly, "Where's Andy Forrest at now?"

"He's down to Warner's garage."
"Well, I'm goin' down there an' find out if he's so dawg-gone tough. That's what I'm goin' to do."

They applauded him. They informed him that he was come man. They expressed apprehension for Andy. They said they'd go along and watch the combat. "Ain't goin' to be no light," sneered Ernie Watts. "This Andy Forrest don't know nothin' about fightin'."

They milled around the corner of Monument Square and moved en masse down Palmietto Avenue. Warner's Sudden Services Garage was on the corner of that main thoroughfare and Atlantic Street. It was a great, cavernous place, with gas-pumps in front.

Andy and Kay and Jim and Margaret and Barney were in the little machine-shop at the rear when the front entrance filled with young men. Barney said lightly, "Customers, Andy. Business is picking up."

Andy glimpsed the crowd and sensed its hostility. His lips set firmly and his eyes narrowed. A new dignity sat upon him and he spoke quietly. "You-all stay right here."

"Something wrong?"
"Yeh. But I can handle it."
Kay put her hand on his arm. She felt suddenly ill—knowing the answer to the question she was about to ask.

"Something about me, Andy?"
"Maybe. But you-all ain't got anything to do with it."
Clad in overalls and a light flannel shirt, Andy moved down the middle of the old warehouse, toward the men who were crowding through the door. Andy said, "What do you want?"

Ernie Watts stepped forward. "I'm kind of cravin' to have a little talk with you, Andy."
"Go ahead."
"You was in the Bon Ton this afternoon, wasn't you?"
"Yeh."
"You tore a pitcher off the window, didn't you?"
"Yeh."
"An' you said you was gonna whip the man that put it there, didn't you?"

"Somebody," said Andy, "seems to have been tellin' you the truth."
Margaret Hamilton had been watching the scene with quiet, observant eyes. She leaned close to Kay and whispered, "Do you know the Sheriff?"

"Yeh. Why?"
"Telephone him. Quick. There's going to be trouble."

Kay walked into the machine-shop and whisked the handle of the wall telephone. She got the residence of Sheriff Floyd Griffin and spoke swiftly. Then, compelled by a fact-based horror, she returned to the big noise room.

Andy and Ernie Watts had moved closer to one another. Ernie's friends—a score of them—had surged in through the wide-open door. Barney and Jim Owenby stood silent and tense; eyes and lips grim. Waiting.

It was Andy who dominated the scene. He moved closer to Mr. Watts. He said, "Was it you who put that picture on the window?"
"Yeh, it was. An' what are you goin' to do about it?"
"If you walk outside with me, I'll show you."

Ernie Watts was a good tactician. Without warning he leaped forward and struck. The blow caught Andy high up on the forehead and spun him around. And Ernie came in behind it. His second punch landed squarely on Andy's jaw . . . and Andy went down.

He was dazed. For just an instant he sprawled, then clambered to hands and knees—shaking his head. He staggered to his feet . . . but before Ernie could attack again, something happened.

Barney and Jim Owenby leaped forward. The former pinioned Ernie-Watts' arms; the latter grabbed Andy. Andy said, "I'm all right. Let me go."

Ernie Watts struggled with Barney. Sensing an easy victory, he fought to free himself from Barney's amazingly efficient grip. He yelled to his friends, "Make him leave go! They're gangin' me!"
Somebody took the cue. "Leave him go!"

But Barney did not leave him go. He clung tighter. And Jim Owenby pool-room gang lay unconscious. Kay ran forward and dropped to her knees beside the bleeding form of the old man—dabbing at the ugly wound with a pitifully inadequate handkerchief.

The Sheriff looked down at the figure of Doc Morrison. He asked, "Who done this?"
There was no answer. Sheriff Griffin glared at the others. "I know ev'y last one of you. And somebody's goin' to pay for this."

He bent-over-Doc-Morrison. He placed the gun beside him on the concrete floor.
"He's bad hurt," announced the Sheriff in a solemn voice. "I'm holdin' all of you. An' if he dies . . ."

The hoodlums had lost their belligerence. Even these young men had known and loved Doc Morrison. They were from households in which the venerable Doc had done his greatest charity. Somebody said, in a hushed voice, "God! I wouldn't have hurt Doc for nothin'!"

The Sheriff said, "This town has stood for a lot. But this is somethin' it won't stand for."

In the days which followed, the citizens of Beverly did not gossip. They talked. Talked soberly and sanely. Murder and violence and drinking and gambling had not done this, but a serious injury to Doc Morrison was more than enough.

Even the young men who had comprised the mob, the Bon Ton hangers-on, were awed by the enormity of what they had done. Awed and frightened. The pool-room itself was suddenly deserted as though—because the raid upon Andy Forrest had been put upon it. The young men who chronically infested the place lost their bolterousness. They declared to one another that they was sho' sorry; that there wa'n't no one of them that would hurt Doc Morrison fo' nothin'. And they meant it.

Contributing causes were forgotten in the actuality of Doc's injury. For the first time in a month Kay Forrest was not the chief subject of conversation. They talked about Doc and of the fight in which he had been injured. The night of the third day the citizens held a mass-meeting. There was little oratory. Men of substance spoke gravely, quietly and seriously. The spirit of the town had changed. This impending tragedy stripped the town of civic pretense and made it acutely aware of certain internal problems.

On the morning of the fourth day the physician in charge announced publicly that Doc Morrison had regained consciousness and would recover. That morning the sun shone. That morning citizens of Beverly smiled again, and today they dared talk of what they would have done had Doc died. They had been afraid to speak of that before, lest—some of them expressed it—lest they put bad mouth on him.

A new wave of protest and indignation swept the more distant sections of Beauregard County, penetrating deep into Big and Little Moccasin Swamps. Well-meaning but definitely illiterate preachers once again impressed upon their tiny congregations that this was the work of the Devil; that the injury to Doc had been the final warning of a Providence roused to wrath. They yelled hellfire and damnation. And in Beverly itself, the same sentiments were expressed, though in different and perhaps less violent language.

Resolutions were passed. Petitions were circulated. A special meeting of the Town Council was called, after which Mayor Aeg Roberts held a long and earnest discussion with Solicitor Gabe Dixon and Sheriff Floyd Griffin. The Sheriff found himself fighting for right and justice; first, because that promised the greatest number of votes in the not-too-distant primary; and, secondly, because he, too, had been deeply fond of Doc Morrison.

Sheriff Griffin thereupon visited Robbie Morse, owner and operator of the White Star Hotel. He said, "I ain't happy to tell you, Robbie, but things has got to be diffent fun now on."

"Diffent—how?"
"No-mo' licker-to-be sold heah—or drunk, either, fo' that matter."

Mr. Morse shook his round head sadly. "I seen that comin' the minute them crazy young bucks hurt Doc Morrison." He tried to find some solace in the situation. "But tourists ain't concerned about this thing, are they, Floyd?"

"I reckon not. Yo' business should go on bein' purty good."
The Sheriff lumbered upstairs to the corner suite which had been occupied by Kirk Reynolds; the suit in the living-room of which Dan Creedon still operated the dice-game.

Dan was seated by the window, in his shirt-sleeves. He was a tall, stony-individual with sad, steady eyes and a laconic manner. He said, "Howdy, Sheriff," and Floyd Griffin said, "Howdy, Creedon." Then he saw the other occupant of the room; the vivid brunette who stood near the window looking down upon Monument Square. The Sheriff said, "Mawnin', Miss Henkel."

"Oh! he said that, did he?" did not relax his grasp of Andy until the crowd moved forward.

Someone struck Barney. Hard. In the face. Barney released Ernie Watts and swung . . . There were shouts and oaths and the grunts of men fighting.

The noise sifted through to the street. It came to the ears of an elderly man; a tall, quiet old man who had driven his rambunctious car up to one of the gas-pumps.

Doc Morrison got out of his car and looked inside. He saw a crowd of men, punching, kicking, cursing. He recognized Barney Hamilton and Jim Owenby and a half-dozen of the disreputable gang that made the Bon Ton Pool Room its headquarters. More important, he saw two girls at the far end of the garage, crouching against the wall, hands pressed against white lips, eyes wide and staring.

Doc Morrison said, "Hey! Quit!"
No one heard. Or, if they did—they paid no heed. Barney and Jim and Andy were struggling valiantly, with fine—but futile, effect. They fought silently. Grimly. They wasted no breath in words. Barney was bleeding. There was a lump under Jim Owenby's left eye. He swung at the man who had inflicted that lump; mashing his lips. The man howled with pain and insensate fury. He backed away and picked up a tire-tool from the floor. Kay screamed, "Look out!" as the man with the crushed-lips threw the tire-tool.

Jim Owenby ducked. The steel implement flew through the air. There was the sickening sound of its impact upon human flesh. There was a brief groan and the thud of a collapsing body. There was blood, trickling sluggishly from the face of an old man.

A voice was raised above the melee. The voice said, "Good God, Fellers—you've kill Doc Morrison!"
There was a momentary cessation of fighting. Then, before it could be resumed, the sturdy figure of Sheriff Floyd Griffin came in through the door. Margaret said something to him and he whipped out a gun.

"Oh! he said that, did he?"

Her voice was flat and tired. She said, "Good morning."

Floyd Griffin returned his attention to Dan Creedon.

"Doc Morrison is purty popular heahabouts."

"That's all I been hearing for three days."

"There's been meetin's an' things. The whole town is sad."

"Yeh? So what?"
The Sheriff gestured toward the adjoining room.

"That's through."

"The dice-game?"
Creedon shrugged. "They'll get over it."

"Nope. Folks mean business this time." The guardian of law and order fidgeted. "Nor neither that ain't all, Creedon."

"What do you mean, that ain't all?"
"You got to get out of town."

"So? And suppose I don't?"
Floyd Griffin's eyes narrowed. "I know you ain't plumb foolish, Creedon. When they say to git out—why I reckon you got sense enough to do it."

"Sure . . . but listen: if I close up the dice-game . . ."

"That ain't enough. Not wantin' to hurt yo' feelin's, Creedon—the town's kind of fed up with you. An' I'm tellin' you, man to man an' friendly-like, that it wouldn't be awful healthy for you to stay heah."

"I get you. How much time have I got?"
"Oh! hee—fo' days. So long as folks know you're really fixin' to go, why I can keep 'em satisfied."

A faint smile flickered across Creedon's thin lips. He said, "Four days then, and I'll scam. Anything else?"

"Yeh . . ." The Sheriff looked more uncomfortable. He said, "It's about you, Miss Henkel."

Big black eyes flashed up to his. The lithe figure stiffened. She asked, "What about me?"

"You got to git out, too."

"Why?"
"Because ev'ybody says you got to. Now I ain't aimin' to make you feel bad, Miss Henkel—but folks has kind of stood all they're willin' to stand."

CHAPTER XIV

For perhaps five minutes after the departure of Sheriff Griffin, Babe Henkel said nothing more. Dan Creedon watched her—sympathetically. Eventually he spoke, and his voice was kindly. He said, "Snap out of it, Babe."

She turned smouldering eyes upon him. "The house!" she snapped.

"Griffin. You're crazy. He can't protect us any more because they won't let him."

"I ain't thinking about that, Dan. I'm talking about running us out of town."

"Well . . ." He shrugged. "There's nothing to do but scam."

She came closer and leaned over the table, her eyes boring into his. She said, "That's what you think."

"Sure I do."
"Well, you're wrong."
"Now listen, Babe . . ."

"You listen to me. This town ain't gone suddenly moral. Things don't happen that way. It's a cover-up."

"For what?"
"For Barney Hamilton. They don't want to do anything to him, so they're getting rid of us."

Dan said, "Maybe. And what can we do about it?"
"Plenty."
"What, for instance?"

Babe was tense. She said, "Dan—you ain't gonna take this sittin' down, are you? You ain't willing to blow without anybody even having been punished for killing Kirk?"

He shook his head. "I don't like to, if that's what you mean. But listen, Babe—me and you, we can't buck a whole town."

She said, "Barney Hamilton killed Kirk."

"I suppose he did. But everybody in town thinks he had good cause."

"Well, I don't. You see, I wasn't hard-boiled with Kirk. I was pretty crazy about him."

"Sure you were . . ."

"If I had been bumped off, Kirk wouldn't have checked out without doing something about it, would he?"

"That's different."

"How?"

"You're a dame."

She placed her hands palms down on the table-top. The long, slender fingers with their crimson nails were trembling.

"Before I leave this burg," she announced, "the guy that killed Kirk is gonna get his."

Dan Creedon was worried. "Don't get getting yourself all worked up. The cards are stacked against you, Babe."

"Going yellow on me?"

"Answer that for yourself."

"You're fixing to run out."

"I know when I'm beat."

"Well, I don't!" Her voice was hard. "You can blow whenever you get good and ready. Me—I'm gonna do something."

Creedon shrugged. "If that's the way you feel about it, cut me in."

Suddenly her eyes were filled with tears. "Gee, Dan! That's swell. But I don't want to get you in no jam."

"I can take it."

"You mean you'll stick?"

"If you can sell me on an idea, yeh. And get this straight, it ain't that I think you're smart—You're crazy to step into any more trouble. But I never have run out on anybody and I don't figure to start now."

DOLLAR MAKERS

One Method Of Advancing Is to Retreat

By GEORGE T. EAGER

TONS of rock and dirt must be excavated before a diamond is found. It is just as unusual to find among thousands of salesmen that rarity among those who sell—the man who believes in the selling power of understatement.

A coffee salesman startled the retail grocers of a large city by beginning his sales talk with the statement, "This is the second best brand of coffee on the market." Grocers naturally asked, "Who makes the best brand of coffee?" to which the salesman would reply, "Each of my many competitors makes the best brand and they all will tell you so." Admitting having the second best brand evidently placed him in a position where he was without competition and his sales results proved it.

A large baking company has successfully marketed a brand of bread in markets long held by established competitors. The new bread was well advertised in local newspapers. But under instructions from a president who knew the power of under-selling, salesmen sold each grocer one or two loaves less than the store's normal demand. Grocers were soon telling late afternoon customers, "I'm sorry, we are all sold out of that bread." It was not very long before storekeepers as well as customers unconsciously thought of it as the fastest selling bread and therefore the best bread. Grocers unconsciously recommended it to customers and customers soon began demanding it of grocers and its success was assured.

What's in a Name? IN CHINA, the more distinguished a man is, the shorter is his title. One might wonder how Mr. Burionagonatorocagaeazcoecha (it's his real surname, believe it or not) would rate in that far-off land. But then Mr. Burionagonatorocae, etc., etc., is not a Chinaman, but a Spaniard of Madrid. Wonder what he was called for short at school.

Mr. Konstantinow Georgin Kallochrietianalka, a Greek immigrant of Spokane, Wash., found the burden unbearable, so he recently obtained permission to change his name to Gus Elk. Well, that lightens the load considerably.

Positive identification of horses has been found practicable through photographs or gutta-percha molds of the roofs of their mouths, which are as distinctive and individual as human fingerprints.—Collier's.

Bank clerks, pay-roll carriers and night watchmen may now call for help during a holdup, without endangering their lives by an alarming move, through a new radio transmitter that they wear under their shirts. Taking a deep breath closes the electric circuit which makes the set silently flash alarm signals to a central receiving station.

UP-TO-DATE 'REVOLUTION'

THERE could be no more convincing way for the historian of the future to point out the high standards of living prevailing in this country than to contrast today's demands of those who want to overthrow our institutions with the demands of the revolutionists of other eras in the world's history. The French mazes cried for bread and falling to get it brought on the French revolution. But when a present day advocate of revolution in this country recently made a speech he said: "Why should the citizens—at least 90 per cent of them—be imprisoned behind the cruel bars of their own country?"

From this point of view it is the salesman who sell modern conveniences who are our most important national asset for the prevention of revolutions. We have 7 per cent of the world's population and starting with a wilderness have created and own today more than half of the world's wealth. Intelligent salesmanship and mass production have distributed this wealth so widely that stringent immigration laws are required.

The new industries created and developed in this country in the past 50 years now give employment to 10,000,000 men and women. Each new industry, whether it be automobiles, radio or rayon represents a new idea that has had to be first sold to the American people. It is significant that in this same period foreign countries, that have not developed their newspapers and publications as advertising vehicles for the dissemination of new ideas about things to buy, have not developed a single great new industry. If the United States has reached the point when revolutionists must cry for motor cars and refrigerators to get attention, it would seem that we are well on our way to prosperity.

Chemist Devises Method For Hunting Submarines VINEYARD HAVEN, MASS.—A chemical process by which the course and position of submarines could be checked is being considered by the war department, according to Dr. Max Trumper, Philadelphia bio-chemist.

He said that certain gases discharged by a submarine when it rises to the surface to obtain fresh supplies of oxygen and recharge its batteries mingle with the water. A surface ship, by dropping certain chemicals which cause the water to change color on mixing with the gases could check the submarine's position.

Lesson From Chinese

In a Toronto court a Chinese who had been giving evidence through an interpreter was found to be quite fluent in English. It is a characteristic of the oriental mind not to reveal all it knows; and this is not a bad plan for any other division of the human race.—Toronto Globe.

Irish Rhymes to Rout Rats

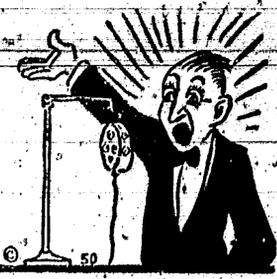

That the old method of rhyming rats to death still prevails in parts of Ireland is the belief of those in charge of the National Rat week there. At one time every district of the country had its professional rat rhymers, who wrote short poems, to be inserted in rat holes, imploring the rodents to leave.

90-HOUR WINTER GRIND spared your OIL-PLATED engine

You need your engine OIL-PLATED now by patented Conoco Germ Processed oil to wipe out doubts of decent oiling during starting—when unplated engines wear worst. (6 or 8 minutes of such wear, repeated 6 or 8 times a day through these cold months, mounts up beyond 80 hours!)... 90 life-sapping hours for engines abandoned to oils that can only "flow fast"... but no oil-starvation in 80 hours or 900 hours, when your engine's OIL-PLATED.

The "magnetic" action of Germ Processed oil gives every square inch in your engine a slippery overlay of OIL-PLATING—attached as firmly as chromium-plating. And could any plating drain down when you park in any cold, for any length of time? Then you know why OIL-PLATING—drain-proof—is ready to lubricate before you're even ready to get out of bed, or away from work. Before any oil-pump could squirt a drop, your drain-proof OIL-PLATING has readied your engine for safe, easy starting. That's how you get the drop on the worst of Winter by OIL-PLATING now with Conoco Germ Processed oil. Keeps up your engine—your battery—your oil-level, too!
