For an Easter Feast

The Easter neason brings eggs and more eggs to the tables of the whole world. seems. There are tinted eggs, eggs with dainty and intricate patterns adorning their giossy shells, and eggs decked out to look like Easter bunnies. Eggs may be decorated, too, with gaily colored stickers—and if you're clever with your fingers, you can make a giddy blonde or demure brunette egg, sporting a new Easter bonnet! Use bright blue round stickers for eyes, and a tiny gummed heart for a mouth. Or, if you like, paint in the features, and tint the "checks" with ordinary water color paints. Cotton or fringed crope paper may be glued on to resemble hair, and an Easter bonnet is made from a tiny paper nutcup, bits of colored paper, and a tiny feather or artificial flower.

When the bunny comes around with his gift of eags, keep him as a guest at your Easter table. He'll be a delight to children and grownups alike if his basket is filled with-condy-enge--- that the children themselves can eat. But Easter-Sunday demands more than eggs in the way of food! It's a day of feasting and most of us plan and plot for weeks ahead to give the family a truly delicious and unusual meal. Fine Spencerian Hand

N THIS day of typewriters, telegrams, telephones and even order blanks where all you have to do is, check the items, handwriting is becoming a lost art. But perhaps you can remember when it was still an attainment to be able to write "a fine Spencerian hand."

Why "Spencerian"? Because Platt Rogers Spencer, an Ohio farm boy, born in 1801, be-

book in 1848 and it immediately became a best seller. His fame and fortune were made and penmanship became the country's most important study.

As late as 1870, a million copies of Spencer's book were sold annually. But the typewriter came and flowing capitals and fine flourishes were soon supplanted in writing practice by "Now is the time for all good men to come to the ald of the party."

Bloomers

VOU probably think "bloomera" are called that because the word sounds the way bloomers look. Well, what would you think if they were called "jenkers"? That might have been the word by which they were known today had not Miss Amelia Jenks, for whom they were named, been married to Dexter C. Bloomer.

Or had she married a man named -Smith they might have been called "smithereens." or if she-well, with all the names there the possibilities are unlimited. Mrs. Amelia Jenks Bloomer of Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1849 started a woman's The Lily, and its magazine called Mrs. Bloomer purpose was to advocate temperance and women's rights. For publicity purposes, Mrs. Bloomer adopted a costume consisting of a jacket with close sleeves and a pair of Turkish pantaloons secured around When dipping candy eggs, melt the ankle by bands. Several of her the chocolate in the top of a double | contemporary advocates of women's rights were the same costume and these persons were known as "Bloomerifes" or just "Bloomers."

The campaign died out but the pantaloon idea did not. A modified form, shortened to gather just below or above the knee was adopted and became the bloomers as worn today-or are they worn today? At least, Amelia Bloomer was the inspiration for bloomers as they are remembered today, even if shorts have taken their place.

'Let George Do It'

THERE is only one man in the history of the world who ever said "Let George do it" and really meant it—really meant to let George do it and knew what George he was talking about. When the expression is used today, it may mean to let anyone else do it or just to dodge the responsibility knowing that nobody will do it. But when Louis XII of France

-Chinese Colorings New for Silk Prints and Huge Plaids

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SPRING fashion picture sans sprightly patterned joyfully colored new silk prints would present about as dismal and impossible a scene as a spring or summer landscape minus flowers and birds, blue skies and sunshine. But why entertain such a thought, for at this very moment the scene is all set in fashionland with as tempting an array of silk prints as ere took a bow on fashion's stage in springtime.

Almost seems as if the new prints bring a greater thrill this season than ever. At any rate, they're lovely and there's a newness about them that excites lively interest.

There's the perfectly fascinating Chinese colorings, for instance, porcelain blues, lacquer reds, peach blown pinks, bright orange and a new beige tone called "Chinese tea." And the lovely lotus blossom and magnolia designs so delicately flushed with color that is offset with the deep waxen green of their leaves.

The pastels that color the daintiest prettiest prints that we've seen for years are repturous in their subtle tones and tints. You will be wanting a blouse of adorable pastel plaid to wear with your suit of pastel tweed.

Speaking of plaid silk, it is the center of attraction this season, not only for evening wear, but for the daytime dress. And don't be afraid of the big bold plaid for the bigger the plaid the smarter. Watch for silk plaids!

- A plaid silk that assures new sophistication in dramatic raspberry blue and green tones on a white background is used for the daytime dress shown to the right in the picture. Here is a type of dress that carries unmistakable style conviction wherever it goes. The bodice shirred above a wide molded midriff and the concentrated front fullness used for the skirt are done in the Paris manner. You will find it a pleasant innovation to mark your waistline with a self fabric sash tied in a bow as here you see instead of a belt.

The printed silk jacket dress is ever so important this spring. Choose either the new long-jacket types, emphasizing the much talkedof long torco molded figure lines or select if you will a youthful bolero model after the mode to the left in the picture. The use of pockets, here applied vertically and accented with self-fabric scroll detail. Note the amort collarless neckline and the front shirred skirt fullness, all very new and chic. The pattern and the color alliance are also very much of the moment. This is one of the new silks that marks an innovation namely the black and white print that has one other color added. In this incurre the echeme is worked out in a black and white horizontal scroll patterning on an olive green background.

For an ensemble for the first spring days in town fashion advocates the printed silk frock topped with a wool jacket that repeats an important color in the print. See the theory demonstrated in the stylish twosome shown in the center. Buttoned up bodice and accordion pleated skirt interpret new vogue to a nicety in the dress which features a neat mesh design in which white dots and squares are outlined in "Chinege tea," the important new beige mentioned above. Peaked lapels and pockets and its one-link fastening are chic accents in the matching wool jacket. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

A wide belt of natural calfskin shaped like a corselet and studded with nailheads trims a dinner dress of white jersey. The blouse top is ! simply cut, with short sleeves and a full skirt. It buttons down the front from neck to hem with leather buttons to match the belt.

Flower Hats Come Early This Season

Usually flower hats are worn later in the season, but this spring is an exception to the rule.

There is nothing smarter in the way of millinery than a pert, flattering flower turban, or a wee flower covered sailor.

The flower turbans are of a distinctly new type this season. They pose a huge flower or cluster over the brow, and it's a guess how these hats anchor into secure position, until you see at the back the clever snood and ribbon caplike bandeaux.

White hats are something unexpected as a spring "first." But here they are; topping the new navy suits and fitting charmingly into the scene this very moment.

Revive Pinafores For Little Girls

Is there any more refreshing sight than a smiling little youngst; r in a spic and span starched organdy or dimity pinafére? If so, we can't recall it. Old-fashioned, you say? No, indeed, just the opposite. It is one of the newest items to be included in a little daughter's wardrobe this season. Such was the important news flashed from the children's style show that brought visiting merchants from all over the country to view the latest in juvenile vogue as displayed in the Merchandise Mart, Chicago. So it's authentic cunning, fluffly ruffly, primly starched pinafores for little girls!

Printed Jersey Is Used With Plain

Good style is the redingote ensemble that tops a dress of printed jersey, which is a favorite this season, with a softly-styled redinsole of monotone lersey.

Tommy the Cork' Marries Secretary Who (Like All Girls) Once Feared Him

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

(Copyright, United Features Syndicate, Inc. Released by Western Newspaper Union.) X / ASHINGTON.—This is the story of a lovely symbol of the modern Girl Friday-Peggy Dowd, who a few days ago married her brain-truster boss. Tommy Corcoran, and thereby brought to many persons in and out of Washington a breathing spell for as long as she can keep him away on their honeymoon.

It's a romance as colorful as the eventful career of the curly-haired bridegroom.

In Washington, Peggy Dowd is always associated with the brain-trust. But long before there was a braintrust or the world had ever heard of Tommy Corcoran, Peggy Dowd was holding down an important job. She was the personal secretary of one of the big men of the Hoover administration, Gardner Cowles, owner of the Des Moines Register and Tribune and director of the

She Liked Midshipmen, Until-

It was a very pleasant job and Peggy thought her boss was a grand man. But her only interest in government was prom-hopping with dashing Annapolis midshipmen.

About this time there came to the one teaspoonful of borax dissolved | RFC a young lawyer as Irish as hercompletely in half a pint of warm | self. Peggy would see him now and then rushing along the corridors, but she never talked to him, for it was it is nearly dry iron on the wrong rumored in RFC feminine circles that he thoroughly disliked women, thought they had been put on earth only to get in the way of men's > Girls frankly were afraid to work for Tom Corcoran. He had come down to Washington from a big Wall Street law firm, and just could not get used to the deliberate civil service ways of government. He consldered dictating to a shorthand book a wasto of time, insisted that his secretary "take it down" on the typewriter as he talked—and he talked d blue streak.

Tommy Was a Tough One.

He also had a lot of crasy ideas about short-cuts through the telephone. He didn't care how big his phone bills were so long as they sayed time. And around him he had a crowd of young fellows out of Harvard law school who were just as wild as he was and who, like him. it can be removed with a metal telephoned all day and dictated all

> Secretaries came to his office and departed like the days. None ever stayed longer than a week. There was a ladies' room legend, which persisted though Corcoran denied it, that he had once jerked a phone right out of its socket and tossed it at a secretary who insisted on going home at three o'clock in the morning. His constant cry to the head stenographer was for a male secretary.

The morning after Director left for Iowa, the head stenographer, faced with her daily headache of finding a secretary for Corcoran (she called it the "suicide assignment"), summoned Peggy Dowd and coid-gently, "Report, please, to Mr. Corcoran."

den. In a short while Corcoran's buzzer rang and Reggy went in.

"Get this telegram off right away." he ordered, without looking up or giving her time to sit down. Then for two minutes he reeled off a long wire so fast that Peggy didn't even get the start of it. For a few moments she stood there helpless; then, with a jerk of her head, she started for the door to tell the head stenographer it was "no go."

The Day Is Saved.

As Peggy turned, there burst into the room one of the Harvard law school boys, J. Raburn ("Food") Monroe, now a successful New Orleans lawyer and a power in the new anti-Long group, who flashed a telegram before Corcoran.

"That changes everything," Corcoran shouted to Peggy. "Kill that wire I just gave you."

So Peggy just walked back to her desk, pretending she had the wire but was not going to send it. The Cowles, Peggy's boss, resigned and fortuitous interruption had saved her. And today Peggy has one extra name among her patron saints. The name is St. "Food."

The first crisis thus survived so fortunately, Peggy decided to test her luck further. At seven o'clock that night, Corcoran nonchalantly "Oh, no," said Peggy, "not me. instructed. "Go out and get some-"For my sake, please try it for a Capitol in the legislative counsel's few days," pleaded the head stenog- office at 7:50. We've got a little

It took most of the allotted half hour just to get to the Capitol, but Peggy was there on time. And there she met two other turbines of the brain-trust, Ben Cohen and Jim Landis, later to become SEC chairman So Peggy went up to the lion's and dean of Harvard law school.

Big 'Little Job.'

The "little job" was something about a "securities bill" which had to be ready for a congressional committee the next morning. It was 4 a. m. when she pulled the last sheet out of the typewriter and the three men, after a critical reading, pronounced it "okay."

"Yes," added Corcoran with a cheery smile, "that's a swell job, Miss. What did you say your name was?"

"Margaret Dowd."

"Well, Margaret Dowd, tomorrow morning you tell the head stenographer that I said you'll do."

Thus Peggy Dowd got her start as the Girl Friday of the brain-trust, and began seven years of thrilling work carried on at about the same hectic tempo as her first day. Side by side with Corcoran, Cohen, Landis, Douglas, Jackson, Foley, Rowe, Dempsey, Rogge and others of the "family," one went through the epochal legislative battles of the New Deal-the securities act, the federal housing bill, the fierce TVA clashes, the tremendous holding company fight, the wage-hour bill, the historic Cupreme court struggle, the Jackson-Ickes offensive against monopoly.

No More Parties for Peggy.

She was in the thick of them all, always in the background but always on hand, the confidential secretary of these confidential men-atarms of the President. It meant no parties, no planning for a week or even a day ahead. Every waking hour was devoted to the job. And Peggy thrived under it all.

It was padded out at the ends to make the back the same length as the front. Extra padding was also used on the top to make it smooth. A simple base with a back and wings was made of oneinch boards, to fit the seat. Next, came the cretonne slip-cover for the spring seat, with a box pleated ruffle around the front and along the sides up to the wings. For good or ill, it is Maj. Edwin F. Armstrong, Columbia professor, who brings in the change. More than 20 years ago, back in the days of the cat's whisker and orystal acts he has been crowding the future with new radio devices. Wars are apparently propitious for his inventive spirit. In the World war, we couldn't eatch German signals. He caught them, with a rig which brought along the super-heterodyne, and other fixings which led him into a 20year legal battle with Lee de Forest. He was a hayloft radio experimenter, and has been a professor of engineering at Columbia since 1934.

This writer drives by his great steel tower on the cliffs at Alpine, N. J., on which he staked $369,000 to bring through today's frequency modulation. We never understood it, but, hung with red lights at night to warn aviators, it had a Wellsian look of the "shape of things to come."

At Hollywood, Miss Carroll organized a knitting brigade for distressed French civilians and soldiers, and took with her to France eight suiteases of sweaters, socks and the like which she and girls of the University of California at Los Angeles had fashioned.

She became somewhat of a Francophile when she majored in French at the University of Birmingham, England, where her father was a professor. She taught French at a girls' seminary, but took her first pay check of £20 and went to London to try for the stage. There was a stretch of tutoring and some other trying expedients before she joined a road company, at $15 a week, to her father's chagrin, but later gratification. Later she became a pet of the British moving picture public. In 1934, her first Hollywood pleture was "I Was a Spy."

SYNOPSIS

Sheila Carscadden, blue-eyed, reddishhaired and 21, loses her job in New York by offering useful but unwelcome suggestions to her boss. Typically feminine, she chooses that time to show her "new" purse —which she bought at a second-hand store, to her cousin, Cecilia Moore. The purse revives memories of a boy she had met the previous summer—a boy whose first name, all she remembered, was Peter. At home that evening, waiting for her, are her mother: Joe, her brother, and Angela, her crippled sister. Joe, too, has lost his job. crippled sister. Joe, too, has lost his job.

CHAPTER II

"What!" Joe exclaimed. Their mother looked up, with her ready tut-tutting noise.

"It's a terrible winter; there's many worse off than ourselves," Mrs. Carscadden said, vaguely moralizing. "We're going to be bad enough off," Joe told his mother, darkly, going on with his meal.

"Sheila, they never fired you!" Angela's grieved, sweet little voice said sadly.

"Indeed they did, then. He said was too fresh."

Mrs. Carscadden was pouring tea in her turn. She looked at her daughter patiently. .

"You'd be saucy to the boss," she observed mildly. "Oh, well, this is only Wednesday.

and I'm there till Saturday," Sheila as abruptly as she had begun and, said lazily. "There's hard times coming to this city that you don't know the meaning of," Joe observed, without looking up.

"But you'll get another job, Joe," Angela said, anxiously,

"Oh, sure I will!" he answered, glancing up with an effort. "But it gripes me," he added resentfully, to have Shella here act as if it was all a joke.''

"Well, it is," Shella assured him, good-naturedly.

She was relaxed and lazy, her senses dulled by the food and warmth and leisure into a pleasant sort of torpor.

Joe looked at her, and her blueand-cream-and-copper beauty blazed back at him like a star. There was a faint stain of color in her cheeks now, her eyes smoldered with smoky sapphire shadows, the film of silky hair was sprayed once more across her forehead.

"Sure, I'll get a job, all right," Joe grumbled, mollified. He was rageously. secretly proud of Shella and even comforted, deep in his heart, by the spirit she chowed. But he was tired, angry jobiess, young and in love. different street overy duy at noon.

har'rd times I've known," the mother's voice said, dreamily,

"I'm going down to see her, now." "Going to tell her, Joe?"

"Ford," Joe said, brooding, "asked me would I take a steward's job on a fruit boat. A swell chance!" "Oh, heavens, what fun!" Shella gela, if I slop?"

exclaimed, her eyes dancing. "Forty a month," he muttered.

"But all your expenses, Joe!" "I turned it down. I'm going to get forty a week, or nothing," he caid stubbornly.

"Eight pound a month would be big money, at home," Mrs. Carscadden mused.

"Mrs. Carscadden, me dear'r," said a gentle voice at the door. A neighbor had unceremoniously opened it. "Mrs. Bur'rke-" she announced apologetically.

"Oh, God help the poor soul-and me ating me supper!" the other woman exclaimed, instantly rising. Immediately one was gone, and Joe had disappeared, too, leaping downstairs on his long legs, to see his

"You didn't!" "I did. At the rummage sale at St. Leo's. I went in there at noon.'

"Ten cents!" "It has initials on it—they're inside, That's why it was cheap. But what do I care about that? I'll bet it cost a lot, once." Angela opened the dap, looked at the three initials.

"G. C. K.," she read aloud, and then a number on East Eightyeighth Street.

"Shella, what do you suppose it feels like?" "To be rich?"

Well. To have everything." "Here's what I was thinking," Sheils said, and hesitated again. "I was thinking," she pursued, "thatthat there must be somethingsomething in some girls that makes them different from the others—that lifts them out-out of it."

"Out of what?" Angels asked intently.

er," Angela stated solemnly. "You can't tell me that all the rich women whose pictures are in the society sections on Sundays got there by prayer!" "Oh, no, Sheila, of course not. But what have they got, after all?

How much does the honor and glory of God-" "Oh, for heaven's sake!" Sheila 'interrupted. And suddenly covering her face with her hands, she was crying. Angela knew these tears. The God!" stormy, brilliant older sister gave way to them almost as readily as to laughter, if less often. But the always wrung Angela's beart, nevertheless. Presently Sheila stopped crying straightening up, dried her eyes firmly, sniffed, gulped, and smiled at her sister. "This girl," she said, touching the blue purse and speaking in a voice made rich and thick from tears, "this girl probably spends three months in the country every year. If she meets a man, all she has to do is ask him to come to dinner. Chicken, ice cream, clean tablecloth—she has 'em every day. If I meet a man I like, what break do I get? I don't even know his last name!"

"You mean Peter?" Angela asked, timidly.

"Peter-what?" Shella said, blowing her nose again, looking deflantly at her sister, with a reddened nose and wet eyes. "I met him my last night of vacation, at a barbecue. I had to leave next morning. There are seven million people in this city; there are five hundred thousand women working. A swell chance I have of ever finding him again!"

Angela's expression was one of infinite distress. But she spoke cou-

"God could do it."

"Well, then, why doesn't He?" the other girl demanded. "I walk up a I look at every boy I see in the subway. I've never seen him." "Maybe you do too much," Angela

"Maybe suggested unexpectedly. "And then he'd open the door of the kitchen and put his head in?" "It mightn't—happen that way." "How would it happen?"

"In some way we couldn't see coming, Shella." Angela was very serious. Shella stared at her: spoke impulsively.

"Well, will you pray about it, An-"I am praying about it!" Angela said, her cheeks red. "What, now?" "Right now. And I'm remember-

"There was a blue coat for twelve." Sheila said. She yawned again, made a movement toward rising. "Shella!" Angela said. "Look!"

In her fingers were green bills; she spread them on the table. Two twenties and a ten.

Ponderously, Mrs. Carscadden returned from the stove with the new boiling kettle, poured the hot water upon the cool tea leaves in the empty pot.

was still. Joe came in; they consulted Joe. And Joe said of course the fifty had to go back. Shella sat on the arm of his chair, and wept, but she knew there was no gainsaying Joe's de-cision. They were all "said" by Joe; even Neely and Marg'ret, married and gone, still came back sometimes to ask advice of wise, gentle, clever Joe.

Because, look here, Sheila," Jos reasoned, "suppose it had been diamond ring?" "Well, it isn't, Joe."

"No, I know it isn't. But suppose it had been a diamond ring in that same little pocket, what then?"

"I'd think lucky her that had a diamond to lose!" Shella persisted stubbornly. But she was beaten, and she knew it. "It makes me cry, thinking of my blue coat!" she said.

"Let me buy your coat for you." "You, Joe!" She kissed the rough hard young face. "You that have lost your job, and want to marry Cecilia!" she mourned, rubbing her cheek against his.

"Celie's been crying, too," ha said, in his good-humored patient way. "It's your turn, Ma."

"There was weeks I fed the lot of ye on syrup and loatmale," Mrs. Carscadden observed, unalarmed "I guess the bad times won't come to that."

"Listen, Ma, supposing I go to this Eighty-eighth Street place, say, Saturday afternoon. It'll be my last morning at the office, and I'll be free after one. And supposing that some butler or somebody won't let me in to see this "G. C. K.," whoever she is, and suppose they're nasty to me. Then am I to hand it over to somebody who'll pecket it themselves?"

"It'd be no sin on your soul if they did." Mrs. Carscadden answered readily.

"I'll tell you what!" Shella suddenly exclaimed. "I'll get myself up-well, you wait!" Her eyes were dancing.

"I'll fix 'em I'll bet I get my blue coat!" she said. "Sheila, how?" Angela demanded, eagerly. But Sheila would only lough, and made no answer. That evening, immediately after dinner, when Joe and Angela and Mrs. Carscadden were lingering over the remains of the meal. Shella auddenly appeared in the bedroom floor. Or rather, someone appeared who must be Shella, but who was not instantly identified even by her mother, brother and sister.

She had strained her hair back from her always rather pale face, which was devoid of powder or lip red, and looked young and pathetic. She were an old black dress of Angela's that was scanty and tight on her more generous figure. "Me mamma and papa is dead.

and I wor'rks for a lady that bates me," she said, in the soft, pathetic accents of County Mayo. "I found the little purce, and sure I t'ought at fir'rst I cud pay me doctor's bills wit' it. But thin I rimimbered that there'd be no blessin' whatsolver on that—"

The appreciative laughter of Joe and Angela interrupted the pitiful story. Even Mrs. Carscadden laughed. But immediately her face sobered into a sort of scandalized pride in this prodigy who was her child, her rebellious daughter.

CHAPTER III

"You're not goin' there like that?" "I am, too!" "They'll give you another fifty, you big liar," Joe grinned. "No, but honestly, do you see how they can help handing it all back to me?" Sheila asked complacently. "Oh, Mrs. Carscadden, dear'r," she parodied, sitting down at the table, and fixing her mother with tragic young eyes, "it's a har'rd winter on the poor'r-it is, indade. Me man has been home it's t'ree weeks now, | wit' his fut swelled up the size of gourd, and me bad luck is that another little one is comin'--" "I'll take you over my knee, and learn you a little more, since you know all that," Mrs. Carscadden said with outraged dignity. But her mouth twitched. And as her only further comment after a general inspection of Shella's costume was a reluctantly admiring "You're a holy terror, and I wouldn't wonder did the police take you up!" Shella was free to escape, with one more burst of laughter, into the winter streets, to follow up the invitation to adventure. She descended through the house quietly enough—the few returning workers who were coming in, tired and grimy, at half past six, were not interested in the girl who slipped by them so unobtrusively—and once in the street she aroused no interest

She took a downtown train, and came to the surface again only a few blocks east of her destination. This year the citizens of the United States will have the pria governor and a full state ticket. In Lincoln county—we will elect a full county ticket--and let us hope-a full Democratic county ticket.

On the 14th day of next September the Primary Election will be held. If those who are defeated in the primary will join forces with the ones who are elected, united; we must consider the winners and stay with them.
