Finnish Relief Campaign

I have been asked by the state Chairman, to accept the Chairmanship of the county, for the Finnish Relief Campaign to be completed during the week of January 13. Contributions may be directed to The Lincoln County Agency Bank or to me, which contributions will be acknowledged at the close of the campaign. Please make checks to "The Finnish Relief Committee."

Mr. Lutz had been in ill health for several months, and his death was not unexpected. He was born in Ragenaburg, Germany, but came to this country when seventeen, and lived first at Trinidad, Colo. He came to Albuquerque in 1889, then in 1886 he moved to Lincoln, in this county and lived there until 1915 when he came to Carrizozo and purchased the old Carrizozo Trading Company and in 1916 put up the big building which is now occupied by the Carrizozo Hardware Co.

He has been prominent as a merchant and ranchman, and took an active part in politics until two or three years ago. He was county treasurer and assessor for two terms, was elected County Commissioner on the Republican ticket and was also a member of the State Legislature for some time.

Mr. Lutz was a brilliant and versatile gentleman; an indefatigable worker, and one of Lincoln County's most progressive and public spirited citizens. MAKE MORE JAMS, JELLIES AND MARMALADES
(See Recipes Below)

Household News

By Eleanor Howe

Bread 'nd Jam

Hot bread with jam or jelly is a special treat at any time. But what are you going to do when last summer's supply of jellies and marmalades runs low and youngsters clamor for "bread 'nd jam" for a mid-afternoon lunch? Make more jams and jellies, of course, from materials at hand right now!

Citrus fruits, dried fruits, and canned fruits, too, combine to make a delicious variety of mid-winter marmalades. Even the lowly carrot appears and contributes flavor and color to an unusual conserve. And don't forget, while the season is at its height, to make Cranberry Conserve, flavorful and gorgeously colored and good!

Of course you'll want feather-light, buttery rolls, and buns with which to serve your new supply of tasty jams and jellies. You'll find a store of tested recipes for hot breads in my booklet, "Better Baking"—recipes for flaky biscuits that melt in your mouth, for golden-brown, crusty muffins, and a wide variety of sweet rolls—the things you like to serve for Sunday morning breakfast and for afternoon tea.

A few such recipes appear below, with directions for making mid-winter marmalades, too.

English Muffins.

(Makes 12 muffins)

- 1/2 cup scalded milk
- 1 cup water
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon sugar
- 1 yeast cake dissolved in 1 tablespoon lukewarm water
- 4 cups general purpose flour
- 3 tablespoons shortening

Heat milk to lukewarm. Add water, salt, sugar, dissolved yeast, and 2 cups flour. Beat well. Let rise until doubled in bulk (about 1 hour.) Add shortening (softened) and remaining flour. Beat and knead well. Let rise again until doubled in bulk (about 30 minutes). Roll about 1/4-inch thick and cut with a round cutter. Let rise 1 hour or until very light. Place muffins on heated griddle, (4 at one time) and fry for approximately 15 to 20 minutes, turning frequently.

Raisin Buns.

(Makes 4 dozen)

- 2 cakes compressed yeast
- 1/4 cup lukewarm water
- 1 cup milk
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs (beaten)
- 6 cups sifted flour (about)
- 1 cup seedless raisins

Soften yeast in lukewarm water. Scald milk. Add butter, sugar and salt. Cool to lukewarm. Add flour to make a thick batter. Add yeast and eggs. Beat well. Add raisins. Add enough more flour to make a soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead until satiny. Place in greased bowl, cover and let rise until double in bulk (about 2 hours). When light, punch down and shape into rolls. Let rise until double in bulk (1 1/2 to 2 hours). Bake in moderate oven (375 degrees) about 20 minutes. Frost with confectioners' sugar icing.

Mid-Winter Conserve.

Wash 7 pound of dried apricots in hot water. Drain and run through food chopper. Cover with juice of 2 oranges and 2 lemons. Let stand over night; next day add 1 cup shredded canned pineapple. To each cup of fruit add 1/2 cup sugar. Simmer slowly 1 hour or until mixture thickens. Stir frequently. Seal in hot jars.

Marmalade Rolls.

When preparing yeast dough for light rolls, take a portion of the dough and roll it to 1/4-inch thickness, then spread lightly with melted butter and orange marmalade. Roll and cut in half-inch slices. Place slices in well-greased tea-size muffin tins. Allow to rise and bake for 15 minutes in 400-degree oven.

Cranberry Conserve.

- 1 pound cranberries
- 1 cup cold water
- 2 cups sugar
- 1/2 cup raisins, seedless
- 1 orange, seeded and put through food chopper with skin
- 1/2 cup broken walnut meats

Pick over cranberries carefully and wash. Place in saucepan and cook until cranberries start to pop. Add raisins and orange, and simmer slowly for five minutes. Add sugar and cook to jelly stage. Remove from fire, add broken nut meats, and pack immediately in hot sterilized jelly glasses. Seal.

Petticoat Tails.

Cream 1 cup butter, add 1/2 cup sugar slowly and beat well. Sift together 3 1/2 cups general purpose flour and 1 teaspoon salt and knead into butter mixture. When smooth dough is formed, divide dough in half and pat each portion into a round layer cake pan (greased). Flute edges with dull edge of knife and prick top of dough with fork. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) about 25 minutes. Break in pieces to serve.

Scotch Marmalade.
6 cups carrots (sliced)
3 lemons
2 oranges
2 cups sugar

Put carrots, whole lemons, and whole oranges through the food chopper. Add sugar and cook slowly for about 1 hour. Stir frequently. The mixture should be thick and clear. Pour into sterilized containers and seal. To vary the flavor, add a little cinnamon, cloves or ginger tied in a spice bag.

Frozen foods are new and are available in wide variety at any season of the year. Next week Eleanor Howe will tell you something about this newest contribution to "Good Eating"—quick-frozen foods. She'll give you directions for using these quick-frozen fruits and vegetables, fish and poultry, with some of her own favorite recipes as well.

Have You Sent For Your Copy of "Better Baking"?

Biscuits and buns that literally melt in your mouth, cookies and cakes that are unusual and good, and pies and puddings to tempt even the fussiest eater! You'll find recipes for all these in Eleanor Howe's practical booklet, "Better Baking." Send 10 cents in coin to "Better Baking," care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and get your copy now!

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Meringue is improved by a dash of salt and a little grated lemon peel. Use an electric beater instead of a spoon when beating fudge. It makes it creamier. Put the fork into the fat of steak when turning it. If put into meat the juices will escape.

Sprinkle grated cheese over the top of scalloped tomatoes. It adds flavor and food value. Creamed soup should not be served at a meal when creamed vegetables or fish are served.

A clove of garlic rubbed around the salad bowl will season the salad, but will not give it too strong a flavor. To determine when a custard is done put a silver knife into the center. If knife comes out clean custard is baked.

A space should be left between walls of a mechanical refrigerator and shelves containing foods to allow free circulation of air. This preserves the food.

Allied Women Handle Major Defense Jobs

'Home Front' Guarded by Women in France and Britain.

By RUTH ADDISON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union)

PARIS.—Mrs. America, here's something to mull over.

If you lived in this quaint old city today your silken tresses would probably be shorn-to-a-boyish-bob. Trousers and slacks would replace your skirts and you'd wear "shelter booties" instead of boudoir slippers—they're lined with rabbit skin and are much warmer in air raid shelters.

You'd select your wardrobe not for style but for convenience. For mademoiselle has got to be able to dress quickly these days.

It's the same way across the English channel in jolly Britain, where the ladies have placed their teacups on the shelf "for the duration," selected chipper uniforms and established themselves as the first line of home defense. The hand that rocks the cradle can also do a lot of other things while the menfolk are fighting at the front.

—And She Actually Pays for This!

Girls of the mechanized transport training corps in England pay half-a-guinea (about $2.50) membership dues and buy their own uniforms. They drive ambulances and work in 24-hour shifts, during which they study first aid, blackout driving and repairing their own vehicles. This girl has just changed a tire.

Never in European history has a war placed so much responsibility on women. Observers of this phenomenon attribute it first to the new feminine independence, and second, to the horrors of mechanized warfare which leave the "home front" just as vulnerable to attack as the front line trenches.

The English women have organized thoroughly under government supervision but the French ladies—possibly because of their highly prized individuality—have shunned government supervision and are doing their own recruiting and training.

Most active of the French groups is that founded by women awarded the Legion of Honor for public service. This body, headed by Mlle. Louise Weiss, has instructed more than half a million Parisiennes in anti-gas protection, plus enrolling and training thousands of women as motorists, motorcycleists, ambulance and truck drivers, evacuation workers, nurses, blood donors, air-raid shelter supervisors, instructors in anti-gas defense, radio operators, interpreters—and even parachute jumpers!

Ladies Search for Gas.

Some unique units have been formed by the French ladies. There's the National Committee on Co-ordination for Passive Defense, which enlists women for work in safeguarding the civilian population. Another is the Corps of Chauffeurs and Chemists for the Detection of Gas. Women motorists and scientists join this unit, which is prepared to work in the midst of a bombardment. Their high-powered cars are equipped with special laboratories. After an air raid they analyze the nature of the gas, using a system of bells and gongs to notify the populace when it's safe to uncover.

You'll find some unusual organizations like the Women's Auxiliary Air Corps, which has pilots and parachute jumpers at the disposition of the French air ministry. Some of them have a parachute food service to provide against shortages caused by blocked land transportation. Women doctors and nurses have been organized, as have doctors, pharmacists—and even midwives.

Social Casts in Red Cross.

Yes, there's a French Red Cross, and it will probably have 50,000 certified and volunteer nurses organized by the end of the war. Unlike the American Red Cross, the French organization has three distinct sections separated by social caste. One is the group for nobility, another for the "grande bourgeoisie," and the third for women of less enviable social sphere.

Britain's "Bellish Belles," named after Minister of War Hore-Belisha, are a much more happy-go-lucky group of ladies. Mayfair society matrons and Lambeth charwomen have joined Regent street stylists and Selfridge salesgirls in "carrying on" along the home front and providing auxiliary services behind the Maginot line.

Many are serving in France as nurses, chauffeurs, cooks and orderlies. In England proper others are firefighters, truck drivers, police-women, canteen organizers and farm hands. So multiple and complex are their duties that a civilian has trouble recognizing the hundred and one uniforms that identify an air raid warden from a bus conductor, or a member of the Women's Land army from one of the Civil Air Guards.

Enlist Nursing Corps.

Thousands of women are assigned to hospitals, first aid posts and army camps as graduate nurses and nursing aides. The Civil Nursing Service has enlisted 100,000 "women in white" for training.

A spectacular unit is the ambulance corps with the Fort of London emergency river service. These women are equipped to receive wireless distress calls, man patrol boats and assist war casualties through a staff of radio operators, sailors, sea captains and nurses.

Evacuation of children from British cities placed another burden on the women. More than 200,000 of them hustled about making sacks to carry the youngsters' belongings, marshalling them in organized groups and arranging for their new quarters in country homes. Once there, the children had to be supervised, clothed, fed and taught. British ladies are fast becoming airplane pilots to handle emergency work over the British Isles. The government has also accepted them as conductors on buses and trains, while others are serving as asbestos-cled firewomen.

Pictured as she overhauled the innards of her tractor is a 63-year-old British grandmother, member of Britain's Women's Land army. Having completed four weeks of training in an agricultural camp, she is a qualified tractor operator.

BIG MUDDY Engineers, Playing With Model, Forecast Mississippi's Actions

By WADE W. SCOTT

VICKSBURG, MISS. — They have the mighty Mississippi river under control in a model that sprawls between two hills at the United States waterways experiment station just outside the city limits of Vicksburg and only a stone's throw from the mighty river itself.

Engineers, assistants and laborers, 200 strong, conduct their own ravaging floods, record the antics of the Mississippi and its tributaries as casually as any other group of men at work on an easier job. Comparisons are frequently made and surveys' field books closely studied all during the operations. There is no guesswork about what the river is doing at one point when it is flowing over the levee at another.

Inches Represent Miles.

Water may be turned in at one point and after a few minutes the experimenters can tell what would happen at a point hundreds of miles further down the stream by merely glancing at a gauge or by walking a few steps they can actually see what is going on. There is no mistake about the water backing up into certain tributaries nor how much of the water is taken from the Mississippi through the Atchafalaya river to the Gulf of Mexico.

It takes only a few minutes to see the happenings of a 24-hour day, inches represent miles as the harmless little rivulet tells in a few seconds what the Mississippi would take hours to do.

Size Doesn't Matter Just So It's a Fish

LONDON.—A fish is a fish these days, the British ministry of agriculture has decided. There used to be a law establishing minimum sizes of fish which could be landed, but the ministry recently announced that Englishmen no longer have to throw back the little ones. From now on, owing to the war, the country's food supply comes first. War operations in the North sea have been interfering with the operations of herring trawlers, and to make up this deficiency it was decided that from now on all fish that comes into the net.

Map shows Vicksburg, site of the waterways experiment station, and the lower Mississippi river area whose fluctuations it anticipates.

In another section, as the floods are holding the interest of one group another crew may be using powdered coal in a separate part of the model to determine how much silt and mud would be deposited at a certain point if the river reached a certain height. The shifting of the sands can be noted as the water whips from one side of the modeled river to the other.

Gauge Flood Effects.

By chipping off a concrete levee about two inches high, the water is turned loose to seek its level and the time it takes to cover a certain area is known as well as what tributary the water would eventually reach, which town would be endangered.

There may be some controversy about the effect of trees retarding the current, but the argument has been settled by screen wire bent and stood on edge at the comparative distance with trees on the real river's banks or the hundreds of islands along the stream. When changes are made in the river by cuttings similar changes are made on the model.

The model is built on a distorted scale in some respects but by using the slide rule the engineers are never stumped. They take their readings as simply as a carpenter would read his rule. In fact, higher mathematics is far simpler for the operators of the model than the river itself and a little thing like a distorted scale and a few movements of their ivory rule gives them the answer quickly.

Lovely Basic Dress Will Slenderize One

It's safe to predict that you've never worn a more truly becoming dress than this lovely, basic fashion (1878-B). It is beautifully designed to make your figure look slender and softly rounded. The front panels of the bodice are cut on one with the skirt, accenting height. Gathers at the side of the bodice take care of becoming bust fullness. The only trimming is a row of buttons down the front. The neckline is a perfect background for your pet jewelry. Those cash ends in the back may be tied in a flat bow, or to simulate a bustle. Velvet, wool broadcloth and flat crepe are materials in which this design makes up particularly well. You'll wear it with pride on important afternoon occasions. A step-by-step sew chart accompanies your pattern.

Burgess Bell Pattern No. 1878-B is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 33-inch material for three-quarter sleeves; 4 3/4 yards for long sleeves; 4 1/2 yards for short.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1324, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of pattern, 15 cents (in coin).

DOLLAR-MAKERS
Small Services
Keep Clients Well Satisfied

By GEORGE T. EAGER
ADVERTISING may bring new customers to a business but it is held by the small and little-known services rendered by employees who come in direct contact with customers.

An old lady recently stood at the curb of a New York street. She was afraid to cross and was bewildered by the heavy traffic. A big cement truck came by.

When the president of the railroad had come important negotiations with this same government official two years later, he found that this one little incident had made him a loyal friend of the road.

THERE'S GOLD IN WINDOWS

THE display manager for a chain of drug stores who has devoted his business life to making windows pay a profit, has discovered some interesting facts about displays.

The value of a window is determined by the number and character of people who pass. About 10 per cent of the population of a town or city will pass a window of reasonably good location in a day.

Properly used window space is worth 20 per cent to 50 per cent of a store's rent.

In warm weather about five people will use the shady side of the street for every four who use the sunny side.

It takes the average person seven seconds to pass a window and those who stop to look at a display will rarely remain longer than 30 seconds.

Window displays are important because 87 per cent of all purchasers are based on sight. Shopping is mostly seeing and seeing is believing.

When a store has windows on both sides of the store entrance, the right hand window always receives more attention than the left.

It pays to display goods advertised in local newspapers. There are more than 500 brands of toothpastes but a dozen well advertised brands represent 80 per cent of the total toothpaste business.

Convict Becomes Expert In 'Grafting' Technique

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—Jack Essary, inmate of the state prison here, is making a name for himself in horticulture, and grafting especially.

His new technique of producing plants from cuttings has attracted wide attention. Unable to obtain the chemical "Harmondin A," used to treat the severed ends of cuttings, he discovered the same results are obtained by searing with a hot iron.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

When you're frosting cakes be sure to have them free from any loose crumbs. In smoothing the icing, use a spatula which is frequently dipped in warm water.

Touch of Garlic.—Rub the broiler lightly with a clove of garlic before broiling a steak.

An excellent cleaning "weapon" for kitchen utensils is found in a good-sized bottle cork. Moisten the bottom end, dip it in a powdered cleaner and rub the utensils.

To clean rubber sponges, put half an ounce of bicarbonate of soda in half a pint of water and soak them all night in this solution.

When using soap dyes that come in cake form, put cake into soap shaker and shake until dye is right color. It will not then be necessary to strain dye.

Salted meat requires longer boiling than fresh. Put it into cold water, quickly bring it to a boil, then let it simmer.

To clean a griddle that has become crusted, put over a very hot fire and cover thickly with salt. After the salt has burned brown, the crust and salt will brush off together, leaving the griddle like new.

For Dessert.—When you have a saucer of apple sauce and don't know what to have for dessert, make a one-egg layer cake, dust the lower layer with powdered sugar and spread with the apple sauce (and this is improved if a bit of candied orange, lemon or grapefruit peel has been cooked with it).

Do not waste cake or bread by cutting off a burned crust. This can be removed by a flat grater, and it will leave a smooth surface, instead of a jagged crust.

Prunes for Puddings.—Prunes lend themselves to almost any form of bread pudding. For this purpose it is well to cook them until the stones can be taken out easily, and then chop them.

Nautical Notes

The first decked vessel built in Colonial America of which we account, was constructed by Schipper Adrian Block, on the banks of the Hudson, and probably within the present limits of New York, during the summer of 1614. The vessel was called a Yacht and described as having been of the dimensions of 38 foot keel, 44 feet on deck, and 11 foot beam. In this "Yacht" Block passed through "Hell Gate", into the sound and steering eastward, he discovered a small island, which he named after himself; going as far as Cape Cod, by the Vineyard passage. According to the same authority, the Dutch at New Amsterdam soon afterwards built many more small vessels, sloops and open d trade with the savages. Figures that prove startling to the civilian are the characteristics of the Saratoga type of vessel. Saratoga is 888 feet long, 106 feet wide, and 33,000 tons displacement. The rudder weigh 255, 164 pounds. The horse-power is greater than 180,000. This is sufficient to supply the City of Los Angeles with light and power. This feat was done in Tacoma,

Washington for one month when the water supply at the dam which furnishes the power needed to operate the city's hydro-electric plants was extremely low. When the aviation department is aboard, the personnel of each ship consist of more than 1,200 officers and men.

The Bureau of Fisheries has determined that a ship at sea from six to eight months accumulates a growth of barnacles and grass on its bottom from two to three inches and weighing from 50 to 100 tons. This growth accumulates faster in the tropics than in the colder waters and more rapidly when a ship is at anchor than when she is steaming. The growth does not accumulate in fresh water.

Car Operation to Cost Less

"The car owner will find," "that he is saving money on the car, the battery, tires and other equipment as they give longer wear per dollar each year. Great strides in the development of new materials and uses will contribute in the coming year to longer life of the automobile's mechanical equipment. An automobile can be used for greater mileage at a higher rate of speed and under more extreme climatical conditions than the car of a few years past. In old days cars were more or less tied up in the winter and only traveled a few hundred miles per month and such past use is more expensive than it will be in the future.

Suprise for Pastor

On December 22nd, when we returned home from the Christmas tree, a car was parked in front of the parsonage, and when the lights were turned on, and these friends invited in, they brought in their arms, a "pounding" for the Pastor, and family. We certainly appreciate their thoughtfulness. We also thank all who sent cards with Xmas cheer, and good wishes, and blessings for the New Year. Our church gave us a week's vacation which we enjoyed beyond measure. We are back in the field and trust this year will be filled with work for our Lord and Master. A Happy Year to all. - H.L. Wheeler.

Monkeys Once Roamed Holland

Farthest north for the monkey tribe is believed to have been claimed for a species that once, far earlier than history records, inhabited what is now Holland. Fossil remains recently discovered in that country show these monkeys to have been similar to those now found around Gibraltar, although somewhat larger, says Popular Science Monthly. Scientists believe that the fossils found in Holland indicate that a mild climate once existed there, as monkeys cannot endure cold.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

KEEP YOUR SALT CELLARS CLEAN

THE other day I read of an eccentric old woman, rich and especially prominent, who went from house to house judging the occupants by the condition of the salt cellars on their tables.

If these were clean and well kept she put her stamp of approval on the household, but if they were not, regardless of the graciousness and charm of her hostess, she put them down as dowdy folk.

Not all of us, fortunately, are quite so critical, but in one sense we are. And it is good that we are. We are critical of the merchandise we buy and of the merchants from whom we buy it. It is our criticism which keeps the standards of goods and stores high.

One of the many advantages of advertising is that it invites us to be critical of the goods being advertised.

The advertiser assures us that his goods are good. He invites us to compare them with others. We do. If he relaxes for a minute and lets his standards drop, we discern it. We tell others. We cease buying his product.

He knows that even the finest of commercial reputations will suffer if a mere handful of people get wind of the fact that the goods are sub-standard. They will tell their friends. Soon a whispering campaign is under way. No matter.

It is only by being careful at every minute of the day that his goods and service are up to high standard that the man who advertises can succeed.

You expect more of him than you do of the man who does not advertise. The non-advertising manufacturer or merchant can fall down in delivering quality and service. You may expect him to. But the man who advertises has to live up to his high obligation.

So you see that advertising is a great vigilance committee, established and maintained in your interest, to see that the men who aspire to sell you will always be worthy of your trade.

The merchant who advertises must treat you better than the merchant who does not. He must treat you as though you were the most influential person in town.

As a matter of fact you are. You hold the destiny of his business in your hands. He knows it. He shows it. And you benefit by good service, by courteous treatment, by good value--and by lower prices.

Be critical of advertised goods and stores which advertise. They want you to be critical. Advertising invites you to compare before you buy. It stands or falls on value alone.

Careers in Engineering

By R. T. Strohm

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

MANY a fond parent who sees little Junior busy over his mechanical toys tells his friend: "My son shows great promise as an engineer."

Which may or may not be true. Probably not. Many a boy with aptitude for using tools will be happier as a machinist, carpenter or plumber. For engineering requires an ability to reason, to figure and to imagine.

Every bridge, locom or airplane must first be conceived and described by drawings before a stone is laid, a shuttle built, or an engine cylinder cast.

Since the plan precedes the construction, the work of the engineer as a designer requires an understanding of mathematics, a knowledge of such sciences as physics, chemistry, metallurgy before a line is drawn or a rivet hammered into place.

Only after youth has an adequate understanding of the sciences and an insight into what other engineers have done in any branch of engineering is he adequately prepared to devote his energy, study and thought to his chosen field.

One obvious test of engineering ability is to begin the study of engineering fundamentals. The young man who finds this study fascinating, no matter how hard the going, can be fairly certain he has with perseverance the inherent talent to assure success in engineering as a profession.

Last Word in Convenience

The desire to make a car reflect its owner's individuality is a potent factor in the average motorist's choice of accessory equipment. And it would be hard to find a more thoroughly "personalized" car than this new Chevrolet in which Mary Pickford is shown applying a touch of makeup. As if the handy illuminated vanity mirror were not enough, the car has a special kit of Miss Pickford's own famous beauty aids, now on the market under her name. The container, holding lipstick, rouge, powder and cream, folds neatly up into the glove compartment when not in use. Inset shows close-up of vanity case.

THE GIFT WIFE...

By RUPERT HUGHES

SYNOPSIS

On board the Nord-Express, with Ostend as his immediate destination, Dr. David Jebb is bound for America. With him is five-year-old Cynthia Thatcher, his temporary ward. On the train they meet Bill Gaines, former classmate of David's. David tells Gaines of his outstanding weakness—an overwhelming desire to drink. He feels the urge coming to him again, and wants to safeguard the child, who is returning to America with him. During a stop, Gaines leaves the train to buy Cynthia a present. The train leaves without him. Then Jebb is painfully injured in a minor accident. A fellow passenger revives him with a drink, which makes his desire for liquor all the stronger. At the next stop David and Cynthia leave the train. David begins drinking. The next thing he is conscious of is a strange sort of chanting. He looks around, dazed and sick. A door opens and a woman, a strange Negro, closely followed by a woman, heavily veiled and dressed in flowing robes. She tells him that he is in Uskub, that her name is Miruma, and that she is the "gift wife" of the Pasha, who has another wife, and who is husband in name only to Miruma. She knows nothing of the missing child.

"Now if I could have some light wood—a cigar box, or something to make a splint."

"Would thee sotra do?" Miruma said, pointing to an inlaid tabouret.

"Yes, but it's too handsome," said Jebb.

Her answer was to pick up the low table and smash it on the floor, bringing two of the slender legs to Jebb.

"And now if I could have some muslin—or a long strip of cloth."

"Swish! She had ripped off yards of her robe.

"And now," he said, "would Hanim effendi please hold these boards, sol—here and here—while I bind it all together."

Two hands came out of the cloud, and rested right under her eyes.

In binding the splints together, it was necessary for Jebb to touch those hands. They seemed to sting him like white fire.

"Tell him to wear the sling for a week and the splints for two weeks," he said as he finished, regarding a professional acerbity of tone. "Ask him if he found out anything about the child."

The question was repeated, Miruma spoke with wonderful gentleness:

"No, poor Jebb Effendi, he found not the child. He is search the all of Uskub. Nobody is see a little girl of the Franks."

"The Franks?—no, no, she is an American child."

"All you Ingiliz and Europeans are Franks to us."

Briefly he poured out to her his story, only he did not tell the cause of the great misfortune in his life. He simply said that he became ill. He had not the bravery to confess the truth.

It was the crowning ignominy of his plight that he must stoop to beggary or to starvation. He postponed the admission of his penury to the last moment and then postponed it again.

And the answer to his nauseating apology was that she had known it all the time. Jaffar, finding him unconscious in the street, had, at her orders, undressed him, bathed him, put him to bed, and taken his clothes, drenched as they were with rain, to dry them in the kitchen and to iron them while the other servants slept.

Jaffar had reported that there was not a thing in all the stranger's garments—only the usual pocket dust, not a portemonnaie, not a card, not a coin, not even a bronze baish-para. As delicately as might he she strove to put Jebb at his ease.

"It shall be pleasure to me to geeve to Jebb Effendi what I have of money." Seeing his look of horror, she hastened to amend: "And he shall pay it again when Allah sends him reaches once more."

But Jebb put up his hand to check her. He could not endure this.

"I have hoort the feeling of Jebb Effendi by to offer him of mine," she said. "Now Allah has wheespered to me how Jebb Effendi shall earn mooch money queeck and mooch power and fame."

"Tell me in—Allah's name."

"Jebb Effendi is Ingiliz, effendi."

"No, no, I'm not Ingiliz, I am American."

"Eet ees alla the same to an Osmanli. Jebb Effendi is great psee-see-see, great soorgeon. In our country we theenk the Frank doctors work meracles. Of old time one boyk had Allah sent seekness and—and—" She paused in dread of the great word which the Moslems avoid—"may he keep far from you—the Cup-beeper of the Sphers. At the promeade to-day, Jantine Hanim is expected. But she corned not. She says her son, her worship son, Gani Bey, is in pain most frightful. The Bey theenk somebody is give hem of poison, but he is too young to have enemies and he does not die in his pain. If Jebb Effendi can cure that son, the father pays mooch. The father is a very rich bey. There are no good doctors here. Jebb Effendi could leave in Uskub and become most terreeble for reechness."

The thought of living in Uskub was not so appalling to Jebb as it would have seemed a few hours before. The thought of money was always agreeable.

"I will see this man at once," he said. "It is bad etiquette, but I am desperate. I will tell him that I will cure his son. I can if anybody can."

Miruma's palms were up in protest. It would never do to go direct to the Bey. Jebb would be treated as a fraud; he would not be permitted to see the son. Things were not done in Turkey in straight lines. The Osmanlis, like nature, love a curve.

"Wh—what am I to do, then?" said Jebb.

"There is in Uskub a large khan—a hotel—the Hotel Turati. Jebb Effendi shall go there and command the best room and wait."

"I can command the room, but do I get it? I have no money—not even baggage."

"Of that also I have theenkend," said the amazing woman. "You shall say your baggage is sended to Stamboul. You stop but for one, two days."

"That accounts for the baggage. But shall I say that my money was sent on to Stamboul, too?"

"The money—that you moost take from me."

But Jebb put out his hand. "Thank you! and God bless you, hanim ef-

"Don't go yet. Remember this is Turkey."

fendi, for your good heart, but I couldn't."

"You moost," she persisted.

"I don't need it, hanim effendi. I have this ring. I will pawn it."

"Jaffar shall take the reeng," she said, "and breeng you mooch more money as you could touch. He shall say eet ees my reeng. It looks a woman's reeng." Then a gasp. "It ees perhaps a reeng some lady gived the effendi?"

"No, no. I bought it myself—in Cologne." And he added with perfect truth: "It has no associations for me whatever." With which he twisted it from his finger and held it out to her.

Suddenly a truth stabbed Jebb to the heart; he saw that this woman for whom he had begun to feel a tenderness had begun to feel a jealousy of him. The implied proprietorship did not irritate him. It delighted him; and the delight was the keener for being edged with fear.

"Tomorrow morning while yet the effendi is sleep (Inshallah) Jaffar shall have good and comed back with the money."

"But how can I slip out in the daylight without being seen?"

"Also that I have theenkend. I tell you tomorrow day, for now eet is ver' late. Allah send you the sweetest of sleep."

"Don't go!" he pleaded. But she was gathering herself together to stand up. He leaped to his feet to help her. To rise from a cross-legged position is something of a feat. It is one of the few that harem laziness permits. Miruma rose straight in air like a lark leaping upward from a meadow.

But as she stepped forward, her foot caught on the hem of her robe. She lost her poise, swayed, would have fallen. But Jebb had risen from the divan; he put out his arm; her weight was upon him so suddenly that he had no little difficulty with his own equilibrium. The recovery of both was a matter of brief and busy delay.

Miruma gave a little cry of alarm at her plight, another of dismay at finding herself in a man's arms. And then she fled, soft-footed, spiritual, like a dark cloud trailing along a mountainside.

He put out the lights and groped his way to the window where the moonbeams leat in and showered the floor.

CHAPTER IV

At the Hotel Turati Jebb was accepted on his own recognition. He found that his English was of no use, but his German, rusty as it was, elicited the good news that there were British, Austrian, and Russian consulates in the town.

He made haste to the British building, but the Albanian kavass on guard informed him in a few broken English phrases that the consul was ill and was not likely to be well for some days. Jebb stood irresolute, then went to the Austrian consulate.

Here he was informed that the consul was in conference with his Russian confrere and the two governors of Uskub, the Turk and the Christian, and the affairs of Turkey were in such confusion, added to the increasing disorder of the district itself, that there was little hope of seeing the consul.

Jebb looked so downcast at this that his informant asked the nature of his errand, and introduced himself as Herr Xavier Franz Heller von Hellwald of Vienna. Jebb introduced himself as a former student at the University of Vienna and the young attache mellowed immediately. They adjourned to a coffee house for kafeine, a humble wooden structure with an awning over the walk, and cane-bottomed stools.

"But what brings you, Herr Doctor Yep, to this dismal cemetery of an Uskup?"

Jebb shook his head with a dreary "Ich weiss nicht," and then poured forth in halting German and with halting courage as much of his story as he felt it discreet to divulge.

"That is a problem indeed, Herr Doctor Yep. Now if you know where you lost the child—"

"If I only knew!"

"If you know where you had lost her, it would be easier. And yet not easy at that. If she had disappeared in Vienna, or Berlin, or Paris, we could telegraph and the great engine of the police of Europe could be set in motion. But we are in Turkey, and Turkey is in revolution. Nobody knows what will happen tomorrow. Nobody knows what happened yesterday. We only know that Constantinople is captured by the revolutionists and that the Sultan is prisoner."

Miruma had told Jebb nothing of this; either she had known little of it, or had forgotten it in the stress of more personal events.

"The Sultan a prisoner!" Jebb gasped. "Turkey in revolution! And the little child lost among these savages."

"What did you say the child's name was?"

"Cynthia Thatcher."

"Cententia Tat—Trent—tsend— it is an erschrecklich name to say. Bomben, Granaten! Herr Doctor Yep, if somebody asks the child her name and she tells it, nobody will be able to recall it or to remember it."

"You must help me."

"I will do my all, and gladly. It will take much money. In Turkey nobody moves—not even the Sultan—without baksheesh. You have much money, yest?"

Jebb tossed his hands. "I have a hundred and fifty dollars—about six hundred marks."

"You have a difficult problem, Herr Doctor. We must see what we can do. Your passports are in good shape, I hope."

"Passports? I never had any."

"You must have had to get into Turkey. And you must have had a tekere or you could not have traveled."

"If I had them I lost them, and I don't know where."

"Where were you last, did you say?"

"In Salonica, I think. All I know is that the train from Salonica brought me here."

"Salonica! Bomben, Granaten! It is the very home of the revolution. Everything started there. And you have been in Salonica without knowing. And how did you get there? You probably reached there by the railroad from Constantinople. Have you been in Constantinople?"

"I don't know."

"Did you have the child with you in Salonica?"

"I don't know. I may have had. I cannot tell."

Hellwald shook his head in dismay and exploded his "Bomben, Granaten!" in a whisper.

Past the cafe where Jebb and Hellwald sat pondering flowed the eddying traffic of the street. Now and then a Turk, a Russian, an Austrian, or a Macedonian saluted Hellwald after the manner of his race or station, and the Austrian answered in kind.

At length a sound of distant walling, and a hint of doleful chant began to define itself above the clatter. The crowd paused and massed to give way to a funeral procession led by bearded priests of the Greek Church in gorgeous vestments, marching slowly and singing.

The procession turned the corner and disappeared. Among those who had paused to watch the cortege was a venerable white bearded Turk in fez and frock coat; he seemed to be deeply touched. After the crowd had dispersed he still stood in dejection.

Hellwald said to Jebb: "That is Akof Bey, one of the leaders of the Young Turks. His eldest son is an officer at the citadel. His younger son, Gani Bey, is very ill, and the doctors here can do nothing for him."

Jebb started at the names of Akof Bey and his son. He was about to say that he was waiting to be caught by this very man when he realized the indiscretion of such a remark.

Akof Bey saw Hellwald and greeted him with a sad courtesy in a sweeping salute from the brow.

Hellwald rose, saying to Jebb: "Excuse me, I must ask him how his son is today."

He went to the old man and questioned him in what Jebb assumed to be Turkish. Akof Bey answered with much excitement and vivid gestures of pain and despair. Hellwald listened with evident sorrow. Then he seemed to brighten with an idea. He beckoned Jebb.

"I have just told Akof Bey that you are one of the most eminent physicians in America, and that I know you well in Vienna when you studied at the greatest of all Universities. It is near enough to the truth for a diplomat."

As he was saying this to Jebb, the Bey was pouring fluent Turkish into his other ear. Hellwald translated in short sentences:

"He is asking me if you cannot come to see his son at once—don't accept—look solemn—you are busy—you are leaving town—the other physicians have failed to help him, he says—they are ignorant dogs—his son cries aloud in agony. But don't accept too readily. Don't go yet. Remember this is Turkey. They expect to bargain for everything. He is rich. You need much money."

But Jebb agreed and on the way they passed a miscellaneous bazaar, where a meager supply of drugs was kept for the foreign population. There Jebb managed to find a large hypodermic needle and a supply of tablets, which he purchased along with a few of such simples as the ezja-hane possessed.

The home of Akof Bey was important in Uskub, large enough to be called a Konak.

Charts Are Essential in Modern Sea Vessels

Charts are to the seamen what road maps are to the motorist. Glance at a chart and observe the thousands of mysterious little figures and letters which cover the portions devoted to various oceans. These are of the utmost importance to the seaman, telling him the depth of water and what lies beneath him, says Pearson's Weekly.

By means of compass and sextant the captain of a ship fixes what he calculates to be the exact position of his vessel. On the chart appears, say, the letter "T," denoting that beneath lies rock. To make quite sure that he is not heading the ship to destruction on some undiscovered sandbank, he takes soundings.

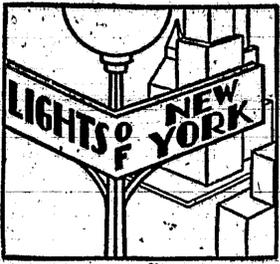

Striding on either side of the present sounding machine by Lord Kelvin, methods of sounding in deep water were cumbersome, lengthy, and not always reliable. The lead used was of the same size and shape approximately as that used today. Sailors were lined along the side of the ship from bow to stern on platforms called "chains." The leading man held the lead, to which were attached many thousands of feet of rope on which were marks indicating depth in fathoms.

length of rope is a slim brass container. Into this is placed a narrow glass tube sealed at one end, and graduated along its length in fathoms, with a thin line of red chemical running up the center.

The whole instrument is then swung out clear of the ship's side on a boom and let go.

Immediately bottom is touched, the lead is hove in by an electric motor and swung inboard once more. The tube is examined to show where the action of the water forced up it by pressure has removed the chemical, the actual depth of the water, while the tallow is scrutinized for any particles of sand or clay.

Brick, concrete and steel have largely displaced trees in New York. The last tree vanished from Times Square years ago when the Paramount building was erected. Fifth avenue didn't have any trees until elms were planted recently in front of Rockefeller Center with other trees around the development. Then came more elms in front of St. Patrick's cathedral and maples on Fifth street. Indications are that there will be many more Fifth avenue plantings. Also there is the possibility that Sixth avenue, from which the old elevated has vanished, in time will become a tree-bordered thoroughfare. Down on the lower East Side where in the not-so-distant past many a youngster never saw a tree unless he was taken or went to a park, there are now playgrounds with trees. Trees have also made their appearance on other streets that formerly were bare.

One Hundred and Sixth street is one of the latest thoroughfares to get trees. When the planting is completed, there will be 345 in all and they will extend from the Harlem to the Hudson river. The trees are oriental planes. New York's sulphuric acid and soot-laden atmosphere isn't good for trees. In fact it is so bad that, as has been stated in this space previously, a few years ago there was fear that Central park was about to become treeless. Tree surgery, scientific methods and the expenditure of considerable money saved most of the park's trees. The plane tree has been found to stand city hard-bets very well, in fact much better than most other varieties. For that reason many have been planted and many more will be. That's a safe assertion because within the last few years New York has become tree conscious.

For such property owners as desire trees, the city will supply them and see that they are planted correctly for $50 each. During the first year, the owner must look after his own trees. After that, the city takes them over, if they are in good condition, and thus he is relieved of responsibility and expense. With city-planted trees, the loss has been extremely small, only two out of every hundred having failed to survive. The usual cause of death has been failure on the part of the property owner to supply enough water.

Thanksgiving day—both of them—this year belongs to the past but comes to mind a story told during his recent visit to New York by Albert A. McVittie, chain restaurant owner of Denver and newly elected president of the National Restaurant association. Before going into the restaurant business he was in the show business, a "tuffy pulling cowboy," an amusement park concessionaire and the manager of a traveling show troupe. Back in 1907, he and his company became stranded in Grand Island, Neb., and when Thanksgiving day came, Mr. McVittie found his pockets entirely empty, diligent search failing to reveal so much as a single copper.

Just about the time Grand Island families were sitting down to turkey, mince pie and all that goes with a Thanksgiving feast, Mr. McVittie encountered an acquaintance and succeeded in negotiating a loan of 15 cents. The borrowed money went into a Thanksgiving dinner—doughnuts and coffee. As he laid his dime on the counter, he vowed, "As long as I live, to remember the mess I'm now in, I will eat a doughnut a day." He's kept that vow for 32 years, which means about 11,000 doughnuts. Also that Thanksgiving day back in 1907 has also meant some of the greatest feasts ever known by Denver's poor. And Mr. McVittie still likes doughnuts.

Maybe it's my face. Maybe it's the way I dress. But at any rate, another one of those salesmen of watches supposed to have been stolen slipped up to me as I was looking into a window on Eighth avenue and tried to put over a deal. The watch he furtively exhibited looked mighty good. But just then a cop I knew stopped to exchange the time of day and the timepiece salesman vanished before he had even made a quotation. At the moment, I'm wondering where I can get made up to look like a city slicker. (Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

36 Years on 'The Hill,' Garner Succeeds by Reason of Seasoned Experience and Sound Judgment

By BASCOM TIMMONS

John N. Garner would make a great President. He has a better practical understanding of national Government than any other living man. It is his life, and has been for 30 years.

At the end of the three dozen years under the Capitol dome he is, according to the calendar, 70 years old. On the calendar he is 59 years old and in tip-top physical condition. This vigor and physical toughness he would carry into the greatest office within the gift of the people and he would have the extra 20 years of knowledge of affairs, domestic and foreign. He came to his present place of eminence the hard way. In his public service there is no problem of Government with which he has not grappled.

Garner would make a great President because he has the proper temperament for the office. He knows when to advance and when to halt and take stock. He understands the Nation's legislative and administrative digestive system better than any man in the country. He would take no outposts he could not hold. He would be the best insurance against reaction, which so often follows unwise action. He has the poise and the patience to work for permanency. He would insist on sound legislation and coherent administration.

Bascom Timmons

Best Judge of People's Temper

He is probably the best judge of the temper of the people and their representatives in Congress, at any given time, of any man in the United States. He has an uncanny perspective, which enables him to disregard the clamor of voluble and vociferous minorities and find the desires of the submerged majority. Perhaps this is because he is a typical American, neither radical nor reactionary, but progressive and forward-looking.

Garner would make a great President because of his gifts of leadership and his judgment of and ability to work with men. He has often said that most men who have known in public life were men of good will, patriotically interested in the welfare of their country. He has always found a zest in sitting down with men who review problems from diverse angles, men of different experiences. He relieves that out of such deliberations come sound, practical, beneficial and progressive solutions. He takes to such counsel tables his own fidelity to principles, clarity of reasoning and ability to get at facts.

His judgment of men is excellent. When he became Speaker, in 1931, he demonstrated his ability to choose men for important assignments — of finding the proper man to do a job. Men were placed in roles for which they were best qualified. He has always liked to reward merit in young men, and this gave him the opportunity. Although the Democrats had a fragile majority of only three votes overnight, he welded them into a cohesive, fighting organization.

Far-Flung Network of Contacts

Because his acquaintanceship in all parts of the country is second to none, I believe this far-flung network of contacts and knowledge of men would make it possible for Garner to call into service men of outstanding ability for his cabinet and other administrative places. His standard for judicial appointments would be high. He would be especially anxious to find proper men for diplomatic posts. His long experience on the House Foreign Affairs Committee imbued him with a deep and informed interest in international relations.

That Garner considers the solution of the unemployment and agriculture problems as the two outstanding challenges to the Union and that the chief attention of a Garner administration would be bent to this end, no one who knows him doubts. He likes to tackle tough problems, and here are two tough ones.

Opposed to Government in Business

If any one is supporting Garner on the theory he would be a do-nothing President, that supporter would better begin looking for a new man to support. His would be a heads-up administration. He believes modern government must meet modern needs. He has said that "evolutionary process must go forward to meet over-changing human needs." He would not have the Government evade any legitimate function, but he would be zealous in his endeavor to see it did not encroach on functions outside its field. "Putting the Government into business is a violation of the Nation's industrial and commercial fabric," he declared in his 1932 acceptance speech.

Garner would make a great President because he thoroughly believes in our democratic system of three branches of Government. He has been called congressional-minded. It is true he has fought in support of the prerogatives of Congress, but he is just as firmly against executive aggrandizement, the executive and judicial branches.

Believing as he does in a Government of laws and not of men, he abhors unnecessary bureaucracy and would undoubtedly seek to dissolve some of it entirely, but back in Congress some of the legislative powers it exercises, back in the courts some of the judicial powers it exercises, and back in the States some of the local powers that belong there. All this would preserve the natural dignity of the executive branch, rather than weaken it.

Garner believes, as did Grover Cleveland, that the whole art of government is simply applied common sense and common honesty, with reason, justice and tolerance as handmaidens.

Has Vivid "Sense of Humanity"

Garner as President would be guided by a sense of humanity. It was he who introduced the first general relief bill in 1932. It was a pay-as-you-go measure, and carried a tax to pay its cost. He believes in an ever-increasing standard of living for the working man and woman. He has a passionate devotion for the well-being of men, and women who work for their daily bread. He has always fought monopoly and the concentration of wealth, and has insisted that the Government lay down rules to guarantee free and fair competition. He is for property rights because he believes them the very basis of human rights. Ownership of property, he thinks, is one of the best guarantees of the dignity and independence of the individual. He is against favoritism in law enforcement.

Garner knows you cannot get something for nothing. He believes in constructive economy. He is the industrious pioneer type who learned in a pioneer country how hard it is to make a dollar. He would be scrupulously careful with the taxpayer's dollar. He has the courage to resist fantastic proposals and boldly to meet an issue.

To continued efforts to find solutions of the Nation's problems Garner would take to the presidency vast experience. "Experience," to paraphrase the great Justice Holmes, "is the life of administration."

Garner loves his country, believes in it, knows it is durable and wants it to believe in itself. He wants Government to do its part toward preserving freedom of opportunity. He believes economy, thrift and self-reliance are still the hallmark of the majority of Americans. (Reprinted through courtesy of the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)
