Directors of PCA To Meet June 5-6

Directors of the Albuquerque, Clovis, Las Cruces, Roswell and Springer Production Credit Associations of New Mexico, will hold a conference with officers of the Production Credit Corporation of Wichita, in Albuquerque, June 5 and 6.

The Albuquerque meeting is one of several two-day short courses which the farmers and stockmen, who direct the business of the 41 production credit associations in the Ninth Farm Credit District, are holding during May and early June.

Representing the Production Credit Corporation at the meeting will be: D. L. Mullendore, president; W. J. McMillin, secretary.

Officers and directors of the associations who will attend the Albuquerque meeting, are:

Albuquerque PCA—T. A. Spence of Carrizozo, president; Floyd W. Lee of San Mateo, vice president; W. C. Bates of Carlsbad, Franklin Bond and J. L. Phillips of Albuquerque, E. A. Christmas of Mimbres, Leo S. Evans of Marquee, Alejandro Gonzales of Sandoval, Albert K. Mitchell of Albert; and J. L. York of Albuquerque, secretary.

Clovis PCA—P. E. Jordan of Clovis, president.

Las Cruces PCA—J. A. Isaacs of Las Cruces, president.

Roswell PCA—C. W. Bruman of Loving, president.

St. Rita School Notes

The Eighth Grade Graduation exercises were held in St. Rita's Church Sunday evening, May 19, at seven o'clock. Reverend Salvatore di Giovanni gave an inspiring talk, encouraging the graduates to be true to God, to themselves and to society. The senior class rendered several special numbers, including, "Holy Lord, God of All" Processional by Newton and "Sublimate Deo" Recessional by Mozart.

The graduates were Pedro Adler, John Dolan, Patricia Dolan, and Lorena Torrez.

Sincere appreciation is extended to Mr. Sabino Vidauri, Lucio Vidauri, and Mrs. P. Chavez for the kind assistance rendered in making the picnic in honor of St. Rita's Eighth Graders a possibility and success.

Mr. and Mrs. Benny Cox have gone to Texas for two weeks.

Lincoln County Budget Hearing

The educational budget auditor will be in Lincoln County May 29. The school budget commission consists of two members of opposite political parties appointed by the board county commissioners. The educational budget auditor acts as the third member. At the hearing there will be determined the amount available for instruction, transportation and other maintenance needs.

Robbery at Capitan

The Titaworth Company of Capitan was robbed last Wednesday night of $2500.00, with $1500 covered by insurance. The perpetrators were rather smooth. They managed the combination on the safe, without leaving any clues.

Standard Oil Co. Believes in Newspaper Advertising

The Standard Oil Company of Texas states that Newspaper advertising will play an important part in their 1940 sales promotion program. "This Newspaper Campaign is another expression of our confidence in Newspaper advertising as an effective means of carrying our message to motorists."

General Road Working at Jicarilla Recently

Mr. E. H. Hendricks was in from Jicarilla Friday and states that his community had a general road meeting and working. Trucks, plows and men were everywhere in abundance.

Mr. Hendricks says this work should be well appreciated as it affords the only roadway for the community into Carrizozo. Formerly for the past year mule teams have been regularly used on this community road in order to get passage into Carrizozo.

Mrs. Charles Littell and son, Nonie visited Mrs. Mae Jordan at Saturday.

Miss Della Ward has gone to her home in California where she will spend the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Moore of Albuquerque have taken charge of the B. and M. store for Mr. Bellinger. Both are experienced in dry goods and shoe business. The B. and M. store is buying a larger stock this spring.

EDUCATIONAL BALL Grand March—Promptly at 9:30

The Livestock Situation

Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, May 14; Outlook for a prosperous year in the western cattle country is unusually bright, due to the combination of excellent range feed and a strong market for cattle. Throughout practically all of the western area, range feed prospects are far better than a year ago, and on the Pacific coast, range feed for the past two months has been above normal. This means that a larger than usual proportion of cattle will fatten on grass and cost of carrying cattle will be smaller than a year ago as there is little or no need for supplemental feeds. Where 1939 range feed as well as grain crops were unusually short on account of drought conditions, present prospects are unusually promising. It means that cattle growers will have heavier calves and yearlings to sell to stocker and feeder buyers, and that cows will go through the summer in much better condition than a year ago.

There is a definite trend towards greater "home-raised" calf production by cattlemen who far some time have been buying young stock from other states, rather than attempting to raise their own replacements. Calves and yearlings have been in strong demand by middle western feeders with the result that prices have been high in relation to fat cattle prices. Many California cattlemen, in cases where range land is suited for carrying breeding stock and growing out calves, are finding the production of weaner calves for fall delivery a profitable business.

Due to the fact that this calf production is on relatively high-priced land, quality production is essential. As a result, California cattlemen are giving more attention to the purchase of good registered bulls. In the commercial herds, where quality is kept in mind, growers are producing weaner calves weighing as much as 450 lb. and better. One advantage of raising calves in the area where they are grown out is that animals are already acclimated and usually do not receive any setback when moved to nearby range country of similar elevation and environment.

The cattle market is active and strong at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, with fed steers largely $8.50 to $9.75; grass steers quotable $8 to $9; grass cows mainly $6 to $6.75 and up to $7; grass heifers $6.75 to $7.75. Hogs are holding steady after the recent decline with top butcher hogs around $6.75. Fat spring lambs are quoted at $9 to $9.60.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Canton left last Saturday for Forrest, New Mexico where they will visit relatives. Then they will go to Ilmo Missouri for a few days after which they will return to Boulder Colo. to attend summer school.

21 Attend Meeting at Jicarilla

We are informed by Mr. E. H. Hendricks of Jicarilla that recently a meeting was held at that place with an attendance of 21 legal voters.

Among the purposes of the meeting was the election of convention delegates and a precinct chairman and chairwoman. E. H. Hendricks was re-elected as chairman and Mrs. J. P. Hall as precinct chairwoman. Harmony prevailed.

Several delightful rains have fallen this week. As a result the good earth has become green and smiling.

Mr. J. R. Jenkins was in Carrizozo on business Monday.

A card from Mrs. Margaret Hendricks and son Bryan states that they are having a wonderful time in Dallas and will be home about June 1st.

Mrs. Leroy Merchant left last Thursday for Los Angeles, where she will visit her mother, and also her aunt.

Chevrolet Sales Detroit, May 15— Chevrolet dealers in the first 10 days of May retailed a total of 80,299 new passenger and commercial cars, it was announced here today by William E. Holler, general sales manager. The figure is 30.3 per cent in advance of that reported for the same period last year, when 23,258 new units were retailed.

Commercial car and used car sales likewise continued to show substantial gains over 1939 that have characterized Chevrolet's 1940 record, Mr. Holler announced.

Banquet, Graduation, Alumnae Ball

The educational banquet was a grand success. One hundred were present not only from Lincoln County but from all over the state. This was part of the Commencement festivities, followed by the Commencement exercises which were held Wednesday evening closing a successful term of school. Many students received honors and medals. Dr. Donald Mac Kay of Portales, delivered the Commencement address. Hon. John E. Miles, governor of the State, presented the diplomas and medals.

Immediately following the exercises at the auditorium the Annual Alumnae Ball was held with about 150 dancers present.

Woman's Club Costume Fete

To make money for furnishing the Community Center for Women's Activities the committee for Literature and Drama of the Woman's Club of Carrizozo will, on June 8th, from 2:30 to 5 p. m., at the Community Center sponsor a dress parade of costumes that were made twenty years or more ago. There will also be a short program. This is not only for club members, but any one who will come will be welcome. One woman is to wear a costume made during the Civil War, one an Inaugural dress of a Governor's wife; one a wedding dress of 50 years ago. If you haven't any thing old, borrow something. Please write a short history of the article to be worn and send to Mrs. Paul Mayer, Chairman of Committee. Come and see what our great grandmothers wore. See next week's paper for further information.

Registration Lists Being Completed

With the registration lists for nine counties already completed, Secretary of State Jesse M. Gonzales is rushing work on the remainder. The three machines in her office used for this purpose are clattering continuously, operated by three eight-hour shifts of three girls each.

The lists are being prepared to comply with the law which requires that they be furnished to the chairman of the dominant parties before the primary and also before the election, to permit purging. The "lists" just now consist of orderly arranged files of cards, hardly as big as postcards, packed in filing cases. In each card slots have been punched. Nothing is written on them. When the time comes for printing, after no more names can be added to the registration, these cards will be fed into the printing machine which will produce long printed lists. The slots will have been converted into name, address, political affiliation of the registrants and other information taken from the registration affidavits.

This work was undertaken by the state to save county clerks the trouble and expense.

Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Jones of Las Vegas attended commencement exercises here.

The Democrats are in session this afternoon. The way has been paved for a harmonious meeting.

Mr. M. C. St. John has been ill since last Sunday.

KNOW YOUR BANK

THIS BANK IS EAGER TO MAKE LOANS

THE money we have available to lend is our stock in trade and, like a progressive merchant, we are anxious to keep that stock in use. Sound loans are an important source of bank earnings, so we naturally welcome opportunities to make them.

UNLIKE the merchant, however, the funds which we lend belong to our depositors and must be returned to them upon demand. Consequently, before making a loan we must make sure that this money will be safe during the life of the loan and that it will be paid back promptly when the loan matures.

A LOAN helps the borrower, puts money to work, stimulates business, and keeps men employed, all resulting in earnings and savings which help the community and help the bank. Your loan application will find a welcome here.

British Troops Hailed as 'Saviours of Belgium'

Although many other pictures have appeared since that day, none tells more clearly than the above the enthusiasm with which the Belgians welcomed the first appearance of British troops to combat the second German invasion of their country in a quarter of a century. This picture was among the very first radioed on that historic day.

Mother's Residence in U. S. Legalized by President

The family of Fred C. Bucholz, a Los Angeles, Calif., war veteran, gives thanks for the action of President Roosevelt in signing his name to a document which kept the family together. The bill which the President signed was introduced in congress by the American Legion, and legalized the entry of Mrs. Bucholz into the United States for permanent residence. Canadian-born Mrs. Bucholz was about to be separated from her family by deportation proceedings.

Hawaiian Plebiscite to Focus Attention On Forty-Year Struggle for Statehood

By ROBERT McSHANE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
THOUGH the 48-starred flag of the United States has remained unchanged since Arizona and New Mexico were admitted to the Union in 1912, a determined attempt is being made to add another star to its constellation. Hawaii—as at least part of its population claims—wants to become the forty-ninth state.

Culminating more than forty years of effort to secure full rights as an integral part of this nation, the Territory of Hawaii will hold a plebiscite next November to record by popular vote the aspiration of her people for statehood.

The plebiscite will be included in the general elections in the territory November 5. It will have no direct bearing on the granting of statehood, other than to focus national attention on the issue. Its sponsors hope to expedite action by congress on a bill providing for statehood now pending before the house committee on territories.

To many people of the islands, the issue is crucial. Statehood to them represents the fulfillment of a hope that was born nearly a hundred years ago and has been ardently cherished since Hawaii was annexed in 1898. Activated by a group of American colonists in the islands, a move for the annexation of the then Kingdom of Hawaii was almost consummated in 1854. The death of King Kamehameha III put an end to treaty negotiations that were almost completed.

Sentiment Kept Alive

Nearly a half-century passed before the matter again arose with sufficient decisiveness to bring it to an issue. But sentiment for annexation was kept alive by the growing number of Americans settling in the islands and by the constantly greater integration of American institutions into the body politic.

When annexation finally came, Hawaii would have much preferred that it be as a state. Those who worked for annexation, however, were of the opinion that the United States would follow its established policy and advance her to statehood when she had demonstrated her fitness. Present day advocates of Hawaiian statehood insist that it was upon this understanding that she surrendered her sovereignty and became a United States territory.

Now, Hawaii feels, she has been kept waiting overlong; it is just 40

Hopeful citizens of Hawaii have added a forty-ninth star to the United States flag in anticipation of the day when that country will be admitted to statehood. However, the extra star is just an experiment, and the flag won't be used until the issue has been decided.

Japanese residents, 148,972.

Within the territory, the civil and political structure closely parallels that of a state. The governor, secretary of state, and the higher judiciary are appointed by the President of the United States. The legislature and major local officers are elective. The territory is divided into counties which have the same home rule as those of a state.

As a territory, however, the parallel ends there. Her people cannot vote in national elections for the President and vice president, and they have no senators or representatives in congress, but are represented at Washington only by a single delegate who has no vote.

This, to the people of Hawaii, is contrary to American tradition. To them it means taxation for representation. They point out that up to the middle of 1937 a total of $153,453,707 had been contributed by Hawaii in federal internal revenue.

The people of Hawaii pay the same federal taxes as the people of the states. Tax figures show that Hawaii has consistently paid more into the federal treasury than have 14 to 19 of the states.

Carries State Responsibilities

She is subject to the same laws. She would be included in compulsory military service in case of another draft, as she was during the first World war. In short, she carries the same responsibilities in every respect as those of a state.

As a state, Hawaii would be entitled to two senators and one

Hawaii has chosen the plebiscite to be held next November. The matter is non-partisan; both the Republican and Democratic parties in the islands are sponsoring the plebiscite and urging the people to vote. So general and wholehearted is the support being given to it in the islands that it is freely predicted the affirmative votes will be virtually unanimous.

Other fears for Hawaii's chances of eventual statehood center around the islands' military importance. Hawaii is America's first line of defense in the Pacific ocean—the bulwark which stands between the states of Oregon and Washington, with their totally inadequate facilities for warding off an enemy, and invasion by the fleet and air armada of a foreign belligerent.

Army, Navy Oppose

Hawaii is a Gibraltar-like element in the nation's national defense scheme, and because of that a barrier to its statehood arises. Both the army and navy departments of the United States have expressed strong opposition to any change in the islands' form of government.

Uncle Sam has spent millions for the fortification of the islands, and indirectly to protect the mainland of the United States. California, with extensive fortifications, is considerably better equipped to fight off an enemy invasion than either of the two states to the north.

Pearl Harbor, United States naval base situated in the island of Oahu, eight or ten miles from Honolulu, is the center of the elaborate network of defense. It is the snug and secure anchorage where the whole fighting fleet of the nation can lie at anchor; on its shores are a navy yard, a submarine base, a powerful radio station, fuel tanks, dry docks, barracks and other military necessities.

Because of this, army and navy executives are hesitant to approve of any measure which would change the islands' form of government. They fear that a change might, by the greater independence of statehood, interfere with future development of the United States' mid-Pacific stronghold.

Norwegians Given Credit for Weather Forecasting System

SAN FRANCISCO.—To Norway belongs the credit for having originated the system of mass analysis in making weather forecasts, according to Charles L. Mitchell, senior forecaster of the United States weather bureau. That system is now used in the United States.

"While there has been something of a revolution in weather forecasting since the World war," he said, "nevertheless it was the Norwegians who, during the World war, originated the system of mass analysis now in use."

Schools Maintained

"This is now so much part of the work that we maintain schools in both Chicago and Washington, where weather forecasters can take a three-month course in this part of the work."

"Before the war forecasting was largely by reckoning from high and low depressions as shown on the weather map."

"During the war, however, weather forecasters were unable to get reports from ships on weather conditions, for the reason that these reports are valueless unless the precise positions of the vessels are known."

No Forecasts Sent

"For manifest reasons the belligerents did not want to make known to the enemy the position of any ship, and so weather forecasts from them were not sent out."

"It was then that the Norwegians began studying cloud and air formations and by the application of mathematics were able to make shrewd weather forecasts."

"At present we are able to make up what might be called a 'topographical' map of air layers, except that the air is always in motion."

'Joe College'? He Doesn't Exist!

STATE COLLEGE, PA.—Hollywood to the contrary, there is no such typical student as "Joe College" or "Betty Co-ed," says Pauline Locklin, assistant professor of English literature at the Pennsylvania State college.

"There is no more a student type," she asserts, "than there is a student nose."

The college man drinks what he is thirsty for and can pay for, she declares. "It may be benedictine, buttermilk or lemon coke." As to dress, the student often is purposely indifferent just to preserve his individual personality.

"The so-called collegiate type of humor is another myth," she said. "Most of such humor is imitative and is copied as much in towns and cities as on a college campus."

CHAPTER XI—Continued

Mrs. O'Connor was making entries with a fat soft hand, in a big book. Sheila said she would pay half.

"That's entirely satisfactory to me," Mrs. O'Connor told her, amiably. "They want nice, quiet-looking girls, and they'll like you. I suppose you haven't a sister or a cousin who'd like to go with you? It's quite a lark, the girls say."

"No, I haven't," Sheila said, and to herself she added, when she was in the quiet, snowy street again, "I very likely won't go myself!"

She went home, and found the three dreary rooms of the Bronx apartment empty and dark. Angela had gone away with Neely and Lizzie. The sight of the place reminded Sheila of the day's desolating adventures, of Ma's unkindness, of Joe's doubts, of the Mc Cann family, who were so ready to believe that she would run away with their precious son and be married by a justice of the peace!

Joe had an old imitation leather suitcase. Sheila dragged it out from under the big bed and began to pack it, crying hard as she did so. She prayed that they would come in and find her at it; they would be a long time persuading her not to go!

To be sure, she had given Mrs. O'Connor three dollars, but then what were three dollars in a crisis like this? The thought of the money reminded Sheila of her precious fifty dollars, and she took it out of the drawer of the kitchen table, to look at it lovingly. She put two bills back again, crying harder than ever. Ma should have them, Ma hadn't had forty dollars very often in her life.

Less than an hour later, turning into their street, and supporting his emotionally exhausted mother with a firm arm, Joe Carscadden said suddenly:

"Did you see that girl across the street, Ma?"

"I saw nobody."

"I guess I'm seeing Sheila everywhere!" Joe said. "It looked like her."

"Now I tell you," said his mother, "they have that child all wrong, them Mc Canns."

Joe all but stopped short in his slow pacing, to give his mother an astounded glance.

"But, Ma, you didn't take her part then!"

"I blame myself that I didn't, then," Mrs. Carscadden said, walking on.

"You have to hand it to her for this," Joe said. "His having money didn't matter two cents to her! She didn't want him, and that was all there was to it."

"It speaks well for her, it does so," said her mother.

"I thought it did!"

"There's few girls wouldn't jump at a lad that has all he has. 'I'll tell the world there are!'"

"But you'd not get Sheila to in-thirgure for 'um, just because he was a rich man's son."

"I'll swear I felt sorry for her!" Joe said suddenly, as they entered the dark, odorless doorway of home. "She seemed so alone, poor kid, there in that big room, with every one of us riding her."

"They had me so twisted about, Joe," Mrs. Carscadden said confidentially, arresting him on the long stairs. "I didn't know what they were after. Did they want her to marry 'um, or didn't they?"

"I think they thought Peter had got her into something, and the only decent thing for him to do was stand by her."

"But you don't think so, Joe?" his mother asked seriously.

"No," he hesitated. "Of course, at first I thought she and Peter were just stringing us," he confessed, "and then all of a sudden while we were there it came over me that she was telling the truth."

"I hope she's not mad at us," Mrs. Carscadden murmured fearfully at the door.

"She'll be all right," he never stays mad," he said comfortably.

"I'll make her a batch of muffins for supper; she likes them!" the woman decided. "It scalds me that she told me yesterday, Joe," she added, "that she'd been cookin' a pot-roast, and I never said anything to her about it!"

"You certainly rode her!" Joe said, stooping to grope for the doorknob in the dark.

"Not anny more than the rest of you," the mother protested uncomfortably. "Look how Lizzie done!"

"Yes, but Sheila only minded it from you, Ma."

"Oh, Joe," Mrs. Carscadden said, pathetically, "don't say that, dear!"

"Why, you know darned well how Sheila feels when she thinks you're off her, Ma. It's locked, she's not home!" Joe said blankly, of the door.

"Joe, she must be home!"

"She's not. She couldn't lock herself in, could she?" Joe asked, producing the key from its usual hiding-place on the top of the door jamb.

"Oh, God forgive us, Joe, where would she be!"

"Maybe she went to Marg'ret's."

"She'd not do that, Joe. She was droppin' with the fatigue that was on her!"

"She'll be back," Joe said, anxiously.

His mother made no answer. Joe heard her whispering prayers as they went into the dark, empty rooms together.

Sheila wore an alpaca uniform that had belonged to some girl who had basely deserted the Pendergast Hotel the season before, and a white organdie apron and butterfly cap. She slept in a long loft room above the garage where there were six beds. At one end of the room was a washroom with a shower and two tin basins, and above the basins was hung a card of printed rules for all the chambermaids and waitresses at the hotel. They must wear fresh uniforms daily, bathe daily, wear hair-nets and manucure at least once daily.

"Does anyone?" Sheila asked Nelly, the girl who had showed her where things were and what she must do.

Nelly merely laughed disagreeably. Never in the world had there ever been contempt more stinging, biting, complete than that Nelly felt for everything connected with the Pendergast Hotel. Nelly's favorite comment upon Sheila's innocence and ignorance was a scornful smile, and Sheila came to the point when she could anticipate the smile, and avoid it.

Sheila only asked questions the first day. After that she was too tired to be interested in anything. Her feet burned, her ankles ached, and she told Nelly that her spine was like a rope with red-hot knots in it.

CHAPTER XII

Days merged themselves into nights, and nights into days. Sheila was not conscious of their beginnings or endings. These were lost in a haze of exhausted sleep. The dining-room opened at seven, and on alternate days she was supposed to be downstairs, filling salt cellars, cutting butter squares, stacking plates, folding napkins, an hour earlier than that. On alternate days she could sleep until almost seven. She set tables, reset tables, brushed crumbs, filled glasses. She went out with pencilled orders, filled

"Does anyone?" Sheila asked Nelly—trays, staggered in with loaded platters, staggered out with trays of empty soup plates. The guests at the Pendergast were paying for everything anyway; they wanted everything.

Sheila learned not to overlook anything. There was a disagreeable, pimply young man of nineteen in the pantry, who checked the trays and made all the trouble he could about doubled orders. He had authority, and anyone who wanted to work in the Pendergast dining-room had to take orders from Mr. Benny.

"Tear it up, and go out and get their entire order written over!" he said scornfully to Sheila on the first terrible day.

"I only have to add the two extra to it," Sheila said. "They came in late, and the mother said they'd have what the rest have."

"Tear it up and go out and get the entire order over," said Mr. Benny, unruffled.

"I've got their order! All I have to do is add two more to it."

Mr. Benny tore up the order himself and smiled at Sheila.

"Now you go back and get the whole order," he said, "and next time don't lose your head about it!"

"I didn't lose my head. The two boys came in late—"

"That'll be about enough," said Mr. Benny, lighting a cigarette and glancing up over the match at Sheila.

"I tell you to go get the order again, and not to lose your head about it!"

The dining-room hours were presumably from seven to ten, from twelve-thirty to two, and from six to nine. This was the official statement. But in fact they were from almost any early hour until after ten o'clock at night. At half-past six in the morning, at six even, fishermen were rattling the dining-room doors, and nurses with fretful and wakeful babies were clamoring for admittance, and at half-past nine at night tremendously good-natured and apologetic persons were arriving for dinner. This was all very well for Miss Watts, the gracious and capable and spectacled head waitress, who got the big tips, but it told heavily on Sheila and the other girls. They had to take on extra tables, to hunt about for tablecloths and napkins not originally provided, to apologize for food that had been used up, and to make additional trips for substitutes.

They worked in an enormous pantry served from the kitchen below by dumb-waiters. The order slips, with Mr. Benny's O. K. on them, went down on the empty elevators; each tray had a slip on it when it came up. Sometimes when a big party required more than one tray a bus boy was summoned to assist.

But the girls were not allowed to ask for help; Mr. Benny decided that, and if he did not like a girl he would smile a teasing smile and observe that she could make two trips of it, just as well. The girls, except perhaps for the favorite of the moment, detested him; when they were especially tired or nervous he could make things hard for them, and they wasted needed energy in despising him.

They ran to and fro breathlessly; their collars wilted, their little buttoned aprons wilted; the girls themselves wilted. Sheila never had had much color, but she developed a pallor that was new. Her film of copper hair stuck to her wet forehead, her clothes adhered to her soaked body. She lunged aside crumpled tablecloths and napkins, piled dirty plates, checked pencilled orders feverishly. She talked so little and worked so hard that Miss Watts, the head waitress, soon singled her out for special impositions.

"Mary, there's a party just down from New York; I'm sorry. You'll have to start the order anyway—I took it."

"At twenty-two minutes of ten, mindja," Nelly might say pityingly. Sheila would eye the slip.

"Four mock turtle, three supreme of grapefruit, seven oyster cocktail, four bouillon, two cream of lettuce—"

When Nelly, in the beginning, had told her that in the quiet hours, say between eleven and twelve each morning, and three and five each afternoon, she would be free to come up to the dormitory loft and lie down, Sheila had secretly laughed. It was with Atlantic City's winter boardwalk, and the glorious ocean at her very door—not she!

But by the third day she had discovered that these intervals of rest were all too short. She was not rested by an hour or two; fat and exhausted, on her back; she could not even begin resting in so short a time. She ached all over, her nerves throbbled and quivered, her head was dizzy with confused thoughts, her breath was short and her mouth dry.

"It's a great life!" she said to Nelly.

"It's a great life if you have an infected corn, let me tell you," Nelly said. "Sometimes I wonder why I ever left home. My mother run a boarding-house; lots of the railroad fellers come over for meals. But my stepfather done it, reely. He was ten years older than Mamma, and what he put over on her you wouldn't believe. He knew I was onto him!"

Much of the talk Sheila heard nowadays was coarse, but most of the girls were good girls.

Once she heard her own name. Four of the six girls in the rather small room were lying on their beds one winter afternoon when one of them said suddenly:

"That Carscadden girl we were talking about is supposed to be staying with friends. They were married all right. The Mc Canns have scads of money, and they hushed the whole thing up."

Sheila lay perfectly still, her very heart stopped. But when a girl idly spoke again, it was on a different topic.

She had left a note for her mother on that dreadful last afternoon of packing and tears and flight. "Dear Ma, I am safe and well; I will be good. Sheila," she had written. And every few days since she had seized some opportunity to send further reassurance. Once she had gone into Philadelphia for an hour or two and mailed a post-card picture of a church from there. On this she had written, "I am praying for you. Pray for Sheila."

Almost every night she cried herself to sleep, longing for her mother. But no matter how hard the work in the dining-room was and no matter how lonely and homesick her free hours, she would not give in.

The loneliness of life—Sheila had never known it—never suspected it before. How lonely they were, these Irish-born and Russian-born girls, who were herded like sheep in the top rooms of great hotels; these maids and nurse-girls and chauffeurs and valets who stayed at the hotel. They gave their lives to others, for sixty and seventy and eighty dollars a month.

All very well to argue, "They have a day a week, haven't they?" What girl could be satisfied, at eight, ten, or twenty-two, or thirty, with a part of one day each week in which to live her own life? Less than one seventh of her life here—for she had to serve breakfast on her "day out," and she must be back in her cell of a room by midnight.

Sheila grew older, her manner grew more sedate, her forehead had a new gravity, her eyes were wiser. Physically there was a change, too; she was thinner, the contours of her face were chiseled to finer lines.

She had been ten days on the job when one morning, in the very heat of the between-lunch-and-breakfast flurry, Frank Mc Cann found her.

At the moment Mr. Benny was making himself particularly disagreeable to an unfortunately argumentative girl named Mabel, and Sheila, listening to Mabel's feeble self-defense, in an agony of sympathy was inwardly saying to Mabel, "Oh, shut up, you're just giving him chance after chance—shut up, you poor fool—he's just leading you on—" when Mrs. Kearney, who was assistant manager, suddenly appeared on the scene.

This caused a lull, for Mrs. Kearney, silk-clad, eye-glassed, authoritative, was a power at the Pendergast.

"Which girl is Mary Moore? Mary, there's a gentleman wants to see you," Mrs. Kearney said. She sensed mutiny. "What's going on here?" she asked sharply.

It was so delightful to see Mr. Benny cringe, becoming instantly conciliatory to Mabel, so gratifying to hear Mabel's demure answer, that Sheila quite forgot to worry about any significance her own message might have. Unsuspectingly she followed Mrs. Kearney to one of the little consultation rooms near the main office. One of the guests of the place had asked her that morning if she had ever posed for trade photographs, and had suggested that she let him have her photographed working a vacuum cleaner, and if Sheila had thought of anything at all except Mabel's triumph and Mr. Benny's discomfiture, she would have found some such explanation of the summons.

Once she heard her own name.

But it was Frank Mc Cann who was waiting for her.

Instantly she was frightened, of what she did not know. She tried to back out of the door.

"Listen, it's all right, nobody knows but me!" Frank said. "Sit down, nothing's going to happen to you. Honestly, I promise you I won't give you away!"

"How'd you find me?" Sheila whispered, sitting down.

"I never lost you. There was a fellow named Buckley waiting for me in the hall that day," Frank explained, with a touch of his characteristic complacency. "I had him follow you. He's done that sort of thing before—he's a plain-clothes man, as a matter of fact. He saw you go into the agency on Lexington."

"But after that I went home!"

"I know you did. But an hour later your brother telephoned; they couldn't locate you."

"That was it," she said.

Frank was silent, he half smiled at her.

"Never a dull moment where you are!" he observed dryly. "You see, you didn't run away at all!"

"I wish people would leave me alone," Sheila said simply.

"So you're a waitress, eh?"

"Some job," she said, with a smile and shrug.

"Is it hard?"

"Oh, help!"

There was a silence.

"That woman—O'Connor, in the agency, did she tell on me?"

"She had to."

"Ma, know?"

"She knows I know. I told her that night you were O. K."

"Is she all right?" Sheila asked. It began as a casual question, but suddenly her lips trembled; she was crying.

"She's fine." He stopped, studied her for a minute. "She misses you."

To this Sheila could make no answer.

"How long you going to keep this up?"

"I don't know."

"Well, we've had a great time, since you left," Frank told her. "There's been a reporter on the front step about half the time. My mother doesn't dare answer the telephone."

"The Name Is Familiar"

BY FELIX B. STREYCKMANS and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Watt
JAMES WATT, who devoted most of his life to the invention and improvement of the modern steam engine, has his name commemorated in the field of electricity instead of steam. The unit of electrical measurement called the watt was named after him, and designates the amount of electricity used in doing work.

He was a Scottish engineer who was born in 1736 and died at the age of 83. In his later years he experimented with an apparatus for copying sculpture.

Not many months before his death he presented copies of busts to his friends as the work "of a young artist just entering his eighty-third year."

The first use of Watt's steam engine was in pumping water from mines. Later, when others suggested making a wheeled cart of it and using it on rails to pull carriages, Watt would not listen to the plans. And so it is that the man who made the steam engine practical died believing that the steam railroad was impracticable.

Maybe, after all, it's just as well that a word in the electrical field instead of steam has been coined to commemorate him.

Galvanism

ONE day in the latter part of the Eighteenth century, while Luigi Galvani, eminent professor of anatomy at Bologna, Italy, was at work in his laboratory, an accident occurred that startled the entire scientific world.

Galvani had placed a dissected frog on a table near an electrical machine. His assistant accidentally touched a nerve of the dead frog while the machine was turning and sending out sparks. Immediately the dead frog jumped into action and went through all sorts of physical contortions.

Galvani was a great professor, an authority on anatomy—he must explain this phenomenon! If electricity could make a dead frog's muscles move, then it must be electricity that made its muscles move when it was alive, he reasoned. Was there such a force as animal electricity? Was, electricity the force that made all animals—and men—move? Wasn't electricity life itself?

Galvani thought so—and he told the world what he thought. The world believed him—even the medical world—and a new word, galvanism, was added to every European language. It meant the force in a living body that gives it the ability to move and remain alive.

And today we still say persons are "galvanized into action" when we mean they have had life put into them suddenly like Galvani's dead frog.

Boycott

THE word "boycott" is a common one and is known to almost every modern language. Originally it was the name of a man and that was only 60 years ago.

In 1830 Capt. Charles Cunningham Boycott, who lived at Lough Mask in County Mayo, Ireland, and who was land agent for a British lord, was so severe and unreasonable with his tenants that they banded together and refused to buy anything from him or work for him.

Their economic strike reached a climax at harvest time when no one would help him with his crops. A gang of Orangemen were sent down from Ulster to aid in the harvest but they went under the protection of a military force from Cavan and elsewhere.

Captain Boycott's troubles attracted wide attention and the Irish Land league successfully used the same tactics to force their demands in other localities, repeating the "Boycott incident." By the time of his death in 1837 a boycott had come to mean the same thing throughout the world. The French word is "boycotter," the Dutch, "boycotten," the German, "boycottieren," and the Russian, "boikottirovat."

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Earthworms are beneficial to the soil in which they live and no effort should be made to remove them. If considered troublesome, lime water will bring them to the surface.

To remove lime in a teakettle boil a little vinegar in it.

After peeling onions rub the hands with a little dry mustard, then wash in the usual way.

To remove ink from carpets, wash the stain immediately with skim milk.

Make a point of keeping the best pieces of old pillowcases and sheets. They are handy for patching and much better than new material.

An ordinary blackboard eraser makes an excellent shoe polisher.

Clear ammonia—pure, not household—will remove paint from windows even when it has been on a long time. Apply with a scrubbing brush.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly straining to get rid of the waste matter that accumulates in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be aching backache, perspiring beads, a dark color to the eyes, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of sap and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder trouble are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

SURVEY SHOWS IMPORTANCE OF HEALTH TO GOOD FARMER

Poor health, often induced by malnutrition, is a widespread cause of economic failure among poor rural families, studies by the Farm Security Administration show.

Cooperating with the States, the FSA, which operates a rehabilitation program for low-income farm families, recently completed a medical survey of 100 Southeastern farm families in the lowest income group. This disclosed that among the 575 persons examined there were 132 cases of rickets among children; 31 cases of suspected tuberculosis; 41 cases of pellagra; 238 cases of diseased tonsils; 360 individuals with defective teeth; and 124 with defective vision.

Some of the ailments were brought about by malnutrition. Medical services alone will not correct such things as rickets and pellagra. These disabilities result from the continued lack of an adequate diet. The FSA is attacking this problem by encouraging homegrown fresh vegetables, fruit and meat. Canning, preserving, and storing for the winter then assure proper diet the year around.

Farm Security officials say an individual often is considered lazy and shiftless when in reality he is suffering from some ailment which medical care can eliminate. For this reason, money is included for necessary medical attention.

Mr. G. Melvin Waters, Lincoln County Farm Security reports that the first full year of operation of the Lincoln County Medical Association was a success in every way. A number of major operations were performed and normal medical attention was given to all members of the association.

NAUTICAL NOTES

The revered U. S. Frigate Constitution, better known as "Old Ironsides" presently may be towed from her home pier at the Boston Navy Yard. Her new berth, it is indicated, will be a harbor front. It is understood that the reasons in support of the shift have come to pass as a result of closing the Boston Navy Yard to visitors. There are thousands of visitors, especially in the spring, summer and autumn months who are desirous of paying homage to "Old Ironsides". Unless the vessel's berth is changed to a wharf where no restrictions are in force, these visitors are destined to disappointment; many make the trip to Boston from distant cities to see aboard the Constitution.

In 1821-24 the Constitution made a cruise and visited 16 different ports.

CITY GARAGE

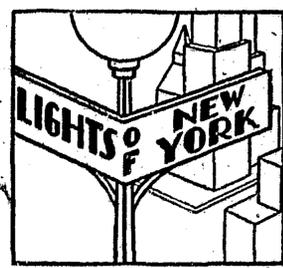

Local citizens are enthusiastically preparing for the annual Elephant Butte Regatta to be staged on Elephant Butte Lake on Saturday and Sunday June 1 and 2, and contestants and racing fans are expecting a program packed full of interesting water events—such as, never given before and that can only be seen on the water in this one local, with all water sports included in the two day event and with a list of top notch racing drivers entered from within the far boundaries of the Mississippi Basin to the Pacific Coast.

This year's meet will be conducted under the plan used last year whereby the proceeds of the purse were distributed to the drivers on a point system, approved by the National Outboard Association, after the expenses of the meet were withdrawn. The purse this year will be a guarantee of $1,000 for the two days to the five winners finishing each race heat.

Each year for nine years the citizens have cooperated for a larger show each time, and without profit to themselves, have developed the event into a nationally known highlight of all water sports held within a large area of the nation. It has become accepted as an annual occurrence and the people in this section look forward to witnessing the fastest boats in the nation.

This year's Regatta will be preceded by a large scale rodeo held on the nights of May 31st, and June 1st, under lights of the local stadium where various exhibitions of roping, wild horse races, bronc riding, bulldogging arena clowning and stunt artistry will be promoted by Johnny Mullins, well known arena director, who has given shows from within Madison Square Garden in New York to Tucson, Arizona's annual rodeo of the west. This will undoubtedly be a large attraction to all the fans and will make one continuous run of entertainment for three days, the like of which has not been equaled in the entire Nation.

In connection to both the rodeo and Regatta will be a dance on the largest pavilion in the area at Hot Springs with all-features floor show artists entertaining during both nights of the rodeo.

By L. L. STEVENSON
 Novelle: She is a small girl and her weight was just under 100 pounds. Seeking a situation as a secretary, she happened to visit a model agency. Before she could make an application, she was employed. Not as a secretary. It seems that a search had been made for a model exactly her height, type and weight. The work proved pleasant and her earnings were such she was soon able to take a small apartment on Riverside drive. One evening as she neared her home, a gust of wind picked her up and threw her to the sidewalk. Her physician said her ankle was broken. Nothing really serious. Merely a few weeks in bed. Recently she was discharged from the hospital completely cured. Practice soon enabled her to walk without a limp. But now she's making the rounds looking for a job as a secretary. Enforced idleness caused her to put on so much weight she can't model.

Here & There: An ungrateful traffic cop writing out a summons for a vegetable truck parked in a "No Parking" area while his horse munches contentedly on greens hanging over the truck's side. . . A fluffy little blonde, looking as fragile as a reed, planting a healthy sock on the chin of the chunky fresh guy who flung a remark to her as she was about to cross Broadway at Fifth. . . Fifty-ninth street hansom cab drivers doing quite a brick business. . . Influence of the season no doubt. . . Four women bridge players stopping to review hands as they leave one of the numerous mid-town clubs. . . and then going on their way to another game. . . A pigeon, perched atop the Pulitzer statue opposite the Plaza, calmly preening its plumage.

Ardent: Frequently those called on by Mrs. Julia Chandler to talk in her Empire State tower broadcasts express political opinions. There is no objection to that but after the broadcasts she has quite a lot of trouble keeping those of opposing viewpoints from clashing physically. That's accomplished largely by diplomacy. Well, the other day, someone asked her if she favored a third term for Mr. Roosevelt. Her reply was that she did. Whereupon, a gentleman in the crowd that clustered about her grabbed her hand and bit her little finger. That's why, just now, while her injury is healing, she is careful to follow the middle-of-the-road politically.

Wilds: In his book, "The Jungle Route," Frank W. Kravigny tells of the building of the Madeira-Mamoré railroad in the jungles of Bolivia, an undertaking that cost at least 10,000 lives or one for every cross-tie. Quinine, says Mr. Kravigny, always appeared on the table at every meal and everyone present took from five to ten grains. In the course of a year in which he worked on the railroad, he swallowed at least 10,000 grains. Thus he escaped malaria. But on his way to his New York home, while still on the Amazon, he became careless, was bitten by a mosquito and fell victim to the disease. Written 30 years later, the book is an interesting, and at times exciting, account of a part in a memorable and tragic undertaking. It is profusely illustrated.

Delay: The other afternoon, a young woman set out to see "Gene With the Wind" at a neighborhood theater. Dinnertime came and still she didn't return. Her roommate, who knew the running time of the film, couldn't understand the delay. Finally, as hours passed, she became so worried she was about to call the police. As she picked up the telephone, her friend came in. After all, the long absence was easily explained. She had merely sat through the picture a second time.

End Piece: Frankie Masters, chatting with an obviously British guest at the Roosevelt, wanted to know how London was reacting to American song hits. He asked about "Oh, Johnny," "Sunrise Serenade," etc., and the Britisher replied they were o. k. Finally Masters mentioned "Scatterbrain."
 "That," replied the guest, "is undoubtedly the stupidest song I have ever heard. You don't play it here, do you?"
 "Play it!" exclaimed Masters. "I wrote it."

Will Creates Puzzle; Money Left to Deity
MURPHY, N. C.—Among the last wills and testaments recorded in Cherokee county, North Carolina, is that of an eccentric woman who left part of her estate to God.
 In an endeavor to settle the case properly, the usual suit, naming God a party thereof, was filed. And at the summons, the sheriff made this response:
 "After due and diligent search, God cannot be found in Cherokee county."

More Trim, Trig Slack Suits Being Worn Than Ever Before

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AT FIRST popularized by women at swank summer and winter playgrounds, then spreading like a banyan tree to include women everywhere, the vogue for slacks has been growing until this summer more trim, trig and versatile trouser suits are being worn than ever before in fashion history.

It is no wonder that women the country over have adopted slacks as the most sensible costume ever invented. For housework they are a cheer delight, likewise for driving, for long cross-country trips, for golf, tennis, picnicking, marketing and for informal dining, slacks have become an enthusiasm that knows no bounds.

Designers who have always had their ears to the ground to catch the trend of women's likes and dislikes have caught this sweeping approval of slacks and have set about creating new and fascinating styles. This has added to the growing demand for American designers—designers who understand the psychology of the American woman. It is interesting to note that Ruth Wade Roy, director of the Vogue School of Fashion Design in Chicago, says that the greatest number of calls they have for graduate designers comes from manufacturers of sports wear. This, of course, includes slacks and shows the nation-wide trend toward simplified smart attire.

The three-piece style we are illustrating is becoming almost a universal favorite in that it is so eminently practical, including, as it does, both skirt and slacks. Yvonne Andersen, a Vogue school pupil, designs this utilitarian threesome of soft yet firm gabardine in a lovely shade of desert green (gabardine comes in a whole lot of other delectable colors). The smart lumber-jacket shirt blouse can be worn outside with the slacks (shown to the left) or tucked in and worn with a narrow belt when a more tailored appearance is desired. A multiple duty feature is added with the skirt (centered in illustration) which, worn with the blouse, becomes a costume for shopping, bridge or almost any place you desire to wear it.

An idea gaining popularity this season is a new version of the lounging pajama. But they're slacks just the same! The trousers are very wide looking, almost like a skirt until the wearer moves about. These are made in soft materials, often with contrasting blouses as shown to the right in the group. In this instance the trousers are in a most attractive clay red and the blouse is of sun-yellow crepe, a coloring in keeping with the environs of a California living room, the theme of which includes a gay sombrero on the wall, a basket to match and candelabra of glittering tin, something very new in household decoration.

So completely have women become converted to the trouser-costume idea, slacks in more or less colorful and designful mood are considered quite proper, have, in fact, become very popular as an informal dinner costume. Certainly they are vastly becoming and have lots of appeal in their accents of gay color. Some of the slacks suits have cunning little jackets to be worn with a sheer blouse and they are smart enough for informal dining or dropping in on your neighbor for an evening of bridge.

Ceramic Jewelry

Something new in the jewelry realm! Authentic copies of genuine old china for necklaces, bracelets, lapel pins and gadgets. Marion Weber, American artist, is the ceramist that is modeling and enameling ceramic charms that bear every resemblance to their originals. In this most attractive ceramic motif, authentic copies of fine old American, English and French pieces are achieved such as one seen in collections at private and public museums. These, interspersed with miniature gold cups, spoons, knives and forks, are suspended from a gold chain or otherwise cleverly assembled to form stunning necklaces and bracelets in the manner pictured.

Shawls for Sports New Fashion Trend

The fashion for wearing shawls has advanced from suits and evening gowns to dresses for spectator sports wear. A gray linen outfit that buttons up the front has a matching gray and white linen shawl with a deeply fringed border.

White Accessories On Style Program

White hats, white shoes, foamy white neckwear, white gloves, buttonieres, and loads of white jewelry, such is the program for the coming weeks.

For flattery try one of the new white chenille dotted white veils. Glorify your navy straw hat with an exquisite realistic huge white rose. Trim your new gray felt hat with white violets repeating the violets on your lapel.

Be sure your white handbag is immense (the larger the smarter) and see to it that your white gloves go elbow length—and so on and so on, for the story of "white" is too lengthy and rife with brilliant high spots to condense in a few paragraphs.

Jeweled Ear-Hooks New Paris Fashion

Newest Parisian earrings hook over the top of the ears and drip chains of diamonds or other precious stones. The hooks are designed of fine gold wire shaped like spectacle frames. They hold a large round diamond against the lobe of the ear, and pendants of pear-shaped jewels over the top of the ear, close to the hairline.

Jersey Slack Suit Has Strong Appeal

Brown and white jersey, in a half-and-half arrangement, is used for an attractive slack suit that may also be worn for lounging. The back of the suit and one sleeve and shoulder are brown, while the rest of the suit is white. The jersey jacket is long and very fitted and has two patch pockets that extend all the way across the front.

Ribbing 'Em
 Two motorists were zipping along at 70 or 80 miles an hour when a police patrol appeared from nowhere and forced them over to the curb.
 "What's the matter, officer?" asked one, blandly. "Were we driving too fast?"
 "No," answered the officer, sarcastically, "you were flying too low."

Maid (peeking through the keyhole)—Really, some people are too inquisitive. There's the missus reading her husband's mail.

Quite Modest
 They were discussing a certain public official.
 "The trouble with him," observed the cynic, "is that he takes too modest a view of his own insignificance."

Discretion
 Hearing someone prowling about downstairs, the timid husband seized a candle and proceeded to investigate, while his even more timid wife buried her head beneath the bedclothes.

Suddenly her husband came upon a burglar, who covered him with a revolver.

"Oh, don't take any notice of me," said the timid man quickly. "I'm only walking in my sleep."

"It's beneficial to yawn when you feel like it," says a doctor. Not when the boss is talking to you.

A Bit Hasty

"So Tom took a course in first aid. Is he good at it?"

"Well, a man was nearly drowned yesterday, and the first thing Tom did was to throw a glass of water in his face."

Keeping Time
 "What's the idea—only two prunes?" roared the British army sergeant.

"You gave the stones twice a week till you got a thousand," said the orderly, "and then you know the war lasted five years all but ten weeks."

Cheapest Light

The most efficient source of light in the world is the glow-worm. Chemical changes on the sugar absorbed by the insect produce the light from which it gets its name.

In this process only 3 per cent of the potential energy is lost, the remaining 97 per cent being given out as light. Compare this to the 12 per cent given by electric bulbs.

HERE'S a beautifully graceful dress that has everything you need to make your figure look more slender and supple. Made with a long, unbroken line in the back, 8631 has a front panel widening toward the hem, (in itself creating the illusion of height as against width because it directs the eye up and down) bodice gathers and shoulder darts. Thus with a few easy details, it assures correct fit over the bust, slenderness of waistline and hips. The deep, narrow v of the neckline adds to its becomingness, and you can trim that, and the sleeve edges, with dainty frills or lace without losing any of the slimming magic! Wear it now in small figured print or dark sheers.

Pattern No. 8631 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires, with short sleeves, 4 1/4 yards of 39-inch material without nap; with long, 4 3/4 yards of 39-inch material. 2 3/4 yards lace or ruffing to trim. Send order to:

Bertha Wished to Know Punishment—Just in Case

"Don't fidget!" snapped mother.

Little Bertha stopped toying with the lid of her chocolate box and endeavored to concentrate upon the play. But it was a dull affair.

In two minutes her small fingers were busy again.

"Now, Bertha," exclaimed her mother, "I warn you."

When her mother spoke like that she was not to be disregarded. Glancing doubtfully at the dull stage, and then at the tempting lid, Bertha whispered:

"Would it be a hairbrush, mummy, or just your hand?"

Where Is Happiness?

Happiness is to be found in the world all about us, in the stillness of a summer night, in the pride of a good thing done, in the flush of a summer dawn, the following of an ideal, the strong grip of a friend, the perfect heart of a rose, or the wild sweetness of a song. It is always very near.—Dame Nellie Melba.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—There is a bitter outcry in the press coop as Air Marshal Arthur S. Barratt tells the correspondents in France that hereafter they must feed on handouts—no more digging out their own stories. British newspaper owners retaliate by calling home the newsmen. It is one of several unfortunate instances of ineffective co-operation between British high command and the newspapers.

Foreign correspondents I have talked to have told me that the British air service, staffed by younger men than is the army, has been far less encumbered with brass hats and bureaucracy, and that its higher ranking officers understood and co-operated with newspaper men. Hence, the handout order, a sweeping decree in barring journalists from all news sources, comes from an unsuspected quarter.

Marshal Barratt was appointed to the command of the newly created unified French-British air force by Neville Chamberlain January 10 of this year. He is 49 years old, a lavishly decorated flier and air officer of the World War, in India at intervals since 1931, senior air officer for India during part of that period. He joined the Royal Flying Corps in 1914 and fought through the war. He has been commandant of the R. A. F. staff college at Andover. Many of the most effective leaders of the British air force have come from the Colonies. Marshal Barratt was born at Clifton, England, and was educated at Clifton college and Woolwich.

IN THESE days, someone is always asking, "Watchman, what of the night?"

"Not so good," says Dr. Alfred V. Kidder, the distinguished archeologist, addressing the American Philosophical society. He thinks the present social order is on the slide.

As he sees it, "the underlying cause" of our present afflictions is the fact that man has made a "cultural machine," that is a new complex of living techniques, which is out-of-hand, unmanageable and quite generally haywire. Henry Adams predicted that at the turn of the century, when he saw, for the first time, a flock of dynamo. He said, in effect, that there would be power like that. That's the end of "The Education of Henry Adams."

Dr. Kidder, with a Harvard doctorate, 1914 model, delved as far into the past as any other living man before his current peek into the future in excavations in Utah, Arizona, New Mexico, Egypt and Greece, he brooded over many a "pöör Yorick" of forgotten ages. Aside from his gloomy preoccupations with destiny, or lack of it, he's a happy man, with five children and apparently a firm belief that the coming smash won't be the final write-off. He is highly renowned in his profession and was president of the Society for American Archeology in 1937.

Unhappily Charles F. Schwab is no longer here to assure us that everything is all right. He used to be helpful in times like this.

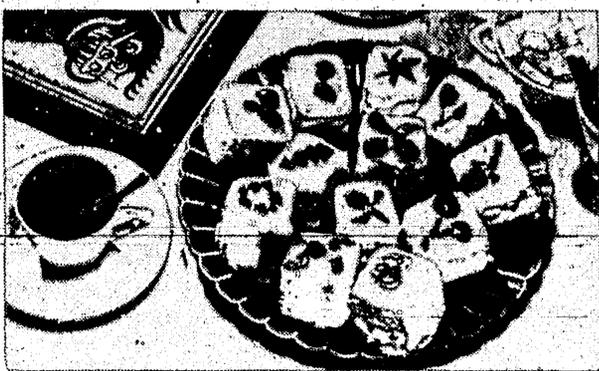

DOROTHY STICKNEY, the actress who gets the Barter Theater award for the best performance of the season in "Life With Father," was virtually blind in her youth. Reared on a North Dakota prairie, the daughter of a country doctor, she had studied elocution and immediately headed for a stage career when her sight was all but miraculously restored when she was 20. At St. Paul, she and three other girls formed a traveling singing and dancing troupe called "The Southern Belles." It faded quickly and she came along up in Broadway by the hard road. Her first big stage role was Moby Mailey, the street walker, in "The Front Page." At Skowhegan, Maine, she met and married Howard Lindsay, co-star in "Life With Father."

Blind Until 20, She Reaches Top By the Hard Way

THE London Times scolds A. P. Herbert, parliamentary gag-man and ironist, for being too funny at a serious time, but he is still at it, this time in a book, "General Cargo," in which he spoofs much of the visible and audible England, before and after Munich. It's all typically British, however, and seems to stick up with what they're fighting for. Frequently his jokes go through channels, appearing in Punch, but sometimes he explodes them in parliament, frequently with salutary effect.

A GET-TOGETHER FOR THE GANG

(See Recipes Below)

Whether it's games for two or the whole crowd, you can flatter the going-on-19 set by serving unusual refreshments that carry an air of sophistication. They needn't be a burden on the chief cook, either, if she masters a few short cuts in preparing them.

Sandwiches, salted nuts, olives and radishes, little cakes and coffee make a spread that appeals to any age, and that is sure to be acclaimed by enthusiastic youngsters. Serve decaffeinated coffee, so that youthful enthusiasm needn't be checked in a demand for second cups; and pass lengths of stick cinnamon instead of opoms to stir this tempting brew. By all means flatter the sophisticated teenagers by using your best demi-tasse cups.

An assortment of sandwiches can be made in short order if you cut the bread lengthwise, after removing the crusts, and buttering. Spread the filling on one big slice, top with another, and cut into half a dozen small sandwiches. You can make attractive little cakes that will look as handsome as the French chef's "petit fours" by cutting a plain loaf cake or plain layers into small shapes. Then cover with frosting, and decorate with candied fruit.

After-Dinner Coffee or Demi-Tasse.
(Extra-Strength)
Use 1½ heaping tablespoons decaffeinated coffee, regular grind, for each cup (½ pint) of water. Make by any method desired. If using decaffeinated coffee grind, measure well-rounded tablespoon instead of heaping tablespoon.

Rolls Sandwiches.
1 loaf bread (very fresh for rolling)
¼ cup butter (thoroughly creamed)
2 packages cream cheese
2 tablespoons cream
¼ teaspoon salt
Red and green liquid food coloring

Remove crusts from a fresh loaf of bread. Cut entire loaf in thin slices lengthwise. Butter each long slice and spread ½ of each slice with a filling made of cream cheese moistened with cream and tinted pink with red food color. Spread the other half with moistened cheese tinted with green food color. Roll like a jelly roll and wrap in a tea towel wrung out of cold water. Chill and then cut into thin slices for serving.

Orange Jiffy Cakes.
¼ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1½ cups cake flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup orange juice
Grated rind—1 orange

Cream butter and add sugar slowly while beating constantly. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing thoroughly. Mix and sift together the flour, baking powder, and salt, and add alternately with the orange juice and grated orange rind. Bake in greased muffin tins in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for approximately 20 minutes.

Cornucopia Sandwiches.
Slice fresh bread in ¼-inch slices. Trim off crusts, so that each slice is about 2½ inches square. Spread with softened butter, and any desired sandwich filling. Roll, to form a cornucopia or horn. Fasten with toothpicks. Chill well before serving.

Fort Atkinson Ginger Creams.
(Makes 3 dozen 1½-inch squares)
½ cup shortening
2 tablespoons sugar
2 cups flour
¾ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon ginger
1 cup dark molasses
1 egg (separated)
1 cup boiling water

Cream shortening and sugar together. Sift flour, soda, salt and ginger, and blend with the creamed mixture using a pastry blender or a fork. Add molasses and egg yolk and beat well. Then add boiling water, gradually, and beat well. Fold in stiffly beaten egg white. Spread batter in greased jelly roll pan (about 11 by 16 inches) and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for approximately 18 minutes. Cool and frost with boiled icing.

College Cakes.
¾ cup shortening
1½ cups granulated sugar
2½ cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sour milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
4 egg whites

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, and beat well. Sift the flour, baking powder, soda and salt together, and add to the creamed mixture alternately with sour milk and soda. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into the batter. Spread in shallow, greased cake pan and bake in a moderate oven (365 degrees) for about 25 minutes. Cool and cut cake into fancy shapes with cookie cutters. Ice with pastel-tinted College Icing.

College Icing.
2 cups granulated sugar
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar
1 cup hot water
1 pound confectioners' sugar (approximately)
Cake coloring

Cook sugar, cream of tartar and water in a saucepan until a thin syrup is formed (225 degrees). Cool slightly. Then add confectioners' sugar to make an icing of pouring consistency. Add coloring, then pour icing over the cakes, covering them entirely. Decorate as desired.

Old-Fashioned Filled Cookies.
(Makes about 30 cookies.)
2 cup shortening
2 cups brown sugar
4 cups rolled oats
1 teaspoon soda
½ cup boiling water
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1½ cups flour
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually. Add rolled oats. Dissolve soda in hot water, and add to creamed mixture with the vanilla. Add flour and cinnamon, and mix well. Chill, roll out very thin, and cut into rounds. Place a teaspoon of date filling between 2 cookie rounds and press edges together with a fork. Place on greased cookie sheet and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for about 15 minutes.

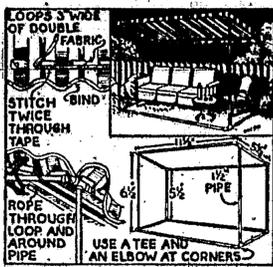

Date Filling.
1 cup dates (chopped fine)
¾ cup sugar
3 tablespoons flour
1 cup hot water
1 teaspoon lemon extract

Combine ingredients and cook until thick. Cool.

He had a plumber cut and thread the pipe so it could be put together easily.

Mrs. Newhouse wanted the shelter to be as cool as a dell, so she avoided all the hot red and orange colorings. The pipe frame was

As You See Yourself

A photographer has discovered that most of us don't recognize ourselves. He takes an ordinary portrait of a sitter, and then makes two prints—one right, and one wrong. In the latter, left becomes right and vice versa.

When confronted with these two images of himself and asked which is the better likeness the sitter invariably picks out the "wrong" print. That is because we are so used to seeing ourselves in the mirror that we don't really know what we look like.

THE FORD WAY OF DOING BUSINESS

The Ford Motor Company was founded by a working-man for working-men. Its present officers began as employees of the Company. It was the first company to pay a minimum wage, beginning in 1914, at the then astounding figure of $5 a day. That was double the prevailing wage of the time. The Ford minimum is now $6 a day for all employees engaged in production work. And from that, the wages rise to $10.80 a day, with the average wage $7.25, exclusive of salaried employees.

The Ford Motor Company was the first large company to establish the 8-hour day—also in 1914. And the 40-hour week was inaugurated by the Ford Motor Company in 1926, years before any such laws existed.

The Ford Motor Company employs men without regard to race, creed or color. It is common knowledge that working conditions in the Ford shops are the best that science and constant care can make them. A square deal, a just wage and stabilized employment for a large proportion of our employees—and as fully stabilized for all as conditions will permit—enable our men to retain their personal independence.

In consequence of these policies the Ford Motor Company has one of the finest bodies of employees in the world. The larger proportion are mature men of long service with the Company—sober, decent family men. Hundreds of them have been with the Company for more than 25 years—thousands for more than 15 years. Their health record, home ownership and citizenship records are good.

All this is reflected in Ford products, whether cars, trucks or tractors. The work is honestly done. Materials are the best that can be made or procured. Less profit to the Company and more value to the customer is known throughout the motoring world as "Ford's way of doing business."

Ford Motor Company was the first to make a motor car within the means of the average family—quitting the manufacture of what was then the largest selling model in the world to do so. Its chosen field in all the 30 years since that that has been the average American family—for which it has consistently provided car facilities which formerly only the wealthy could buy.

It is the policy of the Ford Motor Company to share the benefits of advanced methods and management with workers and public alike. Increased wages and employment over a period of many years have resulted in

A 300 per cent increase in the built-in value of the Ford car and a 75 per cent reduction in its price.

Henry Ford and Edsel Ford keep daily personal touch with all phases of Ford manufacture. In a conference with his staff, Henry Ford often says: "Go ahead—I'll sit here and represent the public."
