Enemies Within The Gates

Events in Europe have underlined and emphasized the urgent need for improving and expanding our national defenses, and making sure that the United States, its shores and its traditional ways of life, are rendered secure.

To do this most effectively, our military experts are of course studying very closely the methods of the "total war" that has overrun so many helpless countries abroad—the modern form of war that, as one observer has commented, is fought "with the morals of the cave and the weapons of an exquisite civilization."

You need to know the danger that faces your country before you can guard against it successfully.

But there is one further step. The manner in which Norway and Poland and Belgium have been brought to their knees was not exclusively based upon military power. Before a blow was struck, security was undermined from within. The advice of Goethe—"Divide and command"—was headed with telling and destructive effect. The "fifth column" of traitors and imported agents did their destructive work before war even began.

The danger that these tactics will be repeated here also faces our own land. It is not enough to have military preparedness; we must also establish internal unity, internal security.

To achieve this aim, certain principles need to be kept in mind:

(1) We must guard—not in a mood of hysteria, but through sound common sense—against the misguided groups and individuals in our own country who do not believe in private enterprise, and would sacrifice it for some other way of life. It is they who, by word or deed, would fill the role of "fifth columnists" in America if the opportunity were ever offered.

(2) We must not let the erroneous thinking of a second group muddle our thoughts on preparedness. This group does not recognize the inseparability of our various freedoms—freedom of speech, a government of representative democracy, and a business system of private enterprise—and its failure to appreciate

"Six-Gun Killers"

Thrilling details of how Lincoln county officers captured Perch-mouth Stanton, notorious killer and gang leader, are revealed in the July issue of Dynamic Detective magazine under the title "Six-Gun Killers!"

Stanton, who shot down Sheriff John Moseley of Tulia, Tex., in cold blood and followed up with the murder of Deputy Sheriff Joe Brown in Rhome, Tex., fled with his desperate gang to New Mexico. In Lincoln county Sheriff McCamant took up the trail and finally cornered Stanton and his partner, Glen Hunsucker. In a fierce gunbattle, Deputy Tom Jones and Hunsucker were killed, and after a long, hazardous man-hunt, Sheriff McCamant and his aides captured Stanton; the fierce little killer who had terrorized two states eventually died on the scaffold.

An epidemic of robberies has struck Carrizozo. Groceries and wearing apparel have been snatched. Also one or two ice boxes have been raided.

The garages at the Court house have been completed, and workmen are now working on the addition to the court house and jail.

Elbert Bates occupied the pulpit at the Baptist Church last Sunday night. It was Elbert's first sermon.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete Johnson and little daughter, were in from their ranch Monday on business.

This important truth is likely to be actually as dangerous as the attitude of the deliberate enemies of our way of life.

(3) We need, at a time when industrial efficiency is so vital to national defense, to guard against attempts to cripple and hobble our manufacturing enterprises. The La Follette bill recently introduced in Congress, a piece of legislation that would prevent manufacturers from guarding effectively against sabotage and subversive activities within America's plants, is a dangerous example of this type.

With these principles in mind, and with the courageous maintenance of national unity and individual patriotism, America can guard against the "enemies within the gates." Without this stand, America invites disaster!

Standard Oil Offers Scenic Views of Southwest

"Thousands of color reproductions of outstanding Southwestern Scenic Views will be distributed, free, to motorists and families in the next few months by Standard Oil Company of Texas," Mrs. M. M. Ward, recently announced. All pictures will be distributed through service stations and garages handling Standard Oil products to motorists calling at the stations and requesting them. No one is required to buy anything. Pictures available in each locality will be scenes within reasonable driving distance. The first picture in the series, a brilliant full-color reproduction of Carlsbad Caverns is now being distributed by local Standard Service Men.

"Fine Southwestern pictures for every Southwestern home" is the object of Standard Oil Company's ambitious program. It is expected that distribution of these pictures will encourage everybody to see the many beautiful scenic wonderlands within easy travel distance.

In this, the enterprise has the hearty endorsement and support of National Park Service officials.

"The average citizen does not realize the accessibility of our Western National Parks," said Frank Kittredge, "Nowadays it is easy to visit new ones each vacation, and these pictures also show you lots of other beautiful places you can visit on the way."

"Nineteen of the 26 National Parks are in the Western States. Every family should ask itself, 'How much have we used these great Natural resources. How many have we enjoyed?'"

To obtain the finest possible pictures of each Western scene, more than 4,000 color negatives, submitted by about 800 amateur photographers, were examined by a group of art critics. Where as happened in several instances—none of the pictures submitted measured up to the high standards set for the project, special trips were made to get a satisfactory view.

Baptist Church Notes

Rev. and Mrs. L. D. Cochran were in Hobbs this week to attend the Baptist Training Union Convention. They were accompanied by Miss Barbara Smith of White Oaks and Misses Eileen and Madeline Stewart of Coyote.

Mr. Tom Shields, his three daughters and Misses Josie and Dorothy Ferguson of Coyote attended the BTU convention in Hobbs this week.

Miss Barbara Smith entered the Better Speakers' contest at the BTU in Hobbs. The other young folks were in the Sword Drill. Miss Betty Shields sang.

Beginning June 10th at 9 a. m. a daily Vacation Bible school will be held at the Baptist church. All children welcome. Ages 6 to 16.

On June 17—the children from the Baptist Children's Home at Portales will be here. Everyone is invited to come to the Church at 8 p. m. on that date to hear their program. You will enjoy it.

The Titaworth Company at Capitan are adding 15 feet to their dry goods department. Last year they built a large storage and ware room for their grocery line. They carry a complete stock of everything.

A Chance To Get Married

The Lincoln Fiesta Committee is looking for a Spanish-American couple, to be married in Lincoln, New Mexico, as a part of their "Day in Old Lincoln" for the Coronado Cuarto Centennial Celebration, on June 20th.

The lucky bride and groom, who are chosen for this occasion, will have in addition to many gifts, a wedding at which will be present, a great many of the States leading citizens.

Any Spanish-American couple wishing to be the central figures in the year's biggest wedding, should communicate with Mrs. J. M. Penfield, of Lincoln, N. M. Organizations, business people, and individuals who would like to contribute gifts to this wedding should also communicate with Mrs. J. M. Penfield, who will see that gifts with donors name are properly displayed.

The Carrizozo Woman's Club, will take full charge of all arrangements for this wedding.

Mr. Florencio Vega spent Thursday and Friday in town.

First Methodist Church

(The Rev. P. N. Bennett, Pastor) Sunday School 10:00 a. m.

Morning Church Service at 11:00 a. m.

Sermon by the Pastor, "How a Christian Sees".

Final decision is to be made at the Sunday Morning Service as to hour of the Sunday School and Morning Worship for the summer months: whether it is to be 8:00 to 9:30 or as at present 10:00 to 12:00. All our people should be present.

Evening Worship 7:00 p. m. Sermon by the Pastor.

Midweek Service, Thursday at 7:30 p. m. All are welcome.

On Sunday, June 16th, we have invited Bishop F. B. Howden, of the Protestant Episcopal Church in this Area, to preach in our pulpit, at the 11:00 a. m. service. The Rev. W. H. Martin of Fort Stanton will also be present. This is a treat which the people of our Church, and the citizens of Carrizozo and vicinity, should not miss. Let us all plan to be present.

Not many people showed last Sunday that they have much thought or care concerning the millions of people who are suffering in the War Areas of Europe. The few who brought their self-denial gifts for the War sufferers did very well indeed. But there should be more than a couple of dozen people in Carrizozo who care. It is not too late to bring your gifts. Any who care to have a part in this may hand your gifts either to the Treasurer, Mrs. Snyder, or to the pastor not later than next Sunday, June 9th. If you care, show it.

Dr. Clyde Snow and party from Lubbock, Texas, went to Three Rivers yesterday to fish.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Snow and children are spending a few days at Ruidoso.

Mrs. Agnes St. John and daughter Mabel came Saturday from Oliver Lee's ranch near Alamogordo and spent a short time here with relatives and friends.

Mrs. Clara B. Walker returned last Thursday from Oklahoma City where she had been to visit her sister who was ill.

Lincoln Co. Coronado Celebration

Among interesting features of the Ruidoso Coronado celebration will be the Mescalero Apache Indian dancers in costumes. Also a caravan of Indian cowboys who will join the caravans from Corona, Carrizozo, Capitan and other places in the county as they go through on the morning of June 14.

Chevrolet Travel Service

Chevrolet's national service program annually reaches more than 27,000 mechanics, all of whom have access to factory methods and factory-approved tools and equipment. The standardization of service that has been brought about through this country-wide training system is the motorist's insurance against any mechanical clouds on the travel horizon.

"Chevrolet dealerships in every country and all major islands in the Western Hemisphere safeguard the tourist's travel pleasure. In our neighbor nation of Mexico, for example, are 39 Chevrolet service stations, as well as some half a hundred General Motors service headquarters. Canada has 425 Chevrolet dealerships, plus another 200 G. M. stations where Chevrolet service may be obtained.

Nazi Parachute Troops Discard Chutes and Run

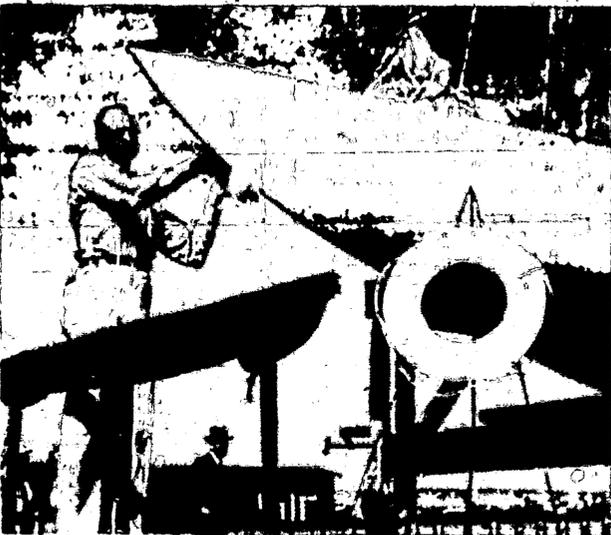

The Nazis' highly effective parachute troops, which have so materially helped the success of the German drive, are pictured in action here. Men of this detachment have just been dropped from a Nazi transport plane. They have discarded their parachutes, assembled their heavy machine gun, and are dashing for the protection of the strategic railway line which runs on the embankment in the rear.

Will American Battleships Come to This?

The whaleback battleship, heavily armored, may be the answer to the threat of the dive bomber, according to the Secretary of the Navy, Charles Edison. Just what a whaleback battleship would look like is shown by this drawing by Otto Kuhler, New York designing engineer. The rounded armored surfaces give maximum resistance to direct hits and deflect striking power. The whaleback fighting ship would present an ultra-streamlined appearance, even the smokestack being built like a fin. ## James Roosevelt Christens His Sloop

James Roosevelt, movie producer and son of the President, is pictured above cracking a bottle of champagne over the bow of his new racing sloop, Half Moon. Young Roosevelt, like his father, is an ardent and capable sailor. He plans on entering his sloop in the spring series of San Diego, Calif., Yacht club races.

Hitler With His Parachutists at Front

In this picture of Adolf Hitler at the western front the Fuehrer is shown, according to the German censor-approved caption, with parachute troops whom he honors by awarding them the Iron Cross. The parachutists are credited with leading the attack on Fort Eben Emael, Liege (Belgium) outpost. Note the crosses, Germany's highest honor.

Invaders From Sky

The launching of an attack by Nazi parachute troops. The parachuters are balled out at one-second intervals, their chutes blossoming out as they dive for their objective.

"The Name Is Familiar"

BY FELIX R. STREYCKMANS and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Pasteurize.
PASTEURIZATION is a term we apply to the process of killing germs in milk because of the discoveries of Louis Pasteur, French chemist. But few of us realize that his discoveries did not come as a result of his interest in milk but in alcoholic drinks. He is the first man to make a scientific study of fermentation and set out to find the cause of sickness in beer and wine.

One of his first discoveries was that the globules of yeast in sound beer were round but in sour beer they were elongated. (He wasn't interested, however, in discovering whether the globules in flat beer were flat.) He found that fermentation was due to minute organisms and when fermentation failed they were absent or unable to multiply. Then he found out that the lactic fermentation of milk was practically the same as that of alcohol and that the bacteria in milk could be stopped from multiplying. His process consists in partial sterilization of milk at a temperature between 131 and 159 degrees which destroys certain organisms and undesirable bacteria.

Pasteurism, also named after Louis Pasteur, is a treatment of liquors by inoculation with germs of gradually increasing strength.

Joshing
BACK in the fifties Henry W. Shaw, a real estate man and auctioneer of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., began writing a series of humorous articles for the local paper under the pen name of "Joshua Billings." The sketches didn't attract much attention so he stopped writing them for a year. Then he adopted a phonetic style of spelling and sent a previously published article, "An Essa on the Muel," (which began "The mule is haf hoss and haf jackass, and then kums to a full stop, natur diskovering her mistake"), to the New York Weekly. It was an immediate success and he began contributing regularly to the New York Saturday Post as well as the Weekly.

Other papers reprinted his work and within a short time he was one of America's most popular humorous writers. President Lincoln was a great admirer of "Josh Billings" and frequently read his "essays" to members of his cabinet, much to the disgust of some of them, especially Secretary Stanton of the war department. After a time people began referring to this humorous style of writing, with its deliberately misspelled words, as "joshing" and that word was a common slang word until it was succeeded by "kidding" as a synonym for "to make fun (of); to chaff; to banter."

Daguerreotype
MORE than a century ago Louis Jacques Mande Daguerre, a French painter of the diorama, an ancestor of the modern movies in that it was a succession of scenes painted on canvas which was caused to pass slowly before the eyes of the observer, made use of the "camera obscura" in his work. It projected the image of landscapes and other objects on the canvas where they could easily be sketched in, thus giving a natural reproduction of the subject.

Daguerre had noticed that chemically treated metal plates would, after several hours' exposure in the camera, retain a faint impression of the object but it soon faded away. So he began to seek a way to catch and permanently record the images on the plate. After experimenting for more than 10 years, during which time he had some aid from another Frenchman, Joseph Niepce, quite by chance he discovered the kind of chemical needed to fix the image on the plate and in 1839 announced his discovery to the world.

Thus was born the modern art of photography and, appropriately enough, the first successful photographs were called daguerreotypes in honor of the man who "harnessed the sun"—Louis Jacques Mande Daguerre.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

A CERTAIN Miss Fixit, and that was not really her name, inherited a house full of furniture that was not old enough to be either quaint or antique. One day she sent for my little Book No. 4, and there she found a sketch showing how to plot a room color plan based on a rug, or a picture, or a piece of drapery material with good coloring. Miss Fixit had a picture that she had always loved because of its beautiful colors. Just for fun, as a sort of game, she made a room color plot based on that picture. Then she suddenly realized that, after all, color is very cheap—anyone can have all they want of it for very little money.

That was really a turning point in the life of Miss Fixit. This old rocker that she made over is merely a sample of what may happen when a clever young lady is bent upon bringing color into her life. The chair has been painted a pale turquoise blue, and the seat cushion and back are covered with an inexpensive chintz in turquoise; cherry red; primrose yellow and deep green, with red bias bindings.

I wish every reader interested in choosing colors for her home might have a copy of my Book 4. It contains an illustrated rule for making a room color plan, based on the colors in a picture; a rug; a vase; or a piece of drapery material with lovely colorings. The rule is so clear and easily understood that I am sure every reader of these weekly articles would be delighted to have a copy. To get your copy, send 10 cents in coin and ask for Book 4. WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—In the last nine years, this typewriter has reported on the achievements of about 7,000 Americans distinguished in the arts of war and peace. If the appraisal of personnel resources is important in a critical hour, the record of this file is encouraging. Hitler has not repealed the axiom that the whole is equal to the sum of all its parts; and that being the case, this onlooker is convinced that we have what it takes, considering, particularly, the requirements for courage and highly specialized ability.

Today's citations of individual preparedness are Rear Admiral John H. Towers, ranking aviation officer of the navy, and Major General H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps. They are flexibly minded men who never have been grounded by precedent. They came all the way up from primitive and hazardous aviation, and from their altitude they have seen farther over the horizon than most of the rest of us. And they warned us.

Admiral Towers is the only survivor of the first three men assigned to naval aviation in 1911. Commander John Rodgers was killed in 1928, and Commander T. G. Ellyson in 1928. Towers himself has had many a close brush with death. It was in May, 1919, that he commanded the transatlantic flight of the wobbly, but determined NC-4. He and his mates, sagging down into the sea, taxied 60 hours over 205 miles to the Azores. In 1913, he was bucked out of a lurching seaplane, caught a strap as he fell and dropped 1,700 feet with the hurtling plane into Chesapeake bay.

The navy's No. 1 flier was born in Rome, Ga., in 1886. Glenn Curtiss taught him to fly at Hammondsport, N. Y. Succeeding Rear Admiral Cook, he became a rear admiral and head of the bureau of naval aeronautics in June, 1933. He is "West Pointer" of the class of 1906.

Major General Arnold, known in the air corps as "Happy" Arnold, for obvious reasons, was assigned to aviation in 1911 and trained by the Wright brothers, at Dayton, Ohio. In 1912 he caught the attention of the then complacent country by riding a clattering chain and sprocket job 30 miles around Washington. In the same year, he coaxed a quaint sort of Currier and Ives plane up to the perilous height of 6,540 feet. It was a national sensation. They began calling him the "ride 'em cowboy" of the air.

When the World war started we had 35 pilots and 53 planes. Lieutenant Arnold was clamoring for more then, and, as general, he has been out in front the last year, insisting that air strength would decide any modern war.

One of his most notable achievements was his brilliant leadership of a hazardous plane survey over the Alaska mountain ranges. He is a native of Gladwyn, Pa., and was graduated from West Point in 1907.

REAR ADMIRAL Samuel M. Robinson blames delay in ship construction to restrictive labor laws, short work weeks and inadequate or qualified appropriations. As coordinator of ship construction, he is cast in an important role in the hard-pressing enterprise of naval expansion. He is chief of the navy bureau of engineering, appointed September 13 and appears in the opening arguments primarily as a technician rather than as a policy adviser. When and if there is a decision as to just what we want to defend, what will be needed to defend it, and how much it will cost, Admiral Robinson will no doubt score highly in the technical "information phase." He is 56 years old, a native of Eulogy, Texas, was graduated from West Point in 1909 and engaged thereafter in never spectacular, but crucially important naval engineering.

A FRIEND of mine, who until a few months ago had lived in Italy several years, tells me that Crown Prince Humbert of Italy not only is a holdout against the Fascist regime, but that he has a tremendous personal following which he could and would launch against Italy's entry into the war. My friend believes that his opposition to the axis and the war must have been sharpened by the fact that his wife, the former Princess Marie Jose, is a daughter of the late King Albert of Belgium.

It's Long Torso Lines, Pleats; Pockets That Give 'New' Look

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN you go in quest of a new silk print frock to add to your summer wardrobe, or if you have the urge and ambition to make your own and are in search of a smart pattern, keep in mind the long torso silhouette, also pleated skirts and over and over again repeat pockets, pockets and pockets for these are high spots among styling items that give the coveted new look at a glance.

A most radical turn fashion has taken this season is to introduce a strikingly different silhouette in the way of long straight and slim torso lines. To add emphasis to the innovation many of the newest tailored cloth jacket suits take on the narrow pencil straight skirts the like of which we have not seen for many a season past.

However, the leading formula for the chic suits of print silk which lead in the summer style parade is the long slender jacket with pleated skirt that shows from below the exaggerated low hipline of the jacket. Very often these skirts are pleated to a hip yoke which stamps them as being decidedly ultra.

The daytime dress that has a long torso top after the manner of the model centered in the illustration is regarded as eminently high-style fashion. In this instance gray silk crepe in two tones is the selected material. Here we see a revival of the 1914 co-ed silhouette in a California fashion shown in the Howard Greer collection. The long-torso top has leaves of the fabric appliqued diagonally across the bodice. The box-pleated skirt is referred to as the new "action skirt" that gives you freedom of movement. The sleeves are notably simple and chic.

There is simply no escaping pockets this season. A glance at the fashion-right dress to the left in the picture emphasizes the idea that pockets have a way of imparting lots of style to a daytime frock of attractive print silk. The patterning of this printed silk crepe features a novel arrangement of wee dot motifs in stripe interpretation, for as every woman of style knows, the emphasis in prints is decidedly on stripes this season. The full-length button opening adds to the sophistication of this dress. This together with the clever pockets of military inspiration combine to achieve great chic. White pique in corded effect edges neckline and sleeves.

As the season progresses it is proving that gray with white or light green or yellow printed design has gone to dizzy heights of popularity. Another important color theme that persists throughout the very latest silk prints is that of brown with white. If you are buying a new print you will be making a wise fashion move if you choose browns as expressed in a brown and white print with which wear a wide brimmed straw hat in the very chic Balenciaga brown, a color that is most flattering. By the way, it is wonderfully good style to wear brown hat and accessories with your gray and white prints, too.

Don't try to go through the season sans a bolero dress. The more you see of them the more you like them and the more you wear a bolero dress the more it endears itself in your affections. Maybe because the bolero type is so youthful, maybe because it is so ever-flattering and most assuredly it is greatly to be coveted and appreciated because of its practicality. Worn with a contrasting blouse a bolero dress can be made to tune to every occasion. The bolero mode pictured to the right is of printed crepe that adopts one of the season's best color schemes, namely, gray dotted in white. The skirt is pleated in smart manner. The ribbon belt is in Cordovan brown and her Flemish off-the-face hat is in gray and white. Milliners proudly refer to gray and white as "co now" for hats.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Starched Lace

Here is a brimful of white lace and running over for that matter for the neckwear repeats the handsome immaculate lace theme. Milliners are increasingly emphasizing the importance of lace and snow white finger touches on hats. Here white starched lace for the brim of her hat and the matching collar on her navy blue dress form the high spots of this stunning costume. Her bag is white patent leather and her long finger nail gloves are navy and red.

Breezy Bretons

Little bretons with sharply turned back brims make up for their small size by adding tall crowns and white lingerie trim

Lace Enthusiasm Prevails in Paris

From Paris collections one gains the idea that leading couturiers are more decidedly lace-conscious this season. Schiaparelli shows gay young clothes that reflect enthusiasm for lace such as narrow lace edging around pockets, on linen dresses and again on fabric crowns, the same removable for washing. Narrow lace also edges gloves, collars, cuffs and blouse fronts. Crocheted lace collars with gloves to match are a charming and unique feature.

The new Paris house, Cavalier, uses large bows of lace on the backs of tiny hats. Fine white Chantilly, also starched Venise lace bands often replace ribbon trims on hats. Lace motifs are also encrusted in huge straw brims. The "last word" in uses of lace is the apron of sheer black lace worn over formal afternoon black sheer frocks. Very stunning, too, are lace aprons worn with pastel or white evening gowns. Lace shawls likewise present an interesting new phase.

Frilly and Feminine
Collars and cuffs to transform a dark basic dress this season have a very fragile feminine air.

Parasol Brims

Where Statues Wore Hats! Mystery of Easter Island

Science Finds Creators of Intricate Script Were 'Long-Eared' Artists.

ON EASTER DAY, 1722, the Dutch Admiral Roggeveen landed on a small Pacific island, which he named after the day. He must have thought that he was landing in a nightmare, for the shores were ringed with gigantic stone statues, wearing tall red hats, and standing on high platforms with their backs to the sea. And the whole island was literally covered with statues! They still stand there today.

Later visitors made further odd discoveries. It seemed that the inhabitants had suffered a devouring national passion for sculpture. Hardly a boulder or an outcrop of rock had not been turned into an enormous bust, a fantastic head with enormously long ears. At the same time, they discovered wooden tablets and other objects covered with a complicated script.

This started a series of the most extraordinary theories, including suggestions that Easter Island had been occupied by Red Indians, Egyptians, and the lost tribes of Israel. But nobody managed to put forward a reasonable explanation of how this diversity of races got there, or went away when their work was done!

Long-Eared Artists.

Then science took a hand. First of all, local legends were investigated, and the islanders told of a migration in the past from a distant island in the west. Proof came from one of the Gambler islands, over a thousand miles away, in the form of another legend. It told of a defeated chief setting sail to find a new home for his people. Local legend also told of two distinct races inhabiting Easter Island, the "long ears" and the "short ears." And here again, science found the proof; for skulls found on Easter island show that migrants came, not only from the Pacific islands, but also from the Australasian islands.

The "long ears" were the artists. It was their tribal custom to stretch the lobes of their ears, and they wore hats for ceremonial purposes. They were the creators of the intricate script which cannot be read, but, defeated by the "short ears," they have faded away and left no one to tell their story.

So far science can speak with authority, but science cannot say why the islanders who migrated to Easter island should have progressed so far beyond those of their race who inhabit other islands.

FRIDAY, JUNE 7, 1940.

Mrs. Era S. Smith, Editor and Publisher

Republican candidates for the nomination for President have for months been inundating the country with an unceasing flood of political oratory and by now have created a strong suspicion in the public mind that any one of them would like to have the National Government delivered into his charge. Indeed one might go farther than that and say that each and every one of them has revealed a consuming passion to bring about that result.

That is all very well from their standpoint, but in order to satisfy their desire the people of the country have to be consulted. They alone have the power to make the decision. Since it is their Government they have the same relation to the candidates as an owner of property has to a prospective tenant or leasee. And, like the property owner, they want to know something about the character, standing and intentions of the person or persons seeking to occupy their premises.

In the present instance the people are being very particular. They had a distinctly unpleasant, not to say disastrous, experience with the predecessors of the present occupants. When the lease of the former tenants expired and they got out, the people made a survey of the house and land and found wreckage everywhere. The occupants and their friends had taken all the fruits of the property for themselves, had put nothing back into the land and had allowed all the buildings to fall into disrepair. The employees were left without work or pay, and all the machinery necessary for the smooth running and upkeep of the place was either destroyed or dislocated.

Toward the end of their stay these former tenants, who had led a life of delirious pleasure, began to have a dim realization of being called to account, and tried to slip away unobserved. But when caught and confronted with their work they excused themselves by saying it was not their fault, that a storm did it, a storm of "world-wide" dimensions. (A depression.)

Since the present tenants have cleaned up the debris, restored the land, put everything in order and set the idle employees to work, the people feel that their property is in good safe hands. Now that it has been rehabilitated, however, now that it has been made attractive and desirable, this great crowd of enthusiasts have been going about trying to persuade the owner to turn it over to them and let them run it. Naturally, with the recent past in mind, the people are carefully examining the references and declared intentions of the intending leasees. And what do they find? Every last one of the candidates for the lease has given as his sponsor and guarantor the same party—the name of the former tenant who ruined the property. They praise his behavior and indicate they will follow the same course.

In such circumstances does any intelligent person suppose the people are going to change tenants?

Live Stock Situation

(By J. A. McNaughton.)

A new top for the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards was set by some California fed steers that brought $10.75 per cwt. These steers were bred by Peter Friis at Hollister, California, and had been fed by students at California Polytechnic Institute, San Luis Obispo. Their sales at a new top for the year is significant in two respects. It calls to attention the fact that an increasing number of California range operators are putting their ranches on a cow or calf basis rather than important stocker cattle from other states. The other significant fact in regard to this new top is that it was set by students, under the guidance of agricultural instructors.

In regard to the latter, it is indeed a compliment to our system of agricultural education that students are able to turn out fed steers good enough to top the market at the Los Angeles Union Stock Yards, which is the source of livestock values for the entire western country. There has been the criticism of the 4-H and FFA program in some parts of the west, that the boys are chiefly taught to feed "show" stock, and that what they learn in fitting one or two animals for show is not of a practical nature. In cases where a 4-H or FFA member buys a purebred calf at a fancy price, feeds it on a nurse cow and a special ration for 6 months or more, this criticism is justified, because such a program certainly has no application in commercial feeding. However, in the case of the Cal Poly boys who sold the $10.75 steers, their feeding operations are as practical as could be imagined. The grand champion load of steers at the 1939 Great Western Livestock Show also came from this institution. These steers were roughed until good grass in the winter, pastured for awhile, and then finished on a ration of largely of home-grown feeds, along with molasses dried beet pulp and cottonseed meal.

There is a definite trend in California for ranchers who have set-up suitable for maintaining a cow herd to devote their ranches to the production of calves to meet the demand for high quality feeders. Costs of operation in California are as high or higher than in any other western state, and for that reason it is essential that California ranchers keep only herds of high quality cows, and buy only the best in range bulls. Use of supplemental feeds and permanent pastures helps carry cattle through the dry season and make it less of a problem to maintain a herd the year around. However, there are a good many California ranchers that are not suited to cow herds, and so there will always be an importation of stock cattle from outside the state.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING By CHARLES B. ROTH OF WHAT CAN A MAN BE PROUD? ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, a gentle and a good man, asked, in dedicating one of his books to a friend, a question which has but one answer. He asked: "Of what can a man be proud if not of his friends?" Friendship is the finest thing in human experience, but it is not confined to the narrow limits of one person to another person. There are friendships of different kinds. For example, there are the friendships of business, and they are surely the finest part of business. Just as a man values his personal friends above almost everything else in life, so does a business value its business friendships. The way a business wins friends is the same way that an individual wins them: by deserving them. First the business must give its friends value for their money. Second it must keep its word. Third it must not neglect them, else they will leave. "Friendship," said wise and candid old Doctor Samuel Johnson, "must be kept in repair." Merchants and manufacturers, realizing this, keep their friendships in repair by going out of the way to give value and service and also by proclaiming their regard for their friends on frequent occasions. The form of these proclamations is advertising, which appears in the newspaper and tells of the values being offered, of the service available and of reasons why you can become and remain their customers to your profit and satisfaction. Business men who advertise realize that friendship is a pleasure—and that it is also a responsibility. Whenever a business man advertises it is a sign that he is seeking the friendship of persons and that he is willing to assume the responsibility of being a good friend. His advertising is a warranty that he will do his best to be worthy of his friend's confidence by providing the best and the most economical goods. You can't keep friends if you cheat or overcharge. His advertising is a proof that he values their friendship and intends to be worthy of it. You can't keep friends unless you are willing to live up to your highest ideals, not only for the present, but also for the future. The advertising in the newspaper is much more than so many commercial announcements. It is an overture toward friendship by a man or a product, which means to be worthy of your friendship. © Charles B. Roth.

Hybrid Corn to be Tested in Lincoln County

Thirteen hybrid corn strains will be tested this year by farmers in Lincoln County, County Agent Radcliff announced today. Arrangements have been completed to run tests on 13 different hybrid varieties of the farms of Messrs. George Smith, of Tinnie; D. P. Brown, of Hondo; and Frank Beavers, of Hollymoor.

Accurate production records will be kept and analyzed by the producers, the New Mexico Experiment Station, and Extension Service workers to determine if there is any real superiority of the corn over that which is usually grown in the county.

A special tour will be held later in the season, at which time producers will be invited to visit the plots and see the results. If any unquestioned superiority for any strain is shown, Radcliff said, the strain will be recommended for general use.

Longer Loan Terms

The opportunity to reduce the annual principal payments or Bank Commissioner loans by reamortizing them over a longer period of years has been opened to many of the 82 Lincoln County farmers who have Commissioner loans, according to a statement received today from the Farm Credit Administration of Wichita.

There were about $69,500 of Land Bank Commissioner loans outstanding in this county at the beginning of 1940 and in addition approximately $213,600 of Federal land bank loans. Some of these loans have already been reamortized.

Most of the Federal land bank loans are already written for long terms up to 30-odd years, but the "Commissioner's" loans were originally made on a 10 year basis, requiring considerably heavier principal payments.

In a recent statement from Washington, A. G. Black, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, said many of the "Commissioner's" loans were being reamortized over a longer period of years in order to ease the payments of farmers with the heaviest mortgages. Spreading out the payments over a longer period will provide these farmers with the same opportunity of working out of debt as already provided for Federal land bank borrowers through long term repayment periods, Governor Black said. Federal land bank loans are all first mortgage loans whereas the Commissioner's loans are made on both first and second mortgage security.

Mayor Elected in Safety Campaign Now Plans to Capture Speed Title

Here you see Mayor Ab Jenkins of Salt Lake City, at his desk, and (below) with his son Marv beside the "Mormon Meteor III," in which they will attempt to establish new speed record. Also (top to the right), the Bonneville salt flats. The salt surface is as hard as concrete and perfectly flat. It is the world's fastest speedway, is the claim.

Salt Lake's Chief Magistrate Will Try for World Record On Salt Flats; Will Also Tour United States.

By RUFUS HARMON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
The unusual spectacle of a mayor of a city of 160,000 driving a racing car at a speed of nearly 200 miles an hour will be enjoyed by several thousand Salt Lake City residents this midsummer. To them, however, it won't be an unusual event at all.

For their mayor is Ab Jenkins, world-famous speed king, who holds more world records than you could shake a stick at.

The odd combination of mayor and speed king is just another chapter in the amazing story of Mayor Jenkins—building contractor, automobile barnstormer, stock-car record breaker, world speed king and now mayor and police commissioner of his own Salt Lake City!

Adds His Livelihood.

Breaking records is no publicity stunt for Jenkins. For many years it's been the means of his considerable livelihood. And inasmuch as the mayor's job in his city doesn't pay a very large salary, Jenkins' world-record attempts this summer will be made for the express purpose of winning prize money to balance the Jenkins' family budget! It is, in other words, his job.

He broke into national prominence in the summer of 1932 when he drove 24 hours, without relief, to set a new world's record for that time and distance. This annoyed the American Automobile association contest board considerably. As a matter of fact, they refused to believe it at all. So the next summer he returned to the same speed site—the now world-famous Bonneville Salt Flats in western Utah—and with the watchful eye of the AAA on him, proceeded to do the same thing and raise his own record.

Aiming at 400 Miles.

There's quite a story behind these flats. Jenkins first drove a car on them in 1926, and was so certain that here was the ideal speed course that he finally badgered an automobile company into letting him try for the world's record which he set in 1932. Then, with bigger things in sight, he labored unceasingly and at his own expense to get Sir Malcolm Campbell to bring his Bluebird out to try and reach the then undreamed of speed of 300 miles an hour. Campbell finally came in 1935, and the result is now familiar history. Campbell did better than 301 miles an hour and was followed by two of his countrymen, Cobb and Capt. George Eyston, who between them have pushed the land speed record to its altitudinous 367 miles per hour figure.

Now Jenkins wants that—and he's aiming at 400 miles an hour!

Just to give you an idea of what Jenkins has done in the way of speed, he has a list of achievements that is almost unbelievable. In his time, he has broken more than 2,000 records, some of them many times.

The Passing Show

Twenty-two years ago Joseph J. Powell, Milwaukee, braved gunfire at Cantigny, France, to deliver a message to the American troops. Last week he was given a medal for it.

Mathematics and fatherless Victor Blenkiewicz, 17, of Chicago, was scooped by his older brothers for playing truant from school. That night he hanged himself.

Motor for $2,800? Nix!

This Mayor Has a Spare

No orthodox mayor is Salt Lake City's Ab Jenkins.

The fire department needed a new motor for one of its hook-and-ladder wagons. A requisition for the motor was brought to the mayor's desk.

"Nothing doing," said he. "Twenty-eight hundred dollars is too much. I've got a motor the department can have."

Ab wouldn't take money for it, either. He turned the motor over to the city as a gift—and was genuinely surprised the newspapers gave the story a big play.

He now holds 294 world speed records. He is the only American to hold any world speed records.

Makes Tours for Safety.

Most of these have been made in his revolutionary series of "Mormon Meteor" cars. His present car of the series is the "Mormon Meteor III," in which he believes he can travel better than 200 miles an hour. Mechanically it embodies new ideas from tip to stern—a 700-horsepower giant that is the racing mayor's brain child in every respect.

But this is only one angle to the amazing achievements of the Salt Lake City mayor. For years he has toured the nation in the interests of safety. He speaks with authority for he has driven nearly 2,000,000 miles without an accident of any kind!

It was on a safety platform, as a matter of fact, that he was elected mayor. That happened last November when from a popular vote of more than 43,000 he won his position by a margin of only 51 votes! As mayor, he is also commissioner of public safety—and since he took office Salt Lake City is witnessing a thorough renovation of its police and fire departments!

Plans Good Will Tour.

Not, however, along political lines. "I don't know anything about politics," Jenkins says, "and I don't intend to learn. This is a nonpartisan city government, and the only people I'm indebted to are those who elected me. They're entitled to the best I can give them, and that's what I'm going to try and give them."

In addition to his world record runs on the Salt Flats this summer, the mayor also is planning a little jaunt across the country as a purely goodwill gesture. In making this trip, he will start at the New York World's fair, finish at the San Francisco World's fair, and between these two spots will greet mayors of 108 cities. At each stop, he'll invite the mayor to come to Salt Lake City, "The Center of Scenic America."

The trip will be interrupted briefly at Indianapolis, where Jenkins has been accorded the coveted honor of driving the pace car that officially starts the annual Indianapolis Speedway's 500-mile Memorial day classic.

Jenkins' car is built to travel in a circle, for on the Bonneville Salt Flats he drives continuously around a 12 1/4 mile course. Its body is set off center to assist steering. This trip was inspired by an earlier adventure of Mayor Jenkins. In 1930, he broke the cross-country automobile record. He piloted a car from New York to the Golden Gate in 88 hours.

"I didn't have time to stop and shake hands with any mayors on that trip," he said, "so I think it's only fair to go back and tell them all hello this time."

Eleanor Makes As Much as F. D.

But Most of Mrs. Roosevelt's Pay Goes to Charity.

By DREW PEARSON
and ROBERT ALLEN

Not many people realize it, but Mrs. Roosevelt makes about as much money as her husband—and gives most of it away. Her last income tax statement contained a list, three and a half pages long, of the individuals and organizations to whom she made donations.

Topping the list was the American Friends Service committee, to which she has given, over the past seven years, a total of $100,000. And she now plans to give them $30,000 more.

Principal source of her revenue, past and present, is radio. When she broadcast for her latest sponsor, she was 3-year-old Joan, paid $3,000 for one of Mrs. Roosevelt's "adopted" children.

Underprivileged children. She never saw the money, however, it being paid directly to the Friends organization each week.

Ham Fish Objects.

On a new radio program, Mrs. Roosevelt declined to reveal the exact amount of this revenue, but she plans to pay off a Friends Service deficit of $30,000.

In this case, however, the Friends Service committee will not get all the revenue. Congressman Ham Fish has seen to that. Roosevelt's "good neighbor" (Fish lives near Hyde Park) howled on the floor of the house two years ago that Mrs. Roosevelt was evading payment of income tax. He insisted that she should list all income, whether she received it or not, and pay tax on it. So Mrs. Roosevelt's present practice is to list all income, pay tax on it, and donate the balance. This cuts heavily into her donations, since internal revenue exempts only 15 per cent of charitable donations.

Few Made Public.

Undisclosed, except to the internal revenue bureau, are hundreds of small organizations and individuals who get from $10 to $1,000 from Mrs. Roosevelt. She has even expanded her secretarial staff to take care of requests from the thousands of people who think she is the fountain-head of private charity.

Only occasionally are these gifts made public, as when the "Foster Parents Plan for War Children" revealed that she had pledged to care for a young Polish girl, Janina Dybowska, in a French refugee camp, at a cost of $8 a month.

Abie to make in a single week more than most men earn in a year. Mrs. Roosevelt is not growing wealthy. She balances her budget by giving away practically every dollar she makes.

When the war began, Mrs. Roosevelt told the Red Cross to put her down for a regular contribution of $50 a month for relief in Europe. She made the same commitment to the American Friends Service committee, this being over and above the weekly thousands which it gets from her new radio program.

And for years, Mrs. Roosevelt has poured thousands into the home-stead project at Arthurdale, W. Va., where the school depends almost entirely on her support. Meetings of the school board are held at her guests in the White House.

IF YOU'RE ENTERTAINING THE BRIDE

(See Recipes Below)

No sooner is the June bride back from her honeymoon, than the business of cooking for two begins! Feeding her new husband will be an important part of the bride's responsibility, and any of the successful homemakers she knows can tell her that perfectly cooked meals for a hungry husband help to keep the matrimonial ship sailing merrily along.

So, why not a kitchen shower for a bride—using for gifts the inexpensive little "gadgets" that will make her hours in the kitchen pleasant? These are the things the bride isn't likely to buy herself and the very fact that they are small and inexpensive means that she isn't apt to get them, either, among her wedding gifts.

Small, matching pottery pots for chives and parsley to grow on a sunny kitchen window sill, make a thoughtful gift for a kitchen shower; a set of pastel tinted bowl covers is practical and very moderately priced; butter paddles, a french potato ball cutter and small earthenware pots for baking beans are out-of-the-ordinary kitchen gifts. Any bride will bless you for starting her kitchen library for her—with her own copies of my homemaking booklets: Better Baking, Easy Entertaining, Feeding Father and Household Hints.

And speaking of a kitchen library—why not start a collection of favorite recipes for the bride? Have each guest at the shower bring her very choicest recipe, neatly written on a card for the bride's new recipe box, with the donor's name and the date of the party just for fun. Give her the recipes, too, that make up the menu for the day.

Food, for a kitchen shower, should be "homey," and informally served—and planned to give the bride suggestions for her own cooking and baking problems.

Menu for a Kitchen Shower.

- Noodle and Tuna Casserole
- Spring Vegetable Salad with French Dressing
- Butter
- Orange Rolls
- Cheese Scones
- Angel Food Cake
- Strawberry Sherbet
- Coffee
- Fresh Strawberry Sherbet.

Combine 1 cup of crushed strawberries and 2 tablespoons of lemon juice. Scald 1 pint of milk, add 1/4 cup of sugar and stir until dissolved. Soak 1 tablespoon of unflavored gelatin in 1 tablespoon of cold water for 5 minutes and dissolve in hot milk. Add 2 beaten egg yolks, blend, and remove from flame and cool. Add fruit mixture to milk mixture and fold in 2 beaten egg whites. Assemble in ice cream freezer. Pour sherbet mixture into the freezing container. Adjust dasher and cover tightly. Then fill the ice chamber with a mixture of 3 parts chipped ice and 1 part salt and turn crank slowly for about 5 minutes to freeze. Repack and allow to harden.

Orange Rolls.

(Makes 18-20 rolls)
1/2 cup sugar
1 teaspoon orange peel (grated)
2 1/4 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon sugar
4 tablespoons shortening
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
3 tablespoons butter (melted)
Mix 1/2 cup sugar and orange peel thoroughly and allow to stand while making rolls. Sift and measure the flour, then sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and 1 tablespoon sugar. Cut in the shortening. Beat the egg slightly and add the milk. Stir into the flour mixture. Turn onto a lightly floured board and knead 30 seconds. Shape into a long narrow roll and roll out into a rectangle to about 1/4-inch thickness. Spread the dough with the melted butter and the sugar and orange peel mixture. Roll up like jelly roll and cut off in 1/4-inch pieces. Place rolls, cut side down, on a well-greased pan and bake about 20 minutes in a hot oven (425 degrees).

Barbecued Steak.
(Serves 6.)
2 pounds round steak
3 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons vinegar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1 teaspoon onion, grated
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon chili sauce
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon brown sugar

Cut steak into pieces for serving and sear in frying pan. Melt butter, add vinegar and all other ingredients. Heat thoroughly and pour over the seared steaks. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for approximately 1 1/2 hours. Baste frequently with barbecue sauce while baking.

Prize Angel Food Cake.

1 1/2 cups sugar
1 cup cake flour
1 1/4 cups egg whites
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cream of tartar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
Sift sugar once. Add 1/2 cup of it to the flour and sift together 3 times.

Beat egg whites with rotary beater until frothy, add salt and cream of tartar and continue beating until eggs hold their shape. Add sugar gradually, beating thoroughly after each addition. Add vanilla extract. Then fold in the flour, 1/2 at a time. When all flour is in, fold a few additional times. Then place in large ungreased angel-food pan. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees) for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Invert and let cool in pan.

French Dressing.

1/2 cup salad oil
1/4 cup lemon juice or vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
Paprika to color
Few grains cayenne

Place ingredients in covered jar. Chill thoroughly. Just before serving shake vigorously. There are many ways to vary french dressing. The acid may be lemon juice, vinegar, or half and half. A few drops of onion juice may be added, or shake a cut garlic clove with the dressing (removing it before serving). Dry mustard may be added. Worcestershire sauce may also be added, as may creamed Roquefort cheese.

Cheese Scones.

2 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup American cheese (grated)
1/2 cup milk
2 teaspoons prepared mustard
Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and paprika. Cut in shortening. Add cheese. Then add milk and prepared mustard which have been mixed together. Roll out to 1/4-inch thickness on lightly floured board. Cut in triangles and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees) for about 20 minutes.

Percolated Coffee.

Allow 1 tablespoon ground coffee to each cup of water. Place coffee in strainer part of percolator. Add cold water. Adjust top. Heat until coffee just begins to percolate. Then turn heat very low and allow coffee to percolate slowly 8 to 10 minutes. Do not boil.

Garrulous Fool

A fool's voice is known by multitude of words.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after ten years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of their value. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who have used Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.
These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a safe, reliable treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and misery it causes.
If most people were aware of how the kidneys most constantly remove waste that clogs up in the blood without injury to health, they would be better satisfied regarding why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medicines would be more often employed.
Remember, kidney and bladder irritation sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer sleeping backache, frequent urination, burning or stinging, getting up at night, swelling of ankles, getting the eyes—red, weak, nervous, all pained out.
Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has tried, worldwide fame than to use something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

The ambulance rumbled along slowly. Sheila's thoughts wove back and forth dreamily. Now that the first horror was over she felt oddly weary and weak. Her shoulder hurt her, and her head ached dully; she was all right, she told herself, no harm had been done, but oh—how good it would be to get home to Mother, to be away from the crowd, and the voices and the questions! She need never see the pantry at the Fendergast again, never take orders from Mr. Benny. In a few hours more she would be safe in the beloved home kitchen, talking to Ms. watching Angela's round eyes pop out of her head with excitement; she would be drinking a cup of tea the way she liked it, reaching to the stove for her toast—"Isn't it getting dark early?" Frank said, suddenly rousing from the stupor into which he occasionally seemed to lapse.

"It's nearly five, Frank," Sheila said.

"Five!"

"Yes. I just saw a clock."

"These things take time, you know!" the nurse observed soothingly. Sheila, sick and shaken as she was, thought that she must remember that to tell Joe.

The poor pilot, she mused. One minute floating over the gray-white panorama of beach and wintry world, and the next minute just that still form, that trampled depression, in the snow.

"I've been in a terrible accident!" she thought. And then, wearily, "But what haven't I been through in the last few weeks?"

"Does it feel good to be back in New York, Sheila?" Frank said, opening his eyes.

"Oh, does it! I was just thinking. My heart is pumping so, I can hardly breathe."

They were in the city streets; the ambulance bell was ringing steadily now, and Sheila could see the sidewalk crowds cycling them interestedly as they went through.

"I had them telephone Mother I'd hurt my arm, and to have Doctor Underwood at the house," Frank said. "Well! Not much more of this, eh? We'll be comfortable in no time now, Sheila."

"When on earth could you phone your mother?"

"I had the police sergeant do it, asked him to telephone. Just to say that there'd been a smash and that we were all right, and on our way in. I told him to say that Mother was to use her own judgment about getting in touch with your mother."

"Ma's probably got the fire department out!" Sheila exclaimed, aghast.

"Well, the poor fellow was killed, Sheila, and you can't avoid a certain amount of interest in that."

"To be in an airplane smash—" Sheila murmured, struck afresh with the strangeness and horror of it.

"I took my training at Bellevue," the nurse said, as they stopped at a Broadway stry, "and my first case was a fellow that had come down in a plane." She was diverted.

"For goodness' sakes look at the evening paper!" she exclaimed. And, glancing eagerly out at a corner newsboy, she read a headline: "Mystery Girl in Plane Crash!"

For a minute the words meant nothing to Sheila. Then her heart gave a great spring. In the remaining few seconds that they waited at the corner, she leaned forward and saw the front sheet of the paper, the hurried blurred photographs of the group in the park, the plane's great fallen wings, the lifted form of the dead man.

"That's the crash, all right," Miss Sutter said. "It doesn't take long to get things into the papers nowadays, does it? But where do they get that 'mystery girl' stuff? You and—" She glanced at Frank and then at Sheila. "You're his wife, aren't you?" she asked.

"Oh, no. Mr. Mc Cann was just bringing me home," Sheila said, with a queer, affronted little laugh.

"Oh, I see—" the nurse said, in a peculiar tone, with a quick glance.

"Mr. Mc Cann," Sheila explained, in a low tone, with a wary look at his closed eyelids and unconscious face, "is engaged to be married to a Miss Bernadette Kennedy, of Spuyten Duyvil."

The nurse's young bright eyes were sympathetic.

"You two were trying to get away with something, hey?" she guessed shrewdly, smiling. "I don't mean anything wrong, just—" she paused. "For heaven's sake!" she said.

"I wish I was dead," Sheila said simply. Frank muttered incoherently.

"He'll be all right when he gets his arm set," Miss Sutter said in a whisper. "He's dazed with shock."

"That isn't what's worrying me," Sheila answered, dully. "It's what my mother'll think, and what his people will think."

"But my good gracious, it isn't your fault if you're in an accident!" the other girl said quickly.

"No, of course not," Sheila admitted, uneasily. "But—but it just seems as if everything had gone crazy!" she lamented.

Frank opened his eyes.

"Don't worry, Sheila," he said, in a deep, reassuring voice, that still had traces of stupor in it. "I'll take care of you. We're all right!"

The car turned a corner; they were at the Mc Cann house.

"Oh, God, protect us!" Sheila said in a whisper. It was a prayer. Oh, Frank, she said, "look! There's a million people waiting!"

Not a million. But a crowd that framed both sides of the brown-stone steps; a crowd that demanded the constant attention of two policemen. Men were pressing forward, women were planted in solid lines; all turned their eyes eagerly to the ambulance as it drew up.

"Frank, I can't go in, I'm going on home," Sheila stammered, aghast. "I can't—they've a camera there—"

He had pulled himself together, he gripped her hand.

"No," he said, "you've got to go through with it. Your mother may be here. Come on, just walk through—"

The crowd buzzed excitedly, as Sheila and a policeman between them supported the limping man across the sidewalk.

"Narrow escape, Mr. Mc Cann!" one of the policemen said, respectfully.

"I'll tell the world!" Frank answered, with a groan and a smile. The crowd laughed in shocked sympathy.

Sheila looked up. The door of the Mc Cann house opened, a flood of persons poured out; servants, family, and the gray-headed stout man that she was afterward to identify as the family doctor. And with them was Joe Carscadden—Joe!—and while Sheila was stumbling upward to the lighted wide hallway, half dragging Frank with her, and half dragged herself, she saw her mother, majestic in her best dress—

Then they were all crying and milling about madly in the hall. Sheila saw Mrs. Mc Cann, with her face white and tearstained, and she saw the judge, looking somehow old and broken. She caught at his hand.

"Judge, I'm so sorry—" she faltered.

Judge Mc Cann brought his distracted gaze to her face.

"Now, now, Sheila," he said gently, "accidents will happen! And he returned immediately to the business of the moment. "Put your arm around him there, Leo. All right, Mary, hurting you, son?"

"It's my arm, look out for my arm—" Frank muttered, and the mother's moan was distinguishable above the other moans that suddenly filled the hall.

"My darling, my son—"

"We'll get you right upstairs, Frank; we'll fix you up in five minutes!" the doctor said.

Brothers, sisters, servants, parents, they surged about him. His voice rang out suddenly, as he was being tenderly lifted upstairs.

"Is Sheila there?"

"Right here, son," said his father.

"Sheila, I must see you before you go!"

"Anything, dear's, anything!" Judge Mc Cann said, faltering, and Sheila heard Frank's effort at a laugh.

"I'm not dying, Pop. I want Doc Underwood to look at her, that's all. She's done something to her shoulder—"

"They've broke him completely!" Sheila heard her mother say, in a whisper, and Mrs. Mc Cann said weeping, "Oh, Mrs. Carscadden, how they break your heart on you—the children."

Frank gave another groan as they lowered him against the pillows.

"Poor dear!" his mother, bending over him, said tenderly. She began to pray in a low voice.

"Mother, I'm all right. And the doc has a lot of dope for me, haven't you, Doc?"

"I'm going to fix you up right here in the dressing-room, Frank," the old doctor said. "Doctor Russell is on his way from the hospital now. When he gets here we'll give you a shot, put you to sleep."

"Doctor, do you think there may be internal injuries?" The frantic mother again asked. Frank answered:

"Internal injuries, Mother—forget it! I'm fine. Give you a scare, Pop?"

"Good God!"

"We came down," Frank observed briefly.

"It was in the paper, Frank. That's the way Pop saw it."

"In the paper!"

"The late afternoon edition, with pictures, dear."

"They don't lose much time! Lord, I'm sorry!" Frank muttered.

"Ouch!" Sheila exclaimed, on a weary and desolate echo of a sob. The old doctor, gently exploring her shoulder, apologized sympathetically.

"Go easy on her," Mrs. Carscadden warned him. Sheila, completely disarmed by the concern in the beloved voice, began to cry bitterly as she slipped her bare, bruised shoulder back into her dress and straightened the tumbled ruffle of white at her neck.

"You had a narrow escape, my dear!" the doctor said, gravely.

"Don't I've me again?" Mrs. Carscadden said in a whisper. Sheila clung to her, their wet faces touching, her mother's arms about her.

CHAPTER XIV

Frank moved his own shoulder restlessly; groaned.

"Wouldn't you know the damn thing—" he began mildly. He put his uninjured hand on his mother's bowed head. "How'd you hear of it, Mother?" he asked.

"Oh, Frank, that was so terrible! God grant we never have that to go through again! Pop saw it in the paper, but I got it over the telephone. It was the police, dear, from Newark. The man said, 'Mr. Mc Cann—has been slightly injured!' I thought of course it was Pop."

"That must have been hot!"

"It wasn't any better when I learned the truth, dear. Mamie had to take the phone. I got faint. They fixed me up on the sofa, and they tried to reach Papa; but they couldn't find him."

"I'm so sorry!" Frank said heavily. The look that was almost coma had come into his eyes again.

There were fewer persons in the room now. The younger brothers and sisters were being firmly ejected, one by one, by a powerful, big black-headed woman who was being cajoled by them under the name of "Diddy." They were imploring Diddy to allow them to remain, and Diddy was sternly refusing.

Mamie and two younger maids were running back and forth, in and out of a large, adjoining dressing-room, with sheets, tables, electric-light extensions. Someone had lighted a fire, someone else had drawn shades, someone was standing now with a tray and a steaming cup beside the bed, somebody else had ice in a bowl and was murmuring about "comprizes."

An elderly woman, majestic and assured of demeanor, and identified as "Gramma," had established herself in a great wing chair, near enough to the bed for a clear view of all proceedings; Judge Mc Cann stood at the foot, his graying, black curly hair-rumpled, his face grave and pale, his eyes for his son only. There were others beside Sheila and her mother; the big luxurious room was full of movement. The doctor, having finished a quick examination of her shoulder, drew Sheila toward the bed.

"No harm done here, Frank. She wrenched her shoulder and scratched one side of her face."

"Not broken?" Frank asked eagerly.

"Nothing broken."

"We're going now," Sheila, beside the bed, said timidly. "I hope they won't hurt you, Frank."

His eyes were beginning to burn brightly with fever; he caught at her hand. She looked shabby, tired, sick; there were great rings about her eyes; her lashes were stuck together in long points. Her hat had been lost in the crash, and her soft coppery hair was uncovered in the evening lamp-light. Frank remembered that she had not wanted to fly home; she had said she was afraid of it, and he had made her do it!

Remorse surged in his heart. There was something about this poor little luckless thing that had appealed to him in the very beginning of their acquaintance; it was stronger than ever now.

"I'm glad, if anything had to happen, it happened to me!" he said.

"It was my fault, Mom, you mustn't blame this child. She's been—"

He tried to smile, but he was weak and in pain; his tears came instead.

"She's been wonderful," he said. "Down in Atlantic City, all this time. I knew it. Her own mother didn't know it. She's such a scary little thing, Pop; she didn't want to come home to face you all. I talked her into it." He looked up at her through misty eyes, managing a sickly smile. "We didn't know our adventure was going to end like this, did we, Sheila?" he said.

"We won't say that," Judge Mc Cann said. When she heard his voice Sheila's heart sank within her, for it sounded as if Frank might be dying—Frank might be dying—

"God knows me heart's broke wit' the trouble me an' mine have brought on ye, sir!" Sheila's mother was saying, as they all went out into the hall. "But I know her—there isn't a bad bone in her body!"

"Mrs. Carscadden—" Mrs. Mc Cann said in a whisper. Her face was ghastly. "We knew nothing of this," she began again. "My son Frank has always been—we've depended on him!" she finished faintly.

"You mustn't break, Mamie!" the Judge said. But he looked broken himself.

"Is he so sick?" Sheila faltered, bursting into tears.

No one paid any attention to her. Judge Mc Cann, always grave and kindly, addressed Sheila's mother: "Mrs. Carscadden, as soon as the boy is out of the woods I'll get in touch with you."

Sheila's mother appeared not to be listening.

"He said it. But I don't believe it!" she said, in a dull, stricken tone.

"Nor I, either," the Judge agreed. "There's some explanation—"

"No—no—no, he'd never do that!" Mrs. Mc Cann said in her soft, eager voice. "He never—they never thought—that was all!"

"Well, well, well," the Judge said, "we'll straighten it all out. God's ways are not our ways. And the young people today are not what we used to be!"

"Indeed, you're right about that!" said Sheila's mother.

They were working their way downstairs; Sheila and Joe, and their mother, and the senior Mc Canns, and various other unidentified persons, servants, cousins, aunts.

Among these Sheila had confusedly noticed, from the beginning, a pretty, black-eyed girl in a dark red suit trimmed with black fur, and a dark red hat. If she had tried to identify this girl at all she might have placed her as one of Frank's younger sisters; he had three besides Veronica, she knew, or she might have supposed her to be a concerned, pretty cousin. But as a matter of fact the group had been so large, and so mixed, and the babel of voices and the general movement so distracting, that Sheila, although she had distinctly observed this girl, had wasted no thought whatever upon her identity.

But now, in the lower hall, the girl suddenly took the center of the stage by arresting them all with a quick imperative word to the judge.

"Judge Mc Cann, and Mrs. Mc Cann, too," this girl began, in a high-strung and haughty voice. "I'm going. You'll understand—you'll understand, of course, that this changes everything."

"Oh, Bernadette, my dear!" Mrs. Mc Cann said, in a heartbroken tone.

"You must see that!" the girl said, in a quick, feverish manner. She stood close to Mrs. Mc Cann, her fingers nervously busy with her lace collar. "You see that?" she asked.

"Bernadette," the Judge said, "don't be too quick to judge him. We mustn't jump to conclusions. In a few days—when, God willing, he'll be better—"

"No, never!" the girl said with spirit. "Never! You heard what he said. He never saw me. He never spoke to me! It was—it was—"

She began to choke, flung up her head, was silent.

"Bernadette, dear," Mrs. Mc Cann said, her arm about her, "control yourself. I feel as bad as you do. It doesn't seem possible it's Frank! But let's give the poor child the benefit of the doubt."

"Doubt!" the girl echoed quickly, with a scornful laugh. "You heard what he said!"

"Bernadette," said Mrs. Mc Cann, "you know as well as I do that Frank Mc Cann is incapable of anything underhand—"

"Underhand!" The girl caught up the word again, angrily. "I don't know what you call it. Engaged to me, he was visiting this—this girl down there at Atlantic City! I don't care—I don't care whether he was living with her or not!" she rushed on recklessly, and the judge and his wife and Sheila's mother recoiled from the phrase as if from a blow. "That doesn't make any difference!" Bernadette Kennedy said, beginning to sob. "What difference does that make, as long as we know that he knew she was there, and was going down to see her—and her own mother didn't know where she was—and even the papers didn't know it—look at them!"

"Why, that's a lie!" Sheila said, understanding at least. "That's a lie! Frank never telephoned me in his life!"

"Oh!" breathed Mrs. Mc Cann, "this is terrible!"

"I wouldn't believe anything you said, if you swore it on the Gospels," Bernadette said, in a low, trembling tone, turning toward Sheila.

"I wouldn't care whether you believed me or not!" Sheila returned fiercely.

"You ruined Peter Mc Cann's life, and Gertrude Keane's life," Bernadette flung at her, breathlessly. "You might as well know it, you've ruined all our lives! While your mother and brother were worrying themselves to death about you, you and Frank—who's a hundred thousand times too good for you—you and Frank were down at Atlantic City! The papers no sooner get through with denying you're married to Peter Mc Cann than they have you in an airplane smash with Frank!"

brought on ye, sir!" Sheila's mother was saying, as they all went out into the hall. "But I know her—there isn't a bad bone in her body!"

"Mrs. Carscadden—" Mrs. Mc Cann said in a whisper. Her face was ghastly. "We knew nothing of this," she began again. "My son Frank has always been—we've depended on him!" she finished faintly.

"You mustn't break, Mamie!" the Judge said. But he looked broken himself.

"Is he so sick?" Sheila faltered, bursting into tears.

No one paid any attention to her. Judge Mc Cann, always grave and kindly, addressed Sheila's mother: "Mrs. Carscadden, as soon as the boy is out of the woods I'll get in touch with you."

Sheila's mother appeared not to be listening.

"He said it. But I don't believe it!" she said, in a dull, stricken tone.

"Nor I, either," the Judge agreed. "There's some explanation—"

"No—no—no, he'd never do that!" Mrs. Mc Cann said in her soft, eager voice. "He never—they never thought—that was all!"

"Well, well, well," the Judge said, "we'll straighten it all out. God's ways are not our ways. And the young people today are not what we used to be!"

"Indeed, you're right about that!" said Sheila's mother.

They were working their way downstairs; Sheila and Joe, and their mother, and the senior Mc Canns, and various other unidentified persons, servants, cousins, aunts.

Among these Sheila had confusedly noticed, from the beginning, a pretty, black-eyed girl in a dark red suit trimmed with black fur, and a dark red hat. If she had tried to identify this girl at all she might have placed her as one of Frank's younger sisters; he had three besides Veronica, she knew, or she might have supposed her to be a concerned, pretty cousin. But as a matter of fact the group had been so large, and so mixed, and the babel of voices and the general movement so distracting, that Sheila, although she had distinctly observed this girl, had wasted no thought whatever upon her identity.

But now, in the lower hall, the girl suddenly took the center of the stage by arresting them all with a quick imperative word to the judge.

"Judge Mc Cann, and Mrs. Mc Cann, too," this girl began, in a high-strung and haughty voice. "I'm going. You'll understand—you'll understand, of course, that this changes everything."

"Oh, Bernadette, my dear!" Mrs. Mc Cann said, in a heartbroken tone.

"You must see that!" the girl said, in a quick, feverish manner. She stood close to Mrs. Mc Cann, her fingers nervously busy with her lace collar. "You see that?" she asked.

"Bernadette," the Judge said, "don't be too quick to judge him. We mustn't jump to conclusions. In a few days—when, God willing, he'll be better—"

"No, never!" the girl said with spirit. "Never! You heard what he said. He never saw me. He never spoke to me! It was—it was—"

She began to choke, flung up her head, was silent.

"Bernadette, dear," Mrs. Mc Cann said, her arm about her, "control yourself. I feel as bad as you do. It doesn't seem possible it's Frank! But let's give the poor child the benefit of the doubt."

"Doubt!" the girl echoed quickly, with a scornful laugh. "You heard what he said!"

"Bernadette," said Mrs. Mc Cann, "you know as well as I do that Frank Mc Cann is incapable of anything underhand—"

"Underhand!" The girl caught up the word again, angrily. "I don't know what you call it. Engaged to me, he was visiting this—this girl down there at Atlantic City! I don't care—I don't care whether he was living with her or not!" she rushed on recklessly, and the judge and his wife and Sheila's mother recoiled from the phrase as if from a blow. "That doesn't make any difference!" Bernadette Kennedy said, beginning to sob. "What difference does that make, as long as we know that he knew she was there, and was going down to see her—and her own mother didn't know where she was—and even the papers didn't know it—look at them!"

"Why, that's a lie!" Sheila said, understanding at least. "That's a lie! Frank never telephoned me in his life!"

"Oh!" breathed Mrs. Mc Cann, "this is terrible!"

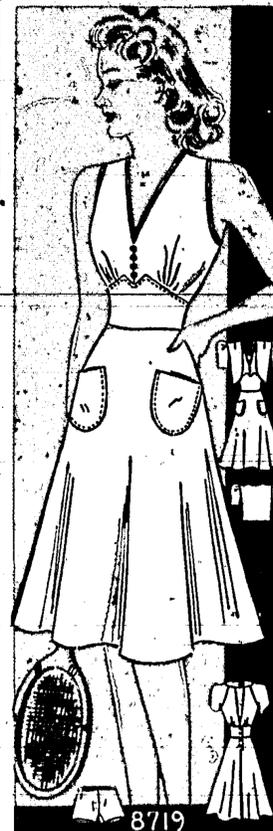

"I wouldn't believe anything you said, if you swore it on the Gospels," Bernadette said, in a low, trembling tone, turning toward Sheila.

"I wouldn't care whether you believed me or not!" Sheila returned fiercely.

"You ruined Peter Mc Cann's life, and Gertrude Keane's life," Bernadette flung at her, breathlessly. "You might as well know it, you've ruined all our lives! While your mother and brother were worrying themselves to death about you, you and Frank—who's a hundred thousand times too good for you—you and Frank were down at Atlantic City! The papers no sooner get through with denying you're married to Peter Mc Cann than they have you in an airplane smash with Frank!"

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

A teaspoon of mixed pickle pieces tied in a small bag and added to the water in which fish, ham or tongue is boiled, will add a very pleasing flavor.

When refilling a feather pillow crush a small block of camphor and mix in with the feathers. This will keep the feathers "fresh" and will help to preserve them.

If liquid in which olives are bottled is thrown away when bottle is opened, olives may be kept indefinitely if olive oil is poured over them after they are put back into bottle.

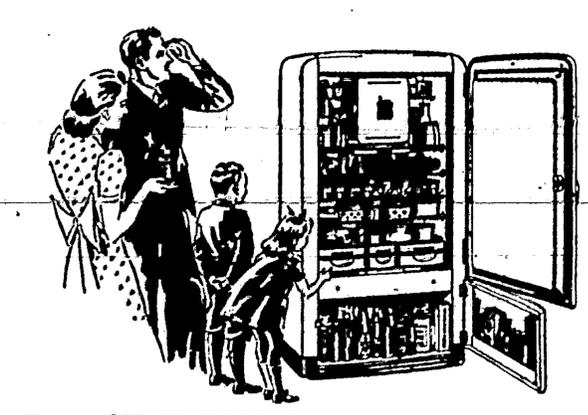

Art gum may be used to clean gloves, shoes, and wall paper.

To protect the surrounding wall when cleaning electric light switch plates, cut a hole the size of the plate in a piece of cardboard or heavy paper and lay it on the wall so that just the plate is exposed.

The first element of success is the determination to succeed.

Look 20 Years beyond the Refrigerator you buy today

Every NORGE ROLLATOR REFRIGERATOR is backed by the reputation and the resources of the great BORG-WARNER CORPORATION, world-famous manufacturer with 20 factories in 5 states

When you buy an electric refrigerator, look wisely to the future. Look 10 years ahead... or 20. Look beyond the refrigerator as it stands today, new and bright and gleaming. Visualize the greatest needs which it may be called to meet in the years to come. Consider the satisfactions of service well rendered that can come only from a product ably engineered and ably built by an organization experienced in precision manufacturing.

Such an organization is Norge, backed by the resources and engineering skill, the seasoned reputation and world fame of the great Borg-Warner Corporation whose score of factories employ thousands in five states.

You will look today, of course, at the advanced features that distinguish the Norge refrigerator in its field... at the highlights of detail and design that are winning such high acclaim throughout the world. In the big SR-8 model, as shown above, you will admire extra size and ample capacity, a freezer of stainless steel, the convenience of the exclusive Handefroster and Coldpack, the sliding shelves, glass-covered drawers and Cellaret. You will appreciate the simple efficiency of the refrigerant-cooled Rollator Cold-Maker which Norge has built to almost unbelievable limits of precision for lifetime service.

But before you decide, look again at the record of integrity and achievement which Norge has made in the past. That, we submit, is the reason you also may look far to the future with faith in Norge.

Southwestern Forrest Trips

Sixty outstanding trips over the 13 National Forests in the Southwest are described in a new folder released this week by the Forest Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Entitled "Short Trips to National Forests in the Land of Coronado", it was prepared especially for the guidance of the many visitors who are expected to be attracted this summer by the Southwest's celebration of its conquest 400 years ago by the Spanish explorer, Francisco Vasquez de Coronado.

Trips are briefly outlined. Reference is made to points of interest along each route. A map shows the Forests and principal travel routes in both states. Attractive photographs present views typical of the National Forests uses and attractions-- scenic roads, free camp-grounds, trout-laden streams and lakes, vast stands of timber, cattle and sheep grazing, reservoirs fed by forest watersheds, high mountains, packing trips, wildlife, wildflowers and recreation varying from swimming to skiing.

"Many scenic drives through National Forests of the Southwest may be made in a day or two from cities or main highways" the folder points out. "Except for the great untrammelled wilderness areas, National Forests in this region are readily accessible by the 6,400 miles of roads and 4,300 miles of trails built and maintained by the Forest Service as part of its transportation system."

The folders are being distributed by forest supervisors and rangers, at the following places, in New Mexico: Alamogordo, Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Silver City and Taos.

ENMC Flying School Opens June 15th

Portales, N. Mex. --Thirty boys will begin training in aviation here at Eastern New Mexico College June 15 under the Civil Aeronautics Authority of the United States Government, it was announced here today.

Three months ahead of schedule, the course has just been approved in Washington and arrangements were under way today to get the new landing field in shape and to get the College's three planes and four instructors on hand for the opening of the training.

R. W. Horsfield and Ralph R. DeVore, private flying specialists from Ft. Worth, are on their way to Portales to set up the school under the arrangement with the CAA. Dean Floyd Golden said a long list of applications for enrollment in the course already is on hand, and that selection of boys would begin at once. Actual cost of the course will be for medical examination insurance, and some few incidentals.

Mr. Wilson of Alamogordo was in town Saturday on business.
