at 8 a. m.—Banquet
and Dance Follow

On Monday June 10th, Mr. and Mrs. Sabino Vidaurri, celebrated their silver wedding anniversary at an all-day entertainment for their family and close friends.

In the morning at 8 o'clock, Rev. Father Salvatore performed the wedding ceremony at Santa Rita Catholic church, at which the marriage vows were renewed, followed by solemn high mass. At the ceremony their daughter, Mrs. Salvador Ortiz was matron of honor, and their son, Lucio was best man; the other children of the family were also in the wedding party. Mr. Vidaurri's brother and wife from Los Angeles California, who were witnesses for the couple twenty-five years ago acted as witnesses at this renewal of the holy bonds of wedlock.

Mrs. Vidaurri wore a silver gray wedding gown made long. Her accessories were strawberry color. Her hat was strawberry color and she carried a large bouquet of red roses, with sprays of green. Other members of the party were wearing dresses of pastel shades made long, and carried arm bouquets.

At 12 o'clock noon about 40 gathered for the wedding dinner. Judge A. H. Hudspeth made the principal talk in which he expressed congratulations and good wishes—sentiments which everybody approve and feel—for this popular couple.

Mr. Vidaurri presented Mrs. Vidaurri with a lovely diamond ring set in platinum. A beautiful array of silver gifts ranging from jewelry, vases, platters, cake plates, silver dollars candle sticks and table ware were given the couple.

About 200 attended the dance at the Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gallacher led the grand march followed by Mr. and Mrs. Vidaurri and members of the family.

The Albuquerque orchestra furnished the music and dancing continued until a late hour.

Telegrams of congratulations were received from Mr. A. H. Kudner and other New York friends. A number were received from, El Paso, Albuquerque,

Portales N. Mex. — Extension of Eastern New Mexico College flying school to students between the ages of 18 and 26 was announced today by Dean Floyd

Golden of the college, who urged students to get in touch with him at once for the course, opening June 15.

The course will run from June 15 to September 1, will be limited to boys with at least one year of work in any college, and will include 72 hours of ground work and 35 hours of flying including solo flying.

R. W. Horsfield, private flying expert in charge of the course for the Government, revealed that all costs, including medical and insurance fees, will be paid by the Government, A total investment of between $15,000 and $20,000 is expected to be required to set up the course.

There will be at least thirty students, with three planes and two or more instructors.

Bivens-Graves

Miss Hetty Bivens of Oscura, and Mr. Jerry Graves of Nogal were married last Monday in Carrizozo, with Rev. L. D. Cochran of the Baptist church performing the ceremony. The bride is very attractive and has a host of friends. The groom has spent most of his life at Nogal, and is a musician. He is employed in the Water Service for the Southern Pacific Company. They will live at Nogal.

Mr. and Mrs. Bill White and daughter of Portales visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Hall of Ancho this week. Mrs. White is the former Miss Edith Hall.

Mr. and Mrs. Lell St. John of Albuquerque were among a large number who attended the 25th anniversary dance given by Señor Don Sabino Vidaurri, last Monday night.

Socorro, Los Angeles, and other points.

Mr. Vidaurri has been a successful merchant of the East side for twenty-five years. He has been prominent in business; active in Country Club affairs, and a leader in the Catholic school and church affairs.

Closing-Out Sale

Thirty-two years is a mighty long time, but that's how long Mr. T. E. Kelley has been in business in Carrizozo. Now he is going to sell out his hardware stock and devote his time to the undertaking business. We regret this move on Mr. Kelley's part for he is one of the firms in town that that has been a steady all-season advertiser. He is a fine undertaker and we feel sure he will continue to be successful in his chosen line of business.

Seriously Ill

Mrs. Pinkie B. Skinner is dangerously ill at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alice Duggar. She is suffering from complications and is not expected to recover. Mrs. Skinner is the widow of Rev. John H. Skinner who passed away several years ago. She is a pioneer of Lincoln county and is familiar with early day history of the county, especially around Lincoln and the Bonito.

Moves To Tinnie

Mr. B. D. Garner, who has been in the grocery business here for about two years moved his stock of groceries to Tinnie Wednesday of this week, and will continue in business there. Mr. Garner was in business there before moving to Carrizozo four years ago.

Davenport, West Blockton, Alabama who has five sons serving in the United States Navy.

ADMIRALS IN THE NAVY: Only three men have ever held the permanent rank of full Admiral in the United States Navy — David G. Farragut, David Porter and George Dewey. The present Admirals hold their rank for the duration of time they are in command of special assignments. Upon relinquishing their particular command they revert back to the permanent rank of Rear Admiral. There is no permanent rank above that of Rear Admiral.

JACOBS LADDER: This name for a boat ladder is borrowed from the famous Bible Character, Jacob. In his dream he saw a ladder ascending from earth to heaven, and because most of us can remember what an awful long climb it seemed, our first time aboard ship via this route, one can readily appreciate the significance of the nickname.

TONNAGE: Originally this word had nothing to do with the weight of displacement of a vessel. It merely denoted the size of a ship by the number of TONS barrels of wine which she could stow in her hold.

June 14th, "Flag Day" reminds us of the first vessel of the U. S. Navy to fly the Stars and Stripes. This ship was the Ranger, commanded by John Paul Jones. The Ranger first flew the flag in November, 1777. It was not until 1887, that the Stars and Stripes was carried in the field by all branches of the Army.

Messrs. W. C. Hendren and C. H. Boyd were in town last Tuesday making arrangements for the Fort Stanton rodeo. This will be the 27th year for this annual 4th of July event which started in the days when there were more wagons, buggies and horse back riders in New Mexico than there were automobiles. Three or four hundred attended in 1913—but in 1940 the committee is getting ready for a crowd of five thousand. They promise plenty to eat and plenty of entertainment; the committee in charge and their helpers are determined to make this the best and most entertaining rodeo during this more than a quarter of a century of annual picnics.

Originally, Lincoln County furnished most of the crowd, but now they come from four counties to participate. Since 1934 the crowds have increased by leaps and bounds.

This year the noon menu will consist of barbecued ham, baked beans, coffee ice cream and buns. Over 5,000 buns have been ordered and other things in proportion. A cordial invitation is extended to spend the 4th at the Fort.

Lt. Maurice Lemon of the Army Air Corps spent yesterday here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lemon.

Section 1. NECESSITY FOR SECURING LICENSE. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, co-partnership, corporation, association or other organization, or any combination of any thereof, to engage in the business or act or offer to act or purport to have the capacity of contractor within this State without having a license therefor as herein provided, unless such person, firm, co-partnership, corporation, association or other organization is particularly exempt as provided in this act. Evidence of the securing of any permit from a government agency or the employment of any person on a construction project shall be accepted in any court as prima facie evidence of the existence of a contract.

Section 3. CONTRACTOR DEFINED. A contractor within the meaning of this act is a person, firm, co-partnership, corporation, association, or other organization, or any combination of any thereof, other than those engaged in highway or railroad construction, who for either a fixed sum, price, fee, percentage, or other compensation other than wages undertakes, or offers to undertake, or purports to have the capacity to undertake to construct, alter, repair, add to or improve any building, excavation, or other structure, project, development or improvement, other than to personally, or any part thereof; provided, that the term contractor as used in this act shall include sub-contractor, but shall not include anyone who merely furnishes materials or supplies without fabricating the same into or consuming the same in the performance of the work of the contractor as herein defined.

Contractors Licensing Board*W. J. PARSONS, Registrar*KNOW YOUR BANK*The Logic of Service Charges

A bank has two commodities to sell—credit and services—and compensation for these is essential if the bank is to operate soundly.

Every service rendered costs the bank money. There are direct expenses such as the cost of the actual time spent in handling checks—examining them to guard against forgery and alteration, sending those deposited to other banks for collection, bookkeeping entries, filing, postage, stationery, forms and records. There are indirect costs such as rent, light, heat, depreciation, salaries, insurance, taxes.

If a depositor's loanable balance is not large enough to produce sufficient earnings to offset the costs of services rendered, then a charge is necessary. This, you will agree, is simply sound business practice.

Admiral Taussig Who Predicted War With Japan Has Long Standing Feud With F. D.

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON. — At Annapolis, where midshipmen put plebs through a constant cross-fire of hazing, one of the stock questions fired at a youngster is:

"Mr. Jones, what did Admiral Taussig say?"

And the first-year man clicks his heels and snaps back the traditional Annapolis answer: "Sir, we are now ready!"

This refers not to Rear Admiral Joseph K. Taussig's recent and startling prediction that war between the United States and Japan was inevitable, but to a statement he made to the British during the World War which has become a naval classic.

This gives one insight on the man who astounded the American public with his frankness in predicting war with Japan.

That prediction has now been discussed and editorialized from coast to coast and from beer-hall to parlor. But there are several backstage factors which have not been discussed except in hush-hush groups of naval officers when they get together.

One item is that no love has been lost between the President and Admiral Taussig.

Roosevelt-Taussig Row.

Admiral Taussig's row with the President goes back to 1915, when several naval officers, particularly the late Admiral Sims, were critical of Josephus Daniels and of Assistant Secretary Roosevelt in their preparation for war.

Taussig was then chief of enlisted personnel in the bureau of navigation and joined in this criticism. After er the war he even testified before a congressional investigation committee that the navy department heads had failed "to take adequate steps to provide personnel necessary for the proper conduct of the navy during the war."

This was in 1920, just as the Republicans were trying to dig up political dirt to be used in the Harding campaign, in which Roosevelt ran as Democratic candidate for vice president. Naturally Roosevelt resented Taussig's playing into the hands of the opposition, and wrote a sharp letter to the senate naval affairs committee denying the charges.

Thirteen years later, when Roosevelt became President, Taussig had just been appointed assistant chief of naval operations, a most important post. And he went to the new President and suggested that Roosevelt might want to transfer him in view of their previous difficulties. The President, however, told him to forget it and continue in his new job.

Brilliant Career.

It is no exaggeration to say that Taussig's career is one of the most brilliant in the navy. His father, Edward David Taussig of the distinguished Jewish St. Louis family, was a rear admiral before him.

Rear Admiral Joseph Kneiser Taussig was born in Dresden, Germany, in 1877 while his father was on duty. Since then he has become the star scholar and strategist of the navy. Twice he has won the Institute of Naval Affairs gold medal. Eleven times he has been decorated for bravery in action. His specialty has been studying the Far East.

Taussig came up for assignment to new duties in 1930; therefore it was expected that he would be made commander of the United States fleet. However, in a conference between the President and his highest naval advisers, doubt was cast on the wisdom of having a man of German Jewish descent no matter how brilliant his record, head the United States fleet at a time when religious and racial prejudice had been made such an international issue.

Heads Scouting Fleet. So Admiral Taussig was appointed commander of the scouting fleet. And after three years in this position, suddenly he was given the relatively unimportant job of commanding the fifth naval district at Norfolk, Va. This was a definite comedown.

Whether Admiral Taussig resented this shoving is his secret. Being human, probably he did. Whether he let it get the better of him when he belabored at Japan before the senate committee never may be known.

'OH, SAY, CAN YOU SEE?'

Do You Know the National Anthem?

By BYRON BYRD
It isn't a moment too soon to begin thinking about the Fourth of July. In fact it wouldn't hurt to think a little bit about Labor day.

One good reason for an early start is the "Star-Spangled Banner." With the world in the shape it's in it behooves us to approach our national anthem with at least a modicum of familiarity. Most often we attack Mr. Key's poem as though it possessed but five words. We begin resolutely with "Oh say can you see?" and then never complete the question. See what? Our only reply is a mumble. And as for the melody we are downright anarchistic. We mouth along in our own independent fashion, throwing in a note here, tossing in another there, until finally the anthem begins to take on the appearance of Fort McHenry after the British fleet finished its bombardment. The "Star-Spangled Banner" is a good song if you can sing it. By beginning our practice now we should be able to sing it by Independence day.

And while we're about it, it wouldn't do any harm to brush up on "My Country 'Tis of Thee." So many Americans now go to Canada for winter sports and fishing that a disturbing minority of our good citizens end up "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with "God Save the King." Now as friendly as are the relations existing between England and America and as much as the American people wish Mr. and Mrs. George VI a long, happy and distinguished career, the fact remains that terminating "My Country 'Tis of Thee" with "God Save the King" is anachronismatical. A case could be made for it being metachronismatical also, but being anachronismatical is bad enough and should be sufficient to bring about a speedy end to the whole business.

Other Good Reasons.
There are other reasons for thinking about the Fourth of July early. For one thing, there is no discipline, no efficient preparation. Our children aren't certain if the Fourth of July is in commemoration of the Whiskey Rebellion or of the charge up San Juan hill; and we elders, on the other hand, are utterly helpless when one of the youngsters asks why James Buchanan was chosen to deliver the message to Garcia, or who helped the Green Mountain Boys take the Louisiana Purchase from the Indians. A touch of American history, therefore, would not be amiss between now and Independence day.

Then there is the picnic. Typical of American fiddle-braininess, we find that in our hurry we packed our basket with one small bottle of ketchup, one jar of dry mustard, one diaper, a tangerine, 300 paper napkins, 4 1/2 pounds of potato chips, and a box of paper clips.

As for the beverage we discover that the babbling brook which looked so inviting from the road is little more than a drainage system of a nearby farmyard, and since we neglected to bring a supply of typhoid antitoxin we face an afternoon of steaming coffee although the heat is driving the mercury through the rivets of the thermometer and the humidity is causing the cuffs of our trousers to roll up like rugs.

Beware the Firecracker.
There is still another phase of an American picnic that is especially exasperating. That is the matter of athletic equipment. Whenever we select a fir-shaded spot along the rocky shore of a mountain lake we find we have packed our tennis racket, catcher's mask and hockey stick. On the other hand when our choice is a small grove beside a thistle-dappled field we lift the lid of the rumble seat to discover that a last-minute impulse caused us to pack our outdoor motor and a take-apart billiard cue we bought one time for no accountable reason in a boardwalk auction house in Atlantic City.

America, someone has said, is the home of the free and the land of the brave. This is a good point. But too often many young Americans take advantage of their freedom to exploit their bravery. This is distressingly true during the firecracker season when our children celebrate the Fourth of July—that is, from May 1 until October 31. The least our public officials could do is pass a law prohibiting children under nine months of age from purchasing and setting off fireworks unless accompanied by a Saint Bernard dog equipped with a fire extinguisher.

Aside from the fact that generation after generation is growing up with only three fingers to a hand and only one ear to a head, the setting off of fireworks by children too young to walk constitutes a fire hazard. It is easier than one imagines for a baby's burning dress to ignite the curtains.

The foregoing are examples of what occurs when we permit a holiday to catch us unawares like an overdrawn checking account. Let's not put off thinking about the Fourth of July another moment.

Agricultural Areas Lag

The map, accompanying the June Bulletin of American business conditions issued by La Salle Extension, showing the high spots of activity in the U. S. in the past month indicates the industrial regions continue ahead of the agricultural.

Volume of Trade Six Per Cent Higher Than One Year Ago

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, LaSalle Extension University
CHICAGO.—Even the added uncertainties created by the intensification of the war have not interrupted the slowly rising trend in many lines. The major disturbances have been most striking in the financial and commodity markets rather than in trade and industry.

The lead in an upward trend has been taken by the steel industry. The rate of operations rose from 60 per cent of capacity to over 70 per cent.

Securities Decline.
The decline in prices of securities and of many commodities was sharp and in a short time carried the price level back to the low point of a year ago. The drop was most marked in agricultural products and has thus reduced farm purchasing power. Changes were much less in prices of industrial commodities.

In estimating the future trend of business, allowances must be made for unexpected or sharp changes in the European war which might greatly modify the current trend.

War Costs
Cost in human life in the present war is less so far than in a comparable period in the last World war. German figures are not available. The London Economic Bulletin says it is $14,000,000,000 to $16,000,000,000. Sweden, neutral more than 100 years, spent $400,000,000 last year for war preparedness as against $45,000,000 in 1934.

strained. There is little shrill outcry among them. Currently, Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Juliet M. Bartlett, the latter taking office as newly elected president of the New York Women's City club, urge calmness. Miss Bartlett says we "should keep our feet on the ground and our heads cool."

Mrs. Dunbar, addressing the federation convention at Milwaukee, stresses the collective need for thought, rather than emotion. "Never in our national history has there been a more desperate need for clear understanding," she says. Mrs. Dunbar's job is "community organization," heading this effort for the University of Oregon medical school. It is understandable that she should emphasize reasoned techniques rather than emotional exhortations. "Community organization" seems to describe our present national endeavor.

Elected to the presidency of the federation in 1936, for a three-year term, Mrs. Dunbar represents about 2,000,000 club women. She tells them, "I want women to tune in with modern life." A widow and a grandmother, of pioneer stock, she has behind her a unique tradition of "collective organization." Her grandfather was the first white man to plant corn in Ganger, Mo., where she was born in a log-cabin. Her family trekked on to Chanute, Kan., to Fresno, Calif., and thence to Oregon, where, after her graduation from the State university she taught school. She has served 24 years as executive secretary of the Oregon Tuberculosis association. She was one of six children and is the mother of a grown son and daughter.

A GOOD reporter these days should have a diploma from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Making inquiries among experts as to the possibilities of swift industrial and military preparedness, this inquirer finds the answers reassuring, but complicated, to be taken on faith, with political factors still an uninvolved X in the equation. Both pertinent and encouraging is a general agreement by authorities that with all our fumbling and faltering, the index of productivity in a free state is higher than in a slave state once it gets going.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau recently met with representatives of the machine tool industry in Washington to start team work on tooling and standardization for the mass production of planes. Participating were Dr. George Jackson Mead, vice chairman of the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics. He accepts a newly created post, at $10,000 a year, the office being established to facilitate decision on types of planes, swift standardization of parts and swift production.

On technical qualifications, Dr. Mead shows a good report card, as one of the leading airplane designers of America. He received the Sylvanus Reed award, for 1933, for his technical contributions to the advancement of aviation, and his professional and business experience has covered both the technical and industrial field.

Mr. Mead attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology from 1911 to 1915. In 1917, he was in charge of the power plants at the laboratories of the United States air station at Dayton, Ohio. He then became a plane designer for the Wright-Martin Aircraft corporation and later chief engineer for the Wright Aeronautical corporation. He founded the Pratt & Whitney Co., and was chief engineer of the United Aircraft corporation. He is 49 years old, a native of Everett, Mass.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY OR FOR GUESTS

(See Recipes Below)

It takes little imagination to evolve a good meal in summer. Whether you are planning a menu for the family or for guests, there's all the wealth of the world from which to choose!

There is fresh asparagus and home-grown berries, new potatoes, tiny green onions, and all the other tender green things from the garden.

Remember that sunshine and warm weather and foods with zestful flavor go together, and plan your menus around fresh-tasting fruits and vegetables, for they have winning ways with jaded appetites. There's the minted pineapple cup pictured above, that's a grand first course for a summer lunch or dinner; it's as refreshing as a cool breeze off the lake! There are fruit salads, too—cool and colorful as summer gardens; and vegetable plates, which, well arranged, have appetite-appeal galore. And, by the way, your calorie-conscious friends will bless you if you serve them, when you entertain the club, these refreshing, filling, but not too fattening combinations.

Plan your menus around some of the fresh and tempting recipes below, and when you serve a salad or vegetable for the main dish of the meal, serve with it some unusual bread, a beverage, and the simplest kind of dessert.

You'll find tested recipes for unusual bread and rolls to serve with summer meals, in my cook book, "Better Baking."

June Fruit Appetizer or Dessert.
Fresh pineapple
Fresh strawberries
Confectioners' sugar

Cut pineapple in 1/2-inch slices, unpeeled. Then cut each slice in wedge-shaped pieces. Wash strawberries, leaving the stems on them. Chill the fruits thoroughly, then on individual dessert plates arrange the pineapple wedges and the strawberries, in a ring around the plate. Place a mound of confectioners' sugar in the center of each plate, and serve at once.

Minted Pineapple Gems.
(Serves 4)

1 14-ounce can pineapple (spoon-size chunks)
4 tablespoons lime juice
1 teaspoon fresh mint (minced)
Arrange pineapple in fruit cocktail glasses. Combine lime juice and mint, and pour over the pineapple. Chill thoroughly before serving.

Hot Weather Vegetable Plate.
New potatoes browned in butter
Small whole beets rolled in mint
Spinach with hard cooked eggs
Nuttid squash
Green onions.

Parboil small pared potatoes in butter. Cook small, whole beets in boiling water until tender. Drain and peel. Add melted butter. Then roll buttered beets in chopped green mint. Cook spinach in salted water, drain, and season with salt, pepper and butter. Garnish dish with hard cooked egg white rings and top with riced egg yolks. Steam small summer squash until tender. Cut in halves, scoop out centers, and mash. Season with melted butter, salt and pepper. Sprinkle chopped nut meats over top. Arrange vegetables on individual plates and garnish with a sprig of parsley.

Fresh Asparagus With Lemon Butter Sauce.
(4 servings)

2 small bunches fresh asparagus (or 1 large bunch)
5 cups boiling water
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
1/2 cup butter
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Cut off lower parts of asparagus stalks as far down as they will snap. Discard, or use in soup. The stalks together loosely in a bundle and place upright in saucepan containing the boiling water to which salt has been added. Cook, uncovered, until ends of stalks begin to be tender, about 15 minutes; then lay bunch of asparagus flat in pan and continue cooking until tips are tender, 5 to 10 minutes, then drain. Cream butter and add lemon juice slowly. Pour this mixture over hot asparagus and serve at once.

Fruit Salad Dressing.
2 egg yolks
1/2 cup strained honey
Juice of 1 lemon
Dash of salt
1 cup whipping cream

Place egg yolks, honey, lemon juice and salt in top of double boiler, and cook 1/2 hour, stirring frequently. Remove from heat, beat with a Dover egg beater, and cool. Whip cream and then pour the chilled honey mixture into the whipped cream, beating with Dover beater.

Baked Eggs in Tomato Cup.
(Serves 6-8)

8 tomatoes
Salt
Pepper
6 eggs
Buttered bread crumbs
Soft cheese (grated)

Scoop out tomato centers and sprinkle with salt. Place tomatoes in muffin pans. Break an egg into each tomato. Season, and top with buttered crumbs and cheese. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) until tomatoes are tender and eggs are set.

Orange Ice Box Cookies.
(Makes 6 dozen)

1 cup shortening
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup white sugar
1 egg
2 tablespoons orange juice
1 tablespoon orange rind (grated)
2 3/4 cups general purpose flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 cup pecan nut meats (broken)
Cream shortening and add sugars slowly, while beating constantly. Add egg (well-beaten), orange juice and orange rind. Mix and sift flour, salt and soda together and add to the creamed mixture, together with the broken nut meats. Form in rolls in wax paper and chill overnight in refrigerator. Slice thin, place on greased baking sheet and bake in moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for 12 to 15 minutes.

Fruit Salad.
Toss together in a salad bowl 1 cup watermelon balls, 1 cup cantaloupe balls, 1 cup honey dew melon balls, 1 cup pitted red cherries. Add french dressing enough to coat all the fruits, and mix lightly. Serve on individual plates with two or three stalks of well-chilled french endive for garnish.

This Practical Cook Book Costs Only Ten Cents.

When you serve a salad or a vegetable plate as the main dish of your meal, serve with it delicious and unusual bread or rolls. You'll find tested recipes for different biscuits, muffins and bread in Eleanor Howe's inexpensive cook book, "Better Baking." There are recipes for apricot rolls, blueberry muffins and honey drop biscuit; and recipes for crusty peanut butter bread or date and nut bread to complete your salad meals.

You'll find recipes for cookies, cakes and pastries, too, and the practical booklet is only 10 cents. To get your copy promptly send 10 cents in coin to "Better Baking," care Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois. (Published by Western Newspaper Union.)

Springtime Is Season of Joy And Zest for Wild Creatures

With Nature in Her Gayest Mood, Animals Enjoy Their Own Games and Frolics.

SPRINGTIME in the wilds is playtime. The majority of our mammals have their young in the early months of the year, and in April and May it is possible to watch the most delightful games among the puppies of the fields. Badger, fox and otter cubs are very playful little creatures. The otter and badger appear to have a certain amount of method in their games, but fox cubs simply romp among themselves in a wild abandon.

On a sloping sand cliff near my home seven fox cubs came out of a large hole; on the ledge just outside they played with a round stone, pushing it with their feet, tossing it in the air and allowing it to run down the slope.

When tired of this they played a game which resembled "Follow the Leader." One would run forward, dodge and leap over all kinds of imaginary obstacles, and the others would follow in its tracks; then all would roll together in a rough and tumble, in which their small teeth would tug at the fur of their companions.

Bouncing Badgers.
Young badgers are among the most amusing cubs to watch at play. With their bold black and white markings they are quaint-looking little creatures, and rather clumsy, but there is no doubt that they thoroughly enjoy life, and their play is exuberant and strenuous.

First they poke their noses in the ground, searching for hidden grubs; then, without any warning, all stiffen their fur, making it stand upright, and now they look twice their size. With their short legs also stiffened they bounce round one another like footballs, then leap in, grip a mouthful of fur, and roll over and over. They break apart, and again play the bouncing game, and just as suddenly as they started to play they cease, and the next moment all are diligently searching for more food.

Fun in the Water.
Many young otters are born at an awkward time, that is at the beginning of winter, but they are hardy little creatures and appear to be able to stand any amount of cold. Otters, more than any other wild creatures, show us that they thoroughly enjoy life; a plentiful supply of food makes them contented, and both parents and young play the most delightful games.

What appeared to be a large brown ball was floating gently down stream, hardly making a ripple as it swept along. Suddenly the ball seemed to burst open with a loud splash, and four excited otters with their bright, eager eyes well above the water, started swimming round one another. One leaped right out of the stream and over its companions to dive on the other side, and as they floated along this acrobat made circles around them, those below trying to grip it as it passed over. Then they all joined up again, and seemed to be having a struggle as to which could pull the others under the surface, a sort of spirited ducking game.

They continue to play until all are tired. Then the parents lead their young off to a well-hidden lair, where they all sleep until hunger and high spirits call again. —Oliver G. Pike in London Tit-Bits.

May Sales Show Increase

Detroit June 6 -- Retail sales figures for the last 10 days of May and also for the month as a whole were announced here today by William E. Holler, Chevrolet general sales manager. They showed substantial increases over the same periods last year, and the final 10-day figure was one-third higher than that for the previous period.

New car sales for the month totalled 92,764 passenger cars and trucks, Mr. Holler said a gain of 20.1 per cent over May, 1939. In the final 10 day period, Chevrolet dealers retailed 35,751 new cars and trucks, a 27.6 per cent increase over the same period last year and a 33.8 per cent over the figure reported for the second 10 days in May this year.

Increases were also registered in used car sales, he said, a total of 187,765 units being sold during

"Frank may be dying, and you can talk about him like that!" Sheila said, her face ashen white. Her dress was still dusty and rumpled, her face dirty, and she had a deep purple bruise on one temple. But there was a flaming beauty—a force—in her aspect, as she faced the other girl, that made Bernadette draw back.

"Pretend that you love him, why don't you?" Bernadette said, in a frightened dogged voice.

"I don't have to! I thought you did!"

"Your kind always pretend that they love everyone," Bernadette said, in bitter contempt. "It's all love, and how a boy isn't understood at home, and things like that!"

"My kind!" Sheila echoed, with a bewildered look about the stricken circle.

"Yes, your kind! The kind that goes to a place like Atlantic City with a rich man's son!"

"Look here," Joe Carscadden said, suddenly taking a part in the conversation. "Look here, Miss What's-your-name. You be careful what you call my sister, will you, or you'll find yourself in trouble! Sheila isn't responsible to you for what she does—no, nor the newspapers, either!"

"I've just been talking to her," Joe continued, warming at the sound of his own voice, "and she's been working hard in a hotel down there at Atlantic City, with no more idea that Frank Mc Cann knew where she was than—"

"Than the babe itself!" Mrs. Carscadden supplied, as he paused for breath, and for a smile.

"Joe, you believe me, don't you?" Sheila stammered, bursting into tears.

"I believe you," Joe said, angrily, "and I've had enough of these rich folks that pretend they want to help a girl, just because she's honest enough to return fifty dollars their daughter didn't even know she'd lost! I don't care if my father and yours were friends in Albany." Joe went on wildly, "I don't want my sister to have anything more to do with you!"

"Joe—Joe—" the judge began sorrowfully, placatingly. Joe shook off the friendly hand.

"Will bid you all good day!" he said, heatedly. "Come on, Ma. Come on, Sheila!"

They went out, Sheila and her mother and brother, into the night. "The way it was, Mamma—" Sheila began.

Helping her mother and Joe with the dishes, she was back in the home kitchen, back in an old faded gingham apron, with her bronzed hair tied up severely in a handkerchief. Sheila had returned from church, she had enjoyed once again the delights of a leisurely home breakfast with the family, and she was now retelling to them, for the hundredth time, some of the lesser details of her adventures.

Mrs. Carscadden now having finished the dishes, was at the sink, occasionally mopping its already well-mopped surface absently. Joe, really listening, was pretending to read the pages of the paper.

"Don't tell me how it was, Sheila," her mother said resignedly, "I can bear anything but that."

Sheila put her head down on the table and laughed.

"No one was ever good as you can make yourself out to be, when ye've bust up two good engagements, and thrown a family like the Mc Canns into grief and sorrow!" Mrs. Carscadden observed.

"It may not be your fault," her mother continued oracularly, "but there's few cud get themselves mixed up in trouble the way you do an' kape such an innocent face on you. Whatever you'd be doin' to get into one of them Zeppelins I don't know, an' that you'd come down near Newark, New Jersey, is no more than you deserve'd a little before that."

Mrs. Carscadden continued, in a droning, resigned sort of monotone, "it was disappeared you were, an' no one had spache or sight of ye for days. An' before that again, it was married in Boston, Massachusetts, ye were, by a justice of the peace, or was it a district attorney, Joe?"

"It was neither, Ma," Joe said, and Sheila laughed again. She was not deeply concerned; she was thinking of something else this morning.

She had made up her mind to something the day before yesterday, and since the instant of her decision the world had been singing for Sheila. She was going to call on Frank Mc Cann.

The terrible day of the plane crash was now almost two weeks in the past; Sheila had had no communication since with the Mc Cann family. The unfortunate pilot of the plane had been buried, the physicians had reported Frank as making good progress toward recovery, and newspapers had turned to other matters. Joe Carscadden had telephoned the Mc Cann house almost every day, and had extended sympathy and made inquiries for the whole family, and it had finally been decided by her mother, Angela and Joe that Sheila should write Frank a "nice note," telling him how glad she was that he was getting well, and expressing her heartiest good wishes for his marriage to Miss Kennedy.

Sheila had half-heartedly agreed to this. She would have preferred, herself, to do nothing in regard to Frank. Without being able to analyze exactly how she felt, she sensed that there was mystery, there was provocation, about complete silence. But a nice letter was simply a nice letter; it ended everything. Everything was ended, of course. But somehow Sheila had had a feeling, deep in her heart, that there would be one more act.

She wanted to see Frank once more, to be sure that everything was all right between him and Bernadette, to close up their own sensational experience with one little, friendly talk.

But the manner in which Joe and Ma had discussed the propriety of even a letter had shown Sheila plainly that the thought of a call was quite out of the question. So she had dutifully written, almost as dictated by her authorities.

The first days following the accident had been a time of strange lassitude and weariness to her. Sheila had lain on the big bed, in the center room, dreamy and silent, or she had come out to take the kitchen rocker, listening to the talk that had gone on about her, very gentle and sweet, but apparently broken in body and spirit.

During these days the house had been full of company. Every relative and friend the Carscaddens had, and they were legion, had come in and out of the kitchen as if it were a club. Margaret had come, panting from the stairs; Lizzie had come; Neely and Lew had come. The teapot had never cooled, nor run dry, in this exciting time.

After almost a week of it, Sheila had appeared suddenly to awaken: She had washed her hair, had put her wardrobe in order. The sensations, the thrills, were all over. Now for a job, and a stretch of unromantic routine and duty.

And first duty of all, and in another sense, last, the nice letter to Frank had been written.

Unexpectedly, and bringing all the thrills back with a dizzying rush,

CHAPTER XV

"Maybe they won't let me see him!" Sheila thought. But she knew that Frank's father and mother were away; they had gone to the big Charity Drive lunch—their names had been in the paper. And when Joe had telephoned this morning, to ask as usual for Frank, Mrs. Mc Cann's voice, Joe said, had been quite cheerful—Frank had been out yesterday, and had sat up for supper with Miss Kennedy the night before, and she and the judge had no anxiety in leaving him today. Sheila anticipated no trouble, and sure enough, everything went smoothly. There had been something in Sheila's spirit all day that had promised "miraculousness," she had had no doubts of what the outcome of today's venture would be. Mamma admitted her, and if there was any hesitation or doubt in her manner, Sheila did not see it. The girl, following her, walked straight through the great spacious hall, and mounted the stairs, and crossed the upper hallways to the doorway of Frank's room.

The door stood open; Sheila saw open windows, and pots and jars of exquisite flowers, beyond. She began to tremble now, and felt as much like crying as smiling as she walked into the room. Mamma did not announce her, merely stood at the door.

Frank was alone, dressed, seated in a great chair piled with pillows, his bandaged left arm strapped across his breast. Over his silk shirt he wore a loose blue silk coat; his hair was neatly brushed, he looked thin, and a little pale.

As Sheila walked slowly to his chair, her unsmiling eyes fixed on him, he glanced away from the window, and instantly a sort of magic seemed to be shimmering about her, and she felt hardly conscious of what she was doing.

"Why, look who's here!" Frank said, with his broadest smile. "Well, I am glad to see you! How are you? Sit down, sit down. No, pull your chair nearer. I'm all alone."

Sheila sat down, and looked at him.

"Do you know, I've been thinking about you, and want to see you?" Frank asked. And as she did not answer, he went on, "Funny thing, I was talking about you only last night. Bernadette was here—Miss Kennedy, you know—"

"I know," Sheila's voice was very faint. His nearness, the sight of the hard, blue-shaven jaw again, the flash of his white teeth, the half-smile in his Irish eyes, were too much for her. The tones of his voice made her heart feel as if it were melting wax.

"I said to Bernadette that you were the darndest kid I ever saw," Frank said. "I said I had the funniest feeling of—being responsible for you!"

"Is this your room, Frank?" she interrupted.

"Nope. I'm up on the next floor; it's not so grand as this."

"Whose room was this?"

"Well, this used to be an upstairs sitting-room. Then Pop put the kitchen and the dining-room into the basement floor, and turned the old dining-room into a library, and gave Mom a sitting-room next to that, and this has been a sort of spare room, ever since. And beyond the bathroom, there—the room where they set my arm—is Gert's room."

"And that reminds me that she's coming down to dinner tonight," Frank went on. "And Pete's home, got here yesterday. And we think they've been writing to each other, and that they've made it up."

"Peter and Gertrude?"

"Yep."

"Oh, I'm glad!" Sheila exclaimed. "Honest, are you?"

"Oh, honest!" And she looked at him in surprise.

Frank was eying her with a teasing expression.

"I thought you liked Pete?"

"Well, I don't."

"You're not jealous, anyway," he said. And after a minute he added, "I don't believe that after five years of being engaged, you'd suspect a man of anything, would you, Sheila?"

"I wouldn't be engaged for five years," Sheila answered.

"You wouldn't? Why not?"

"Because—" She was thinking it out. "Because I wouldn't want any man to feel—sure of me, for five years," she formulated it slowly. There was a silence.

"I don't think any man would!" Frank presently said, with a not quite natural laugh. And after a minute he added, dryly, "Fortunately for me, Bernadette doesn't agree with you."

"So you don't think you could be faithful to any man for five years?" he asked, as Sheila did not speak.

"I didn't say that. I only meant that—if I loved a man, I wouldn't want to wait five years—to be his wife," Sheila answered simply. "You wouldn't want to be sure?"

"I would be sure."

Frank mused on this, watching her steadily.

"What would you call being sure?"

"Sheila thought a while before she answered, looking down, biting her full, red lower lip.

"Dividing the world into two parts," she said, after a pause, "him and the rest. Never going anywhere that you didn't hope to meet him, never doing anything without thinking whether he'd like it or not. Hoping—hoping that everyone else would hate him—"

"Hate him! Love him, you mean?" Frank ejaculated incredulously, as she hesitated.

"Hate him—so that you could make it up to him by loving him all the more," she said.

Frank could only stare at her.

"I don't love Bernadette like that; I'm glad when anyone else admires her," he finally observed. "And she feels the same way about me."

"Then you're different," Sheila commented thoughtfully.

"How do you know that love is like that?" Frank demanded.

"It is for me."

"It would be for you?"

"It is. Her head was singing; she felt her hands cold and wet. A silence.

"You mean—Peter?" Frank asked respectfully.

"Peter!" Sheila cleared her throat. "No, not Peter," she said. "You mean you don't love Peter any more?"

"I never did. We just had a—case," the girl explained, "and he promised he'd come to see me, and he didn't come, and that made me mad—I thought more about him than if he had, maybe."

"Well, come on—" Frank said encouragingly. "You've only made half a confession! If it isn't Pete, who is it?"

"Peter was the—the first gentleman I'd ever known," Sheila, instead of answering, said hurriedly and nervously. "I liked him, for that."

"So much so that he didn't keep his word to you?"

"He—lost my address."

"And forgot your name?"

"I forgot his," the girl said honestly, laughing. "But you see we're not in the telephone book, and he said that the only Carscadden that looked possible to him was in Brooklyn."

"You're dodging the issue," Frank pursued. "You can't do that when you're talking to a lawyer, you know. Come on—out with it—whom do you like?"

"I might know what I thought about it, without being—it," Sheila stammered.

"It and it! What do you mean by it?"

"Well, I might know what being in love was, without being in love." She was suddenly scarlet, the clean color flooding up under her transparent skin like a flame.

"Yes, but you aren't guessing," he answered shrewdly. "Be a sport, Sheila. I won't tell on you!"

Sheila was back in the home kitchen.

Sheila was back in the home kitchen.

there had seemed to be no other reasonable thing for Sheila to do.

But Angela and Mrs. Carscadden were no sooner out of the house than Sheila was dressing. She trembled for sheer joy as she put on her best clothes. They were not handsome clothes, but the blue coat had been brushed and pressed by her own hands, and there was another dark-blue hat. Looking at herself in the cramped little mirror over the sideboard, she knew she had never looked any better.

No subway today. It was the first day of real spring. Winter could come back again, but today was languid and sweet and soft, with blue in the sky, and florists' windows bursting with new blossoms and freesias, lilac and lilies. Roses were everywhere; potted little red roses, on feathery light branches.

Sheila took the elevator door, and sat looking out of a window, only half sensing what she saw and heard. Children, mad with spring, were running and screaming in the streets below her. Church bells rang, and the whistles of boats sounded newly sweet and soft from the river. Windows were open today; the world was all abroad. Some of the walking women carried small sheaves of blessed palm, and some of the men had little crosses of it pinned on their coats.

Sheila walked from the elevated train to the Mc Cann house steadily, yet without any hurry. She was going to see Frank; nothing could keep her from seeing Frank; there was no need for haste. The day was singing in her heart like a glorious song; it was a thrilling day, and yet it was a soft day, too, filled with languorous charm.

CHAPTER XV

"Maybe they won't let me see him!" Sheila thought. But she knew that Frank's father and mother were away; they had gone to the big Charity Drive lunch—their names had been in the paper. And when Joe had telephoned this morning, to ask as usual for Frank, Mrs. Mc Cann's voice, Joe said, had been quite cheerful—Frank had been out yesterday, and had sat up for supper with Miss Kennedy the night before, and she and the judge had no anxiety in leaving him today. Sheila anticipated no trouble, and sure enough, everything went smoothly. There had been something in Sheila's spirit all day that had promised "miraculousness," she had had no doubts of what the outcome of today's venture would be. Mamma admitted her, and if there was any hesitation or doubt in her manner, Sheila did not see it. The girl, following her, walked straight through the great spacious hall, and mounted the stairs, and crossed the upper hallways to the doorway of Frank's room.

The door stood open; Sheila saw open windows, and pots and jars of exquisite flowers, beyond. She began to tremble now, and felt as much like crying as smiling as she walked into the room. Mamma did not announce her, merely stood at the door.

Frank was alone, dressed, seated in a great chair piled with pillows, his bandaged left arm strapped across his breast. Over his silk shirt he wore a loose blue silk coat; his hair was neatly brushed, he looked thin, and a little pale.

As Sheila walked slowly to his chair, her unsmiling eyes fixed on him, he glanced away from the window, and instantly a sort of magic seemed to be shimmering about her, and she felt hardly conscious of what she was doing.

"Why, look who's here!" Frank said, with his broadest smile. "Well, I am glad to see you! How are you? Sit down, sit down. No, pull your chair nearer. I'm all alone."

AROUND the HOUSE Items of Interest to the Housewife

Don't bang porcelain or enameled kitchen equipment against stoves, tables or sinks. It will chip or crack if it is roughly handled. Many of the more modern, attractive pieces require special care.

If you rinse a plate with cold water before breaking eggs on it, add to them a pinch of salt and then stand, where there is a current of air, you will have no difficulty in beating them to a froth.

Wall outlets for electrical devices used in the kitchen, pantry or butler's pantry should be placed at table height. This permits the use of shorter cords with cooking utensils, eliminating coils that are likely to get in the housewife's way.

Stapling on a heavy rug or rubber mat will go a long way toward preventing fatigue during long periods of ironing.

Take advantage of the next windy day to clean your chintz coverings and curtains. Hang them on a clothes line and brush them quickly with a clean whisk broom dipped frequently in warm water.

Cloths saturated with polishing liquids if stored away in a closet often cause spontaneous combustion. Keep these cloths in a covered tin container.

Cakes or cookies in which honey is used as a sweetening require a rather moderate temperature for baking. If the oven is too hot they will burn.

Live Stock Situation

(By J. A. McNaughton.)

Los Angeles Union Stockyards— With the single exception of calves, livestock slaughter under federal inspection in the United States was larger from January through April of 1940 than for the corresponding period the preceding year. Calves were slightly under last year. Hog slaughter showed an increase of more than 1,000,000 head a month over last year. Sheep and lamb slaughter gained 11,000 head over last year.

In comparing the prices of livestock now with those of a year ago, cattle sheep are about the same, while hogs are lower at the present time. Top price for hogs last week, was $6.30 while last year, hogs sold as high as $7.50 per cwt. However, a burdensome number of hogs are being reduced, so that the hog market is on a comparatively firm basis. Likewise, numbers of cattle are not above normal.

In view of the uncertainty ahead, a good many of our livestock leaders are counseling operations on a conservative basis. Cattle prices are higher than for a good many years, and cattlemen are being urged to clear up their debts, so that they can meet the future with a greater sense of security. It seems logical that a time of high prices and unsettled conditions is a time to put any business in order.

The present hideous maelstrom in which the Democratic countries of Europe find themselves should strengthen our determination for preparedness. We can't arm any too fast. The threat seems very real and horribly easy of accomplishment when we realize how many "fifth columnists" have been found in the various walks of life and how they may undermine our unity and strength.

The third term tradition is as good as shattered. Mr. Roosevelt possesses profound sagacity concerning political tendencies; he is extremely popular, and seems amply capable of handling emergencies when they arise. (And about all that does arise is emergencies)
