M. G. Peckham's Funeral Services

Funeral services were held at the Baptist church at 2:30 Tuesday afternoon for Mr. Marvin George Peckham, age 50, who passed away Sunday morning after an illness of about two weeks.

Rev. L. D. Cochran conducted services, Mesdames R. E. Lemon, Albert Snow and Miss Carolyn Rountree sang, "G old e n Bells" and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" with Miss Shirley Rea Phipps at the piano.

Pall bearers were Messrs. Herman Kelt, Tennis Bigelow, Albert Roberts, Will Norman, Frank Richard, and Jimmie Lucero.

Flower girls were Misses Wilma Snow, Earlena Berry, Marian Pruett and Mesdames Frank Richard, Will Norman.

Mr. Peckham was born in Nebraska and later moved to Oklahoma and Kansas. He was married in 1913.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. M. G. Peckham; two daughters, Mrs. Fay Harkey, Miss Vernon Ruth Peckham, a son, Marvin George, Jr., and a number of other relatives.

News of Mr. Peckham's death evoked general expressions of grief in Carrizozo, and all over the county where he was universally popular. He came to Carrizozo over 20 years ago and had operated a barber shop here for the entire period of time. He was industrious, friendly and always willing to do anyone a good turn, when the opportunity presented itself. The beautiful array of flowers, and the crowded church attested the esteem in which he was held.

A long line of cars followed the casket to Angus cemetery where he was buried.

"Mayordomo"

Last Sunday evening a large crowd of people went to Camp Capitán to witness the play "Mayordomo" staged on an open air platform by 80 girls under the direction of Mrs. Shaw, Mrs. Quinn, Mr. Sloan, Miss Taylor, Mr. Fink and others.

The production was colorful and spectacular. Acting was good, voices were fine, and the grand finale was perfect. The N. Y. A. girls made all their own costumes and they seemed marvelously perfect. Those who went were well repaid for their time spent. Too much praise cannot be given to the cast and directors.

The Ruidoso Celebration

(By Dan Conley)

With the public still lauding the greatest celebration ever staged in Lincoln county where approximately 12,000 visitors enjoyed a continuous show from morning to well past mid-night at Ruidoso's Old Timer's Round-Up, Saturday, June 15th. It is too often the case, praise and appreciation do not fall to the right heirs, which at Ruidoso was unquestionably the result of the untiring efforts of the various committees. The bountiful result of this unusual undertaking which was made more outstanding by the presence, in person, of real oldtimers, who lived while the early history of Lincoln County was in the making, is rightfully credited to the hard working committees composed of Ruidoso business men and women, ranchers of our community and many others who not only pooled their energy, but their finances as well, to make this event, one well deserving of the admiration of the people of Lincoln County.

Guidance in Farming Basis for FSA Loans

A new type of collateral for farm credit is being developed on the basis of "common sense education and planning," says Dr. W. W. Alexander, Farm Security Administrator. More than a half million families are operating their farms on FSA loans. These loans usually run about $300. to $400. Coupled with the assistance and supervision of the administration's county representatives, these loans form a foundation upon which families are building self-sufficiency.

"Most of these borrowers had failed in the past simply because they did not know how to farm efficiently," Dr. Alexander said recently. "Guidance in good farming methods is the best guarantee that they will not fail again; and at the same time it is the best protection for the Government's investment in these families. Farm Security helps each family to find the answer to its individual problems; and if necessary it loans the money needed to solve them.

"When a family comes to the Farm Security county supervisor for help, first find the cause of the trouble, and second is work out a farm-and-home-management plan that will overcome these difficulties and enable the family to get back on its feet.

"In making such a plan, the supervisor goes over the farmer's situation with him in detail—how big his farm is; how fertile; how much equipment he has; how much livestock; how much debt; what cash crops he has planted in the past; how many acres he has in garden and food crops. Then they decide what changes can be made to increase the family's income.

"The farmer's wife and a home-management specialist usually work out a similar plan for the home to provide good diet, better clothes, and closer supervision over expenditures."

Dr. Alexander said that a survey showed these methods are working.

New and Used Car Sales Continue to Gain

Retail sales of 27,843 new passenger and commercial cars during the first 10 days of June, as reported by Chevrolet dealers, continued the gains reported by that company throughout 1940, it was announced here today by William E. Holler, general sales manager. He said that dealers had registered a sales increase of 17.7 per cent over the same period last year, when 23,653 units were delivered.

Used car sales during the period totalled 54,986, a gain over both the comparable period last year and the first ten days of May this year. The increase over the same period last year was 16.4 per cent.

Roosevelt's Precedence

"The President is already being criticized in some quarters for failing to make more progress in developing our national defense, and especially for favoring the Navy over the Army, and for not appreciating the full value of air power. The record shows that he began building up our national defenses the first year he was in office, 1933. He began at the right point, with the Navy, our first line of defense. He has been ahead of Congress and public opinion, and in some respects he has been ahead of the armed services, almost consistently."—Ernest Lindley in his syndicated column.

Everybody who can is attending the "Billy the Kid" play in old Lincoln this week.

The T. E. Kelley Hardware and Sport Shop will continue their closing out sale for another week. Read their ad in the News. With numerous bargains in the hardware line the sale has been quite successful. Mr. Price is assisting Mr. Kelley with the sale.

The 4th at Fort Stanton

The 4th of July committee has just completed arrangements to bring a string of the famous Johnny Mullins bucking horses in for the Rodeo and Johnny Mullins will be here himself to assist with arena direction. This is indeed a big added entertainment factor for the day and will serve to speed up and improve the quality of the show.

The dinner will be the same complete menu of previous years except that this year the committee is serving barbecued ham instead of beef,—an added treat. Plans are being made to accommodate 5,000 for dinner.

The general public is invited to attend and is promised a full day of pleasure for the entire family. The committee feels that this celebration has grown into the largest and most entertaining one-day show in the southwest, one that no one will want to miss.

TO help you avoid serious loss through fraudulent use, theft, forgery, or alteration, the following suggestions for drawing checks are made by the American Bankers Association, of which we are a member:

NEVER write a check with pencil. Use pen, ink, typewriter, or check protector.— Write amount of the check as far to the left as possible and fill in all blank spaces with a heavy line— Be sure numerals and written amounts agree.— Don't erase an error; write a new check and destroy the old one.— Avoid making checks payable to "cash" or "bearer".— Never sign blank checks.— Be careful how and where you sign or exhibit your banking signature.— Guard your bank checks and your cancelled checks, leaving none where they can be taken.

High Schools Also Turn Out 'Vocational' Grads

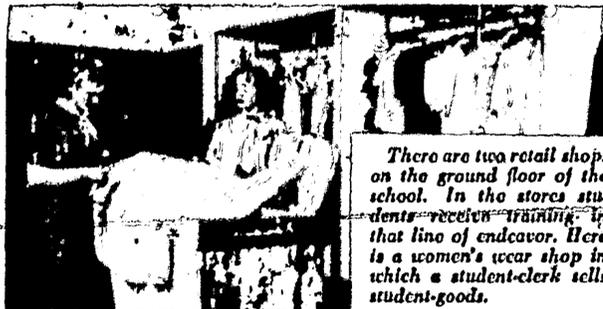

New York City's Board of Education does not confine its high school students to the study of languages and mathematics. On the contrary, there is an 11-story building, right in the heart of the garment center, wherein high school students receive the vital training necessary to those who would enter the trades. In the Central High School of Needle Trades, every trade, from retail merchandising and selling, to hand-made shoe manufacturing, is taught to girls and boys later to follow those pursuits in the commercial world.

Above we see girls in the class of draping of original patterns and costume designing as work in that department.

These two boys are engaged in the fur-working class, putting finishing touches to fur jackets. Vocational work such as this is of the greatest value in fitting students for jobs after graduation.

There are two retail shops on the ground floor of the school. In the stores students receive training in that line of endeavor. Here is a women's wear shop in which a student-clerk sells student-goods.

Picture Parade

Here the boys in the shoe-cutting department carve the making of shoes from leather, by hand. These shoes later are sold in the retail shops located on the ground floor of the school.

In this picture we peek into the classroom where girls are taught to work on sewing machines. The advantages of such training can hardly be overestimated, whether the girls intend to enter the commercial world or not.

"The Name Is Familiar"

BY FELIX B. STREYCKMANN and ELMO SCOTT WATSON

'Get Your Gat!'

IF RICHARD JORDAN GATLING could know how his name is perpetuated in the slang of the underworld, he would probably revolve as rapidly in his grave as did the battery gun which he invented in 1861. For when a crook says to a companion, "Get your gat!", his personification of his weapon is a shortening of the name of an inventor, born in North Carolina in 1818, who gave to the world many useful articles before he invented the gun that bears his name.

R. J. Gatling

Among them were a machine for sowing cottonseed, another for thinning cotton-plants, one for sowing rice, another for sowing wheat, a screw for propelling water craft, a machine for breaking hemp and a steam plow.

But Gatling is remembered for none of these. Instead, his name is linked with an instrument of death—a revolving gun consisting of a number of simple breech-loading rifled barrels grouped around and revolving about a common axis. The original Gatling gun fired only 250 to 300 shots per minute but later models were capable of spitting out 1,300 bullets every 60 seconds. It was used with deadly effect in the Civil war and for many years thereafter by the United States army, which adopted it in 1866, until the modern machine gun supplanted it. Even though it's not in common use now, its inventor's name is—shortened to "gat."

Vandyke Beard

THE famous artist Vandyke is another whose name has been perpetuated by becoming a part of our language and yet hardly anyone knows how he spelled it. The Vandyke beard is named for him and is spelled that way, but he spelled his name Van Dyck.

Antonius Van Dyck, born in Antwerp, Belgium, in 1599, and one of the greatest artists of all time, migrated to England. There his name was anglicized to Anthony Vandyke and, although he spent some time in Italy, returned to Antwerp and did some work in Paris, the English spelling of his name is the one that remained through the centuries.

So we call his type of beard—a rather full mustache with a small, billy-goat-like pendage of hair from the lower lip—a Vandyke beard. And there is a Vandyke collar and cape, so named because it was prominent on portraits he painted. It consists of fine linen and lace with deep pointed or indented edges.

Van Dyck had a successful but short life, made possible by the fact that his talents were brought out while he was very young. At 10 his wealthy father sent him to a famous art school; at 16 he organized a firm of portrait painters; at 20 he was called to England and was recognized by the king of England who pensioned him, and at 42 he died.

Gladstone Bag

WHEN you pack your Gladstone bag for a trip, you may not realize it, but you will be carrying with you a constant reminder of "the greatest of the long line of Victorian political leaders and prime ministers of England." But such will be the case, for this convenient and capacious piece of luggage is named for William Ewart Gladstone, who was born in Scotland in Liverpool in 1809, served an apprenticeship under another great prime minister, Sir Robert Peel, and himself became prime minister for the first time in 1868. From that time on he and another great prime minister, Benjamin Disraeli, were constant rivals and for the next quarter of a century Gladstone was the leader of the Liberal party and served as prime minister no less than four different times. He died in 1898 and is buried in the state-man's corner of Westminster Abbey.

Early Ceremonial Washings
In all early civilizations, bathing and handwashing—of a sort—were required deencies. Religious, even of very ancient peoples, called for a great deal of ceremonial washing. Hospitality among the Hebrews required offering a foot bath to the guest; among the Greeks and Romans the refreshment of a bath was offered.

Cottons Go to Top of the List In Fabric Aristocracy Class

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN it comes to fabric aristocracy cottons are tops this season. It's not only that gingham and piques and gabardines and sharkskin, dimitties, voiles, chintz, percale, wintges and argandies are smart for daytime it is the style prestige that is accorded them for, dine, dance and evening wear, no matter how formal the occasion, that is the news that is big news.

Speaking of smart cottons for party, wedding, and graduate wear, the new Swiss organdies are simply breathtaking in their loveliness. As a convincing argument behold the enchanting evening frock pictured in the foreground of the accompanying illustration. With its yards and yards of full-flounced skirt it is reminiscent of the old South. By the way, most stylish cottons this summer are of the romantic type, and thus lovely model is no exception to the rule. The fine Swiss cloque organdy which fashions this lovely gown has a Juno-garden patterning of rose, blue, lavender and white flowers that is simply entrancing. Tiny rose and blue velvet bows pretty the skirt flounces catching also the front draping of the flattering bodice. Soft churring adds interest to the brief puffed sleeves.

Formal bands of fine embroidery and cutout are lavishly applied to sheer crystal-clear Swiss organdy for the graceful summer party frock shown above to the left. Under the demure collared bolero the low-cut camisole bodice is finely tucked below a wide edging of embroidery which is repeated as shoulder straps. The endlessly swirling skirt is caught at the waist by a wide pastel taffeta girle finished with a miniature corsage in delicate shades.

It adds to the zest of the new summer fashions that they are that versatile in their styling. You can choose any silhouette you please and be "in style" whether your choice be marmalid slimness or "Gone With the Wind" southern belle types that register picturesque bouffancy. One of the fascinating vagaries of the present mode is the tiered silhouette as pictured to the right in the group. An adorable multi-colored floral printed cloque organdy fashions this flared frock which, we are quite sure you will agree, bespeaks a new high in summer prettiness.

Speaking of the now-co-fashionable cloque sheers, an exquisite tulle-like matelasse ceerucker has been brought out this season that is taking the world of fashion by storm. This exquisite cheer in dark colors makes up beautifully for day wear as well as for night and it is ever so lovely in pastel colorings. For the woman who craves these delightful ceeruckers are a veritable find in that the simpler you make them up the more effective is the gown, since the material is so all-sufficient within itself.

Another cheer enjoying a maximum of style prestige is dotted Swiss, especially red dots on white, for white with red accents is all the rage just now. You will find, likewise, that cotton sheers that are spectacularly patterned with gorgeous red flowers or other motif in red are ever so good style this season. With these red and white cottons wear a red hat with matching gloves and for a fine finish climax the ensemble with red shoes such as were so successfully launched for the Southern resort wear earlier in the year.

Hoods Everywhere

Everything that can be consistently styled with a hood is being styled with a hood. Most of the hoods are detachable which makes them eminently practical. When you go motoring or stroll on the beach with a snappy wind blowing off the water, when you go to midsummer night dance parties a short coat with detachable hood made of camel's hair and lined with red Scotch plaid as here illustrated will serve you well. A coat of this type with its cunning hood is likewise lovely if carried out in pastels.

Off-Face Berets Control Hairdress

Much is being said lately in regard to the relation of hairdress and hat. The recent trend toward big off-face berets worn far back on the head may, so fashion experts declare, bring about a revival of the pompadour since most hats of this type are even now posed behind a mass of curls atop the forehead.

Fancy Is Turning To Pink Accents

If you will look about in the neckwear departments you will note a surprising showing of dainty pink collars and cuffs, jabots and other accessory items. Go to the jewelry section and it is possible you will think you are "seeing through rose-colored glasses" for many of the clips, brooches, earrings, bracelets and necklaces register pink tones and tints. The same may be said of gloves of flowers and down in Southland during the resort period the accent on pink expressed itself in dainty flannel coats such as many a fashionable wore.

Which all goes to show that the flair for pink accessory touches is very much in evidence this season and all through the summer fashions one will see the new black or navy sheers so popular for afternoon wear, made lovely and appealingly feminine with flattering accents of pink!

All-White Fashion Gaining Momentum

The all-white movement is gaining momentum. The fashionable thing to do is to carry it out from head to foot. The young smart set are thrilled with the idea of all-white so much so they dance in white, play in white, in fact take keen delight in ensembling dress, hat, bag, gloves, shoes, to which they add jewelry and flowers all in white.

Quilted Velvet Is Popular for Wraps

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Never leave sugar, raisins, currants or peel in paper bags. They all go moldy and sticky very quickly.

A paste made of scouring powder moistened with ammonia will remove unsightly stains on brass trays. Apply paste, remove when dry, then polish tray.

Always keep flour in a warm, dry place. Damp flour will never make light cakes and pies.

To remove whitewash from a ceiling, dissolve one pound of alum in one gallon of strong vinegar. Apply with brush, let cook in well-ventilated room until usual.

Moisture in the refrigerator encourages the growth of bacteria, causing food to spoil. Wipe off all moisture inside the refrigerator and be careful to remove spilled foods.

Lingerie must be faded occasionally to preserve its dainty appearance. A faded blue garment will tint a delicate orchid with the aid of a pink dye, a pale yellow will shade into a delicate green if dipped in blue dye and a pink dye will change the yellow to a shell pink. Be sure to use small quantities of the dye for these pastel shades.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—Most airplane makers who expressed an opinion about Henry Ford's offer to make 1,000 planes a day were doubtful about Mr. Ford's ability to deliver anything in our defense effort.

Mr. Fairchild is, himself, reassuring in exemplifying the tradition of Yankee inventiveness. His father, the late George Winthrop Fairchild, once chairman of the International Business Machines corporation, was the inventor of the dial telephone, the computing machine and finally the adding machine, to keep track of his mounting millions—about 10 of which went to his son. He had begun his business career at 13 a week. "Anything is possible" seems to have been a sort of family slogan.

As a youth, Sherman M. Fairchild was mainly interested in cameras. His father had tapped him for junior executive of his company. When the young man stuck to cameras, this interest later shading into airplanes, his family was indulgent. They thought the boy was just having a "wanderjahr" and would round up at a desk when the time came. But the camera obsession wasn't just monkey business. At 21, he had invented an unique flashlight camera and several years later brought through a radial aerial camera, organized the Fairchild Aerial Surveys and caught attention with a trail-blazing aerial survey of New York. This led to plane-building. In 1927, he corralled several companies, set Igor Sikorsky building planes and turned out the first cabin monoplane in the United States.

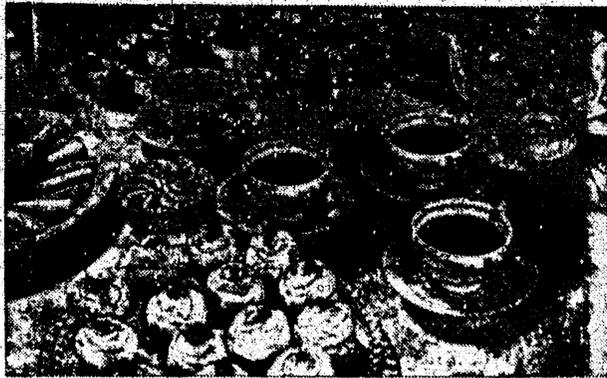

SINCE chivalry is not inseparable from patriotism, this writer asked Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, to send to this column a few paragraphs about the work of the Red Cross in its greatest endeavor. He responded as follows:

"Anyone attempting to bring material assistance to the millions of homeless and miserable war refugees is inevitably seized with a sense of futility. There is so much that needs doing immediately, and there are so many obstacles to overcome that the burden of responsibility becomes almost overwhelming.

"These moods of futility I can dispel by concentrating my thoughts on the splendid support received by the American Red Cross from all over the country. When I think of the 350,000 volunteers sewing bandages and knitting garments, or of the millions of Americans in every walk of life who are contributing to the Red Cross war-relief fund, my spirits are immediately buoyed. Pride in the generous and patriotic response of the public gives each Red Cross worker new courage to carry out his tasks.

"The war-relief funds are going to work for humanity almost as fast as they come in. Relief supplies are being distributed, hospital supplies are on the way and ambulances have been ordered. Clothing and surgical dressings are being shipped to the stricken areas in huge quantities. Our activities are rapidly being geared to greatly increased needs as the toll of invasion continues to mount. I have an abiding faith that the people of this country will help the Red Cross keep pace with its increasing obligations.

Mr. Davis is a Southerner by birth, and therefore fundamentally humane; as a successful business man and financier, he is effective, and as a European ambassador at large under five Presidents, he is discreet.

A TEA IN THE TIME OF ROSES
(See Recipes Below)

Household News By Eleanor Howe

It's the custom, in a great many clubs, to draw the season to a graceful close with a charming spring tea. If you're chairman of the refreshment committee for that delightful social function of your organization, why not plan to make "In the Time of Roses" the theme song for your tea?

Use roses here, there and everywhere—a rose-pink damask cloth with rose pattern; rose-sprigged china; a great bowl of real roses for the centerpiece, and candied rose petals to decorate the tiny cakes.

When you plan the refreshments, allow at least three sandwiches and two little cakes (or cookies) for each guest, and a pound of mints or salted nuts for each 25 guests. If the tea is a large one, you'll need two platters of sandwiches, two of cakes and one dish each of mints and nuts, on the table at one time, and make sure that for each platter on the table there's at least one full one in the kitchen to take its place.

Choose an interesting variety of dainty sandwiches for your tea. Oblong brown bread sandwiches with cream cheese and marmalade are good, and combine effectively with round white bread sandwiches, with a blend of tuna fish and mayonnaise between them. Very thin, dainty slices of an unusual bread are excellent for plain bread and butter sandwiches.

An assortment of dark and light cookies, and very small cakes provide the sweet touch for your menu. And tea you must have, of course.

Tea, when properly made, is one of the most invigorating drinks you can serve. It is most important, especially when making tea for a group, to measure the amount of tea used and to brew it just long enough and not too long in order to insure its best fragrance and tang. (Three to five minutes is generally conceded to be just about right brewing time.)

The powerful dissolving effect of digestive juices has been demonstrated by their action on various kinds of metals fed to rodents. In one case a steel ball bearing, while in the stomach of a rat for 15 days, was reduced 24 per cent in weight.

Son Knew Economical Way To Bring About Result

Father and son had gone together to a bazaar where a pretty girl was selling kises in aid of local charity. "My boy," said the father slyly, "here's a dollar bill. You go and kiss her. When I was young, you can bet I made 'em scream." The son left his father, and shortly after returned in a high state of satisfaction. "Well, did you kiss her, Son?" asked the father. "Yes, you can bet I did, Dad," was the reply. "And did you make her scream?" "Scream? I'll say so! I kept the dollar."

White Doctor's Magic

The inhabitants of Trobriand Islands, southeast of New Guinea, always have stiles before their houses and close to them they dig holes which they cover with leaves. Under the leaves are poisoned spears.

If the islanders thus show a certain cunning, they are simple folk in many ways. Some years ago the medical service considered that they should be vaccinated, but the sight of the instruments terrified them. They were told that a sorcerer was approaching the islands, spreading disease which would kill people by hundreds. The only protection against him was a government mark—two spots on one arm. Immediately the wizard saw those spots he would beat a retreat. So the islanders hurried to the surgeon.

One way to treat constipation is to endure it first and "cure" it afterward. The other way is to avoid having it by getting at its cause. So why not save yourself those dull headachy days, plus the inevitable trips to the medicine chest, if you can do it by a simple common-sense "course of prevention"?

The U. S. on Guard

When President Roosevelt made his demands upon our Nation for immediate preparedness to resist invasion of the Western Hemisphere, he said that this country should have 50,000 planes a year. The American aviation industry has produced a total of about 46,000 planes during its lifetime of a little more than 30 years. Henry Ford has said that his company could make a thousand planes a day.

It develops that Germany took some pages out of democracy's book of achievements in "mass production" and attained a record capacity of 36,000 planes a year. At the same time Germany produced thousands of tanks and vast quantities of mechanized machinery for war. The world has been stunned and amazed by Germany's terrific efficiency.

In the meantime France followed a "popular front government," and nationalized aircraft and other factories "to take the profit out of war." England was doing only about half a job in producing planes. Neither Government seemed to be meeting the threatening challenge by the Germans.

Within recent days our country has voted billions of dollars to prevent or meet invasion of the United States and the Republics of the Western Hemisphere. That is why aircraft has suddenly become a central need of preparedness.

Leaders in industry, like Stettinius and Knudsen, have been summoned to the service of the Government to weld the efforts of private industry and business with Government and military leadership. When America faces danger all Americans lay aside their differences and unite in support of the common cause. That is where we are today. A few weeks ago the National Capital was split into political pieces. Leaders quarreled about domestic and foreign affairs and policies. Now, Army, Navy and Air power are being increased. Men are training for war.

The automobile and airplane factories, and all manufacturing

Fourth of July At Silver City

Nine events are included on the daily program of the seventh annual Silver City Rodeo, scheduled for July 4th, 5th and 6th, 1940. For these events a total of $2755 in guaranteed cash prizes has been posted.

The events and the purse for each are as follows: Bronco riding contest $600; calf roping $400; Brahm bull riding $400; Bareback riding $300; wild horse race $185; ladies' stake race $60; kids stake race $60.

All entry fees are added to the guaranteed purse and it is estimated that more than $5,000 will be distributed in awards to the winners and the finals champions.

Less than a dozen recognized rodeos in the United States offer a larger purse guarantee than the Silver City Rodeo.

Employ Americans

Chicago—Robert J. and Max Eitel, German-born operators of a Chicago restaurant chain, today ordered 175 aliens among their 1000 employees to apply for American citizenship or lose their jobs.

"We feel that anyone who works for us should be a citizen," they explained. "If we had liked it in Germany, we would have stayed there. We should be grateful as should all of foreign birth to this country. Those who are not satisfied should be shipped back."

institutions, are preparing to go into production of planes, tanks, arms, ammunition, and all other instruments necessary to protect this country against any possible attack.

It is true that there is confusion in Washington—plenty of it—but there is a singleness of purpose in respect to defending America that is supported by all political parties, groups and factions. The challenge must be met by American statesmanship and by American citizens. The Government of the United States is preparing for the worst, while hoping that our own peace-loving people will not become involved in the World's catastrophe.

Farragut's Flag is Presented to Navy: In a ceremony at the New York Brooklyn Navy Yard recently, Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, accepted in behalf of the Navy the four storied admiral's flag once flown by Admiral David G. Farragut, Navy Civil War hero. The flag much tattered, was presented by its owner Robert S. Hart of New York and has been sent to the Naval Academy Museum at Annapolis Maryland, where it will be on permanent display.

Crow's Nest: The ship's lookout station was named for the cage which housed the ravens carried by Norsemen at their mastheads. When these sea warriors lost sight of land, they would release one of the birds, and as it headed for the nearest shore, they would follow its flight. A crude method of navigation, but efficient and practical.

Our Navy's European squadron consists of a cruiser and two destroyers. Little has been said of these ships lately. The daily press of 29 May reports that the cruiser Vincennes and the destroyers TRUXTON and SIMPSON are being ordered to join this squadron. The squadron has been basing on Lisbon, Portugal and cruising in neutral waters. The cruiser TRENTON and destroyers HERBERT and DICKINSON have constituted this squadron. Whether the new ships are to relieve them or to augment the force is not stated. The prospect of possibly being assigned to make this European cruise is exciting to speculate on.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING By CHARLES B. ROTH

OF WHAT CAN A MAN BE PROUD? ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON, a gentle and a good man, asked, in dedicating one of his books to a friend, a question which has but one answer. He asked: "Of what can a man be proud if not of his friends?" Friendship is the finest thing in human experience, but it is not confined to the narrow limits of one person to another person. There are friendships of different kinds. For example, there are friendships of business, and they are surely the finest part of business. Just as a man values his personal friends above almost everything else in life, so does a business value its business friendships. The way a business wins friends is the same way that an individual wins them: by deserving them. First the business must give its friends value for their money. Second it must keep its word. Third it must not neglect them, else they will leave. "Friendship," said wise and candid old Doctor Samuel Johnson, "must be kept in repair." Merchants and manufacturers, realizing this, keep their friendships in repair by going out of the way to give value and service and also by proclaiming their regard for their friends on frequent occasions. The form of these proclamations is advertising, which appears in the newspaper and tells of the values being offered, of the service available and of reasons why you can become and remain their customers to your profit and satisfaction. Business men who advertise realize that friendship is a pleasure—and that it is also a responsibility. Whenever a business man advertises it is a sign that he is seeking the friendship of persons and that he is willing to assume the responsibility of being a good friend. His advertising is a warranty that he will do his best to be worthy of his friend's confidence by providing the best and the most economical goods. You can't keep friends if you cheat or overcharge. His advertising is a proof that he values their friendship and intends to be worthy of it. You can't keep friends unless you are willing to live up to your highest ideals, not only for the present, but also for the future. The advertising in the newspaper is much more than so many commercial announcements. It is an overture toward friendship by a man or a product which means to be worthy of your friendship. Charles B. Roth.

The Roman Phalanx of 1940 A. D.

Julius Caesar's "phalanx" of close-packed Roman legions who formed an armored roof with shields covering their advance, is improved upon by the modern "Caesar." Here are today's Roman "phalanx" armored legions that comprise part of Italy's war machine. These tanks are ultra-modern, many being equipped with flame projectors.

Dole Debauches, Says Mormon Leader, So Church Sets Up Own Work Welfare

By CLARENCE D. WILLIAMS (Released by Western Newspaper Union)

"WE MORMONS have cared for the essential needs of our own since the struggling days of the 'forties' under the guiding hand of the great colonizer, Brigham Young."

So says 83-year-old Heber Jeddy Grant, president of the Mormon church. But he doesn't rest with talk, and that accounts for the huge Mormon church welfare plan to banish unemployment.

This plan, wholly divorced from politics, seeking and wanting no aid from any municipal, county, state or federal agency, is going to be a permanent plan to "help people help themselves," asserts the man who is prophet, seer, revelator, and leader of more than 800,000 faithful since 1918.

The project is based purely upon religious principles, assert its sponsors, which were laid down by the church a century ago.

Operate Coal Mine, Factories. The plan, which materially reduces the total amount necessary for adequate relief in any given community, has been showing rapid results. There has been established in Salt Lake City a central bishop's storehouse, in addition there are 67 regional and stake storehouses that serve approximately 100 of the 127 stakes and there are small emergency bishop's storehouses in the remote rural wards of the church.

The welfare plan operates a coal mine, a large canning factory in addition to smaller units scattered all over the church, a clothing factory, a clothing renovating shop and salvage plant, with several stores established to distribute their output, and two saw mills. One stake is undertaking an experimental soap manufacturing project and still another group is manufacturing ladders and another adobe for building homes.

Newest venture in the plan is the construction of 23 grain storage elevators having a total capacity of 350,000 bushels. At the present time a large crew of workmen, the majority of whom are devout church members, are working day and night pouring concrete in the giant forms. They will be paid in kind and will receive some cash. The grain elevators are located in Salt Lake City.

Ever since the planner, Brigham Young, drilled the necessity of hard work and thrift into his flock there has been more or less strict obedience to his commands.

Heads Many Businesses. The life and character of Mr. Young, second leader of the church, unquestionably have inspired the five men, who since Brigham's death in 1877 have worn the mantle of president of the Mormon church. Heber J. Grant, seventh president, is a native of Salt Lake City. He is tall, erect and still is a "powerhouse" despite his recent serious illness which forced him to refrain from his strenuous and untiring job of attending to even the smallest details of operating the church.

President Grant in addition to being titular head of the Mormon faith is head of many powerful Utah industrial and commercial organizations. They include factories, banks, hotels and insurance companies. In spite of all that keeps him "on the go" he keeps in close contact with the most humble members of his flock.

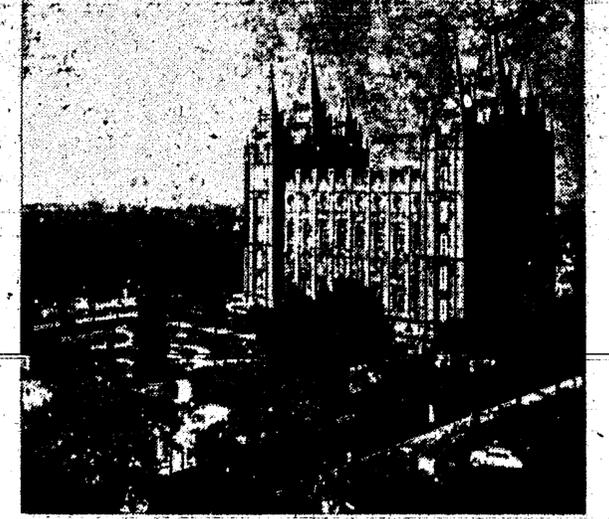

Keen-minded and witty Mr. Grant is a firm believer in work and more work. "It keeps you young and maintains your pride," he asserts. He is dead set against such retirement plans as Townsend advocates.

"Why, it's the silliest thing I have ever heard," he said. "I certainly do not endorse such a pension plan for my members."

He stopped to figure out how much he would have received if the plan were effective when he was 65 years of age. "Why, I would have received thousands of dollars. No sir, I urge at all times that church members give a full day's work for their full day's pay."

And he added: "I urge that they keep on working their life time, providing they are able."

Along with his right hand men, First Counselor J. Reuben Clark Jr. and Second Counselor David O. McKay, who make up what is termed the "first presidency," bearded President Grant quickly points out the church can care for its own in the future if it can be relieved of the debauchery to character which follows along with a dole.

In order to render moderate financial assistance to those who were engaged in small farming or business, and who did not have a bankable undertaking, the church set up the Co-operative Security corporation. This company has made a number of small loans, which are largely character loans, but has limited the amount it would lend to any one person to a few hundred dollars.

Finally, the church has not yet made any effort, or pretended to make any effort, to take its members from governmental work projects. Leaders say it has merely urged those on such projects to do a full day's work for a day's pay.

While the church welfare plan aims, of course, to help those in need, its real purpose is not merely to substitute church gratuities for others furnished by charitable or governmental agencies, but to rebuild the characters of its members and to promote and foster the patriotic, civic, and spiritual qualities of the people.

He Knew Poverty. Heber Jeddy was born in 1856 in a pioneer home where the large Z. C. M. I. mercantile establishment now stands, nine years after Brigham Young had arrived in Utah with his band of pioneers fleeing from persecution in Missouri and Illinois.

When Heber was a growing boy the Mormons under President Young were beset by disease, famine and more persecution. Mr. Grant's father, Jedediah, was one of Young's leaders. His boy, Heber, grew up under conditions of poverty. He struggled hard to support his mother after the death of his father when he was at a tender age. He possessed the will to succeed with everything he undertook to do. He later built his mother a fine home when he was often branded as a failure. Meantime he exhibited a talent for business and weaved his pattern of life, without the aid of anyone except his mother, who constantly encouraged him to carry on under the ideals laid down by the L. D. S. church.

The churchman has many favorite sayings which he has recited to Latter-day Saints at various church conferences that are held in the historic oval-shaped tabernacle on famous Temple square.

One of his sayings is based on his "persist in doing" philosophy.

Praises Sense of Humor. He asserts: "That which we persist in doing becomes easy to do; not that the nature of the thing has changed, but that our power to do has increased."

The Mormons, particularly those in the western states, have proved to be long-livers. Longevity is typical among the pioneer families in Utah.

Heber Grant, who will be 84 years of age next November 22, believes that age is a quality of mind. He often has repeated: "Age is a quality of mind; if your dreams you've left behind, if hope is cold, if you no longer look ahead, if your ambitions are dead, then you are growing old."

A humorist and a known philanthropist, President Grant has appeared at many leading conventions as a principal speaker, often "stealing the show."

"Without a sense of humor a person will fail to make friends," he declared. "And the more friends, the more you get out of life."

He warned that the "curse of idleness shortens a man's life." He said those who are near, or in the so-called "pension age," better think twice before they take a permanent rest.

Mr. Grant has been a great organizer and devoted many of his early years to missionary work and was the first representative of the church to preside over a mission in Japan. He was only about 25 years of age when he was ordained a member of the council of twelve apostles.

No More Polygamy. He was made president of the council of twelve apostles during the presidency of Joseph F. Smith and following President Smith's death in 1918 he was elevated to the top ranking position he now holds.

The once burning Mormon question—polygamy—has long been forever banished. Any person of the faith who attempts in any way to practice plural marriage is excommunicated from the church.

President Grant has had three wives and was the father of twelve children, two boys and ten girls. His sons and two of his wives are dead.

He has been quoted on the subject of polygamy as follows:

"Plural marriages have long been passe. Although they used to be in good form among members, today they are condemned. There are still some who attempt to practice it, but they suffer when they are discovered. Before the practice was forbidden it was different. Contrary to the propaganda spread by the enemies of the church, plural marriages as practiced by church members were not different from any other form of holy matrimony.

"The laws of the church were such that a man was required to get a written indorsement before he could enter into plural marriage, and he had to have an excellent character. Even when the practice was common, the number of such marriages was insignificant compared with the population."

Urges 'Words of Wisdom.'

The church president is constantly urging his flock to obey the teachings of the "Word of Wisdom." This prohibits the use of intoxicating liquors, tobacco and tea and coffee.

In his entire career as president of the church, Mr. Grant has only been absent from two general church conferences in Salt Lake City. Both times he was forced to remain away on account of illness. Once he had to go to Chicago to undergo an operation and again he wasn't able to preside at the great gathering in April, 1940 when he was confined in a Los Angeles hospital.

The annual report of the church for 1939 shows a total church membership of 803,528. There are 645,618 in the stakes and 157,910 in the missions.

Founding Fathers Left Door Open for Canada

Should Germany conquer England, take a look at the Articles of Confederation, drafted by the Founding Fathers of the United States in 1777. You will find, say Pearson and Allen, Washington columnists, a paragraph giving specific legal precedent for Canada seeking admittance as a member of the United States. The Founding Fathers opened the door in long-forgotten Article II as follows:

"Canada acceding to this Confederation, and joining in the measures of the United States, shall be admitted into, and entitled to all the advantages of this Union. But no other Colony shall be admitted into the same unless such admission be agreed to by nine states."

According to this, it would appear that Canada could become a part of the United States without a referendum vote by the other 43 states.

Sheila looked at Frank steadily, unable to speak, unable to smile or move, chained in her chair, the apricot color flooding her face, her blue eyes fixed on his.

For a long time they looked at each other in silence. Color had come into Frank's face, too. After a while he smiled, his kindest, his simplest smile.

"I'm sorry," he said. And after a pause he repeated it. "I'm terribly sorry."

"Oh, that's all right," Sheila assured him politely, clearing her throat again. And for a long time neither could seem to find anything further to say.

"It must sound kind of flat—for me to say that I like you—awfully, more than any—any girl your age I ever knew," Frank presently ventured, with an awkward laugh.

"No, I'm glad," Sheila responded very simply and honestly.

She looked up at him, looked down again. She was young, almost child-like-looking in the big chair, with her blue hat curving off her face like a baby's cap, and her coppery film of hair almost in her blue eyes.

"My father says you're moving to Astoria," Frank said.

"Next month,"

"Will you be glad, Sheila?"

"Glad!" she echoed. "Angela and I'll have a room to ourselves!"

"Oh, and where'll Joe be?"

"Joe and Ceely want to get married."

"Ah, and now they can?"

"Your father told Ma that if she'd keep the eight houses rented for him she wouldn't have to pay any rent; she'd get paid, herself."

"Does she like that idea, Sheila?"

"She said it was an answer to prayer, and Joe is working."

There was a long pause. Sheila knew that she ought to go, now. But her limbs refused to obey the languid impulse of her mind. She ought to go—she ought to go—

But that would end it. When she went now, she never would see him again. The black thick hair, and the dark-blue of the shaven jaw, and the little half-smile he so often gave her, and the ways in which he was so old and so wise—and the ways in which he was so young and so simple—all gone out of her life, when she walked out of this house.

"I remember the night you first called here, you—you were all gotten up as a beggar," Frank recalled.

"I came into the hall and asked Mamma who had left the rag-bag in. And she said that Gertrude—by the way, where is that purse?"

"Most of the money, luckily, I left with Mamma," Sheila explained.

"But the purse I lost. I had it up in the farmhouse in Connecticut, I remember, because my make-up was in it, and I powdered my nose there—I remember that. But then—in all the excitement of getting away, and the queerness of it all, I dropped it, somewhere. And I lost my blue hat the day of the smash."

"Well, I think I owe you a hat," Frank said.

"Oh, no, you don't! This one," Sheila told him, "cost me ninety-eight cents. It was in a window. They had every hat with the two copper cents lying next to it."

"The two copper cents?"

"Lying next to it. Your change from a dollar," she explained.

"Ah—"

Sheila stood up, smiling a goodbye. Frank took her hand.

There was time for no more. Sudden footsteps sounded in the hall, and with tremendous uproar, Peter McCann was in the room.

"Frank!" he shouted.

He stopped short at the sight of Sheila.

"Hello, Sheila," he said.

"Hello! Sheila responded, simply.

They stood looking at each other a moment, then Peter, with a return of excitement, turned toward his brother. "Frank, d'you know what's happened? Gee, I'm glad Sheila's here for this!"

"What's the matter?"

"They've found the farmhouse! They found the place those fellows took us, Sheila!"

"They've found the farmhouse!" Sheila exclaimed. "Oh, Peter!"

"Member you drew a plan of the rooms for the police? Well, listen, they want to see you again, and they check up on that plan, and they found your purse, and everything! Listen, Frank, two school teachers or artists or something from Boston have that place, and they went up there for school vacation, see?—and they found signs of bootleggers—and everything—"

"Who said so?" Frank interrupted, almost as much excited as his brother.

"The police. This country cop came all the way down to identify the purse. They telephoned here, a couple of hours ago; you were asleep, and everyone else was out, and I beat it right over to see him. Well, there was your blue purse all right, with Gertrude's initials and our address on it, Sheila."

"And they found the place wrecked?"

"They say the fellows must have stopped using it right after they took us up there."

"This is interesting!" Frank said.

"Frank, they'd like to ask Sheila some questions. Could she and I go over there now?"

"Hang it," Frank said, "you ought to have someone, Pop or me, with you!"

"We don't need anyone!"

"How much—?" There was rising excitement in Frank's voice. "How much'd I have to walk, Pete, if I went with you?"

"Oh, Frank, you oughtn't!" Sheila protested.

"Shucks, it can't hurt me!"

"You wouldn't have to walk a step, Frank. We can get a taxi."

"I'd like to go. I'd know what they were after."

"It wouldn't hurt you a bit."

"I don't believe it would," Frank said slowly.

"Aw, come on, Frank! Come on. All they want is to ask Sheila a few questions."

"It wouldn't take us fifteen minutes—the invalid mused, tempted.

"You were out yesterday," Peter urged. "You managed that all right."

"I know. What harm can it do?" Frank exclaimed, throwing hesitation to the winds. "Get me my coat, Pete."

He hobbled to the head of the stairs, managed them easily; Sheila started flustered ahead, with his stick and his hat, and Peter accompanying him anxiously and warningly. They reached the lower hall, moving slowly but steadily to the front door.

"I'm all right. I feel fine!" Frank said.

The taxi was waiting; they could see it as they reached the top of the brownstone steps. Sheila took the stick again; Peter again caught a firm hold of his brother's arm.

They had gained the sidewalk when a limousine drew up ahead of the taxi, and three women and a stout, gray-headed man got out. The man was Judge Paul McCann; one of the ladies was his wife.

The other two were Gertrude Keane and Bernadette Kennedy.

Peter, Frank and Sheila stood rooted to the pavement, the recent arrivals stood stricken, too, gazing at them, at the taxi, back at them again.

"Well, you have both the boys now, haven't you?" Bernadette Kennedy novelly said sweetly.

"I never told you and Angela exactly what happened, Ma," Sheila said.

She had washed her bright copper hair, and as it tumbled in rings and ribbons on her neck, the spring sunshine struck dazzling lights from it. A towel was spread across her shoulders, and belted trimly about the curves of her young body was an old blue cotton kimono.

was almost pure gain. Sheila was to sit near the main entrance in a sort of little pulpit, and tell arriving customers where everything in the store was to be found. A small, heavy brass triangle would stand near her hand, and printed on it would be "Miss Carscadden had been chosen because of her exceptional courtesy and efficiency. It will give her real pleasure to help you."

"The place is full of that sort of bunk, but who cares? I don't care what they think about me," Sheila had said, indulgently, upon reporting this fact. "I'm reformed, anyway," she had added. "I'm all for citizenship and helpful house spirit—I'm going in for character building, clean finger nails, and a low, rich voice."

"Ma—" Sheila had pleaded, and it was then that she had added, while she spread and tossed her blazing hair, "I never told you and Angela what really happened, Ma."

"An' God preserve me that you iver wud!" her mother said simply.

"There's niver a breath of blame cud be said against ye, but we'll all be up in the Death Row itself if iver ye get another chance to do good to somebody, or get yourself out of somethin'!"

"Now, on Palm Sunday afternoon," Sheila continued pleasantly, "what harm did it do me to drive to a police station with Peter and Judge Mc Cann, make a short statement and have Judge Mc Cann give me a dollar for my taxi home? I stayed in the taxi, Sheila added, in reminiscent tones, "until it said thirty cents, then I gave him a ten-cent tip, jumped into the subway, and made fifty-five cents on the judge!"

"It makes me nervous to have ye talk about thim Mc Canns, Sheila. I'd niver know what minute ye'd be in trouble again," her mother said.

"Peter and Gertrude Keane are getting married next fall, Ma; that's all the trouble amounted to there."

"Yes, an' what about the other poor feller?"

"You mean Frank?" Sheila asked dreamily. The name sounded like music on her lips. "I don't know—" she admitted slowly.

"Whin did ye see him?" the mother demanded suspiciously.

"Mother, I give you my word I haven't seen him since that Palm Sunday—nearly three weeks ago."

"Sheila Carscadden," Angela said instantly, when they were alone, "you had a wire this morning."

"I know it. But Ma only asked about seeing him."

"All right," Angela said, in displeasure, "if you want to lie."

"I didn't lie!"

"You practically did," Angela persisted.

Sheila's expression grew suddenly disarming and young.

"Listen, Angie. I was knocked completely in a heap when I got it. I—" she interrupted herself.

"How'd you know it was from Frank Mc Cann?" she demanded.

"I didn't read it, if that's what you mean," Angela answered. "But the way you've been acting since it came—" she explained eloquently.

"I know—" Sheila murmured, looking away.

"You've been talking character for weeks now," the younger sister pursued. "You've been horribly quiet—we've all seen it. You've jumped whenever anyone spoke to you, and you've gone off into sort of dreamy states—"

"I know," Sheila admitted again, still staring into space with tranced eyes.

"And I knew it was Frank!" Angela concluded triumphantly.

The other girl spoke slowly: "I've known all along that it was Frank."

"And in his wire—Sheila, do you think he likes you?" Angela demanded eagerly.

"Angela, I don't know. He only says, 'Coming to see you Sunday.'"

"Tomorrow?"

"I guess so."

"Sheila, what'll you do if Frank Mc Cann's just coming down here to tell you he's going to be married?" the younger sister asked after a silence.

"I thought of that."

"But after all, why should he?" Angela asked sensibly.

"It's just one of the things he would do," Sheila mused. "Well," she added, with spirit, "he'll not see me lose my nerve!"

"But will you feel—terribly, Sheila?" Angela asked timidly, after another pause.

Sheila brought her gaze back from far spaces.

"Oh, Angela, it will be very hard," she answered, simply.

It was not fifteen minutes later that Angela called.

"Sheila!"

"Woo-hoo!" Sheila returned, from the depths of the house.

"Mr. Mc Cann is here!" Angela shouted.

"Mr. Mc Cann what?" (There were hairpins in Sheila's mouth.)

"Mr. Mc Cann is here."

"Yes, he is!" Sheila said in a clearer tone. "Well, amuse him until I put on some lipstick. Dances and sing to him, dear, and give him a sweet kiss!" she added. And quite audibly she went on, "Ma, I'm mixed up with those Mc Cann boys again!"

CHAPTER XVI

Sheila's job was not much of a job, to be sure, nor was she to be needed until May first. But it was near; it was in the department store over under the elevated road, five blocks away, and she could walk to and fro, so that the fifteen week was almost pure gain. Sheila was to sit near the main entrance in a sort of little pulpit, and tell arriving customers where everything in the store was to be found. A small, heavy brass triangle would stand near her hand, and printed on it would be "Miss Carscadden had been chosen because of her exceptional courtesy and efficiency. "God forbid!" Mrs. Carscadden's voice said fervently.

"I really am, Ma."

"There's worse things than death, if the truth were known," the older woman observed solemnly.

"Sheila!" Angela called sharply.

"Mr. Mc Cann really is here!"

"What!" they could hear Sheila gasp in a sharp whisper. She came to the door of the sun porch; she saw him, tall and dark and smiling.

"Well, really, Angela," she said, in the last stage of horror and exasperation. "Really!"

"Well, what else could I do?" Angela retorted, aggrieved.

"I don't know what you'll think—I never dreamed—I wish I could remember what I said—how are you?"

Sheila said, looking so lovely in her confusion and pleasure and anger that Frank gave an embarrassed laugh, and stammered on his own account as he greeted her.

"You didn't say anything, except that your sister was to dance and sing for me, which she hasn't done."

Mrs. Carscadden now majestically adding herself to the group, Frank addressed himself to her in tones not quite loud enough to drown out her scathing observation to Sheila to the effect that perhaps now, she, Sheila, wouldn't feel it necessary to wake the dead when anyone called her a message.

"I did say Sunday in my wire," Frank admitted, "but today was such a heavenly day, and I was free—"

"There was nothing said to me of a telegram," Mrs. Carscadden assured him. "That's the manners of today," she continued. "They'd niver tell you anything, the lot of them. My own good mother'd niver have a dispatch—an' it was few she had, thanks be to God, for iver last war of them had death in the first world of it—but she'd niver have one of them what the whole lot of us wouldn't run to her like a flock of birds. We kept nothin' from her, nor she from us."

"Telegram used to mean trouble, Pop says," Frank contributed cheerfully.

"Children mane trouble," Mrs. Carscadden instantly amended it.

"That one, now," she went on, with a dark glance at Sheila, "she'd drag the whole family into it like a dog druggin' a table-cloth!"

"Mamma, you don't believe that," Sheila protested.

"It's up in flyin' machines, off in cars, onto roofs—she'll leap into anything!" pursued the mother.

"Sheila will," Frank said simply, looking at her.

CHAPTER XVII

"Angela," Mrs. Carscadden said instantly, interpreting a look from Sheila, like the good mother she was, "will ye step into the back room there will me, dear, whilst I'll pin up the little cur'Hains!"

"Let me help!" Frank offered.

"I wud, indeed, Mr. Mc Cann, but 'twill only take us the second of a second! An' how's your good mamma?" Mrs. Carscadden asked politely, in retreat.

"She's fine, thank you. She's perfectly delighted," Frank said, with Angela's letter about the new house."

"Do we love it?" Sheila exclaimed.

"We'll be back," her mother said, departing with Angela. Frank and Sheila were alone.

There was a silence.

"One thing I came to tell you was," Frank began, "that Bernadette sailed for Italy last night."

"Oh?"

"She and her brother have been planning it for years, and—our plans," Frank hesitated, "sort of knocked it in the head. They were delighted to go. She was laughing—honestly. I went down to the boat, and she was—I've never seen Deite so gay. She said to me, 'This is more fun than our engagement party, Frank!'"

"She didn't."

"Yes, she did. I think she felt relieved," Frank persisted.

"But it wouldn't have mattered," he said, after a silence. "It wouldn't—it couldn't—have mattered how she felt, because I—I couldn't have gone on with it."

Sheila said nothing.

"I knew it," Frank went on, "on Palm Sunday. I knew—why Bernadette and I could wait five years to get married. I knew that if you can wait at all there's something wrong. You were smart enough to know that. I wasn't."

"It's Sheila asked thickly.

"Yes—you told me that."

She had been sitting on an old kitchen chair with a rodged back; now Frank drew near it the box on which Angela had been sitting, and sat down and laid one hand on her own locked hands, on her knee.

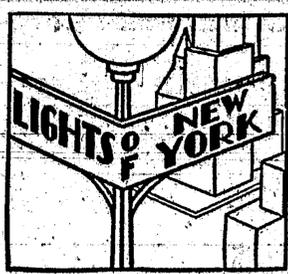

"It's—that way—with me," he said.

Sheila raised thick eyelashes, with a little effort, and looked at him.

"The world's split in two for me," the man said, as she made no effort to reply, but continued to look at him steadily through the black fringe of her lashes. "They're all laughing at me at home; I don't care. I want to tell everyone I meet about you. I can't eat; I'm crazy. And it isn't only you, Sheila, it's everything. One of the fellows in the office is just married, and I was talking to him yesterday and thinking what a miracle it must be to go home to your wife—"

"I know—" Sheila said in the pause, gazing at him with round, fascinated eyes, like a child.

Unfinished Story: A friend of this department happened to come up to the sea lion pool in Central park just as a gust of wind whisked from a woman's head one of those funny little hats. As the owner shrieked, the hat sailed out over the pool and finally did a nose dive. No sooner did it strike the surface of the water than it bobbed up again. A nose of one of the five sea lions that make their home there was the propelling power. A shake of a sleek head settled the hat to exactly the right position and then the sea lion, a good actor, swam around and around as if enjoying the cheers and laughter. Finally, still wearing the hat, it climbed upon the little stone stage where the sea lions sun themselves and for some minutes posed as if looking into a mirror. Whether the woman recovered her hat cannot be stated because when my friend left, the sea lion was still posing.

Chevrolet Builds Its 900,000th 1940 Car

Here is the 900,000th car of Chevrolet's 1940 model production, as it left the assembly line at Flint, Mich., June 12, less than one month after No. 300,000 was completed. Beside the car are M. E. Coyle, general manager of the Chevrolet Motor Division (left), G. E. Wetherald, general manufacturing manager (right), and Arnold Leuz, assistant manufacturing manager, who were present in the plant when the car was produced.

"Chevrolet has built 300,000 cars in less than three months," Mr. Coyle pointed out. "The 600,000th of these models was built on March 31, the 700,000th on April 16, the 800,000th on May 12, and the 900,000th on June 12. This production rate closely parallels the consistently heavy sales volume since the introduction of the 1940 models last October, sales during March, April and May alone totalling 307,345."
