Death Claims Mrs. Carl E. Freeman

It is with deepest sorrow that we chronicle the death of Mrs. Carl E. Freeman, age 59, which occurred at her home here last Sunday morning at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Freeman became ill suddenly last July, while apparently in her usual good health. She was taken to El Paso for treatment and seemed to be improved. She was brought home where she continued with indomitable will power and courage to fight for restoration to health, but it was not to be; three weeks ago she took a turn for the worse and her condition was pronounced critical with little or no hope held for her recovery.

She was one of the most active women we have ever known. She took part in Lodge, church, civic and social activities, while at the same time carrying on her usual duties for her family at their lovely ranch home.

A friend to all, her popularity was unbounded; she had a most pleasing personality, and was universally admired for her many good traits which were manifested in her daily association with her friends. Personally we liked her for her frankness, her open stand on public questions, and her willingness to aid any good cause.

Her family, friends and the entire community are heavy losers in her passing.

She is survived by her husband, Dr. Carl Elmo Freeman, by two daughters, Miss Rhoda M. Freeman and Mrs. Mary May Pruett by one son, Mr. Carl Freeman, and other relatives.

Funeral services were conducted on the lawn at the home she loved so well, with Rev. L. D. Cochran in charge of the services; a perfect setting for a perfect life.

Interment was at the local cemetery, with the Eastern Star Lodge of which she was an honored member, in charge.

Pall bearers were Messrs. Frank English, Shirley Phipps, C. M. Luckey, A. J. Rolland, Ed Queen and Dr. R. E. Blaney.

Flower girls were Misses Jane Gallacher, Bessie Perovich, Zane Harkey, Geradine and Jackie Dickson, Charline Page, Louise Degeer, Wilma Snow, Margaret Myers and Frances Huffmeyer.

Floral offerings were many and beautiful.

Messrs. C. E. Degner and Jake Fulmer have gone to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania on a business trip.

Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Titworth attended Mrs. Freeman's funeral here last Monday.

Maurice Miera Republican candidate for Governor was one of the principal speakers last Tuesday night at the Republican rally.

Republican Rally

Mr. Maurice Miera and party held a rally here Tuesday evening. They had a good crowd present. One remark by one of the candidates was truthful we know. He said: "It is a pleasure for a Republican speaker to have this many people to address."

Mrs. Shipley, candidate for Senator from Lincoln and Otero Counties on the Republican ticket made a good talk.

We wish to express sincere thanks to our friends and neighbors for their many kind deeds and expressions of sympathy upon the death of our beloved wife, mother and daughter, Mrs. Sylvia Davis.

Mrs. Sylvia Davis Died Last Night

(From Roswell Record, Sat. Oct. 6)

Mrs. Sylvia Margaret Davis passed away last night at 9:30 at the United States Marine Hospital in Fort Stanton. She had been in ill health for a number of years but her condition did not become serious until Wednesday night when she was taken to the hospital in Fort Stanton.

Mrs. Davis was born in Lincoln County, at Nogal, Sept. 22, 1903, and lived there all her life. She was a member of one of Lincoln County's prominent pioneer families and is known by almost everyone in that section of the country. She always took an active part in the civic, church and school affairs in the mountains and always worked for the betterment of conditions in the community in which she lived. She will indeed be missed both by her family and her many friends. She was a frequent visitor in Roswell and has a large number of friends here.

She is survived by her husband, Wiley Davis; by two children, Edward Davis and Mamie Davis, by her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. L. R. LaMay, all of whom reside in the mountain section, also five sisters, Mrs. Austin Wooten of Roswell, Miss Jennie LaMay of El Paso, Mrs. Cora Dutton of Redlands, Calif., Mrs. Ruth Aguayo of Nogal, and Mrs. J. B. Morris of Childress, Texas, and by four brothers, Fred LaMay of Carrizozo, John LaMay of Tularosa, Roy LaMay and Tom LaMay both of Nogal. All of her family are in Roswell at the present time.

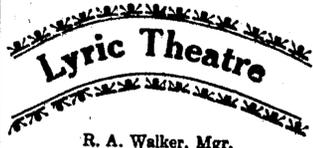

Funeral services will be held tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon at 2:00 o'clock from the Angus Methodist Church with the Reverend J. P. Crawford, pastor of the church, conducting the services. Interment will be made in the Angus Cemetery under the direction of the Ballard Funeral Home.

Willkie Boasts he Does Not Work But Farmers Do For Him

In the advance copies of Mr. Willkie's Coffeyville address sent out by the Republican National Committee there occurred this passage: "I have five farms in Indiana and I make a modest profit on them. But I don't pitch hay myself. I trust some one else to do it."

When the candidate spoke his piece at Coffeyville he left out this passage. Was it because he did not wish to have his acquisition of these farms inquired into? Because he did not care to have it known that they were bought at distress prices? That Mr. Willkie now owns them and makes "a modest profit on them" because farmers who do pitch the hay themselves were sold out by the sheriff under foreclosure and Mr. Willkie, with money he got from the power trust, picked them up at bargain figures?

Was Mr. Willkie afraid that farmers generally who have plenty of difficulty with hard labor to keep and farm going at a "modest profit" would be wondering what Mr. Willkie was doing with five farms? And would perhaps be curious to know why Mr. Willkie was so proud of the fact that he had farmers working for his profit instead of their own?

New Pittsburgh-Harrisburg Turnpike Marks Beginning of Superhighway Era

By HERMAN CROCKETT
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
HARRISBURG, PA. — Passenger automobiles speed along at 105 miles an hour. Their occupants, unaware of an excessive rate of motion, travel on a curveless ribbon of concrete that goes through mountains instead of over them—a highway without intersections or railroad crossings, without billboards or hazards of snow, ice, and fog.

A dream of the future? Hardly. Pennsylvania will dedicate such a highway and open it to public travel sometime this fall. It will be 100 miles long, connecting the city of Pittsburgh in the western part of the state with Harrisburg, the capital, near the east. And plans are being made to extend it an additional 112 miles to Philadelphia.

The road eliminates all the mountain hazards between the Ohio river and Delaware tidewater. It will reduce, by hours, travel from the Midwest to the eastern metropolises. For truckers it will save as much as 15 hours time and an estimated $30 between two points, compared to use of the present roads.

Since the beginning of the westward march of civilization across the United States, the formidable mountain ridges of the Appalachians have imposed natural barriers on travel and transportation between the Atlantic seaboard and the Middle West. Pennsylvania's two major east-west highways solved the problem in a limited way previously. The Lincoln highway crossed the mountains directly on steep grades; the other, the William Penn highway, followed the winding Juniata river to its headwaters, crossing one mountain and descending to Pittsburgh through rolling hill country. Both routes have obvious limitations, the former having many grades as steep as 8 and 9 per cent, and the William Penn having a few steep grades with many curves and a longer route between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh.

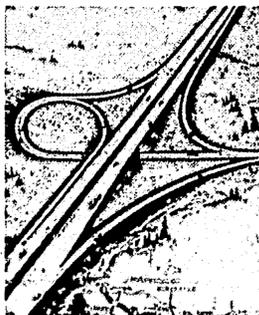

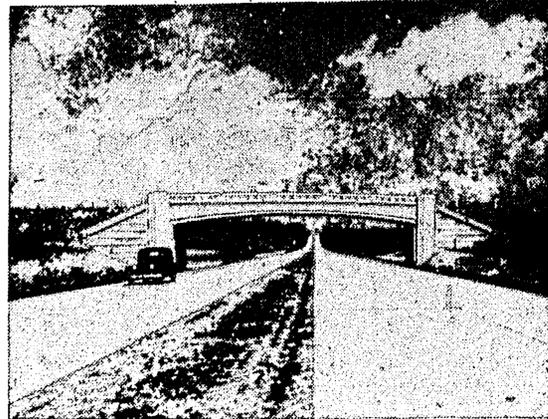

Always there has been the dream of a better and shorter road, one that would not add hundreds of miles to the journey by going around the mountains.

Follows Abandoned Railroad. The new turnpike follows the line of the old South Penn railroad, a project never completed. It is a four-lane concrete shaft with east and west traffic separated by a 10-foot center parkway. Seven tunnels through the mountains, prepared for the railroad, are used to eliminate grades.

In all, there are seven miles of these tunnels. Every device to insure safety, comfort and speed has been installed. Hugo fans will constantly supply an adequate amount of pure air. The tunnels will be electrically lighted.

On the open pike all crossroads are carried either underneath or overhead. Direct cross-flow is avoided by means of looping ramps, or cloverleaf intersections. All interchanges are so located that approaching traffic can look down on them and readily picture the layout. There will be no traffic lights. Deceleration and acceleration lanes are provided at each interchange. These are 1,200 feet long and are set parallel to and contiguous with the piking.

Carved out of the mountains as a single project, the road is not a merger of previous roads, linked together. It is all new. The severest grade anywhere is 3 per cent, that is three feet rise to 100 feet of length. Whenever curves have been necessary the road has been banked to accommodate high speeds. Test runs have shown a speed of 105 miles an hour as not dangerous. The superhighway cost $70,050,000 and was financed by a grant of $29,000,000 from the PWA and $41,000,000 in revenue bonds purchased by the RFC. Tolls are to be charged ($1.50 for passenger automobiles), but the highway will in time pay for itself and then become a free road, part of the state's highway system.

Seven tunnels permit the highway to pass through, rather than over or around, the Appalachian mountains, thereby eliminating one of the barriers that has confounded transcontinental traffic ever since the first western march of the pioneers.

The diagram above shows a cloverleaf intersection which enables vehicles to enter or leave the highway without disrupting the normal flow of traffic.

Built in Two Years.

Less than two years have been required to complete this ideal speedway, although previous attempts to span the mountains go back to the early 1800s. During that time more than a score of attempts were made. First curveys for a railroad were authorized by the Pennsylvania legislature in 1837, but it was not until 1854 that that body empowered a company to raise funds and charter the Marysville, Landisville and Broad Top railroad.

In 1859, the name of the proposed railroad was changed by legislative enactment to the ambitious title, "Pennsylvania Pacific railroad," which was retained until 1863, when it was again changed to the "South Pennsylvania railroad," or "South Penn," as it was popularly called.

The project was revived and dropped several times during the next 23 years, but beyond keeping the charter alive, little was done until 1863 when William H. Vanderbilt took over the company. Then, in that roaring decade of the 1860s, when probably one-fifth of the nation's present railroad mileage was constructed, the old South Penn right-of-way, now followed by the turnpike, became the battleground of financial titans.

The greatest of all South Penn ventures began in New York in 1833, when the Pennsylvania railroad threatened to enter into competition with the New York Central by building a parallel line up the west shore of the Hudson river. In retaliation, William H. Vanderbilt, New York Central chief and one-time associate of J. P. Morgan, organized a company to build the South Penn road paralleling the Pennsylvania railroad's lines in its home state.

Carnegie a Backer.

The biggest backer was Andrew Carnegie, Pittsburgh steel king, who contributed $5,000,000. Carnegie welcomed the new line, for he had fought the "Pennsy" unsuccessfully for years to win lower rates for transporting his Pittsburgh steel to the seaboard.

"What do you think of it, Carnegie?" asked Vanderbilt. "I think so well of it that I and my friends will raise $5,000,000 as our subscription," Carnegie replied. "All right," said Vanderbilt. "I'll put in another $5,000,000." Forty millions in stocks and bonds were floated, bought eagerly by the public. Vanderbilt organized the American Construction company, and then gave it the contracts. Surveys were resumed under the direction of Oliver W. Barnes, engineer, and a corps of 300 men. Ten-foot contour maps covering 1,000 square miles were drawn, and 5,000 miles of lines were run. In the fall of 1863, a definite time was adopted, and contracts for the tunnels and largest bridges were let.

Three thousand laborers poured into the mountains. Within two years, bridge piers for the line studied the Susquehanna river at Harrisburg; long cuts gashed the hill-tops; mammoth fills scarred the valleys, and the towering peaks of the Alleghenies had been pierced by nine tunnels.

Then in the fall of 1865 when the job was half finished, the incredible order "stop work" went out. Engineers packed up their transit, laborers dropped their tools. The roadbeds, tunnels, and bridges were abandoned to the ravages of time.

Railroad Sold Out.

In financial circles behind the scenes, the death warrant of the South Pennsylvania railroad had been written. Alarmed by the prospect of a destructive railroad rate "war," J. P. Morgan forced Vanderbilt and his backers to call out to the Pennsylvania railroad.

Following the World war, came troublous days for the railroads. America was taking to a new mode of travel. Automobiles were being turned out by the millions for a people who went pleasure-bent on trips that took them but hours where their forefathers had spent months. Also came great freight buses that carried the manufactured goods of the nation to the East over hard-surfaced roads. And the demand for better roads and more speed increased. In 1934, William A. Sutherland, then general manager of the Pennsylvania Motor Truck association, revived the idea of a road over the mountains; this time a highway instead of a railway.

For many months he carried the fight alone. But in 1935 a resolution to survey the possibilities of the proposal passed the legislature. Financing was a big problem, but the federal government finally looked upon the plan with favor, and assistance came from financial agencies set up by congress. The old South Penn line with its already-built tunnels was chosen.

Perhaps in the minds of the federal authorities was more than a road for industrial use; the road has definite military possibilities. In case of emergency it will be a major transportation artery. Men, munitions and other material could be moved across the Alleghenies with the speed so necessary to modern warfare. Just recently a motorized battalion of the Pennsylvania National Guard, in a test run across the still uncompleted road, left Harrisburg and set up a "defense area" near the important Bedford steel sector, 135 miles away, in just five hours. It was definitely a blitzkrieg movement, the fastest registered in any nation in any time.

Principally, however, the road is for scenic and commercial uses. "Naturally, we shall exclude billboards," said Walter A. Jones, the turnpike commission chairman.

Asked how this policy would be enforced, he said, "First, we own a right-of-way 200 feet wide at the narrowest point. If, despite our disapproval, some enterprising company erects billboards, we shall plant on our own land such shrubs and trees as are necessary to hide the signs." Even the oil stations will be under the supervision of the commission. A contract has been let to a leading company, but the 10 stations being erected are the property of the commission. Nine of the units will have one-story buildings. The tenth unit will feature a two-story building.

Educator Discovers Vocation Guidance Slighted by Schools

NEW YORK.—Only 6 per cent of the 23,032 public high schools in the United States provide educational counselors or vocational guidance officers on full time or more than half time, according to a recent study by Clarence E. Lovejoy of Columbia university. For every 3,100 high school pupils in this country, there is only one faculty adviser, he says.

"Parents should howl vocally and write letters to their local newspapers if they live in cities which are lax in providing vocational guidance and educational counseling. If the school board has not appropriated funds for these activities, or if the school superintendents or principals are not supplying them to the tax-paying residents, it is time to bring pressure."

"High school boys and girls need advice as well as information in selecting their colleges," Mr. Lovejoy declares. "They look to their principals and teachers for this guidance. Most high schools either shirk giving advice, or they give bad advice, which is worse than none at all. Educational counseling, whether in high schools or colleges, means talking with students and parents, planning students' programs, approving or advising changes, examining unsatisfactory progress, discussing fields of specialization."

Child Accident Rate Increases in October

CHICAGO.—October and May are high frequency months for accidents among elementary and high school students, the National Safety Council reports in its statistical yearbook for 1940. The report shows kindergarten to be the safest grade, with only six accidents per 100,000 student-days resulting in absence from school for one-half day or more or requiring medical attention.

CHAPTER XXIV

The day after Christmas "Manhattan Idyl" was hung in the Knodler Galleries, and Mrs. Austin went early in the afternoon to see it. Like Wild, it fascinated her, and a crowd of people were milling around before it. She left shortly, afraid that Wild might come along, for he and Lynn were due there at 5 o'clock for tea. She had made sure of that face, and because she was so sure of what was going to happen, she went directly from the galleries to Mr. Harlen's office.

"Have you heard anything yet?" "I don't expect word for a while. Just be patient. Just what do you expect to find?"

"I don't know. But there must be something!" Mrs. Austin waited, her hands clenched in her lap. "I can wait. It does not matter!"

Wild and Lynn went to the tea for Rene, and crowds flocked to see the picture. Later they dined quietly and Wild got Lynn home early for she was very tired.

When she hung up her coat at last she stopped suddenly where she stood. There on the floor was a half-used paper packet of matches. Puzzled, she picked them up. They were from the Hotel Astor. She threw them on the table, thinking Wild must have dropped them, and tried to settle herself at the table to write a letter to her sister. When she opened her desk she had an off feeling that things seemed awry.

"I'm nervous tonight." She got a few words down on the sheet of paper, but her ring winked up at her maliciously, and she threw down the pen. A sudden panic seized her. She rummaged into a drawer, hunting for the damning piece of paper. It was there, folded neatly, under some letters from Bangor.

Lynn tried to think straight. "If I tell him honestly and squarely, just how things are, he'll believe me. But his mother? What will she do? She'll have to know!"

While Lynn lay there in the shabby apartment trying to straighten out the tangle into which she had got her life, Wild was in his mother's sitting-room at Austin Manor.

He was surprised at her agitation.

"Wild, you know I love you?" The danger signal it had always been so, Mrs. Austin could feel him stiffen, become hostile. Tears came to her eyes, and she prayed for the right words, for help.

"Wild, that girl was married to Boucher last Spring. On February 26, in Lu Lu, S. C."

Mrs. Austin's voice sounded tired and old.

"No, it isn't true. I don't even have to ask Lynn." Wild was angry. "I know Rene, and I know Lynn. Rene knows I'm going to marry her."

"Raymond!" She never called him that, only in a crisis. "Raymond. Look at me. One of Mr. Harlen's men found the marriage license in her apartment today!"

Wild stared down at his mother's bent head. "Mother! You had her rooms searched?" He was wondering that she would stoop so low.

Mrs. Austin raised her head: "I did!" She looked her son straight in the eyes. "I did, Wild. To do that seems dishonorable. To do much more than that for your safety!"

The hot color came into the man's cheeks.

"It was there, Wild. I knew there was something wrong. I knew when I saw the portrait. I knew!"

Wild stood there for a long time, looking unseeingly at his mother.

"I do not believe it." His voice sounded unnatural and Mrs. Austin's heart beat so hard it hurt. He said he did not believe, but at least she had made him listen! Her boy's eyes were hostile. To her horror she saw almost hatred in them.

"Wild!" she pleaded.

He looked at his wrist watch. It was after midnight. He turned abruptly and walked to the door without speaking to her.

"Wild!" she called after him, desperate. She could not let him go like this. She ran out into the hall and saw the door of his room was open. As she came to it, panting for breath, he met her in the doorway, his hat and coat on.

"Where are you going?"

"To Lynn. I am going to marry her, tonight!"

She tried to take his arm, but he shook off her touch.

"I'm going to her. If you've lied, I'll never forgive you!" Then he ran down the wide staircase.

Shortly Wild was driving like a madman over the slippery roads into Manhattan.

The faster he drove the more furious Wild became at his mother.

It was very quiet in the sleeping city when he pulled up in front of her apartment. He parked his car and got out stiffly. When he pushed the buzzer of her apartment, it seemed a long time before the door clicked open. In the elevator he leaned against the wall and he felt dizzy and sick.

"God!" Now that he was here, a terror took possession of him. If it were true? But it was not. At Lynn's door he knocked gently. She opened it a crack.

"It's me, Wild, dear. I must talk to you." Then in a moment, he faced her in the glare of light.

CHAPTER XXV

Lynn in her bathrobe stood facing Wild, dazed with the bright light, the sudden, sharp ring of her door bell.

"Lynn." His voice was harsh. "Get dressed immediately. We're getting married tonight. Now."

"Married?" Lynn's voice sounded strange to him.

"Now, tonight, this morning! Get dressed, Lynn."

He did not come near her, and she stared at him, thinking of that other night, wondering if he were drunk. He read her thoughts:

"I'm not drunk. Hurry. It will take us at least three hours to get into Maryland."

Lynn did not move. With one hand she leaned heavily on the table as though to steady herself. As she looked, his eyes told her the whole story. He knew! She did not stop to ask how. Her terrified eyes did not move from his face.

"I said, get dressed, Lynn. We're getting married in three hours."

He came toward her as though to take her in his arms.

"No."

The monosyllable stopped him short. He swayed slightly as he stood there. His eyes were desperate. Lynn's teeth were chattering in the cold of the room.

He looked at her until it seemed to her she could bear his eyes no longer. He brushed his hand over his face.

"It is true, isn't it." Even then, there was an unbelieving note in his voice. Even in her own desperation she felt a terrible pity for him. He turned to the door. His voice finally broke that stillness: "You are a dirty little cheat!" Then he opened the door.

He did not look at her again. In a moment she was kneeling there, alone before the closed door, and she could hear the elevator door clank open.

"Wild!" She huddled there on the cold floor, and she wished that she could die. She kept whispering his name, but she could not cry. And always was that voice of her conscience: "If you had told him yourself! If you had had the courage!"

"I'm a dirty little cheat." She said the words aloud, slowly. Her own voice startled her, and for the first time she wept a little. But Lynn had not tears for this crisis. Worst of all, she had only a bitter regret to comfort her. She could not blame Wild. It was her own fault. But that only made the well of suffering into which she had sunk the more difficult to bear.

"If only..." She framed the words with her stiff lips.

She sat there at the window taut with waiting. He must come back!

As Lynn sat quiet, bent over with suffering there by the window, Wild drove his car up the roadway to his home. He must see his mother.

As he came upstairs he could see a streak of light under her door. He tapped gently. Mrs. Austin, worn and tired, opened the door to her son.

"My boy!"

"Mother!" As though he were a little boy, she gathered him into her arms. She crooned to him, patted his hair. His shoulders shook.

"I'm sorry, Mother."

"I know. I was cruel. But it had to be done, Wild. It had to be done."

"I know." She was shocked at his drawn face. She tried to comfort him, but he shook his head.

"You've been walking, you're all wet and cold." He did not seem to hear what she said.

"I'm a fool, mother." He tried to smile at her. "You warned me." His face felt stiff, and he was inexpressibly weary. Suddenly, he, too, seemed to see the days stretching ahead.

"What am I going to do?" His voice was filled with horror.

"We all carry on."

"I've got to get away. I can't stay here. I'd go mad." He took off his overcoat and turned to Mrs. Austin.

"It's odd, but I feel as though I'd been sick for weeks." He turned away from her. He was anxious, now that he had made his peace, to be alone.

"Let me come with you."

"No, I've got to face this out, alone, mother." And he left her to cry herself to sleep in the gray of the morning.

To Lynn it seemed that the end of the world had come. She watched with surprise, the people going to work in the street below. When it was 3 o'clock, she got up hurriedly and dressed! She'd go beg Rene to help her.

She ran most of the two blocks to Rene's studio and came up the stairs panting. She fell into his arms sobbing wildly. She clung to him in desperation, her only friend.

"Rene, you've got to get him back! Somehow, you've got to get him back!"

He tried to get a coherent story out of her, but her sobs choked her voice, and he had to guess most of what had happened.

"He's gone!" she kept repeating.

Rene tried to quiet her, but now that the flood gates were opened under his sympathy, she was hysterical.

It was cold in the studio and he wrapped a blanket about her and put her on the couch. He knelt before her and tried to quiet her, but it was a long time before she could listen to him.

"My dear, my dear!" Rene's voice broke as he looked into her eyes. "My poor baby!" He took her in his arms then.

"He'll come back, dear. He'll come back if I have to bring him at the point of a gun!"

To neither of them did it seem ironical that Rene, the husband, should talk so.

He made coffee and forced her to drink a scalding cup. Then he went off to dress and came back to make his plans.

"I'll see him just as soon as I can. Can I telephone him at home?" "I don't know!" Lynn could only moan.

He got Austin Manor on the wire after a little while, but the butler refused to call Mr. Wild until he knew who was telephoning. Rene gave his name and waited. The butler came back:

"Mr. Wild is not here."

Then Rene tried the office. The same response. Rene hated to go back to the bleak studio, but he hurried there just the same. Lynn's eyes were beseeching when he came in the door, but she asked no questions. She knew the answer.

"I'll try later in the day."

By 10 o'clock Lynn could stand it no longer and Rene went again to try his luck.

The butler was on the line again. Rene tried to change his voice.

"Mr. Wild is calling this morning for Europe."

That was enough for Rene. He grabbed a newspaper and hunted through the day's sailings. He found it. The Ile de France was sailing at 11. He came back to Lynn.

"Get yourself fixed up. We're going over to Fifty-seventh Street. He's sailing."

There was not much time. Sailing was at 11. They could not get aboard, but they stood together near the gangplank watching.

Suddenly Lynn saw Wild. He was hurrying toward the gangplank. She tried to call his name, but the crowds cut her off from him and he could not hear. Mrs. Austin was with Wild and so was Chuck. His good-bys to them were short, and shortly after he had boarded the ship, the crew began to pull in the gangplank.

Lynn's eyes were blurred with tears as the big boat began to move. For a long time they stood there. She leaned heavily against Rene.

"Come." He shook her gently. "We must go home."

CHAPTER XXVI

Lynn did not come to Rene's studio to pose the next morning. When she had not come at 11 o'clock, Rene put on his mackinaw and walked over to her apartment. He could not get an answer to his ring for some time, but finally Lynn unlocked the door. She stood there weaving uncertainly.

"I'm pretty sick," she managed.

Rene got her back into bed and called a doctor.

"Bad sore throat. Bed for a few days," was the verdict. Rene telephoned Mme. Renoud and consulted with the doctor. They tried to get her into a hospital but they were all crowded. The doctor found a practical nurse and Rene felt relieved. At least there would be somebody to look after the girl. Rene was a poor nurse. He would be of no use in a sick room.

Rene came every day, brought her flowers, read to her. The day Lynn was first able to sit up Wild landed at Havre. Lynn hoped against hope that he might cable. But it was clinging to a straw.

It was that night Mme. Renoud came to see her little model. She found Lynn sitting up wrapped in a blanket.

"What is all this about?" Madam demanded when she saw Lynn's face.

"I've been sick."

"Nonsense. I mean, what is really the matter with you?" When Lynn would not answer, Mme. Renoud took a hand.

"Now look here, child. You need some plain talking to." She settled herself in the uncomfortable chair and began: "Of course, I know what's the matter. The young man's gone off. It was bound to get into the papers. You can't run around and be engaged to a millionaire and have him duck on a boat for Europe right in the midst of it without having this town by the ears."

"I suppose not." Tears came into Lynn's eyes for a moment. "There is nothing to say. Just that he is gone."

"What about you?"

"What about me?" Lynn's voice was tragic as she echoed the words. "I've a little money saved. I might go up home for a while." She stared out of the window, lost in thought.

"How can I go out?" Lynn suddenly turned appealingly to Madam and in a moment she was in the older woman's arms.

"Poor kid!" Madam's eyes were wet. Lynn seemed so utterly young and defenseless. She could have throttled Wild. But Madam had been sure this would happen.

Children's Outfits Have Style, Durability for Every Day Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IT IS a delight to shop for children these days. More than ever in the history of juvenile fashions, mothers owe a debt of gratitude to designers who specialize in little folks' apparel for having so completely analyzed and sensed the needs of youngsters not only from the esthetic point of view but decidedly from the angle of service and wearability. Let what may arise in weather, fair or foul, outfits are now so comprehensively constructed, so all efficient within themselves they are ready to meet any emergency of varying temperature.

This idea of many-purpose wear expressed itself in such contrivances as linings that zip in and out, of coats and even dresses that are made reversible, detachable hoods, matching hats, two skirts with one jacket, mittens and leggings made to match for tots—the list is endless. A judiciously selected outfit constitutes a wardrobe of clothes within itself.

The practicality of juvenile costumes designed with "latest improvements" for all-purpose wear was repeatedly stressed at a recent preview of children's fashions held at the Merchandise Mart of Chicago. In the foreground of the illustration is pictured one chosen from among many of the junior coat-and-dress "sets" shown.

For this "glamour-teen-age" coat and skirt the designer combines gay plaid with handsome monotone wool cloaking. The coat offers multiple service, at the same time proving a constant source of joy to the wearer. By reversing it you can have a coat as shown in the picture one day, and the next day little daughter can "go stepping" in a stunning all-plaid ensemble. Then too, the plaid skirt lends for a collection of blouses so that little Missy can come forth looking different each day. Handgear is provided in the plaid lined hood that can be worn either side out, can be adjusted to wear as a deep collar and may even be detached altogether when wanted.

A word to the wise mother is sufficient. Instead of haphazardly buying a dress here, a coat there and a hat from most anywhere, get one good dependable ensemble carefully "thought through" by experts to meet every requirement from every angle of protection and comfort for your child as well as being infinitely chic and charming as any modern young miss could fancy.

And look who's here in the group pictured! It's brother and sister in two-piece knits. Enthusiasm for "brother-and-sister" fashions grows.

The newest thing out is the cunning jersey knit jumper outfits shown here. The tiny blouse is knitted in red and white or other combinations if you choose. Plain jersey makes the tiny trousers with the big buttons for the wee boy and for little sister's flare skirt. Jersey is no less practical for little folks to wear. This is one reason why these little outfits are so popular.

The pretty little girl to the right has on a winsome jumper outfit of a dressier sort which is "prettified" by dainty embroidery. There is nothing more practical than the new jumper dresses. A fresh blouse each day worn with the skirt that has shoulder straps, and little daughter is dressed for any occasion.

Many of the newest jumper dresses are made of bright velveteen and of pin-wale corduroy this season. Buy the jacketed models and you will get unlimited wear and service in a suit plus dress always ready to go places.

Shawl to Match

A perfectly charming fashion is that of cunning little evening shawls made of the identical material that fashions the dress. The beautifully styled gown pictured is of black chiffon distinguished with an artfully shirred bodice that has an unusual halter-neck treatment and a graceful gathered-at-waist skirt. The little shawl of matching black chiffon is finished with hand-tied fringe. A black velvet dress with scarlet chiffon shawl is also a suggestion. The newest white jersey evening frocks have matching fringed shawls.

Colorful Tweeds

There's an early fall air to the travel coats of tweed shown by one New York designer. Stone blue, grayed and green, as well as beige and brown tweeds are the favorite colors.

Dressy Modes Use Fringe Novel Ways

A generous use of fringe is seen throughout dressier modes. In addition to dresses massively befringed, there are cunning and unique accents of fringe on simply styled black wool or satin frocks. One example of accessories made of fringe is the new pocket that is woven or knotted of silk fringe, with strands falling true to fringe form in a graceful way. These pockets are placed on skirts and jackets. Then there are the new epaulets that are knotted of fringe. A plain black dress with epaulet formed of fringe in a military way and positioned on each shoulder becomes a gown of style distinction.

Narrow fringe along the side seam of gloves worked out after the manner of cowboy leather gloves is very new in the mode. Felt hats carry out the idea in self-cut fringe about wide brims.

Glitter Holds Sway In Festive Fashions

Glitter is the word for festive fashions this winter. As a new evening wrap fashion experts are offering a finger-tip length jacket of colorful tweed or other fashionable wool weave. The sleeves are embroidered in scintillating sequins or brilliants.

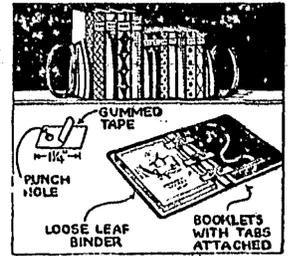

Young girls are wild over these new evening coats. The fashion for black coat and dress ensembles glittered with jet embroidery is also popular.

Designers are enthusiastically carrying the idea of sparkling embroidery into their program of wool fabric dresses and suits.

Booklets in Loose Leaf Ring Binders

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WHENEVER I make a trip to New England I like to bring back something to remind me that there have been about 15 generations of homemakers in America since John Alden and Priscilla set up housekeeping in Plymouth colony. This time my treasure was the pair of ancient flat irons you see here in use as book ends for my work-room library of loose leaf binders. Setting them up reminded me that I have been wanting to show you my method of fastening booklets in ring binders.

I use 3/4-inch wide gummed tape. Pieces 2 1/2-inches long are folded in half. The fold end is stuck together and punched. These tabs are placed on the rings of the binder and booklet stuck between the open ends. We are inveterate booklet collectors on all sort of subjects. Frequently we cover binders with fabrics or interesting papers so they look attractive on the shelves in any room.

NOTE: Here is a good suggestion for keeping the arties of sewing booklets which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers. There are five booklets available and a new one is published every other month. No. 5 contains directions for 20 different homemaking ideas, including new fall curtains, useful holiday gifts, and description of the other booklets in the series. When you write for your copy of Book 5 be sure to enclose 10c to cover cost and mailing. Send order to:

Mrs. Sylvia Davis, age 36, passed away in the Fort Stanton hospital last Friday night at 9:30. She had been ill of heart trouble for about three years. Besides her husband, Mrs. Davis is survived by a daughter, Mayme, and one son, Richard who is employed at Richard's service station here. Also her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. La May of Nogal mesa and several sisters and brothers.

Funeral services were conducted at Angus last Sunday followed by interment in Angus cemetery. She was a good wife and a devoted mother, and had many friends to mourn her passing.

Carrizozo attendants at the funeral at Angus Sunday afternoon were: Meadames Edmiston, Snow, Brazel, Hobbie, Smith, Seharf, West; Mr. and Mrs. Dan Conley and daughter; Messrs. Roly Ward, Manson Hicks.

The church was crowded and many people had to stand outside. Everybody was profoundly grieved that death had claimed one so young; there were many flowers.

PRESIDENT FIXES OCTOBER 16TH AS REGISTRATION DAY
State Draft Machinery In Full Swing

October 16 has been designated by President Roosevelt as Registration Day under the Selective Service Law recently enacted by Congress. On that day, between the hours of 7 in the morning and 9 at night, every young man in the nation between the ages of 21 and 35 inclusive will be registered for possible military service. From Maine to California, in every city and hamlet, from every ranch and farm, men will answer the call for the national defense.

To eliminate confusion, the maximum and minimum ages are defined as follows: Men who have reached the twenty-first anniversary of the date of their birth on or before the day set for registration, and men who have not reached the thirty-sixth anniversary of the date of their birth on or before the day set for registration.

It is estimated that 16,000 Americans will be registered. Of that number authorities estimate that about 5,000,000 will fall in Class I, those eligible for immediate military service.

Registration will be conducted in every precinct in the land, by local registrars. County Clerks will supervise the registration in their counties, and will name registrars and designate a place for registration in every precinct, in the same manner as elections are conducted. The list of places of registration will be given ample publicity.

After registration, the registration cards will be turned over to Local Boards named for each county. These boards will consist of three members each, appointed by the President of the United States upon recommendation of the Governor. The Local Boards will send each registrant a questionnaire and will classify each man on the basis of the information acquired from his questionnaire.

Classification will be by classes. Class I is of men eligible for immediate military service. Class II will consist of those who are employed in necessary industrial or agricultural work. Class III are those deferred for dependency and Class IV for miscellaneous deferments, such as certain elected officials, aliens and undentified.

Although the present law provides stringent penalties for evading registration, a maximum of five years in prison and $10,000 fine, New Mexico Selective Service officials are confident that registration will be accomplished without resort to prosecution and in the same eager spirit of patriotism that has always characterized the West.

ACCIDENT SURVEY

A survey covering 12,500 farms of Security Administration borrowers in five midwestern states showed that 388 persons lost time from their work and incurred medical expense in 1933 as a result of injuries. Twelve involved permanent disability and 10 resulted in death.

Most of the injuries were caused by accidents resulting from carelessness and which could have been avoided. A study of the survey disclosed that many were caused by starting fires with kerosene, careless handling of animals, cranking engines or adjusting machines while they were in motion, failure to keep boiling water out of the reach of children and so forth.

Sixty percent of the accidents occurred in connection with farming operations, the majority while objects were being handled. Accidents in and around the home accounted for 21 1/2 percent of the total, falls being responsible for the greatest number, burns coming next. About 12 1/2 percent were non-farm accidents, mostly automobile collisions.

Infection and serious illness resulted in many instances because of failure to administer first aid treatment to cuts and scratches which seemed inconsequential at the time. Unrusted porches, unlighted stairs, and uncovered openings, rotten or loose boards in barn lofts, corn cribs, walks and porches were responsible for falls which accounted for a large number of farm and home accidents.

Aside from the suffering and lost time, injuries are a drain on the pocketbook which most farm families can't afford, especially when they're having a hard time meeting their ordinary obligations. The average cost of all farm accidents covered in the FSA was $44.1, and 10 accidents cost an average of $313.00 each.

STATE HEADQUARTERS SELECTIVE SERVICE SANTA FE, NEW MEXICO
Draft Machinery Functioning Smoothly

Governor Miles has recommended the appointment of Brigadier General Russell C. Charlton as State Executive of Selective Service. At the same time the State Headquarters for the Administration of the Act has been set up in Santa Fe. Four army officers and one naval officer have been called into active service to operate headquarters here. These are Major Harry S. Bowman, Captain George H. Forrell and Capt. Juan A. Sedillo, of Santa Fe, Captain Robert H. Berryhill of Albuquerque. Lieutenant Roy L. Cook, of Albuquerque will be naval advisor for the group.

On the same day that President Roosevelt issued a call to the Governors of all the states for recommendations for Local Boards the list for New Mexico was on its way the White House by airmail. Each county will have one local board with the exception of Bernalillo County, which will have three.

It is estimated that 70,000 New Mexican youths from 21 to 36 will be registered on October 16, the day set for registration. This number includes all Indians of the same age.

I hereby direct that all State institutions and all State schools allow their employees sufficient time to accomplish their registration on that day.

I urgently request every citizen to likewise allow his employees sufficient time on that day for registration purposes. Furthermore I urgently request all citizens to give every facility to the Registrars to be appointed in every precinct in the State to the end that proper and complete registration is accomplished on that day for Selective Service of men who on that day have reached their 21st birthday and have not yet reached their 36th birthday.

In testimony whereof, I have recommended the names of citizens of this State whose loyalty, integrity and fair-mindedness are beyond question to serve as members of Local Boards, a Board of Appeal and an Governmental Appeal Agents and Examining Physicians, and by the same high standard I have personally chosen members of various Advisory Boards.

A Welcome GIFT to the Former Resident

Careers in Engineering
By Rufus T. Stroh
Dean, International Correspondence Schools

MANY professional engineers believe that the increase in the number of graduate engineers from 2,000 in 1890 to 158,000 in 1930 means an overcrowding of the profession. Such an opinion, no doubt, has been influenced by employment conditions.

There are many other engineers who feel that the training of highly skilled engineers will contribute much toward curing some of our economic ills. Certainly if the term "engineering" includes the technicians, the laboratory workers and the junior engineers, there always will be sufficient openings for engineering graduates.

The achievements of present-day engineering will appear as interesting experiments compared to many accomplishments that lie ahead. More efficient harnessing of power, improved transportation on land, sea and in the air, universal communication and free exchange of scientific knowledge, exploitation of raw materials, a more synthetic approach to all the problems of modern life—these and many others are the problems which will keep thousands of engineers busy for years to come.

New applications of scientific knowledge are continually developing. The more we know about the forces and materials of nature, the better chance we have to use them in some manner beneficial to the human race.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING
 By CHARLES B. ROTH

$2 EGGS

WHEN my mother went overland in a covered wagon to a new home in the West, the country was just settling up. Transportation was slow, was expensive. Prices of everything were high. She preserved a newspaper of her girlhood on the frontier, and it interests me occasionally to read the current prices of things you buy every day now for a few cents. Eggs were $2 a dozen in those days. Sugar brought 40 cents a pound. Kerosene was $3 a gallon. Candles cost 25 cents apiece. Compare these prices with the prices you see advertised in your newspaper today and you will see that, although much talk is bandied back and forth concerning the increased cost of living, the fact is that the cost has gone downward consistently since frontier times. One of the reasons for high prices then was undoubtedly the difficulty with which the supply was obtained—the hazards and expense of transporting goods. But the chief reason was that the cost of these necessities could not be spread out over enough customers to bring them at lower cost to all. The merchant had to pay the cost of his business out of sales to a comparatively few customers. Costs had to be high. Prices on everything you buy today, regardless of whether you live in a village or a large city, would be higher now if it were not for the service of advertising in lowering them to your advantage. As soon as a manufacturer or a merchant begins to advertise he begins to sell more. As he sells more it costs him less to sell to each customer. He cuts the price. More customers come. Again he is able to cut the price. Pretty soon you have the situation of improved quality and lower prices, brought about through the creative service of advertising to the consumer. Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay. Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what, you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised. The man who builds a business on advertising can give you more for your money because advertising enables him to give more for less. See how advertising pays you every day. © Charles B. Roth.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features - WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—One of the greatest philippics of William Pitt was his famous denunciation of that foul word, "democracy," which had come into the English language "from the sewers of Paris."

Merwin K. Hart joins in attacks on 'Democracy' in his only associations were homicide and madness. This department has noted recently 11 comparable attacks on this subversive word from similarly respectable and authoritative sources.

Mr. Hart is president of the New York State Economic Council. He has been for many years a vigorous and hard-hitting assailant of radicalism in any form.

Graduated from Harvard in 1904, Mr. Hart has made his business career in insurance, law and manufacturing. He was gassed in the war, is a licensed aviator and a patron of aviation.

SIR ERIC COATES was the first British composer to treat modern syncopation seriously, and write compositions in the quickened beat. Many bricks were thrown in his direction by his classical confreres, but now he gets the last word—or the last toot.

It is a tribute to the surprising adaptability of the British at a time when their traditional work-beat was supposed to be something like "Auld Lang Syne."

Sir Eric was a romanticist and classicist, which makes his change of pace all the more interesting. For many years, he was the principal viola in the Queen's Hall orchestra.

IN 1905 Joseph A. Rosen arrived at Michigan State agricultural college from Russia with fifty cents and a few grains of rye. The fifty cents blossomed into the education of Dr. Rosen and the handful of rye spread over 1,500,000 acres in Canada and the United States.

Getting the 'Low Down' on Crops

One of the most valuable departments of the U. S. Department of Agriculture is the crop-report service. It gives a complete picture in acreages, yield, production, utilization, sales, prices, and value of more than one hundred crops.

Top: Statistician C. E. Burkhead of the Maryland office interviews a farmer. Below: Field reports on speculative crops being removed from the double-locked box in the offices of the Secretary of Agriculture. Right: One of the armed guards stationed at the entrance of the crop reporting rooms.

Behind locked doors, sealed windows, and with all communication with the outside world cut off, members of the crop reporting board review and prepare estimates, by states, from reports submitted by the field offices. This secrecy is designed to prevent possible leaks. Their work presents a complete picture of agricultural America.

Right: Former Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, signing crop report in the presence of W. J. Callender, chairman of the crop reporting board.

On the stroke of three the crop report is released to the world.

Lights of New York

New York and its suburbs now boast of more people of title than any capital in Europe, on the word of one of this department's scouts who has been doing some investigating. The titled ones have been coming to this haven ever since the first Russian revolution emigrants began flocking to the standard of General Lodijensky when he opened his Golden Eagle restaurant on East Fifty-seventh street 18 years ago.

During the rapidly ending summer, Newport and every fashionable Long Island colony teemed with titled house guests. Swank Maine resorts bulged with them. Of course many of the names, the titles being authentic, made the society pages, and more than one hostess borrowed distinction for her house parties by having a few titled folk among her guests.

Speaking of titles, the other morning, two big motor cars stopped at the Hotel Biltmore coffee shop and a man and six younger persons entered. Carl Wohik, the manager, recognizing them instantly from pictures, hastily arranged a special table near the main entrance.

Hanging to the subject of royalty eating, there was the imposing looking lady who dined alone at a table in one of those little restaurants with foreign names that abound in the Fifties. Her menu apparently was the concern of all employeess from the headwaiter down.

That paragraph should end there. But there is a bit more which, especially nowadays, is so unusual that it demands attention. Hardly had the trio ended its recitation than the lady read the three a lecture. Not only did she insist on having her bill but she wanted it right away.

All the exiled nobility hasn't settled in the metropolis, of course, many titled holders having traveled elsewhere. But still the number of titles is so great that the suggestion has been heard that considerable money might be made by getting out a New York Almanach de Gotha.

The other evening I was at a dinner where 48 boys, one from each state in the Union, received awards for skill in automobile driving. None of those 48 boys looked alike. Their hair ranged in color from bright red to deep black. They were tall and short, skinny, and one rather fat. Each had his own accent.

FIRST-AID TO THE AILING HOUSE

Removing Paint QUESTION: The plaster ceiling in our kitchen was papered several times, and then painted twice. Now the paint is coming off in great pieces. We want to take it all off and repaint. How can we do it? Why is the paint peeling off?

Answer: Walls and ceiling of a kitchen become covered with a fine film of grease. This may not be visible, but it is there, and if it is not removed before painting, the paint will not stick. This may be the reason why your paint has peeled. The paint is evidently loose, and you should be able to scrape it off with a broad putty knife.

Wet or Dry Return. Question: In a one-pipe steam system with an oil burner, is there any advantage in having a wet return line? My neighbor has a wet return, while mine is identical except that I have a dry return.

Answer: A wet return is filled with water for its entire length to the level of the water in the boiler. Water standing in the return may be chilled before it reaches the boiler, which will reduce the temperature of the boiler water. A leak in a wet return under the floor is difficult to locate and to repair. A dry return is under inspection at all times. Water in it returns to the boiler with but little drop in temperature. The one advantage of the wet return is that it gives the boiler a greater volume of water, which would be an advantage in case of a steam leak. My own preference is for the dry return.

Sticking Leather. Question: Leather covered chairs stick to and stain light clothing in damp weather. I have used varnish remover, saddle soap and wax, but nothing seems to help. Would you recommend varnish?

Answer: Varnish remover should not be used on leather, for the solvents would remove the natural oils. You may have caused permanent damage. Stocking of leather is usually due to the use of an unsuitable leather dressing; furniture polish, for instance. Apply pure neatfoot oil to the leather; let it soak in, and then wipe dry. After a few days for drying, wash with thick suds of castile soap. After the leather is dry, rub with beaten white of egg. If this does not do the trick, inquire at a leather store.

Apartment Roof. Question: The roof of an apartment house, which I manage, has a three-ply tar paper and two-ply roll roofing; put on seven years ago. The job was done in November. The roof is full of blisters, many of them extending down to the first layer of tar paper. I would like to do this roof over and would appreciate your information on how to go about putting on a new roof.

Answer: Laying a flat roof in very cold weather will very often cause the roofing to blister and separate because of the difficulty in spreading the tar or asphalt. Before laying the new roof, get in touch with any one of the well-known makers of roofing and get their recommendations on the best way to lay it.

Buckled Cement Floor. Question: Every time we have a few hours' rain, my cellar is flooded. I have had some waterproofing done, but the last heavy rain has given us eight inches of water in the cellar, and caused the floor to crack and buckle up. We are quite near the water, and during high tides have noticed damp spots in the cellar. Will I have to have this floor taken up entirely? What will resist this pressure?

Answer: A badly cracked and buckled cement floor should be taken up and a new one laid of sufficient thickness to resist the extreme water pressure. The floor should also be given a membrane waterproofing treatment, with a topping of three or four inches of cement.

Dark Shingle Stain. Question: I want to stain the new wood shingles on my roof midnight blue or almost black. I cannot find such a stain. How can I make it?

Answer: You can make that stain by adding color-ground-in-oil to linseed oil. The proportions are four parts of linseed oil with one part Japan drier. Thin the color with linseed oil to the consistency of paint, and add to the mixed oil and drier to the tone that you want. Experimenting will be necessary.

Doing Good Resolutely Let no man be sorry he has done good, because others concerned with him have done evil! If a man has acted right, he has done well, though alone; if wrong, the sanction of all mankind will not justify him.—Fielding.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's Pills under existing laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes. If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed. Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer swelling, backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, aching, painness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out. Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

CREATING NEW WEALTH TO ORDER

Advertising creates new wealth by showing people new and better ways of living, and it creates new wealth if contributed to the flow of money which is set up. In this way, don't you see, advertising is a social force which is working in the interest of every one of us every day of the year, bringing us new wealth to use and enjoy.

LET'S SWING INTO FALL

(See Recipes Below)

Three cheers! It's fall again! Now is the time to perk-up your home a bit, to scan through Dame Fashion's news notes, and to dress up your table a bit with new and old-time favorites.

As each season comes we always heed its call by planning foods suitable for serving at that particular time of the year. We try to rush spring by setting forth very crisp, cool, and fresh vegetable salads. Throughout the summer, when appetites wane, cooling beverages and light foods are most popular.

But with cooler weather that is here at last, appetites pick up, and the family is more than ready to discard their favorite lighter meals for something more substantial that will provide new energy for school and fall activities.

Many of the foods we serve are those that your mother served, and her mother before that time, but we can give new flavor to them, new and attractive ways of serving, and a 1940 style.

A tiny sprinkling of ginger over roast beef given it a yummy flavor. Meat loaf may be baked in a ring mold and served with parsley potato balls in the center.

Pour a bottle of gingerale over ham for baking, and baste occasionally.

When using jelly or jam as a filling for layer cake, spread each layer very thinly with soft or creamed butter first. This keeps the jelly or jam from soaking into the cake.

If you add a few drops of mint extract to whipped cream it makes a delicious topping for chocolate cake.

Apple Pie.

- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1/2 cup boiling water
- 1 1/2 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon baking powder
- 4 to 5 tart apples (peeled and sliced)
- 1/2 cup sugar
- Dash cinnamon or nutmeg

Place shortening in a warm bowl, pour boiling water over it and cream thoroughly with a fork. Place flour, salt and baking powder in flour sieve and sift gradually into the creamed shortening and water mixture. Mix thoroughly. Make up into a dough ball and chill.

To make apple pie, divide pastry, roll out and line pie plate with first half. Peel and slice the apples, arrange in alternate layers with sugar and cinnamon, or nutmeg. Top with pastry and bake in a hot oven (450 degrees) for 10 minutes; then reduce oven heat to 350 degrees and bake approximately 35 minutes longer. Serve warm with a wedge of cheese.

Golden Carrot Ring.

- (Serves 5-6)
- 1 tablespoon onion (minced)
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1 cup soft bread crumbs
- 2 eggs (well beaten)
- 1 1/2 cups milk
- 2 cups raw carrots (grated)
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Dash pepper

Brown the onion in the butter. Remove from fire, and add crumbs. Place in a mixing bowl, and add well-beaten eggs. Mix well. Add milk, carrots, salt and pepper. Pour into well greased ring mold and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for about 45 minutes. Turn onto heated platter and serve immediately.

Stuffed Ham Steak.

- (Serves 5-6)
- 2 cups soft bread crumbs
- 1/2 cup seeded raisins (chopped)
- 1/2 cup walnut meats (broken)
- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- 1/4 cup butter (melted)
- 2 large slices smoked ham (1/2 inch thick)

Combine the crumbs, raisins, nuts, sugar, mustard, and butter to form a dressing. Place one slice of ham in a shallow baking pan, and spread dressing on the ham. Place a second slice of ham on top. Stick whole cloves into the fat. Bake in a slow oven (300 degrees) for about 1 hour.

Dutch Cream Cookies.

- (Makes 4 dozen)
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup sour cream
- 1/4 teaspoon soda
- 3 cups flour
- 1 teaspoon lemon extract

Cream butter and add sugar. Add egg and beat thoroughly. Dissolve soda in cream and add to mixture. Add flour to make a dough which can be easily handled. Chill over night. When firm, slice into thin slices. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 10 to 12 minutes.

Date Butterscotch Pudding.

- (Serves 5-6)
- 2 cups brown sugar (light)
- 3 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup cold water
- 1 cup boiling water
- 1 egg
- 3 tablespoons butter
- 1/2 cup dates (chopped)

Combine brown sugar, cornstarch, salt, and cold water. Add boiling water and cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Remove from range and pour over slightly beaten egg. Cook about a minute longer. Add butter and dates. Pour into sherbet glasses and chill before serving. Serve plain or garnished with whipped cream.

Cinnamon Apple Salad.

- (Serves 5)
- 2 cups granulated sugar
- 2 teaspoons cinnamon
- 1 1/2 cups water
- Red vegetable coloring
- 5 medium sized apples (peeled and cored)

Bring sugar, cinnamon, and water to the boiling point and add sufficient vegetable coloring to tint mixture bright red color. Drop apples (peeled and cored) into boiling syrup and cook until apples are tender but firm. Remove and chill.

Serve on bed of water cress and fill core of apple with diced celery and chopped nuts. Serve with Roquefort dressing.

Serambled Eggs and Mushrooms.

- (Serves 5)
- 2 tablespoons butter
- 6 eggs (slightly beaten)
- 1/2 cup milk or mushroom liquor
- 1 cup canned mushrooms (sliced)
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- Dash pepper

Heat butter in frying pan over low burner. Combine eggs, milk or mushroom liquor, sliced mushrooms and seasonings, and pour into frying pan. As mixture cooks, stir with a spatula, forming creamy flakes. Cook for about 5 minutes, or until eggs are firm but tender.

Bacon Baked Spaghetti.

- (Serves 6-8)
- 1/2 package spaghetti
- 6 slices bacon
- 1/2 cup raw onion (cut fine)
- 2 1/2 cups tomatoes
- 1 cup cheese (grated)
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Boil spaghetti until tender in boiling salted water. Drain. Cut bacon in small pieces and fry until light brown in color. Butter casserole, and place alternate layers of spaghetti, bacon, onion, tomatoes, and cheese in the casserole. Season each layer with salt and pepper, cover top layer with grated cheese and dot with butter. Bake approximately 30 minutes in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees).

Inventors Turn To War Devices

National Council Mustered To Develop New Ways To Aid Defense.

WASHINGTON.—Patterned after an agency which turned up dozens of devices for use in the World war, among them a mystery weapon which is still being kept secret, the National Council of Inventors is mustering some of the keenest inventive brains in the country into a search for new tools for the army and navy.

From their research laboratories in every part of the country dozens of scientists, long schooled in the patient and painstaking work of tracking down peacetime-inventions, have sent offers to the government to help devise more efficient equipment for war.

In addition to the skilled inventors, the aid of amateurs is being enlisted—and the general call for ideas has brought on a brain-matching contest which already is bringing several hundred defense suggestions a day into the offices of the council.

The council is modeled in many ways after the naval consulting board of the United States, which functioned under the direction of the late Thomas Alva Edison during the World war. He was responsible personally for the development of more than a dozen devices which were used then and have been used more widely since.

Studies of 1929 Recalled. Lloyd N. Scott, late captain of the army, who acted as liaison officer to the board and the war committee of technical societies, said after a study of its work in 1929:

"Everyone expected that the board would evolve some invention that would conquer the Central Powers with one fell swoop, and, had the war lasted another year, an important and confidential device probably would have justified this expectation in a degree at least; and other devices evolved by the board, such as wireless controlled bombs, devices for the automatic introduction of all the factors in the aiming of machine guns on airplanes, as well as others, gave promise of such results."

Captain Scott gave no clue to what the mystery weapon may have been. Nor is it discussed with any more expansiveness nowadays. One official said he knew of the weapon and that it was being further developed and perfected. At that point he quit talking.

Wireless-controlled bombs are no longer a secret. Nor is it a secret that the defense forces have a flying bomb which will track down an enemy airplane without so much as his name and address. All it has to do is hear him and it follows the sound of his plane.

Edison's Aides Solved Problems. Most of the inventions came from the experts on the naval consulting board, and many of these after they had been asked to find the answer to some particular problem. Edison and the engineers in his employ made 34 different studies.

He worked out a method of detecting a submarine from a moving vessel, of turning a ship quickly to dodge a torpedo, of camouflaging ships, of rigging sailing lights which could not be seen by submarines, of high speed signaling with searchlights and of putting out fires in coal bunkers, and designed a gas mask and an undersea searchlight.

Two other Edison developments which helped to blaze a path toward present-day efficiency were a direction finder which would spot an approaching plane and the direction from which it was coming by the sound of its engine and an apparatus which would spot the location of hidden guns by their sound.

East Is Leading Nation In Traffic Safety Effort

CHICAGO.—Five Eastern cities and one in the Midwest were leading at the half-way point in the 1940 national traffic safety contest, the National Safety council announced. Setting the pace for their population groups at the end of six months were Buffalo; Providence; Lynn, Mass.; Lakewood, Ohio; Brookline, Mass.; and New Kensington, Pa.

The council emphasized that these standings were based only on the cities' traffic fatality records and their improvement over their last three years' average—factors which constitute only 50 per cent of the points in the final judging at the end of the year. An equal number of points will be awarded in the final judging for the scope of the accident-prevention program—accident reporting systems, traffic engineering and enforcement, child-safety programs and public education.

Dog Is Exonerated on Charge of Biting Mailmen

SWAMPSCOTT, MASS.—Mars, of the few dogs ever to face federal charges, is now a free canine. Taken before the board of selectmen to answer charges preferred by Postmaster Wilkinson of the Lynn postal district, Mars charmed the whole board with the friendliness of his ceaselessly wagging tail and won complete exoneration. Wilkinson complained that Mars chased and bit mailmen.

"What makes you think that affects him?" continued the questioner.

"Yes," yawned the wife. "I threw them away. I'd worn them twice."

Perseverance

The old saying is that all things come to those who wait. Change this so as to make it declare that nearly all the good things are possible to those who will persevere long enough in seeking them, and you will have an important statement which does not at all exceed the limits of truth. If, too, you should turn it around, the converse of it would be equally true; for without perseverance we need have no expectation of either acquiring much or being of much service to our fellow-creatures.

Above All Things This Fellow Was an Optimist

A contractor borrowed a body worn car from a friend for an emergency trip. With an employee he set out.
A little way down the road he noticed the brake did not work. After another mile they were rolling down a smooth road toward a bridge. A glance showed a six-foot gap between the bridge and the bank. Viciously he pulled at the emergency brake, only to find that it did not work. Then he discovered that the gas pedal had jammed down.
Turning to his companion, he remarked cheerfully: "Well, here's hoping the gas gives out!"

SINCE the Primary a number of my friends from the different political parties have asked me to run for the office of Sheriff of Lincoln county, in the approaching General Election, November 5.

I have been a resident of Lincoln county for 21 years, most of that time I have been in the stock business; have held deputy sheriff's commission for 14 years, including the two years as chief deputy of Lincoln county under our present Sheriff. While acting as deputy Sheriff I tried to be fair and impartial at all times with all of whom I had any dealings regardless of party affiliations. I feel that experience as a deputy sheriff is a big asset to any Sheriff going into office. I need the job; have no other business interests that might require any of my time away from my duties of office.

If elected, I will perform the duties of Sheriff to the very best of my ability at all times. If the voters of Lincoln county feel that I am the right man for the office, then each and every vote cast for me will be appreciated in all sincerity, I assure you. My name will be on the ballot in the column under the word "Independent". I thank you.

DESDE la Primaria, un numero de mis amigos de diferentes partidos politicos, han pedido que haga la carrera para Alguacil mayor en el condado de Lincoln en la proxima Eleccion General, Noviembre dia 5.

Yo he sido residente de este condado por 21 años, lo mas de este tiempo he estado en el negocio de ganado; yo he portado comision de diputado de alguacil por 14 años, encluyendo los dos años que servi como primer diputado, bajo del presente alguacil mayor. Durante el tiempo que actue como primer diputado, yo hice lo posible para ser justo y imparcial en todo tiempo con todos los que tube que ver, y lo hice imparcialmente. Yo creo que una experiencia como primer diputado es una ventaja para cualquier alguacil que tome la oficina que yo aspiro. Yo necesito el trabajo, no tengo ningunos otros intereses que requieran mi tiempo en otras partes lejos de mis deberes de la oficina.

Si soy electo, yo ejecutare los deberes de Alguacil Mayor a mejor de mi abilidad en todo tiempo; si los votantes del condado de Lincoln creen que yo soy el hombre necesario para esta oficina, entonces cada voto que ustedes me gratifiquen sera apreciado sinceramente, yo les aseguro. Mi nombre aparecera en la boleta bajo la columna marcada "Independiente". Les doy las gracias.
