Capitan to Purchase Light Company Plant

Santa Fe, Oct. 23--The New Mexico Public Service Commission Thursday approved sale of the Lincoln Power and Light Co.'s plant at Capitan to the village of Capitan.

The village was represented by Mr. C. R. McIntosh, Attorney at Law, and Mr. Charles R. Goldenburg, Consulting Engineer.

Commission Chairman G. S. Carter said the plant was sold for $36,500. The village plans to issue revenue bonds totaling $45,000 to cover the purchase price and create a reserve for additions, extensions and improvements.

"The bond holders," said a commission announcement "will not be given a mortgage by the village, nor will they have any recourse on the village involving raising of taxes for the purpose of meeting any bond default. Their only recourse will be the revenues from the plant."

Mr. B. C. Dunlap, sole owner of the Lincoln Power and Light Company, petitioned the New Mexico Public Service Commission for authority to make the sale to the City of Capitan.

Mrs. Ward Charles, of Alamo gordo visited her mother, Mrs. Joyce, the first of the week.

October 27 Navy Day

Selection of committee chairman for California, Arizona and New Mexico yesterday completed the Eleventh Naval District's preparations for the holding of the annual Navy Day celebration, October 27.

The list, as nominated by Rear Adm. Charles A. Blakely, U. S. N., district commandant, is headed by the Hon. Marshall F. McComb, of Los Angeles, regional vice president of the Navy League. Folsom Moore of Bisbee, Ariz., has been retained as chairman of that state, and he will be assisted by Walter J. Thalheimer, of Phoenix, while A. R. Hebenstreit, of Albuquerque, has been appointed New Mexico's committee chairman.

Their tasks will be to cooperate with Naval and civic officials in the conduct of Navy Day activities.

Mrs. Gilbert Dow and two little sons of Roswell are visiting Mr. and Mrs. Larry Dow for a few days.

Worth Working For

"This is your country and my country. All of us belong to it; all of us own it; all of us help run it."

"You have a home here and I have a home here. We want to keep our homes. We want to keep on living in them--pretty much the same way we always have. With all our faults it's a pretty good way of living."

In those words William S. Knudsen summed up the things that America is preparing to defend. Today our industry is turning out growing mountains of defense materials and we are girding ourselves for sacrifices so that we can preserve this "pretty good way of living."

If that is "not worth working for," Mr. Knudsen says, "then nothing is worth working for. Suppose we do have to work harder than we like to; suppose our muscles get tired; suppose we get some callouses on our hands; suppose we lose some sleep. Suppose we haven't got time to play--even on Saturday afternoons. Suppose we never get another vacation for a few years; or we have to put off building a house; or have to go back to brooms instead of vacuum cleaners."

Suppose we do? Mr. Knudsen says he thinks our way of living is still worth defending. So does every other American who knows the value of freedom.

Statement by The Honorable Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, in support of the Annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross

There could be no better evidence of the humanitarian ideals of the American people than our unique voluntary national organization, the American Red Cross. For sixty years, in war and in peace, at home and abroad, it has carried succor to those in distress and has labored to improve health and safety conditions for all our citizens. As part of its charter obligation, it renders invaluable service in connection with the welfare of the men the armed forces and their dependents. Through its field directors at Army posts, its Home Service in the Chapters, its medical social and recreation workers in the military hospitals and in many other ways, including first aid and life saving instruction for men in uniform, the Red Cross has become a vital part of our Army.

It should be the duty as well as the privilege of all American citizens to give the Red Cross wholehearted support through membership, by enrolling through the local Red Cross Chapter, in the period from November 11 to 30.

Strange and puzzling crimes by sleepwalkers. Unconscious deeds including murder, suicide, robbery and poison-pen plots, but the latest misadventure turned out all right because the sleepwalker went into another trance and straightened out everything before waking up. Don't miss this strikingly illustrated feature in The American Weekly, the magazine distributed with next week's Los Angeles Examiner.

John M. Helm Celebrates His 80th Birthday

Oct. 8, 1941, was a happy day for J. M. Helm (Uncle John) of the College Addition.

Miss Emma J. Helm, Mrs. Minnie English of Mayfield and Mrs. E. F. Berry, his nieces, planned a surprise for him by having an open house for him on that day.

He was warned to be ready to receive callers as this was his 80th birthday. At 11 o'clock a party of relatives arrived from Mayfield bringing the birthday cake and dinner.

During the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Roy Helm and mother, Mrs. Mary A. Helm and Mrs. Anna Howell of Metropolis, Ill., came to express their best wishes. They were followed by another group from Mayfield. There were continuous callers until 10 p. m. of friends and neighbors which totaled 60. He received many cards and remembrances, for which he was very grateful.

Mr. Helm was born and grew to manhood in Johnson City, Ill., near Vienna, where he became one of the leading teachers. Thinking there might be better opportunities in the West, he went to Texas and later to New Mexico, where he took an active part in the development of the educational system in this state. He graduated from the state school at Silver City, New Mexico. He was superintendent of the city schools Santa Rosa and Carrizozo for a number of years. He also taught in the state college at Silver City.

Ten years ago he retired from teaching and spent four years in California, then he came to Murray to make his home.

Mr. Helm is quite interesting to talk with on pioneer times in the West, schools and politics. He was elected to the first constitutional convention to admit the territories of Arizona and New Mexico to the Union as one state. He is a great admirer of President Roosevelt and wishes that he were young enough to be more active in the defense work. He is a member of the Christian Church and attends Sunday School most every Sunday.

KNOW YOUR BANK

Are Banks Meeting the Country's Credit Needs?

A short while ago the answer to this question was largely guesswork, but now it can be answered by facts. The American Bankers Association has completed a nation-wide survey revealing that 6200 answering commercial banks (43 per cent of the country's total) made over 13,590,000 credit extensions involving over 20 billion dollars, in one recent six-month period. Obviously, there is no "bottleneck" in America's financial machinery.

HALLOWEEN TRICKS FOR OCTOBER'S FAVORITE PARTY
(See Recipes Below)

WITCHES' NIGHT OUT

Spooks and fun while the goblins, black cats and ghosts make merry— isn't that an inspiration to have one grand, merry party before the winter sets in? Come, let's plan stew and brew and set the witches' cauldron boiling and bubbling!

You'll need hearty sandwiches, plentiful and hot since the weather's slightly nipped with frost. Of course you'll have cider and doughnuts because they're wedded together and traditional. To top it off, have a witches' cake, a chocolate, honest-to-goodness devil's food, moist and crumbly, and perhaps one of those pumpkin shaped molds of ice cream, or at least orange ice, to carry out October's orange and black color scheme.

The party starts as soon as the invitations are sent out. These can be pumpkin, black cat or cauldron shaped, made double with the invitation written on the inside. Send them early so your guests won't make other plans. The more, the merrier.

Twirl some streamers of orange and black crepe paper around the room, bring out the frayed straw hats, checked shirts, and grandmother's costumes from that trunk in the attic. All set? Here we go:

Sandwiches.

These can be made on the buffet or at the table if you have a sandwich toaster. If made in the kitchen use the brollier. Have assorted bread, butter, place cheese on first layer, then another slice of buttered bread, then a slice of ham, and top with a slice of bread. Toast, cut in three, and fatten with toothpicks.

To bewitch your family and guests completely serve them a cake with that agreeable melt-in-your-mouth quality. Measure the ingredients carefully so you'll attain that feathery lightness so essential to a good cake. After the icing is spread on the cake, make decorations with melted chocolate.

Witches' Cake.

(Devil's Food)
2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double acting baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup butter or shortening
1 cup sugar
3 egg yolks, well beaten
3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 1/2 cups milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt and soda. Sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar, and cream

LYNN SAYS:

A Halloween party can be a success without the least fuss. First of all, decorations and table settings don't have to be letter perfect, for you can have the most fun in the midst of the basement or barn decorated with sheaves of cornstalk, pumpkin faces, rakes, toes and goblins made of sheets.

For your table use a large piece of burlap or cotton sacks sewed together and dyed scarlet or gold. A centerpiece of pumpkin with candles inside the hollow or fruit and burnished autumn leaves will bring cheers.

Write fortunes and place them in apples or nuts. Play pin the tail on the cat. Bob for apples. Have target practice with bean shooters. Dance the Virginia Reel and other square dances if your floor can stand it—all amid plenty of black and orange crepe paper. Halloween's the time for all this noisy fun.

together until light. Add egg yolks, beat well, then chocolate and blend well. Add flour alternately with milk and beat well each time. Beat until smooth, add vanilla, and fold in egg whites. Bake in two greased 9-inch layer pans in a moderate (350 degrees) oven. Ice with:
Seven Minute Frosting.
2 egg whites
1 1/2 cups sugar
4 tablespoons water
1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla
1/2 teaspoon cream of tartar
Put egg whites, water, sugar, in top of double boiler and set over boiling water. Beat constantly for seven minutes with rotary beater then remove from fire. Add vanilla and cream of tartar and beat until of consistency to spread. Marshmallows (about 12 to 15) cut in pieces may be added.

Speaking of luscious cakes, there's another type of cake which will be just as much of a success either at your Halloween party or cake sale. As different from a chocolate cake as night from day, is this light, tender Silver Moon cake. Its velvety texture is no trick if you use a good shortening and cream it well:

Silver Moon Cake.
1/2 cup shortening
1 1/2 cups granulated sugar
2 cups sifted cake flour
2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon almond extract
3/4 cup milk
5 egg whites

Cream shortening and sugar until light, then add milk and sifted dry ingredients alternately, beating after each addition until smooth. Fold in stiffly beaten whites and flavoring last. Bake in three layers in a moderate (375 degrees) oven, 25 minutes. Frost with a butter frosting:

Uncooked Butter Icing.
1/2 cup butter
2 cups powdered sugar
3 tablespoons hot milk
1 teaspoon lemon or almond flavoring

Cream butter and shortening, add milk and blend until smooth. Add flavoring. For variation, add 2 1/2 squares semi-sweet chocolate melted before blending in milk. Flavor chocolate icing with vanilla.

A cake that wins a place in the Hall of Fame is this spice cake without which no cake sale is complete. But it isn't just an ordinary spice cake for it has the subtle flavor of bananas combined with the spices:

Spice Cake.
(Makes three 9-inch layers)
1/2 cup butter
2 cups brown sugar
4 eggs
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon each, cinnamon, nutmeg
1/2 teaspoon each, allspice, cloves
2 1/2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 bananas, mashed fine

Cream together the butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Add beaten egg yolks and bananas and blend well. Sift together the dry ingredients twice. Add them alternately with the milk, beating smooth after each addition. Last, fold in egg whites. Bake in three layer pans, in a moderate (350 degrees) oven, for 35 to 40 minutes. Ice between layers with a double recipe of the Seven minute icing or Chocolate flavored uncooked icing. For a fruity spice cake, 1/2 cup raisins and 1/2 cup nuts may be added with the flour.

Recreation Building for Army Posts

Architect's drawing of hospital recreation building under construction at 65 army hospitals. The buildings will be furnished and operated by American Red Cross, which will provide motion pictures and other entertainments, and through its own staff carry on social service and recreation program. Each building will contain a theater, recreation room, small kitchen and guest-rooms for relatives summoned to bedside of soldiers. Living and office quarters for Red Cross staff also will be included in the building.

WASHINGTON.—The hospital nurse smiled as she held the telegram before the eyes of the woman on the bed.

It said, "Red Cross and my commanding officer say o. k. for me to come, will arrive hospital twelve hours, Red Cross lending train fare keep your chin up Mom." It was signed "Pete."

The nurse tried to describe the effect of that telegram on the anxious mother.

"Sort of like a blood transfusion," she said.

Telegrams like Pete's are making people realize more and more these days just how much the Red Cross manages to do for Uncle Sam's army and navy. American mothers are learning that the Red Cross will give their sons in camp definite practical help in time of trouble. Back in 1905 congress named the Red Cross the official link between the men in the American armed forces and their families at home; since that day the Red Cross has been the trouble shooter or "worry buster" of every soldier.

If there is illness at home, the Red Cross, through its local chapters and its field directors in each camp, will keep the boy posted with up-to-the minute news. It will verify home conditions and, as in the case of Pete, help him obtain emergency furlough, or perhaps a dependency discharge. It will keep him well supplied with reading matter, entertainment and comfort articles while he's sick in the hospital. It will help him find employment when he returns to civilian life and it will give assistance to his family when they are in trouble.

Million Words Weekly

NEW YORK.—Daisy Bacon is just about the "readin'est woman" alive. She reads carefully and weighs with judgment more than 1,000,000 words every week. Miss Bacon is editor of three national magazines and studies each line that goes into them. She is the only woman in the world who is active editor-in-chief of such a trio and the one woman who edits an all-fiction weekly book. She publishes only about 800,000 words a month, but must read the astounding total to find what she wants to print. For relaxation she reads "a few books" each week.

Thoroughly feminine, tall, slender, blonde, her hobbies are perfect clothes and cats. Her costumes are of her own design and have resulted in her being called one of the best dressed women in the country. Her love for cats is exemplified by pets at her apartment at 40 Fifth avenue, New York, and by a parade of about 200 modeled figures of felines across the top of her editorial desk.

A descendant of Gov. William Bradford of Plymouth Colony, and the family of Sir Francis Bacon, she loves the West and usually spends her vacation there. One of her great-uncles, John Holbrook, was one of the noted sheriffs at Fort Dodge, Iowa, in early days, helping to bring about peace in a turbulent area. An earlier ancestor was Deacon John Holbrook of Vermont, one of the first American publishers. Miss Bacon has an uncanny faculty of quickly choosing stories and articles favored by her readers.

Hoosier Couplets Ready Now for Braille Readers

Ortmeyer Humorous Verses Free to Blind People Anywhere in U. S. A.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Arthur H. Ortmeyer, well-known writer of couplets, who conducts a column in the Indianapolis News called "Hoosier Homespun," has widened his field of homespun philosophy and humor into braille. The couplets, some of which appear below, are now being distributed by the Indiana state library. The post office gives free postage, as it does with all braille publication in the U. S. Any sightless braille reader in the country may borrow for reading, the book "Life Lines" postage free, on application.

Alabama and Mississippi state libraries have asked for rights in publishing the book and the Library of Congress will begin issuing Ortmeyer's couplets soon. A few selections from the couplets follow:

Churning waters sing a paean
Even in a wash machine.

No double feature yet quite vies
With that of sunset and sunrise.

Ortmeyer goes humorous:

A pancake with a non-slid tread!

Wright Cadet

From all appearance Cadet Richard M. Wright, of Richmond, Ind., is about to board an airplane at the very site where his famous cousin, Wilbur and Orville Wright, once conducted a flying school. This photo, taken at Maxwell Field, Ala., in the Southeast air corps training center, where Cadet Wright is now enrolled in the Pilot Replacement wing, might be called "Wishful Thinking." Keen to start flying like 700 other cadets in his class, Wright will not be allowed to enter an airplane until he has completed an initial five-week training course, which will condition him to enter flying school.

tainment and comfort articles while he's sick in the hospital. It will help him find employment when he returns to civilian life and it will give assistance to his family when they are in trouble.

There is little that the Red Cross will not do for a serviceman. Recently a soldier was brought into a military hospital with both eyes totally and permanently blinded in an accident. A volunteer Red Cross worker there spent half a year teaching the boy to read braille.

Another army camp reports the case of a veteran's widow who was refused government compensation because officials lacked evidence of her husband's disability. During the next few months, a busy Red Cross field director wrote more than 200 letters on her behalf, finally unearthing the evidence which meant her livelihood.

Right now the Red Cross is busy constructing headquarters buildings for its staff at 62 army camps, and has undertaken to furnish and operate hospital recreation buildings in 65 army stations and general hospitals. Furnishings for the latter will include a theater and motion picture equipment, as well as offices and a lounge. Thanks to the Red Cross, American mothers can be perfectly sure that their convalescent sons will have plenty of medically approved entertainment while they are laid up.

Red Cross service to the armed forces covers a lot of ground. The army and navy recruit their nurses from the nursing reserve of the Red Cross. The present drive to collect 200,000 units of human blood plasma for the armed forces is another Red Cross assignment. And just to top things off, the women of this country, as volunteers in the ranks of the Red Cross, this year handed over to the United States army and navy over 28,000,000 surgical dressings, and are now starting upon a batch of 500,000 sweaters.

As one soldier put it, "Uncle Sam's our commanding officer, and he looks out for us the best he can. But the Red Cross—well, the Red Cross is Mrs. Sam."

Rural Folks Go to Church

The rural sections of the country are better promoters of Sunday School attendance than those in cities, according to a recent survey by the International Council of Religious Education. The chart above pictures the situation today, in accordance with figures released by the council: (1) 14,500,000 crimes in 1940. (2) 1 crime in 5 by boy or girl. (3) 185,000 U. S. Sunday schools. (4) Criminologists say church training prevents crimes.

CHICAGO.—Rural Americans have proven to be better Sunday school promoters than their city brothers, a survey made public here by the International Council of Religious Education discloses.

The first nation-wide survey of Sunday school distribution and attendance showed that 72 per cent of all church schools in the United States are found in rural areas of less than 2,500 population. In attendance, however, the urbanites have an advantage. Sunday schools located in cities have an average enrollment of 210 compared to the rural church schools' 65. A nation-wide average of 114 is maintained.

Thirty-six Protestant denominations, co-operating through the International Council, operate Sunday schools in the United States and now have a total of 100,430 schools. Total pupil enrollment for these schools was announced as 20,772,141. Dr. Mary Leigh Palmer, associate director of leadership education, made public the statistical findings of the survey.

Flag of Christian Church

It is an international flag, signifying the internationalism of Christianity, and may be flown by any Christian church anywhere in the world.

For many years church members in the United States and abroad wanted an emblem to symbolize Christianity. So, in 1897, an American, Charles Carlton Overton, created a flag with a red cross on a deep field of blue, surrounded by a white background. This flag has been adopted by the major Christian faiths.

J. Fuller Pep

By JERRY LINK

Cousin Carrie has things figured out. "Fuller," says she, passin' me my second helpin' of KELLOGG'S PEP, "the reason you're a go-getter is because you're a come-backer."

And I got to admit, KELLOGG'S PEP has got me goin' and comin'—goin' and gettin' things done and comin' back for more PEP each mornin'. That's what comes of gettin' all your vitamins. KELLOGG'S PEP has got 'em, 'em, or course, but it's extra-long in the two that are extra-short in lots o' people's meals—vitamins B<sub>1</sub> and B<sub>2</sub>.

Women's Coquetry

Coquetry is the essential characteristic, and the prevalent humor of women; but they do not all practice it, because the coquetry of some is restrained by fear or by reason.—La Rochefoucauld.

Muck-Rakers

The men with the muck-rake are often indispensable to the well-being of society, but only if they know when to stop raking the muck.—Theodore Roosevelt.

INDIGESTION

Gas may irritate the heart action. At the first signs of indigestion, stop eating and sip water. Do not take any medicine. The best remedy is to eat less. If you are unable to do this, take a small amount of Mentholatum. It will help you to eat less and will help you to digest what you do eat.

At the first sign of a cold, make up your mind to avoid much of the sniffing, sneezing, sneezing and stuffy condition of your nostrils as possible. Mentholatum in powder, ointment, or in the form of a lozenge, will help you to breathe more easily. It will also help you to get rid of the mucus that collects in your chest. You'll be delighted with the way Mentholatum combats cold, misery and helps restore comfort. Save it for future use.

Sharp Wits Cut
Sharp wits, like sharp knives, do often cut their owners' fingers.—Arrowsmith.

Facts of ADVERTISING

ADVERTISING represents the leadership of a nation. It points the way. We merely follow—follow to new heights of comfort, of convenience, of happiness. As time goes on advertising is used more and more, and as it is used more we all profit more. It's the way advertising has—of bringing a profit to everybody concerned, the consumer included.

But his voice, when he spoke, was both suave and controlled. "Don't run away with the idea this Chakitana claim is my only trouble," he said. "I've got mine interests that take me from the Circle right down to Mexico. And I like to clear things up as I go along."

Once again I recognized the deep rumble of big business. But the thought of my father's lone grave somewhere, out along the tangled trails of the Chakitana confirmed me in my own blind course of opposition.

"We turn in here," I explained, indicating the cozy path that led to my shack front.

"Do you mean you're satisfied with this sort of thing?" he demanded, his contemptuous gaze on my littered dooryard, left so unlovely by the spring thaw.

"I'd like it better if I had a school," I said.

John Trumbull sat watching me as I climbed down from the car seat.

"What would you say if I put a few thousand into a school for you," he said with what impressed me as a purely achieved matter-of-factness "as good a school as they've got anywhere in this Territory?"

It was my turn to remain silent as I looked up into those glacier-ice eyes of his. And I remembered my old school maxim about fearing the Greeks when they come bearing gifts.

"Does my claim impress you as worth that much?" I found the courage to demand.

His color deepened, apparently with the embarrassment of a contestant who has underestimated the power of his opponent.

"What it's worth won't be decided by either you or me," he said in an unexpectedly charmed voice. "But I was hoping we could get together on it in some friendlier way."

"I happen to be Klondike Coburn's daughter," I reminded him.

That brought a steelier look into his averted eyes.

"I was trying to forget that," he retorted, almost in a bark. "But hate and stupidity, you'll find, won't get you far."

"I'll get along," I said, forcing a smile of assurance. And as I stood confronting him I began to nurse a new and sharper fellow feeling for Sidney Lander. He too had refused to be crushed by that human car of Juggernaut.

John Trumbull started his engine and threw in his clutch.

"You may not last here as long as you imagine," he asserted as he swung about my dooryard and headed for the road.

CHAPTER XIII

Saturday, of course, meant a day off for the valley chark-wrangler.

But a day off didn't mean idleness. I had my mending and darning to do, my sourdough sponge to work into loaves, and my house to put in order after six days of neglect. I'd baked my bread, and finished my washing and ironing, and with the fortitude of the true frontiersman was just filling my big woodbox with neatly split spruce poles when a truck rumbled up to my door.

It was a rather official-looking truck of battleship-gray, similar to those I'd seen of late about the Administration Camp at Palmer. And it startled me a little when Lander swung down from the driver's seat. He looked tired and a trifle solemn.

"I suppose you know what that means?" he said as I continued to stare at the truck. He laughed, rather curtly, when I told him I was entirely in the dark. "It means I'm field manager for the Matanuska Valley Project."

From my silence he seemed to reap some final impression of disappointment.

"I suppose you think I've failed you?" he said, more solemn than ever.

"In what?" I asked, resenting his power to interfere with my heart action.

"In marking time this way about your Chakitana claim," he observed as he followed me into the shack.

"I can live without that mine," I found myself saying.

"But nobody likes to be robbed," Lander observed as he thrust some papers into my hand. One of those papers, I noticed, was my father's dog-eared certificate of citizenship. And as I glanced down at the faded portrait appended to it I realized I was looking at the face of a fighter. It made me stiffen my shoulders.

"We can't, of course, pick our ground for this particular fight," Lander was saying. "We have to know our enemy's line of attack. And in this case he seems to be playing safe and turning to court procedure and trying to make everything look legal."

"Then what can we do?" I asked.

"I have Canby working for us at Juneau," Lander explained. "He's both dependable and resourceful. But you can't, of course, hurry those Record Office chair-warmers. And we'll have to depend on Canby."

"Trumbull's going to lose out, remember, on his first round," Lander was explaining. "That report shows your father's naturalization papers can be confirmed. It'll leave the issue hanging on the question of clear or clouded title definition. And that issue may have to be decided out on the Chakitana."

He then turned to the task in Matanuska.

"Things are going to be different around here," he confidently affirmed. "They've got to, or there'll be hell to pay. And it'll be a man's size job, making this muddle ready for those two hundred families."

"Isn't it a little late for that?" I asked as I filled my two crackery cups with hot tea.

Lander admitted that it was. But that, he contended, was just why we had to pitch in and help.

"You'll get a school, of course," he went on as he abstractedly stirred his tea. "And we'll have to have a hospital of some sort. And a Red Cross nurse. And a marshal to keep order in those transient camps. And someone to speed up the building-gangs and stop all this bungling about supplies and the eternal buck-passing that's mainly responsible for the mess they're in."

"I want to help," I said. Something in my voice brought an approving smile from the man across the bald pine table.

"In two weeks," he said, "we'll have a radio station here, to link us up with the outside world. That'll take us out of the wilderness, at one jump. And before winter we'll have electric lights and telephones and cold storage and a cannery and snug homes for every one of those two hundred families."

"You'll get a school, of course."

I thought of the undug wells and the unfinished roads and the car-loads of cement that had been left to harden along the railway siding.

"You know, of course, that your friend Ericson is in the transient camp here?" Lander asked.

I disclaimed any friendship between Eric the Red and myself.

"That's just the point," proceeded my visitor. "He's a yellow as they make them. And two days ago he had a talk with John Trumbull up at the Happy Day."

"What's that to me?" I asked with what was only a pretense of indifference.

"Trumbull," he explained, "is pretty ruthless. There are mighty few road rules left when he starts steamrolling toward his own selfish ends."

"I've been talking with Colonel Hart," he added. "And he agrees with me we've got to have a medical man here. There's a chance he'll bring Doctor Ruddock over from Toklutna. And I've put in a word for your friend Katie O'Connell. There's no reason she couldn't swing in as a Red Cross nurse."

A wave of joy went through me. Katie, I realized, would be an answer to prayer.

Just then Salaria appeared at my door, brown and wind-blown. In the crook of her arm she carried a rifle and over one shoulder swung a full game bag. Her dusky eyes rested rather hungrily on the silent Lander.

"You goin' my way, old-timer?" she inquired, indicating the truck in the dooryard.

Lander's gaze met mine for a moment. I could see the heat-lightning smile that hovered about his lips.

"Right to your door, S'lary," Lander answered her, with a hand-wave toward his truck.

It was while the Artemis with the rise was still frowning over some faint trace of mockery in his voice that Lander turned back to me.

"How about coming to Wasilla tonight?" he asked. "They have a roadhouse dance there, every Sat-with him to the scene to see that her father had no real claim. She declines, however, and her manner nettles the mine king. He is used to having things his own way. Father and daughter were both rather imperious.

day night, for our relief-roll toilers. And I want to get a line on the bad actors in that bunch."

"I'll be seeing you," I acquiesced in the offhanded note of the frontier.

"Fine," said Lander as he waited for Salaria to climb into the truck.

It was many a year since I'd seen an Alaska jamboree of that kind, and it left me wondering if life hadn't rather spoiled me for such affairs. For along with the dancing was much brawling and lovmaking and the imbibing of a local brand of hooch known as moose-milk. The orchestra was merely a tinny old piano helped out by a fiddle and accordion. Even as we pushed our way into that crowded roadhouse with its open bar I wondered if the natives weren't doing the best to revive the old Klondike days. Men in flannel shirts and high-tops gyrated about with gum-chewing white women in slacks or held well-rouged and aloe-eyed half-breed girls in calico close to their Mackinaw bosoms.

Lander danced with a smooth sedateness that left us almost conspicuous in that swarm of jiggling bodies and flying heels. And I felt oddly small and passive in that strong arm of his. The sense of his nearness, I suppose, should have made me happy.

But I couldn't drum up any enthusiasm for that falsetto and loose-jointed hilarity born of bad music and worse whisky.

I tried to tell my partner that there was something pathetic in such childlike efforts to escape the isolation of wilderness life. But Lander only laughed.

"This is easy," he said. "There'll be a broken head or two before the night's over." There'd even been a stabbing, the week before.

But I had no craving to see fist-fights and knifeplay.

"I want to go home," I said at the end of our dance. For along the line that crowded the bar I'd caught sight of Eric the Red, surrounded by a circle of transients. He was too busy drinking and talking to give any thought to dancing. But his sardonic smile as we passed within six paces of him confirmed my distaste for the place.

"All right," said Lander. Yet I knew by the way his gaze lingered on the flushed and bleary-eyed faces all about him that he would have preferred to stay.

The air outside was sweet with a small wind that blew down from the Talkeetnas.

"I guess this is better," he said as he tucked a blanket about my knees and climbed in beside me. He was silent for a while, tooting the truck along the spectral ribbon of a road.

"I'm afraid I took you away from your work," I ventured.

Lander laughed as that none-too-even road kept our swaying bodies in rough-but friendly contact.

"That's about the best I can ask of life," he said. "To be next to you like this."

"My answering laugh, I suppose was largely defensive.

"While we both remember to keep to the center of the road," I suggested.

"It'll be a hotter road before we're through with it," the resonant low voice beside me announced. He was speaking in riddles, of course. Yet I knew well enough what he meant.

"But where will it lead to?" I asked.

"I don't know, yet," he answered after a moment's silence. "But I don't want it to lead me from you."

"Hasn't it already done that?" I questioned.

It may have sounded a bit cruel. He turned and made an effort to study my face in the none-too-certain light.

"I thought we meant something to each other," he said with a quick and boylike candor that was more disarming than all the earlier riddles. "I rather thought you liked me."

"I do," I said in an effort to match casualness with casualness.

But that, plainly, didn't solve his problem. He drove on in silence until he came to the narrower trail that led in to my shack.

"I suppose there's somebody else?" he finally ventured, coming to a stop in the cabin clearing.

"There's nobody else," I was honest enough to acknowledge.

"That's all I wanted to know," he said with a new resoluteness in his voice.

I was more afraid of myself, I think, than I was of him. I didn't like the way my heart was pounding as he got down from his seat and crossed to my side of the truck.

"With me there is nobody else," I compelled myself to say.

I knew, by the way he stiffened, that my shot had hit its mark.

"You're right," he quietly acknowledged. Then he laughed his curt laugh. "I guess I'm running a little ahead of the game."

Invented Halftone

The process of reproducing the tones of a photograph by means of dotted or checkered spots was invented in 1880 by Stephen Henry Horgan, an American photographer, says Pathfinder. The first halftone ever printed appeared in the New York Daily Graphic in 1880. But Horgan's process was not immediately accepted. In fact, he was fired as art director of the New York Herald in 1893 when he suggested using halftones to publisher James Gordon Bennett. The values of half-tones are achieved by interposing a screen between the original photograph and the plate to be etched.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—During his 16 years in the house, Representative Lindsay Warren of North Carolina used to lie back in his chair with his eyes closed, seemingly asleep. But he never was. When he snapped into action, his mates noted that he had missed nothing of even the most complicated goings on. To them he was known as "The Fox."

Similarly, not much has been heard of him since he became comptroller general two years ago, but here he is suddenly in action with a brief against the National Youth administration, accusing it of playing politics to keep up its membership rolls and get appropriations. Characteristically, he goes into details.

Bulky, bull-necked, pompadoured and of a general leathery makeup, Mr. Warren liked to go fishing in old clothes at Hatteras or Kitty Hawk. He didn't want to be bothered with this comptroller general job, although it pays $10,000 a year for 15 years. His predecessor, the penny-pinching John Raymond McCarl, who once nicked a pullman berth item on General Pershing's expense account, was known as "the watch dog of the treasury." Mr. Warren didn't want to be a watch dog, and after Mr. McCarl quit, in 1930, President Roosevelt offered Mr. Warren the job three times before he took it.

One of his three children, Lindsay Jr., aged 10, is ailing. The importance of getting the best medical care for the boy, and his desire for a permanent home in order to have induced him to accept. He had been one of the most popular men in congress, and watch dogs aren't altogether popular.

His post carries more power than almost any in the federal job portfolio, although no quis entrant would be apt to list it. He passes on government appropriations, audits governmental accounts, settles claims and in numerous other ways polices hidden or furtive charges in federal expenditures. He had valuable training for this in his long experience as chairman of the house committee of accounts.

He is 51 years old, a native of Washington, N. C., up "through channels" in politics, as county attorney and state senator. He has been regarded as one of the ablest political strategists of the Democratic party. Furthermore, there is a legend that he once trimmed the President handsomely in a weekend poker game. Being deceptively sleepy-eyed, and at the same time alert makes him a formidable poker player.

REINHARDT HEYDRICH, setting up drumhead justice in the former Czech provinces, with more than 100 executions to date, has improved greatly on the comparatively loose and casual techniques of the Germans after the Franco-Prussian war.

In the latter instance the French France Trireur gave the Germans a lot of real trouble. The reprisals were ruthless and widespread, but unsystematic, and quite amateurish compared to Heydrich's highly professional exploits, for the fatherland and the iron heel.

Old Baron Constantia von Neurath, whom Heydrich succeeds as "protector" in the Czech region, liked to shoot wild boars, but held back on shooting too many people. So they give a younger man a chance. The new "protector" was Hitler's Angerman in the 1934 blood-purge, one of his principal victims being his friend Ernst Roehm, with whom he had risen to Nazi party eminence in the 25 organizations. They immediately afterward made him director of the Berlin office of the Gestapo.

As he rose in the Gestapo, Heydrich established precise and up-to-date methods for killings and mayhem.

It was in 1938, when the Gestapo took on the activities of the "International Criminal Police commission," that he foreshadowed the wider outreach of his espionage system. He said: "We are aware that the criminal activities of the world can only be fought internationally." It was reported at the time that in his office there was built up a dossier on "criminals" all over the world, who had spoken disrespectfully of Nazi Germany. One exploit which won him increased power was sifting Schwachnigg's private

LEAVES from Uncle Sam's Notebook

WNU Service—By HARRIET MAY WILSON

Making Cottage Cheese

The production of fresh cottage cheese for the local market is a useful project for the Women's Exchange, or any permanently organized women's club. The equipment required for such production is simple and inexpensive, and the making of the cheese is light and easy work. Usually a considerable quantity can be disposed of at good prices to lunch-rooms, school cafeterias and delicatessens.

In making cheese in quantity it is necessary to follow an exact method in order to insure a uniform product.

TO CLABBER THE MILK

If the milk is to be soured without a starter, it should be set in a clean pail or shotgun can, covered, warmed to 75 degrees F., and allowed to stand at that temperature until it curdles. It goes without saying that fresh, clean skim milk must be used.

THE USE OF STARTERS

Since the use of a starter helps to give uniformity in the finished product, the advisability of using it is apparent. A home-made starter is simply a quantity of sour milk in which a large number of acid-forming bacteria have grown. However, for best and surest results commercial starters are recommended. These may be bought from any dairy-supply house. The small package of starter—liquid or dried—is added to a pint of pasteurized milk. The milk which is then cooled, covered and set away to curd is called a "mother starter." When it has curdled a teaspoonful is used per quart of pasteurized skim milk to ripen it for cheese. In making large quantities of cheese the proportion of starter to milk is usually a pint to three or four gallons of milk. The most convenient procedure is to set the milk with the starter at night; it should be a firm clabber by morning. When the milk has formed a firm curd which breaks choppy and shows a collection of whey when a finger is inserted in the clabber, the curd is ready for processing.

CUTTING, HEATING, AND STIRRING

With a long-bladed knife cut the curd crosswise into two-inch squares. Heat to a temperature of 100 degrees F., and keep at that temperature for 30 minutes. During this heating process the curd should be stirred with a spoon every four or five minutes.

Note: The object of all these operations is to separate the curd from the whey. The texture of the resulting cheese is largely dependent upon careful cutting, heating, and stirring of the curd. If the curd is stirred too much, the result will be a cheese of extremely fine grain which is slow to drain and a large part of which will be lost.

DRAINING

When the milk has been heated and otherwise processed for the proper period, it is then poured upon cheesecloth which is suspended over a pail or other container, for the purpose of separating the curd from the whey. The curd should drain, undisturbed, for 15 or 20 minutes. If it is handled it tends to become mushy. Later, lift first one side, then another of the cheesecloth to facilitate the draining process. Allow it to drain until practically all of the whey is gone, leaving the curd smooth and soft.

The usual rate of salting is 2 heaping tablespoonsful to 3 1/2 gallons of milk, or about 2 1/2 ounces to 10 pounds of curd.

COTTAGE CHEESE WITH RENNET

Liquid rennet may be bought from dairy-supply houses and should be added to the skim milk at the rate of 3 drops per 10 pints or pounds of milk. The milk is then handled as indicated in the paragraph "The use of starters." The rennet being added just after the starter is put in, and the whole stirred vigorously. After the rennet is added, let the milk stand until it is curdled, after which it is ready to drain. If rennet is used, do not heat the milk before draining as this will produce a hard, tough product. Simply drain after clabbering, without any preliminary cutting or stirring. The curd will be very fine and it will be necessary to use for draining, a cloth with a very fine mesh—ordinary cheesecloth will not suffice. After draining, salt just as for any cottage cheese.

For further information as to making and marketing, and for many tempting recipes, send five cents to Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 1471.

RUSSIAN OLIVE

Russian olive, that lovely gray-green shrub so often used for wind-breaks, may be readily grown from seed. The seed matures and is collected early in October. It should be stratified over winter (a layer of the seed, then a layer of sand, and repeat), and planted in the spring in trenches about one inch deep. The seedlings should reach suitable size for transplanting the first season. A pound of seed will usually produce about 600 usable seedlings. This shrub gives a pleasant appearance.

Witness Finally Admitted Stronger Force's Influence

Cross-examining a witness on the other side, an attorney tried by every means possible to discredit him.

"You tell us—you came to the city in search of work," he said meaningfully. "I put to you that there was another, a stronger, motive which brought you all that distance. Isn't that so?"

The witness hesitated a time, then slowly replied, "Well, yes, there was."

"Ah!" exclaimed the barrister triumphantly, "Now tell the court what it was."

"A locomotive," replied the witness blandly.

Fuel Saving.

QUESTION: I own a two-family semi-detached brick house, 15 years old. I think I'm using too much oil for heating my home and furnishing hot water. Would the installation of the following result in a saving large enough to compensate for their cost: 1. Vacuum valves on my present heating system? 2. Storm windows? 3. Insulating the floor of my attic, which is not being used? Which type of insulation is preferable—the blown or laid flat?

Answer: 1. Replace all defective valves; but it may not be necessary to replace all of them. 2. Tight fitting storm sash will reduce the loss of heat through the windows. 3. Insulating the floor of the attic will also help. A large percentage of heat is lost through the attic. The efficiency of insulation is not altered whether it is "blown" in or "laid" in. All of the above should effect a substantial saving in the consumption of fuel. Another important point is to examine all windows on the outside, and caulk all open joints between window frames and walls. This should be done with caulking compound, forced in with a caulking gun.

Odor in a Drawer

A friendly correspondent writes of having bought an antique chest of drawers. One of the drawers had so strong an odor of disinfectant that table linen kept in it could not be used. "Now, about twice a year, I put a shallow pan of boiling water in the drawer with a little lavender oil poured into it, close the drawer quickly, and leave it there overnight. For two successive days I bring the water again to a boil with a cover on the saucpan, quickly put it back into the drawer, and again leave it overnight. The drawer is just as sweet-smelling as one could wish, and the linens smell only of lavender."

I am very glad to have that suggestion, and appreciate the thought of my correspondent in sending it to me.

Frosted Basement Wall

Question: The inside of our basement walls, two feet above ground level, are white with frost, and the woodwork resting on them is wet. Everything in the basement is mouldy. There is no concrete floor, and our furnace is not in yet. How can I dry things out?

Answer: The dampness is due to the drying out of the concrete walls, and much dampness gets into the basement through the dirt floor. Until your furnace goes in, nothing can be done to dry things out. The moisture will dry out naturally with the coming of warmer weather. I do not think that your woodwork will suffer in the meantime; but a concrete floor in the basement, and the bringing in of heat will be advantageous.

Radiator Air Valves

Question: What are adjustable port air valves? You have mentioned them. Is it necessary to put this type of valve on all radiators, or just those that do not heat quickly?

Answer: The ordinary air valve has but one hole or vent through which air in the radiator is exhausted. The adjustable port valve has several different sized holes, and can be set at any point depending upon the speed and the amount of air to be exhausted in a particular radiator. Radiators on the far end of the line should be equipped with valves of this type, set at the largest opening for a quick escape of air from the radiator.

Air Filter

Question: A friend suggested heating my house with filtered hot air, but could not explain what he meant. Where could I get some information about it?

Answer: Air filtering units for hot air systems consist of a cabinet containing a blower and filters. The cabinet is attached to the furnace. The blower draws the air from the rooms above and forces it through the filter. The dust in the air is extracted by the filters. You can get the names of manufacturers from the Architects Samples Corporation at 101 Park avenue, New York city.

Hot Air Heat

Question: In my four-story brick building I have a hot air heating system only four years old. I intend putting a blower type oil burner into the furnace. Will an oil burner cause the hot air to smell? Will it cause dirt to go up to the rooms?

Answer: Neither the smell of oil nor soot will get up into the rooms, if the sections of the furnace are properly cemented and there are no cracks in any part of the furnace.

Elegance and Refinement Are Apparent in Furred Costumes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THERE is a genuine feeling for elegance and refinement expressed throughout the fall and winter fashion program that bespeaks the discriminating taste of best-dressed women. Among the signs that point to a definite movement toward distinctive apparel that carries a message of "tone" and quality is the emphasis placed on luxury fabrics this season, on sumptuous furs, important-looking jewels and accessory accents that impart thoroughbred touches to the costume.

Then, too, the revival of dress-up clothes for "after five" is noted this season. The street-length dinner dress is an important fashion which in turn brings back into the picture formal little early Victorian dinner hats to wear with them. The new long gloves add dignity and luxury.

That there is a definite importance attached to richly fur-trimmed costumes was a fact emphasized when the Style Creators of Chicago presented a showing of representative fall and winter modes recently, three of which appear in the accompanying illustration. These luxurious costume suits of wool have dresses that are jewel-studded at the top and have fur-trimmed jackets for added elegance.

Smart and distinctive is the fitted three-quarter length cutaway bordered in fox shown to the left in the picture. Its matching dress has below-elbow sleeves, a tucked neckline and a huge clip of silver, turquoise and aquamarine. A cleverly styled pompadour hat of felt adds a convincing style touch.

Amethyst-colored wool is the fabric selection for the suit in the center of the group. Its hip-length jacket is distinguished by a fluttering collar of blue-dyed fox. The high draped turban is in two shades of amethyst.

The fitted and bloused jacket of the soft brown wool suit shown to the right has a front of sable-dyed squirrel. An autumn brown felt hat with wide brim softly shirred and choux of green velvet tops this handsome outfit.

A record-breaking season that will dramatize furs to the limit is in prospect. Designers are using fur so intriguingly that only seeing is believing. Their efforts run in two distinct avenues of thought. One approach leads to the lavish use of fur as a trimming, as demonstrated in the accompanying illustration. The newest coats are enriched with tuxedo panels of fur, dresses have tunics heavily bordered with fur, and there are attractive appliques of flat fur.

On the other hand, designers are playing up high drama in separate fur pieces. Muffs were never so huge and, as if to stress this fact, hats in matching fur are often so tiny they look like tophats perched on pompadours or thrust at a dangerous angle over the forehead. However, milliners are seeing to it that there are fitted snoods at the back or other contrivances that insure firm anchorage to the head. Nor are all fur hats tiny, for one of the smartest hat fashions this season is the wide brim that is fur-faced.

All sorts of fur neckpieces are made of fur, the latest bit of fashion gossip centering about the new stole effects. Some of them are like capelet scarfs. Other fur fantasies include fur-cuffed gloves, huge bows of fur to wear at the throat, shoe ornaments, bracelets with danglers of fur, corages of fur flowers, and fur motifs to applique.

Jewels on Wool

A button craze is on. Designers are working overtime devising ways to "show off" buttons. Fashion even has a surprise for your tailored wool suit—jeweled buttons! It's this kind of ingenuity that keeps things interesting. From the American couture series by "La Mode," come the buttons of vari-colored jewels that march in double rank and file up and down the jacket of this smart suit, climaxed by a matching spray lapel pin. You will find these jewelry-and-button ensembles equally fascinating on tailored and dress-maker suits.

So brighten up that dark shiver wool, or make that gaudy plaid even more enchanting with buttons, bows and more buttons!

All That Glitters

Is Right in Style

Everything in the way of hats, dresses, suits and accessories glitters this season. You do not have to stop and wonder if this glittering touch or that will be in good taste. It is good taste, according to fashion's decree. The embroideries massed on evening fashions are masterpieces of needlework. The jet accents on day frocks, be they simple wool or regal velvet, are everywhere. Nailheads are no respecters of fabrics. They glitter on suits and on elaborate dress gowns alike.

Black frocks are being illumined with flashes of gay beadwork and embroidery. And the latest is bright red, green or vivid blue sleeves, lavishly embroidered. Hats, too, come in for their share of glitter. Some are of fur encrusted with gay sequins.

Dressy Afternoon Suits Of Velvet or Rich Silk

The trend toward gentlewoman fashions is reflected in the new afternoon suits displayed in current costume collections. You will still wear tweeds for morning and about town, but for afternoons you will be wanting a suit in black, brown or deep jewel-colored velvet. If you prefer, you can choose a suit of elegant moire silk. Most of the suits have jackets with flaring peplums.

Match Them

Match your petunia-colored gloves with stockings in identical hue. Give your simple black dress a dashing fillip with these accessories. Top it with a little jet dinner hat—that's fashion's way of doing it this season.
