AMERICAN RED CROSS WAR CHEST CAMPAIGN

The Red Cross has been requested to raise fifty million dollars for a War fund to be used for taking care of men in the armed forces of the United States, and for their families.

The quota for Lincoln County is $1100.00. Mr. J. E. Hall is the County War fund Chairman, and sub-chairmen have been appointed in each community in the County.

Let's do our part for the protection of our boys in service and put their drive over the top as quickly as possible.

NOTICE

Due to the sudden attack on our Pacific outposts by the Japanese, which has caused temporary confusion along our supply lines to the Philippine Islands, where many of our Lincoln county boys are stationed, we ask that relatives and friends withhold mailing Christmas packages to these men, as all available space in cargo vessels will naturally be needed for supplies necessary to their defense. However, cards and letters will still be accepted.

NEW YORK.—There's a nice aliteration in "Cape Town Clipper," and an invitation to rhyming which in other days might have interested Tin

There may never be a Casey Jones of the air, the bucko lad who will ride anything, anywhere, on the slightest provocation. Just a look at the dashboard of a modern plane is enough to convince one of that.

As to being a Clipper skipper, any lad who starts to day-dream his way into the job had better make other arrangements. Here are a few but not all of the qualifications of 35-year-old Captain Gray:

He is a master mariner, a licensed engine mechanic, a licensed airplane mechanic, a graduate radio engineer, a licensed radio operator, a first class seaman and the holder of certificates in international law, maritime law and business administration.

Mr. Gray was born in Gutterberg, Iowa, in 1899 and left the University of Iowa to take slight training at Brooks field in the army school.

Let a Star-Studded Ham Say Merry Christmas! (See Recipes Below)

Deck the Table Greetings, homemakers! Here's my Christmas present to you, a menu with recipes designed to ring in the holiday season and to crown your table with luscious food, just wonderful to eat.

- THIS WEEK'S MENU Christmas Dinner *Grapefruit-Perlimmon Salad *Sweet French Dressing *Baked Ham *Holiday Sauce *Virginia Cranberry Mold *Sweet Potato Pone *Green Peas With Beets Creccent Rolls Celery Olives Jolly Plum Pudding with Sauce Coffee *Recipes Given

There's a touch of the traditional in the menu in the baked ham and sweet potato pone, topped off with the plum pudding, and then there's a dash of newness in the cranberry mold, the salad and its perky dressing and the holiday sauce.

*Grapefruit-Perlimmon Salad. Be versatile with your grapefruit. Peel, separate into sections, then slip the thin peeling off the sections being careful to leave the section whole.

*Sweet French Dressing. (For fruit salads) 2 tablespoons oil 3 1/2 tablespoons powdered sugar 1/2 teaspoon salt 3 tablespoons paprika 1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce 4 tablespoons lemon juice

*Virginia Cranberry Mold. You'll want something tantalizingly tart as foil to the bland sweetness of the ham. Here it is: 1 17-ounce can cranberry sauce Juice of two oranges Grated rind of 1 orange 1 cup hot water 3 packages gelatin

Delicately spiced, heart-warming and gracious accompaniment to your dinner is this sweet potato pone. Satisfy your desire for sweet potatoes with ham this new-old way.

Bake in a shallow, buttered casserole in a moderate (350 degrees) oven, 30 to 35 minutes.

*Baked Ham. You can depend upon your holiday dinner to go over if you serve a ham, glistening and shimmering, baked in sweet, spicy juices.

*Holiday Sauce. For your masterpiece, the ham, serve a sauce that's rich and luscious. Ladle it over the ham generously to bring out the best in the meat.

*Green Peas With Beets. Bright red and green touch in the best tradition of Christmas in your best and green peas vegetable combination.

Steaming the Pudding. Plum puddings are best when served piping hot. This means they should be steamed for at least 2 1/2 hours before serving.

LYNN SAYS: Few holidays can offer you the same decorative possibilities as Christmas season, so make the most of the evergreens, berries, cones, candles, ornaments, and rich colors.

Here are some centerpiece ideas which would be effective: Use a green wreath on a mirror and fill with evergreen branches dipped or sprayed with white paint and place brightly colored ornaments or fruits among the branches.

Make a gingerbread house, treat with a thin powdered sugar icing and sprinkle with silver snow. Set this on a mirror or surround with spruce or pine branches and cones.

The Christmas Saint by James P. Kelly

CHRISTMAS eve. Streets white with swirling snow flakes.

Marionetta, behind the counters of the five-and-ten, peered into one of the little ten-cent mirrors it was her business to sell.

Marionetta was crying because there was no Santa Claus. More than anything she hated to go back to the tiny basement flat that she and mother and Jim called home, and tell Jim the truth.

Jim, or Jimmy, as Marionetta always called him, was crippled. Marionetta insisted that he was too little yet to know about Santa Claus.

That very morning she had started out to work, her precious savings tucked away in her purse, her heart all but singing out loud.

Then, when she got off the car, someone in the motley crowd bumped her elbow and her purse was knocked from her hand.

Jimmy shouted with delight.

It, but another dived at the same time and when she straightened up a small, flying figure was crossing the street.

Her hand on the floor of the basement flat, at the dirty tenement house where she lived, she noticed a big automobile drawing up at the curb.

"Hello, Sis," Jimmy looked up brightly. "Tonight's the night!"

"I lost my purse," she said tearfully. "Some kid snatched it this morning. It looked just like that McCarty kid that comes here to play with Jimmy so much."

"Don't cry, honey," her mother said. "We'll make out somehow."

There was a knock. Mrs. Clancy went to the door and opened it. There stood the lady of the big automobile, her arms piled high with packages.

"Yes, ma'am," Mrs. Clancy stepped back. "Won't you come in?"

"I'm not Santa Claus," said the boy snatching a package that someone dropped, and when he ran away he had his hand full of things.

Under cover of the excitement Marionetta drew near the pretty lady and whispered:

"Tell me how you knew about Jimmy?"

"Why, my dear, it's such a strange story! This morning I saw a little boy snatch a package that someone dropped, and when he ran away he had his hand full of things."

"I'm not Santa Claus," said the boy snatching a package that someone dropped, and when he ran away he had his hand full of things."

"Why," cried Marionetta, "did you ever hear anything like a fairy tale? That was wonderful and I really was very much surprised when you told me."

"I'm not Santa Claus," said the boy snatching a package that someone dropped, and when he ran away he had his hand full of things."

FIRST AID TO THE AILING HOUSE by Roger B. Whitman

Settlement of New House ANY newly built house can be expected to show cracks in plaster walls and elsewhere through the effects of settlement.

Settlement of the foundations are forced deeper into the earth by the weight of the house, and also by the shrinking of timbering as it dries out.

Settlement of the foundations can be prevented by adjusting the size and thickness of the footings to the character of the ground; wide footings for ground that is soft or that has been filled, and narrower if the ground is firm and solid.

HOUSEHOLD TIPS

A drop of perfume on an electric light bulb will scent the whole room.

Remove the little black line in shrimps before using them. The line is the intestinal tract.

To toast nuts, sprinkle them in thin layer in shallow pan. Heat slowly and cook until nuts are light brown in color, stir frequently with fork.

Avoid over-cooking vegetables. The one great fault in cooking them is over-cooking.

Casserole dishes made of meat, vegetables or fish can be cooked in the morning and reheated just before they are to be served.

Dry atmosphere and high temperature are the two biggest difficulties in growing house plants. Unless you have a good heating system, which gives you air-conditioning, it's necessary to put evaporating pans on the radiators to increase the humidity in the house, so that plants will do their best.

Potatoes bake more quickly if placed on the broiler instead of the floor of the gas oven, and the flavor will be much improved by quick baking.

Stop worrying about what to send that man you know in the service. He's answered that Christmas gift problem for you in any number of surveys made in camp and on shipboard.

It's Up to You Whether Your Cape Will Be Long or Short

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

EVENING wraps are so refreshingly "different" looking this season they thrill one with their newness of theme and technique. The fact that many of the smartest evening wraps are now made of handsome wool weaves is a departure from the beaten path that is attended with excitingly new fashion interest.

Add to these richly colorful wools a sumptuous embellishment of glittering embroidery or applique, as designers delight in doing this winter, and the after-five fashion parade becomes a pageantry of resplendent beauty.

In this new movement of embroidered evening wraps, capes either long or short are the big sensation. Made of bright wool or of velvet they are given an air of newness with richly embroidered yokes that extend down over the shoulders and sometimes down each side of the front closing.

Regular looking, indeed, are the full length velvet capes that fashion-minded women are wearing this season. A striking version of this type is shown to the right in the illustration. This model holds a particular note of interest in that it was displayed at a fashion show staged at Copacabana Palace, Rio Janeiro, recently under the auspices of the British Fashion Tour. Over a hundred beautiful costumes, designed by couturiers who fled from Paris to London, were shown. For this striking evening ensemble Norman Hartnell, the designer, uses rose-colored moire for the lovely gown, with black velvet for the stunning floor-length cape. Rich colored jewels embroider the cape and the low décolletage. A draped velvet bow-tie and long black gloves make it correct for all formal wear. Capes of this type are to be seen in increasing numbers as the midwinter season advances.

It is well worth keeping in touch with this new cape movement for it is rapidly developing into a widespread vogue. In the young set as well as among the more mature, capes made of bright wool mark "hot word" chic with utmost emphasis. Hip-length capes are as fashionable as the full-length types. The colors of the wools that make them are gorgeous and daring, such as, for instance, the new and lovely Verise, the deep plum tones, the fire reds and the Kelly greens. Black with gold is also a favorite and the younger generation is reveling in white wool capes that are gaily embroidered in peasant colored yarns.

Typical of the long wool evening coats worn this season is the dramatic full-length black wool coat pictured to the left in the group. On the yoke and all the way down the front opening there is an applique of gold cloth encrusted with jewels.

Centered in the picture is a coat that is marvelous for holiday parties. Persian influence is reflected throughout the styling of this coat, which is of rich black wool, the zipper closing assuring a smooth unbroken line and extra warmth. An extravagant gold bouillon and bright bead embroidery stresses Persian color and technique.

So outstanding is embroidery in the scheme of things this season that even fur capes are showing embroidery done in yoke fashion. Mink with sparkling brown sequins is very effective, while jet on black broadtail or Persian lamb is in perfect tune with the new mode which calls for black on black.

Slender Princess Coat

Has Capes and Bows

An interesting new coat silhouette looms on the current style horizon. It is a slenderizing cloth coat cut along princess lines, and it has a pert little capelet to give it youth. The capelet itself makes big fashion news, but it adds to its newness by taking on novel trimming such as hand-tied yarn fringe to finish it off, or a pleating of wide velvet ribbon, or maybe a flat velvet bordering. As to fur edgings and bandings, these jaunty little capes revel in them. An interesting feature is in promise for the cape-coat.

New Lingerie Neckwear

For Plain Black Dress

The lingerie neckwear vogue is taking a new lease on life. Very attractive are the simple black frocks with which are worn exquisite large pleated sheer white or lace-trimmed collars. It adds allure to black and white to fasten the dress with sparkling rhinestone buttons.

Fleece Coats

Fleece is not only a major factor in medium price sports coats, but there is a definite trend toward luxury fleece coats with fur collars. Dyed in high, vivid shades of gold, green or fuchsia, the new fleeces are ideal to wear with gay print frocks at winter resorts. There will also be a great deal of white fleece seen, along with those tinted in off-white shades.

Twinkle Toes

Your evening slippers must glitter with rhinestone embroidery or with sparkling beadwork. Bows on your evening pumps are set with rhinestones or scintillating jet beads. Newest of all are the nail-head-studded shoes that are worn for less formal occasions.

Zebra Stripes

It is considered the smart thing this season to give chic accent to one's costume with accessories that are daring and unusual. Zebra striped black and white velvet is used for this striking furban and glove ensemble. It is an excellent duo to wear with a basic black dress for afternoon. This year many milliners are making companion bags and gloves to match hats, so keep this in mind when buying new accessories. Or should you be of the self-reliant type and can "make your own," you can find patterns for gloves, hats and bags in most stores where pattern service is available. These accessories fit your purse and your wardrobe.

Making Vinegar at Home

Since vinegar is indispensable both in pickling, and in ordinary cooking, and since it is, also, rather an expensive item in the food or preserving budget, a thrifty housewife will find it advantageous to make the needed supply at home.

Vinegar, as its name indicates, was first made from wine. In England it was first made from malt liquors—a thrifty device for using ale or beer which had soured, and malt vinegar is still preferred by British cooks. However, anything may be used in the manufacture of vinegar, provided it contains enough sugar and is not in any way objectionable. In the United States, apple juice is probably most widely preferred for the making of vinegar, but grapes, peaches, oranges, pineapples, and some berries are quite satisfactory.

Below is given a method for making peach vinegar—a method which, except for slight variations, may be used with other fruits.

1. Select fully ripe fruit—or over-ripe, provided any decayed portions are carefully cut away. Juicy peaches are best, but practically any kind can be used.

2. Crush, with a potato-masher, enough peaches—about one bushel—so that the resultant mash will fill a four-gallon jar two-thirds full. The peaches should be cut in two before crushing but it is not necessary to remove the pits.

3. Add to the jar of peach mash, a cake of compressed yeast which has been mixed with a small portion of the juice. Cover the jar with a double layer of cheesecloth, and cover to exclude light. Stir daily to break up surface crusts, to prevent molding, and to secure a complete fermentation. This process should require from four to six days.

4. When this alcoholic fermentation is complete, strain the mash through a cheesecloth to separate the juice from the pulp.

5. Now, in order to secure the necessary acetic fermentation, return the juice to the jar and add vinegar in the proportion of one part to four parts of the juice and cover the jar as before. Very soon a thin coating of film, called "mother of vinegar" will appear. This must not be disturbed. As soon as tests indicate that the required acidity has been secured, filter the vinegar and store in bottles.

VINEGAR FROM APPLES

If it is desired to use partly rotted apples, or windfalls for vinegar, rotten spots must be cut out and the apples washed. Dirty apples, also, should be washed, and no dirt, leaves, twigs, or grass should be allowed to go into the apple press. Apples should be crushed rather than ground, the pressing should be done slowly and as much juice as possible extracted. Usually, from two to three gallons of juice will be obtained from a bushel of apples.

The juice should stand for a day or two, for sedimentation, in covered receptacles and then be drawn off into other containers, filling them not more than two-thirds full. Macerate compressed yeast in a quart of the juice, using one cake for each five gallons of juice, and add to the juice in the containers. After about a week, the alcoholic fermentation having taken place, acetic fermentation may be accomplished by the addition of vinegar to the juice, as explained in the directions for making peach vinegar. When the required acidity is secured, draw the vinegar off carefully, bottle and store.

CAUSES OF FAILURE

The chief causes of failure are, (1) use of material too low in sugar content, (2) failure to secure alcoholic fermentation and acetic fermentation, in the order given, and, (3) failure to check acetic fermentation at the proper point.

IMPORTANCE OF AGING

When vinegar is first made it has a raw, biting taste. Mellowness of taste may be secured only by proper aging. Consequently, vinegar should be stored for six months or a year before being used, if it is to attain its highest quality.

VINEGAR REGULATIONS

Although vinegar for home use may be made at home or on the farm without a permit, it must be noted that there are federal and state regulations governing the manufacture and distribution of vinegar which is to go on the market. Anyone planning to make and sell vinegar must acquaint himself with such regulations.

Further information in this field may be secured by sending five cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., and asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 1424.

MAKING A HOT-BED

Dig a shallow pit, 8 to 18 inches deep, and pack it full of fermenting stable manure which, before being placed in the pit, has been turned over once or twice to make sure of even heating. When the manure has been put into the pit and thoroughly tramped down, cover it with three or four inches of fine garden soil. A framework of boards, about 24 inches high at the back and 12 inches at the front, slanting toward the front, is fixed over the pit to hold the hot-bed wash.

'Closed Shop'

A "closed shop" is a "shop" or business in which only union labor can be employed, says Pathfinder. In such a shop the employer is required to dismiss employees who fail to remain members in good standing in their union.

A "union shop" differs from a "closed shop" in that the employer may hire non-union workers with the provision that they will become union members within a specified period, generally, 15, 30 or 60 days from the date of employment. They too must remain members in good standing in the union; otherwise the employer is compelled to dismiss them.

Fool Judgment

The foolish and vulgar are always accustomed to value equality the good and the bad.—Junius.

Jacket emphasizing width at the shoulders and fitting smoothly over the hips helps the average figure achieve youthful slenderness—the skirt is comfortable to wear for walking, standing and sitting, the dickey provides a note of freshness for this costume so that it is always attractive to wear. Make it now for yourself in gabardine, twills, plaids, novelty rayons or serge.

Water of War Between U. S. and Japan

Here in graphic detail is shown the location of strategic points in the war between Japan and the United States. Distances between important points now in the headlines are also shown. Of particular interest are the following points: the Russian port of Vladivostok and its nearness to Japan, which would make it an ideal air base in a bombing raid against the enemy; the Hawaiian islands where at Pearl Harbor the Japanese opened their war on the United States with a devastating aerial attack; the most vulnerable sector of the continental United States to Japan attack—the Pacific coast area.

With the first news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor came the unofficial report of the sinking of the U. S. battleship West Virginia, which is shown above. THE STORY SO FAR Sidney Lander, Alaska mining engineer, is engaged to Barbara Trumbull, whose father is contesting the mining claim of Carol Coburn, teacher at Matanuska.

Lander finds Salaria. She had injured her leg while hunting. Barbara misinterprets the rescue and flings away her engagement rings.

friend of the Coburns, did the shooting. He thought it was a Trumbull plane. Trumbull had planted Eric, the Red, at the scene, for dirty work. Sock-Eye informs them warningly.

CHAPTER XXIII

When I awakened, the next morning, I was puzzled by the scent of balsam close about me. I was equally puzzled by the scolding of two Canada jays that hopped about a dwindled campfire beside which stood a skillet and a coffeepot.

It wasn't until I studied and recognized the second blanket that covered me against the morning chill that I was able to orient myself. And then I remembered. That tarpaulin lean-to belonged to Sock-Eye.

Then a second sound intruded on the morning quietness. It was a faint and far-off drone that grew stronger as it rose and fell with the vagaries of the breeze. It became a throb of power, a purposeful and electrifying throb that promptly took me out from beneath my blankets.

The solitude, of a sudden, seemed less oppressive. I no longer worried as to the whereabouts of my two camp mates. For there above me, defying time and space, was an engined shuttle that could weave mountains and rivers together and carry us out of the wilderness.

But the plane went on, without sign or signal. And, for a moment, my heart sank. Then I gave a little cry of relief. For I saw how the tilted wings were dropping lower, banking and heading back into the breeze over the irregular silver expanse of Cranberry Lake.

And even before its pontoons heeled down on that surface of ruffled silver I remembered that Slim could come to a landing only on water. And Cranberry Lake was the water that lay nearest the Chaklatana claim and the Big Squaw.

My first impulse, at that happy discovery, was to find Sidney and shout the good news to him. He and Sock-Eye, I assumed, were somewhere down along the claim limits, probably checking up on measurements and monuments.

My searching gaze ebated the valley bottom, and then the opposing broken ground, through which the Big Squaw twined. But I saw nothing.

I saw nothing until some obscure sixth sense prompted me to turn and study the rock ridge along which I had edged my way out to the cliff front. Slowly, over the dark curve of that ridge I saw a hand appear, and groping fingers feel for a hold there. Then another hand showed itself, followed by a body that quietly wormed its way up over the ridge crown.

I thought, at first, it was Sock-Eye. But in that, I soon knew, I was mistaken. For there was something so malignant and reptilelike in that crawling advance I felt it must be the movement of an enemy, even before I caught sight of the short-barreled rifle trailing beside the flattened body.

At my instinctive cry of alarm that flattened figure abruptly lost its stealthiness. It dropped over the ridge wall, caught up the rifle and stood foursquare in front of me, with a low laugh of derision.

I knew then it was Ericson. And my blood chilled as I fell back step by step as he advanced. He laughed again when he saw me come to the cliff edge, where I could go no farther.

He looked gaunt and harried and a little mad. But what troubled me most was a snakelike air of fortitude about him, the careless persistent knowledge of some venomous power in reserve.

said, ashamed of the quaver in my voice. Still again Ericson laughed. Solitude, I felt, had played tricks with his mind.

"I'm going to get what's coming to me," he proclaimed, after a quick but pointed survey of the valley below us. "And you're it."

"I've done nothing to you," I cried, trying to keep my hands from shaking.

"Oh, yes, you have," was his hate-bittered answer. "And more than once. But I told you I wouldn't always be the underdog. And this deal I'm not."

His movement was quietly deliberate as he pumped his rifle.

"You're not going to kill me?" I gasped.

"That'd be too easy," he announced. "But it's wise, my dear, to be ready for the unexpected. Come here."

"But this isn't human," I cried. "It can't do you any good. It can't get you anywhere."

He cut those cries of protest short. "Come here," he commanded, with a new and deadlier sort of intentness.

I could feel my brain telling my feet to obey, to take the steps demanded before that menacing small "O" at the end of a rifle barrel could spit death in my face. But my feet refused to move.

"Come here," repeated my enemy, with a note of wildness in his voice.

"Wait!" I called out, foolishly. I even more foolishly fell back a step or two, in an instinctive retreat of fear. And that, my brain told me, was a mistake. For I could see the barrel end steady and the hate-twisted face press closer to the balanced gunstock.

I knew what was coming; and I cried out, without willing that cry, as my body forcibly stiffened to receive its shock.

But through that call of helplessness came a sharper sound, a sharp bark that produced an incredibly abrupt change in the poised figure confronting me. I saw the rifle fall, I saw Ericson throw up his hands and suddenly twist about in a ludicrously frantic half-circle.

His hands were still above his head as his legs crumpled under him. And for one uncertain second he balanced on the cliff edge, like a tight-rope-walker fighting for equilibrium on some fragile footway.

I was conscious of Sock-Eye standing at my side, leaning almost mechanically on his long-barreled rifle. "He's dead," I gasped, staring at the churning water-course that had swallowed up that receding tangle of limbs.

"I had 't git him," announced Sock-Eye, "or he'd a-got you."

"But you'd no right to shoot a man," I cried, still shaking from shock, scarcely knowing what I was saying.

Sock-Eye reached out and quietly pulled me back from the cliff edge. "There's times, girlie, when a hombre's got 't make his own laws out here in the hills. And this was one o' them times, I'm thinking."

"But you killed him," I repeated, leaning on the shaggy old shoulder beside me.

Sock-Eye's laugh was low and mirthless but altogether untroubled. "That ain't botherin' me none," he said. "Any jury north o' Fifty-Six'd say that snake killed hisself."

My earlier sense of homelessness and helplessness swept back on me. I knew a craving for security where no security was to be found.

"Where's Sidney?" I cried out in that tightening clutch of desolation. "I want Sidney."

"I'm here," called Sidney's voice, close behind me. He was out of breath from his hurried climb up the hillside. But there was steadiness in the arms which he clasped about my swaying body.

I could feel the throb of his heart and the subsiding panting of his lungs as he held me close to him. And those quieting hammer throbs of strength slowly beat the terror of homelessness out of my own-hammering heart.

"Don't leave me," I said as my arms tightened about him.

"We'll always be together, after this," he said. His arms closed about me again and I shut my eyes as I felt his lips on my lips.

It was Sock-Eye's voice that brought time and the world back to me again.

"I reckon it's a pot o' coffee you two cheechikos need 't steady you down a bit," he observed. "And while I'm wrastlin' that, jus' kind o' remember there's a bush-hawk's still waitin' for you over 't Cranberry Lake."

It took Sidney a little time to come back to earth. But he still clung to my hand.

"And what'll you do?" he questioned the old-timer. "Head back to Matanuska?"

"Back 't that mess o' misfit?" was Sock-Eye's answer. "Not on your life. I've got me two burros outpunched over in the next valley bottom and I'm a-goin' 't mosey out 't the open hills where I belong."

"But you can't do that, Sock-Eye," Sidney objected. "You're going to be needed before this is cleared up."

Sock-Eye reached for his chewing plug. "Sib's plumb cleared up 't ready," he maintained. "And since you two dunderheads've finally made sure where your pay dirt lies and discovered how you was kind o' made for each other, from the first crack out'n the box, I don't see no call for me lingerin' around this neck o' the woods. No, sir. I'm goin' 't tote me and my stuff back into them hills where a man kin work a tommy-rocker in peace."

I felt he was too old and spent for that sort of lone-fire adventuring through the valley bottoms of the North. But there was something still gallant and intrepid about the shaggy figure as he stepped over to the taller man and placed a hand on the shoulder that stood almost as high as his own head.

"You've got a straight-shooter in this gal of ol' Klondike Coburn's," he solemnly asserted. "She's a danged sight fierer'n you deserve. And if you don't treat her right, down the years that's left 't you, I'll sure amble out'n these hills and fill your carcass so full o' lead they'll be usin' you for a plumb bob."

[THE END]

CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Joan Stedman

"WE'RE tired of the camp and we're going to move on. See?"

Orrek Gordon lifted his head. "Going to walk out on me and quit? Your wages are good here."

The foreman of the lumber gang sneered. "Say, money ain't everything. We want to get back to town and we're going." He slouched back to the tent and joined the crowd of surly men around the great campfire.

From the log bungalow beyond the camp twinkled many lights. Orrek stared at the Christmas candles. Marcia had placed them there, saying they brought peace to the household. And now, with his men walking out on him, Marcia would be lost to him.

A skimming sound on the firm snow aroused him and Marcia, a gay little figure in her white furs, caught at his arm and came to a standstill on her skirts. "Why stay out here when I want you, Orrek? We're making up a bridge table.

"Why stay out here when I want you?"

A bridge table when his future career was toppling down!

"Orrek, what's wrong with the men?" she asked. "My maid told me there had been a row there."

Orrek's eyes blazed as he tucked the small hand under his arm. How he loved her! In a few brief sentences he told her of the discontent among his men. "It's the loneliness that gets them," he finished; "the lack of amusement."

"If they walk out you cannot keep your contract. That will queer you with the owners." She turned and left him in silence.

Back at the bungalow Marcia tumbled the contents of her clothes closet while talking rapidly to her maid, Ninette. "Isn't it lucky that I taught you those chords, Ninette?"

The camp men, grumbling around the fire, fell into a sudden silence as the gay plink-a-plunk of a banjo sounded in the clearing.

Gebert, curly gang leader, jerked out his pipe. "Listen, boyol!"

Down the hill Marcia came gaily, her fingers bringing jolly notes from the strings. The frosty air echoed and re-echoed as Ninette joined in.

"I know that," declared Gebert. "Carried along by memories, the men joined in, forgetting the loneliness of the Christmas eve, forgetting their fancied troubles."

Marcia had come to the very edge of the great fire and stood there picking at the strings. Above her lowered the man she loved, just beyond her stood the men in a semicircle, their unshaven faces lighted by a mutual love of music.

"How many of you play small instruments?" she asked, softly.

The answers brought a quick smile to her lips. "I thought there would be many of you to help me out," she cried.

"I want to have a string-band," hurried on Marcia, "and I need volunteers. A violin, maybe two or three. A guitar—"

"I play alto fute," interrupted Jacques.

"At home I have an accordion," came a wistful voice, "but—"

"Fine," interrupted Marcia. "I have, tonight, made out an order that should have been mailed sooner. It is my Christmas gift to our men. The order is for musical instruments. I wish each man would write down his instrument and give it to me. With luck we should have the orders filled in three days and we'll practice hard so that New Year's day may find us ready. How about it?"

There was an instant response as hardened palms came together. Just beyond the pines a wolf howled, but Marcia was looking up into her lover's eyes.

Wrapping Small Gifts An unusual way to wrap a number of small gifts that are to be given in a good-sized Christmas box is to tuck each one in an envelope made of either plain red, holly, silver or gold paper. Wrap each gift first in plain white tissue paper, folded in envelope style, and seal the flaps of both the inner and outer envelope with contrasting seals. Patterns for the envelopes can be cut from ordinary envelopes by tearing one apart and either enlarging on it or trimming it down.
