YOUR BANK

What is Amortization?

Literally, amortization means killing off a debt by gradual means.

It is a convenient plan of taking the amount of a loan, computing the entire amount of interest which will be payable thereon during the life of the loan, and dividing the total into equal periodic payments. At first, that portion of the payment applying to interest is large in comparison with the portion applying to the principal of the loan. But each time a payment is made the principal is reduced and consequently a smaller part of the payment applies to the interest and the larger part to payment on the loan.

WHO'S NEWS THIS

NEW YORK .-- Admiral Claude C. Bloch, commander of the naval district at Hawaii, has been known as the "Jack Dempsey of the Navy" because of importance of "beating the enemy to the punch." He made a remark to that general effect-when he was urging the thorough fortification of Guam, early last year.

Things didn't work out that way, with Japan letting loose—the "punch," behind diplomatic shadow boxing, but that couldn't be charged up to the admiral. Any government adhering to the forms of international law and order is at a disadvantage in the prevailing interna-tional anarchy. But Washington can't say that the ruddy, deskthumping old admiral, 42 years out of Annapolis, didn't give it ample warning. He has long been a vigorous advocate of widely based naval preparedness in the Pacific and readiness to strike at the first gong.

He is a Kentuckian, as theroughly schooled in our high-seas workouts of the last few decades as any man in the navy, entered in all of them and repeatedly decorated. He won the specially meritorious Medal of the Spanish - American War, when, as a young ensign in the Battle of Santingo, he rescued Spanlards from Cervera's burning ships. His other medals came from the Philippine and Cuban campaigns, the Boxer rebellion and the World war, the last being the Victory medal, and with it went the Navy Cross, for running transports through the blockaded section around France and England.

He has been chief of the bureau of ordnance, a gunnery officer, commander of many ships, a budget officer, judge advocate general, engaged in training activities, and commandant of the Washington Navy yard. He became commander of the battle force, with the rank of admiral, in 1937. From 1920 to 1040, he was commander in chief of the U.S. fleet, and was assigned to command of the Hawaii district in the latter years. He's a naval officer's officer, with a high reputation for strategic and technical skill

In hundreds of laboratories men and women labor to crush him. The weapons they manufacture are vaccines, serums and toxins. New Ways With Nuts

As all housekeepers know, nuts show a decided tendency to become rancid, and this rancidity may develop not only in shelled nuts, but even in those still protected by their shells, if they have been kept for some time.

In order to prevent such spoilage, and also in order to have the nuts always ready for use at a moment's notice, it is quite practicable to sterilize them and store in vacuumpacked containers.

For such a process, select fresh, firm nut kernels, newly shelled, and free from any bits of shell. Sterilize pint or half pint jars, and allow them to dry. Then fill the jars with | yellow fever and other diseases carthe shelled nuts, and partly scal ried by insects that breed in standthem. Place the jars in a hot-water | ing water were most prevalent in bath deep enough to come up about wet seasons. They were considered two inches on the jars and boil for to be caused by high humidity, high a half hour. Then complete the atmospheric pressures and dampsealing of the jars, cool them, and ness. MAKING NUT BUTTERS

The ingredients for making a halfpound of such butter are: 1 tablespoon of bland table oil, one-half teaspoon of salt, and 2 cups of blanched and roasted nuts. Grind the nuts in the food-chopper, using the finest grinding plate; repeat at known that in the north temperate. least once, and, if necessary, twice, tightening the grinder each time until it is hard to turn. Add the oil and salt, mix thoroughly and pack in cans with lids that can be closed tightly.

Note: The nuts may be blanched and roasted for this purpose as follows: For the almonds, pour boiling water over them and simmer at boiling temperature for about three minutes. Pour off the water and the skins will slip off readily. Peanuts require no blanching. To roast the nuts, for a half pound of nuts, shelled and blanched, put a quart of fresh cooking oil into a kettle suited to deep-fat frying. Heat the fat to 300 degrees F., or until a cube of bread dropped into it will brown in about five or six minutes. Put the nut kernels into a sieve that is deep enough so they can not float out over its top and lower them into the hot fat. Leave them there until they are a light brown, which will require six or seven minutes. Remove and pat gently with absorbent paper until they are freed from fat.

NUT LOAVES

In making a nut loaf remember to have, among the vegetables commonly used in the mixture, either celery, green peppers, of carrots, in order to secure a crisp texture. For croquettes, it is necessary to have a coft mixture. To secure such consistency, use mashed potatoes, bean pulp or a cooked cereal.

Almost everyone knows that chestnuts may be used to advantage in dressings for fowls, but many cooks do not know that various other nuts may be so used. A very good stuffing for fowl, or for park chers, is triude as follows:

In 2 tablespoons of melted butter or other fat, cook, for a few minutes, 2 tablespoons of finely chapped | changes in temperature, humidity onion, I tablespoon of chopped green pepper and I cup of cut celery. Add 2 cups of cooked brown rice or wild, sician when there has been a sudden rice, 1/4 teaspoon of salt and 1/4 tea- and great rise in temperature with spoon of pepper. Stir the whole until it is well mixed and hot, then add a half cup of chopped hazelnuts and the stuffing is ready to use. This quantity is sufficient for a half dozen pork chops.

it should be noted that, whereas distinctly lower than it has been. many people suppose them to be This fall in blood pressure and the rich enough in protein to serve as a changes in the circulation and in ment substitute, this notion is er- cellular chemistry that result, is roneous. The chief food value of nuts lies in their fat content which ranges from 35 per cent for coconuts to 70 per cent for pecans. Peanuts and cashews average about 40 per cent fat and English walnuts, hickory nuts and filberts about 60 per cent. The protein centent of nuts is much less, ranging from 5 to 25 per cent; carbohydrate value is less than 25 per cent except in the chestnut which is very starchy.

But nuts have other food values. not so well known. Most of them are rich in phosphorus; the almond, pecan, hickory nut, walnut and hazelnut are good sources of iron; the pecan is a good source of vitamin A, said to be so valuable for those afflicted with night blindness; peanuts, pecans, chestnuts, almonds, English walnuts, filberts and Brazil nuts all yield's considerable quantity of vitamin B.

infections, bronchitis and pneumonias are most prevalent from November through April but the probable connection between the high incidence and the lack of ultra violet rays from the sun during these months is not appreciated.

It has long been known that a stimulating climate, one in which weather and especially temperature varies greatly causes civilization to reach the highest levels. However, extreme changes have a detrimental effect, especially on the sick who may even be benefited by constant temperature and weather conditions. For example, the individual who lies a high-blood pressure and hardening of the arteries benefits from a constant fairly warm elimate and reacts badly to the marked and atmospheric pressure. Such an individual will often consult his phyan equally abrupt rise in humidity and barometric pressure and state that he feels much worse and is sure that his blood pressure is much higher than usual. But under such circumstances, instead of being Concerning the food value of nuts, higher, the blood pressure is often probably the reason that so many, under such atmospheric conditions.

have "strokes." These rapid changes in the weather conditions also have an effect on the healthy and seem to decrease their ability to withstand infections. Everyone knows that colds are more prevalent during a winter thaw with relatively high temperatures following abruptly on an unusually cold spell. Such weather is also "pneumonia weather."

There are, then, plenty of reasons for the development of aches and pains with changes in the weather: for your feeling blue and depressed in bad weather and full of vim, vigor and vitality when the sun is shining, the weather cool, and the barometer low.

The cattle know when to leave their pasture, but a foolish man knows not the measure of his own appetite.

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fall to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of distinces, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

LYNN SAYS:

If you're in the mood for resolutions here are some pointers that will help you make this New Year a year for more delectable food, better meals, and more attractive platters:

Season food carefully to bring out its hidden possibilities. Rub roasts with garlic or onion, and salt before roasting. Melt butter for vegetables and stir it throughout before serving.

Hot foods should be served as hot as possible and cold foods as cold as possible.

Foods should be good to look at because the eye takes them in first, so arrange platters neatly and use parsley or fruit or vegetables in garnishing their respective platters.

Heavy meals call for light desserts, light meals for more filling desserts. Make use of contrast in texture, color and flavor when planning menus.

That Old Black Lace Shawl Is Right in Style This Season

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WHEN those cherished bids to yuletide parties begin to arrive, when those coveted invitations to smart afternoon affairs await acceptance, then it is that fancy turns to visions of pretty clothes that will make you look your prettiest. To these ever-recurring "what-to-'wear'' problems, lace, always o gallant flatterer, brings one of the happlest solutions fashion has to offer this winter. It is not only that convincing "feacon why" it is more widely a favorite among designers than ever. It can be made to lit modest budgets and simple occa-

A wise supplement to any wardrobe that must include a "prettypretty" informal frock that is not expensive is the model shown to the left in the illustration. You can get this very wearable oak-leaf patterned lace in a long list of delectable colors, and the dress will always be ready for any occasion. The bodice is horizontally tucked in a now treatment and is made then beaten egg yolks. Whip until smooth by a dainty slide fastener.

One sees these charming lace fantasies everywhere in the current formal fashion picture, either worn over the head as here illustrated, or thrown artfully and casually over the shoulders to serve graciously as a light evening wrop. The black velvet gown so alluringly veiled in this lovely shadowy Chantilly lace scart makes simplicity its theme. Petite black lace edging finishes off the low decolletage, while wide bands of the velvet are brought up to each shoulder top where they tie in intriguing big bowo.

Youthful party dresses of filmy Chantilly lace in lovely pastel shades are given high fashion rating this season. The bouffant dance frock centered above in the group is of flesh toned Chantilly, the mesh of which is as delicate and clusive as a silken cobweb. The correlet walstline is banded in taffeta, which also defines the pleated shoulder rufsies and appears, as trimming, on the skirt.

Scores of charming lace fantagies are being shown for cophisticated moments at opera, banquet and ball. There are tiny black lace calots with a metallic weave and sequin-sown edge. You can buy gay I gauntlet gloves made all of tace for the dashing and the debonair. Black lace mitts are shown that boast a double tier of lace reaching to the elbows. The new lace evening handkerchiefs are luxuriously fragile with lace and chiffen. And lace muffs.

Head Lines

Treat your face like a picture, and wear a hat as a frame to enhance its beauty. A hat is a line, a silhouette, and through the hat a "square" face may be made to appear oval, which is supposed to be the perfect type. Here the black felt hat shown at the top in the picture rolls up at one side and forms a soft peak at the center front to extend nature's line. Then, too, a good rule is to wear hats to bring out the beauty of your coloring. The them as one does charms for brace- felt and feather hat shown below let or necklacs. What seems to grow fairer to me as life goes by is the love and grace and tenderness of it; not its wit and cleverness and grandeur of knowledge-grand as knowledge is—but just the laughter of little children and the friendship of friends, and the cozy talk of the fireside, and the sight of flowers, and the sound of music.

Strong Defense of Far-Flung Outposts Is Important in U.S. Military Strategy

WASHINGTON.-In the first onslaught of the war, our outposts nearest to Japan were the first to be attacked. But the declaration of war on the United States by Germany and Italy automatically increased the possibilities of war in the Atlantic as well as in the Pacific. That war might take the form of attacks on the Panama canal or the West Indies. Or, the war in the Pacific might be extended to Alaska, which lies only a few hundred miles from Asia. Control of Alaska would make it possible for Japan to seriously menace our shipments of supplies to Russia and China. And it would give Japan a stronghold on the continent.

This is a war of strategy, a war in which it is of the utmost importance to keep the enemy from coming within striking distance. It is also a war of surprises. A strong fortification can often be captured or destroyed if taken sufficiently by surprise. The French built the Maginot line to protect themselves from German attack by land. But the Germans came by air instead.

Position, then, is important. But strength is essential to maintain it. Although not entirely unprotected, our outposts are nevertheless highly vulnerable. Puerto Rico has a well-equipped air base at Borinquen Field, but is short of heavy artillery and long range guns. Puerto Rico's function at the moment is that of a lookout post, and as such it serves as an advance guard for the Pana-⇒ ma canal.

Shipping Restricted.

Shipping in the Canal has been limited to the daylight hours, and air service from Balboa to Cristobal has been suspended, as the air route between those two points lies directly over the Canal. Whether the Axis will strike next in the Caribbean remains only a guess on the part of the prophets. It is not impossible. President Camacho of Mexico, while not asking for a declaration of war, has pledged his support and has warned his people that Mexico is in grave peril.

to guard the Canal and also to prevent attack from the south and east. Now that Germany and Italy have joined Japan in declaring war on the United States, the threat from Africa should be taken into consideration. The Vichy government hap already conceded the Nazia addinearest point in South America, which lies just to the south and east of Paramaribo, the capital and peaport of Dutch Guiana. Africa may seem a long way off, but it is well to remember that only a short time ago a clipper left this country on its first scheduled flight to Africa II we can fly one way there is nothing but our own vigilance to keep our enemies from flying the other Alaska Important.

To many, Alaska also acems so remote as to be hardly worthy of any deep concern. But here again, atrategy is involved. Located almost due north of the Hawalian Islands and scarcely more than a good sleeper jump by plane, about 800 miles, from the nearest point burned. in Asia, Alaska can be completely isolated from the United States.

Alaska's strategic position lends more importance than would normally be given to the recent reports of fires along the coast, particularly at Sitka. What happens Our bases in South America help along the coast in Alaska is also important to the safety of her population, come 90 per cent of which is concentrated along the coast. It is no secret that the U.S. government has been fortifying the mainland of Alaska, as well as the Aleutian islands off the coast. But what these fortifications amount to is still a tional land in Africa, and Dakar | matter of conjecture, as their conis only 1,620 miles from Natal, the struction has been kept a reasonably well-guarded secret. On the Saturday night before the

> Sunday on which the attacks on Hawaii and the Philippines began, a drill barge burned at Sitka. That, in itself, would not be significant. Fire is a common hazard where construction is under way and especially where dynamite is used. And the significance of the Sitka fires may be exaggerated by rumor. But it is at least interesting to keep in mind that this particular fire was only one of several in recent months. In one case, dynamite sticks were stored in one shed. As a precoutionary measure, the detonating caps which set them off were stored in another, and both sheds were carefully watched. Both sheds

To Japanese War Have Long History

Back of the precent war between the United States and Japan lies a series of "incidents" based on the modern technique of "undeclared war." The first of the ceries was the Mukden incident of 1931, and the others are like it in that they all represent aggression under the guise of self-defense...

Fifth Avenue. In that quiet hour before dawn. In the middle of its polished surface, like a dark isle in a glistening ribbon of river, rested a slipper. Black, satin, buckled with brilliants.

Bruce Harcourt stopped short.

He turned the bit of satin over and over in his hand. It was warm. The feel of it sent a curious glow through his veins. It must quite recently have covered a slender foot. Dropped from the now distant automobile?

He thrust the disturbing bit of foot-gear into his top-coat pocket, 'gravely regarded the glittering avenue before he entered the Club door. Twenty-four hours more of this and he would be on his way to the wilderness. Soon he would be seeing only forests, glaciers, fields of snow, rails, steam-shovels and the paraphernalia of engineering.

He was not sorry to go back. His college classmates who had given the dinner for him tonight wouldn't believe it, though. What was she like? Dark? Fair? Hard? Tender?

Morning and his last day in New York. He stretched his long, lean body. His last day in New York and a full one. Before he left on the midnight train he had to keep innumerable business appointments, confirm orders for materials, and hire a secretary. Why couldn't Tubby Grant have found one for himself on the coast?

Returned from his shower he regarded the slipper on the dresser. Would the owner advertise? He'd take a look at the evening paper. The, following eight hours proved more crowded and the search for a secretary more futile than he had imagined. The mere mention of the word Alaska cet the prospects he interviewed into shivering refusal. "Tubby'll have to get one for himcelf on the coost," he concluded on he opened the door of his room at the Club. He shook out the evening paper, located the Lost and Found column and ran his finger down the list. "Here it is!" He read the advertisement through twice.

LOST. Monday evening on Fifth Avenue, black satin slipper with rhinestone buckle. Reword, if returned at once to J. Trent. 0001 Modison Avenue.

J. Trent. J. Trent. He heard that combination before. He turned the name over and over in his mind. Click! It alipped into place. Janice Trent! Billy Trent's sister "Jon." He remembered her as a leggy child of twelve when he had spent his last college vacation before the war ut the Trents country place. She had exasperated her brother and minimself by tagging after them on fishing expeditions. Darn shame that he and Billy, who had meant so much to one another, had drifted apart. He had gone to Trent's office at once upon his arrival in New York, only to learn that he was out ci town.

He stared unseeingly at the advertisement. Last night at the din-Her when he had regretted Billy's absence, Silsbee, the class gossip, had confided:

"Trent's a little gob of gloom these days. Can't blame him: His father played the market, lost practically everything he had and passed out. His sister Janice is to be married in a week. Marrying a multi who's got a way with the ladies. The two are at a prenuptial blow-cut in this very hotel now. Confidentially, Billy heard that Paxton—that's the prospective bridegroom's namehad been making whoopee in an adjacent city and he has gone to investigate. Gosh, how do these sheiks get dway with it!"

An hour later, in answer to his ring, a trim maid admitted him to the Madison Avenue house, a slice of old-time aristocracy sandwiched between new-time shops. He gave his errand, not his name. As he waited in the cheerless reception room, where pictures leaned dejectedly against the walls, where chairs were shrouded in ghostly covers, and furniture was crated, he heard the murmur of voices in a room beyond, the imperative ring of a telephone. Someone answered. Harcourt | since he was last in New York, looked at his watch impatiently. Would J. Trent keep him waiting while she gossiped? He couldn't help hearing the frost-tinged voice,

"No ... It was unpardonable. . I shall not see you . . . Don't come . . . I have said my last word . . . You would have thought of that before. Good-by." The receiver clicked on the hook. Could that have been a prospective bride speaking, Harcourt wondered. Her voice had given him the creeps. Of course there could be two J Trents in the City of New York, but-

"You have my slipper?" He curiously regarded the girl on the threshold. Little Janice Trent grown up. The same boyish croak waved softly close to her boyish head. The ardent curves of her lips showed vividly red against her pal-

"If this is yours."

The long, gold-tipped lashes flew up. Her eyes were the color of bronze pansies, slightly beaten by the rain of recent tears, he surmised. Incredulity, amazement, certainty followed one another in her voice.

"Why Why, you are Bruce Harcourt!"

Impulsively she extended her hands. The satin slipper dropped to the floor as he caught them.

"Then you haven't forgotten me?" "Forgotten you! How could I? Remember how I tagged you and Billy and how furious you boys were when you drove off to the Country Club? I was ready to scratch out the eyes of any girl you looked at. However, no matter how obdurate my brother remained, you always relented, and said, 'What's the difference? Let her come along, Billy!"

She was eager, radiant. Her fingers seemed to cling to his. His hold tightened.

"Where did you find the slipper?" "Winking and blinking in the middle of Fifth Avenue before dawn this

"When I-I changed my mind." He had the sense as of a door clasing between them. "It's wonderful to see you. I had been told that you were in Alaska."

He has hurt my heart and my pride, yet when he smiled and explained, I would dope my intelligence-instinct, rather-forgive him and remember his good qualities. He has them. Harcourt lighted another cigarette. "I wish that it always conveyed that impression. I've fought and died trying to get a secretary for our outfit. I'll bet I've interviewed fifty of them, short and tall, lean and fat. The mere name of the country sets an applicant's teeth to chattering."

"I should think there'd be dozens of girls crazy to go."

"Girls! What would, we do with a girl in our outfit? We go hundreds of miles into the interior. Ours is no coast cinch. I'm after a man." "Are there no women there?"

"Of course, wonderful women in the cities, cultured, chic, keenly conversant with world conditions; 9thers on remote farms, nuggets of gold, if rough ones; but not in our business. That is not quite true. There are three: Millicent Hale, wife of the chief engineer of the department to which I'm attached, and the Samp ofsters."

"Samp! What a curious name. What do they do?"

"Two years ago Mary and Martha Samp appeared at our headquarters on the coast at the mouth of an inlet, and established a Waffle Shop. "Can they cook?"

"Cook! I'll say they can. The men crowd the shop every night. They would do anything for those two women, who look as though they might have stepped out of the comics of a colored supplement. Adaman Club Greets New Year on Summit Of Lofty Pikes Peak

While most people will be celebrating New Year's in comfortably warm homes, theaters and other amusement places, a small group of men will be battling bitter cold and high snow drifts as they climb to the top of Pikes peak.

Every year at the stroke of midnight on New Year's eve members of the Adaman club set off a huge display of fireworks from the summit of Pikes peak. The mercury has fallen as low as 40 degrees below zero during the nine-mile climb, and the wind blows relentlessly atop the 14,110-foot peak.

Early in the afternoon of December 31 the hardy group will leave Colorado Springs. They will ride in automobiles as far as Manitou Springs which is located at the base of the peak. Their ride ends here, and they begin their long climb.

At first the climb is easy, but after the Half Way House is passed the climbing becomes extremely difficult. Snow drifts are more than 20 feet deep in places, and the incessant north wind whips the anow particles with great force.

"In addition to a food supply, each man carries his share of the fireworks. The trip is a gruelling test of endurance and strength. But the men really enjoy it.

U. S. Had Quiet Year During '42

No one knows what the year 1942 will bring, but '42 exactly 100 years ago was a relatively quiet one for the United States.

In that year the national debt reached the high level of more than $13,594,000. La grippe (influenza) was prevalent throughout the country. This year also saw Charles Dickens visit the United States, and the Horatlo Greenough statue of General George Washington was placed in the federal Capitol.

Other events of national importonce which occurred exactly one century ago follow:

March 31-Henry Clay of Kentucky resigns from the U.S. senate. May 2-Col. John C. Fremont commenced an exploring expedition to the Rocky mountains.

June 29-President Tyler vetoes the tariff bill. August 9-Maine boundary established by the Webster-Ashburn

Although the United States leads the world in many ways, it is about sixth rate in the eyes of Father Time. Paint on New Galvanizing A NEIGHBOR of mine recently put up_a galvanized metal one-car garage that he bought ready-made. He lost no time in painting it, and was much distressed at finding that within a few weeks the paint began to peel. Naturally enough he blamed the paint; but in this he was wrong, for new galvanized metal does not offer a bond to any paint except a kind that is made for the job. In galvanizing, the metal sheets are dipped into melted zinc, which clings to the surface, and in hardening, forms a thin coat. In addition, the galvanizing becomes coated with a fine deposit; so fine that it cannot be seen. Even so, it has the effect of closing the pores of the zinc so that paint cannot form a bond. Unless a special paint is used the first step in painting new galvanized metal should be to wash it well with cider vinegar, which has the effect of destroying the deposit. After a half-hour, the metal is well rinsed with clear water, and then after drying, any good quality house paint can be applied with good results.

Newly Lighted Fires A friend of mine complained of smoke coming from his streplace island. Here inhabitants have when his fire was first lighted, although the chimney drew freely as coon as the fire was going. The chimney is of stone, and built on the outside of his house. In cool weather the mass of masonry is cold, and co is the air in the flue, naturally enough. When a fire is started, its heat in striving to go up the flue, is required to move all of the column of cold air, and as this is a slow process, the resistance prevents the first smoke from escaping freely. Instead of going up the flue, it is forced out of the fireplace opening and into the room. The remedy is a simple one; to twist a sheet of newspaper into a roll, to light one end of it, and to thrust this up the throat between fireplace and flue. This generates enough heat to start the movement of the cold air in the flue, and the fire can then be lighted without a sign of smoking.

Sweating Water Pipes

Question: We are building an apartment bungalow. The water pipes are installed across the celling of the downstairs flat. Would sweat from the cold-water pipe? The pipes could be installed plong the outside walls and in the attic, but we have been told they would freeze. Which method would be better?

.Answer: Pipes should not be installed in an outside wall because of pipe jacketing, for this will prevent him.—Benjamin Franklin. oweating.

Spotted Walle-fron Question: How can I clean brown spots from a waffle-iron and a sandwich toooter?

Answer: Cover with a paste of baking soda moistened with water, and allow to dry. This will remove the greater part of the spotting, so that the waffle-iron and toaster are in a condition for use. Before using the waffle-iron again, however, it must be brushed with a vegetable oil and heated, which is the same treatment given to a new waffle-iron. This is necessary because the baking soda, in addition to taking out the brown spots, will also remove the grease from the surface.

Clogged Drains Question: Drains leading to my dry wells are filled with dirt. Can they be cleaned without taking them apart? Dirt got in through a hole in a leader pipe. Answer: If the hole has been filled you might be able to clean out the drains with a strong flow of water from your garden hose, although of course, the dirt from them would fill the dry wells. It would be best for you to dig up the drains, clean them out, and relay them properly.

Burning Paper

Question: I am told that to burn paper in a stove or furnace will in time clog the chimney. Is this true? Answer: Burning ordinary paper would do no harm, although tar paper or anything like it would be injurious. But paper should not be burned on a coal fire, for it is likely to cause clinkering. This is also true of burning garbage or other waste.

Damp Rouse Question: There is a damp feeling in my house. Would putting insulation in my basement ceiling keep my rugs from getting damp?

Answer: By far your best move would be to learn the reason for the dampness and to correct the way the happiness or misery in store condition. If you have a bare dirt for the person adhering to the praction in your basement, this is responsible. Cover it with concrete.

Palmyra Island

A little circle of Islands 51/2. miles long, lying about 975 miles southwest of Honolulu, Hawaii, in the Pacific, is known as Palmyra lived at various times during history, but recently the only denizens have been wildlife; including coconut crabs, which feed on the coconuts of the tall coconut trees.

The island has been elaimed by both American and British explorers, but the United States took it over again with all the territory of Hawaii in 1698. Until the island was taken over by the navy last December it was considered in the city limits of Honolulu, nearly 1.600 miles distant.

At the present time the navy has a new air station on the coral rock there.
