Carrizozo Basketball Team Defeats Capitan

The most interesting Basketball game of the season and the nearest evenly matched was in Capitan last Friday night between Capitan and Carrizozo. Both sides were determined to win and both sides had plenty of "rooters."

The first 3 minutes of the game Capitan had 7 and Carrizozo had 0. At the quarter Capitan had 7 and Carrizozo 6. At the half Carrizozo had caught up and the score was 12 to 12.

Now things really did happen. The third quarter found the score 18 to 18. At the end the score was 23 to 23.

So when the extra three minutes were up the score was 25 to 25; then at another final effort Carrizozo made two points making the score 25 to 27.

There is plenty of good natured rivalry between the two teams and both have plenty of enthusiasm.

CONSERVATION WORK IN SOUTHWEST

Albuquerque—Joint action by ranchers, farmers and state and federal agencies has brought marked progress in soil and water conservation in the southwest region, according to Hugh G. Calkins, regional head of the Soil Conservation Service, Department of Agriculture. In a report made public today, Calkins advised Dr. H. H. Bennett, Chief of the Soil Conservation Service, that more than 10,100,000 acres in a region comprising Utah, Arizona, western Colorado and all but the Great Plains counties of New Mexico have been placed under agreement for use on a conservation basis in the soil and moisture program of SCS.

Of this total, about 34%, or more than 3,000,000 acres, are non-federal lands. The Regional Conservator stated. The large percentage of federal lands under conservation and treatment and management points to the fact that a strenuous effort is being made to protect the upper watersheds, largely under public administration, which are the water-producing areas and therefore the source of many erosion problems.

Significant conservation development in the southwest in the growth of state soil conservation districts in Utah, Colorado and New Mexico. At the close of 1940 there were 23 organized districts totaling more than 24,000,000 acres of land in the region. Additional districts in eastern Colorado and New Mexico, in the plains region, bring the total to have been terraced. CCC enrollees, about 30,000,000 acres. New districts under consideration and in varying stages of organization will probably swell the soil conservation district for explained.

Tuesday's Concert

The concert sponsored by the Women's Club last Tuesday evening went over in splendid style. Mrs. Gunther Kroggel, popular local soprano was accompanied by Mrs. Ben S. Burns at the piano and assisted by Mrs. Don English—Cello; and Prof. Lou Fink, Violinist.

Prof. Fink's violin choir gave several numbers, with Miss Shirley Rea Phipps as accompanist. A large and appreciative audience attended and everyone expressed themselves as considering this to be one of the Women's Club's best efforts to please the music-loving public of Carrizozo and vicinity.

20 PERCENT OF UNIVERSITY FACULTY IN DEFENSE

Twenty percent of the faculty of the University of New Mexico are active in National Defense work, a survey made this week on the Albuquerque campus showed.

Included are Dr. John D. Clark, a member of Selective Service Board No. 1, for Bernalillo County, Coach Roy Johnson, a captain and A. T. Chavez, first lieutenant, with the New Mexico National Guard Regiment, and Dr. C. K. Barnes, associate examining physician for the selective service.

The Engineering College, headed by Dean M. E. Farris, is offering special night courses for defense, and is conducting both a beginning and an advanced flight-training group under the Civil Aeronautics Board. Other faculty members are engaged in research for the Strategic Materials Division of the U. S. Geological Survey, and for other government agencies.

Many of them serve on defense committees for such national organizations as the Association of American Colleges, the American Institute of Architects, the American College Publicity Association, and the Mathematical Association of America.

increase in the tri-state area to more than 40,000,000 acres in the near future, the conservator predicted.

Citing some of the individual soil conservation practices in effect, Calkins stated that in addition to work done by soil conservation districts, his organization has built more than 3,700 miles of range fence for proper stock distribution and range protection in the region. More than 60,000 acres of range land have been contour furrowed and range conservation practices instituted on five and one-half million acres.

Nearly 1,000 stock watering places have been built or developed and runoff spread on 609,000 acres of range land. About seven and one half million acres of range lands have been reseeded to forage grasses. Five hundred miles of stream banks have been protected by structures and by more than 800,000 plantings.

On farm lands, soil conservation treatment and irrigation systems has been completed on some 13,000 acres. More than 42,000 acres of cropland have been terraced. CCC enrollees, working, under supervision of SCS technicians, have done a significant share of all this work, the conservator explained.

From Blue Jays to Dinosaurs

Whether it's a bluejay, a dinosaur or a Paleozoic fossil, the National Museum at Washington, D. C., is glad to get it. Specimens last year numbered 368,082. These photos show you how the taxidermist goes about his job.

First the skin and coat of feathers are separated from the rest of the body. Stout cord is wrapped around neck. The artificial body and neck must be made to fit perfectly.

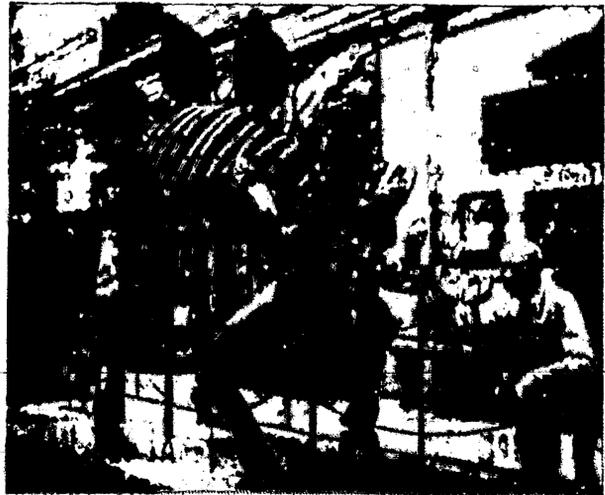

Above: The bluejay's new artificial body is inserted in the feather cloak and sewed inside. The entire operation takes two and a half hours.

Right: And you might call for applause for taxidermist Aschmeier, who makes his appearance at this time. Perhaps he can be persuaded to stuff a butterfly as an encore.

Say ah! This particular dinosaur had terrible teeth. Could have used at least a dozen fillings and some inlays.

Here is the assembly line. Repairers Moran and Boss continue their work on a screen which can be turned easily.

WINNALL... Dr. Charles W. Gilmore, curator, examines the finished dinosaur. The framework is of steel. Years of work are required to put this animal together in proper relation to all its parts.

City of London Financial 'Hub' Of British Empire

Great Commercial Center Selected as Target By Bombers.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
WASHINGTON. — The compact "downtown" financial district of London known as the City, which is the special target for German raiders' incendiary bombs and the scene of England's greatest fire in three centuries, has been acclaimed one of the most important commercial areas of its size in the world.

The irregular semicircle of ancient streets beside the Thames known as the City is only one square mile in area, but for centuries it has set the financial pace of the world, according to the National Geographic society.

The Bank of England, known as the exclusive "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street," sits in the midst of it—a private institution which since 1694 has had the exclusive right to issue England's paper money and to hold the reserve funds of all other banks in the country. A coin's throw to the east on Threadneedle street, stands the Stock exchange, which deals in the government bonds of its own and foreign countries, and in the stocks of most important corporations of the world.

London's "Wall Street," Throgmorton street becomes the "curb market" for trading in American securities during the daily interval between the closing of the London exchange and the closing five hours later of New York's stock market. Lombard street, noted for its banks, adjoins Threadneedle and Throgmorton streets to form the "Wall street" district of London.

Lloyd's of London, a short walk east of Leadenhall street, in 250 years has grown to be the world's largest insurance institution. It is an association of underwriters. Within the area also are the famous old financial house of Rothschild, and the even older Child's bank, which Dickens described in his "Tale of Two Cities" as Tellico's bank. Within vast metropolitan London, whose 8,000,000 people have spread their buildings over 632 square miles, the City is a tight little center packed into ancient boundaries like an English walnut in its shell. It reaches from the Inns of Court and Fleet street in the west to the Tower of London in the east, from London bridge north to Clerkenwell road. This is the oldest part of London. Through 20 centuries it has preserved its identity and practically its original limits, thanks to the thick wall 35 feet high built around it by Roman conquerors.

Remnants of this frequently rebuilt wall and its nine gates are responsible for the names of such streets as London Wall, Newgate, Aldgate, and Cripplegate, as well as Billingsgate Market. The wall enabled City dwellers to hold off William the Conqueror, who rudely built his Tower of London just outside the City. Since then, no sovereign has lived within the City. The king today first receives permission from the lord mayor of London before passing the spots, such as the Temple Bar, where modern streets cross the City's antique boundaries.

"City" Deserted at Night. Historic and literary landmarks, some dating from Roman times, fill the City, barely a yard apart. By night the district is usually deserted, since almost the only permanent residents are the custodians or watchmen of buildings which are treasured by the Empire for their past or present significance. By day, however, a million people daily crowd in and out of this small area on business.

The volume of news dispatched from the newspaper offices of Fleet street in normal times makes this a world center for journalism as well as finance.

This same square mile of London's inner core was the birthplace of John Milton, Sir Thomas More, Charles Lamb, and William Penn. It was the residence of Chaucer, and was visited by countless notables who were involved in the literary activities of Grub street or Paternoster row. There at 17 Gough square, Dr. Johnson wrote his epochal dictionary of the English language.

A few blocks south, within the high paneled walls of Middle Temple hall, on February 2, 1602, a troupe of actors presented a comedy by one of their company, a newcomer named Shakespeare; it was "Twelfth Night," destined for Broadway in 1941.

Famous Men Lived in Area. A physician at old St. Bartholomew's hospital, which had been founded by a king's jester, discovered the circulation of the blood—William Harvey. Meanwhile, in the Fifteenth-century Guildhall, successive lord mayors were elected and banqueted under the traditional but mysterious figures of Gog and Magog. Another landmark of the region was the Cheshire Cheese, the inn made famous by Dr. Johnson and Boswell. The Old Bailey, site of London's modern criminal courts, has associations with the old debtors' prison and the execution place where traitors were hanged or burned at the stake; the last burning took place in 1793.

John Bunyan, William Blake, and Daniel Defoe wandered through the City to a common burial place on its northern fringes. Other tombs in the district include those of John Wesley, the Methodist founding father, and George Fox, first Quaker.

Both traffic and tradition center of the City is St. Paul's cathedral, "the empire's parish church."

Names of the knotted streets of the City are almost unbelievably quaint: Stew lane, Friday street, Budge row, Knight rider street, Red Lion court, and Fetter lane.

Workers' Income Rises as Expenses Stay at 1936 Level

Increased Buying Power Reflected in High Store Sales.

MINNEAPOLIS.—Spreading payrolls from roaring defense industries have hoisted the American family's buying power to new recovery heights, a current family buying-power survey reveals. The average urban worker's household saw its monthly income soar nearly $7 in the last six months of 1940, while household expenses remained at 1936 levels, according to a current family buying-power study.

The favorable margin between average earnings and living costs is the largest in the eight-year history of the company's index, according to the survey conducted by the Northwestern National Life Insurance company. Record department store trade volume, and improved installment collection ratios, reflect this greater net buying power in the hands of the American consumer.

Living costs sank to a low for the year in October, and have stiffened a trifle since, but have been far outstripped by the rise in industrial pay checks, the report states.

Measuring the effects of payroll and living cost changes on the American pocketbook, the study shows that an average employed worker's family of four, with earnings of $120 at average 1933 payroll levels and spending the same amount for its living expenses at average 1933 retail prices, had to pay $131.11 in June, 1936, to maintain the same standard of living; meanwhile the family pay check had climbed to $133.02.

In June, 1940, the same standard of living for a family of four cost $131.08, while the family's pay check had climbed to $150.29; by the year-end, the monthly pay check had rocketed almost another $7, to $157.43, while living costs had actually fallen $1.10 from June levels, totalling $129.78 in December, 1940, or practically the same as in mid-1936, the report shows.

Thus the great increase in payrolls in recent months has meant a net increase in American spending power, the report points out, as total living costs are the same as they were a year ago, and actually less than they were last summer. Minor increases in clothing and fuel, have been offset by the decline in food prices, the study shows.

Army Mechanic Rescues

Navy Aviator in Desert RANDOLPH FIELD, TEXAS.—If it had happened in the movies, audiences would have shrieked in disbelief.

Technical Sergeant O. A. Miller, veteran air corps mechanic, of Randolph field, Texas, was driving across the Arizona desert not far from Gila Bend. Suddenly a navy training plane sputtered overhead and then glided to earth on the desert wastes, just off the highway. "Forced landing... Motor quit," explained the navy pilot to Sergeant Miller. With the aid of his auto tool kit, the army man proceeded to "trouble shoot" the ailing engine. In a couple of hours it was purring smoothly again.

A passing motorist was pressed into service to halt any stray traffic that might happen along on the road, the plane was taxied onto the highway and after a final check, Sergeant Miller turned it over to the navy man, who used the roadbed for a runway to get into the air.

A very nice letter of appreciation was received by Sergeant Miller a few days later from the navy pilot who had been assisted from what might have been a rather hazardous situation. The signature at the close of the note of thanks... Robert E. Lee, Ensign, USNR

Farm Prosperity Continues Rise

A survey of business conditions for February reveals that prosperity is steadily rising. Increased industrial employment is stimulating demand for farm products. The resultant larger farm purchasing power is raising demand for manufactured products. Meanwhile many prices are gradually moving higher.

By L. G. ELLIOTT (President, LaSalle Extension University)

Prosperity of the farmers is slowly improving. Farm income has again risen higher, and is now the best in 10 years. The outlook is for continued improvement as long as defense expenditures remain large.

Greater demand has pushed the prices of many products higher. The general average of the prices received by farmers is about 5 per cent above that of last year at this time. The trend continues to be slowly upward with only temporary interruptions.

Effects of expansion in industry and larger consumer incomes are rapidly spreading out into every community.

Consumer purchasing power has been most strikingly reflected in recent weeks by the heavy buying in retail stores, both in cities and in rural districts. Sales have declined from the high holiday peak but they are still from 18 to 15 per cent higher than a year ago.

Six-Day Week For S. P. Shops To Aid Defense

To keep ahead of the growing transportation needs of the national defense program, Southern Pacific has established a six-day week in all of its locomotive, freight and passenger, car repair shops, it was announced today by J. H. Dyer, vice president in charge of operations for the railroad.

The move, which became effective February 1, will further speed the company's program of getting additional new and modernized freight and passenger equipment quickly into service, he said.

Nearly 13,000 employees of the mechanical forces, including about 500 shopmen brought back onto the payroll, will benefit by the extra day's work, Dyer stated.

Do you have to "TUCK YOUR CAR IN" at night?

Not if it's One of these Four New Additions to the BUICK SPECIAL line that Compact Automobile Bigness into Fewer Bumper-to-Bumper Inches

HERE of late the modern automobile has been giving a pretty good imitation of a man getting up in the morning.

It has stretched and stretched—until today you almost have to have a shoehorn to get a car of any size tucked away in the family garage.

We thought something ought to be done about that.

So today in Buick dealers' showrooms you'll see four new models, additions to the 1941 Buick SPECIAL line.

They are typical Buicks on every count—steady, tireless travelers with a big 115-hp. Buick FIREBALL straight-eight under their bonnets.

But by the simple step of compacting all this ability, goodness and value on a 118-inch wheelbase, we've trimmed inches off the over-all length—and dollars off the cost.

We're passing those dollar savings on to you, which makes three reasons for going to see these honeys now: You'll go for their ability—your wife will go for trim size and easy handling—and both will stand up and cheer for the easily-reachable price.

BUICK PRICES BEGIN AT

and the Fur Traders

LEWIS and CLARK returned from their thrilling expedition to the Pacific Ocean in 1806. They brought with them stories of the intrepid fur traders they had met as they came down the Missouri River, and of the fine game regions and beaver streams in the wilderness through which they had passed.

The result was a great impetus to fur trading.

In the Spring of 1807 Manuel Lisa, who had organized the Missouri Fur Company, went to the mouth of the Big Horn River and established Fort Manuel from which he sent out trappers and hunters to secure furs. He also urged the Indians to trade their furs for beads, cloth, tobacco, guns and other similar items.

Lisa's company, as well as companies organized by John Jacob Astor, and General William Ashley, put fur trading on an organized business basis, and this was probably the first business conducted in the wilderness west of Missouri.

Paralleling the growth of this territory is the development of communications. First the smoke signals of the Indians; today a telephone service which enables anyone, anywhere, to talk with almost anyone, anywhere else, quickly, inexpensively and satisfactorily.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Feature—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—For four or five years now, Dr. J. Enrique Zanetti, professor of chemistry in Columbia university, has been pooh-poohing high explosive gas, and putting the incendiary bomb as the head devil of the hosts of destruction. Just out is his book, "The ABC of Incendiaries," in which he insists that current European bombing forays are pretty clumsy business, since the high explosives constitute a defense against the spread of fire started by the incendiaries. Remembering how they blow up buildings to check the spread of the big San Francisco fire, one finds the professor's idea plausible.

Dr. Zanetti was a lieutenant colonel of the chemical warfare service in World War No. 1, and from 1922 to 1926 was a consulting expert of the League of Nations in studies of chemical warfare. Supplementing this experience with academic and industrial studies of many years, he has become a world authority on bombs and what to do about them if anything.

His main idea is that gas dissipates and fire proliferates—therefore look out for incendiary bombs. In January, 1934, he wrote in a university publication that fire bombs would be the worst peril of the next big war. Two-pound fire bombs could be sprayed over a city and one effective hit out of 200 dropped might start 200 fires in widely separated places. He ories down alarmists about gas. He thinks it would be just as well to do away with slums, as a defense measure because of their vulnerability to fire.

Dr. Zanetti was born in Santo Domingo in 1893, came to the U.S.A. in 1900, was naturalized in 1900 and in 1907 took his doctorate from Harvard university. He joined the Columbia university faculty in 1913, and has held a full professorship since 1929.

A PLEASANT change of subject, from fire bombs, is Tom Smith, a ball of fire in his way, but one everybody likes. Seabiscuit day was recently celebrated at the Santa Anita track in California.

Seabiscuit Owes All to This Horse Psycho-Analyst

to honor the greatest money-winning horse of all time. His trainer, the silver-haired Tom Smith, probably was inconspicuous, as usual, but without him there would have been no Seabiscuit ooga of speed, dollars and romance.

"Silent Tom," as they call him around the tracks, was a rodeo rider, cowhand, prospector and blacksmith in Colorado, Wyoming, and Montana. About four years ago, Charles B. Howard, later owner of Seabiscuit, hired him to train the Howard stable, then unknown to fame. The new trainer discovered Seabiscuit on an out-of-the-way New England track and persuaded Mr. Howard to buy him for $8,000. The horse has earned $437,730.

Mr. Smith is probably the only horse psycho-analyst in the world. He was about three years old when he started being a horse-wrangler and learned things about horses that nobody else ever suspected. Naturally, he became an amateur veterinarian, but psychology helped a lot in bringing through Seabiscuit. The ang was fussy and given to brooding. Long before, Tom had learned that pleasant companionship is necessary for horse well-being. After a few experiments, he picked for Seabiscuit's stablemate an amiable old swaybacked roan named Pete. They nickered and nuzzled each other happily and Seabiscuit began to pick off purses. Of course what happened was that Seabiscuit's ego was backed up by having somebody around he knew he could beat.

"Silent Tom" is 50 years old. Among other winners he has trained for the Howard stable are Midland and the wild-eyed Kayak II, brought from the Argentine by Mr. Smith's son, Lin. He has about 300 horses to handle and study.

HERE'S a clever Russian, scientifically educated, who took a different tack than most before the revolutionary gale. He is Dr. Vladimir K. Zworykin, who came here in 1919 to make distinguished contributions to American science—notably the development of the electron microscope. With his colleagues of the Radio Corporation of America, he now unveils the super-eye, from 30 to 50 times more powerful than the ordinary microscope. It is said to reveal far horizons of microscopic research.

'All Quiet on the Western Front'

A German anti-aircraft gun and its crew are shown somewhere in occupied France. One gunner is having his hair cut by a battery mate; the others are taking it easy around the gun position. In the background may be seen an anti-tank gun in position, and, in the foreground, rifles and helmets laid out in readiness—for what?

One-Man Stretcher

This new type of stretcher, invented by an Australian, is being demonstrated on the beach at Sydney, Australia. It is designed for use in bombed buildings by one-man rescue expeditions. The stretcher's straps and footrest will hold a patient firmly, even when tilted at a sharp angle as shown here.

Knox-Knox, Who Goes There?

The navy and war department employees, from the office boy to the secretary, have to show identification badges carrying their picture before they can enter the departments. This new ruling is now in effect. Photo shows Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox showing his badge to guard on duty at entrance to navy department.

Anti-Tank 'Cocktail'

An Australian soldier examines two anti-tank bombs, taken from Italians at Bardia, Libya. The bombs are made of gasoline-filled bottles attached to hand grenades.

Something About Dogs

To many people—perhaps to the majority—a dog is just a dog. They recognize a bulldog, a chow, an alre-dale, or a collie, because these breeds are widespread and their characteristics are conspicuous. Any person who is considering the acquisition of a dog should be interested to learn of a few equally hardy and useful, though less well-known breeds.

One of the handsomest of dogs is the Samoyed (pronounced Sam-o-yed). He is a furry, well-muscled dog, with a bushy tail curving sharply over his back, and with pointed, erect ears. The breed may be either pure white, white and biscuit, or cream color, and may vary in weight from 38 to 45 pounds for the female, and from 45 to 55 pounds for the male. These dogs were bred originally by an ancient Siberian nomadic tribe, supposed to have been of Finnish origin. The dogs have proved themselves invaluable in various Arctic expeditions, since they take readily to harness. They are, moreover, fine playmates for children, being of friendly aspect and not inherently vicious.

The beagle, another little-known dog, is also of ancient origin. It is supposed that the ancient Greeks used his ancestors in the coursing of hares. If your need is a hound for rabbit hunting, the beagle is your dog. No weight specifications are set for him, but the largest may not stand over 15 inches at the shoulder. The beagle resembles the foxhound and may show any hound color. He has a short, muscular back, broad deep chest, and rugged-square-set legs. His ears are pendant; his general head character indicates gaiety and determination. He is a handsome, friendly, useful dog.

IRISH WOLFHOUND

If you have a bit of the Celt in your blood, you will be irresistibly drawn to the Irish wolfhound, a dog whose blood lines run quite as far back as do those of the Samoyeds or the beagles. Long ago, when elk, deer, wolves and wild boar abounded in the British Isles, the Celts used the wolfhound for hunting. Many of the earlier specimens were of truly monstrous size, and while their descendants are not as large as were those remote ancestors, they are, nevertheless, huge dogs. Individuals have been known to weigh more than 150 pounds, and to stand 37 inches and more at the shoulder. These are magnificent dogs: bold, strong, fearless, and loyal.

Another splendid dog, whose ancestry is lost in the mists of the long-ago, is the German shepherd dog, commonly known in America as the German police dog.

The German shepherd dogs have been bred and used in Germany for centuries and the standards for the breed are set by the Society for German Shepherd Dogs. Under those standards, practically any color is permissible from pure white to solid black, with many variations of brindles, wolf colorings, browns, and grays. However, white, or pale and washed-out colorings are not desirable. These dogs are beautiful because of their strong, lithe, muscular bodies, and are highly desirable as herders, watchdogs, and companions. They are noted for courage and loyalty, and for a high degree of intelligence. The latter trait, together with a natural capacity for trailing, has led to their development into high-class police dogs.

TOY DOGS

Among the so-called "toy dogs," without mention of which no list, however tentative, could be considered complete, the Pekingese is one of the most interesting, both because of its striking appearance and because of its ancient, oriental origin. History indicates that these little dogs were members of the royal household of imperial China, many centuries ago. The most desirable weight for the Pekingese is from 7 to 9 pounds, although under the American standard they may go as high as 14 pounds. All colors—even parti-colors—are allowable in this breed but in the parti-colored, the colors must be evenly broken. Characteristically, these tiny dogs have flat, massive heads and "an aloof, lion-like expression."

Another general favorite among the toy dogs is the Pomeranian, for whom the weight is set at seven pounds, maximum. This tiny dog is compact of body, with a fox-like head and expression, and is active, alert and intelligent.

For information concerning the dog of your choice, send five cents to the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 1491.

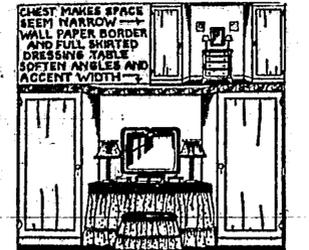

COCKROACHES

These troublesome insects are members of the grasshopper family. They love dark places, run with great speed when disturbed and the European species is a great nuisance in houses. It feeds on pastry and vegetable matter. Our native species are harmless creatures, living under boards and bark and never entering houses. Tropical species of the cockroach are very large, individuals nearly as long as a man's finger being by no means uncommon.

That Space Between The Built-In Closets

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

WHAT could be a greater luxury than two extra closets in your bedroom! That is exactly what a young friend of mine thought. But, when they were built in, she was painfully conscious of their angles and the room seemed much narrower. This sketch shows you how the feeling of width was restored and the angles were made to melt away. A wallpaper border all the way around the room helped to soften down the angles of the closets also added an exciting color note to the plain painted walls. The chest of drawers in the upper sketch was moved to another part of the room, and the long spacious dressing table was built into the space between the closets. The top of the table and stool and the frame of the mirror were enameled porcelain blue which was one of the colors in the wallpaper border. Dotted swiss skirts were fastened on the inside of the finishing boards across the front of the table and around the stool with snap fastener tape—one side tacked to the wood and the other sewn to the skirt tops.

NOTE: Directions for making three types of dressing tables are illustrated in booklet No. 1 of the series which Mrs. Spears has prepared for our readers. Details for making the fringed lamp shades illustrated today are in No. 5, which also contains a description of the series. Each booklet illustrates 32 home-making projects and may be ordered direct from Mrs. Spears by sending her your name and address with five cents for each number requested. Send order to:

Square Broom Handles

Tent poles and broom handles for the British government are to be made square in the future—not so that they can be put into round holes, but because the experts assure that this will save the country at least $9,000,000 a year. The timber controller of the ministry of supply says that round handles and poles waste about 10 per cent of wood, and require special machines for shaping. Recently all matches in Japan were shortened by 0.029 inches, effecting an economy of $240,000 worth of timber in a year.

INDIGESTION

Gas trapped in the stomach or pulled up into the lungs causes indigestion. At the end of the digestive tract, the food is broken down into its constituent parts. If the food is not properly digested, it causes indigestion. The result is a feeling of fullness, bloating, and discomfort. CREOMULSION is a powerful laxative, which helps to break down the food and allows it to pass through the system more easily.

Unite We Must
We must all hang together or assuredly we shall all hang separately.—Benjamin Franklin.

Beware Coughs from common colds That Hang On Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germs laden phlegm, and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes. Tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough or you are to have your money back.

Mary Was Looking for Another Way Out!

The housewife was showing her new maid through the upstairs rooms. Finally, they came to a staircase leading down. "Now, Mary," said the housewife, stepping on to the landing, "when you wish to pass down to the garden, go down this way." At that moment she slipped, and with a great bumping noise she was precipitated to the bottom. "Good gracious, mum!" gasped the maid, "Are ye hurt?" "No; it's nothing," replied the dishevelled mistress as she arose. "Then ye've got down it fine, mum!" declared the girl. "But if that's the way I've got to go down, the job's too strenuous for me!"

Opposite Poles

The North and South poles, not only vary in geology, temperature and plant and animal life, but also in the number of hours of daylight and darkness in every year. At the North pole, the sun is above the horizon 169 days and below it 179 days, thus making the "day" seven days longer than the "night." At the South pole, the opposite exists, "night" being seven days longer than "day."

AROUND THE HOUSE

When plates or dishes are burned after baking they can be easily cleaned by rubbing them with a cloth dipped in salt.

To lime your house plants, save all egg shells. Keep the shells in a jar of cold water and use the water on the plants.

If curtains are dry before being starched they will keep clean longer.

Hot pans should never be set on porcelain surfaces as the heat cracks the porcelain.

Turn the handles of pots and pans on the stove out of reach of small children.

Milk scorches easily, so heat it in a double boiler or warm it over low heat in a pan set on an asbestos mat. To help keep the milk from sticking to the sides, rinse the pan in cold water before heating.

Never use a sharp instrument to loosen the ice trays in your refrigerator; you might puncture the coils. Take a dull instrument and use it as a wedge under the rim. When you replace the trays, wipe them with a cloth. It's the freezing of the excess water that makes trays stick.

When preparing bread crumbs for scalloped dishes, croquettes, etc., tie a cloth or paper bag over the mouth of the meat grinder and put the bread in. The crumbs will then be deposited in the bag instead of being scattered on the floor.

"I don't ask much from you. Mighty little, I'm not asking now—I'm telling you. You'd better start at seven. Andrew will have the car ready."

Marian sighed. "I'm not trying to be tiresome, Mother. I want to help. If only you would see—"

"I've seen enough and heard enough. I'm tired. I've worked fourteen hours today and had trouble enough. Tomorrow you'll drive the car over to Hazel Fork—and I want to hear no more about it."

Marian set her chin. "Did it ever occur to you, Mother, that I might have something to say about the management of the mill? I'm a stockholder. I own as much stock as you. My father left it to me."

"I suppose," drawled Virgie, scornfully, "you'd like to have all the pulp-dyed lavender!"

"There's this about it, Mother. If Tom voted with me—you wouldn't be keeping Branford Wills on to ruin our mill!"

Virgie stood tall. Her face had turned stony and white as death.

"And I suppose if I don't run things to suit you, you'll sell the mill to Wallace Withers—you and Tom?"

"I really think I have some rights, Mother."

"You have. It will be a relief to me, too, if you'll exercise them. You might vote to discharge me and hire somebody else to get out pulp. That would be a help. I'm worn to the bone and I could use some rest. You could also figure out where the pay-rolls are coming from and how that car of chemicals, with bill of lading attached, is going to be unloaded and paid for. I'd like a day in bed—and I could go to the movies. I've only seen a couple of shows since David died. Maybe I'll join the Little Theatre. Could they use a fat old woman with a more or less bass voice and broken-down arches?"

"Mother—you know I never meant—"

"No—you didn't mean that kind of authority. None of you ever do—the young, brash things who want to run the world! You want to give orders in an arrogant tone—but when it comes to getting out in the morning or up on a hot slope in the middle of May, when there's a hundred acres of fire rolling down into your timber—no, you never mean things like that. You haven't linked up yet the old fundamental that along with authority goes a devilish lot of bone-grinding work. But maybe you're going to discard that, with all the rest of the old-fashioned fundamentals?"

Marian looked small and wan.

"I'm sorry, Mother. I'll go tomorrow. I'll be ready at seven. But may I go to the Little Theatre meeting now?"

"Baby—" Virgie faltered. She was imperious no more. She was a tired woman, with whitening temples. "If I have to fight you, too—"

Marian gave a little, strangled sob. "I'm horrible," she choked, "to talk like that to you—"

They clasped each other tight. And over her child's shoulder Virgie looked up at the pictured face of David Morgan, and her deep courage returned.

CHAPTER XV

The play was already being read when Stanley Daniels walked into the meeting of the Little Theatre group.

Lucy had begun it in her frail, sweet voice, but very promptly Marian Morgan had objected.

"Let Sally read, Lucy. We can't hear half that you say."

Lucy colored and stammered, smiling her nervous smile, handing over the book.

"I wouldn't be any good on the stage, would I?" She tried to laugh. "I try to make my voice bigger, but it just won't be. Again that scene again, Mrs. Gallup."

Sally read dramatically, "Muriel—Muriel's the wife, isn't she? No, she's the polo player's wife. Where was I? Oh, yes—Muriel: And what if I told you that I hated you, Boyd?"

"Where was I? Boyd lights a cigarette—who'll be Boyd?"

"Maybe Bill would."

"He wouldn't. If we talked him into it, just about the time the show was ready to go on, a wire would blow down or a turbine go wrong or something. Oh, here's Stanley. Hello, Stanley—listen to this part and see if you'd like to do it."

"But—there are several other plays," Lucy piped feebly. "They sent six on approval. You might like some of the others better."

"Go on, Sally," Marian prodded. "We'll never get through at this rate."

and knew it, and she did not greatly care so long as Daniels was near. She wondered if he would walk home with her, and nursed a jerk of panic for fear he wouldn't. They had so much to talk over—so much had happened at the mill—and here the small cold uncertainty that had tormented Lucy for days intruded again.

Had Daniels been a little odd at the mill—a trifle on the defensive? She hated harboring this uneasiness, but it would not down.

"I'm an awful fool!" Lucy scorned herself.

She made herself stop thinking about it, made herself stop looking at the backs of his hands; lean and slender and stained with chemicals. His cuffs were very clean. He was always clean, close-shaven, jaunty. She tried to listen to the play, but it was stupid and too sophisticated for a village audience, she decided.

Sally read gaily on. "Oh, listen—I love this! Muriel says, 'Why do we seem always to fall in love with the wrong people? Why does love go blundering through the world, Greg? Nothing else blunders—not death nor trouble—they go straight to the mark—but love gets itself lost—finds itself in strange places where it was never meant to be.' I think that's a gorgeous line. Why don't we just decide on this play and send the others back?"

"It's so talky," Marian argued. "Muriel is a good part but that Pam—she's washy, I think. Nobody could make Pam appealing."

"You could. Especially in this scene with Greg."

"That weepy thing? You know I can't weep. And Pam is always surrendering. Maybe English women surrender so gracefully—but I couldn't. And we haven't anyone to play Greg."

"Why not ask that new man? He's grand looking."

"He wouldn't be interested," Marian said, aloofly.

"You mean," Lucy was thinking, "you wouldn't be interested in having him?"

The meeting ended at nine, after some squabbling, with no decision arrived at.

"I must go," Sally said. "Bill's playing pool—he always loses and he'll get bored and mad after an hour of it. And we have such a ghastly long way to go."

Lucy was nervous as she put the plays back into the envelope. Stanley Daniels helped her on with her coat, but he said nothing about walking home.

"Instantly, he crossed the room and began talking to the others. Lucy's heart went down with a sick thump, though she made an effort at being gay as they all went down the stairs together. At the bottom she gave a little shiver and exclaimed, "Br-r-r! Cold. I'm glad I haven't far to go."

But Stanley Daniels had already hurried away, with a casual good night.

Lucy walked home rapidly along the dark little street. She had walked it all her life, she knew every bush, every post, every rut in the cinder path, windows were lighted and people up and about, but she quickened her walk into a run. But this was not from fear. It was not fear that made her snatch the front door open, throw her hat into a chair, and rush to her own room. She had to get there before misery overwhelmed her.

Her purse fell on the floor as she flung herself on the bed. Tears ran down and soaked the pillow, and her thin shoulders shook. Nothing was any use! He didn't care—and who could blame him? This awful house—her awful clothes—her colorless personality. Even her voice was pale and uninteresting. He was sick of her—she had flung herself at him—oh, she had! No use denying it. A ragged sob tore past her lips.

"What's the matter with you?" Her mother in her faded outing nightgown and curlers was at the door.

Lucy burrowed deeper into the pillow.

"Nothing's the matter!" she wailed. "Everything's the matter! Go away! Oh, for heaven's sake, go away!"

Stanley Daniels walked rapidly. He was definitely worried. He had returned to his room at Mrs. Gill's, after the tense, upset day at the mill, to find a note on the hall table. Mrs. Gill drew his attention to it eagerly.

"He left it here about an hour ago. He said he'd come back. He said he wanted to see you about seven-thirty."

Daniels tore the cheap gray envelope open. A defensive, apprehensive anger made his face burn as he read the few lines.

"When he comes I won't be here. Tell him I had to go to a meeting. An important meeting."

"Maybe you better write a note," worried the landlady. "Maybe I'll get it wrong." She did not like offending people—not when she owed money on a note.

"No, I won't write any note. Just tell him that I had another engagement."

But as he hurried along the frozen street he had a feeling that things impended. It did not surprise him when he walked into his own room to find Wallace Withers sitting there in the one comfortable chair.

"Well, I waited, young feller," Wallace said. "I sent you word two or three times to come and see me, but you didn't take the trouble—so I came to see you."

"So I see," Daniels strove for nonchalance. "I've been busy. I intended coming but—"

Wallace Withers squared himself and fixed his hands in a pontifical gesture.

"Things have happened—you might say all that development I was talking to you about is about to come to a climax. The men who are in with me are ready to take—"

Daniels' lips drew straight. His eyes moved away, grew guarded.

"And how am I supposed to cooperate?"

Wallace Withers liked an effect. He waited a moment, put on an expression of suave importance, spread his fingers on the backs of his hands.

"I am about ready to start some—extensive operations. Lumber—and pulp. From what I've heard from you I figured you might be ready to come along in with me. I expect to buy the Morgan mill. If Virgie holds out—and she's a hard-headed woman—we'll build a mill of our own, but I've got an idea that won't be necessary. And I'm counting on you."

"And how am I supposed to cooperate?"

Uncertainty, fear even, was cold in Stanley Daniels' veins, but he gave no sign.

"So—that's what you had in your mind? I wasn't impressed at first. I thought it was all—well, a lot of windy talk. But you had it all planned out."

Withers' lips folded and unfolded like the lips of a turtle.

"I don't waste time on windy talk," he said. "Not on young squirts like you. I talked to you because I had something for you to do—and you did it!"

Stanley Daniels sprang up. "I did nothing! I'm not in this. I'm not interested."

"Virgie," drawled the old man, "might figure different. And you better be interested. It means a future for you—or no future at all, you might say. I mean to go a long ways in this business—I've got money in back of me and I'm not going to do any two-penny job of it. If you want to come along—all right. If you don't—"

"Then what?" Daniels' face was stiff and colorless.

Wallace Withers grinned and it was not a pleasant grin.

"Way I look at it—if you don't come in with me, there won't be any place for you to go."

"She won't sell."

"She'll sell—or quit! Even if she don't sell—you won't have a job any more!"

"So—that's the racket! Either I go in with you—wreck what I'm doing—or you wreck me? That's a threat, is it?"

"I don't aim to use words like that. I'm just giving you the best advice I know. And I'm making you a pretty good offer."

"An offer of what? A business that isn't established—a pipe-dream."

"You might find out it was a pretty strong pipe. You fellows," he waxed oratorical, "you young men think you know everything. That's your trouble. You don't give any man past forty credit for having any sense."

"Look here, if you think I'm going to—"

Withers ran his blunt, cruel-looking fingers through his hair.

"I'm not going to argue with you," he said. "And if you think you can make me mad, you ain't getting anywhere with it. It's been tried before. All you've got to do is quit your job by noon Saturday. Tell Virgie you've got a better offer—tell her anything you please—but you're going to quit."

"And what if I don't?" Daniels was defiant.

Withers shook down his too-short sleeves, plucked up his hat. "You will," he said dryly.

He tramped down the stairs and Stanley Daniels heard the door slam.

Daniels stood still for a long minute, lit a cigarette and let it go out, then snatched up his hat. The air of the room was suddenly stifling. He pounded down the stairs.

In the parlor, with the asparagus ferns, the everlasting rummy game went on. Three salesmen were playing, slapping down cards, laughing loudly. The fourth player was Branford Wills.

Daniels stared, swore, went out quickly. So—he was spying was he—the heel, the interloper! A surge of fury burned through Daniels' body, then chilled, leaving him with a weight of cold nausea at the pit of his stomach. He found himself thinking of Lucy. Of her gentle eyes and her mothering ways and her loyalty. Suddenly he felt young and lonely and afraid.

CHAPTER XVI

Branford Wills stared at the car that waited in front of the Clark gate.

"So—you came!" he said.

Marian Morgan snapped the gear in place.

"Yes, I came. But don't let your ego expand. I'm not doing it for you. I'm doing it for my mother."

He climbed in, pulling his hat down over his eyes.

"I want to see some timber formerly belonging to Tom Pruitt, on Hazel Fork," he said.

"I suppose you know," she kept her eyes away and her chin up, "that the roads are likely to be bad over that way? We may get stuck."

"I'll look over the area on foot. I have some corners to check."

"All part of the great mystery!" She was scornful.

They drove in silence. Mountain men in clean shirts, bound for the village store, walked the roads, indifferent to the raw chill. Marian spoke to each, knew all their names.

"Do you know personally every man in this end of the state?" he asked.

"I was born here. Most of these people sell pulp wood to mother. When my father was buried four thousand people came to the funeral."

There was, Wills thought, something fine and feudal and tremendous in that. Something that went back, as the traditions of these people went back, to the old countries none of them had ever seen, but which had stamped upon them, as the mark of all life is stamped upon the cell, the magnificent, aloof pride of tall Celts of the Wicklow and the Carrantull; of Highlanders from the shadow of Ben Nevis. Something of the old countries, in the way these men put their feet down, in the half bold, half feral gait in their eyes.

In Marian Morgan this defiant, separate thing was fined down to the cameo cut of her profile, the audacious tilt of her chin. The smoke of old peat fires was in the husk of her voice, there was something valiant about her that was like the ring of hunting bugles under Grampian cliffs, something of the resolute courage of men who had faced a new land from the ice-coated prows of sailing ships.

They passed the power lake and Wills remembered it. They stopped at the Gallup house.

Sally was reading the paper in pajamas. She opened the door only a chink.

"Heavens, you're early! Don't bring him in yet. Good gracious, Marian—I thought—"

"Don't think. I'm not bringing him in. I'm taking him 'ross the ridge. Mother's orders. I want a bucket. Even as cold as it is, this car will heat on the grades."

"How heavenly—then you can sit back and look at all the pretty mountains while it cools."

"Don't be an utter idiot! Lend me a bucket. And we'll have to postpone the plays. I don't know the intent of this expedition, but mother thinks it's important."

"Marian, I don't own a bucket—only a terrible old huge thing Elvira uses to scrub. Could you use a steppan?"

The road around the slope of the ridge was rutted and narrow, but from its twisting height Wills saw below him the tangled country through which on that last day he had stumbled, agonizingly, to Virgie Morgan's door. With a map-maker's eye he plotted the route, saw where he had turned off the high road, and beyond that the fire-scalded wilderness, grown head high with rhododendron and tangling vines; where through a night of sleep he had wandered.

LEND-LEASE BILL

Following are the high spots of the Lend-Lease bill which was passed by the House of Representatives in Washington the first week in this month:

1. Right to manufacture in Government arsenals and shipyards, munitions, war and merchant ships, airplanes and other war supplies for Britain and other embattled democracies.

2. Authority to sell, trade, lease, lend or otherwise dispose of any defense articles heretofore appropriated for by Congress, up to $1,300,000,000 in value.

3. To repair and outfit warships of Britain and other democracies in the United States Navy and private shipyards.

4. To release for export any defense article, including the secret bombplant, and secret military information to the democracies.

5. To permit the President to make any terms of trade he deems advisable, on a "payment or repayment in kind or property basis."

Besides the concession on the $1,300,000,000 limit placed on the amount of war supplies already appropriated for, that the President might transfer to the democracies, the Administration agreed to the following restrictions:

1. Limit to June 30, 1943, the President's authority under the bill.
 2. Limit to June 30, 1946, the length of the time to which the President could commit the United States in agreements and contracts.

3. A declaration against use of American warships for convoy purposes in belligerent waters.

4. A declaration against the use of American merchantmen to carry war or other supplies into combat zones.

5. Require that the President shall consult with the Army and Navy chiefs of staff before turning over existing war equipment and naval vessels to foreign governments.

6. Compel the President to report to Congress each 90 days on the extent of aid rendered democracies.

If this is passed by the Senate it will give the head of our government, which is not at war far greater powers than the head of the British government—which is at war. Mr. Churchill is directly responsible to Parliament for every act. Under the English system he is a member of the House of Commons and must submit to interrogation by any other member. He is not elected for any specific term and could be turned out of office, in 24 hours, if the House of Commons by a simple majority refused to endorse some measure or policy by indicated.
