Hughes will preach on the Theme of Easter.

Million Due For Airports In N. M.

New Mexico has been assured of the expenditure of nearly $6,000,000 on airport construction and improvement, the State Military Department announced today.

State Airport Co-ordinator G. D. Macy expressed "hope and belief" that commitments would reach $10,000,000 "before the end of the summer."

Under construction, under supervision of U. S. Army engineers and the WPA are ports at Roswell and Carlsbad, with respective estimated expenditures of $462,000, $261,000 and $229,000.

Another $1,500,000 has been earmarked for WPA construction now under way at Clovis, Hobbs, Las Cruces, Farmington, Lordsburg and Gallup—total some $250,000 each.

State engineering crews are completing surveys of sites at Carrizozo and Alamogordo, and Silver City is undertaking a municipally backed project.

ENRICHED WHITE BREAD AND FLOUR MARKET

White flour and white bread are coming to market now in a new "enriched" form—that is, with a higher mineral and vitamin content than ordinary white flour or bread.

"Women who bake their own bread may want to know a few basic facts about the new 'enriched' flour before they buy their next sack," suggests Mrs. Dorothy Hanny of the New Mexico Extension Service.

"Standards for the vitamins and minerals that must be included in 'enriched' flour have been recommended by the Committee on Foods and Nutrition of the National Research Council—which is a cooperative organization of the scientific men of the country. This committee has been working in an advisory capacity to the Administrator of Health and Welfare in the National Defense Program.

Archbishop To Be Here

His Excellency, the most Reverend R. A. Gerkin, Archbishop of Santa Fe, will be in Carrizozo to administer the sacrament of confirmation on the 24th day of April, in the morning. In the afternoon of the same day he will be in Capitan.

April 25th, in the morning, he will be in Lincoln, and in the afternoon at San Patricio.

On April 26th, he will be at Arabela in the morning and in the afternoon he will be in Picacho.

Farmers Purchase Spray Equipment

At a joint meeting held by the County Extension Agent and the Farm Security Supervisor, a group of farmers in the San Patricio community were organized recently for the purpose of purchasing spray equipment.

As a result, a 100 gallon sprayer completely equipped will be purchased on a cooperative basis with a loan secured from the F. S. A. Due to the small acreage of orchards, it is not practical for individual farmers to buy expensive farm equipment; but, by purchasing equipment cooperatively it will be a good investment.

Church of Christ To Have Easter Meeting

Beginning Friday night, April 11, and continuing through Sunday night April 20 the local Church of Christ is holding their spring revival. Bro. R. P. Drenen of Fort Sumner will do the preaching and Bro. Boat the local minister will have charge of the singing. Services will begin at 7:30 each evening. Every one interested in earnest Bible investigation is urged to attend.

Babe Walker come home from State College for the Easter Vacation with his mother, Mrs. Clara Walker.

Jones-Adams

Miss Christine Jones of Tulsa, Oklahoma and Mr. Raymond Adams of El Paso, formerly of Carrizozo, were married in Tulsa, April 4, 1941, at the parsonage of the First Presbyterian church by the Rev. David Wilson.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Jones of Tulsa and is considered very attractive and popular.

The groom is a son of Mrs. Maude Adams, formerly of Carrizozo. He was born, reared and educated in Lincoln County, being a graduate of the Carrizozo High school.

Immediately upon receiving his diploma here, he accepted a position with the Greyhound Bus Company in El Paso, where he has received several promotions. He is steady, industrious and an exemplary young man.

Friends extend best wishes for happiness and success.

Two Congressmen for '42

Governor Miles received formal notice, on Saturday April 5th from the Clerk of the House of Representatives in Washington, that the State of New Mexico is entitled to an additional congressman, based on the census gain for the last ten years.

NAUTICAL NOTES

In the battle between the U. S. S. Enterprise and the British ship Boxer during the war of 1812, both captains were killed and were later buried side by side at Portland, Maine.

The anchors of the battleship U. S. S. West Virginia (three in number) each weigh ten tons.

Navy postoffices on ships and foreign stations are branches of the United States postoffice, New York City.

The first navy yard that was acquired after the establishment of the Navy Department, 30 April, 1798, was the Portsmouth Navy Yard, Portsmouth, New Hampshire. The property embraced 58.18 acres and had been in use as a shipbuilding yard. The price was $5,500.

William Andrew Yates

Mr. William (Bill) Yates died very suddenly yesterday morning at an early hour, at his home here. Mr. Yates had been suffering from rheumatism and its complications for the past three years, but had been bedfast very little of the time. He was around town once each day up until the very last day before death claimed him.

William Andrew Yates was born at Paris, Lamar County Texas, May 22, 1866 and would have been 75 years of age, had he lived until May 22. He came to New Mexico when quite young. He was married to Miss Mabel Stafford who passed away a number of years ago. Mr. Yates had engaged in ranching almost his entire life. He was industrious and kind hearted. He leaves to mourn his passing six daughters, Mrs. Ruby Long, Carrizozo; Lena Andrews, Ward Beach, Calif.; Mrs. Clara Harding, Mrs. Willie Tibbetts, Kingman, Ariz.; Mrs. Leona Ross, and Mrs. Retta Lockhart, both of Douglas, Arizona. Also two sisters, Mrs. Kate Ware of Miami, Ariz. and Mrs. Matt Clayton of Hico, Texas, who has been visiting him for some time and is still here; and a brother Emmett Yates of Albuquerque.

Funeral arrangements will be made when members of the family have been heard from.

SELECTIVE SERVICE NOTES

Members of the Civilian Conservation Corps who have been placed in Class I for Selective Service training prior to their enrollment and assignment to a CCC camp, will be permitted to report to the local Selective Service board nearest their camp for physical examination, Col. Russell C. Charlton, State Director of Selective Service, announced today.

Director Charlton also pointed out that a recent War Department ruling enables CCC enrollees to report for these Selective Service examinations without loss of CCC pay and also protects their status in the CCC should they be rejected at an Army induction station.

He said: "If a CCC selectee for military training was classified and placed in Class I by his Local Selective Service Board prior to enrollment in the CCC but had not received notification to report for physical examination until after he had been assigned to a CCC camp, upon receipt of such notice he may request his Local Board for permission to report to the local board nearest his CCC camp for the required examination. Also, the War Department has ruled that his CCC company commander will grant him leave of absence with pay for whatever times is deemed necessary to report to the Selective Service board."

In addition, Director Charlton said, if a CCC enrollee who has been passed for Selective Service training and discharged from the CCC be subsequently rejected at any Army induction station, he may be reinstated in the CCC camp from which he was discharged upon application made within 15 days of the date of his rejection. If he does not wish to return to the CCC, he may apply in person to the commander of the CCC company from which he was discharged who will give him the authorized transportation to his home.

NOTICE. -- The picture show to be given for benefit of Woman's Club will be on May 14th and 15th instead of April as stated in the Woman's Club notes Club Reporter.

A notice received from the commanding officer of Fort Knox, Ky., states that Lt. Aubrey A. Hines of Carrizozo, is with the 1st Armored division of mechanized cavalry there.

Gordon Gray

Mr. Gordon Gray, former Lincoln County citizen passed away in Globe, Arizona, last Sunday morning at 10:30. Mr. Gray had been ill the greater part of the time for two years. He knew he couldn't recover and asked to be brought to Capitan to be buried near other members of the family.

Mr. Gray was born and reared at Capitan. In 1913, he was married to Miss Doris Wingfield, who survives him. He was an employe of the forest service until he became too ill to work. Besides his widow, Mrs. Doris, Gray he is survived by one son, Walter Bennett Gray and one daughter, Frances Louise; also two sisters, Mesdames Nellie Reily and Beula Scharf of Carrizozo and by two brothers, Messrs. Seaborn Gray of Pecos and Walter Gray of Roswell.

Funeral services were held in Capitan, by the Rev. R. A. Crawford at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. The choir was Mrs. Albert Snow, Mrs. Don English, and Mrs. Brewster, who sang "In the Garden" and the "End of a Perfect Day" accompanied by Mrs. T. E. Kolley at the piano and Mr. Lou Fink with the violin.

Members of the Legion Auxiliary were flower girls. Following interment in the Capitan cemetery, the family returned to their home in Globe.

Pioneer Passed Away

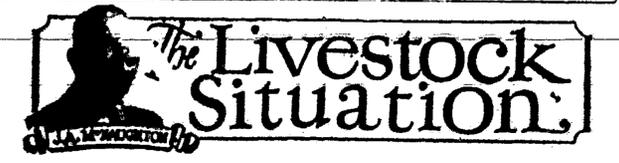

Mr. Ozanne, age 79, of Jicarilla became quite ill last week. Some of his neighbors came and notified Dr. Turner who went to his home. The doctor recognizing the seriousness of his case brought him here to the hospital last Sunday, where he passed away last Wednesday morning, due to Bright's disease, aggravated by the infirmities of age. He was a pioneer of the 80's, having come here with his father who was a driver of the White Oaks stage coach in the early days. Mr. Ozanne lived in a little home almost at the top of a mountain in the Jicarillas, one of the most picturesque locations in that district. His yard was neatly kept and at the front of the house his little girl who had died when she was quite small, was sleeping in a well kept grave. Mr. Ozanne liked to think and dream of the old days when there were few people here, and an element of danger in almost every undertaking. He understood mining and minerals and had ever dreamed of a time when the Jicarillas would come into their own.

Mr. Ozanne was well read, kept abreast of current events and was loyal to his friends. He had a determined mind, and a very positive personality.

Mr. Ozanne's relatives live in Washington D. C., where interment will be made. Remains were shipped to that point last evening.

One may determine the points of the compass with an ordinary watch. Point the hour hand toward the sun; the south then lies exactly midway between the hour hand and the number XII on the dial.

Blue jackets in the U. S. Navy wear neither suspenders nor belts with their trousers. The trousers are made waist tight fit. In days of sailing ships when it was necessary to go aloft to furl or unfurl a sail, it was not desired to have any loops or any articles of clothing which might be caught on the marlin spikes or pin rails.

In this National emergency it behooves us all to do our bit to facilitate our Preparedness Program and so far as central markets and packing plants are concerned, there should be a concentration of supplies available every day in the right kinds and numbers in order to keep our meat food distributors in shape to do their part in providing a constant flow to the Army and Navy and to the greatly increased number of men employed in our industries.

In this connection, any extensive outbreak of livestock diseases would be in a nature of a calamity when there is such a great need for adequate and timely supplies. Hence, it seems appropriate that we confine the movement, as far as practical, to establish agencies where Federal inspectors are located and where the State and County are cooperating to detect and prevent the spread of infectious and contagious livestock diseases. And, where the shippers get the greatest element of protection in trading and, most important, the best price opportunity based upon the law of supply and demand. It is undoubtedly true that uninspected and unsanitary places now exist in considerable numbers where livestock is sold and where there is no veterinary inspection and, manifestly, such operations outside of regulated and supervised central markets cannot be given the same inspection veterinary service without great expense falling upon the Nation.

There is today the greatest possible need for conducting the marketing, purchase and distributing of livestock and meat food supplies on an economical basis. Manifestly, it costs the packer more to buy outside of central markets and whatever this increased cost amounts to is borne by the livestock producer in one way or another. The most available means of maintaining a reasonable price structure in the interest of continued production is through central marketing agencies where market prices are made and spread out through the country as a yardstick to measure values where you get the greatest element of financial protection.

These central markets have proven most effective in several instances. For example, in controlling and eradicating foot and mouth outbreaks in maintaining the identity of reactor cattle in states clean up of tuberculosis and in the matter of reducing our cattle and swine surplus in 1934-35 where all livestock marketed passed through central markets as a matter of economy and efficiency.

In view of my long experience and connection with marketing, the best advice I can give to the livestock fraternity is to confine your shipments to posted and supervised central markets set up and controlled by the Federal Government and I know of no greater help that can be rendered in this emergency situation.

KNOW YOUR BANK

"N. S. F."

An N. S. F. check is one drawn on an account in which there are "Not Sufficient Funds" to cover payment—in other words, it is an overdraft. An overdraft is actually a forced loan because if an N. S. F. check is honored the bank must pay out more money than it has received from the depositor and therefore the money must come out of the funds of other depositors. If a check is returned unpaid because of insufficient funds it is naturally injurious to the credit of the maker of the check. Depositors should keep an accurate record of checks drawn on their check stubs, and also avoid issuing N. S. F. checks.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Our old friend Ben Lucien Burman, the author who became the leading impresario of rivers, is off by clipper to take a River Impresario look at West African deserts, for a change—on his gaudiest writing assignment. One of his most exciting traveling adventures was promoting five cents for the subway ride which started his writing career. Mr. Burman will be with General Wavell's army and with the De Gaulle forces, accredited by a magazine and a syndicate.

Mr. Burman's first river book, "Steamboat (Round the Bend)," became the last film in which Will Rogers appeared. After that he did a stretch at Hollywood, and then got under way with some more river books and magazine stories, riding not only rivers, incidentally, but camels, in this same desert country toward which he is heading now.

On this trip, Mrs. Burman, who in Alice Caddy, the artist who illustrates his books, is going with him, to supply a black-and-white obligato for his stories. Mrs. Burman scores heavily in both his traveling and arriving, as disclosed by the story Mr. Burman once told me.

"I quit my job as a reporter on the Morning World to write stories. I wrote plenty of them and they kept on making extraordinarily quick round trips to the publishers. One day I was fondling and caressing my last dime when I passed a baker's shop, with some freshly baked buns in the window. I am instinctively a plunger. The dime went for four buns."

"After the banquet, I sang 'The Star Spangled Banner' and went home, pondering various plans for making a fresh start in life. There was a letter from the Pictorial Review, saying they liked my story, 'Minstrels of the Mist,' and would print it.

"My dime was gone, and while the buns had bucked me up a bit, I was too weak to walk to the magazine office. There just wasn't that much mileage in four buns. Then I thought of a pretty girl I had seen going in and out of her near-by Greenwich Village studio. I called on her, told her my story and suggested that she invest a nickel in my gilt-edged career.

"She said it looked like a good bet, but she, too, was short on liquid assets—but she had six cents in stamps which she would be glad to risk. I converted the stamps into a five-cent piece at a stationery store, and bought a subway ride. The magazine people gave me a check for $600." Of course he went right back and married the girl.

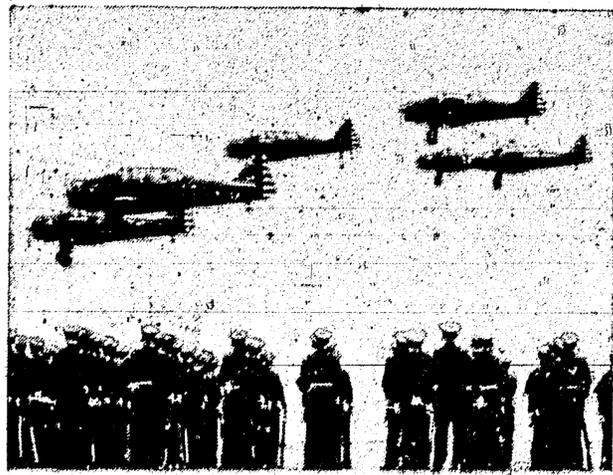

Mr. Burman was badly wounded in the World war and walked with a cane and crutches for several years afterward. He returned to Harvard, and was graduated in 1920.

SIR ARTHUR SALTER, British economist and philosopher, has been building a bridge of ideas between Britain and the U. S. A. for quite a few years. Now, as parliamentary secretary to the ministry of shipping, he comes over to help build a "bridge of ships." News from Washington is that he will be a powerful councillor in devising ways and means to run the gantlet of German submarines and keep goods moving to England. This isn't his specialty, but he is one of Britain's heavy-duty thinkers.

When he delivered the Jonathan Peterson lecture in New York, five years ago, he stirred some sharp criticism in the American press on the ground that he was assuming too much about our fraternal co-operation with Britain. He urged this country to join other nations in fending off war and insisted that we could do this without dangerous entanglements or commitments. Our intellectual elite of banking, finance, foreign policy and economics heard and applauded, but were not so perturbed as the somewhat gloomy Sir Arthur.

Sir Arthur is a shrewd, wary, grim little man. He is short, muscular, vigorous and alert, and endowed with a skeptical mind which has enabled him to score heavily as a prophet. However, he is of the intuitive or "hunching" school of statesmanship. When he feels inspiration stirring, he goes swimming and floats on his back, looking up into the sky—preferably in the sunshine. This seems to have the effect of disjoining rigid cause-and-effect sequences and enhancing his "extraneous perception," the gift of all good "hunch" men.

Flying Cadets Witness Aerial Review

Wool Blankets

This is a digest of a co-operative project carried on by the bureau of animal industry and the bureau of home economics of the United States department of agriculture, to determine the serviceability of four different blends of wool when the wool was made into blankets.

BLENDINGS USED IN THE TESTS The new wool used in the experiments was chosen from purebred flocks of Corriedale and Rambouillet sheep. After shearing, the wool was shipped to New England and manufactured into four lots of blankets, each lot differing in the blend of wool used, the blends being designated as follows: 1, 2, 3, and 4, and blended in the proportions designated herewith: Fabric No. 1 consisted of Rambouillet wool, one part fine and one part 1/2 blood; Fabric No. 2 was of Corriedale wool, two parts 1/2 blood to one part 1/4 blood; Fabric No. 3 was of Corriedale wool and reworked wool in the proportions of 1 part 1/4 blood Corriedale to two parts reworked wool; Fabric No. 4 was entirely of reworked wool. Warp and filling were identical in all blends.

METHODS USED IN TESTING The blankets were put into use in the Veterans' Diagnostic Center, U. S. Veterans' Administration, in Washington, D. C., where they had the sort of treatment to be expected in an institution of that type. They were used in the post-operative ward where they necessarily received 24-hour-a-day use, and, since they were laundered after each patient was dismissed the comparisons of relative wear could be made in a shorter time than would be possible under home conditions. Twenty-four blankets of fabric No. 1, 14 of fabric 2, 9 of fabric 3, and 16 of fabric 4 were put into service under identification numbers. A record of the date upon which each blanket was laundered was kept by the laundry superintendent and one blanket of each lot was removed at intervals to note whatever physical or chemical changes had taken place.

Tests were made for shrinkage, breaking strength—both strip and grab methods—burating strength, thread count, weight per square yard, thickness, air permeability, and heat transmission. At each test period, sulphur, nitrogen, moisture, ash, methylene blue absorption, scale breakage, and resistance to bacterial attack were tested. The purpose of these tests is to appear except that it should be said that as wool becomes damaged it absorbs increasing quantities of methylene blue—hence the methylene blue test.

RESULTS OF THE TESTS A comparison of the new three-eighths-blood wool with reworked wool for strength and stretch, developed that the new wool had a breaking strength about the same as that of the reworked wool, but that it had a stretch of 47.14 per cent as compared with 26.65 per cent in the reworked wool blend.

Fabrics 1 and 2, when compared for whiteness, amount of nap, weight and thickness, were found to be of equal value; fabric 3 showed a yellow tinge, a lighter weight, and less thickness; fabric 4—made entirely of reworked wool—was unsatisfactory. It had no nap, had insufficient weight for durability, and was darker than fabric 3.

LENGTH OF SERVICE Although it was planned, at first, to allow the blankets to remain in service as long as they were usable, the study progressed so slowly that all were withdrawn from service after five years. During that time, 18 of the original 63 were lost, consequently data concerning them is incomplete.

One of the blankets made from fabric 4 was serviceable for only 9 washes; the remainder from that blend were usable for service varying up to 16 washes; for blankets made from fabric 3, the average length of service was 31 washes.

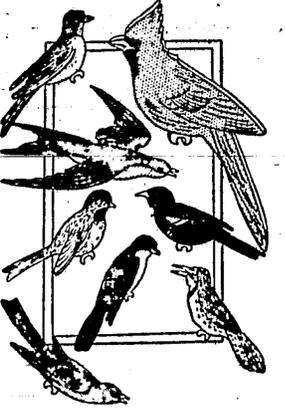

At the end of the five-year period, no blanket made from either fabric 1 or fabric 2 had been withdrawn because it was worn out—all were still serviceable. One blanket of fabric 1 had been washed 52 times—indicating a satisfactorily long life-time for blankets of this blend in ordinary home use.

It must be admitted that in the matter of shrinkage, none of the blends was satisfactory, since none of them, at the end of the five years, was adequate to cover a single bed.

TOGGENBERG GOAT The most popular breed of milk goats in this country is the Toggenberg which was first imported into the United States in 1893. It is reliably reported that in Switzerland Toggenberg does produce from five to six quarts of milk a day. Recently the butterfat content in milk produced by a herd of Toggenberg does kept by the bureau of animal industry of the U. S. department of agriculture, has averaged slightly more than 3.5 per cent. This is about the same as cow's milk.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Opening Games Chicago at Cleveland Detroit at St. Louis Washington at Boston Philadelphia at New York

The 1941 major league baseball season will open April 15. This year teams face changing personnel, as players are called into the army. Among leading players subject to call are Bob Feller, Cleveland Indians; Henry Greenberg, Detroit Tigers; John Rigney, Chicago White Sox; and Ted Williams of the Boston Red Sox.

Strengthen Pan-American Solidarity

Pan-American day, first observed 10 years ago, will be celebrated April 14 in every independent country in the Western Hemisphere. Map shows shortest distances between points in the Americas and the Old World. With the airplane reducing these distances to hours, co-operation between the Americas becomes increasingly important.

D. A. R. Convenes

Concluding a three-year term as president of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Henry M. Robert Jr. (above) will preside at the organization's fiftieth congress in Washington, April 14-19. The D.A.R. has 143,000 members.

SYNOPSIS

George McAusland was 38 years old when he sailed from America to undertake his post as a missionary in the Fiji Islands. A crime he had committed in a fit of excitement had shattered all his confidence in himself. He felt forced to flee to the island of Honoluli. She was en route to visit her parents, who were missionaries on Glend Island. Mary was attracted by George's attempts to avoid her. One day George accidentally fell overboard. Mary unhesitatingly dove into the sea to rescue George. George is falling in love with her. When the boat approached her home on Glend Island, they learned that Mary's parents had both died. George volunteered to take charge of the mission.

Mary nodded, a secret amusement in her eyes. "So, for our reputations' sake you think we ought to ask John Gale to marry us, and stay and work together? Is that what you want?"

"Yes," she urged smilingly. "Why did you decide you wanted to stay here? Honestly?"

Something for a moment rose in him, choking him. He came strongly to his feet; he cried in a sort of fury: "Because I won't leave you here with Joseph Neargood!"

She nodded, seemed almost content, said gently: "Well, that will do for now, I think, George McAusland." Her eyes were laughing.

"It isn't very much, perhaps! Most men would say more. But I think it's a lot for you to say. I'd lots rather be married to you than not. Shall I tell you why? It hasn't anything to do with duty at all."

She had come close to him.

"Or maybe you'd like to tell me why you don't want to leave me here with Joseph?" Her eyes were dancing, teasing him. "Tell me, George!"

He took a backward step, like one escaping he stammered: "I—don't know!"

Mary Doncaster smiled again, as if at a secret of her own. "Well, maybe you'll find out by and by," she decided. She touched his hand. "George, if you do find out, promise to tell me, will you? It's a thing a girl likes to hear."

George and Mary, all their possessions in trunks and bags and boxes on the ground about them, stood on the ledges above the landing place to watch the Sunset put to sea.

But they did not wait to watch her out of sight. Willing hands had borne their gear away up the trail past the bathing pool toward Ephraim Doncaster's house; and when the ship yonder passed out of the roadstead George McAusland sneezed—that cold he had contracted when he fell overboard had lingered—and said awkwardly: "Well, Mary, we'll want to settle ourselves before dark. Shall we go to the house?"

CHAPTER IV

When they came into the house, since Mary had not been ashore before, she looked around with brimming eyes, recognizing familiar objects everywhere. She crossed, softly as though she might disturb someone sleeping, to look into her father's room; and she called George to her.

"This was Father's," she said. "And this is Mother's room, next to his."

He saw the two beds close together, the flimsy wall between. "Where did you sleep?" he asked.

"Over here." She led him across to the other bedroom in the opposite end of the house; and they stood in the doorway together.

"I think you'd better take your father's room," he decided. "I'll take this one. Then you can have two rooms to yourself, won't be crowded?"

She said in a soft surprise: "Won't you take Father's, and I'll be in Mother's, close beside you?"

He shook his head. "No. This arrangement will give us each some privacy, Mary."

She smiled faintly, amused and thinking she understood. "We won't have much privacy, George, at best. With no doors, no curtains, no shutters on the windows."

"We'll arrange something."

Now a girl came in carrying a gourd cut into the shape of a bowl, filled with a yellowish viscous stuff which she presented smilingly, placing it on the table set for meals. The girl was beautiful. There were two or three faint lines tattooed near her mouth and on her shoulder, and she wore blossoms in her hair. Mary told her husband:

"This is Ieni, George. Jarambo brought her to take care of us."

He looked dubious. "She's just a child, isn't she? Must we have anyone? Where's the kitchen, Mary? And what do we eat this with?"

Mary laughed. "Dip your finger in it, twist it around, and stick it in your mouth," she directed. "That's the most the easiest way. It's too stringy and sticky for a fork or a spoon."

George nodded, and tried. "I don't care for the flavor," he decided. "I'd as soon eat glue!" Jarambo and Ieni stood beaming by. He looked toward the girl and said, lowering his voice as though by doing so he could avoid being understood: "Can we persuade her into a more civilized costume, Mary? What's that she has on?"

"They make the cloth by soaking some sort of bark—like flax—and beating it over a log. Tappy, they call it." She smiled. "But Ieni has on her prettiest frock, George, in our honor. Usually she won't be so dressed up!"

"Haven't you an old dress you can give her?"

"She wouldn't wear it."

"Try her and see."

"I will in the morning," Mary assented.

He took her old room, she her father's, with the length of the house between them. Mary lay long awake, drenched in the night sounds half forgotten that had once been so familiar. Once she heard George sneeze, and she called softly:

"All right, my dear? Warm enough?"

"Perfectly!"

In the morning he appeared in the heavy black suit he had worn on shipboard. The first shower of the day pelted on the thatch, thrummed among the palms, passed to leave a stifling humid heat behind. Mary was cool in white; in a dress she had worn in school which she now left unbuttoned at the throat, and

But as a result of Ieni's story, Mary herself sometimes walked toward the beach alone, thinking she might encounter the sailor. So Mary had persuaded George to sleep for a while every afternoon; and sometimes she left him asleep and went abroad among these people who were her friends. It was on such an occasion that she saw the sailor again. Mary, emerging from the forest, saw Corkran on the sands, barefooted, in white pants and a ragged shirt, lying with his head in a girl's lap, watching the swimmers. Mary was near before he saw her. Then he came scrambling to his feet in some dismay and touched his forehead respectfully.

"Sorry, ma'am," said Corkran and looked past her toward the trail. "Is himself coming?"

"No, he's asleep."

"Don't be letting him know I'm here," he urged quickly. "It would bother him."

She nodded. "Yes, it would. Why did you desert the ship, Corkran?"

He flushed with embarrassment. "Ma'am, when I knew myself and you would stay here, says I to myself 'It's no place for the likes of them. They just might be needing a good fighting man some day.' So that night when the mate that was watching to see we were good little boys and stayed where we belonged looked the other way for a minute, I slid overside like an eel, ma'am; and into the jungle I went till the ship was gone. I know myself would not like my being about. You'll never be telling him!"

"I'd rather he didn't know," she agreed. "But you'd better keep away from the beach. He comes here sometimes."

"Aye, that I will. It was a careless chance I took today." A friendly impudence was in his tone. I knew you had been told I was here. I sent that word, so you'd know there was one to call on if you ever needed anyone."

"I have my husband," she reminded him.

"Aye, ma'am, and big and strong he is inside of him, in his heart and his head, ma'am. But sometimes a fist saves trouble and argument, and I'm stronger in the fist than him; self will ever be." He said acutely: "You know, that little man has a hard time with himself, but there's stuff in him. He'll surprise us all one day, and never a bit surprised will I be!"

She smiled, deeply pleased. "I think so too," she agreed. "I like him too."

"We'll take care of him between us, ma'am," Corkran assured her. "You with him, and me here if I'm needed. But don't tell him I'm here."

"We'll not see each other again," she said.

"Only if you send for me."

George for some reason found it hard to learn the Island tongue, so he could not yet preach to the Islanders. Mary sometimes thought he was homesick, because he often talked about his boyhood in Maine; and he liked to ask her about her years at school in New Bedford, about her uncle who was mate aboard the whaler, and her cousin, young Tommy Hanline.

There were other occasions when George asked her questions about the Venturer, and about the men aboard her, and especially about Richard Carr. As though the secret thought in George's mind took shape in hers, she sometimes wondered whether she would have fallen in love with Richard if she had been older, if he had ever wooed her. If they had met again before she married George—now of course it would never happen; but she smiled sometimes, remembering the dreams she had used to dream when she was a child and Richard already a man.

"I notice men going over to the other side and landing there," he without petticoats or other foundation. George said in a low tone: "Your dress, Mary."

"My dress?" She did not understand him.

"Button it," he said. "And—I think you have forgotten your petticoats."

She protested: "I've left them off, yes. You surely don't expect . . . George, you must realize how ridiculous you look, and how uncomfortable you will be in that heavy suit."

He said, almost pleadingly: "I'm a fool of course; but to keep my head here, I'm going to have to hold on to something, Mary. It's so easy to begin to live as these savages do, to lie around half-dressed, idle, useless, unless we hang on to our own ways of doing things." And he confessed: "If I were strong enough, I could let down my standards in some ways and still keep them in others; but I can't, Mary."

He added, half laughing at himself: "I know wearing this suit is foolish, but—I guess it's a symbol or something."

She would find always in him this humble consciousness of his own weakness behind any outward arrogance of certainty he might put on. She surrendered, and went to dress as he wished her to. From her own room she heard his voice raised angrily, and called a question, and he said:

"We can't have the house full of these people staring at us all the time, Mary. I'm trying to send them away. And when you come out, bring something for Jennie to wear."

She called to him: "Don't scold so, George. You just frighten them. They're ready to love you if you give them a chance. After that, they'll do anything for you; but you'll have to go easily at first."

Those first weeks after her return to the Island were for Mary pleasant enough. George maintained a reserve toward her which she waited for time to break down, but she had the delight of seeing him happy in these scenes she loved. He was full of questions, intensely interested in every aspect of the Island life, going to and fro along the many trails that led to the thatch-roofed houses of poles built on rock platforms like their own. There were houses near theirs, and along the shore, and by the beach at the end of the bay. The beach ended on the farther side at a low cliff not easily to be climbed, which limited their explorations; but one night George spoke of the fact that there was a considerable traffic of canoes across the bay.

"I notice men going over to the other side and landing there," he said. "But never any women. Why, Mary?"

She remembered the explanation from her childhood here. "Women never go in the canoes," she said. "Canoes are tabu for them. The men go over to the grove. I know Father never went over."

She agreed to ask Jarambo. He was firm in saying no, but reticent in giving reasons. Mary told George: "I think they're entitled to some privacy, don't you? Just as we value ours?" He agreed not to force the issue.

But Mary was more curious than he. Jarambo's manner had puzzled her. She did not believe the Islanders had any secret temple consecrated to pagan rites, as George suspected; and she questioned Ieni.

What she heard was startling. Ieni said a white man with black hair lived across the bay, who had insisted that his presence there be concealed from George and Mary. The white man talked very loud and he had a talking bird. The white mountains the day after the Sunset sailed, with the bird on his shoulder; and he now lived happily in a house above the cliff beyond the beach.

Mary recognized Corkran. He must have swum ashore from the Sunset the night before the ship sailed, and Captain Keen had known the uselessness of trying to capture the deserter. She was disturbed, and angry too. Corkran's presence, and the manner of his life as Ieni described it, would make George unhappy.

Up-to-the-Minute Easter Costume Calls for Gay, Tiny Flower Hat

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Even handkerchiefs are apt to yield to the sway of flowers this season, in that they have posies embroidered or painted on them to match those on one's "Easter bonnet."

Above to the right in the picture is a lovely black satin hat, trimmed with two waxen white roses. A veil of black fishnet underlines the slogan "with every hat a veil this spring."

Centered in the picture, a young lady of high fashion wears one of the tiny pompadour hats so smart this season. Note the glorified rose splashed on her handkerchief. These handkerchiefs come in a series of flowers, so you are sure of getting a "hankie" to match your flower hat.

You will be wanting a red hat this season to keep pace with fashion, or at least one trimmed with bright red flowers. The little hat shown in the upper left corner is gaily flowered with bright red poppies. Wear it to set off a navy blue costume. Add a smart red under-arm bag.

Pastels are popular for headgear. A beguiling pink rose colored felt beret is shown below to the left in the group. The shoulder length veil emphasizes romance and coquetry.

A swath of pastel silk on a tall black felt turban is pictured below to the right. A hat of this type calls for a shimmering lavender veil.

Smart Gob Dress

A smart-gob-dress, perfect for the junior high or high school girl, is here shown. It adheres to a traditional pattern of simplicity in accordance with the present fashion trend toward classics. That this dress reflects the patriotic note so characteristic of current fashions is readily seen in its every detail—the dress is of red, white and blue rayon cotton, with an all-pleated navy blue skirt and long-torso lines for the blouse. The white nautical blouse is trimmed with red braid and red anchors.

Silk, Rayon Printed Suits

Taking Fashion by Storm

New and exciting in the spring style parade are suits that are tailored of silk or rayon-mixture prints with exactly the fine sleek and simplicity one expects of wool suits. The long-jacket suit with an all-round pleated skirt is a favorite. The jacket has revers and a one-button or two-button fastening.

You will find in the stores stunning redingote styles as well, tailored like cloth, fitted meticulously as your long topcoat, the dress underneath styled in a fetching one-piece manner. These new print tailors are starting a vogue that is taking the fashion world by storm.

Tiers, Ruffles, Peplums

Add to New Silhouettes

The newest silhouettes call for tiers, ruffles and peplums. And the real news about these styling details is that designers are handling them so adroitly that they in no way destroy the straight slim lines that fashion demands this season.

Very good looking are the new dressmaker coats, cut on princess lines to above the knee, at which point a wide pleated flounce carries on to the hemline.

Prints and Plain

A new and very helpful aid in selecting prints and plains to "go together" is the manner in which materials are being displayed this season in the stores. It is the custom this season to show a print and the plain material all side by side in colors that correlate perfectly.

Flower Bracelets

The newest fashion wrinkle is to wear a flower or boutonniere attached to a ribbon bracelet, the cuff of your glove, or the edge of the sleeve at the wrist. Of course the flower should match the flower trimming on your hat.

Designers Defy Raids

In London, dressmakers keep on dishing out their normal supply of work, in spite of air raids. Clothes are made on a sort of ambulancing schedule, workers shifting from the basement shelters to the upstairs workrooms and back again.

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

Gift picture frames can be restored to brightness by rubbing with a sponge moistened in turpentine.

Lemon juice mixed with wood ashes will remove tarnish from brass.

To prevent dough sticking to the spoon when making dumplings dip the spoon into hot liquid each time before putting it into the dough.

Which is a darn exaggeration because you have to get all your vitamins to feel as good as I do. And Pep has the two that are least plentiful in ordinary meals—vitamins B₁ and D.

PEP's a goshamighty Ane cereal, though, that lots of people eat just for its taste. Why not try it?

Poppy Day Notice

"Honor the Dead and serve the Living by wearing a Poppy" on Poppy Day, May 24. Auxiliary members will be on the streets asking everyone to buy and wear a poppy.

With so much strife and turmoil in the world today, the wearing of a poppy reawakens memories of moments, days, weeks and even months of anxiety twenty three years ago. Death is walking through the ranks of the veterans with an increasingly rapid stride; an average of over one hundred are being claimed by death per day, and nearly all leave dependant families. The need for the poppy fund has grown greater instead of less, as the war passes further into history. Thus, we realize that these red paper flowers are more than a memorial to the dead, they are also the symbol of hope and help for the living, with the bright tribute to the dead; it also brings aid to the suffering comrade of those dead who are still within the reach of human assistance. We assure you that every contribution given will go in its entirety to worthy welfare purposes.

The regular monthly meeting night of the Legion and Auxiliary was postponed until further notice on account of the death of Gordon Gray, brother of Nellie Reily and Mrs. Beula Scharf, who are Auxiliary members.

The sympathy of the Legion and Auxiliary is extended to Mrs. Reily and Mrs. Scharf.

And it wouldn't be smart to burn enough gas to develop a hundred-plus horsepower all of the time—when it usually takes only a small part of that to give you the performance you want.

You thus make your power as you need it. You know the lift and life of plenty-power when it's wanted.

And you get such frugal operation over the whole range of your driving that two carburetors give as much as 10% to 15% more mileage than the same engines once gave with one!

The sensible thing to do is to develop power as you need it—and that is precisely what the Buick FIREBALL eight with Compound Carburetion† does.

Britain's School of Experience

Today the homes of England are "military objectives," and British babes are born and reared in battle lines. The Gypsy Hill Training college, in southeast London, met the problem of what to do with babies whose mothers and fathers were engaged in day-long war effort. How these children learned to help themselves is shown in these pictures.

U. S. Develops Great Generals In Every War

Gen. Marshall Heads Army As Nation Watches World Conflict.

By ROGER SHAW
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)
WASHINGTON. — Every American war, or war in which America was interested, has turned out a general, or two, or three. In the Revolution there were George Washington and Nathaniel Greene, of first rank. Strangely enough, the general who won that war's primary victory, Saratoga, was not of first rank by any manner of means. His name, still unpopular in army circles, was Horatio Gates. Gates disliked Washington, and the "Gates" triumph over Burgoyne was really won by such subordinates as Benedict Arnold and Dan Morgan.

The War of 1812 was perhaps the American army's most dismal episode. It turned out traitors, poltroons and phonies. But it also produced bucolic Gen. Andrew Jackson, of the same tough Scotch Irish stock as Dan Morgan's riflemen. Jackson won the concluding battle of New Orleans, after his countrymen had met defeat at Detroit, Queenstown, and up and down the long Canadian border.

In the Mexican war there were two of them: Zach Taylor and Winfield Scott. Scott was "old fust and feathers" to the boys in blue. Taylor was a political general from the slave-South, while Scott was a regular. Both men were amiable and efficient, especially Scott, who had learned his tricks as a youngster back in 1812. The exploits of this twain, with tiny forces far from home, were almost epic.

In the Civil war we have a double set-up: North and South. The northern all-stars were the usual big three of Grant-Sherman-Sheridan, the latter originally a cavalry chief. Sherman was the best of the three, and the best in the whole war, according to the world's leading military critic, B. H. Liddell Hart of England. The southern team was Lee-Jackson-Forester. Stonewall Jackson was killed in mid-war.

Five Generals Became President. In the Spanish war there were generals and admirals and what-nots, but a lieutenant-colonel named Teddy Roosevelt ran away with the show. He commanded the rough riders at San Juan Hill, and rode himself into the White House, in good company. The company was as follows: Washington, Jackson, Taylor and Grant—a general from each war, who became President.

That brings us down to the so-called second World war. In this war there have been very few generals of note. England's Gort and Ironside were kicked upstairs after Dunkirk. France's Gamelin, a nice fellow like Gort, is more than in the doghouse. Generals Petain and Weygand, in this man's war, are political generals rather than front-fighters. Finland's Mannerheim and Greece's dead Metaxas were dictator-generals who combined business with pleasure, when it came to their particular Russian and Italian phases of Armageddon II. Germany's air chief, Hermann Goering, is a purely political general, while Keitel is a desk general who does a job like our own Henry Stimson. Manfred von Brauchitsch is the top German field general, but not well known, while Guderian is the tank expert who overran the west. When it comes to Italian generals—there are any, and if so, where? Badoglio, the Caesar of Ethiopia, went the way of Gort and Gamelin. And Marshal Graziani, Libyan defender, "resigned" because of his many reverses.

That leaves America. At this moment, America's Washington-Jackson-Grant of the second World war is George Catlett Marshall, chief of staff and commanding general. He is a remarkably nice fellow. He has light blue eyes, and did not go to West Point. In army politics there is a good deal of feeling against the Pointers, so this is in Marshall's favor. Instead, he went to the little Point of the Southland—Virginia Military Institute at Lexington in the Shenandoah valley. V. M. I. also turned out Stonewall Jackson, the "right arm" of Robert E. Lee. Staff-chief Marshall, however, hails from that hotbed of Quakers and generals and Quaker generals: Pennsylvania.

Extremely Hard Worker. Marshall has a likeable personality. He is not technical in his phrasing, but human and understandable. He has never been a publicity hound, but he does like to talk. He likes to expound his ideas, and he has plenty of these without a doubt. He is an extremely hard worker, and of a restless turn of mind and body. Since he got the high command, he has flown nearly 30,000 miles about the countryside, on trips of inspection. He has another aspect—one that every great general through history has husbanded. He sticks by his old soldiers through thick and thin, and they have direct access to him at any time. Calus Julius was that way, and so were Wellington and Napoleon, and so was Ludendorff, who unfortunately stuck by an ex-corporal named A. Hitler.

General Marshall lives at one of Washington's show places — Fort Myer, just outside the District of Columbia. This is the fortress that is attached to the Arlington national soldier's cemetery.

The likeable Marshal Marshall gets up in the morning at 5:30, which is more than the privates have to do. He likes to ride his horse for an hour or so before breakfast. He gets to his office in the war department around 7 o'clock, though the department does not open, officially, till 8:45. He reads all his own morning mail—close to half a hundred letters per diem. Most of the long morning he bickers with congressmen, reporters, aides, or White-Housers. He has lunch, betimes, on the desk in his office—a luncheon of pie and milk, or perhaps a chocolate bar. All afternoon he labors and does all that he has to do: bickerings anew, confabs, hasty decisions, long-term plans. It's all in good hands. He takes home-work home with him and studies till far into the night hours, brushing up for the morrow. It's not an easy routine.

Marshall is a "Perching" man, in the army lingo. He was a Perching aide up to 1924, had Perching ideas, and a Perching background. In the same way, in France, Weygand is a Foch man, while Gamelin was a Joffre man, and Napoleon a Carnot man. This, in army circles, is for Marshall, and also against him. Perching has always been something, perhaps, of a controversial figure. Marshall, however, is not. There is very little controversy about Marshall. This is very fortunate in the year of grace, 1941.

Knows How to Compromise. Marshall is patient, likes order, dislikes chaos, and knows how to compromise if-or-when he has to.

Marshall's original purpose was a comparatively small, highly trained, perfectly equipped force of regulars, capable of attempting anything. After the fall of France, last June, came conscription and untrained masses of raw material. Marshall had to change his plans to conform to an emotional public opinion. A good many of the regulars have not cared for this. Their slogan has been "business as usual." Marshall himself is basically an infantry general, not a warped faddist on tanks or air. Every army unit, today, is half to three-quarters composed of mere recruits, but Marshall cannot help that. He has had to accept the draft, whether he liked it or not. Presumably, he does, but some of his officers, presumably, do not. They put little faith in mere numbers, and prefer quality to quantity. All this is debatable, and remains to be seen. Our military future appears to be in good hands, though, of course, the Anglo-French thought the same of Gort and Gamelin.

Marshall's first wound came at V. M. I.—a bayonet wound in a hazing accident. Let's hope he suffers no more knifing—no more wounds—from the political hazing of that sometimes strident bedlam, the Congress of Washington intrigue.

Odds Are Against Rain on Easter Day

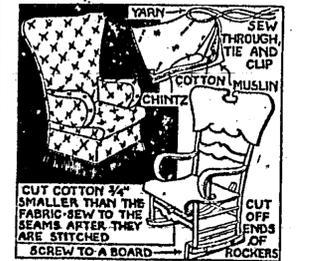

NEW YORK.—In the fourth century of the Christian era, when the time of the Easter celebration was settled for future generations by the Council at Nicea, nothing was said concerning Easter weather. That vagary, therefore, has been left free to be anything it liked, and on about 16 Easters of the last 60, United States weather bureau records show, it has either snowed, hailed, rained, or been cold and blustery.

Back in 1875, records show the one-out-of-three chance that the weather might be inclement was possibly a disaster for the fashion-conscious. Rain-garb hadn't reached the well-styled stage, and the shapeless coat of the day was no attractive addition to milady's costume of Greek hair arrangement, Elizabethan ruff; Louis Quatorze jacket, the fan representing the Trianon, and the Moorish jewelry which she wore. Today, however, the raincoats of such fabrics as transparent korozel, made in the military fashion now being highlighted in the smart women's suits, make protective apparel a definite part of the Easter parade.

It's a bit difficult to imagine how the observance of Easter, purely religious in origin, became so indissolubly associated with spring millinery. Perhaps the well-known author of a book on etiquette, who said: "A superstition all over the world is that one should wear at least one new article of clothing on Easter, or bad luck will follow," may have had something to do with the sprouting of new finery. At any rate, back in the early 1890s, New York began observing the day by the famous parade along Fifth avenue, a now universal tradition

Tufted Cover for Old Rocking Chair

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS
DO YOU remember how old-fashioned, comfortable used to be tufted? They were made of two layers of fabric with cotton between and every four inches or so in rows the three layers of material were caught together with a stitch of wool yarn double which was then tied twice and clipped to make a fluffy tuft. The cover is plain, medium green glazed chintz tufted with dark green yarn and three inch dark green fringe is used around the bottom. A long zipper makes a center back closing. Each section of the cover was fitted on the chair in the muslin lining first and these pieces were used as patterns for cutting the chintz, also the cotton which was trimmed to be 3/4-inch smaller all around. After the pieces were tufted, as shown at the upper right, the seams were then stitched up. Long stitches were then made on the inside to catch the edges of the cotton in place.

NOTE: Are you planning to make slip covers this Spring? Mrs. Spears' Books 1 and 3 tell you exactly how. Book 1 gives directions for fitting and finishing slip covers for chairs and divanets. Book 3 shows you how to make a pattern first; also how to arrange openings in covers for chairs of unusual types, and how to anchor slip covers so they will stay neatly in place. Income Rises to New High Business and agricultural conditions in the U. S. during April are indicated on the above map. The outlook is favorable, with national income expected to reach a new high. Rising income will probably be somewhat offset by higher costs.

By L. G. ELLIOTT
President, LaSalle Extension University
PHILADELPHIA. — The general outlook for both agriculture and industry is favorable. There may be some offset to rising income by higher costs despite government pressure to keep prices from rising. But these will not be enough to keep farm income from rising to the highest level in 11 years. And the total national income is expected to reach a new peak.
Farm prospects for this year are favorable. The total acreage which farmers are planning to plant is about the same as last year. Some shifts are being made among the different crops because supplies of export farm commodities, such as cotton, tobacco, and wheat, are large, while the foreign demand has been much below normal. Farmers are trying, insofar as possible, to concentrate their efforts on producing those products that are used mostly in domestic consumption. The market outlook for these is most favorable.

GOOD TIDINGS FOR THE EASTER BREAKFAST
(See Recipes Below)

EGGSTRAORDINARY!

With the passing of winter and the arrival of spring comes the joyful Easter season, bringing with it new life and new hope. Why not express these good tidings in the traditional Easter Sunday breakfast?

Make your Easter breakfast the No. 1 breakfast of the year—the time when the whole family, and guests, too, perhaps, gather leisurely 'round a gaily decorated table laden with their favorite early-morning dishes.

Let color-splashed eggs be the centerpiece. You can use those that the children have "discovered" in their traditional pre-breakfast egg hunt.

Pile them high in the center of a grass-filled Easter basket. Then, to complete the scheme, mark each person's place at the table with an egg caricature—Uncle Sam, an Indian Chief, Mr. Rabbit or even a pert young lady.

"While they're still 'oh-ing' and 'ah-ing,' serve 'eggs in nests'—just to keep the theme in mind. To complete your menu, you'll of course want glasses of cold fruit juice, crisp fruit slices or bacon curls and steaming popovers. It's taken for granted that you'll make plenty of hot coffee. They couldn't ask for more!

Eggs in Nests.
(See picture at top of column)
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
Butter
5 bread sticks

Separate egg, placing white in small, deep bowl and retaining yolk in one of the half shells. Beat egg white until stiff and slightly dry (when dry, it will have a slightly coarse appearance). Pile egg white in oven-proof cup or dish in which 3 bread sticks have been arranged. Drop yolk into depression made in center of egg white. Bake in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees F.) until bread tips and egg white are delicately browned (about 15 minutes). Season with salt, pepper if desired, and a lump of butter dropped on yolk. Serves 1.

Just in case you're wondering how the bread sticks are made, here are directions. Because of their dainty arrangement in the serving dishes, I call them Bread Buttercups:

Remove the crusts from a loaf of uncut bread. Cut lengthwise slices from the loaf. Trim the slices so that they are about 1½ inches wide and the ends pointed. Brush with an egg and milk mixture and arrange in baking cups. It is best to brush the tips with a little melted butter so that they will brown more readily.

Pop-Overs.
2 eggs, beaten
½ cup milk
1 cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon melted fat
Combine eggs and milk. Pour over sifted dry ingredients. Beat with a rotary beater until smooth. Add butter. Beat. Pour batter into hot greased muffin pans, filling one-third full. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) for 35 to 45 minutes. Dry in oven about 10 minutes with

LYNN SAYS:

Eggs join with other foods to fill your needs and produce your health. They are among our best sources of the muscle building proteins. They are high in iron which is needed to build good red blood. They supply phosphorus which forms a part of every active cell of the body.

When "peeling" hard-cooked eggs, crackle the shells, then start the peeling at the rounded end of the egg. Holding the eggs under running cold water or dipping in a bowl of cold water helps to ease the shell off, leaving a smooth, unbroken surface of white.

heat turned off. Yield: 10 large Pop-Overs.

And now a word about the cleverly decorated Easter eggs that appear in the basket above.

You'll agree that even the most aristocratic rabbit should be proud to claim these original eggs. Decorating them is both easy and inexpensive. You'll need large white eggs, a package of dyes from the Five and Ten, a spoon-shaped wire hook with an end to use as a handle (for dipping eggs into the dye), rubber cement and stickers.

Buy gold and silver stars, dots in various colors, small red hearts, linen reinforcements that are really meant for loose-leaf notebooks, flower seals such as tulips, and red and blue legal seals. Most of these come in several sizes, but the small ones are the easiest to glue on a curved surface.

After the well-known hard boiling process you use your imagination about covering the eggs with stars and dots. Then try arranging hearts in four-leaf clover patterns, or turn the points outward and stick them around a center dot, as flower petals. All-over designs of blue legal seals and stripes of the red ones, pasted so closely that they overlap a bit, are quite effective. There are endless arrangements, and you have the advantage of being able to soak off and replace designs until you are pleased, without wasting an egg.

What to do with the Easter supply of hard-cooked eggs? I'm coming to that. . . Coarsely chopped or sliced hard-cooked eggs in superbly seasoned cream or white sauce become CREAMED EGGS. They will give luncheon and dinner menus a lift when served on crisply fried cornmeal slices, potato cakes, or waffles.

With eggs and cheese such boon companions, and cheese a prime favorite, too, ESCALLOPED EGGS and CHEESE is another use for Easter eggs—after Easter.

Creamed Eggs.
6 eggs, hard cooked
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons flour
1½ cups milk
½ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of cayenne or nutmeg
Melt butter, add flour and stir until smooth. Add cold milk. Cook and stir constantly until thick. Remove from fire and place over hot water. Add seasonings and sliced eggs, cut lengthwise. Stir carefully. Serves 4.

Escalloped Eggs and Cheese.
1½ tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 cup soft-bread crumbs
3 tablespoons melted butter
½ cup grated cheese
6 to 8 hard cooked eggs
Prepare a sauce of butter, flour, milk and seasonings. Arrange in greased casserole in layers using three-quarters of the crumbs, the sliced eggs, cheese and sauce. Top with remaining one-fourth cup of crumbs, mixed with the melted butter. Bake in a moderate oven, (350 degrees F.) until sauce is bubbly and top nicely browned, about 40 minutes. Serve plain or with tomato sauce. Serves 4 or 5.

Cold Air Return Pipe.

QUESTION: I heat a second floor apartment with a hot air furnace through five eight-inch pipes. There is no cold air return pipe, only a box two feet square, without a cover, in the rear of the furnace, taking air directly from the cellar. Dust and dirt from the cellar are very annoying. I want to put a 12 by 18-inch grille in the front hall floor, connecting it to the furnace with some 12-inch pipes, as a return for cold air to the furnace. Is this feasible?

Answer: The idea is not only feasible, but is part of every modern hot air heating plant. However, the grille and the duct that returns the air from the hall to the furnace jacket must be of ample size; its area of each should be at least four-fifths the combined area of all of the hot air pipes leading from the furnace to the rooms. Your grille should be 18 inches square, and the duct connecting it with the furnace should have the same area.

Fireplace Heater Unit.

QUESTION: There is a fireplace heater unit made to bring in fresh air through a louvre in the outside of the chimney. Is that an advantage in a house with a cellar only under the kitchen? I am wondering if too much cold air would come in. The house is of frame construction. We are afraid the cold air intake would not give us the comfort we expect from the fireplace. Would rain be harmful to the fireplace and fire screen that rolls up like a shade?

Answer: The cold air intake in units of this type can be adjusted. Fireplace units have been in wide use in recent years as auxiliary heat units, and have proved very satisfactory. The small amount of rain or dampness that may come down the chimney will not cause any serious damage to the unit or the screen.

Cleaning a Chimney.

QUESTION: How often should a chimney be cleaned by the people who do that sort of work? Ours was cleaned two years ago. We use the oil burner all the year round.

Answer: No one can tell how often a chimney should be cleaned. If the oil burner is functioning efficiently, little or no soot will be deposited on the walls of the chimney, and there should be little or no need for cleaning. A chimney should be examined once or twice a season, and when it shows signs of heavy deposits of soot, it should be cleaned. Heavy soot may be an indication that the burner is out of adjustment. Regular inspection by a competent service man is most important for satisfaction with an oil burner.

Oil Stain on Driveway.

QUESTION: Our concrete driveway is stained with black crankcase oil. Is there an easy way to remove this eyesore?

Answer: Fresh oil stains can be taken out of concrete by sprinkling a liberal amount of dry portland cement on the stain, changing the cement as it absorbs the oil. Old stains can be taken out by scrubbing with a solution of a cup of trisodium phosphate to the quart of hot water. Then rinse with clear water. (Do not use this mixture on painted surfaces, as it will take off the paint.) More than one scrubbing may be needed.

Hand Pump Loses Prime.

QUESTION: We have a 20-foot well on our property, getting the water with a hand stroke pitcher pump. But every morning the pump has to be primed; if the pump is not used for a short time, we have to pump at least a dozen times to bring up water again. How can we correct this condition?

Answer: Loss of prime in a hand-pump is usually caused by a defective check valve, or some obstruction under this valve. Remove the valve and scrape the lower side thoroughly with a knife, being sure to remove all grit.

Cover for a Glider.

QUESTION: The rubberized cover for my porch glider lasts only about a year, which makes it pretty expensive. Can you suggest a covering which would give protection against rain and still be more practical and last longer?

Answer: A waterproof canvas cover should be more lasting. Your local awning man will be able to make it up for you. A light weight tent canvas may be suitable for your purpose.

Copper Stains.

QUESTION: What will remove copper stains from stucco?

Answer: Take them out with ammonia. One method is to dissolve sal ammoniac in water, to make a paste by adding fuller's earth, and to apply over the stains.

Whistle of Train Lures

Baby, Mother to Death

GASTONIA, N. C.—A funeral bell and not the locomotive bell that he liked so well tolled for 10-month-old Lawrence Chavis and his mother.

Lawrence, so the neighbors said, liked to watch the train roar by his home; he'd cock his head when the bell rang and imitate the whistle. He apparently decided that such a friendly thing as a train wouldn't hurt a little fellow. So while his mother was busy with the housework, he slipped away and headed for the tracks.

His mother saw him there, saw the train bearing down upon him. Screaming, she ran to his side, threw her arms about him and there they died together.

Operation Saves Babe From Appendicitis
WATKINS GLEN, N. Y.—A successful appendicitis operation upon a 16-month-old child has been performed in what Shepard Relief hospital attaches said was an "extremely rare" medical case because of the patient's age. The operation was performed upon the son of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Crout of Montour Falls.
