When Food Stamps are ordered in this manner, the Stamp Books will be mailed directly to the eligible, and not to the grocer or other person transmitting the order.

Who May Accept Food Stamps in Exchange for Food?

All retail food stores in areas where the Food Stamp Plan is in operation and who have completed a Retailer's Statement Form may accept Food Stamps. No. They may NOT be used to buy non-food items such as soap, starch, matches or other such household goods.

What Will Blue Surplus Food Stamps Buy?

What Are Surplus Foods?

The surplus foods are named in official lists which are changed from time to time and are kept posted prominently in participating food stores. These foods are carried on the store shelves and are exactly the same in quality and price whether sold for Blue Stamps or for cash. May Surplus Foods Be Bought With Orange Stamps?

Yes. Orange Stamps will purchase ANY foods for human consumption which are not to be consumed on the store premises.

May Food Stamps Be Sold or Traded?

No. Food Stamps are to be used only in the manner specified in this folder and only by the families to whom they are issued. Anyone who misuses them, whether participants, retailers, wholesalers, or others, is guilty of a felony and subject to fine and imprisonment.

MAY 24, POPPY DAY

The Legion Home is blooming with poppies as the Auxiliary women complete preparations for the annual observance of Poppy Day here, Saturday, May 24. The little red flowers of memory are being taken from the boxes in which they come from the Veteran's Hospital at Albuquerque, where they were made by disabled war veterans, and arranged for distribution on the streets on Poppy Day.

Memories of the past and hopes for the future—that is what goes into the making of a memorial poppy. The poppies are made in exact replicas of the wild poppies of France and Belgium which grew in such profusion on the World War battle fields. They are shaped from crepe paper, with wire stems. The disabled men who make them often work under great handicaps but acquire remarkable skill in producing a close resemblance to the natural flower.

"The men who make the flowers are the comrades of those in whose honor the poppies are worn." "They are the ones who were not called upon to give their lives but to give the health and strength which makes life worth while. Into the little flowers they place great memories of the past, and from this work they derive new hope for the future."

"Buy a Poppy on Poppy Day." Mary Fink, Pub. Chr.

Twelve year's proof! Short burning time with automatic shut-off of gas assures greatest operating economy. For rural use anywhere. Unlimited by location, unequaled in economy of operation, the Superfex Gas Burning Refrigerator makes modern refrigeration available anywhere, with bottled or tank gas, at a cost of only a few cents a day.

There's no machinery to get out of order. Heat does the work, and an exclusive feature of Superfex is burners that do 24 hours' work in about two hours. No continuous flame. No continuous heat. No watching or waiting—once a day the burners are lighted, and after generating sufficient refrigeration for 24 hours or longer, they go out automatically, controlled by a thermostat shut-off.

The only connection Superfex requires is the one to the gas supply. Superfex saves thousands of tiring steps every day, saves food and money, saves trips to markets, and protects health by making possible a greater variety of wholesome fresh foods.

McPherson—O'Mears
Mr. Jobie Albert McPherson and Miss Frances Bettie O'Mears of Roswell were married at the Chaves county courthouse by Mr. Pat O'Neill Justice of the Peace, at 8 o'clock last Saturday afternoon. The party west came on to Carrizozo where they spent a brief honeymoon with relatives and friends.

The bride has lived in Roswell for several years, and is one of the prettiest and most popular of the younger crowd.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Riley McPherson and lived here for a number of years. He moved to Roswell with his parents in 1937. Every one in Carrizozo knows Jobie and everybody likes him. He was assistant at the Lincoln County News office for several years. Since moving to Roswell he has been employed by the Standard Oil Station, and at present is operating the Standard Oil Station on Kentucky street there. A host of friends wish them a joyous and successful life.

Rumaldo A. Duran

Monday night between 10:30 and 11 o'clock, Mr. R. A. Duran, prominent Spanish-American citizen of Carrizozo, passed away suddenly at his home here, due to heart failure. Mr. Duran had been around town most of the time Monday and seemed in unusually good spirits. He was popular with all classes of people and had held many political offices in the county. He was county commissioner in territorial days and held that same office after New Mexico became a state. He had also served the county as sheriff, tax assessor, and county treasurer. He had remarked that he would like to be county clerk, in order to round out a complete circle, and that if his health became permanently better he would try for that office. Mr. Duran was a Republican, but at various times had helped the Democratic party.

He was born in the Mimbres Valley in Luna county on February 7, 1880. He moved with his parents to Lincoln, in Lincoln county in 1880. On July 20, 1900, he was married to Miss Honorita Mirabal, who survives him. He has one son, Teodoro, who also survives. He has lived in Carrizozo for a number of years, where he engaged in building and carpentry when not in public office. He was kind hearted, public spirited and influential.

Funeral services were held at the Catholic church here by Rev. Father Salvatore, Wednesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, followed by interment in the local cemetery.

CHEVROLET SPRING COLORCADE

Timed to be a salute to spring, Chevrolet announces a "Colorcade of Models" in dealerships the country over, introducing the liveliest array of hues ever offered by the sales leader of the auto industry. The announcement was made in Detroit this week by William E. Holler, general sales manager.

"Further brightening a line which already includes an annually wide range of colors and two-tone combinations," Mr. Holler said, "is the introduction at this time of new colors for interior trim. Our three most popular Special Deluxe models—the sport sedan and five-passenger coupe—are now available with either green or blue Canada Cloth upholstery at no additional cost.

"With models in Constitution Blue, Marine Blue, and two-tones in Nassau Gray above and Marine Blue below, a choice of the standard tan or new blue tone upholstery is offered. Likewise, tan or green upholstery is available with Ridge Green, Admiral Green, and two-tone green models.

"These new 'bright spots' in the spring picture," Mr. Holler said, "augment a line that already includes the popular new Fleetline model, trimmed in its own distinctive tan and brown broadcloth. Introduced a few weeks ago, the Fleetline has received wide acclaim as the first car in the lowest price range to afford maximum 'town car' smartness."

The new blue and green upholstery fabrics are distinctive in shade, highlighted by a harmonizing stripe that lends added richness to the material. Their inclusion in the Chevrolet line gives the color-conscious motorist unusual range in his selection of a distinctive, personalized vehicle.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Karr arrived home from Brooklyn, Iowa, Wednesday night, where they went about six weeks ago to attend the funeral of their little daughter, Jo Ann. Mr. Karr's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, who had been looking after the dairy for Mr. and Mrs. Karr, left yesterday for their home in Texas.

Members of the State Tax Commission met with the county commissioners yesterday to arrange the county budget.

A number of Odd Fellows and Rebekahs from Carrizozo are planning to attend the White Mountain Association in Alamogordo April 26th-27th.

KNOW YOUR BANK

Why we have State and National Banks

PART II

In this country there are really 49 banking systems—the national and the state systems of 48 states, though the state systems are generally referred to collectively as a single system. Each state government and the federal government through the Comptroller of the Currency has jurisdiction only over the banks it created. Often a state and national bank will be found in the same community. Outwardly there is no difference. There is little difference in operation. Difference are legal and administrative. One of the chief virtues of this dual banking system is the check and balance each one offers to prevent abuse of supervisory power in the other. This is possible because a national bank may become a state bank if it desires, and a state bank may become a national bank.

Florida Extends Nation's Editors Her Hospitality

Scribes Visit State During National Convention At Jacksonville.

By RUSSELL KAY (Released by Western Newspaper Union.) JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—

Why do people go to Florida? What do they see, what do they do, how are they entertained while there?

These and many other questions concerning the state that has become known as the "nation's playground" were answered for hundreds of editors and publishers of the nation recently, who attended the National Editorial association convention at Jacksonville and toured the state as guests of the Florida Press association.

Florida, alert to impress this distinguished group, proved an admirable host. The three day convention period in Jacksonville itself was a gala occasion, climaxed with a banquet given in their honor by John H. Perry, who also arranged for a coast to coast salute on the National Farm and Home hour, originating from his Jacksonville Journal station WJHP, conducted by the Washington news commentator H. R. Baukhage.

Convention sessions were broken with interesting side trips that one afternoon carried the group to Jacksonville Beach for a dip in the Atlantic and a fish fry, another to St. Augustine where they visited Old Fort Marion, famed Marine Studios and other points of interest and again had supper on the beach.

Tour of State. Determined that the group should really see something of Florida before leaving, Florida newspaper folks took the visiting scribes on a seven-day all-expense tour of the state.

There were shown the University of Florida at Gainesville, beautiful Silver Springs near Ocala where, from glass bottom boats, they viewed an underwater fairyland, watched the filming of scenes for the forthcoming screen version of "The Yearling," saw Ross Allen milk rattlesnakes at his Reptile Institute and visited the Seminole Indian village.

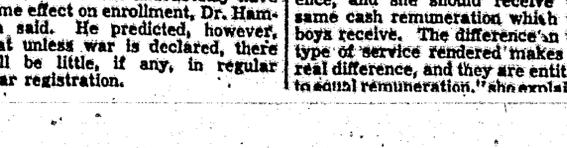

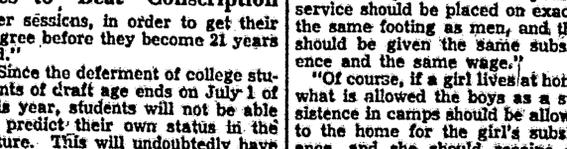

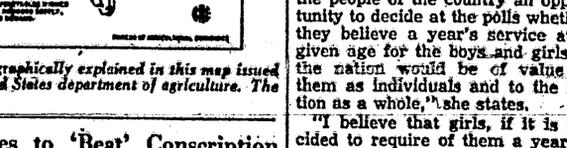

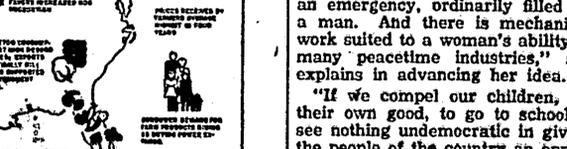

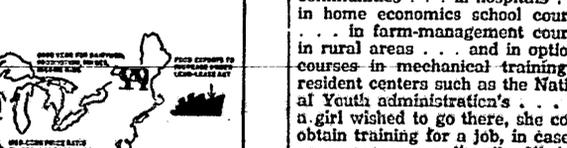

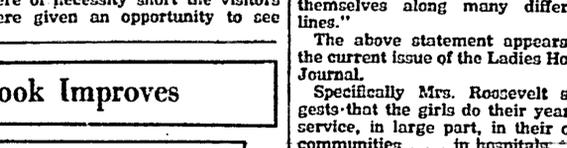

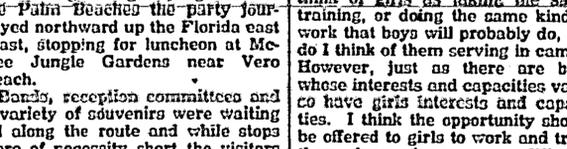

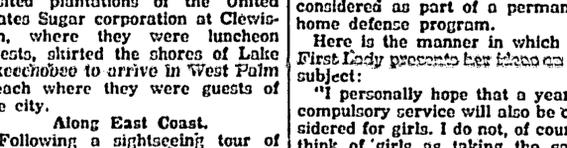

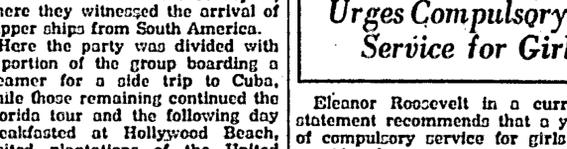

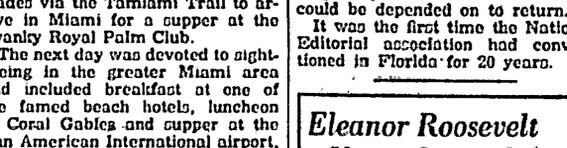

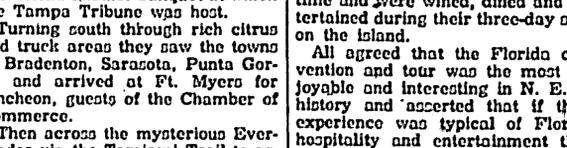

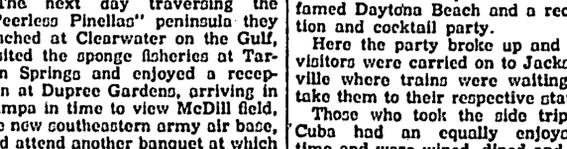

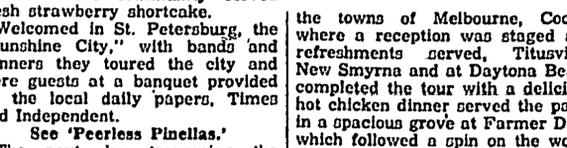

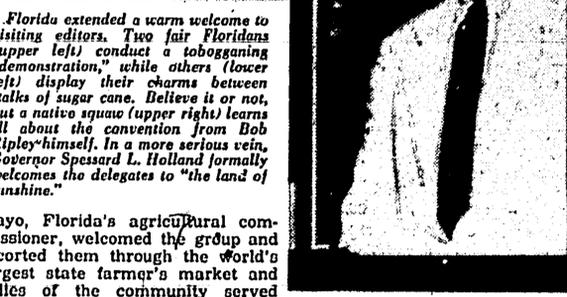

Journeying on they traversed the scenic lake and hill section with its thousands of acres of citrus groves, stopped briefly at Leesburg and San Lando Springs to arrive at Orlando, central Florida's largest city and hub of the great citrus industry.

Guests of the city, they enjoyed a reception and banquet and found excellent hotel accommodations that insured a restful night.

Visit Bok Tower. The second day carried them to the Bok Tower near Lake Wales, permitted a stop at Waverly to see the world's largest citrus packinghouse in operation and arrival at beautiful Cypress Gardens at Winter Haven, where they found a delightful luncheon awaiting them which was enjoyed in the enchanting gardens as they witnessed a special program of aquatic sports, aquaplaning and speed boat races.

At every rest stop along the route and with every meal, the scribes were loaded down with baskets of Florida's choicest oranges, grapefruit and tangerines. Citrus juice just seemed to flow without end for all who cared to drink.

Leaving Cypress Gardens the tour touched Winter Haven, Lakeland and Plant City. Here Hon. Nathan

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

It is bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year. It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy. It gives us the most pleasing feeling in the world, the feeling of being adequately prepared. When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. This advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Agricultural Outlook Improves

The agricultural situation during April is graphically explained in this map issued by the bureau of agricultural economics, United States department of agriculture. The general outlook is very favorable.

College Students Speed Studies to 'Beat' Conscription

EVANSTON, ILL.—The increasing influence of the conscription act will have widespread effects on higher education, according to Dr. Shirley A. Hamrin, director of Northwestern university's summer session and university college. "Because many students will not be able to complete a four-year college course before they become eligible for selective service," he said, "many will take three years' intensive work, including three-summer sessions, in order to get their degree before they become 21 years old." Since the deferment of college students of draft age ends on July 1 of this year, students will not be able to predict their own status in the future. This will undoubtedly have some effect on enrollment, Dr. Hamrin said. He predicted, however, that unless war is declared, there will be little, if any, in regular year registration.

Eleanor Roosevelt Urges Compulsory Service for Girls

Eleanor Roosevelt in a current statement recommends that a year of compulsory service for girls be considered as part of a permanent home defense program. Here is the manner in which the First Lady presents her ideas on the subject: "I personally hope that a year of compulsory service will also be considered for girls. I do not, of course, think of girls as taking the same training, or doing the same kind of work that boys will probably do, nor do I think of them serving in camps. However, just as there are boys whose interests and capacities vary, so have girls interests and capacities. I think the opportunity should be offered to girls to work and train themselves along many different lines. The above statement appears in the current issue of the Ladies Home Journal. Specifically Mrs. Roosevelt suggests that the girls do their year of service, in large part, in their own communities... in hospitals... in home economics school courses... in farm-management courses in rural areas... and in optional courses in mechanical training in resident centers such as the National Youth administration's... "If a girl wished to go there, she could obtain training for a job, in case of an emergency, ordinarily filled by a man. And there is mechanical work suited to a woman's ability in many peacetime industries," she explains in advancing her idea. "If we compel our children, for their own good, to go to school, I see nothing undemocratic in giving the people of the country an opportunity to decide at the polls whether they believe a year's service at a given age for the boys and girls of the nation would be of value to them as individuals and to the nation as a whole," she states. "I believe that girls, if it is decided to require of them a year of service should be placed on exactly the same footing as men, and they should be given the same subsistence and the same wage." "Of course, if a girl lives at home, what is allowed the boys as a subsistence in camps should be allowed to the home for the girl's subsistence, and she should receive the same cash remuneration which the boys receive. The difference in the type of service rendered makes no real difference, and they are entitled to equal remuneration," she explains.

The Strumpet Sea

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

SYNOPSIS

George McLaughlin was 33 years old when he sailed from America to undertake his post as a missionary in the Fiji Islands. A crime he had committed in a fit of excitement had shattered all his confidence in himself. He felt forced to avoid pretty Mary Doncaster, who boarded the ship at Honolulu. She was en route to visit her parents, who were missionaries on Glenelg Island. Mary was attracted by George's attempts to avoid her. One day George accidentally fell overboard. Mary unhesitatingly dove into the sea to rescue George, who falls in love with her. When the boat approached her home on Glenelg Island, they learned that Mary's parents had both died. George volunteered to take charge of the mission. Faced with the necessity of losing Mary if he left her now, George forced himself to ask her to be his wife. Mary accepted his clumsy proposal, and they left the ship to live in her former home on the island. The scanty dress of the natives shocked George at first, but he soon became reconciled to their customs. Mary discovered that Corkran, a sailor friend of George's, had deserted ship to live on the island. He had come there to help George and Mary if they needed him. Their peaceful life was interrupted one day when a ship stopped in the harbor in search of pearls.

More than once Mary thought of Corkran, wondering whether he could do anything they were not wise enough or strong enough to do, to check the plague but she dared not send for him, and since George no longer slept in the afternoon she could not go to Corkran.

One day at dusk when she and George were in a hut up the trail behind the house watching a woman die, Mary heard a cry far away above them. It was repeated nearer and nearer by successive voices, till she caught the words and told George:

"That's from the men watching the lagoon. They've sighted a ship."

She said, looking at the sick woman: "George, we can't help her. Let's go back to the house; Jarambo will come there."

When Jarambo came, Mary listened to him and translated for George. "The men on top of the mountain can see the ship," she said. "But it's still far away, so far that the men on the schooner in the lagoon can't see it. But it's coming this way."

"What kind of a ship, Mary? Can it be the Venturer?"

She questioned Jarambo; but he said the watchers reported this ship had only two masts. George said uneasily: "Mary, I wish we could warn Mr. Augur. You remember he told us he thought that half-breed might come back. I don't think he'd want to be caught there."

Jarambo said it would take all night for a messenger to cross the island. He could not reach the lagoon till after daylight, and by that time the people on the schooner would be able to see the approaching ship for themselves.

Nevertheless George insisted that Jarambo try to get some warning word to Augur. "I hate his being here," he said. "And we're certainly not responsible for his safety; but I wouldn't want him killed." Jarambo agreed that the men would try.

Before noon next day, they knew that their warning had failed to arrive in time. Jarambo reported that at dawn the other vessel was just outside the entrance to the lagoon.

Jarambo was talking, rapidly, and by the staccato of his words and of his gestures, George knew that he spoke of action sharp and swift. When the old man paused, and Mary turned to George again, her lips were white and trembling.

"They killed him," she said. Then, translating almost literally: "The men on that new ship fought the men on Mr. Augur's ship, with guns. Then boats from the new ship put off and came near the schooner, and there were more shots from the boats, till there were no more from the schooner. Then men from the new ship went aboard the schooner and there were no shots."

George nodded in stern understanding. "That half-breed came back," he guessed. "Augur stayed here too long. I suppose he knew the risk, but I wish we could have got word to him. Tell Jarambo his men must watch and tell us what the men on the new ship do."

She interpreted the command. Jarambo made a gesture, spoke a word or two. George looked at Mary inquiringly, and she explained: "He thinks they'll come around here to get girls. He feels that he knows what to expect from white men."

She saw her husband's lips twitch; but he only said: "Tell him to watch. If they come here, we must know beforehand."

She repeated these instructions; and she added a suggestion of her own. "Jarambo, tell the white man with the talking bird what has happened." He looked at her briefly. Corkran's presence on the island had never been mentioned between them, although he must have known she knew. He made an as sign and trotted away.

CHAPTER VI

That afternoon Jarambo reported that Augur's schooner had been worked out into the open sea and set on fire, burned, and sunk. He said there were three white men on the new ship, and one whose skin was not so white, yet who moved with the whites and spoke loudly to them as though in command. The white men came ashore and went along the beach. Jarambo thought they were hunting fresh water.

"That man whose skin is not so white," George guessed, "must be the half-breed."

They had other news later. That night after they were abed, Jarambo reported. Mary listened, and spoke in a whisper as though they might be overheard. It was so dark that she could see Jarambo only as a blurred shadow.

"They've killed the half-breed," she told George. "One of the white men shot him in the back, without a word, on the beach this afternoon."

George reflected calmly in the darkness: "I suppose after he showed them the way here he was of no further use to them." She thought, with a high and loyal pride, that there was no hint of fear in his voice. She repeated the rest of Jarambo's report.

"They have six Kanakas to dive. Ten men altogether, George, and tonight they all drank, and were drunk. Their shouts could be heard."

He said quietly: "Ten? Tell Jarambo to keep us posted. I wish I had a gun. As it is, we can't fight them, but we can keep out of their way. When the Venturer comes, or the Morning Star, we can arrange for security; for something. But till then, we'll have to skulk in the jungle like animals. It's hateful, but it's the only thing we can do."

That night Mary thought once she heard distant drums. It might have been the surf, but when she rose in the morning Jarambo was squatting on the platform outside the door; and at the sound of her step behind him he looked up, and she saw a curious red flicker in his eyes. When he spoke, his voice was hoarse and deep as she had never heard it.

George heard them and called to bid her explain to Jarambo that if and when the schooner came around the island, they would all draw back into the jungle and hide. She did so, but Jarambo said in calm negotiation:

"My people are sick. When they are sick they will not move. They will stay."

She said nothing, trying to understand what it was in Jarambo that had changed him. He squatted at her feet, scratching at one of the stones in the platform with his fingernail. He looked up at her with small, blazing eyes.

"Long time once we were men," he said, in that deep, hoarse tone. "My father met the first white men who came. He ate their livers. There was a great white man with red hair who killed many, but my father came behind him with his war club and the white man's red head broke as easily as a coconut. My father ate his right arm, and was always strong afterward." He scratched industriously at the stone. "When a white man is not looking, his head can be cracked!"

There was a sort of chant in his tones, like the rhythm of a rising madness. She said gently, to quiet him: "My father was a white man, Jarambo."

His eyes touched hers. "He was our friend. I was at his side always. You and your man are my people." His eyes dropped again. "But your man does not know our people. They will not go."

She told George, when he came out to join them, what Jarambo said about the probable attitude of the Islanders. George insisted: "They must, Mary. If we can't argue them into it, we'll drive them. Jarambo will do what I say. Tell him to talk to them now and explain what they must do." And that day and the next, he himself led Jarambo to the huts up the trail and along the shores, and he and Mary stood by while Jarambo spoke to the Islanders, Mary prompting the old man, who obediently repeated what he was told to say George by his own activities was reassured. "They'll be all right when the time comes," he insisted. "Jarambo is explaining it all to them. It's the only sensible thing to do."

But the second day, at noon, word came down the mountain that the schooner was working her way around the island; and an hour later, when he had labored with them fruitlessly, even George was convinced that the people would not go.

He accepted the situation steadily enough. "They won't move," he said. "Whips wouldn't drive them. But Mary, you go. I can't let these men see you."

She asked what he intended; and he said: "I'll stay and meet them." "Then I ought to be with you."

He shook his head. "I'll be all right alone," he insisted. "They have no reason to hurt me, and I'm not afraid of them. But with you here, I'd be afraid what they might do to you; and you would be a reason for them to—kill me, Mary. I want you to go."

She was deeply reluctant to leave him. She remembered Corkran; and she thought, with a guilty sense of disloyalty, that the sailor and his talking bird might have more influence with the Islanders than George, might persuade them to hide as George desired. Corkran must be near at hand, ready to do what he could if he were needed. The thought gave her new confidence. She said: "All right, George; I'll do whatever you say. I'll hide if you want me to, but I'm not afraid to stay with you. I want to stay here if it will help."

"If I know you're safe, I'll be all right," he told her. "You can help me most by going into the hills."

So Mary consented; and since George thought the schooner might come into the bay tonight, he wished her to go at once. Jarambo put her into the care of two young men; and they took her far up one of the trails that climbed steeply among the peaks, to the house of an old man whom her father had called Isaloh, who was now called Itau, who lived like a hermit high above the bay.

When they came to his house the young men explained why Mary was there. Itau made sounds of assent; and he led the way to a bold promontory from which they could see the schooner south of the Island, moving slowly on light air.

At sunset she was still far away. Mary and the old man and the two young men her guardians slept that night on a great bed of heaped dry grass, with a coconut log polished by long usage to serve as pillow for them all. The three men slept without sound, but she lay long awake thinking of George. George, she understood well enough, was always afraid; yet he never yielded to that fear, nor admitted it, except that he had now admitted that he was afraid for her sake. When she slept at last her dreams were troubled; and when she woke, it was with a leap of her heart as though some outcry had alarmed her.

When they had eaten, dipping together into the gourd, Itau led them again to the outlook to watch the schooner work her way into the roads and drop anchor there. No canoes went off to meet her; and Mary thought, happy in his victory: "George would not let them go."

Hours later they brought George to her, slung in a hammock of vines between two poles, his eyes closed, his lips white. He was unconscious, but he was alive.

Mary, when she saw that George was still alive, wept with grief because he was hurt, but with gladness too, because now she could tend him and keep him here secure. Four young men had brought him. They laid him down, and old Itau drew near.

Mary saw that a bullet had entered George's left breast near the side, coming out under his arm, tearing the thin muscles of his arm as it emerged. When the hurts were exposed, Itau leaned closer and touched the wound of entrance firmly. His fingers like claws felt along the ill-fleshed ribs to the spot where the bullet had emerged; and then the old man clicked his tongue, and stood up and hobbled away.

George lay limp and still, his eyes closed, his head on one side without strength in his neck, his hands limp on the mat upon which they had laid him.

Old Itau returned, mumbling to himself, with leaves fresh plucked, and a bulbous fruit. He squeezed juice out of the fruit upon the wound of entrance.

Itau bade the young men turn the hurt man on his side while he applied the stinging juice to the wounds below the shoulder and on the arm. Then he bound leaves over these wounds with strips of torn petticoat which Mary offered him. When George was bandaged, Itau spoke to the young men. Within the hour George had been carried deep into the forest; a shelter had been reared for him of poles bound together with vines and thatched with palm and breadfruit leaves, and he and Mary were hidden safe away.

Mary sat beside George, Itau squatting a little way off, mumbling to himself.

Children's Wardrobe Problems Made Simple by Home Sewing

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

JACK'S beanstalk of fairy tale days has nothing on little girls when it comes to growing rapidly. They seem to change from day to day, once they pass the doll-like stage of babyhood. It's a problem every mother has to face, but it is surprising how simple a problem it becomes if you can sew. The many needed changes don't upset the most rigid budget if wardrobes are planned carefully.

In the first place cotton fabrics are not only practical and inexpensive but smart as well. This spring, sand-boxes and dancing school alike will see cotton frocks on all of Fortune's favorite likes. There are innumerable enchanting fabrics that cost so little you can make a six-year-old daughter a complete wardrobe of spring frocks for five or six dollars.

It's smart this season, too, to make children's clothes from the same basic pattern, varying materials and trimmings. This is a blessing for a busy mother. You'll find most children's patterns are so simple this season that you can complete a whole frock in a couple of hours' time.

The princess silhouette, as graceful and becoming to almost every child as its name implies, is particularly favored right now. For playtime, make it of sturdy denim or striped seersucker. Percale and gingham, crisp and trim, are favorites for school, likewise pique, which is simply ideal for practical wear. You can get pique in the new pastels as well as in white. As shown in the illustration, the little girl standing has on a winsome frock made princess style. To add to its charm, it has a cunning zippered front fastening. Mothers find that these gay colored zippers prove a constant source of delight to youngsters.

When party time calls something more dainty, novelty organdy or dotted swiss would be a good choice, and as for dimity, it is more of a favorite than ever. An Alice-in-Wonderland dimity frock is the pride and the joy of the little girl seated in the picture. In size four, this little dress costs but a few cents over a dollar to make, including organdy frills, tiny pearl buttons, pattern and thread. The same pattern in gingham makes a cunning play frock.

A most commendable thing about the frilled organdy panel that adds such a dainty touch to this gown is that it is made detachable so that the frills may be laundered separately. One of the delights of princess frocks is that they also are easy to launder. No gathers, no plaits! Be sure you use bolina thread when you are sewing, so that it won't run or fade. Also, if you want to leave an extra two inches in the hem to take care of rapidly growing legs, bolina thread will leave no mark when the hems are changed.

The pinafore with its apron and bib, so charming for little girls, has been revived, and a very sensible fashion it is. A change-about of guimpes and skirts is a flexible wardrobe note to be remembered when active playtime makes many changes necessary. You can often use last year's outgrown dresses to make the apron and pinafore bib. Use the extra fabric of the sleeves for little ruffles over the shoulders or for a big pocket on the skirt to hold a favorite toy.

A good time to teach youngsters to sew is when you are making their clothes. With a little supervision, leftover pieces of material can be fashioned into doll clothes just like mother's. You can't start them too young, and doll clothes are by far the happiest medium of approach. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Twin Hankies

Striking accessory notes are a fashion "must" this season. Your quest for novelty and chic should lead you to the handkerchief counter where you will be rewarded with a real "find" in the way of plaid hankies. The "trick" is to wear these plaids in pairs, as here shown. You may choose these hankies in little pin checks or big bold plaids, with background colors that match or blend with the latest colors. These hankies never fail to add that dash of spice to the always smart, simple suit.

Lace Redingotes

A pretty fashion to be worn in late spring and throughout summer is the long redingote made of sturdy lace in colors, and in black or white. It is perfectly stunning when worn as a summer wrap.

Pleats, Longer Jackets

Mark Newest Spring Suits

Precision in tailoring marks spring suits for 1941. Fashion has determined that m'lady will wear pleats in the suit skirt—knife, box or twin box pleats in back or front, but plain at the side. The fashionable length for jackets is 24 inches or wrist length. Other details to keep in mind if buying or making a suit are single link closing, neatly squared shoulders padded flush with the arm, and hip flap pockets.

Take your pick of the so-called "open shirt" revers, or the elongated type that creates the impression of a longer waist. The fancy feminine suit has a shorter jacket with a definitely nipped-in waist and easy fullness in the skirt. Knife pleating, grouped pleats, new soft yokes, double flap pockets and chunky gold buttons are characteristics.

Chenille Dots in Veils

Latest Addition to Hats

Ask at the veiling counter to see the new confetti veils. Chenille dots that look like huge snowflakes are closely scattered all over the fragile backgrounds. Cover your hat with this veil in billowy masses and you will achieve a true "spring" look.

All veils have a most fetching way about them this season. Their sole mission is to flatter and to lend allure. Little flower hats have as their main keynote whimsical colorful veils. Wide brims, are also flatteringly veiled this season.

Dolman Sleeves

A coat destined to be a highlight in fashion is the new shirtwaist type with dolman sleeves. Its utter simplicity of cut and styling is its charm.

AROUND THE HOUSE

To keep down the cost of operating a mechanical refrigerator it is important to watch the frost on the cooling unit and defrost as often as it is necessary.

When running rods through your curtains put a thimble on the end of the rod. It will run through more easily.

To prevent metal salt-shaker tops from corroding, cover the inside of the tops with paraffin.

Never scrape kitchen utensils with a knife. Use a stiff brush dipped in scouring powder to remove stains and burns.

Nut meats may be removed from the shell without breaking the kernel if hot water is poured over the nuts and allowed to remain through the night.

For best results in painting a new brick wall, use a paint made with a Portland cement base. It comes in powder form and is mixed with water.

If short of eggs when making scrambled eggs for the gang, add a tablespoon of fine bread or cracker crumbs for each egg short—up to half eggs and half crumbs.

INDIGESTION

may affect the Heart! Gas trapped in the stomach or gut may act like a hair-trigger on the heart. At the first sign of distress smart men and women depend on Bell's Peppermint Cure to get gas free. No laxative but made of the finest-acting medicine known for safe relief. If the "stomach" doesn't prove itself a better, return bottle to us and receive $10.00! Money back, 100%.

SEE AMERICA
from border to border and coast to coast

$90 ROUND TRIP

Thousands of travelers will take time out this year to know America better. Thanks to the low "Grand Circle Tour" fares, you can see America from border to border and coast to coast for only $90 round trip in chair cars and coaches, or $135 round trip in standard Pullmans (plus $45 for a Pullman lower all the way, or $34.50 for an upper).

You can travel as many as 9,000 miles, and by going on one of Southern Pacific's Four Scenic Routes and returning on a different S. P. route, you'll see twice as much as you would going and returning the same way. For example, take an S. P. train to Los Angeles, continue north to San Francisco on the streamlined Daylight, then go to Chicago via the direct Overland Route—over the High Sierra, across Great Salt Lake and through the Rockies. Continue on to New York—direct or via Montreal. Add Boston and Portland, Maine, for no additional rail or Pullman fare.

Visit Washington D. C. Then return to your hometown on any of several routes, each of which shows you another part of the United States.

The trip described above is just one example of how you can see twice as much on a $90 or $135 ticket. Ask your nearest S. P. Agent about other combinations.

You have a wide choice of fine, fast Southern Pacific trains, ranging from de luxe Pullman limiteds to friendly economy trains featuring three good meals for $1.25 a day (breakfast 35c, luncheon 40c, dinner 50c).

No Clothespin on this Car's Nose!

Buick SPECIAL 6-passenger Sedan, $1006. White sidewall tires extra!

WOULDN'T a sprinter or a long-distance runner look silly trying to race with a clothespin firmly clamped on his nose!

Yet, in a sense, something fairly close to that happens in nearly every car that lacks Buick's sensational Compound Carburetion.

For your engine has to breathe in huge quantities of air to be mixed with gasoline before it is burned in the cylinders.

But single-carburetor fuel supply systems can handle only a given volume of air.

To that extent, then, an ordinary engine has a clothespin on its nose—a limitation on air supply for big power operation.

Optional equipment on the Buick SPECIAL, standard on all other models.

We remove that clothespin very simply —by having two carburetors; one that handles all casual driving smoothly and efficiently, another to jump in with more air and more fuel when you call for extra power by stepping on the gas treadle!

Simple? Very simple indeed.

And simply marvelous in the extra FIREBALL wallop it gives you and in the gas savings you get—as much as 10% to 15% over previous Buicks with the same-size engines.

Maybe you'd better

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK. — Quintilian's line, "He abounds in sweet faults," was meant for James F. Dewey. The quite uniformly successful federal labor Share a Failing, conciliator Promote Harmony, seems to have learned that people are more apt to be brought together by pooling their little redeeming virtues than by matching virtues. Share a human weakness with a man and he's apt to begin to feel the stir of fellow-feeling. That seems to be the idea, although there is no evidence that all this is pre-meditated on Mr. Dewey's part. Here's how he "joins" 'em:

He doesn't mind his calories, or worry about his waistline.

He likes to sleep late.

He smokes cigars so strong they make an Erie freight engine smell like an atomizer.

He isn't systematic. Taking over as a conciliator, perhaps addressing a big jittery meeting, he excavates various bulging pockets and discovers he has forgotten his credentials. Then he forgets about all that, opens with a wide nonpartisan smile, delivers his speech and makes them like it.

He dislikes exercise, yet he is a rough-and-ready hooper who will dance on the slightest provocation—until his tongue hangs out.

He wears his hair loosely and casually.

All this and more of the same, sets Mr. Dewey sharply apart from the slick and impeccable conformist who is always putting other people in the doghouse and thereby getting nowhere as a conciliator. Sen. James J. ("Puddler Jim") Davis set him up as a mediator, in the department of labor, after he had done some strikingly effective conciliating in Pennsylvania. He was a school teacher, auditor for a coal company and a telegraph operator. At the old home place at Chester, Pa., he spends a lot of time patching things up and making them work. Amateur tinkering always denotes the true pragmatist at work. Maybe that's what all this strike trouble needs.

AMONG those ready to affirm that a prophet is not without honor save in his own country, Leon M. Henderson, director of price stabilization for the National Defense Commission, may not be included. Once he was a farm boy in Millville, N. J., and his hometown folks have just honored him with a banquet and other proceedings, establishing him as "No. 1 Citizen" of the village in which he was born 40 years ago. Joined with the citizenry were not a few government officials coming from Washington to approve and acclaim the excellence of Millville's choice.

Here is a village Hamden, "innocent of his country's blood," who didn't stay in a village, one who has been in the thick of things, up to his elbow as some one recently said of him, in all sorts of affairs best known by alphabetical designations, as NRA, WPA, TNEC, SEC, NDAC, etc.

One of the strong men in the national defense picture—he is the only New Dealer on the defense commission of seven members and its only economist—they called him the nation's outstanding crystal gazer when he predicted the business boom of 1936 and its drop later, in 1937. Ironically smiling, Henderson has subscribed to the appellation.

His induction into government service came about in rather a curious way. In 1934, as director of the remedial loan division of the Russell Sage foundation, he began sniping at the NRA, and his shots were so accurately aimed as to arouse, not the anger, but the admiration of Gen. Hugh Johnson who grabbed him as a consumer advisor. Very soon thereafter he became director of research and planning, and when a Supreme court broadside sank the NRA he was appointed secretary of the senate committee on manufactures.

There he was when the 1936 national presidential campaign arrived. He was withdrawn and made economist for the Democratic national committee. It is said of him that the source of information enabling Jim Farley to predict so shrewdly the outcome of this election was Leon Henderson.

Then Henderson became economic counselor to the WPA and subsequently held various important offices until the creation of the advisory commission to the National Council on Defense. His hobbies—smoking cigars and early rising.

Back Yard Gardening

It needs to be said in the beginning that a garden in the back yard is not grown purely for utilitarian purposes; this observation, we submit, disposes of those indolent folk who say that "the back yard garden doesn't pay."

The desire to plant seeds, to nurture them, to watch their growth and to take joy in their final harvest is as old as man's life on this globe. Making a garden is one way to become a co-creator with that great Force which is behind all forces. It is also a way to acquire some of the exercise and a quantity of the vitamin D which the sedentary worker is very certain to lack. So—this year, let's make a garden.

LOCATING THE GARDEN

If your own particular back yard is very heavily shaded, it will be useless to try to transform it into a productive garden, since plants must have sun, and they do not thrive where great tree roots drink up all of the available moisture. If your back yard is drained by tree roots and shadowed by tree branches you will have to borrow your neighbor's yard, or a convenient vacant lot for your gardening operations. Often a large vacant space—perhaps two or three lots adjoining, may be turned into a community plot.

Supposing, however, that your own yard is suited to gardening operations, you will first clear it of all litter and rubbish in preparation for plowing or spading. Turn under a quantity of barn-yard manure, if such is available. If your plot is of the average size of 30 by 60 feet, a ton of stable manure can be spaded into it each year, with excellent results. Poultry and pigeon manures are also good fertilizers but must be used with discretion since they are very strong. They should be well mixed with the soil so that no lumps of the manure will come in contact with the seeds.

TOOLS YOU WILL NEED

It is not necessary to buy expensive tools for working the small garden. All that are really needed are a spade or spading fork, a steel rake, and a line with two stakes. A trowel or dibber is useful but not indispensable.

STARTING EARLY PLANTS

Half the fun of gardening is in growing your own seedlings and transplanting them. Almost all garden crops may be started indoors by planting the seed in shallow boxes of carefully-prepared soil, watering carefully, and keeping in a sunny window. When the seedlings begin to grow it will be necessary to turn the box every day to secure an even exposure to the sun. When the plants acquire their second pair of leaves they are ready to transplant, either to the garden, if the season is sufficiently advanced, or to larger containers if danger of frost still exists.

WHEN TO TRANSPLANT

The period of latest killing frost can not be set specifically but varies several days in any given locality. The hardest plants should therefore be planted first—cabbage, kale, onion sets, peas, spinach and radishes. These may be followed at about the date of the last killing frost, with beets, chard, carrots, lettuce, cauliflower and sweet corn. At ten days to two weeks after the date of usual occurrence of killing frost, beans, parsnips, salsify, melons, cucumbers, and tomatoes may be planted. Plants that love the heat—peppers, squashes, and the like—should not be put out until the ground has been thoroughly warmed by the sun, that is, two to four weeks after the last killing frost. Of certain crops such as beans, radishes, peas, sweet corn and the like, it is well to make successive plantings to insure a continuous supply during the summer.

GENERAL CARE OF GARDEN

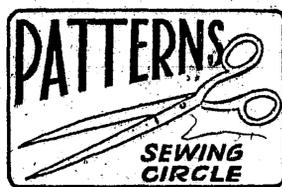

Every garden requires at least a little daily attention and will well repay such care. Since, therefore, much of the benefit of the garden is lost if its care becomes a burden, it is wise not to plant too large a plot. The soil should be frequently stirred to stimulate growth and to control weeds. Particularly after a rain the soil should be loosened—as soon as the ground is dry enough to work—to let in the air.

In dry weather, water thoroughly once a week, soaking the soil deeply, then loosening it by cultivation as soon as it is dry enough to work.

For extensive information concerning the making of back yard gardens, write the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., enclosing five cents and asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 1044.

SUPPORT FOR TRANSPLANTED TREES

After a tree has been transplanted it should be provided with some support to prevent its being swayed by the wind. For a medium-sized or small tree, it is a good plan to drive a heavy stake into the ground a few inches from the tree to which, near the top, a piece of firm, soft binding material—leather, old rubber hose or soft rope—is attached. This material should then be passed around the tree and back to the stake in the form of a figure eight.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disease are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Dr. Doan's Pills, Doan's have been winning world-wide fame for more than forty years. They have a nationwide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

FIRST AID AILING HOUSE
by Roger B. Whitman

Types of Heat.

QUESTION: Can you advise me as to the heating of a house that I plan to build? Is steam heat more efficient than gas or oil-fired air-conditioned heat? Can you tell me about how much more expensive gas is to operate than fuel oil? Is the maintenance cost about the same on each? Which system would you advise?

Answer: The efficiency of a heating system is not gauged by the type of heat, but by the quality and design of the equipment that is installed. Steam or air conditioned heat will keep the house warm, if the heating plant is sufficiently large. The air filtering and humidifying features in air conditioning systems are favored by many home owners. These features are desirable, providing, of course, the system is installed by a reliable firm having a thorough knowledge of this type of heating. Comparative costs depend entirely upon local gas rates and fuel oil costs. Your local gas company and oil burner man can help you on this better than I can. The maintenance cost may be slightly higher on oil fired units.

Cracked Plaster.

Question: The walls of my house are of unfinished plaster, and were recently decorated with casein paint. There is one particularly bad crack in the wall. How can it be repaired?

Answer: The crack is probably from settlement, and may grow worse should settlement continue. If so, you will be wanting time and material to do any patching until settlement is over. If you feel sure that the crack has reached its limit, you can repair it with patching plaster, to be had at a hardware store. Widen the narrow part of the crack with a knife to admit the patch, and for the entire length of the crack, make it wider at the lath than it is on the surface, so that in hardening, the patch will lock itself into place. Directions for using patching plaster are on the label of the box.

Cleaning Wood Floors.

Question: What can I apply to hardwood floors to remove marks, such as scratches and spots, as well as several layers of wax? The floors are almost new, and I do not want to have them scraped.

Answer: To remove scratches from shellacked floors, wipe with turpentine. Or, small scratches can be treated with a little denatured alcohol, put in with a soft camel's hair brush, and deep scratches with a little thin shellac. Varnished floors should be treated with varnish. You can clean the floors by wiping with liquid floor wax and plenty of clean cloths. Polish by applying good paste floor wax in thin coats, rubbing well. Floors that are badly scratched should be scraped, preferably with an electric sanding machine.

Papering Rough Walls.

Question: The walls throughout my house are textured plaster. Can this be smoothed to make a good surface for wallpaper?

Answer: Go over the walls with sandpaper wrapped around a block of wood to take down the highest points of the texturing. Then, using the same kind of plastic paint, that was originally used for the walls, fill the remaining roughnesses, using a brush or trowel. Final smoothing of the wall can be done with a trowel, or with a rubber squeegee, such as is used for washing plate glass windows.

Cleaning Silver.

Question: Salted nuts were left in two silver dishes, and have made black spots that no amount of polishing will remove. How can I clean them?

Answer: When silver has been spotted in that way, the only sure method of cleaning is to have the job done by a silversmith. Salt should not be allowed to remain in contact with silver.

Squeaky Spring.

Question: A bedspring has become loose, and every twist of the bed's occupant causes the spring to squeak. Can this be remedied?

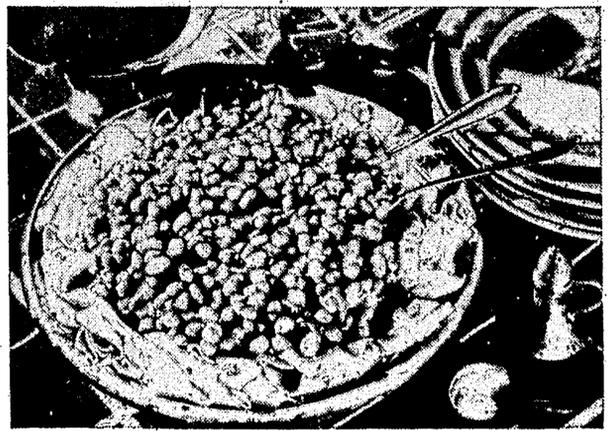

Answer: Using a small camel's hair brush, try the effect of putting a little oil at every point where two or more pieces of metal come together. If this does not cure the trouble, the best answer is to get a new spring.

Putty.

Question: I have been making my own putty with white lead, whiting, and linseed oil. My hardware man says that I should use only whiting and linseed oil; no lead. Which mixture is better?

Answer: Ordinary putty contains no lead. The addition of about one-fifth as much white lead gives the putty greater hardness and permanence.

BAKED BEANS—AN AMERICAN TRADITION!
(See Recipe Below)

CHURCH SUPPER THOUGHTS

Cock a weather eye at the next social event on your list: 'Tis a church supper, you say? Mmmmm... one of those delightful affairs that simply wouldn't be missed! I know... one of my fondest memories is the home town church supper, always famous for its food, especially Parker House rolls and baked beans.

Perhaps you are one who thinks of beans as a plain or ordinary dish and, for that reason, hesitate to serve them at a dress-up affair. If you are, I think I can help you change your mind, for properly prepared baked beans are a delight which deserve a place in the top flight of fine cooking.

If you are rushed for time and can't bake your own beans, there are always the canned varieties at your grocer's. Their meal-in-a-minute possibilities shouldn't be overlooked. And then, too, they're a "feast for the least!"

To be really different, you may want to experiment with seasonings until you develop an individual flavor in the canned product. It's amazing the variety of "taste treats" you can achieve.

One of the flavors so many like in canned beans is curry. While the beans are heating slowly, a teaspoon of curry powder is sifted over the top and mixed gently through the beans. When thoroughly heated, a piece of butter is added and when that is absorbed, the beans are ready to serve.

An entirely different flavor is developed by adding a tablespoon of vinegar and several tablespoons of brown sugar to two cups of beans while heating thoroughly. Likewise, the piece of butter is added just before serving.

An adaptation of this latter "taste treat" is featured in this week's church supper menu suggestions. Here it is:

- *Deviled Beans in Buttered Noodles. (See Picture at Top of Column)
- 2 No. 10 cans beans or 10 No. 2 cans 8 ounces of fat
- 1 pound chopped onions
- 2 14-ounce bottles catsup
- 3/4 pound brown sugar
- 8 ounces horseradish
- 1 ounce salt
- 1/2 teaspoon pepper

Heat the fat. Add onion and cook until slightly browned. Add remaining ingredients and heat thoroughly. Serve in a bed of buttered noodles. Makes 50 servings.

Because cooking in quantities does present problems, it's best to plan a menu of foods that can be easily prepared and served. Guess we all

LYNN SAYS:

When planning meals for large numbers...

DO try to determine as nearly as possible the number of people to be served, as it is more economical to have no leftovers... this is, of course, if only one meal is to be served.

DO have a well-balanced menu. Too much variety will result in your guests heaping their plates with a conglomeration of food... they'll want to taste everything!

DO choose foods that won't spoil if they must stand for 15 minutes or even longer.

DO have committees who are responsible for collecting the linen, china and silverware, setting the table, preparing the different parts of the menu and waiting on the table.

DON'T forget to appoint a clean-up squad.

DON'T attempt to increase an ordinary recipe more than once. Proportions of ingredients change as recipes become large, and it's no simple matter for an amateur to guess at them. Unless you have recipes designed to serve large numbers, it's safer to make quick breads, cakes and cookies, according to standard family size recipes.

THIS WEEK'S MENU

- Supper for Fifty
- *Deviled Beans in Buttered Noodles
- *Perfection Salad
- Hot Rolls or Boston Brown Bread
- *Fruit Whip
- Coffee Tea Milk
- *Recipes Given.

agree on that. So, with this in mind, here are recipes that will complement your very important main dish:

Perfection Salad.
Soak 10 tablespoons of gelatin (five envelopes) in 2 1/2 cups cold water for five minutes. Add 2 1/2 cups mild vinegar, 10 tablespoons lemon juice, 10 cups boiling water, 2 1/2 cups sugar, and five teaspoons salt. Stir until dissolved and set in a cool place. When mixture begins to stiffen, add five cups finely shredded cabbage, five cups diced celery, 10 finely chopped pimientos and 30 small sweet pickles, chopped fine. Pour mixture into shallow pans that have been rinsed with cold water. When "set," cut into squares and place each square in a lettuce cup and top with mayonnaise. You will need 5 or 6 large heads of lettuce for 50 servings.

Fruit Whip.
1 quart fruit pulp
1 quart sugar
4 egg whites
1/2 cup lemon juice
Put fruit pulp, sugar and unbeaten egg whites into a mixing bowl and beat until stiff. Chill. Serves 50. (In this quantity, dessert whips should be made with a power beater or mixing machine.)

When feeding a crowd, the marketing problem may present difficulties. You will need six dozen rolls (depending on the size) to serve 50. As to beverages, put these amounts on your list: three pounds of coffee, 1/2 pound of tea or three gallons of milk—each of these amounts will serve 50.

Supper over, what next? Entertainment, of course. Half the success of a party lies in the "after-dinner" program.

And why not a radio party? Arrange the stage to represent a broadcasting studio... with microphones, clocks and other radio paraphernalia.

The tables where guests are seated should represent the radio stations of the American Network... a table for each state of the Union. Each one should be marked by its call letters (MINN for Minnesota, MASS for Massachusetts, etc.)... and each one appropriately decorated—miniature orange grove for California, wheat field for North Dakota, maple sugar trees for Vermont, a large pot of baked beans for Massachusetts, apple orchard for Oregon, dairy scene for Wisconsin, plantation scene for Virginia, etc.

Guests are seated at the table representing their birthplace. (This will work wonders in mixing up your crowd.)

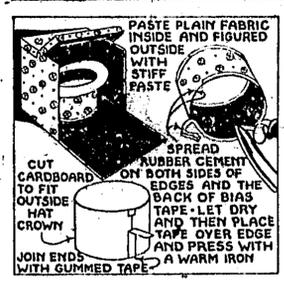

If each group is small, several states may be combined into one station, such as Station NEG (New England group), or Station NWG (Northwest group).

A master of ceremonies, dressed to represent Uncle Sam, invites all stations to tune in for the "coast-to-coast" broadcast. The program may be as varied as the talent available. A full hour show, consisting of music by instrumentalists or an orchestra... singing by a quartet or soloists... a dramatic sketch... etc.

A novel addition to your program would be a Professor Quiz type. Ask for volunteers to answer the questions submitted by the audience. A prize can be offered for the best answers.

Commercials and time signals should be interspersed throughout the program. These may be announcements of forthcoming meetings, services, etc. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

FEMININE headgear usually holds its shape best if it rests right side up on a stand that fits inside the crown, but this is not true of a man's hat. Its dashing lines may be preserved by placing it upside down in a holder. All of which is worth remembering when you are fixing up "his" closet or even when you are generously preparing to share a small corner of your own.

room and blue cotton print and lined with blue chambray. The lid and the front of the box are hinged with adhesive tape before the covering is pasted on with stiff paste. The stand is made of cardboard, as shown in the sketch, and is covered to match the box. The maroon bias tape edging of the stand is cemented in place in a way that you may find useful in making many other things. The secret is in spreading the cement evenly on both surfaces, letting it dry, and then vulcanizing the two together with the heat of the pressing iron.

NOTE: Why not put away Winter things all nicely mended? It will be grand to get them out in perfect order next Fall. Mrs. Spears' Book 2 shows you how to do the most professional kinds of mending, as well as every day household mending. There is a simple, quickly made zipper bag for five garments in SEWING Book 6. TIPS to Gardeners
TRIM FLOWER GARDEN

THERE is much value in keeping the flower garden trimmed. Wise gardeners pick bouquets of favorite annuals like Marigold, Zinnia, Petunia, Sweet Peas and Snapdragon with systematic regularity, for the picking promotes continued blooming.

Periodic trimming is not best for such small, low-growing edging flowers as Alyssum. A complete cutting, however, will benefit this type of plant. This treatment may be applied to Ageratum, Linaria, Lobelia, and Nemesis as well as Alyssum.

Pinus, Cynoglossum, and Dwarf Bedding Runt Resistant Snapdragon are grown both for cutting and for garden beauty, but they too will profit by a thoroughgoing "haircut" such as that prescribed for the smaller, edging favorites.

It is advisable to pick the flowers of certain popular perennials when they are in their prime, to prevent their running to seed, and to promote the production of a second crop of blossoms in a single season. Delphinium, Sweet William, Coreopsis, Perennial Dianthus, and Pyrethrum should be handled in this manner.

British Coastline

Together with Scotland, Wales, and North Ireland, England has a varied shoreline of more than 5,000 miles to watch against threatened invasion. Near-by independent Eire, across the Irish channel, with approximately 1,000 of additional miles of coastline, is also a big worry to Britons, although Eire has declared that its defense will be managed without direct British military aid.

FOOD SUPPLIES

With urban housewives throughout the United States complaining about advancing food prices, and American agriculture faced with surplus commodities, there is one large part of the population that is going about its business of creating an adequate reserve supply of food for home consumption, according to Miss Beavers, home management supervisor for the Farm Security Administration in Lincoln county.

"Canned goods in the cellar are one surplus that's not harmful", Miss Beavers said. "FSA borrowers are aiming only at insuring good nutrition for their families the year-round by giving extra emphasis to their gardens. Canning and storing garden produce in a common practice among thrifty homemakers," she continued, "and more FSA-borrower farmers in this county are now planning bigger gardens than ever before."

Miss Beavers called attention to the fact that many farmsteads have not been producing enough garden stuff to keep their families healthy during the winter months.

"When farm families come to the FSA for financial assistance they are encouraged to produce as much as possible of their living at home," Miss Beavers said, "and big, diversified gardens are to be found on most farms operated by families working with this federal agency."

Good nutrition, it was explained requires 800 pounds of vegetables for an adult a year.

"The question, 'Will our garden furnish this much for every member of the family' is an important one to FSA borrowers," Miss Beavers continued.
