Victory Book Day

April 17th

New York City, April 11, 1942.

Editor Lincoln Co. News, Carrizozo, N. Mex.

Dear Mrs. Smith:

In his press conference on Tuesday President Roosevelt will name Friday, April 17th as Victory Book Day. The President, at this time, will ask Americans everywhere to contribute as many good books as they can spare to the men in the armed forces, the soldiers, sailors, and marines at home and overseas who, while fighting and training to fight, still have time to read, and appreciate a good book.

We are eager to enlist your help on that special day the following way -- to stimulate the readers of your newspaper to give without stint, and to interest local milk companies, grocery stores, bakeries, etc. to help collect the books.

The local depots in all cases are the local libraries, and in case you wish any further information, the librarian nearest you can help you. Your invaluable support will be appreciated many times over by our fighting men in all parts of the world who, in lonely hours greet a good book as a precious friend.

Sincerely,

John M. Connor, Director, Victory Book Campaign.

Mrs. E. M. Montfort entered the Turner hospital last Sunday suffering from a severe case of bronchitis.

Miss Cora Crews of Oscura was a business visitor here last Tuesday.

CARRIZOZO AUTO CO. MOVES TO NEW LOCATION

The Carrizozo Auto Co. are moving into their building on highway 54, corner of Railroad Ave. and Main St., or best known to the old timers as the Old Livery Stable, where they expect to continue with Ford service and parts and sale of Ford tractors and implements.

It is with deep regret that we vacate the old Ford location which has been there so long that it has almost become a Carrizozo landmark, but we hope that the time will not be far distant when we can again continue business in a normal way.

Defense Projects In New Mexico

Albuquerque, April 16. [Special] Defense projects in New Mexico sent employment soaring during March, figures released by the United States Employment Service revealed today.

A total of 2,571 placements were made during March as compared with 1,166 in February of this year and 1,151 in March of 1941, J. C. Mitchell, acting director for the United States Employment Service in New Mexico declared in releasing the figures.

Chavez county led all other counties in the state with a total of 1,209 placements, most of which have been on the air base project at Roswell, Mr. Mitchell said. Actual work on other projects in the state within the near future is expected to bring about a further increase in employment during the next few months, Mr. Mitchell said.

The Carrizozo Woman's Club will sponsor an Art Tea Saturday, May 2 from 8:00 to 5:00 p. m. at the Community Center in Carrizozo. The program will consist of an exhibit of paintings by Mr. Bob White, and miscellaneous musical numbers. All women in Lincoln County are invited to attend the tea.

Mr. White is becoming quite a celebrity in his own state. He painted the murals at Eastern New Mexico College in Portales. He also exhibited some paintings at the Eastern New Mexico State fair in Roswell where he won some prizes. He has been teaching art in the local grade school this year, where his pupils have made much progress.

Encouraging Outlook

Santa Fe, New Mexico, April 15, 1942. State Democratic chairman Guy Shepard stated he remains unshaken in his confidence that New Mexico will stay in the Democratic column in November.

"There is no indication of anything to the contrary to be read into the recent municipal elections", said he. "There is no tangible evidence to be found in them that could cause Republican leaders in Washington, D. C., to revise their opinion, expressed not so long ago, that it is practically useless for them to seek any gains in this state.

"True enough Santa Fe elected a Republican mayor and the entire GOP ticket. Important analysis shows, however, that this upset was attributable to local conditions purely.

"Republicans profess to see a trend in this. That is to be expected of them -- a sort of grasping at a straw. Returns from the rest of the state show this claim up for just what it is, whistling in the dark. If there were any trend likely to have any bearing on the fall election it is only reasonable to assume that there would have been some hint of it outside Santa Fe. None is to be found.

"Socorro re-elected J. O. Gallego, state revenue commissioner, for his fifth term, despite stiff opposition. Raton ousted Republican Mayor J. R. Kastler, electing R. R. McQuarie. Taos put in a Democratic mayor, Eloy D. Trujillo. Las Vegas, Las Cruces, Silver City, Santa Rosa, there isn't a single place that the Democrats were not successful. If any trend is reflected it certainly must be in our favor.

"As for Santa Fe it will be a different story there next fall with a United States senator and two congressmen to be elected, as well as a governor, next fall.

COUNTY-WIDE TRAINING SCHOOL FOR CIVILIANS

Plans have been made to conduct the first of a series of county-wide training courses in Civilian Defense at Carrizozo beginning Monday, April 20. The classes will be held at the Carrizozo High School in the study hall beginning at 8:00 p. m. on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday of each week until the classes are completed. The length of each period will be approximately one hour and forty minutes, and the average course will require fifteen hours for completion.

Classes will be taught by Mr. James Brister, who recently attended the State school held at Albuquerque. Mr. Brister completed the prescribed Office of Civilian Defense course as instructor for the training of civilians. He will conduct a series of classes on the following subjects: Tactics of Aerial Attack and Defense, Aerial Bombing and Bombs, Incendiary Materials, Chemical Warfare, Poison Gases and their effect, Civilian Morale and the Prevention of Panic, Espionage and sabotage, Individual Protection, Collective Protection, and Civilian Organization.

It is the duty of every civilian to have a thorough knowledge of these subjects, not only for his own protection; but, for the protection of his family and others whom he may be able to assist in times of emergency. Our Armed Forces are fully engaged in their military duties, and it is the responsibility of the civilian population to meet any emergency that may occur.

According to regulations of the Office of Civilian Defense, all civilians who are serving as air raid wardens, spotters, messengers, auxiliary police, in bomb squads, auxiliary firemen, and others are required to take the basic courses listed above and receive their certificates of qualification before they are eligible to serve in their respective capacities.

All Citizens Are Urged To Attend These Classes!

Sugar Rationing

The following statement was issued today by Donald M. Nelson, Chairman, War Production Board, and Leon Henderson, Administrator, Office of Price Administration:

The sugar rationing program will proceed as scheduled and the public should not permit unauthorized sources to confuse the necessity for this policy.

Everybody must register April 27, 28, and 29 for sugar rationing.

Messrs. Albert Roberts and Lester Greer, who are civilian guards at Santa Fe, spent Monday and Tuesday here with their families.

BANKS AND THE WAR

TAXES and the AXIS

This is the most costly war of all time and everyone of us might as well recognize the fact that we will be paying for it for years in the form of higher taxes. Our advice is this: Make taxes part of your budget. There are many reasons why you should provide for taxes IN ADVANCE-- but the best reason is that it's plain common sense. A bank account provides a convenient way to accumulate tax money.

LEAVES from Uncle Sam's Notebook

The Migrating Hordes

Yesterday, perhaps, you were working in your garden, laying your plans for your spring gardening, raking up old vines and stalks, burning the rubbish—in short, making ready for the spring season that follows so swiftly upon the heels of winter. The day was so still you could hear the drumming of a woodpecker in a distant woodlot or the mellow sound of the schoolbell, a mile away, calling the children in from recess. The sun was warm on your back. Still, it was a lovely day and you looked with delight upon the somewhat draggled-looking robin which tagged you around the garden, picking up dropped seeds; your eyes rejoiced in the flashing color of the bluebird, darting from fencepost to fencepost; once a chimney swift flashed, in speedy flight, across your field of vision. These were some of your summer birds. They were coming back after the long winter months. You missed them then and wondered where and how they had gone.

WHERE AND HOW—WHY AND WHEN DO THE BIRDS GO?
Of such value to all gardeners, orchardists and farmers are the services of the birds that all may well be concerned with their migrations.

LONG-DISTANCE MIGRATIONS
While it is generally known that many—perhaps the majority—of the birds which frequent our farms and woodlands in the North during the summer months, merely travel southward in the autumn far enough to find their accustomed foods, yet, some birds are known to make incredibly long migratory flights. Some of our common summer residents spend their winters in localities well south of the equator—perhaps on Argentinian pampas, or even in Patagonia. The arctic tern is said to be the champion "globe trotter." A government bulletin says of this remarkable bird:

"Its name, 'arctic,' is well earned, as its breeding range is circumpolar and it nests as far north as it can find a suitable place. The first nest to be found in this region was only 7 1/2 degrees from the North pole and it contained a downy chick surrounded by a wall of newly fallen snow that had been scooped out by the parent. In North America it breeds south in the interior to Great Slave lake, and on the Atlantic coast to Massachusetts. After the young are grown, the arctic terns disappear from their North American breeding grounds, and a few months later they may be found in the Antarctic region, 11,000 miles away!"

NIGHT TRAVEL OF BIRDS
Although most birds appear to be rather helpless in the dark, going to roost at dusk and arousing only when early daylight calls, nevertheless—thousands and thousands of them migrate in night flights. All lovers of field and woodland have noted that on some given day in early spring it may be that not a bird will be visible, yet on the following morning flocks of them will appear everywhere, proof that they have come back in the night.

HEIGHT AND SPEED OF MIGRATORY FLIGHT
It was assumed at one time that birds flew at great altitudes, but, since man's conquest of the air, it has been realized that flight is increasingly difficult as air becomes rarefied with altitude, partly because of the reduction of oxygen supply and partly because of a lack of buoyancy in the rarefied air. Therefore, although some of the birds with excessive wing spread, such as cranes and storks, have been seen (with binoculars) flying at 20,000 feet above sea level, the fact remains that migration in general is effected below 3,000 feet.

The speed of flight varies greatly: Flycatchers loiter along at 10 to 17 miles per hour; the fast-flying mourning dove rarely exceeds 35 miles; herons and hawks, timed with an automobile speedometer, have been found to fly at 22 to 28 miles; aviators claim that at 65 miles an hour they can overtake the fastest ducks. The greatest bird speeds reliably recorded are of the swifts and the duck hawk—from 100 to 150 miles per hour.

NEED FOR PROTECTION DURING MIGRATION
The hazards of migration are many, and have been greatly increased by changes brought about by man's occupation of one-time feeding and resting grounds. There is need for bird refuges, and for a general legal protection of the migrating hordes.

For further information, send ten cents to Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., asking for Circular No. 33, "The Migration of North American Birds."

THE GRAND FIR
This conifer is well named, since it grows usually from 150 to 200 feet high, and frequently to a height of 250 to 275 feet. It is usually called "white fir" because its smooth bark is splashed with grayish-white blotches.

FEED FOR GOSSINGS
Goosings need no feed until they are 38 to 48 hours old. They should then be fed stale bread soaked in milk or water; or, they may be given a mash made of four parts corn meal and 1 part middlings.

New Fabrics and Designs Meet Increased Demand for Blouses outstanding interest this season, so watch bow! The long bishop sleeves are also important.

Two chic tailored blouses (to the right above and below in the group) are noteworthy. The model at the top is a real "find." It is a classic in tailored simplicity, with the charm of a material, corded marquisette, which is to be coveted not only for its prettiness, for joy of joy! it launders to perfection and as easily as a pocket handkerchief. This blouse is skillfully designed with a fitted waistband for either tuck-in or over-blowse wear.

Exquisite handwork finishing off all edges in contrast color is a nice trimming accent for the beautiful tailored blouse in snowy acetate rayon crepe shown just below this blouse in the above illustration. Note the stud-fastened cuffs and becoming turn-back neck.

Note the flowers in her hair. The wearing of flowers in this manner is an approved fashion, even in the daytime if occasion warrants.

An effect of fragile feminine charm is achieved by the use of filmy rayon chiffon and fine lace edging for the exquisite lingerie blouse shown above to the left in the illustration. It features the new and extremely smart long bishop sleeves together with a high-low ruffled neckline which may be fastened primly under the chin for suit wear or opened low for dress-up moments.

A blouse that should be included in every wardrobe for formal wear is the long-torso type of handsome rayon flower print in gorgeous colors.

Political Tolerance

Let us restore to social intercourse that harmony and affection without which liberty and even life itself are but dreary things. And let us reflect that, having banished from our land that religious intolerance under which mankind has so long bled and suffered, we have yet gained little if we countenance a political intolerance as despotic, as wicked, and capable of as bitter and bloody persecutions.—Thomas Jefferson.

Doubly Smart

Yes, you are seeing double! Matching boutonnières of fresh flowers, one on each lapel, make a novel decoration on smart new suits this spring. This is a style recommended to out-of-town beaux who will want to wire greetings that will outshine local competition. If it's a single corsage she wants for her new spring costume, camellias, gardenias and combinations of variegated colorings are all good guesses. Daisies and violets, as pictured above, make charming twin lapel pieces.

The Flowers That Bloom On Your Dress, Tra-La!

Among the highlighted fabrics for spring, smooth surfaces predominate. The warsteds are particularly smart, as this spring is starting off in a decidedly tailored manner. Faille, wool jersey and knits continue strong.

This season's prints glory in novelty and color. Important are the new butterfly prints, the lace-patterned types and gorgeous florals. Amusing, also, are the vegetable prints, cabbage roses in full bloom and the apple motifs. There are more plaids, stripes and checks than ever, and the "dotted" theme persists.

Loose Curls

No tight curls, all extremely loose and very feminine looking, is the new fashion edict. Shorter bobs are assured, always with an easy-to-manage promise. Pompadour versions will continue to be worn and the "trick" is to wear your hat back to show the pompadour.

Careers in Engineering

By R. T. Strohm

Dean, International Correspondence Schools

WHO enriched our lives by the airplane, the modern refrigerator, the automobile, the radio? Who provided us with light at the flick of a switch? Who, indeed, has wrought more changes in our manner of life than the engineer? In conquering the forces of nature man learned engineering. The first lever used to pry a rock, the first wheel built to move burdens, the first wedge shaped to split a log were creations of primitive engineers. Over four thousand years ago, engineers built the dams on the Euphrates and erected the Egyptian pyramids.

Two thousand years ago Roman engineers tied Europe together by highways, spurred the migration of older civilizations into unexplored countries. There the conquerors provided uncontaminated water supplies and shelter against the elements. So down through the ages, making life more secure and more satisfying, the work of engineers has gone forward.

The work of engineers, often un-sung, has provided for over-widening and continuous benefits to the human race, through control of nature's forces and materials. Today the youth of vision, interested in knowing more about our fast moving age may well consider engineering as one of the most utilitarian and fascinating professions.

Engineering embodying a knowledge of mathematics, technological arts and sciences and the ability to direct and work with men offers worthwhile careers for youth of ability!

Advertising Speaks: IF PAYS TO LISTEN Read The Ads

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

HOSS TRADIN'

MY FRIEND asked me if I would go with him to buy a horse. I went. We traipsed from one dealer's to another. One man asked us $300 for a horse. The next man had a horse which looked no better, but his price was $450. Before the afternoon was over we had seen horses ranging in price all the way from $150 to $14,000. Now, the $14,000 horse was a much better animal than the $150 horse. No use to deny that. But nowhere along the line did we find a stabilized market. Had we bought we would have been paying a price which the seller thought his horse was worth. There was no market authority we could consult which would tell my friend whether he was being overcharged or undercharged.

Charles Roth

That same evening I went out to buy a small household item—one which is advertised in all the newspapers. I knew what the market price would be: advertising had told me. With confidence I asked the clerk for what I wanted and put my 25 cents down on the counter. Had he said: "I am sorry, sir, but the price is 50 cents," I would have left and gone somewhere else. What assurance have I, as a consumer, that someone won't take advantage of me and overcharge me in this bold way?

My only assurance is the advertising which I read in the newspaper. That is my market and my buyer's guide. It tells me the prices I must expect to pay. Let the seller who tries to charge me more beware.

It also tells me what quality I may expect. Let the seller who tries to give me a poorer substitute beware.

So you see that advertising stabilizes prices and enables me, no matter how inexperienced I am in business, to buy with the same expertness and assurance of a professional buyer who spends his life buying for a large concern.

No one objects to paying the established price for something he wants. But all of us hate to be robbed by an unscrupulous man who, taking advantage of our ignorance, "soaks us good and plenty."

The way to avoid being "soaked" in this complete way is to buy advertised goods from merchants who advertise.

There was a time in America when there were no set prices. Each merchant charged what he thought "the traffic would bear." Advertising came to the rescue of the consumer. It led the way to the established prices you pay when you buy anything today — except, perhaps, horses.

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—For about five years, young John Earl Baker had probably the most unexciting job in the world. He was a clerk for the Interstate Commerce commission, tailed up statistics for the census bureau and was statistician for the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers.

Back From Burma Road, Authority Is Hopeful of China

Then he got a sudden case of hot-foot. He quit herding figures and was off to China as adviser to the ministry of communications. For 30 years, he has been battling plague, famine, pestilence, social disorder and the feudal hang-over of past centuries, as China threw off the Manchus and moved into the modern world. Directly or indirectly, he probably has saved as many human lives as any other man living.

The modern world seems to be mainly an extension of the troubles Dr. Baker has seen. Arriving in New York on a ship from the Pacific war zone, he is calmly hopeful about China, as always, and says that although the rail end of the Burma road is closed, the road is still open, and the Chinese have enough goods stored up to keep traffic moving for two years.

He knows a lot about this. It was just a year ago that he was made director general of the Burma Road Construction company—a drab name for one of the most stirring exploits in history. Dr. Baker cherishes the Order of the Bountiful Harvest and the Order of the Beautiful Jade, conferred upon him by the grateful Chinese. He is off to his home in Mill Valley, Calif.

From his home in Eagle, Wis., Dr. Baker went to the University of Wisconsin, taught country school for several years and, during his years in government service qualified as a specialist on fiduciary problems of railway management. In China, he found not only a tangle of unrelated railroads, shored in by various quarreling exploiters, but a morass of human misery which enlisted him for three decades in his fight against starvation, in which railroad organization was only a detail. As director of the American Red Cross famine relief in 1920, he got in training for his Burma road job by building 250 miles of railroad to get wheat to famine victims.

With his Chinese decorations, Dr. Baker takes back with him to Mill Valley an honorary degree from his alma mater. He is 61 years old, big, vigorous and handsome.

ARMY research engineers usually aren't around when the band begins to play and they don't often get medals and headlines, although they are strikes at enemy right in the thick of the toughest fighting in a machine-age war. Their sharp pencils, appearing a new formula, may damage the enemy more than any 10-inch gun.

Here's one of them, studiously inconspicuous in a Washington cubbyhole for many years, one Lieut. Col. Paul T. Logan, casually in the news in a little item from Harrisburg, Pa., announcing that some big factories were taking up large-scale manufacture of his new non-melting chocolate bar for the army. That might sound like boondoggling, but, back-trailing the colonel two or three years, you find that the chocolate bar is the army's proven solution for getting top mileage and staying power for jungle fighting in tropical countries.

The colonel quietly turned in his chocolate bar in October, 1939, after several years of research and experiment. It is made of raw oat flour, bitter chocolate, cacao fat, sugar and skimmed milk, with a small dash of vanilla. It doesn't sound like food for heroes, but army records show that just a few bars of it will run a soldier until he has to get his shoes half-soled. Also, soldiers like it.

People who have been to Iowa, or who have read Phil Slog's books, know that that's where real connoisseurs of bulk food come from—an old Colonel Logan. After entering the army from civilian life, he was graduated in the infantry school of Seers' course in 1906, from the Q.M.C. subsistence school in 1912, and in 1919 from the Army Industrial college. The non-melting chocolate bar idea is one of Colonel Logan's many adventures in forethought when jungle fighting seemed quite remote.

Learning the Three R's in China

Guerrilla fighters, farmers and their wives and children assemble for a weekly open air class in reading and writing in a northwestern city in China. With the aid of United China Relief funds, China is making great strides in eliminating illiteracy among its millions as part of its wartime reconstruction program. Since the war began some 90,000,000 Chinese have been taught to read and write, and today they are intelligent citizens of a democracy that is an important ally of the United States.

A Welcome Word from Home for A.E.F.

Mail time in any camp is a big time to the soldiers in Uncle Sam's army because it brings word from the loved ones back home, and lifts one out of army life for a brief few minutes. These U. S. soldiers, who are settling down to camp life in their new environment, are pictured receiving their mail somewhere in Northern Ireland.

Australia Looks Aloft These Days

With the Japanese encamped in bases on New Guinea, only a scant 600 miles from the Australian mainland, the continent "down under" is making feverish preparations for the struggle that is in its eyes. Particular attention is now being given to anti-aircraft defenses, and hundreds of posts like this one outside Melbourne are springing up everywhere.

FIRST AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger B. Whitman

Roger B. Whitman—WNU Service.

RUST SPOTS ON CEILINGS

A FRIEND of mine has been troubled because of rusty spots on an upstairs ceiling, corresponding to the heads of nails that secured the plasterboard to the attic floor beams. Painting did not conceal them, and in time they showed through ceiling paper. This is not an unusual condition, and can occasionally be found in side walls made of plasterboard and wall-board. My friend's ceiling is under an unheated attic. The points of the nails are exposed to a low temperature, which chills the nails for their entire length. The rusting of the heads is due to condensation of moisture in the air of the room. Insulation in the attic would cure the whole trouble and be a great advantage in raising the room temperature during the cold season. Without this, the spotting can be prevented by removing the rust of the nail heads by sandpapering, and then giving each head a touch of aluminum paint to protect the metal from the moisture of condensation. If aluminum paint cannot be had, spar varnish can be substituted. Of course, either one will be concealed by the ceiling decoration.

Leaking Stucco

Question: My stucco home, two years old, is cracked, so that rain water soaks through to the interior plaster, especially above and below the windows and doors. Could this be corrected with waterproof cement?

Answer: At paint stores and from dealers in mason materials you can get cement paint combined with a waterproofer, with which all the cracks can be closed and the wall itself made waterproof. But in saying that you notice leaks above and below the windows and doors, I am inclined to think that much of the trouble is in open joints between the window and door frames and the outside walls. This may be because of the failure of the flashings. The joints should be closed with caulking compound, forced in with a tool called a caulking gun. Carpenters and painters have the equipment and will do the job at so much per window and door.

Cracking Cement

Question: White sand and white cement are mixed together to make porch steps, and the mixture usually checks and cracks. What causes this? How can it be prevented?

Answer: For steps, concrete should be made not only of cement and sand, but also with crushed stone or pebbles. One good mixture is 1 part cement, 2½ parts sand, and 5 parts stone or pebbles. Use only enough water to make the mixture workable. Another reason for the cracking may be that the mixture dried out quickly. If it is applied over a foundation of concrete, this should be soaking wet, and the new concrete should be kept wet for four or five days so that the cement will cure to its greatest density.

Wall Finish

Question: An apartment has been newly plastered. It has a smooth finish, and is apparently dry. I want to use flat paint that can be washed once or twice, to save redecorating costs. What should I use?

Answer: A top quality casein paint is washable when dry, and can be finished later with an oil paint, if necessary. Directions on the can should be carefully followed. This type of paint can be had in colors, as well as in white, and is in wide use for just such purposes as yours.

Cracking Plate Glass

Question: A five by six foot plate glass window has begun to crack. It cracks a little more each day. Replacement would be expensive. Can the cracking be stopped?

Answer: The cracking can be stopped by drilling a small hole one-eighth inch or so in size at the extreme tip of the crack. The job can be done by any dealer in plate glass at very little cost.

Painting Basement Walls

Question: I finished my concrete basement walls with aluminum paint, but it peeled. Cement paint does not hold, or casein paint, either. What can I do about it?

Answer: Cement paint should hold, provided the concrete was prepared for it by cleaning off all traces of old paint and of oil.

Musty Odor

Question: My one-room apartment, made over in an old house, was new when I moved in and everything was clean. In spite of this, it always carries a musty odor. How can I get rid of it?

Answer: Exposing chloride of lime will usually dispose of an odor. However, the odor may come from a dead rat or mouse in the walls, in which case, the odor will eventually pass.

THE STORY SO FAR: Running away from marriage to Ned Paxton, rich but a gay blade, Janice Trent becomes secretary in an Alaska wilderness camp over the protest of Bruce Harcourt, a long time friend. Bruce is chief engineer, succeeding Joe Hale, deposed for negligence. Millicent Hale, his wife, is also attracted to Bruce. Janice tells Ned Paxton she is married to Harcourt. The latter overhears her and insists on an immediate marriage. The newlyweds are interrupted at home that night by Mrs. Hale who says her husband has been shot dead. She exclaims: "If you had only waited, Bruce." Bruce spends the night investigating the murder. When Jimmie Chester, Millicent's brother, runs off in a plane Bruce brings him back. In the meantime, Ned Paxton invites the women to his yacht. Janice and he, and two natives, leave in a launch to view a volcano closer. Suddenly it erupts. The boat is stranded on a lonely beach. The two natives run off with the launch. Paxton and Janice spend a fearful night. Their fire keeps the wolves away.

Pasca clutched his arm. Pointed.

CHAPTER XVII

Paxton reassured Janice: "It is safer than staying here with the fire dying. With those great gaps in the base boards, the shack instead of being a safety zone might prove a trap. As we came up the hill I saw a big log by the side of the brook. It will last till dawn if I can get it here. It's not far. There are no eyes glaring from that direction. Keep between the shack and the fire."

"I'm going with you."
"Janice. If you want to help, do as I say." His eyes burned like twin blue lights in his soot-streaked face. This night must have been a grueling, muscle-racking experience for a man who had for years lived softly. She capitulated with sympathetic understanding.

"I will do whatever you say, Ned. I'll keep the home fires burning."
"That's the stuff. See those two humps on the trees that look like misshapen heads hoisted on petards? The log is under those. I noticed it when we came up the brook. Hang on to the revolver but don't waste a shot. Watch out. If you see points of light between me and the fire, yell like a maniac but don't shout."

"Ned, before you go I want to take back what I said about your never having earned anything. Tonight you have earned my unwavering respect and friendship."

"Friendship! Think I'll be satisfied with that?"

Slow seconds dragged into interminable minutes as she waited, watched, listened. The rain had stopped.

A warning howl rose from beyond the fire. Heart in her mouth she sensed swift, stealthy movement, green eyes shifting. The beast had discovered Ned. Suppose she yelled. What help would that be to him? Fire, only fire would keep them back. Wood! Wood was what she needed. Could she pull a board from the shack? No. She might bring the whole wobbly thing down and be buried in the ruins. The door! She seized it. Within her welled a terrific physical impulse. She wrenched the bullet-riddled thing from the one rusty hinge. Dragging, lifting, jerking, she dropped it on the coals. It flamed brightly.

Thank God for that. Instinctively she looked up. Were her eyes deceiving her or were those stars? Stars, like a million lighted windows. They gave a sense of home glowing through the darkness, sent her courage soaring like a captive balloon let loose. All her life lighted windows had fascinated her.

A touch on her shoulder. She started to her feet. A sob of relief tore up as she looked into Ned Paxton's grimy, weary face.

"How did you get back?"

"After you threw the door on the fire we didn't need that log. Crawled back. There is a pink light in the east. The wind has changed. It's blowing the smoke away. They will find us soon. Meanwhile—" he cleared the huskiness from his voice to suggest practically, "let's sit on the log. You may feast on that broken cracker. I'll smoke the last cigarette."

She smiled at him tremulously. "Ned. I like you better than ever before. You seem so—so different." His mouth was grim. "Different! I have been different since you told me that I bought everything I wanted. Don't care for that word 'like.' I want your love, Jan."

She laid her hand on his. Could she make him understand?

"I love Bruce Harcourt."
The undisciplined spirit of the man to whom she had been engaged flamed in his voice. "He can't have you. Think what I can give you. Jewels, travel, sables, homes anywhere you want them."

"A home means more than a house, Ned. Somehow I've learned that in these last weeks. I feel terribly old and wise tonight. A home is built by mistakes and struggles as well as by love. It means mutual sacrifices, mutual responsibilities, spiritual companionship. You can't buy a home." She felt the hand under hers clench. "I didn't mean that you were trying to buy my love now, really I didn't. You will believe me, won't you?"

He looked down at the scorched, bruised fingers. His haggard eyes met hers. "Believe you, Jan darling. I can't let you go!"

Bruce Harcourt looked down at Chester lying on the cot in the cabin which had been built for Janice. Stephen Mallory bending over the unconscious man was real, so was the smell of antiseptics in the air. The coast missionary gave a final touch to the bandaged arm and straightened.

"He'll be stiff for days, but nothing more serious unless inflammation sets in. Better get to bed, Harcourt, you look all in."

"All in! You don't know the half. I've had hair-raising adventures and escapes since I came into this north country but nothing equal to the hell of these last hours. Came down twice on the shore. Had to risk it, though I knew if my self-starter went on the blink I was done for. Radio wouldn't work. Compass useless. Chester half dead, I thought. Good Lord! Why am I living over that? It's behind me. If you are sure Jimmy is all right, I'll turn in."

"I'll stay with him."
Harcourt's tired eyes narrowed as he stepped out upon the board walk. Lights, voices in the dormitories at this time of night! What happened? Moonlight dappled the sparkling water with silver. What did he miss? Paxton's yacht! Gone! Janice!

He swung open the door of the H house. In the fanback chair, shoes on the rug beside her stockinged feet, sat Martha Samp. Her face was deeply lined, her eyes seemed to have been pushed back into her head with a cobby finger.

"Where's Janice? Where's Grant? What's happened?"

She patted the hand on her sleeve. "Sakes alive, Mr. Bruce, don't get scared yet."

"Scared! What do you mean? Where's Janice? Has she gone with—with—are you here to tell me?"

Bruce dropped his head on an arm outflung on the mantel. Martha Samp explained quickly:

"She's gone with Paxton, if that's what you mean, but not the way you think."

"Where is Janice? Where the devil is Grant?"

"He's gone in the launch huntin' for Kadyama. That sneaky Indian is out in his kayak an' Mr. Tubby is sure he knows somethin' about the shootin'. Paxton took M's. Hale, Mary and Janice out for a sail. They were goin' to get as near that belchin' volcano as they safely could. It was a beautiful day when they started. Along about four a storm came up, sudden. There was a great rumblin' an' then a wave which seemed mountains high swept up. Almost reached this plateau."

"Go on! Go on!"

"Even then we didn't get anxious about the boat, 'tis such a big one. About two hours ago the radio station picked up a message from the Captain."

The color went out of her face. Her fingers picked nervously at his sleeve.

"Well? Well?"

"He said that the yacht was all right an' M's. Hale an' Mary, but that he was cruisin' round to pick up the launch."

"The launch! The Modern Mariner's launch! Who was in it?"

"Janice and Paxton and two native pilots."

"That message came two hours ago! Pasca!"

The Eskimo swung open the kitchen door in answer to his shout. His beady eyes bulged in their slanted slits. His bronzed face was curiously colorless. "Fuel the Sikorsky. Quick! Be ready to take-off."

"Yes sirree, I hustle."
Martha wiped away two big tears. Sniffed. "Sakes alive, I didn't know I could feel so sentimental. Got all worked up 'cause Mary didn't come back. Now I know she's safe I'm kinder crackin' up. I've got hot chocolate on the stove at the Waffle Shop. You can't fly right if you don't take care of yourself. You stop there an' have a cup. I'll fill a thermos bottle and pack a basket with food. When you find Janice, she'll be hungry as a bear, prob'ly. Now don't you worry. Remember there's a gate in every wall."

him mad. The overturned launch! Harcourt hurt. Janice suffering. Janice on some lonely shore with Paxton.

"You fly up play tag with stars, yes sirree." Pasca's guttural voice came through the ear-phone in warning. "Gettin' day quick. Look—see. We fin' dem now."

"Watch the shore for signs of a fire, Pasca."

Below, the white yacht steamed slowly, like a fabled bird floating on the breast of the water. Still searching. From a volcano-top in the east a column of smoke rose languorously, as though the force within the mountain was too exhausted from its orgy to do more than send out a puff of hot breath.

"Look! See!"

Harcourt leaned over the side to follow Pasca's shaking finger. Lined at a precarious angle, a launch was piled up on a beach under a cliff. He sent the Sikorsky wing-slipping down for a closer view. The launch from the Modern Mariner! Each foam-tipped wave set the contents awash. Life preservers floated out with the receding tide.

Harcourt strained his eyes till they seemed starting from their sockets, flew low over it. Not a sign of life. No smoke rising from the woods near. That wrecked boat didn't mean necessarily that Jan had been in it when it struck. Paxton might have thought it wise to go ashore before. Paxton!

"She's safe! I know she's safe!" Harcourt told himself savagely and climbed into the air. On toward the mountain. Pasca, who had been leaning over, looking down, clutched his arm. Pointed. Above a clearing on the shore hung a blue haze. Wood smoke! No mistaking that. He leaned over. Shouted directions to the Eskimo. Could he land on that shore? He must. The great winged creature obeyed his lightest touch, came down and settled on the water with the ease of a mammoth swan. On the edge of the shore Harcourt touched the control which released the landing wheels. It taxied smoothly up the sloping beach.

He swung helmet and goggles to the seat before he climbed out. Revolver in hand, he gave a few curt directions to Pasca.

"I do w'at you say. Your face white as crater-top. You fin' 'em pretty quick now. All fine an' dandy. Yes sirree."

Harcourt nodded. His throat ached unbearably. If Janice were under that smoke haze she would have heard the plane. She would have rushed to the shore long before this. Perhaps she was hurt.

Horror clutched at his throat, he stumbled into a clearing. Stopped. Caught at a scorched spruce to steady himself. Were those real persons on the threshold of that blackened shack? Their clothes were scorched brown, their faces smooched as stokers'. The girl's head rested against one side of the door frame which leaned like the Tower of Pisa. The man was huddled against the other. Were they—before his parched tongue could formulate the word, he had his hand on her shoulder.

"Janice! Janice!"

Paxton lifted heavy lids. Closed them. Mumbled sleepily: "Damn you, Sakl. Why you wake me?"

He tumbled over flat as the girl sprang to her feet. She held out her hands. Sobbed.

"Bruce! I knew you'd find us."

He caught her close in one arm. His hand tightened on his revolver. "Look up at me, Jan."

She leaned her head back against his shoulder. The grimace about her mouth was dented with dimples, laughter shone through tears in her sleep-clouded eyes.

"Look at you! You don't have to growl that command. I never was so glad to look at anyone in all my life."

"Thank God!"

His heart swelled in a passion of gratitude. She was living, safe unharmed. He slipped the revolver into its holster. The arm which held her tightened. She pressed her face against his breast before she confided with unsteady gaiety:

"I hate to seem grossly material at this climactic moment, but you don't happen to have a broiled live lobster or sea-food Newburg up your sleeve, do you?"

At the Parting Goldwyn Sadly Disillusioned Author

This story is told by a man who is writing a new movie for Sam Goldwyn. One day the author met Goldwyn for the first time. He listened patiently while Goldwyn discussed the story, without accent or malaprop... "All those stories about Goldwynisms have been incorrect," he mused—while Goldwyn continued, still without accent, still using the correct words... "I'll write an article about Goldwyn and disprove those stories," the author vowed.

Then as the conference ended, Goldwyn led him to the door and said: "Now remember, you've an important job. In this enterprise you're the main clog."

YOU'LL love to show these linens off! And they're such fun to embroider in lovely colors and edge with crochet! Although simple to do, you'll be proud of sheet, pillow case or scarf decorated this way.

ARE YOUR Bowels Stubborn?

Then try kindness! First of all you can't expect them to act unless you give them a chance. Most people make sure to get 3 meals a day. But they never think of giving their bowels a regular time (daily) for evacuation.

If you've neglected YOUR bowels until they finally become stubborn and unwilling to act, ask your druggist for ADLERKIA. It is an effective blend of 3 carminatives and 3 laxatives giving DOUBLE action. Gas is expelled and bowel action follows surprisingly fast. After that, make up your mind to give your bowels 8 or 10 minutes' time at regular hour, daily. Your druggist has ADLERKIA.
