BANKS AND THE WAR

Wartime Hazards and Safe Deposit Protection

The hazards inevitable in a country at war add emphasis to the warning PROTECT YOUR VALUABLE PAPERS. Local Boy Believed Now a War Prisoner

Among the 104 men and three officers who escaped to Corregidor when Bataan fell, the name of Lorenzo Mirabal was listed and is believed to be Lorenzo Mirabal of this place who was with the 200th Coast Artillery. Pvt. Mirabal's wife and child reside here; she is the former Miss Ruby Telles.

When the above number of men escaped to the Island fortress; Maj. Gen. Surles' only comment on present whereabouts of the men since the fall of Corregidor was: "It is presumed they now are in the hands of the Japanese."

Carrizozo Can Not Buy Lincoln County Plant

Santa Fe, New Mexico,-- The Lincoln County Utilities Company has been denied permission to sell its light plant to the town of Carrizozo.

The New Mexico public service commission, rejecting the company's sale petition late yesterday held the proposed price of $86,000 "has not been shown to be the fair market price of the property." Carrizozo had planned to swing the deal thru issuance of 4.5 per cent bonds.

An avenue for future consideration of the proposal was left open by the commission, which added the petition was being denied without prejudice and invited an amended proposal "showing a more reasonable sale price, or better terms of financing, or both."

Spot Announcement

Lincoln County's quota for the War Savings Program for the month of May is $7,200.00. This is a quota for you and me to buy War Savings Bonds and Stamps to the limit of our ability. It isn't only a quota in money. It is also a quota in tanks and guns, planes and ships, torpedoes and bombs. When the Treasury Department sets a quota for any county in America, it tells us in effect that every month we must buy a dozen planes, or a hundred tanks, or, if we're large enough, a destroyer, a cruiser, or even a battleship. Let's buy even more planes and tanks and guns than the government asks us to buy. Let's all pledge to buy as many War Savings Bonds and Stamps as we can afford - ten, fifteen, or twenty percent of our salaries or wages set aside each pay-day to invest in War Bonds and Stamps. Only by doubling and tripling our purchases of these Bonds and Stamps will we be able to meet our quota. Come on, LINCOLN County, let's show America and the whole world that America means business.

TOY SNAKES WILL KEEP PIGEONS FROM ROOSTING ON BUILDINGS

THERE is a great fascination in watching flocks of pigeons. To owners of buildings, however, pigeons may mean trouble and unpleasantness. As the birds are protected by law, nothing can be done to keep them off that will be in any way harmful and injurious to them, and there has seemed to be no way in which they could be kept from roosting on cornices and other parts. However, one eastern city has worked out a plan for the protection of its city hall, on which the pigeons have been roosting in great numbers. This was the placing of toy snakes on cornices and other parts where the pigeons were in the habit of roosting. The effect was almost miraculous, for the birds took it for granted that the snakes were alive, and gave them a wide berth. The plan worked so well that it was adopted by other building owners, and to such an extent that the stocks of toy snakes in the city were quickly exhausted. Of course, the plan has no ill effect on the pigeons, but it should not be followed during the nesting season, when the parent birds might be kept from the nestlings.

Fieldstone Fireplace

Question: Our new house has a large fieldstone fireplace, the stones of which are held together by large gobs of black cement, which give the whole thing the look of an adobe job. Could you suggest a treatment for this black, depressing cement, in order to lighten the effect?

Answer: Rake out the black mortar joints to a depth of a half-inch or more. Clean out all loose particles of the mortar, wet the surfaces with clear water, then refill the joints with a stiff mixture of 1 part portland cement and 3 parts sand. If a light colored joint is desired, use a cement color mixed with white portland cement. All these ingredients can be had at your local mason material supply yard.

Ninety-Five Degree Heat

Question: A three-story frame house occupied by old folks is heated with a hot air furnace up to 95 degrees. Is this temperature too high for safety?

Answer: That is an exceptionally high temperature to maintain, and naturally taxes the furnace to the limit. But if the chimney is in good condition and all inflammable material is kept a safe distance away from the furnace, which is developing such high temperatures, I believe the house will be safe. A higher percentage of humidity in the air of the house may make it possible to reduce the temperature.

Repairing Furniture

Question: I am interested in getting information on the restoration and refinishing of antique furniture. What can you suggest?

Answer: Much interesting information on this subject is published by the New York State College of Home Economics, Ithaca, N. Y. One is Extension Bulletin E-250, "Reconditioning Furniture," and the other is Extension Bulletin E-255, "Refinishing Old Furniture." There is no charge for these to residents of New York state. Non-residents are charged 10 cents for E-250, and five cents for E-255.

Cracked Enamel

Question: The white enamel in my kitchen has cracked and looks as if it were covered with cobwebs. How can I make the walls smooth again?

Answer: The cracks are probably only on the surface and are caused by applying hard drying enamel over softer drying undercoats. In using enamel, it is safest to use it over undercoats made by the same manufacturer. To improve your wall, cut through the surface with sandpaper to destroy the gloss, and apply another coat of enamel.

Saw Sharpening

Question: Is it proper to file a saw at an angle?

Answer: Sawteeth must be filed at an angle, so that each one will have a cutting edge. The large saw manufacturers publish instructions for the proper filing of saws, which you can get from a dealer or direct.

Floor Finishes

Question: Oak and maple flooring is to be given a natural finish. How can they be treated?

Answer: After sanding and cleaning, you can get good results with one of the new floor seals or with good quality floor varnish, followed by waxing.

Rusty Nail Heads

Question: In my house rusty nail heads show through the paint. In repainting, how can this be prevented?

Answer: Rub the nail heads with sandpaper until they are bright, and then coat them with aluminum paint.

PREPAREDNESS

by the AMERICAN RED CROSS

Two million volunteer Red Cross workers—a militant army of mercy.

GIVING a pint of blood for the army and navy is a new form of patriotism in which thousands of loyal Americans are now participating.

This blood, processed into life-saving plasma for emergency transfusions, is collected from volunteer blood donors at 18 Red Cross Blood Donor centers. For technical reasons, these centers are limited at present to cities near laboratories which have contracts with the army for processing the blood into dried plasma, according to the Red Cross.

The program was launched in February, 1941, following a request by the surgeons general of the army and navy that the Red Cross provide 15,000 pints of blood to be processed into dried plasma. This program has now been expanded at the request of the army and navy to the point where over one million donors will be required. Eighteen centers have been opened, and donations are pouring in at the rate of approximately 60,000 a month.

Giving blood is a simple process, requires but a few minutes time on the part of the donor, and has no after effects. The blood is shipped daily in refrigerated containers to the laboratories, where it is processed into dried plasma, a light, straw colored powder that can be kept indefinitely and transported easily.

Numerous cases have been reported where plasma saved the lives of American soldiers and sailors suffering from burns and traumatic shock, and Red Cross plasma has been distributed to our armed forces operating in the Atlantic and Pacific war theaters. However, thousands of additional donors are needed to supply the full requirements for the army and navy, and to provide plasma for any civilian emergencies which may result from enemy action in this country.

Red Cross Blood Donor centers are located in New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Buffalo, Rochester, N. Y., Indianapolis, Detroit, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Boston, Milwaukee, Cleveland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Cincinnati, Brooklyn, and Washington, D. C. (Prepared exclusively for WTRU.)

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

1541-B
YES! Pattern No. 1541-B is truly a miracle dress. Not only does it whittle away pounds, it improves and dignifies your posture, gives you a more slender figure and graceful pose. A fresh, youthful feeling is gained by the cleverly shaped side pieces—forming smart shoulder yokes at the top, gathered at the waist for a flattering fit and dropping the skirt line—as well as the low vee neck. From the point of this neck to the hem is a long straight line which draws attention to your height rather than your width! Graceful sleeves which just cover the elbows are suggested for this frock when it is intended for more formal wear.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1541-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires, with short sleeves, 4 1/2 yards 3 1/2-inch material.

Pictureque Play Set.

DON'T you find it fun to make your daughter's play clothes in cunning styles and pretty cottons? In Pattern No. 1570-B you'll find a play set for girls from 1 to 8 years old which has many practical features.

First comes a frock—delightfully cool with scalloped cap sleeves, a pert pocket, braid and button trimming and a button-down-the-back opening which makes it easy to get on and off. Second, there is an adorable bonnet to match, the crown of which buttons in place. The whole thing opens flat for ironing. Third is a pair of overalls—so sensible for play and so healthy, too, because in warm weather no top is needed and the wearer is exposed to a grand sun tan.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1570-B is designed for 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 year sizes. Size 2 requires 2 1/2 yards 23 or 23-inch material for ensemble, 3 yards bias braid for frock and bonnet.

Oddities in Nature

The praying mantes are the only insects that can turn their heads like man, the pelican is one of the few birds that loses its vocal powers upon reaching maturity, and the python is the only cold-blooded animal whose temperature rises several degrees above that of the surrounding air when hatching its eggs.

Household Hints

Clean out cellar and attic to avoid undue fire hazards. Turn the old rags and papers over to organizations conducting defense salvage campaigns.

After use, dry steel wool in sun to prevent its rusting.

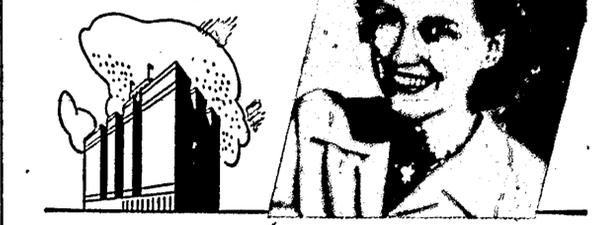

The ideal way to put linens away is to roll them. Mailing tubes are excellent, so are broom handles, window-shade rollers or sections of poles on which rugs may have been rolled. Store linens in a cool—not hot or dry—place.

Do not add salt to the water when boiling corn on the cob—it would toughen the corn. Boil corn 10 minutes, drain and serve immediately tucked in the folds of a napkin. Never let corn stand in water after it is done; that would impair the flavor and texture.

Official U. S. Treasury War Bond Quotas For May

The above map of New Mexico shows the War Bond quotas, by counties, for the month of May, 1942. Total War Bond quota for the State is $1,054,500. Every income earner in the State is expected to step-up War Bond purchases on a basis of ten per cent or more of income. This is necessary to help America's armed forces take the offensive against the Axis powers. The American voluntary method of War Bond purchases must be successful in reaching the quotas set by the Treasury Department for every county in the nation. The job of every American now is to stop spending and save dollars to help win the War.

'Abandon Ship' Drill on Atlantic Convoy

At Sea . . . You are somewhere on the broad Atlantic aboard a unit of the U. S. navy's Atlantic task force, currently doing a job of convoying. What you are now looking at is an "abandon ship" drill, in which the ship's personnel go through all the motions without actually going over-side. In the background are other ships of the convoy. (Approved by U. S. navy.)

Friendly Neighbors to the South of US . . . South America, Led by Vast Republic of Brazil, Now More Closely United With U. S. After Rio Conference

By CHARLES A. SINGLER
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Consider briefly the great continent to the south of us, and see what bearing it may have upon Uncle Sam's all-out victory effort.

Time was, in the early days of the war, when South America was very much like Benito Mussolini. Remember that stocky orator, poised on the fence of power politics, eagerly watching each move in the great struggle to see which way the balance of power was shifting. And then, satisfied that he had made the right decision, jump into the fray with his Italian legions.

South America's attitude was much on this order for a long time. If Germany were to win in Europe, South America stood ready to move in a totalitarian direction. If Germany lost, she would be content with what Pan-Americanism might have to offer her.

The United States was regarded as "the Colossus of the North" and viewed with both suspicion and concern. The Latin-Americans resented Uncle Sam; they distrusted him; they thought he was meddling. Shirt organizations, cut to the measure of Adolf Hitler's military tailors who were cutting up Europe on a pattern of their own, were flourishing everywhere throughout South America.

Here was a picture that needed changing—a pattern which could only spell trouble and plenty of it. Confronted with this picture, Uncle Sam evolved his "good neighbor policy" which already has gone a long way towards banishing distrust and bringing about that hemisphere solidarity so urgently needed to present a solid front against the Axis powers.

No attempt will be made in this limited space to cover all the potentials in natural resources, or in men, munitions and ships, which South America represents to the United Nations. And it is well that we bear in mind that we are bound to South America by much more than a thin neck of land through which the Panama canal has cut its way.

Spirit of Freedom Kin.

We are bound to South America by cultural, traditional and economic ties. We are kin to it by the spirit of freedom. For the very same love of freedom which caused the Pilgrim Fathers to break away from Europe's feudal ties caused Brazil to break away from Portugal. Rio de Janeiro, with its magnificent backdrop of 365 mountain peaks—a mountain peak for every day in the year—was founded 55 years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock.

The conference in Rio de Janeiro was charged with significance, and the outcome of that conference, while it was not a total success, was so full of good import that every citizen of the United States can take heart from the results achieved.

After the conference in Rio, in which Under Secretary Sumner Welles and Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha of Brazil, former ambassador to Washington, were the principal figures, Brazil moved into top position among the ten South American republics—a position which Argentina had enjoyed over a long period of years, and the Western hemisphere began to turn hopeful eyes to the great republic of Brazil for new leadership in the solidifying of South America against the wiles and tricks of Axis propagandists.

At least three countries which had been satellites of Argentina—Paraguay, Bolivia and Uruguay—switched allegiances, and began looking hopefully to Brazil for guidance.

As for Chile, she demonstrated at her last election how she felt about

Here are just a few of the Brazilian "Good Neighbor" anti-aircraft guns, and their crews. In addition to many more guns such as these, not only in Brazil but other South American nations, Brazil's good neighbor air-defense program calls for a largely increased fleet of planes and pilots to fly them. This South American nation, working with the United States against the Axis, has received many "mass deliveries" of bombers from the U. S.

the Hitler-Hirohito-Mussolini combination of international brigands, for at that time Juan A. Rios, pro-democratic candidate for the presidency, was elected by a landslide vote. And while these two countries have not gone all the way, the steps they have taken indicate a definite trend away from the Axis, which is reassuring to say the least. They have pledged to cut business relations with the Axis, to bar war materials from going to the enemies of the democracies, and to combat totalitarian influences within their borders.

Argentina's and Chile's failure to give full co-operation at the Rio conference, however, has not been without its price.

That price is the cutting off of special economic military and na-the United States proper. Into these great spaces of mountain and valley jungle and plain the whole of Europe—omitting Russia—could easily be enclosed.

While Brazil with its 43,000,000 inhabitants and boundless natural resources represents a vast potential of power, it also represents a military liability because of that dangerous land-bulge towards Vichy-controlled Dakar, on the bulge of Africa. It will be recalled that the British and Free French forces battled to wrest Dakar from Vichy early in the war, but found the job too big and too costly. Dakar is 1,000 air miles from Natal, Brazil.

World War I Ally.

America has not forgotten that in World War I Brazil went to battle on the side of the Allies. With its big coastline and its big reserve of vital war materials, such as rubber and manganese, and its leadership in the Pan-American movement against the Axis, it is quite natural that Brazil should come in for the most aid from the United States.

Brazil has an army of 100,000 men, the largest army in South America, and most of these men under arms are in the zone where her coastline bulges to within attacking range of the base of Dakar, Africa. The republic has about 300,000 reserves, and an untrained manpower of 1,000,000. Brazil not only controls the shortest invasion route across the ocean, but guards the southern shores of the Caribbean gateway. In northern Brazil air defense drills are held almost every day. The wild and uninhabited coastline offers many an ideal site for enemy submarine refueling operations, within but a few hours' flying time from the Panama canal. In realization of this threat, air forces patrol the coastline.

Brazil has two battleships, seven destroyers, two cruisers, and four submarines. Its air force consists of a sizeable armada of U. S.-built planes. Happily for all concerned, it is rapidly expanding its army, navy and air force. Happily, also, is the fact that Getulio Vargas, president of Brazil, is a great aviation enthusiast, who has a plane and a pilot of his own, and who knows what it's all about. Another item on the happy side of the ledger: Brazil has a sizeable merchant fleet, the second largest in the hemisphere.

Warplanes and munitions are being made in Brazil's factories on a large scale; iron is being mined from the hills and rubber is being tapped from her rubber trees. America's desperate rubber situation may find at least a partial answer in Brazil.

Importance of Colombia.

Among other vital raw materials which come from Brazil are bauxite, which is vital to the manufacture of war planes; quartz, graphite and mica, also castor oil, which is used in the lubrication of high-speed engines.

Colombia's position on the map makes her full co-operation with the U. S. a matter of vital importance. Colombia was among the first of the Latin-American nations to declare war on the Axis. She has some 15,000 men under arms, and more than 250,000 trained reserves guarding areas close to the Panama canal. Colombia's principal exports are coffee, oil and gold.

Bolivia, shivering on her cold and barren mountain plateau, is more important in our war effort than most of us imagine. Since the fall of Malaya into the hostile hands of the Japs, the tin center of the world, at least for the U. S., has become Bolivia. Tin furnishes 70 per cent of her exports.

Venezuela's vast oil fields are of strategic importance in the all-out war effort of the United Nations. The great bulk of this crude oil is refined at the huge plants on the Dutch islands of Curacao and Aruba.

Heroes of World Battle Front

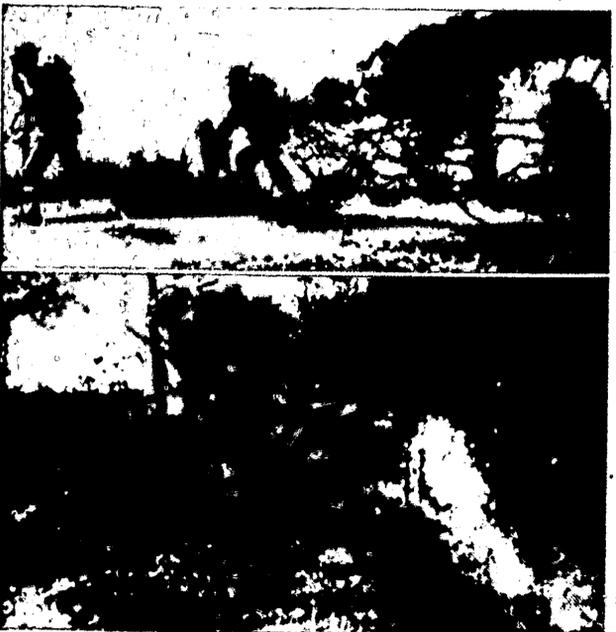

At left is Dr. C. M. Wassell, through whose skill and courage 12 badly wounded men were gotten safely out of Java, in the face of invading Jap hordes, and safely to the Australian coast. Capt. H. T. Whelless (right) went out to attack Jap transports off the Philippines. He was attacked by Zero planes but proceeded on his mission, emptied his bomb racks on six Jap transports, then fought off 18 Jap planes for 75 miles, bringing down 11, finally making a safe emergency landing with two engines and rear landing wheel gone.

The Vastness of South America

The estimated population is 91,300,000. The Amazon river there is the longest in the world—3,500 miles. The Andes mountain system, extending 4,400 miles from Panama to Tierra del Fuego, is the longest and highest mountain range in the world. It averages nearly 13,000 feet—a dozen peaks exceeding 21,000 feet.

Brazil, alone, is more than 260,000 square miles larger than the United States. That South American nation territory covers 3,285,318 square miles.

Paraguay with 61,847 square miles is the smallest nation in South America, excluding, of course, the three Guiana nations in the north. Natal, in northern Brazil, is the nearest American point to Africa. The wild, and hardy tribe of Fatsogians live at the very end of South America, along the Magellan strait.

Some of its most important products are gold, diamonds, coffee, nitrates, manganese, tin, copper, cattle, cotton, cacao and rubber.

Wood Successfully Replacing Metal for Many Purposes

Though historians skipped it, a wood age must have preceded the Stone, Bronze, and Iron ages; but that oversight is now to be remedied—A Wood age is going to follow them. We are now in the first phases of this new wood age. It is ushering in new businesses and reviving old arts was revealed in a survey of displayed consumer goods items at a large merchandising center in Chicago, Ill.

More on the artistic side are displayed scores of new woodenware products that come under a gift classification. Among these is a table piece carved in the form of a lobster with a well in its back for salads or snacks. Then there is a variety of carved trays, and platters. Some of the latter have grooved outlines to fit the shape of turkeys, ducks, etc.

Here are more items being made out of wood instead of metal:

THE STORY SO FAR: Con Cameron, who has hummed his way from Chicago, joins the bar-owners, headed for Wild Horse with a herd of cattle. It's his first experience as a cowboy, but Con does well, and when they get to Wild Horse the old trail boss, Russ Upperman, buys him clothes and gives him a horse and saddle. With Caramba Year, another 20 Bar rider, they go to the Drovers' Saloon. There they see Asa Brock, who has bought their cattle, quarrel with a new cattle man named Nevil Lowe. Brock is a sharp trader and has all of Wild Horse, including Dynamite Downes, the marshal, on his side. Con and Caramba join a faro game and win a little. Then Con misses Caramba and quits to look for him, even though it's an unwritten law of Wild Horse that no cowboy quits while he's winning.

New continue with the story.

CHAPTER II

Con moved away from the faro game as Nobby growled at the inscrutable dealer to "rattle the box." Keith Yoker grinned at him as he passed and he nodded and smiled at the cattle king. But inwardly he was furious.

"I've got to keep remembering that this gang of toughs don't bother with fist-fighting. Any more than they give a square deal in the games," he reminded himself as he looked around the saloon for Caramba.

He saw nothing of the cheerful cowboy, but at one end of the gamblers' half of the huge room he almost stumbled over a litter of equipment still partly crated. He went out into the twilight and moved up and down the long, snaky town. Lights were everywhere, now.

He came finally to the big two-story hotel and stopped to look across the tracks at its veranda. The tiny frame railway station was just beyond. As he stood wondering if Caramba had really thought about marrying Mrs. Kleiss, a short combination train came through the town and drew up at the station. Con crossed to watch men get off, others get on.

The tall, dark young man, Nevil Lowe, hurried past Con, with a girl half-running beside him. Lowe carried two large valises. Con looked with interest at the girl. She was dark-eyed, dark-haired, small and graceful. At the step of the one passenger car Lowe put down the luggage and she caught him about the neck, kissed him and let him go.

"It's going to be just a grand trip!" she said. "But I'll miss you terribly."

"Yes—you-will!" Lowe drawled. He swung her up, pushed the valises after her and waved. The engineer sounded his whistle and as Con turned away the train began to move. Lowe's wife, probably, he decided. As pretty a girl as he had ever seen, certainly.

He went toward the hotel and in the door of Mrs. Kleiss' dining room looked for Caramba.

"Well!" Caramba said from behind him. "I was just hunting you! Figured you'd be along pretty soon."

"What happened to you?" Con demanded curiously.

"Well, I—Didn't I tell you I was going out a while?—I just thought of something—"

"Ah!" Con said softly, beginning to grin.

Before Caramba could answer, Nevil Lowe and a bustling little woman came into the stair hall from the veranda.

"She'll have a fine time," the woman said briskly. "Deserves it, too! Couple months trailing—never think she could—see her prettied up. Didn't find your man? Carousing, likely! I'd be careful, I was you. Awful town! Some would cut your throat for a dollar. You're all right when you're with your herd—"

"Well, thanks for the advice, anyway. Thanks for being so kind to Janet, too. I'll get that war bag from the room."

He went upstairs, and Mrs. Kleiss, looking sharply, quickly, from point to point of her premises, saw the two at the dining-room door.

"Who's this boy, Wil-liam?" she asked Caramba.

"This is Con Cameron, Meroba," Caramba said hesitantly. "I told you about him."

"I'm glad to meet you, Con," Mrs. Kleiss cut in. "I hope you're not spreeing! Silly to let those crooks skin you. I told Wil-liam—leave your money with me—no temptation, then. If you want to do the same, I'll put it in my safe."

"Why, thanks. But I'm not staying long in Wild Horse. I did sort of want to stay for—well... the ceremonies. But—"

"Nice to have you. That will be Wednesday night, though."

"Oh!" Con cried, looking at Caramba. "I thought William would rush you off tonight—tomorrow at latest—Well, I know you're both going to be absolutely happy and I congratulate you, William!"

In the dining room, not so crowded at this second table, Con sat carefully across from Caramba and shook with quiet amusement. Caramba scowled at him.

"Well, I really was thinking about doing it, all the time," he said irritably. "Maybe not right off, but—Anyhow, she's a fine woman. We're going to build onto the corral and do a livery business. I'll handle that end. Beats punching cows."

"Of course it does!" Con assured

His right hand twisted slightly and closed on the butt of a Colt.

him. "And she is a nice woman. Did you see the girl with that fellow Nevil Lowe? His wife, I reckon it was. Pretty as a red wagon."

"Meroba had her in charge. I didn't see her. She came up with the herd and now she's gone off visiting. What you aiming to do, tonight?"

"Dance!" Con informed him, grinning. "I peeped into one dancero hall awhile ago and there was a pretty blonde girl there who smiled at me and I think she's just cut out to teach a pore cowboy how to chouse his new boots around."

He shrugged, and Caramba nodded agreement.

Con drifted toward the dance hall, when he and Caramba had fed their horses. In the Odeon he found the blonde girl he had noted before supper. She was pretty and danced well, but when Con began to collect cigars after his second drink, she left him for easier prey.

On the sidewalk outside the Odeon he looked across at the rival dance hall, decided against it and went on to the Drovers'. Baldy was nowhere in sight and for a little while Con watched the several games played. He saw Dynamite Downes and Asa Brock drinking. The buyer went out and a towheaded youngster in all the glory of a cowboy dude pushed in beside the marshal. One of the cowboys near Con indicated the white-haired, kid-booted, boy.

"El Muchacho—and that's a murder on the road, to happen! Him, I mean. Comes from down below the River. He's a deputy marshal and his killings is legalized before they come off. He shot one man here just for brushing against him."

Con nodded. He was watching Nevil Lowe walk in.

Downes and Muchacho continued to face the bar mirror and drink. But Asa Brock appeared from somewhere as if he had been watching for Nevil Lowe. His red face was twisted in a grin and he took Lowe by the arm and this time they went together to the bar. That cowboy who had identified the deputy marshal for Con shook his head.

"Slick Asa's got him another shorthorn," he said sourly. "By morning there'll be another hide-a-flapping on the Brock fence. That fellow's got some of the best looking half-blood horses I ever put a coveting eye on, too. Well—"

He moved on to the faro bank and Con looked at the pile of ten pin alley equipment. When he turned to the bar again, Brock was talking earnestly to Lowe, waving his hands. Lowe, smiling, shook his head. Brock continued to talk as they left the bar and came toward the row of thick pillars which divided the barroom. But he gave up whatever persuasions he was trying and waddled off, when Lowe shook his head.

Lowe stood staring around. Con studied him, from where he stood beside a heap of bowling balls. Then from the bar came the deputy marshal, Muchacho. He came up to Lowe and from under the wide brim of his white Stetson narrowed blue eyes surveyed the taller man up and down. When Muchacho lifted his left hand from the belt and reached toward Lowe's coat, Con held his breath.

Lowe swayed back slightly, avoiding the hand. Muchacho's grin widened. His right hand twisted slightly and closed on the butt of a Colt.

Con looked vaguely about him. Then he stopped quickly, picked up one of the bowling balls and sent it expertly across twenty feet of floor to crash into Muchacho's ankles and send him spinning, sprawling.

Lowe's hand jerked up under his coat and came out with a pistol. From the bar Dynamite Downes plunged out. He had a pistol in each hand.

"One for you!" Con snarled, picking up a second ball.

Downes gaped at the ball hurtling toward him, hesitated, stiffened as for a jump, but was too slow. The ball struck a warped place in the floor, jumped and cannoned into his thigh. He sat down, dropping one pistol, and fired the other jerkily.

Men were yelling and the Drovers' was darkening, shot by shot. Con put a hand on the window sill, vaulted out and ran down the side wall.

Horses were tied at a rack behind the Drovers' and he unhitched one quickly. He swung into the strange saddle and turned the horse.

Inside the Drovers' was pandemonium, but no more shooting. He rode up to Mrs. Kleiss' corral, twisted reins around saddle horn and slapped the horse into a trot.

The drowsing hostler gaped at him when he came to the corral gate. Con and Caramba had talked briefly to him, but now Con only said that he was riding out to see a man. He saddled quickly, took belt and holstered pistol on an alforja and looked to the hang of his gun with more interest than he had ever felt in his forty days of wearing it.

"If I'm not back by the time Caramba Year gets in," he said easily to the hostler, "just tell him that—that he was right about Baldy and me being different. Give him this five—ho'll ask about it. And have a drink on me before you sleep."

After a while he turned vaguely westward and then through the night he rode and rested, rode and rested. With daylight he was in open country and Wild Horse, or any other town, might have been thousands of miles away.

The hills were still far away when the sun dropped over them. Cotton-tails jumped up before Pancho and it was easy to kill a half-dozen with the pistol. He camped on another tiny creek and broiled his supper. Before daylight he had eaten rabbit again and packed one, cooked, in an alforja.

By noon he was against the hills and he had enjoyed every hour of his riding.

He came upon a Triangle Tail rider in late afternoon and turned off with the cheerful youngster to a line camp. Two more cowboys, one from the adjoining Hogpen outfit, were already at the camp. Con passed the cigars accumulated in Wild Horse and ate venison steaks and beans and sordough biscuits.

"It ain't the rabbit—or the venison or the turkey or the beef—that you mind," the Hogpen cowboy said understandingly. "It's not having salt. How about some stud horse poker?"

None of them had much money. The Hogpen man and Con won the few dollars of "Easy" and "Two Eyes," the Triangle Tail punchers. Then Con's three fours beat the Hogpen player's kings and queens and stripped him.

"Two Eyes," the cross-eyed man, staked a .44 Winchester carbine with scabbard and shells against thirty dollars, on a single cut of the cards. He shuffled the deck and at Con's insistence took first cut. His six of diamonds lost to Con's king of hearts.

"Why'n't you ride over to headquarters and hit up the Ramrod for a job?" Easy asked him. "This is a good cut, by and large. And ambitious! Man, if your cards always run the way we've seen 'em, you ought to own the outfit inside a year."

"Oh, I've got too much iron in my blood," Con evaded him. "Besides, you're too close to town."

"Yeh," the Hogpen rider drawled, studying the end of his cigarette, "this is close to Wild Horse. And a man don't like to have to walk around with a bowling ball in his hand, when he's in town."

"Oh!" Con said softly. "So the tale has got around..."

"I run into one of the 92 busters this morning," the Hogpen man explained, with sudden grin. "He was in the Drovers' when that little son, Muchacho, aimed to kill the stranger. I kind of wondered about you from the first. But don't worry, Cameron; you can shave off your whiskers and show your own face. You're with kinfolks."

They talked of Wild Horse and its controlling ring. All agreed that the man who was in the black books of the leaders was safe only behind a small army or when out of reach. "They know your name, looks like," the friendly Hogpen cowboy said. "So it looks like rolling up miles, for you!"

When he saddled Pancho and hung the little carbine cannily under his leg, next morning, the trio gave him directions about his road. Particularly, they warned him against the town of Fronteras, and every resident or visitor of it.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—It will come hard to think of Gen. James H. Doolittle as the Jimmy Doolittle who used to be the bantamweight boxing Top Boxer, Racer, champ of the Pacific coast. Air Stunter—He's But there's no mistake. Now Gen. Doolittle

The newly elevated general, nominated by President Roosevelt, is none other than the weather-beaten, tanned, wrinkled, rumped, bandy-legged roughhouse fighter and filer of a few years back. He has grown gray in the air, and much of his hair has been waited out into the wind-stream, since the days when he first became known as a speed demon. He won't be long in opening up his own fighting front, somewhere, somehow—judging by the way he did the same in a boxing match in which we once saw him.

His father, a carpenter and prospector of Alameda, Calif., took his family to Alaska and there young James bucked blizzards, mushed with soundoughs and got generally case-hardened for his latter adventurous career. Back in the States, he enlisted in the army air service.

Outside loops were to him just like skipping the rope and he quickly became the army's crack stunt-filer and racing pilot, instructing rookies at San Diego. He studied at the army's technical school at Dayton, Ohio, and later enrolled at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

In 1925, he won the Schneider cup for the army, hitting a speed of 232 miles per hour. These exploits of his daredevil years qualified him for some hair-raising adventures in demonstrating American planes to foreign governments. In 1928, showing off fighting planes in Chile, he fell from a window ledge and broke both ankles. The next day, when a compelling German pilot went aloft to give his plane a sales workout, Doolittle had himself lifted into the cockpit of his plane, with his broken ankles tied to a rudder bar. Then by clever and hazardous maneuvering he forced his rival to the ground, and tore off a few snap-rolls around the tall peaks of the Andes.

His stunt brought to the Curtiss company one of the largest contracts ever awarded to an American company.

BARNEY OLDFIELD, the automobile racing driver, pulled up in a race to change a tire. There was a bit of bungling on the job.

Esprit—The Thing mechanic That Slams Out spoke up: Piers in Jig Time Oldfield what his crew needs is esprit."

"Go out and buy one!" bellowed Barney. "We gotta win this race." It's like that in war. We can't buy the "esprit," although we are fanning up quite a lot of it. Somehow we've got to get the teamwork. In the meantime, there is observable in these parts a serial demonstration of fast double-play teamwork between management and labor, which is heartening.

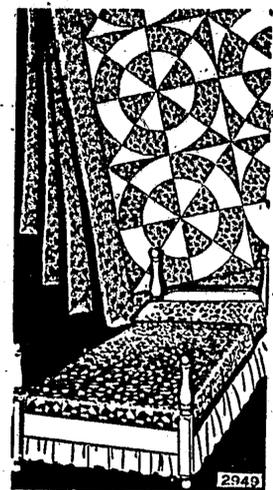

We cite the George Rogers Construction Co., demon pier-builders, who recently finished a 700-foot pier and shipway in 43 working days—25 days, or more than 20 per cent, faster than any previous record for a job of this type. This company has been slugging out similar piers since 1903. It is crucially important war work, as on these piers, fighting ships are repaired or remodeled.

There's no involved incentive plan for employees. The workers are old-line shipbuilders who know what they are building for. George W. Rogers, grandson of the founder of the firm, and now its head, says of his workers: "At mass meetings of the various shifts on the job the men themselves have helped provide the driving force required to maintain the record-breaking schedule."

Mr. Rogers studied engineering at Cornell university, with no intention of ever being a "dock-walloper," as he calls his occupation. He went to Cornell and won his letters in basketball, football and track; When his father died, he took up the family business.

In the last war, he served in the navy as a deck officer on a battleship, and did convoy duty and saw action with submarines. With the outbreak of this war he tried to get back in the navy, but they offered him three stripes and a desk and he decided he would be more useful in kicking out piers in a hurry—which is an old family custom. He lives in Forest Hills, and has two daughters, one 19 years of age and the other 21. They are studying in one of the defense projects, learning to be motor mechanics, dismounting and assembling engines.

Don't think we are happy about the tire shortage!

We've heard people say, "The railroads are pretty lucky. Pretty soon tires will begin to wear out and people will have to travel by train."

Well, we aren't very happy about it.

In the first place, we don't like the idea of people riding on our trains because they have to. We'd rather have them travel by train because they want to.

Second, we've always felt that there's a time and place for the automobile, and a time to take the train. Most of us in the Southern Pacific have automobiles, so we're affected by the tire situation, too.

And in the third place, we know that any business we get as a result of the war is only temporary. In the long run our success will depend upon the service we give.

At present it is difficult to serve you as well as we would like to because of the absolute necessity of giving priority to war traffic. War trains—the Victory Trains—come first.

But if you do travel with us to save your tires, we'll do everything we can to give you a pleasant, comfortable trip.
