CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, APRIL 2, 1943.

NUMBER 37

Mrs. James Cooper

The entire community was shocked and grieved at the sudden and untimely death of Mrs. Lucy Henley Cooper, age 57, which occurred Saturday April 3rd, 1943, as she and her husband had started to town from their Aneho ranch to consult a physician in regard to her health. She had told her husband she had a severe pain around her heart, and he was bringing her to town, rapidly as he could but she passed away enroute.

Mrs. Cooper was a devoted wife and mother, and a thoughtful loyal friend. She will be greatly missed by a large circle of friends—and she numbered her friends by her acquaintances.

The funeral was held at the home of her sister, Mrs. Nellie A. Branum in Carrizozo by the Rev. W. B. Andrew, Pastor of the Church of Christ at Tucumcari.

Mrs. Bost, Yokim, and Lemon and Rev. Andrews and Colonel Jones sang, "Old Rugged Cross", "Rock of Ages" and "Nearer, Still Nearer."

Mrs. Cooper is survived by her husband, Mr. James Cooper; by a daughter, Mrs. Wayne Van Schoyck, Jr., of Walsenburg, Colorado; two sons, Mr. George Cooper, Tucumcari, N. M., and Mr. Lin Cooper of U. S. Ryan School of Aeronautics, Hemet, California; several grand children and her sister, Mrs. Nellie Branum and three brothers, R. H. Henley, Fresno, California, W. A. Henley, Wilbur Washington and John W. Henley of Keene, Texas, and several nieces and nephews.

pall bearers were Messrs. Will Ed Harris, H. M. Kennedy, Jim Hall, F. P. Cleghorn, Herman E. Kelt, and Wm. W. Gallacher.

A long line of sorrowing friends followed the remains to White Oaks cemetery where interment was made.

Telephone Manager To Retire May 1st.

Mr. G. T. McQuillen, who became manager of the local telephone office in the spring of 1912, will retire May 1st and Mr. Dukeminier, who has been here occasionally to assist at the local office will become the new manager. During Mr. McQuillen's long years of service he has been prominently connected with the business, civic and educational affairs of the county. War Salvage Clinic to Be Held in El Paso Next Week

Lincoln County members of the Salvage Committee have been asked to participate actively in the War Salvage Clinic which will be held Monday and Tuesday, April 12 and 13, at Hotel Hilton, El Paso, Texas. Carrizozo's delegate is to be Mr. John E. Hall and it is expected that other members will be able to attend. The Clinic, first of its kind in the U. S. will include delegates from each county in the State of New Mexico and 33 counties in West and South Texas.

The Salvage Clinic will be a joint effort of Army officials, national and regional representatives of the W. P. B., OCD units and New Mexico and Texas Salvage Committees to iron out difficulties and problems of salvage shipments and to plan for further collections. It is expected that the results will be watched nationally and become a guide for similar planning in other States.

The delegates will be housed in soldier barracks at Ft. Bliss. Army officials are giving their full cooperation to the plans since generally the military authorities feel that the need for scrap collections is second only to troop training in importance in the war effort.

Governor John J. Dempsey is expected to attend or send an official representative. Governor Cope Stevenson also is expected. The New Mexico Division, chairmen are John L. Augustine, Jr. and G. W. Bright, of Las Cruces. W. B. McCollum, Executive Secretary of the State Salvage Committee and George B. Butler of the Texas Salvage Committee will attend. Time to Check and Recondition Tractor

Points for Checkup Routine Are Listed

If you want to save yourself some exasperating moments in the field this spring—and make your tractor last longer, too—W. C. Krueger, extension agricultural engineer at Rutgers university, suggests you thoroughly check and recondition the tractor now.

"It doesn't make any difference whether a tractor has been in storage all winter or whether it has been in occasional use—it still needs a general reconditioning," Krueger says. And he lists some of the points of the check-up routine as follows:

If battery equipped, make sure unit is fully charged and that all connections are tight and that the battery is firmly supported and braced.

Take out spark plugs, clean and re-gap and replace those with appreciably worn terminals. Oil magneto, wipe out distributor cap and flush impulse coupling with kerosene, lubricate.

Flush the water cooling system thoroughly and fill with clean rain water preferably. Tighten all connections and replace worn or gummy hose.

Thoroughly clean oil filter or install new element.

Thoroughly clean air filter according to instructions; change oil in oil bath type.

Check and flush entire oiling system by first pouring a mixture of gasoline and light lubricating oil, half and half, into each cylinder through the spark plug hole and crank the engine until the mixture has been forced out of the holes. This washes old oil from cylinders, valves and pistons and helps loosen piston rings. Use the same mixture for flushing the valve operating mechanism under the valve housing cover. Flush the crank case with kerosene, drain and refill with proper grade oil. Drain gear box and crank case and refill with specified grade of lubricant. Thoroughly grease and oil all points as specified in the lubrication chart.

Start the engine and operate slowly, watching for any unusual conditions. Sticking valves can be loosened with kerosene applied to the valve stem.

Pasteurize the Cream To Keep Butter Sweet.

Many farm people, making butter for home use for the first time in many years, are anxious to learn how to keep butter from developing a rancid flavor. According to Forrest C. Button, professor of dairy manufactures, Rutgers university, the answer to this question is pasteurization of the cream.

"The heat of pasteurization makes inactive the raw cream enzyme, which causes deterioration of the fat," Professor Button explains. "Pasteurization is a simple procedure: Just put the cream into a can or pail; place this container in a large kettle, boiler or other suitable container partly filled with water; place this on the stove and bring the cream to a temperature of 145 to 150 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes. A shorter method is to heat the cream to 165 to 170 degrees for 10 or 15 minutes, but the 30-minute method is the standard procedure. The cream should be stirred while being heated.

When the pasteurization process is completed, Professor Button says that the cream should be cooled to 50 degrees Fahrenheit or lower and held at this temperature for at least three hours before churning in order to insure firm butter granules.

The farm laborer, today's vanishing American, has disappeared down one of two separate channels—the armed forces and industry. A high percentage of the skilled specialists who operate the mechanical gadgets of both army and navy have been from farms. Equipped with the rugged physique that comes from long hours of hard work in the open farm boys have been gratefully accepted by all the armed forces and are serving their country well.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Laboratory tests demonstrate that rubber can be made to stretch from 50 to 1000 percent or to have no stretch at all, as in hard rubber.

A radical piece of absorbent cloth of the substance we know as rubber was used for three months in London at night in 1910. It was used as a pad because it could absorb perspiration.

The Congressional Jokes: It has been reported that House legislative leaders intend to pick a few nimble-witted Congressional sharpshooters, who would be in constant attendance during sessions—to make clay-pigeons of those who try to spread smears across the Cong. Record.

A lawmaker with a sensayama once told this about himself. He sent a constituent a Cong. Record with a note stating that the Government prints and distributes speeches made by Congressmen without the slightest profit.

Huey Long was called a demagogue after he concluded a teetotal filibuster. Huey foamed at the mouth, daring his critic to define the word.

Here are some of the facts of life about Congress every citizen should know. . . . Before times got too serious for such levity, a group of legislators organized a "Demagogues' Club, which met daily in the House cloakroom.

Then there's the one about the Congressman's wife who woke up in the middle of the night. "Jim," she whispered, "there's a robber in the house."

This is one of the Congressional favorites. . . . House Speaker Tom Reed had a barbed-wire tongue. . . . One day one of the biggest bores in Congress got up, drooled out a lengthy diatribe and concluded by stating: "Mr. Speaker, I am like Henry Clay. I would rather be right than President!"

Rep. "Uncle Joe" Cannon loved to tell tall tales about his fishing. He once told a friend about a fish he caught. Trying to beat him to the punch, the chum asked: "About the size of a whale, wasn't it?"

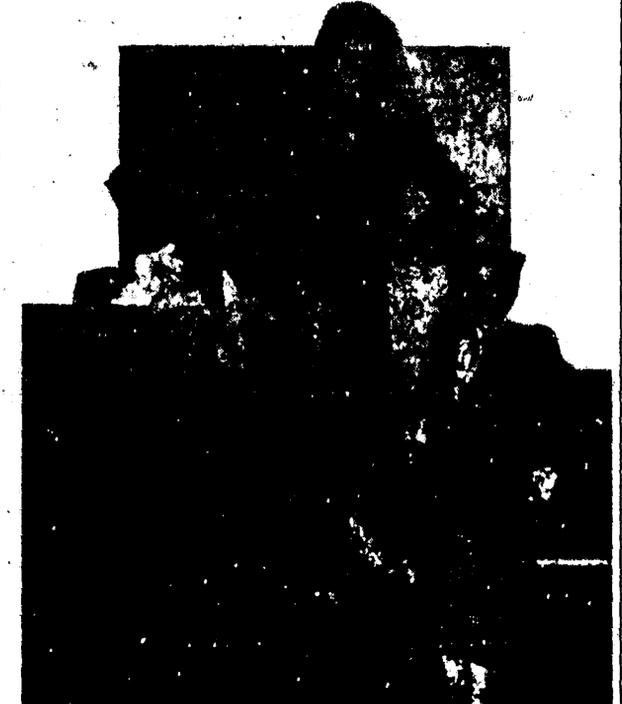

In 1914 the House of Representatives was evenly divided between both parties. The vote for House Speaker resulted in a tie. One independent Progressive could cast the deciding vote.

Contrary to popular belief, most Congressmen don't like to have the power of giving political jobs. Through bitter experience a Congressional maxim has evolved: "Every political appointment means one ingrate and a dozen enemies."

No column of legislative anecdotes would be complete without the classic about the tot who visited the House of Representatives with his father. The youngster pointed to a man standing on the dais and asked who he was.

It's the Softly Styled Suit That Leads for Easter Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

ACCORDING to the signs, the Easter fashion parade will be made up for the most part of ever so good-looking, softly styled tailored suits. Let no one think, however, that spring, 1943, will stage a scene of regimented uniformity.

The beauty of a suit is that it makes the perfect background for most exciting versatile blouses, hats, gloves and bags, together with all sorts of equally thrilling gadgets and furbelows. That is exactly the spirit motivating throughout the fashion program during this wartime period—making one simple suit or dress play the role of many added and abetted by a wardrobe of interchangeable accessories.

Typical of the prettily feminine, as emphasized throughout fashion's program of Easter apparel, is the charming suit-frock shown to the left in the accompanying illustration. It is made of a supple light gray rayon flat crepe. Welcome the news of gray. A veritable orgy of delectable grays is stampeding the fashion picture for spring, and there is no better fabric buy from the standpoint of wearableness than a gray rayon crepe such as used for this most attractive Easter outfit, which is so definitely springlike in its mood.

The blouse top has a newswy story of its own to tell in regard to the gay applique that enhances it. This fruit motif is a print cutout, the idea being new this season in the blouse realm. You will find these fruit and flower appliques repeated again and again on chalk white crepe blouses. Soft front draping in the skirt and coquily fitted lines in the hip-length jacket are important fashion points.

Sensible and Chic

To invest in a slacks and coat two-omes of hollow-cut velveteen of this type is money well spent, for there are so many needs for an outfit just like this. For lounging about, the tailored slacks are flattering, neat and practical.

Women Plan Entire Wardrobe of Cotton

This is going to be a tremendous season for cottons. So varied are the new cottons patriotic women are planning entire wardrobes fashioned of them. An important vogue is the jacket suit, tailored with the precision that is made of a cotton weave that looks like tweed.

The new piques are lovely in that they feature eyelet embroidery in contrasting shades. You'll love the smooth, exquisite chambrays. The striped chambrays make ideal suits for street and office. The flowered cottons are irresistible, especially the printed chintz types.

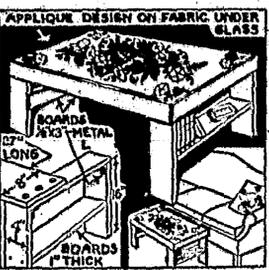

Brides are all enthusiasm over the filmy organdies, volles and lawns for their wedding gowns. You can also get smart white cotton cleankings that make up into smart toppers to wear over summer frocks. Yes, indeed, it behooves the wise buyer to choose her cottons now while the choosing is good.

Boxy, Casual Coats Are Favored for General Wear

The boxy casual spring coat that can be worn over everything is the type selling best. It goes just right over the tailored suit; also wear it over a print dress with matching print accessories and you have a smart ensemble. Navy, brown or beige coats are preferred for general wear.

However, you are privileged to go as color-mad as you please when it comes to boxy types and you choose them in either full length or three-quarter or finger tip length. One of the smartest new fashions is the straight-lined loose coat in black and white check.

in green outline stitch. This was placed over the table top and tacked around the edge. A piece of glass was then cut to fit and 1/2 by 3-inch pieces were screwed to the sides flush with the top of glass.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a sheet—17 by 22 inches—giving complete dimensions and directions for making this table. Even the gal who is just learning to do small chores with hammer, saw and screw driver can follow these simple, clear directions. To get a copy ask for Design 234, address:

IT ALL started with a bright idea for making a simple, painted coffee table from odds and ends. The sketch at the lower left gives the dimensions and shows the simple construction. Two end sections were made first; the top and sides of these being fastened together with metal angles, as illustrated. A shelf was then nailed in and a 1/2 by 3-inch board nailed across the back of it. Two boards for the top of the table were then screwed to the end sections.

Then the needle-lady came in. The table was painted putty color and then waxed. She bought a yard of slightly darker tan sateen and applied a design of bright blue and red morning glories and green leaves on it with stems and tendrils

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To remove whitewash from ceiling, dissolve one pound of alum in one gallon of strong vinegar. Apply with a brush and let it cook in well. Then scrape and wash as usual.

Never empty the water in which spinach and other sandy vegetables are washed into an enameled sink if you wish to keep it looking well.

Leaking faucets can waste gallons of hot or cold water in a few months. See that faucets are tight.

Never leave egg white after it has been beaten stiff. If let stand it will flatten and will not beat up again.

To prevent bacon curling notch the edges, before cooking, with a knife or cleaver.

If a can of paint is placed upside down for several hours before it is opened, it will not be necessary to mix it before using.

To soften shoe polish that has hardened pour a little turpentine over it.

Turn gas burners down when foods have begun to boil. Nothing is gained by too-rapid boiling.

Aviation Cadet Drive

Santa Fe, New Mexico, March 31. An intensive drive has been launched in New Mexico for young men between the ages of 17 and 28 inclusive who can qualify as aviation cadets, it was announced by Lt. Colonel Howard T. Clark, District Recruiting and Induction Officer, today. No special educational requirements are necessary to qualify as aviation cadets, but all applicants will be given a mental alertness test.

This war has shown that land based aircraft is the most powerful striking weapon, and in view of the rapidly expanding production of aircraft, we find it necessary to train more young men to fly them, Colonel Clark said.

Those who have reached their 18th birthday but not their 27th birthday and have not yet been qualified for induction in Selective Service may apply at once at the nearest Aviation Cadet Examining Board, according to Colonel Clark. Those who are 17 but not yet 18 may go to the nearest Aviation Cadet Examining Board, and upon qualifying for cadet training will be deferred until after they become 18. Cadets in the latter status are called within 6 months after their 18th birthday, he said.

Think twice before you travel on the Train

Unless your trip is really essential, you'll do your country a service by staying home

Transportation is a key war industry. The war load on the railroads is mounting steadily.

Southern Pacific trains are very crowded—not comfortable as they used to be.

Military and other essential travel comes first. And when these essential travelers have been taken care of there is really no room on the trains for people travelling unnecessarily.

Unless you absolutely have to travel, we advise you to stay home.

Thanks for your cooperation.

"Renegotiation" Might Touch You
 Under no other circumstances is the fine spirit of neighborly cooperation shown to better advantage in a rural community than in the case of fire or other calamity. This friendly spirit is not based upon personal interest, but upon the deep sympathy that just naturally arises in case of disaster. Of course, there is a personal interest if the fire threatens our own property, but we like to think this unity of spirit in our rural life is typical of America. There is this same community of interest between industry, labor, and agriculture, although sympathy for each other's troubles seldom comes to the surface.
 Every farmer knows that his best market for the produce of his farm is our local domestic market. He depends upon this domestic market to consume over 80 per cent of what our American farms produce each year. If anything happens to his domestic market, like the depression and loss of employment in the early thirties, agriculture is at once affected. On the other hand, if anything happens to the buying power of agriculture, industry is hurt just as badly.
 Right now congress is considering the renegotiation of all government contracts. The law was passed on April 20, 1943. Some people are urging that these new renegotiation bureaus should examine contracts made long before the law was passed.
 Take the case of a contract made in 1940. The work has been done and paid for; taxes have been paid to the government on the profits, if any; labor has been paid and the money balance distributed either in repairs to plant or perhaps paid in dividends to stockholders.
 Danger of Retroactive Measures.
 Suppose that same thing happened to our local store, or even to our farmers themselves. Suppose the prices we received for our crops, or the conservation payments by the government for 1941 or 1942 were suddenly to be "renegotiated." Every farmer has either fed out or sold his crop, purchased new machinery or perhaps painted the barn, or bought a new dress for his wife. If, under a retroactive law, he were suddenly put up against the threat of renegotiation, all of his credit, and perhaps even his investment would be disturbed.
 No one wants unfair profits or excessive dividends out of war contracts. Investigation has shown that over 93 per cent of industry and business made no excessive profits out of the war. Certainly no farmers have received excessive prices for farm crops.
 Now is the Time for Unity
 We want to get on with this war. We must have unity. Unity is based upon mutual confidence in our government and in each other. We are all looking forward to a return of peace after the war has been won. We will then want to resume our domestic markets, replace worn-out farm machinery and resume our normal trade relationships. Industry and business will need all of their American ingenuity and strength to provide jobs which, in turn, furnish our domestic market after the war.
 Thus, renegotiation at present is applied only to industry and contracts with the government. But we all recognize the good old American principle that what is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander.
 If business contracts can be renegotiated under a law passed long after the business contracts were made, how about the sanctity of our own contracts?
 Just now the fire seems far from our own neighborhood, but if we look closely, our domestic markets, both now and after the war, are involved. We can well take time off to show a little neighborly spirit and help put out the fire.

WE'RE SORRY FOLKS

PRESIDENT LISTENS

The President did the listening, instead of the talking, when he conferred on farm manpower and food with three prominent farm leaders...

The farm spokesmen spent about 30 minutes of the 37-minute conference expounding their views on what caused the food shortage now facing the country and what has to be done to remedy it.

He began by telling his visitors that the food situation was "extremely serious."

"That's why I invited you gentlemen here today—to get your opinions on what has to be done," the President said.

The farm leaders accepted the challenge. They charged the administration with "shortsightedness" in dealing with farm labor deferments and contended that government price policies also had contributed to the farm manpower shortage.

Local Draft Problem

"If you want my views, I'll give them to you, Mr. President," spoke up Ezra Nelson. "Two things have to be done and done immediately. First of all, someone in authority here in Washington must tell these local draft boards where to head in."

"They must be told that they have almost as much responsibility to see to it that we have sufficient manpower to produce food for the war effort as they have to provide men for the fighting forces. Food is just as important as munitions in my opinion. We can't fight the war without it, and we can't let our civilians starve."

"A lot of these local-draft boards still feel that they must fill their induction quotas," Nelson continued. "The boards have been assigned quotas, but they don't have to meet them, at least not in sections where there is a crying farm labor shortage. You, or someone else should tell them this."

The President pointed out that many young farmers don't want to be deferred.

"This isn't the fault of the draft boards," he said. "The young men themselves are so patriotic that they do not want to remain on the farm while a war is going on."

It was agreed that steps would have to be taken to convince collectors that they could serve their country as well on the farm as in the army. Goss suggested that one "way out" would be to induct farm hands and then "furlough" them back to the farm at prevailing farm wages, instead of army pay.

Stop Selling Cows

"The second thing that has to be done is for the government to step in and stop the widespread selling of dairy cows and other stock and farm equipment by farmers who are unable to continue in business at present farm price levels," Nelson continued.

"I'm as much opposed to inflation as you are, Mr. President," he added, "but we have got to make it possible for farmers to operate at a fair profit if we are to lick this threatened food shortage. They have got to be assured fair prices in order to pay wages that will keep their help from migrating to jobs in industry."

The co-operative official contended that farms had lost two-thirds of their manpower to war industries because of low farm wages.

The President said that he, too, was deeply concerned about this factor, suggested to his callers that they get together with Secretary of Agriculture Wickard and map out a program embracing their recommendations.

"Then come back and see me again," urged the President. "I want to continue these discussions."

CAPITAL CHAFF

The super-cabinet's careful consideration of how big our armed forces should be was actually a sham battle. FDR has the "old dutch up" over the size of the armed forces and wouldn't take anybody's say-so on this point, except the army's own plan, conceived way back in 1938...

John McClintock, assistant co-ordinator of inter-American affairs, is off to the Amazon, to inspect food and health programs for rubber tappers.

When General Marshall turned down the rank of "Field Marshal" he also knocked over a carefully laid plan whereby Admiral King would become "Admiral of the Fleet"...

To date only three men have won the title "Admiral of the Fleet"—Dewey, Farragut and Porter. Tipoff on the proposal to make King Admiral of the Fleet was so he could outrank Admiral Leahy.

MURDER at PIRATES' HEAD

By ISABEL WAITT

W-N-J RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $500 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. She gets the church, only to find, in an old chest, the body of a man identified as Roddy Kane. The body disappears a few hours later. A fish head bursts, apparently killing an old man named Brown, who is supposed to have lived there. The anonymous letter disappears. A gold club found near the chest is identified as Hugh Norcross'. The guests are once more assembled at the church and Hugh has just said, "Dear, I wish you'd go back to the inn."

Now continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER XI

I felt a little squeeze on my arm, but whichever one of us he meant, Bessie did the answering. "Not without you, Hughie. You'll find I'll stand by, no matter how they lie about you. No matter what they plant on you. Tell 'em to find your blue scarf, why don't you?"

"That," shrilled Lily obliquely, "would be a darned good idea!"

"Hugh," Hugh interrupted. "Blew out to sea, probably. We're going to tell Quade about the auction. He's got a bee in his bonnet it may have something to do with all these outrages."

"If you'll all go sit down somewhere—anywhere," Victor suggested. "And you're going to see the significance of this when we're through. See if you don't. I wasn't here, so why don't I play auctioneer and ask the questions? Nobody has to answer anything he doesn't choose."

Bessie Norcross stood up. My eyes had become accustomed to the dim interior, which, after the basement, seemed fairly light. "Just one minute," Bessie said. "Did you find your bag, Judy? I want my door-key; not the one you gave me last night, which sticks halfway. I'm planning on a nap after lunch and I intend to lock myself in."

"I'd been sure the key I'd swiped from the artist's door really could lock Bessie's. Now, somewhat flustered, I said: 'I'll get your key, Miss Norcross. Don't worry.'"

Albion Potter leaned forward from a pew behind where we were sitting in the church and exclaimed in my ear: "That reminds me I haven't a key to my room, Miss Judy. If—if you could trouble your uncle to find me one, I'd appreciate it, under the circumstances."

"I'll see to it." Anyway, I could supply him. But where the dickens was my bag?

We all cattedled down on the edge of our pews.

"I've got some work to do on my sermon," the minister said. "Will this take long, Mr. Quade?"

"Yes, needn't stay at all," Victor said. "I'll begin with you, then, sir. You did bid at the auction?"

"Certainly, I bid. Didn't everybody?" The Rev. Jonas De Witt had a powerful physique to match his voice. Now he stood up, a portly, middle-aged enigma, and held up his hands. I hoped he wasn't going to offer up a prayer.

"My friends, now that we are gathered together in this house of God, let us begin ministerially. . . ."

"Hence of the devil would be more like it!" muttered the invalid, wheeling up closer.

De Witt paid no attention to him. "Let us help Mr. Quade all we can. I bid twice, I think." He threw back his head with a pulpiter gesture, folding his hands behind him, and started to pace in front of the pews.

"And why did you want to own this tumble-down old—"

"Not tumble-down, my friend. This church will stand another hundred years. The Quakers built for service. Why? Because I was exchange pastor here one happy summer—the happiest time of my life—years ago. Before my trouble over the funds I was accused of taking, but did not take. Later, after I'd been disgraced and put out of my church, I was exonerated and reinstated. All in the records in New York City. Nothing whatever to do with this."

He sighed heavily, one huge paw grasping a dusty pew post. "One would be pretty certain to speak the truth in the house of God. Nothing can be concealed from the Almighty, who sees all, hears all, knows all."

"That's the three monkeys," tittered Lily Kendall. Lily didn't mean to be irreverent, I'm sure. She was just impatient and nervous. When you know something important to tell in the midst of murder and have to listen to a lot of extraneous stuff you nearly burst. I know, because I was bursting myself to find out who'd sent me the money and made a monkey out of me."

"I bid in for purely sentimental reasons—a memory connected with my young wife, now gone," his voice faltered and he sat down—"forever."

There it was again—purely sentimental reasons! Would Victor grab that clue and go for them? He would not. Instead he made them admit what we already knew, that they'd all wanted that church and had bid for it at the auction. But they were cagey. If any of them had come to the Head purposely to be present at the auction—the way Roddy announced he had that fatal night—they were mighty quiet about it now. Hugh Norcross tried to buy the church for Bessie. "My sister needs something to occupy her mind," he said. "We found that the Head was still a pleasant place to come to," he went on hesitatingly, one eye on his keeper. "Her nervousness was so much better, for one thing. The auction was fun, and here was a ready-made chance to get the makings of a gift shoppe cheap."

"I remember you said the old dump would make a good bonfire," Thaddeus Quincy chirped. "Didn't burn up the wrong building by mistake, did you, Norcross? Judy and I saw you scouting around last night, remember?"

"Stop it, Quincy!" Victor said sharply. Hugh had risen. "Sit down, Norcross. Perfectly understandable. You wanted to ally any fears that you were anxious to get—"

"What the devil are you insinuating?"

"Nothing. Just that you thought you'd get it cheaper—the gift shoppe for your sister—if the others didn't see you were anxious."

"That's right, Hughie. Just what you told me, remember?" Bessie backed Victor.

"I kind of hoped I could get it for a studio," the artist spoke up. "But I couldn't go above the Geryrs. Hundred and fifty, didn't they bid, Judy?"

I said I thought so.

"And you, Miss Kendall?"

"Me? Oh, uh, I didn't really want the old thing. Bid for the fun of it. Thought it would go cheap and I could watch the sunsets and play I was on a ship without getting seasick. I hate boats. But I didn't really consider buying it. Of course, if it went for a bargain—never could resist a bargain. Thought maybe my little niece, Gloria Lovelace, might like—"

"Gloria Lovelace, the movie star?" scoffed Bessie. "What would she do with a church?"

"Mighty sweet reformers," Lily said, proudly. "New publicity angle. Remember me tellin' you I have a lovely picture of her I wanted you to see? Remind me to show it when we get back. Gloria's my favorite niece, and a sweeter, lovelier little dahl—"

"I'm sure she is," Victor interrupted. "You must show us that picture by and by. But right now I want to ask you to listen carefully, please. Mr. De Witt had sentimental reasons. Potter wanted a studio. Miss Kendall, a sea place to watch sunsets. The Geryrs', a bungalow. The Norcrosses, a gift shoppe. And you, Mr. Quincy?"

"Oh, I was there—in the doorway. Called in a bid, but stopped when I saw Judy Jason was determined to get the church. Didn't want to bid down Judy."

"That was kind of you, Quincy. Was it because you knew she'd buy it, anyway, for you?"

"For me?" Mr. Q. appeared to be nonplused. "See here, Quade, why should a cripple like me want an ark like this? I can see the sunsets from the inn or the rocks."

"Explain yourself, Quade," cried several voices.

A man was entering the church. We all looked around to see Uncle Wylie, who slunk into one of the rear pews.

"Just covered it up with some good tarpaulin," he said. "Havin' a prayer meetin' or another auction?"

We all shuddered, recalling the poor, charred body under its rough cover. My aunt wanted me, I was informed, but I didn't budge.

"This isn't an auction or meeting, either," the minister said. "Mr. Quade seems to think our bidding had something to do with the mysterious bridge bombings and—the dead man down there. I believe, at last, the papers can describe everything that's happened to the diseased brain of a maniac—and it'll be the truth."

Victor shook his head. "No man-ac wrote the letter to Judy. I believe the person who wrote her that strange request is back of all this. Tell them, Judy, as you recall the contents, about the mysterious letter asking you to buy the Quaker church."

"I did. I'm sure I knew it practically word for word. They made me repeat it all over again. They appeared entirely surprised."

"Add sent you the money!" Lily piped. "How much, dearie?"

But before I could say anything Victor retorted: "Enough, so that she bought the church, as you all know. Had some over. Quite a sum."

"If we could see that letter—"

Did he know it had been destroyed, that he dared ask for it?

"Yes, the letter, though I don't see what that's got to do with killing Roddy Kane. You keep the rest of that kale, honey," Lily ordered, catching her long string of tiny mixed beads on Albion Potter's coat button as she leaned across him and breaking it, as usual, in the undoing.

"She's going to," Victor cut in quickly. "Put it away with the letter, didn't you, Judy? The police will want to examine both of them."

Victor was pretending the mystery letter was still safely concealed in his bureau drawer. He didn't want them to know I'd discovered it was gone. But the person who'd taken it would know. I had to say something.

"Near together," I said. "I—I put the money in my stocking at first, but after what's happened I wish—oh, I wish I could give it back. If one of you wanted me to do you the favor of buying the church, for goodness' sake say so. Come out and admit it, so we won't connect it up with all these horrors."

Nobody stirred. After a moment, Uncle Wylie asked in a strangled voice, "Judy, does Nella know about this?"

"No," I answered. "But she's dying to find out. She couldn't understand how I had $500 to plunk down at an auction when she had to advance me my fare to the Head, and I don't blame her. I wanted to tell her, only the letter impressed silence upon me."

"So you put the money—with the letter?"

"Well, it's in the other—" I stopped. He couldn't want me to tell them exactly where it was, of course. Just to hint to the thief who'd swiped the letter that he'd overlooked the money, and that I'd overlooked his taking the letter.

"Wherever you mean," Victor added pointedly, "I hope it's in a safe place. If the police can identify those bills it will help."

Lily whispered: "Tell him, Judy, and the police won't never see 'em. I think he cent the letter himself. So there!"

Uncle Wylie hurried out of the door, without a word to anybody. The rest of us were all talking at once. They asked me so many questions I was afraid I'd mix up Victor's plans and I did so desperately want to help him.

He saw the position I was in and drew me aside as the group broke up and started outdoors again.

"Any place I could watch your bedroom door, Judy?"

"There's the storeroom. Don't think he'll fall for the trap. Those bills weren't from all over the United States by chance and without sequence."

"Another thing. Lily Kendall did bid a lot. She was in almost at the finish. She's got it in for—" But I didn't have a chance to tell him what she'd hinted about the Pirate's Mouth just then, for the minister beamed, linking his arm with Victor's and dragging him out of the church: "Well, back I go to the inn. Got to get that sermon done some time. And after the police come—"

I pounced on Victor as he disengaged himself. "Please, Mr. Quade. I've got to find my bag. That confounded key is in it."

"Well, I'll be trotting along after the others," De Witt said.

"Where did you leave it?" Victor sounded impatient. "I think it's important, just now, to see who makes a dive for your room. I'd hoped—that storeroom—"

"But it's in the basement. Only take a minute. I'm—I'm afraid to go down there again by myself."

"Oh, all right. Only let's hurry. You're sure you left it there?"

I was sure. But I was extremely doubtful if it was there now. I told Victor how I'd left it near the chest when I tried to fiddle open the lock.

He told me to stay on the stairs and let him hunt around. Certainly the bag wasn't in sight. He opened the chest, looked behind it, and then into a rickety closet, where a few old hymn books were piled on some shelves. Nothing doing.

I knew he was impatient about the old key, and so was I. "Never mind. I'll turn up."

"How does it happen the $500 wasn't in it if you left it right after the auction?" he asked.

"Because I took it out after the sale. Right down here, too. Put it in my—my nose. I never make a practice," I said with some hauteur, "of carrying large sums in my handbag. A sneak thief—good heavens! What was that?"

PEAKING SPORTS

By Bob McShane

WHEN Bill Cox, head of a New York-Philadelphia syndicate, bought the Phils he took over a job that would make the most experienced of baseball men cringe with sheer terror.

Cox, 34-year-old former NFL and Yale athlete, organized the syndicate that bought the Phils after the National League had foreclosed on them. It is his announced intention to bring a new deal to Philadelphia.

The tables have been turned. When Cox took over the team the Phils constituted the most important of the ivory markets. Under the old management, Philadelphia was the trading block of the circuit.

When Gerry Nugent held the reins of the Phils, other ball clubs looked to him for building program reinforcements. Nugent had few commitments about selling players. To him they were worth only the cash they would bring in the open market. The Cincinnati Reds, Dodgers, Giants and Cardinals all managed to win pennants with the help of players bought from Nugent.

The Bargain

The syndicate was reported to have paid $325,000 for the franchise. Included was a lease on Shibe Park—and very little else. At that time there were about 20 players on the roster—most of whom were not world-famed for their prowess.

Before he stepped out Nugent sold the Phils' best pitcher, Rube Melton, to the Dodgers. Catcher Benny Warren went to the Cubs. Nick Etten, the Phils' best hitter, went to the Yankees, and the one other good pitcher, Tom Hughes, is in the army.

The history of baseball in Philadelphia is not a gay, frolicsome tale. It is one of the game's oddest stories. It will come as no startling surprise to point out that every baseball league must have a fall-end club each year. But the Phils have taken advantage of the other seven clubs. Year after year they refuse to be budgeted from that particular, easy-to-remember location. Other clubs may view with alarm, but the Phils ignore them with an indifference verging on boredom.

Pennant Winner

Only once since 1890 did they win a pennant. Pat Moran led them to glory in 1916. Except for a few isolated and unavowable seasons the Phils have remained triumphantly in the cellar since that time.

There are many reasons. The Nugents (Gerry and Mrs. Nugent) inherited their holdings from the late William J. Baker, one-time police commissioner in New York city. Their operating methods followed no time-worn pattern. When the income failed to keep pace with expenses they sold a player or two. They managed to keep the books out of the red temporarily, but it was rather rough on the roster.

Former Phillies can be found in all sections of the league, especially pitchers. Gerry seemed to have a weakness for bartering pitchers.

There's a Bucky Walters at Cincinnati, Claude Pascau with the Cubs, Rube Melton, Kirby Higbe and Curt Davis with the Dodgers. Then, too, there's Dolph Camilli, Dick Bartell, Benny Warren and quite a few others scattered throughout the league.

This isn't to intimate that Gerry was a chump for a deal. In fact, the Giants are reported to have paid $165,000 for Bartell. The Cubs asked up $35,000 for Chuck Klein and at least $100,000 more went for first baseman Don Harst and pitcher Pascau.

Final Effect

The Dodgers paid $20,000 for Camilli and $65,000 for Higbe. It was quite a while ago that Jimmy Wilson was sold by Nugent to the Cardinals. Whatever he cost the Red Birds it was money well spent. He was the man they needed to win four pennants.

The effect of the Nugent management isn't hard to imagine. Fans couldn't stand the punishment. Civic pride can stand only so much. There were times when the Phils might well have closed up shop, selling an occasional player when grocery stores ran low. At least the players wouldn't have been subjected to the unkind remarks of a handful of customers who wandered into the stands in a fit of absentmindedness.

Another unfortunate circumstance was the former scene of operations—the old Baker Bowl. The right field fence was so close the larger lefthanded batters could reach out their bats and touch it. The Phils moved to Shibe Park three years ago but by that time the fans' indifference was miraculous.

Cox isn't going to have an easy time getting players. And he can't hope to rebuild Philadelphia's interest in baseball by maintaining the status quo.

He must give some other club a chance at that last-place position.

U. S. PRODUCTION IS BASIS OF WEALTH

PRODUCTION is the foundation upon which is built our ever-increasing national wealth, consisting of everything upon which a monetary value can be placed. Dividends from our national wealth, including wages, constitute our ever-increasing annual incomes. In the early years of our Republic, that annual income represented less than $150 per capita. Today it is better than $700 per capita. Year after year, decade after decade, it has been more equitably divided. It is the increase in our annual income that has raised the standard of living for all of us in America. It has made possible better homes, automobiles, radios, washing machines, telephones, and all those things which make living for us easier than it was for our parents and grandparents.

It is machinepower of the present as against manpower of past generations that has made increased production possible, and at the same time, reduced the hours of labor and the cost of production. With a tractor attached to a gang plow, the farmer tills more acres and in fewer hours than did his father with a team attached to a single plow share, turning one furrow at a time. The same thing is true in manufacturing plants. Power-driven machinery makes possible the mass production of automobiles. It reduces the cost of cars to a point where all can own them. It reduces the hours of labor and the sweat of manpower days.

Production creates a demand for production to satisfy, and satisfying creates new jobs, which, in turn, create new demands.

To place a limit on production in any line is to stop progress, to break down the foundation upon which our well-being is built. Our need is not less production, but increased facilities and speed in distribution. That is the problem facing not only the economists and statesmen of America, but those of the entire world. It is a problem which can be solved when applied to a world scale. It cannot be done by uttering idealistic phrases or by merely wishful thinking. It calls for the application of the nation's and the world's best brains, and it calls now.

AMERICANS DO NOT LIKE TO BE PUSHED AROUND

WAY BACK 100 years and more ago, England's German King, George III, tried to tell the American people what to do and when to do it, without telling them why and without saying "please."

At Boston they stopped that German king of England in the face and after a few years of armed controversy, they kicked him in the pants at Yorktown, and sent him home. That was America's first experience with a bureaucrat.

Since then the American people have selected leaders whom they expect will lead and not drive. They expect leaders to tell them the "what," "when" and "why" of doing things, with an accompanying "please." They have never been willing to be pushed around, but have been willing and anxious to be led. Whenever their leaders have attempted to become pushers, the American people have demonstrated a habit of dispensing with the services of those pushers, as they did with George III. They do not take kindly to bureaucratic methods or government by decree.

LOCAL OFFICIALS KNOW THE REGULATIONS

RECENTLY I listened to the head of a state rationing organization attempt to explain what rationing is all about and how it is done. After a brief statement as to the necessity of rationing, he offered to answer any questions members of the audience might ask. The questions poured in to the speaker. They were normal inquiries, the kind for which any head of a household, anxious and willing to obey the regulations, would like an answer. The speaker could not answer one in a dozen of those questions. He had either not read the voluminous and often contradictory instructions, or had not interpreted them. A member of the town rationing board came to the rescue and did a satisfactory job of imparting detailed information which fully satisfied those who asked the questions. All of the ability and wisdom is not centered in high places. The federal official was drawing a handsome salary. The local man received nothing for his work, but he was a conscientious American.

SOME YEARS AGO I witnessed a farce prize fight—two would-be gladiators in a ring pounding typewriters. At the call of time, they rushed to the center and read what they were going to do. I am reminded of that at times when I read about what we and our Allies are going to do to the common enemy. More punches and less talk would bring a knockout faster.

THE WORLD DEMAND for food will continue so long as America will provide it on lease-lend terms.

states. Well, all I had to do was step across the street to my office where I had some recent F. B. I. figures in my desk drawer.

Why, on the average, those three states have a worse crime record than the whole rest of the country. And there's a good reason for it, Bill. There's no such thing as a dry community. It's only a question of whether liquor is sold openly or illegally. And when it's sold illegally it means bootleggers, gangsters and more crime."

Lincoln County Woman Wins State Canning Contest

Mrs. Santiago Herrera of San Patricio, New Mexico has received word from the Ker Glass Manufacturing Company that she has been awarded a prize in the canning contest for Farm Security Administration borrowers which is sponsored each year by the company. Mrs. Herrera had one of the two outstanding jars entered in the New Mexico Contest.

The local FSA office advises that Mrs. Herrera first began to can six years ago, that she canned a total of 450 quarts of vegetables for her family of six during 1942, and plans to can at least 700 quarts during 1943.

According to Mr. John R. Curry local FSA Supervisor, many other FSA families in Lincoln County each year fill a canning budget similar to that of Mrs. Herrera. The canning budget is planned by the Homemaker with the assistance of the FSA Home Management Supervisor to fit the needs of the individual family. He says that FSA families are making a real contribution to the war effort by growing and preserving their own food at home and that food rationing will cause them no inconvenience. The Supervisor said that one homemaker told him a few days ago that she had not used a single one of the food ration stamps for her family except the ones for sugar and did not plan to use them as she had home produced milk, butter, eggs, meat, cereals, and vegetables for year round use.

Aviation Cadet Drive

Santa Fe, New Mexico, March 31. An intensive drive has been launched in New Mexico for young men between the ages of 17 and 26 inclusive who can qualify as aviation cadets. It was announced by Lieut. Colonel Howard T. Clark, District Recruiting and Induction Officer, today. No special educational requirements are necessary to qualify as aviation cadets, but all applicants will be given a mental alertness test.

This war has shown that land based aircraft is the most powerful striking weapon, and in view of the rapidly expanding production of aircraft, we find it necessary to train more young men to fly them, Colonel Clark said.

Those who have reached their 18th birthday but not their 27th birthday and have not yet been qualified for induction in Selective Service may apply at once at the nearest Aviation Cadet Examining Board, according to Colonel Clark. Those who are 17 but not yet 18 may go to the nearest Aviation Cadet Examining Board, and upon qualifying for cadet training will be deferred until after they become 18. Cadets in the latter status are called within 6 months after their 18th birthday, he said.

Mr. Gregorio Pino, prominent rancher, is reported very ill, at his ranch home east of town.

In Chicago last year, 8,105 families shared the products of 547 community war gardens.

The New Victory Tax

It is important to understand the new Victory Tax, as it is a charge against your 1943 income. Almost every worker will have to pay it. If you have a regular job, your employer will deduct for the government 5 per cent of your income over $12 a week. Others, including professional people and agricultural workers, will pay their tax in one sum after the end of the year. Certain post war refunds or current credits are granted which will eventually return a portion of the tax you pay, but they will not reduce the 5 per cent withheld each pay day.

The Midnight Express:
Walt Disney's "Victory Through the Air" film, taken from Seversky's book, is being blocked by brass hats in Washington . . . Because it reveals what everyone can savvy at a glance—that planes are the best weapons today . . . Bill Stout, who designed the first Ford planes, is working on what they hope will be the silver of the air after the war. A tiny hundred h.p. job as simple to manipulate as the Model T . . . Mr. Whiskers just collared a woman agent here—whose operations were right out of a spy film. Posed as a Navy nurse with all the proper apparel, etc. Worked the midtown bars, talking to servicemen, and had even married three of them.

Bob Burns, the ex-farmer, has done a series of recordings for the Dept. of Agriculture, to encourage the growing of peanuts. They are christened: "Nuts to you, Adolf!" . . . The cigar rationing for troops at Guadalcanal: Two cigars weekly. In Africa they get four . . . Although he's been in the Army a year, Carol Bruce sends her manager 15 per cent of her wages.

The sets for the film, "Attack by Night," will be replicas of actual Norwegian towns—with OWI supervision . . . Hollywood's veteran cameramen, now in the Army Signal Corps, are taking six-week refresher courses. They must "learn" how to hold a camera "correctly." And to develop negative! . . . Mary Pickford will adopt children, according to coast buzz . . . The Mills Brothers start a trek back to the Big Time with a choice spot in "Reveille with Beverly" . . . Geo. Lowther, who does the "Superman" program, was the first page boy hired by NBC.

The Navy reminds girls that a WAVE or SPAR may request other assignments besides paper or desk work. The duties are varied. Acrographer, for instance, or radio communications, storekeeper, parachute rigger, and so on . . . Elton Britt, a singing cowboy, recorded "There's a Star-Spangled Banner Waving Somewhere." Made him a high bracket man. To date: 999,999 records.

The Wireless: "R. Horkness, the Washington reporter for WEAF, was puzzled by the to-doodle about Russia not advertising the aid from her allies. Horkness revealed that Pravda, the Soviet newspaper, published a full report only recently . . . The Hays office ruled that censors in films shouldn't have American accents. He should listen to the Quiling shortwave, whose accents are as American as hot-dogs . . . You'll twirl your dials a long time before you catch anything more Hip-Hip-Hurray than Paul Robeson putting the big baritone to "Ballad for Americans" . . . The crossover act banged over by Crosby and Hope would have been good for a dozen straight weeks at the Palace on Broadway.

The Magazines: The war has landed right in Vogue's lap. That mag tells its flabbergasted readers, mostly ex-motorists, one of the grimmest truths—that it's hard to read on a bus. God, sir, is this America? . . . Now Republic's Manny Farber tags Saroyan's flicker, "The Human Comedy," a chocolate soda made out of words . . . Newsweek scrubs away all the Congressional hullabaloo about bureaucracy and plates it in all a built-up for the '44 elections . . . The startling rise of juvenile delinquency in the problem thrashed out by Ella Winter in the current Collier's. The antidote for the wave of inco-gants criminals, the author reports, is more playgrounds, dancing activities and other healthy forms of relaxation to keep them occupied. Remember Mrs. Roosevelt wanted to do that, and was howled down by some "enraged" Congressmen!

It happened in front of the New York Sun where some Newspaper Guild pickets were parading and distributing leaflets. A police car drove up, and a tough-looking barge got out . . . The pickets expected him to break up the line and seize the leaflets, as had happened so many times before. But he merely brushed by and went into the Sun offices . . . When he came out puzzled pickets asked: "Aren't you gonna do anything?" . . . "No," he said, "They told you were blocking the sidewalk. I told them I managed to get into the building. They wanted to know about the leaflets, and I reminded them about the Freedom of the Press."

Jimmy Cagney, according to a letter he wrote to the Norwegian Embassy, revealed that he is part Norwegian. It will be published in a book by one of the Norwegian diplomats . . . Ever since Cagney married, he has given his wife something green for St. Patrick's Day. This year the gift, as green as was a stack of gov't war bonds . . . Newspapers, which have debunked wild rumors of clothing rationing, haven't been read apparently. Stores complain of "clothing runs" every weekend.

Beautiful Quilt Made From Scraps of Silk

MANY an old-time art is being revived today and the art of making old-fashioned crazy patch quilts is one that fits into our times. All you need is scraps of silk and odds and ends of embroidery thread. The pieces are sewn to a foundation of light weight cotton material with a variety of embroidery stitches.

This colorful patchwork may then be used for a new cover for a comforter. Another idea is to cover a worn woolen blanket with it. The result will be a warm and luxurious quilt that will last for years.

NOTE—Book 7 of the series available to readers shows another crazy patch design and gives directions for more than 20 stitches and combinations of stitches to be used for this work. Book 2 of the series gives directions for 42 other stitches that you will want to use for your quilt. Books are 15 cents each, and requests should be sent direct to:

War Stamp Sales Over Half Billion Dollars, Album Drive Opens

Appealing Margaret C. Russell of the War Savings Staff ticks up this new Treasury poster which will be seen from coast to coast. It pictures retailers' slogan, "SAY YES." A drive is underway for Americans to buy additional War Stamps to fill albums and convert them into War Bonds.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The nation's retailers from the tiniest hamlets to the mighty cities are netting as a spearhead in a great Treasury Department campaign to sell the additional War Savings Stamps needed to fill more than 100,000,000 albums now in the hands of the American people.

According to a report released by the Treasury Department today, sales of War Savings Stamps totaled $540,777,000 for the period from May 1, 1941, through November, 1942.

Stamp sales have risen from less than three million dollars per month when they were first introduced to the public to an average of more than fifty million dollars per month at the present time.

Navy's Dry-Land Cruiser Coming Here Soon

Carrizozo will be visited soon by a U. S. Navy recruiting "cruiser" touring New Mexico and staging rallies for men and women interested in enlisting in the Navy. Aboard the unique truck and trailer unit is a crew of four men who will give information to women between 20 and 36 years of age, needed for the WAVES, and men who are 17 to 18 or 38 to 50.

"The Navy has a long and hard job ahead of it in this war," says Lieut. B. G. Manley, Officer in charge of the New Mexico Recruiting District. "We need more manpower, and womenpower, too. I urge every patriotic man and woman to attend the rally in their home town, whether or not they are of military age. Citizens not eligible for service can help us by learning of our needs and passing the word along."

The land-going cruiser weighs four tons and is 48 feet long. It has seats convertible into sleeping bunks, and like its sea-going sisters has a "galley" for preparing meals while "under way."

A built-in loudspeaker system will broadcast music and talks during the day-time rally at a central location in each town. At night, Navy movies will be shown free of charge in a local hall. Prospective applicants can go aboard the cruiser for interviews.

The 1500 mile cruise, starting from Santa Fe, will include the following towns (dates are approximate):

Socorro, March 24; Magdalena March 25; Hot Springs, March 26; Hatch, March 27 and 28; Deming March 29; Hurley, Bayard and Santa Rita on March 30; Silver City, March 31; Lordsburg, April 1; Las Cruces, April 2; Alamogordo, April 3 and 4; Tularosa, April 5; Carrizozo, April 6; Roswell, April 7; Dexter, Hagerman and Lake Arthur on April 8; Artesia, April 9, 10 and 11; Carlsbad, April 12; Hobbs, April 13; Eunice April 14; Jal, April 15; Lovington, April 16; Tatum, April 17; Portales, April 18 and 19; Clovis April 20; Melrose April 21; Ft. Think twice before you travel on the Train

Unless your trip is really essential, you'll do your country a service by staying home

Transportation is a key war industry. The war load on the railroads is mounting steadily.

Southern Pacific trains are very crowded—not comfortable as they used to be.

Military and other essential travel comes first. And when these essential travelers have been taken care of there is really no room on the trains for people traveling unnecessarily.

Unless you absolutely have to travel, we advise you to stay home.

Thanks for your cooperation.

Bessie

"All right, Bessie," said the boss of the little factory which was making jackets for soldiers. "Did you want to see me about something?" The thin middle-aged woman stood up from the chair in the outer office and looked earnestly at the boss with her huge, grave gray eyes.

"It's about this ten percent pledge," she began.
 "Oh, that's all right, Bessie," the boss said. "I'd been meaning to speak to you about that. We don't expect you to pledge ten percent of your pay for War Bonds like the others are doing. We know you have a hard time making ends meet since Jake died. Eleven kids, isn't it? That's quite a lot of mouths to feed. Let's see, you make $25.50 a week including overtime, don't you?"

"Yes, sir, but . . ."
 The boss smiled.
 "Don't give it another thought, Bessie. You've got your hands full now. Uncle Sam knows you haven't got a penny to spare. Don't let it worry you. We understand."

The boss turned to go back into his private office.

"But what I wanted to say was . . ." Bessie raised her voice and the boss looked around. "I wanted to say, would a dollar a week be too little? You see, after we get the living expenses paid, there's just about a dollar a week left. Would they be willing to accept a dollar a week?"

"They'd be more than willing," the boss said quietly. "They'd be proud."

Bessie looked relieved.
 "All we have to do is scrimp a little," she said. "I'd feel just terrible if we couldn't give something."

Back in the boss' office a representative of the Treasury Department was waiting. The boss shut the door and sat down.

"I've just seen the greatest single sacrifice I know of," the boss said. "Listen, if you want to hear what American women are made of . . ."

A SERIES OF SPECIAL ARTICLES BY THE LEADING WAR CORRESPONDENTS

U. S. Sub in Jap Waters

By Lieut. Slado Cutter, U. S. N.

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

Our United States submarine had been operating against the enemy in the vicinity of Japanese-held islands when, one afternoon, our captain, Lieut. Parks, called me to his cabin.

I thought his eyes gleamed with unusual excitement, but he only said casually, "Good news, Slade," and handed me a wireless he had just received. I held it to the light and read: "Proceed at once to the coast of Japan."

Sometimes it is difficult to repress an impulse to whoop with delight, and this was one of those times. This was the moment we had lived for, the moment every submariner dreams about.

A Surface Engagement.

We turned and cruised steadily westward. The Japanese coastal patrol system extends many miles to sea and is painstakingly thorough. The first time we got very close to shore before we were spotted. Just before daylight, as we were preparing to dive, a patrol boat came at us with its guns spitting. We didn't want to waste torpedoes—we were a long way from replacements—so decided to fight it out with our deck guns. It was our first surface engagement and it proved almost disappointingly brief. One of our first shells struck the enemy's magazine and he simply disintegrated. We cruised over the area, but found no survivors.

Sink Tanker in 3 Minutes.

A day later, in the same neighborhood, we spotted a big tanker about sunrise. After some maneuvering we gave him three torpedoes. All were hits. The third struck aft, and must have exploded his boilers. There was a terrific blast that threw parts of his bridge clear over his mainmast, and he sank in three minutes and four seconds. He went down by the stern, his bow rising high in the air, to give us an excellent view of the rising sun pointed on it. We surfaced and cruised among the men in the water, intending to give them emergency supplies, but a bomber came winging out from the land and we had to dive.

At this time we were in the busy steamer lane between Yokohama and Singapore where important targets might be expected. So, when Lieutenant Pleatman saw a heavy smudge on the horizon, we hurried over to investigate. It proved to be a troop transport of 13,000 tons, heavily loaded with men and supplies and escorted by a large destroyer. It was headed for Singapore.

Sink Transport and Freighter.

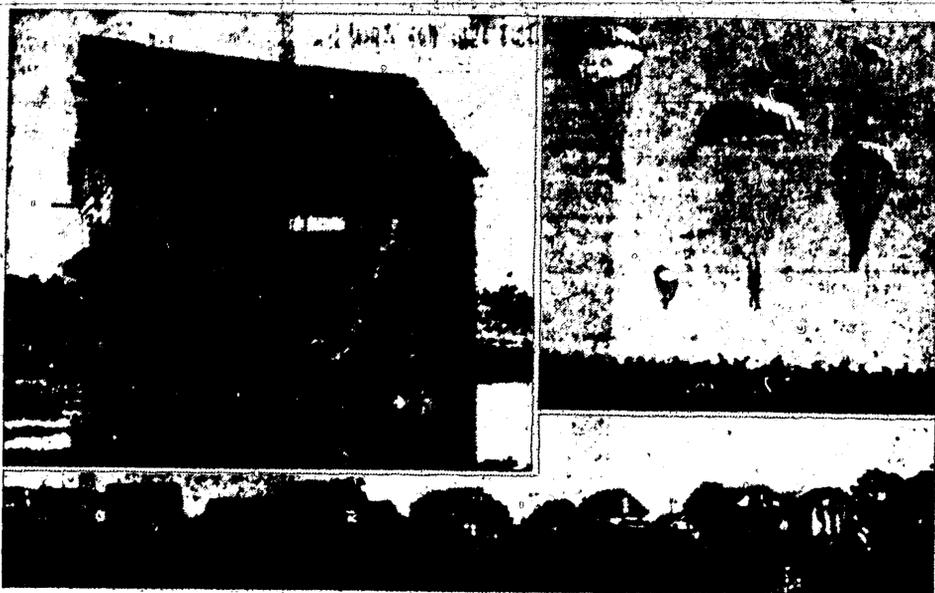

We had a ticklish problem. The destroyer was weaving a zigzag course which could not be predicted. It was a long time before we could maneuver into a position off the transport's port beam. We gave her two torpedoes. Both hit. Before we could turn, the destroyer was coming far 'us full speed, following down the torpedo tracks. We dived and maneuvered to safety. When the destroyer had to leave us to pick up survivors, we raised our periscope in time to see the transport settle slowly on an even keel.

An interisland freighter was our next target. We decided to attack with our deck gun to save torpedoes, so surfaced at point-blank range and let go. We had fired 17 rounds, when three things happened simultaneously: Our gun jammed with a projectile wedged in the barrel, their ship caught fire, and the Japs surrendered by striking their colors and running up a white assortment of white cloths ranging from sheets to underwear. They took to their rafts, and their ship continued to burn until she sank.

During the daylight we cruised along the sea lanes at periscope depth seeking worth-while targets. Nights, we would surface in a quiet spot, usually in the lee of one of the many small islands, to charge our batteries. It was there that I smelled for the first time the strange, haunting fragrance of the Japanese forests. At dawn we lay offshore for a long time, watching the people.

Lieutenant Connors, standing periscope watch one morning, electrified the ship by reporting: "Target on the starboard bow!" As we moved up to let her have it, we discovered that she had been masking an escort destroyer. He was on her opposite side; we couldn't hope for a more favorable opportunity. Without delay, we fired a bow torpedo. It had barely left the tube when the destroyer swung sharply and came charging toward us. We fired another torpedo into his path. What followed was a submarine's dream.

Washington MERRY-GO-ROUND

DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C. SOPHOMORE CONGRESSMEN

The President's heralded meeting with congressional freshmen had an unheralded sequel on Capitol Hill. Day after the White House party, 12 second-term house Democrats held a luncheon in Speaker Sam Rayburn's private dining room, at which there was considerable good-natured, and some not so good-natured, grousing about the President's relations with congress.

Object of the luncheon, arranged by Rep. Oren Harris of Arkansas, was to enable the second-termers to "console" each other for not being invited to the White House for a party when they were freshmen.

Among others, Rep. Sam Russell and Eugene Worley of Texas took great delight in joshing Rayburn: "Sam, why can't you get us an invitation to the White House?"

However, the luncheon took a serious turn when scappy Rep. Edward Hebert of Louisiana lambasted the White House for not consulting with congress on new legislation, and criticized his colleagues for submitting to White House "dictates." Observing that only 20 of the 45 Democratic freshmen of the last session survived the November elections, the Louisiana declared:

"If a lot of us had paid more attention to our constituents instead of to White House advisers, there wouldn't be so few of us here today. In the last year of Huey Long's tenure, he controlled both houses of the Louisiana legislature completely except for one man. But Huey didn't try to ram through any bills without letting each man know what was going on and making him feel like he had a stake in the program. We in congress haven't been treated like that."

Hebert said he held no enmity against the House leadership, adding to Rayburn:

"I've always been very fond of you, but I've never been able to vote for you on a national ticket. I hope I will be able to cast my ballot for you next year, either as top man or running mate on the Democratic ticket."

This brought loud cheers from the luncheoners and blanches from Rayburn, who responded with a fatherly lecture urging these present not to let personal animosities influence their actions in congress.

AMERICAN BOMBERS

Despite the criticism you may hear of American planes, U. S. airmen who have studied the current bombings of Europe say privately that one American bomber is worth five of the British.

American planes are heavily armed and heavily armored. Able to protect themselves, they operate in the daylight, with precision bombing, whereas the British planes, flying at night, must lay down a pattern of bombs over a whole area, hoping that the principal target will be hit.

British planes can carry a heavier load of bombs, but the fewer bombs carried by the American planes are more effective because they go straight to the target.

Further, American planes have suffered fewer losses proportionately than the British, both operational and combat losses.

In fact the American contribution is so important that the all-out bombing of Germany must await the availability of more U. S. planes.

Most people think there is a heavy concentration of American planes in England now, and that the current round-the-clock bombings are the big show. Neither is correct.

There was a concentration of U. S. planes in England last summer and fall, made with intended publicity. This had the effect of sending the Nazis scurrying all over western Europe to mend their defenses. Then U. S. air strength was pulled out of England for the mission it had been intended for—the invasion of North Africa.

U. S. air strength in England is now being built up again, and when the time comes, the two air forces combined will stage the show intended to knock Germany out of the war.

MEXICO BARS MIGRATION

No one is advertising it, but Mexico has slapped a temporary ban on the recruitment of its workers for farm jobs in the United States.

This was expected to be one of our big sources of farm labor in the Southwest. However, no Mexican laborers have been imported in more than a month, despite feverish efforts by the Farm Security administration to bring in approximately 50,000.

Mexico is not keen about the recruiting program, and some time ago notified the state department that it was reserving the right to specify the sections of Mexico where labor could be recruited. Reason given was that Mexico couldn't afford to have labor drained from industrial sections.

Meanwhile the Farm Security administration has submitted orders for 4,000 Mexicans, but is still waiting for an okay to begin recruiting.

Note: So far we have imported 2,300 Mexican farm workers under 30-to-90 day work contracts.

Telling time in the Navy is on the 24-hour system. Morning hours are from one to twelve, but afternoon hours are from 1300 to 2400 (midnight). So if you ask a sailor the time and he says "coventeen," subtract 12 and you get five o'clock in the afternoon. It's simpler if you ask him what cigarette he smokes. Chances are he'll say: "Camel," for Camel is the favorite cigarette among Navy men as well as among men in the Army, Marines, Coast Guard. (Based on actual sales records from service men's stores.) MURDER at PIRATES HEAD

SW-N-L-RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: Judy Jason, who is telling the story, receives an anonymous letter enclosing $300 and asking her to bid for an abandoned church to be auctioned the next day. The body of a man identified as Roddy Lane is found in a chest in the basement of the church, but disappears a few hours later. A fish shed burns, apparently killing an old man named Brown who is supposed to have lived there, and Uncle Wylie's pipe is found near the burned shed. Evidence has also been found against Bessie Norcross, her brother Hugh, Albion Potter and the Reverend Jonas DeWitt, when the anonymous letter mysteriously disappears.

New continue with Judy's story.

CHAPTER X

Victor's hand was on the door-knob. "You keep close to me, Judy." I flushed again. "But, I don't see—we could always get them to give us a sample of their penmanship. I remember the funny capital 'F' in Friend; it had a flourish on it."

Victor might have been speaking to a child. "The point is, my dear, that the comparison is no longer important—with the original gone. But it lets Lane and Brown out, in a way, and a possible third-party killer in. Don't you see?"

"I thought you believed that all the time, the way you were questioning everybody, Mr. Quade."

"Let me handle this. You keep mum. Maybe I'll spring a trap. Bills are from all over the country, and none in sequence, just as I surmised. Smart boy, this criminal!" He reached over and laid a hand on my shoulder. "Be careful, won't you?"

"I'll stick like a burr," I smiled thinly, following him out into the hall. Then I hurried upstairs and struck the catch in my bureau drawer and raced down. Chowder or no chowder, I was going with the bunch this time. They could eat coned soup if Auntie couldn't manage alone.

Bessie, Victor had whetted my curiosity almost as much as my fear by the warning he'd given me. I had no intention of staying behind and being grabbed and coerced by some unknown assassin while the menfolk were down by the Pirate's Mouth. I simply couldn't believe the murderer was one of our guests, and my own guess would have been that Lane was responsible.

We found the gang gathered around Albion Potter, who was dabbling at his little church picture. "Your aunt gave me some here," he beamed.

"Ain't it swell?" shrieked Lily Kendall.

"Fine," I said, wondering who on earth would want it after what had happened there.

"If you like it, I'll give it to you, Miss Jason," Potter said shyly.

"Well, I'd be delighted, Mr. Potter," I tried to sound sincere.

"Do one for me and I'll pay you $25," Lily said. "I'm dyin' to have one to show my niece."

"Twenty-five dollars!" Albion was overcome. "Miss Kendall, I'll begin it at once. Unless Judy—Miss Jason," he corrected himself hurriedly, "will let me give you this one and do her another. Fact is, I could use that money for an eagle."

"Sure. Sell every chance you get." I ran down the steps where Mr. Quincey was thumping his cane and hollering, "Well, well—what are we waiting for?"

We were waiting for Hugh Norcross. He flattered an orange square of silk at his sister. "No your hair up with this, Bess. You're right, that blue scarf has vanished. What of it? Get another for half a dollar."

"You could not. I paid two-cents-five for that scarf last Christmas. And it isn't in any of my things, because I've hunted."

"Well, it doesn't matter," Hugh said carelessly. "I wish you'd check it about that old coat in the midst of—"

They started on ahead. Bessie, although the morning was growing warmer every minute, so that I was comfortable in my sleeveless print, still wore her bespotted white sports coat.

The minister's eyes kept glancing over his shoulder at Mr. Quincey, who worked his wheels while Lily Kendall guided the chair. She kept up her incessant chatter with all of them, but especially Mr. Potter. Could he do a portrait of her in her pink lace with crystal beads? No, the crystals, come to think of it, were broken. The jet would do. He could? She offered him $20 and he said, boy! would I wait for my church picture till he'd earned that?

"Gladly."

"You, or rather, Mrs. Gerry, will get some of it back. If—if I get a few commissions, I'll stay longer at the Head. It's so beautiful here."

I glanced at him and smiled. Maybe some of the other boudoirs would follow suit and Aunt Nellie's season wouldn't be ruined, after all. But as we reached the cliff where you take the treacherous path down into the Pirate's Mouth, he held back, shaking his head. "Not for me. I've that what-d'you-call-it-phobia—when you're afraid of high places? I wouldn't go down there for even $100."

"Nor I," Bessie agreed, drawing back.

"Why should anybody go down?" I asked. "You can see into the Pirate's Mouth by coming over to this rock and leaning over. You do it,

Mr. Quade. Mr. Norcross or Mr. De Witt will hold your legs. Like kissing the blarney stone."

"I'll look. Lemme. I don't get hydrophobia," Lily screamed.

We had to laugh, and it relieved the tension. Victor Quade lay down on the rock, but Lily grinned back at us.

"Oh, go ahead and laugh. High, ain't it? Of course I know hydrophobia is really what they call it when people play sick all the time. Like my niece, before she got in pictures. What I meant was cliff-tomania."

She flung her full bulk alongside Victor, till I held my breath lest she shove him into the deep. But in another moment Victor rose, shaking his dark head disappointedly.

"Nobody down there on that shelf. Not a thing, so far as I could see, with the fissure at the far end and the ocean below. What a frightful place! Either way, a thin person might roll off into the sea."

"Used to be called Lovers' Nook," Bessie sighed. She walked away rapidly toward the church steps, with Hugh following to console her, as per usual.

"Won't somebody help Miss Kendall up?" I asked.

But Lily yelled, "Don't touch me—I can get up myself!"

It took her quite a time. The men turned away, politely, while the hot rottering land breeze played with her ballooning skirts. But finally the behemoth came panting up to me. "Somethin's rotten in Denmark!" she hissed. "Keep away from that Quade feller!"

Keep away from Victor? What could she mean? I was dying to make her be more explicit, but she shook her rigid marcel at me forbiddingly.

"Not now!" This time the hiss, whispered so that I don't see how anybody could have failed to overhear it, was a command.

It's only a few steps from the top of the cliff overlooking the vicious Pirate's Mouth to the site of the Quaker church. The inn guests were making toward Bessie and Hugh, cooing on the steps. Victor came back beside Lily Kendall, who immediately switched to the other side of me.

"Great bootleggers' cache—that big shelf of rock, Judy."

"Yes. Uncle Wylie said the coast guard found some stuff hidden down there during prohibition. The bootleggers, fearing a raid, had tried the Pirate's Mouth, but somebody must have tipped them off."

Victor wasn't looking at me, I noticed. He was watching Lily Kendall. Why? She was marching, eyes and bosom front, like a grenadier.

"Well, even the police wouldn't find anything today," he sighed, giving her a side glance. She only pressed her lips tighter together.

"What did you expect to find—Roddy Lane?" I asked.

"Or old man Brown?" Mr. Quincey spoke up. He was looking at his watch. "Why, it's only five minutes of 9. Never saw a morning last so long or fly so fast, either."

"I'm practically starved," Bessie called. "Hugh wants a look at the golf club Mr. Quade says he saw in the basement. Then we're going back to the inn. I've got to have an aspirin."

"Why don't you go along back now?" Victor asked. "I'm sure—"

"—Miss Kendall will be glad to go with you."

"Sorry, Miss Kendall stays." This was the first time I'd heard Lily snap out of her kittenishness. "With the gang," she added, her lower lip protruding till she looked positively menacing.

"Wise lady," Victor shrugged.

"I'll wait for my brother," Bessie said with finality. "Are we all to go down to that horrible cellar?"

"Why, of course not. Better if nobody went," Victor explained. "There is a club there. May be your brother's, maybe not. Doesn't prove a thing either way. What I thought was blood may be rust, perhaps, though I don't think so. The police will be ripping it we mess around too much. This is certain—none of us wants to leave fresh prints on anything down there."

"I wish I could go!" Thaddeus Quincey regretted plaintively. "Take the same committee you had before and have another look, Quade. And you men do what he tells you. He's up in this murder stuff—and the rest of us aren't."

"Thanks for that double-edger. Victor Quinn accepts the compliment. Victor Quade has his doubts."

I gave Victor the key and the crowd piled into the little old musty church. Goodness! How dark it was! The cobwebby windows, with their darkly stained glass, showed scarcely any light at all. The vestibule was light enough where the sun streamed through, but save for that bright patch of searchlight sun down the main aisle, the pews were almost in a tomb till your eyes got—did I say tomb? Tomb is right!

Lily astonishingly took command. "Why should the men have all the fun? Come on, Judy Jason. We ain't murderers. We don't play golf. Let's us take a peek. Why give the real killer a chance to take his honky and give the stick a swipe?"

Good idea, several conceded. Victor didn't like it. He was afraid we'd disturb the position of things, but Lily was already waddling down the main aisle.

The Rev. De Witt surprised us by announcing he was going outside with his glasses to take a squint at the bridge. The millman might be early. Picnickers might be arriving at the Head. Was it likely everybody was sleeping late after the night-before celebration? And, look, he'd seen beats in the harbor. Not close, of course. But couldn't we signal? Build a fire—? He stopped, remembering last night's, I suppose, and the uselessness of such procedure on the Fourth of July.

"Go along out and check off a couple of rockets," the artist added facetiously. Shall we help him, Mr. Quade?"

"Why not? You've no call to stay here. It's occurred to me that the auction—"

That's all I heard. Lily and I took the narrow crooked basement stairs. She had to turn sideways, once, but she made it. I was glad Victor had given me back my flashlight. Even by daylight, that dank, rocky floored hole is spooky.

Lily stood quaking on the bottom stair while I tiptoed to the sea chest, eazed now, and as innocent-looking as when I'd knelt in front of it and tried to wheedle the lock with a bobby pin. Only now the lock hung open.

I played my torch down the space between the chest and the wall. Sure enough, there was the golf club! I didn't want to touch it. The blood was unmistakable. It gave me the jitters.

"Come here, Miss Kendall. Look at this."

She came, quivering, and leaned down to pick it up.

"Wait," I handed her my handkerchief. "Use this. Just see if there are initials on the end and put it right back."

"Plain as day!" Lily gasped. "But I can't believe that nice Mr. Norcross did any killing—not after what I saw in—"

"Hurry up, you girls."

We both whirled at the sound of Victor's voice. Neither of us had heard him come down the stairs, but there he stood. I could hear the babble of voices above and the laughing of the sea outside. "Coming," I said, but Lily stood glaring at him.

"They're going to re-enact the auction," Victor whispered added caution to me: "You keep mum about the letter. Let me. Coming, Miss Kendall?" He started to stand aside on the stair to let her pass; then, seeing the futility, he went along up.

"O. K.," Lily said. "I'm right behind you. But you can't tell me that nice Hugh Norcross—"

Bessie cut in, chillingly: "So it was Hugh's club!" She was leaning down at the head of the stairs, the way I'd seen her that night she told me about the missing turpentine. Whenever I think of Bessie Norcross I see her brooding white face leaning over stairs, listening.

"And it doesn't prove a thing," Victor said, comfortingly.

"Sure, it don't, honey," Lily panted. "Proves he's innocent, if you ask me. The feller that done it left it on purpose. Your brother would 'a' thrown his into the sea to wash off the blood, if nothin' more."

"Then Quade was right?" Mr. Quincey, who'd been wheeled into the main aisle, worked his way nearer.

"There was blood on it?" he asked.

"Be-r-r-r-r! No doubt about it. Somebody's done you dirt, Hugh Norcross."

Hugh grabbed my arm, while Bessie clung to the other one of his.

"Dear, I wish you'd go back to the inn," he said.

Speaking Sports

THE day of power baseball, symbolized in recent years by the New York Yankees, seems to be passed. The old-fashioned game, with a revival of run-scoring strategy, is coming back. And for two reasons:

- (1) The topnotch home run hitters are going to be missing.
- (2) The rabbit baseball is gone—at least for the duration.

With the real power hitters like Hank Greenberg, Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio in the armed services, the long hits will be considerably fewer. Other muscle men are in a retiring mood, and still others figure they can get their best likes in by working in a defense job.

Remembering Hitters

There will be some good hitters on deck. Mel Ott has led his league in home runs. Dolph Camilli, Charley Keller, Bill Nicholson, Ernie Lombardi and Rudy York get distance, but they never managed to get up there with the leaders.

Even if the power hitters were back it's far from certain they would be getting distance-as-usual. The dead ball is re-appearing. It's an ersatz number of unusual construction. As you know, (or do you?) golf balls are covered with a gummy, resistant substance called balata. This material is being reprocessed and used in baseballs for purposes of elasticity. Early experiments left much to be desired and the manufacturer is still experimenting.

The importance of the rabbit ball is beyond question. The records show that nobody came close to the 20 home run mark until Babe Ruth totaled 29 in 1919—when the lively ball is said to have made its first appearance. In 1927 Ruth racked up 60 circuit blows.

Double Threat

Only twice has Ruth's home run record been in danger. Jimmy Foxx threatened with 58 in 1932 and Hank Greenberg with 58 in 1933. If conditions had been the same as when Ruth set his record, both might have broken his mark. Immediately after Ruth boosted the total, several parks started adding barriers which brought new obstacles into the paths of the heavy hitters. St. Louis, for instance, erected a right field screen which interfered with the home run production of Foxx and Greenberg. They both dented it with hits that earlier would have been home runs.

When the Bambino set the record a ball that hit fair and bounced into the stands was a home run. When Foxx threatened in 1932 that same ball was good for only a two-base hit.

From now on it is likely that one run will have an importance that it has lacked for at least 20 years. Teams tried for clusters of runs. They won ball games. Hitters figured there was little use in trying to steal a base and risking the chance of being thrown out. Why try a hit-and-run or squeeze play when there was a good chance of the batter socking the ball out of the park?

Chop Hitters

With the appearance of the dead ball the chop hitter will be the most valuable. It will be up to him to "hit 'em where they ain't." They'll play for the single runs because single runs are going to mean more. More emphasis will be placed on coaching. Players will have to be taught how to bunt and how to run bases. Extra base hits will come through speed and agility. Sliding will be important. Ty Cobb used seven different slides. The modern player uses one. Speed and deception will play important parts in this year's game.

Power baseball will give way to a more scientific game. It shouldn't hurt baseball in any way.

SPORTS SHORTS

• Moté favorites won races at Chicago's Sportsman's Park last season than at any other race track in the land.

• Luke Appling of the White Sox will be working for his 1,030th run and 2,000th hit this season. He has 923 American league runs, 1,934 American league hits.

• Joe DiMaggio didn't hesitate when asked who he thought was the best center fielder in baseball. "The best," he said, "is Domingo—even if he is my kid brother."

FARMER MUST HAVE ADEQUATE LABOR, SUPPLIES

HOW FAR can America go in meeting post-war conditions and demands?

We are having difficulties today in feeding our armed forces, our home folks and our allies. When the war stops, we will be called upon to feed the starving people of Norway, Finland, France, Belgium, Holland, Hungary, Poland, Germany, Greece, Italy, Rumania and China, friend and enemy alike. We cannot let them die of starvation when it is possible to reach them. The demand from England and from Russia will continue.

If the starving people of the world cannot be fed, and are not fed, cessation of war will bring anarchy, rather than that millennium which our theorists are dreaming of as war's aftermath.

It is as essential that we prepare for peace conditions, with peace on the way, as it was to prepare for war, when war threatened. Food is the demand of peace, as munitions are the demand of war.

To produce the needed food, our farmers must have help. If they are to cultivate more acres, raise larger crops, produce more dairy and meat products, they must have more generous treatment in the matter of labor, more machinery and a price for their products which will enable them to meet war-time production costs.

The farmer has been the "forgotten man" in the war and peace pictures. Unless that attitude changes quickly, unless the farmer is given the help he so badly needs, help he must have if he is to produce the necessary food products, we will win the war, but lose the peace.

FAE-FLUNG BATTLEFRONTS AND AMERICAN 'HOMES'

THE WORLD is made up of homes. In America the home may have been housed in a crude building of sod in frontier times. It may be in a hovel or a tenement of a great city. It may be in a village cottage or the commodious farm house. It may be a mansion. However it may have been housed, if it was a home, it is the spot on which our memories and affections center. If a home, it was provided for by Dad, and presided over by Mother. It afforded the playground of our childhood, the study center of our school days, the place we left to seek our way in the outside world. It is a spot we do not forget and for which we have a reverence if it was something more than a house. Homes constitute America's most valuable asset. May nothing ever destroy their sanctity.

It is to home that the thoughts of our boys on the far-flung battlefronts of the world are continuously turning. A home is the one spot in all America to which they will return when the war is over. It is the one spot where they know a welcome awaits them. As a people, we must preserve the conditions which make homes possible.

ESSENTIAL WORKERS CAN BE REPLACED

"IF I should die or quit, this place would close up." I have heard that statement made by numerous people. I have known some of them to die or quit. I have never known of any case in which the loss of one employee caused "the place to close up."

No one is so essential as he imagines he is. To do without him might be inconvenient to an employer for a few hours or a few days, but the business goes on, the gap is filled, and within a brief time that "essential" employee is forgotten.

We see great leaders and think of them as being essential to the continued progress of the world. But they pass on, as they must, and the world moves on. They were valuable, but not essential.

Ego is a small word with a large meaning. It is well to have come of it, enough to give us confidence in ourselves, but not enough to convince us that we are essential.

HORSESHOES AND WAR

FOR YEARS pitching horseshoes was a favorite pastime of thousands of northern farmer visitors to the Southland's winter resorts. This year there are few farmers. They have stayed at home to conserve tires, gasoline and railroad space. If there were farmers, there would be no horseshoes. The dice, as junk, have gone into tanks and guns and ships. What changes war does make!

WOODROW WILSON saw the dawn, but did not see the sunrise of internationalism.

What the result might have been had we joined the League of Nations will always be a debatable question. That we will see the sunrise of internationalism following this war is almost a certainty. How long that sun will shine, cannot be known. It will need force to keep it shining; force to curb the selfish national interests which will attempt to blot out the international sunshine with clouds of greed. America will supply much of that force.

DEMONSTRATIONS CONVENTION

"CONVENTION" demonstrations—those amazing exhibitions of hysterical enthusiasm, usually manufactured rather than spontaneous—had their origin in the Republican convention of 1860 in Chicago.

The two leading candidates were William H. Seward of New York and Abraham Lincoln of Illinois. The New York delegation brought along a prize fighter named Tom Hyer and a band which marched about the streets playing martial music.

To match these noise-makers, supporters of "Old Abe" hired a Chicagoan "whose shout could be heard above the most violent tempest on Lake Michigan" and a leather-lunged Dr. Ames, who, though a Democrat, also consented to whoop it up for Lincoln. But the real "blow-off" came when Lincoln was nominated on the fourth ballot. An eye-witness has described the scene as follows:

"The immense multitude rose, and gave round after round of applause; ten thousand voices swelled into a roar so deafening that, for several minutes, every attempt to restore order was hopelessly vain."

A man appeared in the hall bringing a large painting of Mr. Lincoln. The cannon sent forth roar after roar in quick succession. Delegates tore up the sticks and boards bearing the names of several states, and waved them aloft over their heads, and the vast multitude before the platform were waving hats and handkerchiefs.

Another chapter in convention "demonstrations" was added in the Republican convention, also in Chicago, in 1870. Roscoe Conkling of New York led the forces that had determined to nominate Grant for a third term. At the first mention of Grant's name, a demonstration began which lasted nearly half an hour. Conkling, noted for his "aristocratic coldness," unbent enough to stimulate enthusiasm in the galleries and among the delegates by waving hats and handkerchiefs. Robert G. Ingersoll started wave after wave of frantic cheering when he grabbed a woman's red shawl and waved it aloft.

Men tore off their coats and used them for flags. Then the Grant delegates seized the standards of their states and started a parade around the hall—thus starting a custom which has been perpetuated to this day.

U. S. Steel Reports 1942 Production 28 Per Cent Greater Than World War I Peak

United States Steel Corporation's Annual Report for the 1942 production of a steel ingot (average production 28 per cent greater than in the peak year of World War I, has just been released as "the most significant financial story of a great war effort."

Production by U. S. Steel in 1942 of more than 30,000,000 net tons of ingots as well as the steel castings and a steady flow of products entering into thousands of items used in prosecuting the war were described by Irving B. Dick, Chairman of the Board of Directors, in his review of the year contained in the Corporation's forty-first annual report. The victory parade of steel ingots was listed as only one of several principal contributions of U. S. Steel to the war effort. These contributions were enumerated as follows: "First, the production of steel and other materials needed not only for the fabrication of essential war products but also for the creation of new facilities to produce such products has been produced. Second, the technical ability representing many decades of accumulated experience has been made available for the requirements of the Government. Third, the construction and operation of war plants by the Corporation in connection with the war effort have been undertaken. Fourth, millions of dollars of U. S. Steel's funds have been expended in the purchase of securities contributory to the war effort."

A one-page condensation of the financial record of the Corporation for the year 1942, in simple language what difficulties was made of the $1,000,000,000 received by the Corporation from sales of its products and services during 1942. Employment of 783 million in 1942 were 23% greater than for the previous year; 1942 taxes of $2.8 million were 10% greater than in the preceding year; while dividends to stockholders remained unchanged. "The amount carried forward for future needs of the Corporation was 75% greater than in 1941."

Among achievements cited is the development of the atomic energy unit. The serious problem of handling the molten slag from the war-time production of uranium was solved by the development of a new method of handling the slag. The U. S. Steel subsidiary of a leading steel company, consisting of portable interlocking steel sections, it was pronounced the outstanding development of the year in the field of aviation by the Chief of the Army Air Force. As mass production methods were evolved, other companies were licensed to use the process, and thirty smaller manufacturers are now producing these landing mat sections in quantity.

The report reveals that in 1942 one subsidiary, Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Company, completed more destroyer hulls for the Navy Department in their building time than any other shipyard in the country. A new shipyard built by the subsidiary for the Navy Department began operations five months after ground was broken. A fully equipped shipyard for the production of the latest type of tank landing craft was constructed and is being operated for the Navy Department by American Bridge Company, another subsidiary.

An interesting comparison of the use of U. S. Steel's own resources and of Government funds for the expansion of Government facilities for the production of U. S. Steel from June, 1940, to the end of 1942, shows that the ratio of U. S. Steel's investment in the use of Government funds to the use of its own money to every dollar of Government funds used, this compares with a ratio for all industry of Government funds to one dollar of Government funds. In this expansion program, U. S. Steel's private investment was $200,000,000, as compared with the Government investment funds expended, making a total of $110,000,000 expended in the program.—Adv.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS...

"Judge, there's been quite a bit of talk going around about prohibiting liquor in various spots around the country... around the Army camp for one thing. What do you make of it?"

"Well, Henry, I also it up about like this. It looks to me like the folks who are doing the talking are shooting a little bit higher than most people seem to realize. Sort of like the salesman who gets his foot in the door and before you know it he's sold you a bill of goods. Wouldn't surprise me a bit, if that's what they're really aiming for is to take in the whole country again. We all know it didn't work the last time. All we got was bootleg liquor instead of legal liquor... plus racketeers, gangsters and the worst crime wave the country ever saw.

"Seems to me we've all got our hands full to win this war without starting up an argument we just got through settling a few years back."
