CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 13, 1943.

The Scrap Metal Drive Is Underway

An old iron pail is equivalent to three bayonets, a worn-out copper kettle can be converted into 84 rounds of ammunition, and a flatiron will make two steel helmets. An old lawnmower is good for 6 three-inch shells, and one worn-out tractor will supply enough metal for 580 machine guns.

The "Salvage Army" arrived in Carrizozo on August 9. They have thirty qualified drivers, two medical men and a headquarters platoon of ten men in the "Army" and all the soldiers are well trained in salvage work. They are on the lookout for old plows, axes, hammers, harrows, hay tedders, old coal stoves, pipes, iron railings, wagon wheels, old bathtubs, faucets, car bodies, tires, etc.

Every citizen is urged to make a systematic search from attic to cellar, garage and barn for vital scrap and it is suggested that it be placed at some point easily seen by the soldiers when they come down the road in their trucks, to facilitate collection, possibly near the garage, barn or mailbox. —More about this drive together with pictures will be found on pages four and five of paper.

High School Students

High school students who enter the Carrizozo High School this year and who attended some other high school last year, should have a complete transcript of their credits sent to the superintendent of schools of Carrizozo before the opening date of school, Aug. 23.

Grade school students should have a report card, and a book card to show what grade they are entitled to enter, and not have to wait to get this information from the school they attended last year.

Church Dedicated

On July 8, 1943, Mt. View Methodist Church, located on the L. P. Hall ranch near Ancho, was dedicated. Impressive services were conducted by Dr. Loudin of Carrizozo, assisted by his two lovely daughters.

The church has been freshly painted outside and nicely finished inside with new materials. It is surrounded by a good fence and trees have been planted, making it all very attractive. This work was done by Mr. Hall and his sons and shows much care and interest.

About fifty people attended—come from Ancho and Carrizozo. All enjoyed a bountiful dinner served in the open, which was furnished by Mrs. Hall and other ladies of the community.

Many lovely flowers, some donated by friends and neighbors, filled the church with beauty and fragrance. May much success attend this good and worthy accomplishment.

WHEN KIDNEY FUNCTION LAGS from this need

Functional kidney disturbances due to need of diuretic aid may cause stalling backache! May cause urinary flow to be frequent, yet scanty and annoying! You may lose sleep from "getting up nights" often--may feel dizzy, nervous, "headachy."

In such cases, you want to stimulate kidney action fast. So if there is nothing systemic or organically wrong, try Gold Medal Capsules. They've been famous for prompt action for 50 years. Take care to use them only as directed. Accept no substitutes. 35¢ at your drug store.

CONSTIPATION HAUNTED ME.

It hung on and on. Medical laxatives relieved it only temporarily.

Then--I found my constipation was due to lack of "bulk" in my diet. And I also found out that nature's ALL-BEAN gets at the cause of such constipation and corrects it.

Oy, what I'd been missing before I tried ALL-BEAN! For a sweet-tasting breakfast cereal--and, as far as my constipation was concerned, it sure worked.

I eat ALL-BEAN regularly now and drink plenty of water. And--I've "Joined the Regulars!" Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disturbed Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking--its risk of exposure and infection--throws heavy strains on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become overtaxed and fail to filter out acids and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, swelling up, slight leg pains, swelling--feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's sold the kidney to test of hospital across body wide. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by your doctor everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Speaking Sports

by Bob Kearns
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

THERE are certain golf shots that will always live in memory—both of the men who hit them and the spectators who saw them. They are the shots which, more than anything else, helped decide the outcome of many a great tournament.

James S. Kearns, well-known Chicago sports writer, recently recounted a few of those shots—to which he was an eyewitness. Kearns speaking:

"There was Harry Cooper, on the 14th tee at Baltusrol in 1936, on his way to what seemed a certain victory in the National Open as a proper reward for 10 long, stout-hearted years of trying.

"Coop had the biggest gallery on the course that day, and not a personal marshal. He had broken the all-time 54-hole record, and yet the United States Golf association sent him into the final round with nobody to protect him from the crowd. . . . Nobody but Estelle Armour, Tom's wife, and Nellie Cruickshank, Bob's wife, who knew enough of golf to try to give a player the fair chance he deserved.

Heartbreaker

"Well, Cooper stood on the 14th tee with the mob milling around him, and the National Open championship just at his fingertips. He swung away and asked for order. He swung back again. . . . And again the front row of spectators was jammed forward, so close he couldn't swing down at the ball. Finally, on the third try, he hit the ball—into the bunker beside the par 3 green, and right there was opened the door through which Tony Manero slid to take the title.

"There was a Monday morning in Philadelphia in 1939, when it was steaming hot, and when players and watchers alike were dead weary from a week of heat and five days of golf.

Byron Nelson

Byron Nelson and Craig Wood, who had come through a Shute on Sunday with scores of 63 in a desperate battle for the National Open title, were engaged in a second playoff.

"On the fourth tee, Wood had belted the better drive, maybe 20 yards. Nelson squared off to his second shot on that long and difficult par 4. He must have been 220 yards from the flag when he drew a bead. He fired the shot the way a Garand rifle might be fired. . . . Dead on line, low and whistling as it went. The ball struck, bounced twice, rolled, fell into the hole. There the 1939 Open championship was settled.

Masters Crown

"There was Nelson at Augusta, playing off with Ben Hogan for the 1942 Masters crown. Three strokes behind at the short sixth, he held a great deuce to start catching up. Then at par 5 eighth, uphill, he saw Hogan hook his second. The door was open. Byron took a spoon on the uphill lie. He walked to see where the hole was out on the green. He walked back and took aim. Then he knocked the ball five feet from the hole. . . . A low, drawing shot over the brow of the hill, pulling in through the guarded opening to the green. The shot meant an eagle 3, and a lead that was never lost.

"All these. . . . But out of memory one more shines bright across seven years.

"It was the September day when John Fischer of Cincinnati stood on the 33rd green in the final match for the amateur championship of the United States in 1936. One down to Jack McLean of Scotland, he was, on Garden City's hurricane-swept acres. . . . One down, and with the muscles of his left leg torn so he could scarcely stand up to a shot because of a fall in a bunker the previous day. One down. . . . And his ball 12 feet from the pin on the par 3 last hole. . . . 12 feet of treacherous, sliding, sloping green. It was hole in—or be runner-up.

"Johnny Fischer sized it up, took a long and careful aim, took a stance. He swung the putter back, and upon the clubhouse roof, eight motion-picture cameras began to grind. Johnny jumped, dropped his putter.

"He smiled in half-apology, half-request and the cameras stopped. He picked up his putter, never bothered to sight the putt, and knocked the ball right in the middle of the hole for a 2 that made him even and let him win on No. 37."

SPORTS SHORTS

Chalky Wright, Negro featherweight, says he doesn't know his correct age. Estimates place it at from 38 to 44.

The American league this season may break the record of 88 extra-innings games set by both major leagues in 1916.

Jack Moesch, 16-year-old Long Island prep star, now a utility infielder for Baltimore, is the youngest player in the International league.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

The basis of modern rubber usage is vulcanization, a word that is derived from Vulcan, the Greek God of Fire.

The cryptogam vine yields about 17 drops of rubber latex a day, a seven-year-old tree produces three to six pounds of rubber a year. Properly treated latex trees, when 10 years old, can give from 1000 to 1500 pounds of rubber per acre per year. About eleven pounds of rubber are used in making a small automobile tire.

Latex rubber articles set when storing, allowing them to assume their natural position. Rubber loses its life when under a permanent strain.

Make This Chair Frame of Scrap Lumber—It's Quite Easy to Cover

THERE is no reason that you should do without smart looking upholstered chairs while you are awaiting the day that you will have the living room furniture that you have always dreamed about. Scraps of lumber and plywood or even old packing boxes may be used to make simple chair frames and there are no priorities on cotton padding and sturdy cotton covering materials.

A simple frame for a chair of this type is shown here. It is padded with cotton batting basted to pieces of unbleached muslin cut to fit the back and well over the sides of the seat. A separate cushion filled with cotton, down or feathers is then made for the seat. Either plain or figured material with contrasting seam welting may be used for covering.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared detailed dimensions and directions for making this chair frame. Pattern also gives step-by-step directions for covering the frame after it has been padded. Ask for Pattern 25 and enclose 15 cents. Address:

Judgment of Odors

That persons vary greatly in their judgment of odors is shown in a survey in which of 3,000 individuals tested for their reactions upon smelling freecias, 10 per cent said that this sweet-scented flower had no odor, 63 per cent said it had a weak or medium odor and 16 per cent said it had a very strong odor, reports Collier's. Of these persons who noticed the fragrance, 69 per cent found it pleasant and 14 per cent unpleasant.

Rationing by State

Certain foods that cannot be rationed on a nation-wide basis because of differences in sectional eating habits will probably be distributed in the near future on state quotas. For example, the annual per capita consumption of rice varies from two pounds in the Northwest to fifty pounds in the South.

The gaily enameled unit insignia you see on a soldier's lapels and overseas cap are reproductions of his regimental shield displayed in the center of the eagle on his regimental flag. It's a part of U. S. Army tradition. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. (Based on actual sales records from service men's own stores.) It's a gift from the folks back home, that always rates cheers. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. New Mexico State Fair

At its regular session in Albuquerque, July 23, the New Mexico State Fair Commission, in completing plans for the 1943 Fair, September 26 through October 3, approved appropriations for the largest cash premiums for livestock and farm competitive displays ever offered in the state. Cash awards for beef and dairy cattle, swine, sheep, goats and poultry were increased materially, as were the awards for farm, orchard and garden crops. These were further increased by contributions from every major national association of registered breeders in the United States.

"The Commission feels", said Chairman H. B. Sellers, "that we must do our utmost to stimulate food production in 1944. We can do it only by improved livestock breeding and better range and farming efforts and methods. The cooperation of the great breeder organizations is not only recognition of the value of the New Mexico Fair, but also of its usefulness in stimulating production next year, when food will be most urgently needed."

The Commission completed plans for all entertainment features at the fair. Contracts were signed with Beutler Brothers, of Elk City, Okla., for six nights of rodeo performances, open to champion riders and ropers of the world; with Dodson's carnival company for a 35 car aggregation of attractions; and the State Fair's first sheep shearing contest was arranged for. The second annual "Catch-and-Have-It" calf contest for 4-H and FFA boys and girls was approved. The State Fair Commission again will have direct management of the eight day race meeting. Veteran racing men were employed to handle all details of the meeting. The State Fair racing stables already are filling up and indications are that both in number and quality of horses the coming meeting will set a new standard.

Twelve thousand four hundred separate cash premiums are listed for livestock, farm and garden products, home arts and home science displays. Premiums range from 50c to $100.00. The total offering is approximately $30,000. Both in number of premiums and in total cash awards offered, new high records are set.

"Attendance at the recent Amarillo rodeo and that at Las Vegas this week furnished convincing evidence that the people are hungry for amusement and that the rodeo remains the most popular form of outdoor entertainment," Harms said.

The 1943 premium book of 240 pages, with two color cover, is now being distributed. Men and women, boys and girls throughout New Mexico interested in exhibiting are invited to write to Leon H. Harms, Secretary-Manager, P. O. Box 1693, Albuquerque, for a copy of the book and entry blanks. There is no charge.

N. M. Cattlemen to Meet September 27

Albuquerque, July 29, 1943. The next regular meeting of the Executive Board of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association will be held at Albuquerque, on Monday, September 27th, with a brief preliminary meeting the evening of the 26th, E. G. Hayward, Cimarron, President of the Association announced today. More than 300 leading cattlemen, representing all parts of the state are expected to be in attendance at the meeting, Hayward said.

Principal problems today confronting livestock producers include: the acute shortage of supplemental feed together with a record number of cattle on ranges throughout the state and nation; Government regulations and controls which have in many instances resulted in light marketing of cattle, closing down of local packing plants and small distribution of meat; the Livestock and Meat Industry program to solve our wartime meat problems; transportation problems which will occur during the shipping season in the state, and numerous other like situations which demand considerable thought and action on part of cattlemen throughout the state, Hayward said.

Recalling that the first Quarterly Committee meeting of the Association scheduled to be held in June was postponed because cattlemen were too busy with ranch work and because of transportation difficulties, Hayward stated that it is considered necessary and essential that the September meeting be held in order to discuss and iron out many of the serious problems confronting the industry. All cattlemen in the state are invited to take part in the meeting, Hayward said.

Commenting that the State cattlemen's association office had received nearly 300 new applications for membership to be approved at the September meeting, Hayward said the Association's membership would soon total more than 2,500 members, representing ownership of more than 89 per cent of all cattle in the state.

War Bonds should mean something more to you than just "a good sound investment." Figure it out yourself.

Pig Boat

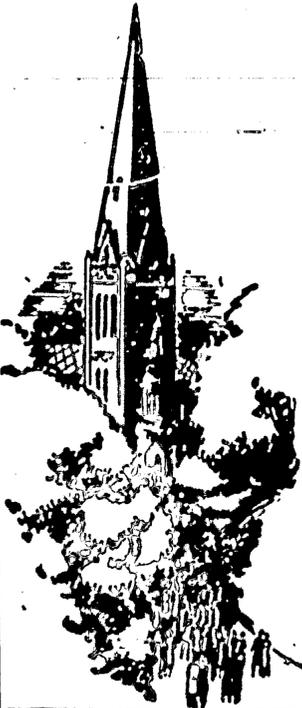

At sea on a submarine isn't exactly the "Life of Riley." In the Battle of the Atlantic, or on the great stretches of the Pacific these sailors know the hazards of their work.

One of the spots aboard these "Pig Boats" that all crew members enjoy is the galley, or kitchen. Space limitations prevent an elaborate set-up, but cooks aboard these vessels are justly proud of the meals they prepare for their crews. Your increased purchase of War Bonds helps make submarine life as pleasant as possible.

Mobile Salvage Unit To Gather Scrap Metal

The United States Army has taken over the drive for scrap metal and this fact alone should prove to the people the tremendous importance of giving everything you have for salvage. Almost every home has old pieces of iron and other metal lying around that are no good and are very likely just in the way.

The United States Army "Mobile Salvage Unit" arrived in Carrizozo this week. Capt. Ira Harper is in command of the one-hun-ded and thirty soldiers, who will camp in Carrizozo under "field" conditions, which means they will have their own tents and cooking equipment right with them. They will have twenty huge Army trucks and will be prepared to go after any scrap metal, no matter how large and difficult to handle. They will have the equipment to gather any amount of heavy material which the patriotic citizens may donate to the Army for the manufacture of war materials to fight our enemies.

These men who are working at the salvage project are what the Army designates as "Limited Service Men," because they are unfit for active overseas combat, but are serving a desperately needed cause on this side. Some of them have been through battles at Pearl Harbor and Guadalcanal.

All materials donated will be shipped immediately to the refineries and will be promptly used in the creation of tanks, planes and other war materials. All long and heavy materials will be cut into lengths of two feet by torches, so that they can be more easily and effectively handled.

There are no middle men in this scrap drive. The Army receives the ceiling price of $9.00 per ton. The Army officers are very appreciative of generous donations by Judge A. H. Hudspeth, who gave a tremendous amount of mining machinery from White Oaks, and Mr. G. A. Titsworth of Capitan, who gave three carloads already in the short length, ready to load and of Mr. V. Reil of Carrizozo, who gave 270 automobile bodies.

If you have anything to donate, call the News office, Phone 14, and leave your name for Captain Harper and he will call on you.

Christmas Packages For Prisoners of War

Many anxious friends and relatives of our Service men and women who are held in prison and internment camps will be glad to know that they may send them Christmas packages, and the authorities have directed that orders must be placed between September 15 and October 15, 1943, in order to be delivered in time.

The National Red Cross has authorized chapters to receive contributions with which to purchase standard packages of identified and unidentified prisoners of war. Those wishing to avail themselves of this offer to send a Christmas gift may make their donation to the Chapter Chairman, Mrs. Dewey Stokes of Carrizozo, New Mexico, or to the following volunteer workers in your community.

Mrs. W. E. Knott, Jr., Three Rivers

Mrs. Kivas Tully, Picacho
Mrs. W. A. Hart, Ruidoso
Mrs. Perry Sears, Capitan
Mrs. Lola Stotland, Ft. Stanton
You will find the regulations governing the size and contents of packages posted on the bulletin board in your postoffice.

Please give the Service man's full name, rank, number of prisoner, nationality, prison camp, country and the donor's name, so that a copy of the order may be sent as a receipt.

Donors may not order more than one package for each prisoner at a time.

American Legion Phonograph Record Drive

A one-day trip on a train is a hard task. Think of thirty-five days on a transport. Just one record of American music would be worth a month's pay. Let's see that they have those records. The American Legion "more records for our fighting men" campaign will do it. Our men on the battlefield are making great sacrifices that we at home may be safe.

We have our radios, our movies, and our players, but those men on the fronts have nothing unless they can get a few records to play. Send them now to the American Legion. Let's draft every old record in town and county and send it to war.

The Lincoln County News is headquarters for "More Records for our Fighting Men" campaign.

Oscar used to be a first-class machinist. Five years ago he retired to live out the rest of his life on a pension.

The other morning he showed up again at his old plant, which now makes war equipment, and asked for his old job back. When payday came, he signed up with the Payroll Savings Plan to put 20% of his pay in War Bonds.

Seems Oscar's boy was on Bataan. The Most You Can Save Is the Least You Can

With people like Oscar making real sacrifices to help win the war, is it too much for you to put aside as little as 10% of your pay for War Bonds? Sign up for at least 10% at your place of business today!

What You Buy With WAR BONDS

A SERIES OF SPECIAL ARTICLES BY THE LEADING WAR CORRESPONDENTS

Sub Hunting
By James Hirschfeld

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The Associated Press.)

I was on the bridge of the coast guard cutter Campbell, escorting a big convoy, when there came a message, reporting a submarine 25 miles south of us. We charged full speed for the spot.

Whether we got that first submarine I don't know—you seldom know—but we didn't have time to worry about it. A signal crackled through from another vessel of the escort, a British corvette. With a sister corvette she was attacking another U-boat she had picked up on her round gear.

With the two corvettes we converged like arrows on the U-boat. Over a wide area we sowed ash-cans. The sea went mad with geysers. Then a great patch of Diesel oil appeared on the sea. It smells like kerosene, but to a submarine hunter's nostrils it is sweeter than violets, for it means that a U-boat has been sunk or damaged. From engine-room to bridge there was joy in the Campbell.

Whole Convoy Attacked.
It was then about 1 p. m., and very black. After a final search of the area, we ran back toward the convoy. Presently a splotch of cold, white light appeared on the horizon. It grew brighter as we drew nearer, and we heard the rumble of distant explosions. My heart sank. Those lights meant the whole convoy was under attack. Escort ships were throwing up star shells to light the sea better to fight off the raiders.

Leaving the slower corvettes in our wake we raced for the convoy, but before we reached it another message came in from the escort commander. It confirmed my fears. Several ships had been attacked. One had fallen behind. The Campbell was to go to the rescue.

I didn't like leaving the convoy just then, but orders are orders. Foam boiled under our keel as we reversed course. An hour or so later we found the ship 10 miles astern of the convoy. She was just sitting there in the darkness. As we sighted her, a tall tower of water erupted on her port side. The ship was under attack.

Hole Torn in Campbell.
Soon we were under attack ourselves. An explosion tore a great hole in the water just astern of the Campbell. It was mighty close. It really shook us up. It sounded as though we were on the inside of an iron boiler which had been slammed with a sledge hammer.

I waited on edge, for a second one. Then our lookouts spotted the U boat which was throwing the stuff. It was on the surface about a mile away. Through the eerie light of early morning we could make out the cream of her wake and a faint haze from her Diesels. The Campbell bore down on her like a torrier after a rat.

The rat showed no inclination to fight it out. Our guns were just opening when the craft submerged. We dropped a pattern of depth charges, and a few minutes later were again rewarded with that blessed fragrance of Diesel oil. It was the third submarine the Campbell had engaged in less than 12 hours.

About midmorning, our round gear picked up another submarine. Sub Crash-Dived.

I ran to the starboard side of the bridge, where the men stood pointing. The periscope had vanished. The submarine had crash-dived. We gave it the works.

When it was all over I happened to notice the lookout who had given the alarm. He was beaming like a happy ape.

I had forgotten our prize fund for the men who spotted submarines. Before the end of that voyage, our treasury was exhausted.

It was high noon when the Campbell encountered her fifth Jerry. It was on the surface, about three miles away, and must have had some foolish notion it could outrun us. It soon found that it couldn't, and submerged in a hurry. Again we laid down a pattern of depth charges.

Later that night we sighted our sixth. It was on the surface, about 500 yards off the starboard bow.

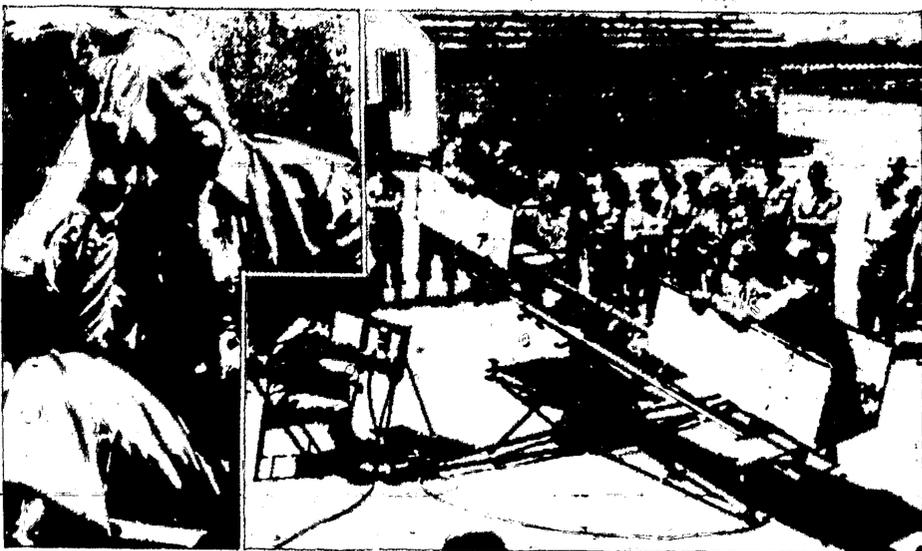

For the 12th time in a little more than 24 hours, our guns clanged "general quarters." The men sprang to their battle stations. We swung hard right to ram. The Campbell raced down on the sub with guns blazing at point-blank range. We really caught that U-boat napping. It was a big one with a large conning tower and heavy armament. We could see men on the deck. Shouting wildly, they tried to bring a deck gun into action. They never had a chance. We raked their deck from stem to stern with machine-gun fire.

One Axis Leader Down—Two to Go

The sudden political demise of Benito Mussolini makes him the first Axis dictator to fall under the military and intellectual might of the Allied nations. Left: King Victor Emmanuel III who accepted Mussolini's resignation and appointed Marshal Pietro Badoglio, center, as the new premier of Italy. Although Badoglio announced that "the war continues," as he proclaimed martial law, he was never a member of the official high ranking Italian fascist group which surrounded Mussolini. He has been known to have disagreed with the former premier several times. Right: Benito Mussolini who took advantage of the unrest of World War I to create a dictatorship and now finds himself overthrown by similar forces in World War II.

Get Sick on Land to Stop Sea-Sickness

In a giant land, sea and air invasion, Allied military leaders must consider and plan for every emergency—including seasickness. To accumulate data on this subject, the army developed a sea-horse which gets soldiers as sick as they would be after several hours on rough water. As a result of these experiments, capsules to prevent motion-sickness are given to invasion troops an hour and a half before embarkation. Left: Sergt. Arthur F. Nichols after a session in the sea-horse. Right: The contraption in action.

U. S. Privates Round Up Some 'Supermen'

These German prisoners include parachute troopers, vaunted supermen of many campaigns. They were rounded up by a few ordinary soldiers in the invasion of Sicily. It appeared that the total number of such prisoners taken by the Allies would run into several thousands.

Cigarettes for Defenders of China

Chinese soldiers on their way to a battlefield are given cigarettes by a Chinese mother. These soldiers were part of the stubborn unit that resisted and finally routed a huge Japanese army along the upper Yangtze, the gateway to Chungking. These defenders accounted for over 40,000 casualties to the enemy, and conducted one of the most heroic victories of the war.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
DREW HEARSON

Washington, D. C. ASSIGNMENT IN SICILY

Unsung U. S. heroes who contributed heavily to Mussolini's downfall were Italian-American boys smuggled into Sicily several weeks before U. S. troops landed.

How they got ashore must remain a military secret. But the fact that they got there is now recognized as a part of military operations, just as the advance landing of Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark in North Africa, carrying bags of U. S. gold.

These Italian-Americans were especially trained in the dangerous, delicate job of winning over military garrisons in advance of a landing force. In Sicily they had the advantage of speaking the language and being able to visit the homes of their relatives, few of whom loved Mussolini. From there they were able to work around to various military leaders.

It has long been known that Italian military leaders were of two types. One is the professional soldier like Field Marshal Badoglio, who was in the army before Mussolini's time and has no love for the Fascists. Also he has no love for the Nazis, and so was not too difficult to win over to the Allied side.

Other type of Italian military leaders is the Fascist Blackshirt, who rose through favors from Il Duce, but who usually is susceptible to coin of the realm. Presumably U. S. advance scouts were supplied with what General Clark took with him in advance into North Africa.

At any rate, expert advance work by patriotic Italian-Americans, plus the popularity of the United States in Sicily, contributed to one of the most bloodless landing expeditions in history.

Also the psychological check of the heading U. S. rush through Sicily was what toppled Mussolini off his thorny throne.

GEN. GIRAUD'S WATERLOO

General Giraud was shown all the sights of Washington during his stay here, including the war department's massive Pentagon building, rated as the largest office building in the world.

After the French commander had been led through the labyrinth of Pentagon corridors to General Staff headquarters, and later out into the sunlight, he was asked what he thought of the place.

"Well," remarked General Giraud, "I've escaped from two German prisons, but I could never get out of this building."

UNDER TWO FLAGS

The chickens hatched when American ships were put under the Panamanian flag to avoid neutrality laws now coming home to roost.

As a result, the U. S. government now employs 16,000 seamen whom it pays in hard cash every month, but over whom it has no disciplinary control whatsoever. The seamen are working under the Panamanian flag, though actually they are American citizens. So when they get into brawls in American ports, they must answer to the Panamanian consul, though they are American citizens and draw American pay.

Certain state department officials are urging that the problem be solved by transferring the ships back to U. S. registry.

Note: At present, when one of these ships clears a U. S. port it must pay a $20 fee to the consul of Panama, in spite of the fact that the ship belongs to the U. S.A.

AXIS DISTORTIONS

The Axis radio is trying to scare up a war in South America. The Bolivian army, with Peru's support, according to the Axis, is about to launch an attack on Chile to gain a port on the Pacific.

Here is the only grain of truth behind this propaganda: When Bolivian President Penaranda returned to La Paz from his visit to the United States, he stated publicly that Bolivian aspirations for a seaport had never been abandoned, that when the opportune time arose Bolivia would assert that claim.

Truth is, however, that Penaranda had no such militant motive in mind. Furthermore, moderate elements in Chile assert they would be perfectly willing to discuss the sale of the port of Arica to Bolivia.

If the Chilean moderates actually bring about negotiation for the sale of Arica, they will set a new high in good neighbor relations. It has not been long since the territorial ambitions of South American countries—as in the case of Peru vs. Ecuador and Bolivia vs. Paraguay—have been settled by a resort to arms.

CAPITAL CHAFF

When Augusto Rocco, former Italian ambassador in Washington, was transferred from Russia to be Italian ambassador to Turkey, the Nazis stopped his appointment. They said he was too pro-American. Rocco has an American wife, the former Mrs. Francis Bunker of Denver. While the Italian nation was strictly rationed, Count and Countess Ciano added to their popularity in Rome by throwing elaborate parties. Caviar, lobster and champagne featured the menu.

THEY WERE EXPENDABLE

by W. L. White W.N.U. FEATURES

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the five naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3. They are Lieut. John Bulkeley (now Lieutenant Commander), squadron commander; Lieut. R. E. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George R. Cox, Jr. March 11 Lieut. Bulkeley showed the squadron their secret orders. They were to carry General MacArthur's party and some additional personnel to the southern islands where they would be met by transport planes which would carry General MacArthur to his new headquarters. When Kelly arrived at the rendezvous the others were missing.

CHAPTER X

"I had an idea where they would be, and I explained. Bulkeley, I was sure, would take no chances with women and a child aboard. Of course he'd seen the Japanese signal fire the night before. Planes might be out spotting us for destroyers, and as soon as dawn broke Bulkeley undoubtedly had made for the nearest of those other Cuyos—picking one from his chart (we'd never been here before) which was surrounded by reefs and water so shallow that no destroyer could venture within gun range or even within sight. There he would wait all day, if not until dusk, at least until he thought the danger of spotting planes was past, before coming to join us here.

"So at 8:37 we dropped a hook to the cove and I sent two men ashore with semaphore flags to climb the island's single five-hundred-foot hill and stand continuous watch—for the other three boats of course, but particularly for Japs.

"At 8:30, when we figured any spotting planes would have had to head back for home, I was about to pull our lookouts from the hill and get under way when they wigwagged down that they saw a ship—apparently friendly, maybe an MTB. I picked it up with my binoculars and presently made out the 32 boat, which soon tied up alongside us.

"It was this boat, remember, which had been repaired after its explosion. The cook had been blown into Suisman Cove. During the night its struts started coming loose, so they could use only one or two of their three engines, and they, like us, had lost touch with the other boats in the night. But instead of falling far behind the flagship, they had somehow managed, in the darkness, to get out in front of it.

"In the first gray light of dawn, their stern lookout reported a strange ship—gaining on them. Looked like a Jap destroyer. Now an MTB in good condition can outrun any warship afloat. But the 32 boat was hobbling on two engines, so although he was running full throttle, its commander wasn't surprised that the strange craft kept gaining. In order to lighten his boat and pull away, he dumped six hundred gallons of gasoline in drums over the side, but still the enemy was closing on him. There seemed nothing to do now but fight before the destroyer opened with its 3-inch guns. They readied two torpedoes and turned doubtlessly for the attack, to discover just in time that the strange pursuing craft was the 41 boat—their own flagship with General MacArthur aboard.

"So here they were—headed down to the water line with conical and puzzled generals. Just at this point there was a rising roar from seaward, and the 41 boat came around the point, Bulkeley and General MacArthur's party.

"We'd lost sight of you a few hours before dawn," said Bulkeley, "when you stopped to clean your strainers. I went on ahead because I wanted to get as deep as possible into the Cuyo Islands before sunrise.

"As the sky pinkened I headed for the nearest and best—it was one of the prearranged coves on the map. It wasn't much of an island—only a quarter of a mile wide—but it had plenty of shallow water to keep off Jap destroyers.

"Lying at anchor, some of the crew picked off a little sleep as we rolled gently in the sunshine. Presently the General came on deck; he was a fine figure in his camel-hair coat and gold hat, frowning a little as he squinted in the sunshine at the water and white sand. Then Mrs. MacArthur and the little boy and his Chinese ayah came up to sit in wicker chairs in the sunshine. It was too bad little Arthur couldn't have played on the beach, but I told the General no one should go ashore. Because if dive bombers came over and spotted us, we would have to get the hell out of that cove quick, leaving even the lookout behind, and out into open water where we could dodge and twist.

had dumped most of its gas at dawn, and couldn't proceed much farther at high speed.

"This was a rendezvous not only for our four MTBs, but also for General MacArthur's second means of escape—a submarine. It had all been carefully worked out, and the submarine would bob up in this cove tomorrow. Had we been attacked or broken down, the General could have left us here, and continued his trip on down to Australia by submarine.

"General MacArthur, Admiral Rockwell and Lieutenant Bulkeley talked about the night's plans—the advisability of continuing with us tonight or going by submarine," went on Lieutenant Kelly. "The Admiral was for staying with us, but the General was undecided. The afternoon trip had been rough, and Bulkeley had warned the night would be rougher. Yet as we lay there in the cove, the sea seemed calm enough, and the sky gave no hint of bad weather. So on the assurance of the Admiral that it would be good weather, the General decided they'd continue with us.

"Then, as Bulkeley had said, there was the problem of what to do with the 32 boat, which had dumped much of her gasoline. She did not have enough left to make the fast run with us to the island of Mindanao, where the General's party would get the plane for Australia. So Bulkeley gave her different orders. Her generals were to be transferred to my boat. She was to wait here in the rendezvous until tomorrow when the submarine arrived. She was to tell the submarine that everything had gone well, the General had gone on to Mindanao and would go to Australia by plane, as planned. Having delivered this message, the 32 boat was to go to Hito on the island of Panay, only one hundred and twenty miles away. There she could get repairs and enough gas to bring her on down to Cagayan to join the rest of us in the other three boats, and we would finish the war together in the southern islands.

"What went wrong with this plan, we don't know to this day. The boat's commander, Lieutenant Schumacher, must have decided that it wasn't in condition to follow these orders. Anyway, when the submarine arrived, he had it shell the 32 boat, so it would not fall into Japanese hands, and boarded the submarine, which dropped his crew off at Corregidor, and took him safely to Australia.

"We found out much later that he had gotten to Australia. For some time their disappearance was a mystery, and Bulkeley here spent several days flying out over all these islands trying to find some trace of the 32 boat. Some day, of course, there will be a full report on exactly what did happen which will explain everything.

"All we know is that we last saw them back there in the cove as we left the harbor—a hard right turn and then out to sea, at about 6:30. We were leading, so that the flagship, just behind us, could search out the smoothest part of our wake, so that MacArthur's party could ride comfortably. We'd been going about fifteen minutes when the port lookout called 'Sail-ho!' and there she was—three points on our port bow, distance about five miles. 'Looks like an enemy cruiser!' said the lookout. I grabbed my binoculars, and so it was! Hull down, but masts and superstructure plain. On the course we were steering we would cross her bow. I gave the 34 full right rudder and full speed ahead—it was much faster than eighteen knots, because the carbon had burned out of our motors. I knew that type of Jap cruiser could make thirty-five knots with all steam up. But unless they were expecting something, they could only make twenty-seven. So we had a good chance of keeping away from them—it might be dark before they could close in.

"Meanwhile I was hoping they hadn't seen us and praying that the sun would hurry up and set, but it just pooped along—seemed to hang there above the horizon for weeks, and finally bobbed under at seven o'clock.

"If you've never been in the tropics, you don't realize how fast it gets dark—almost no twilight at all."

"I think it was the whitecaps that saved us," said Bulkeley. "The Japs didn't notice our wake, even though we were foaming away at full throttle.

"During the excitement, the General was lying down in the cabin with his eyes closed, but Mrs. MacArthur, who was with him, heard everything that went on and she didn't turn a hair. She took it like a lady—went right on rubbing the General's hands to keep up his circulation, though she was seasick herself.

"I never went below, and all my men stayed at battle stations, so the people in the cabin took care of themselves—there was no one to wait on them. The General saw that I was supplied with cigars. They were pretty well provisioned. They'd brought from Corregidor, among other things, a few cases of Coca-Cola—the first I'd tasted in many weeks—and some of the tenderest ham I ever ate.

"It got dark fast after sunset, a wind sprang up, and ahead we could see lightning flashes. But these didn't help us find the narrow passage into the Mindanao Sea. We were going in the dark entirely by dead reckoning. At midnight we figured we'd be off the strait—so we turned into the pitch-blackness, holding our breath, but still we didn't hit anything. I had no charts, I'd never been there before, I could see absolutely nothing, but since we didn't crash into a beach, we kept on going, and at last I knew we were through and safely into Mindanao Sea — our dead-reckoning navigation had been right."

"And there we really caught hell," said Kelly. "Big foaming waves fifteen or twenty feet high thundering over the cockpit, drenching everybody top-side. Also, because of the speed, water—and wind—it got damned cold. Our binoculars were full of water and our eyes so continuously drenched with stinging salt that we couldn't see, in strange waters with islands all around us. We could see the outlines of the big ones—Negros and Mindanao—very dimly against the horizon through the storm. But there were dozens of small ones and probably hundreds of reefs.

"The sea was on our port bow, tending to drive us south. We expected to make a landfall forty miles dead ahead—a small island where we would turn—and let me tell you this was an unpleasant situation for a navigator. The helmsman's eyes and ours were full of salt, you had to keep one hand in front of your eyes to avoid the slapping force of the water, and yet you needed both to hold on. The Admiral was pretty wrought up. I've called every type of ship in the navy except one of these MTB's, he shouted at me above the wind, 'and this is the worst bridge I've ever been on. I wouldn't do duty on one of these for anything to the world—you can have them.'

"It was a real problem to keep stern lookout for the 41 boat so we wouldn't lose it. Three good waves in a row and we'd be out of sight, and in that weather we could pass within twenty-five yards and never see each other. The 41 was now keeping about two hundred yards astern, hunting for the smoothest part of our wake, to keep the General's party comfortable. The General had said that if his boat slowed, we who were ahead should also slow, letting them set the pace. I know seasickness can be very unpleasant, but I wanted to get them safe in port by dawn, in case there were Jap planes about, so I kept pulling them on. It got rougher and rougher, and the Admiral kept reminding it had been he who had assured MacArthur that Bulkeley was wrong about the weather—it would be calm.

"The General's going to give me hell for this in the morning, he said, uneasily. 'Damned if I thought Bulkeley knew what he was talking about—but he surely did.'

"The Admiral stayed with me up on the bridge the whole trip, in spite of the weather. Every half-hour I would send a member of the crew over the boat for inspection, to see how its hull was standing the strain, for we were taking a awful licking.

"During one of these I noticed a figure by the machine-gun turret, sitting with his feet propped up on a torpedo tube. His stomach was long ago empty, but he was leaning forward, retching between his knees. From this I guessed it might be one of our passengers, and sent a quartermaster to ask him if he wouldn't care to go below. The quartermaster returned and saluted: 'The General says he doesn't want to move, sir—he knows what's best for him.'

Farmers Can Raise Spices Now Imported

Western Hemisphere Can Supply All Needs

Every spice, seed and herb that the United States has been accustomed to importing from the Orient can be grown successfully in the Western Hemisphere, either in North or South America, believes John A. Sokol, president of a chemical company bearing his name. In an address before the annual Chemurgic conference recently held in Chicago, he divided the plant products into two groups, according to the climatic conditions under which they grow.

First, he said, is the temperate zone, which covers central Europe, the Mediterranean area, Russia, northern India, and northern China. The second zone would comprise the tropics, semi-tropics, and particularly the East Indies close to the equatorial area.

From the temperate zone we have been importing herbs, such as sage, marjoram, thyme, savory, rosemary, sweet basil, oregano, laurel leaves, saffron, red peppers (paprika), and many crude drugs.

From the tropical zone we have been importing peppers, cloves, allspice, ginger, cinnamon, cassia, nutmeg, mace, turmeric, etc.

The items in the first category, namely those grown in the temperate zone, can all be grown in some part of the United States, and the items from the tropical zone could be grown in some of our possessions and also in Central and South America. All of the items under spices for seasoning and condiments could be grown in the Western Hemisphere.

That these particular items, he said, could be grown in the United States has been demonstrated.

Other seeds, such as poppy, caraway, dill, coriander, celery, fennel, and anise, have been grown in the United States to some extent. None of these items are available from Europe now and with the present difficulties of obtaining these seeds from India, China and other foreign countries, there are prospects that the growers would find these profitable for the next couple of years at least, Mr. Sokol thinks.

The herbs which have been grown and cultivated here are sage, marjoram, and basil, and an effort is being made to increase their production in this country.

All of the products grown in the United States have been found to be of very good quality and most of them compare very favorably to the products imported from abroad. Also with the American ingenuity to adapt special methods of planting, cultivating and harvesting, much of the low labor cost in foreign countries could be overcome.

Some of the outstanding products which have been grown successfully in the United States are mustard seed, grown in Montana and California, paprika (the sweet grade), grown in California, Louisiana and South Carolina, and sage, marjoram, thyme and basil, grown in practically every state of the United States.

Mr. Sokol continued that he was not giving any figures of the quantities grown, but that he felt assured that with the proper effort and cooperation of the various agencies, American housewives and the food industry can be fully supplied with many of the spice seasonings from products grown in the United States, the tropical possessions, and some of the South American countries.

Kid 'Stars' Aren't New; Appeared Back in 1803

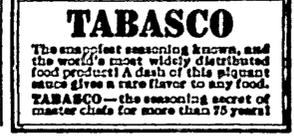

When we read of the big sums earned by the various kiddies in the movies, don't think it's something new. William Henry West Betty made his debut as an actor in 1803, at the age of 11, and was such a success that he collected $170,000 in 60 nights.

When he appeared at Covent Garden Opera house in England, the crush was so great that the troops were called out to keep order. He was presented to royalty, and on one occasion, when he was playing "Hamlet," the house of commons was specially adjourned so that members could see his performance.

There aren't any facts about his fan mail, but the autographs it contained must have been worth quite a bit, too! He died on August 24, 1874.
