Another Award for Cooper

A letter from Mrs. Frank Hawkins of Americus, Kansas, mentions a V-mail letter from her son, Bud Cooper, in which he says he received a wound in the leg in a recent battle and is in the hospital again. "I am sending you my Purple Heart medal which I was awarded. Mom, you will have a collection of medals. Is it fried chicken time in Kansas? Wish I could be there to help eat 'em. Seems like my girls all write to you instead of to me."

Loses Finger District Court Accidentally Convenes

Mr. James Gatwood had the misfortune of getting a finger amputated on a power saw at the Harkey lumber yard last Saturday morning, while sawing some lumber for repairs for the Kelt home recently purchased by Mr. Dabney of the I-X ranch.

Extension News

Army officials were grateful for the splendid cooperation from farmers and ranchers in the recent scrap drive. A scrap survey by the Extension Service reported 387 tons of scrap in the rural areas. The questionnaires signed by the ranchers were of considerable benefit in locating the metal. The Extension Service has received a new dehydrator that will be available for public use by those who would like to use the equipment to dry fruits and vegetables. It will be loaned for a three-day period.

Seven registered 4 H Duroc Jersey gilts have been awarded recently to 4-H club members. This is a continuation of the project that was started three years ago by the Sears Roebuck Co. of Roswell in cooperation with the Extension Service. According to the regulations, each club member returns one female pig out of the first litter, which in turn is awarded to another club member the coming year. Those awarded registered pigs recently were: Ernest Marable, Thurman Small, Bob Bond, Jimmy Miller, Clinton Lewis, Bobby Peebles and Alvie Mosteller.

Carl P. Radcliff, County Extension Agent.

Old Landmark Razed

The old ice house of the Southern Pacific on the east side of the tracks has been razed. The building was an old landmark in Carrizozo and for many years was used as a storage for ice to replenish refrigerator cars going through Carrizozo over the line.

On hot summer days, the children of the east side would gather underneath the loading platform and carried ice to their homes to make "nieve," "limonada" and other refreshing beverages.

Rev. Fr. Salvatore Di Giovanni of St. Rita Church has been out on mission work over the county this week.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT

Experience shows that tire failures during the four hot months from June to September average 20 per cent higher than during the rest of the year.
Rubber chattering should be washed with soap and warm water, thoroughly rinsed and then deacid with a 5 per cent solution of cresol to get the longest service out of the rubber. Roll, don't fold, when not in service.
The granddaddy of the present-day rubber, the Macintosh, was patented in England in 1823 by Charles Macintosh, of Glasgow, Scotland.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking, excessive smoking and tobacco—brings heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up at night, etc. They are a bad omen that may warn of kidney trouble. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are a nervous, burning scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's helps the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They are a lot more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Speaking Sports

By Bob McShane

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

SPINE-TINGLING sports events of past years were recalled recently in a poll conducted by Esquire magazine. Voters were asked to nominate the six greatest sporting events of the century. The results are, in some instances, surprising. Here they are:

- 1-The Jack Dempsey-Gene Tunney fight in Chicago September 22, 1927. (This was the long count fight.)
- 2-Bobby Jones' Grand Slam of the four major golf titles in 1930.
- 3-Jesse Owens' three firsts in the 1936 Olympic Games.
- 4-The deciding game of the 1926 World Series in New York when Grover Alexander struck out Tony Lazzeri with the bases full as the Cardinals won the championship.
- 5-Babe Ruth's "called" home run against the Cubs in the 1933 World Series in Chicago.
- 6-Red Grange's five long runs for touchdowns for Illinois against Michigan at Urbana, Ill., October 18, 1934.

Why It Won

The surprising factor of the vote is the first place position. There have been many more important sports events than the Dempsey-Tunney fight. But it did get a terrific amount of newspaper space because of the controversy. Then, too, it is likely that more people understand boxing than any other sport. People who don't understand the rules of football, baseball or golf do possess a fundamental knowledge of fighting.

Jack Dempsey

The details of that fight are still fresh in the memory of a good share of adult sports fans. Dempsey dropped Gene in the seventh round of the fight. But Jack refused to go to a neutral corner when first ordered to do so by the referee. When he finally did heed the warnings, sufficient time had passed for Tunney to regain his senses. Gene did so well in later rounds that he won the decision.

By an odd quirk of fate, it was a rule Dempsey had helped put on the books that gave Tunney his extra five-second reprieve. In a battle with Luis Firpo, the Manassas brawler had Firpo on the floor seven times in the first round. Each time he would stand over the Argentine and then, before he had time to get back on his feet, smack him down again.

It was that, as much as anything, which persuaded the boxing fathers to write in a rule stating that, on a knockdown, a fighter must retire to a neutral corner before the count could start. And the rule led to one of sports' biggest arguments.

Grand Slam Champ

Jones' record is one of the best in all sporting history. One of golf's immortals, he won his first championship when he was only eight years old. As a "boy wonder" in his teens and early twenties he astounded the world of golf by his ability. In 1930, when he was 23, he roached the pinnacle of fame by making the unprecedented "grand slam"—heading the victorious American Walker Cup team in matches with Great Britain and winning, in succession, the British Amateur, the British Open, the United States Open and United States Amateur championships.

Even when most champions are just beginning to hit their best stride, Bobby had no more worlds to conquer. He announced his retirement.

Jones did not win his first national title until 1933, when at 21 he beat Bobby Cruickshank in a playoff for the crown of the United States at Inwood Country Club, Long Island. In all he won 13 major championships—the U. S. Amateur five times, the U. S. Open four times, the British Open three times and the British Amateur once.

The "six greatest sporting events of the century" are just what each enthusiast thinks they are. It is not likely that very many voters would agree on the top six—much less their individual ranking.

But it would be a difficult task to find six more thrilling events in the history of sport. Time has not dulled their glamour—and that's about the truest of all tests.

SPORTS SHORTS

● Pitt expects to get 50,000 into the Stadium for its game September 25 with Notre Dame. That attendance would be almost as much as the Panthers drew all last season.

● For the first time in many years the United States Golf association has not issued an edition of golf rules.

● Red Lutas, 41, former pitcher for the Reds and Pirates, is getting in shape at his home in Nashville. He figures the manpower shortage may lead to his big league comeback.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF
Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal much which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of much which he considered conding back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased. Next day he had three meals, all overcooked, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Sellock, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Sellock declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Sellock said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."—Advt.

Courageous T. R. First President to Ride Auto

Theodore Roosevelt was the first President of the United States to ride in an automobile. The event took place at Hartford, Conn., in September, 1902. Behind the presidential car followed a horse-drawn vehicle—in case of an emergency.

Wrote one editor: "Roosevelt's display of courage was typical of him."

Read maps were not available in those days. Motorists used a Blue Book Traveling Guide containing directions such as: "Go 2 1/2 miles to red barn. Turn right. Go 4 miles to covered bridge," etc.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Crab grass, one of the most troublesome lawn pests, is an annual weed and can be destroyed by constant mowing. This prevents it from seeding itself. Rake well before cutting to make the plants stand up so that seed heads will be cut off.

A cool summer dessert is cantaloupe rings filled with ice cream, garnished with chopped nuts or preserved ginger.

Avoid starch if the linens are to be put away for a length of time. Starch is inclined to make the linen crack. Fold away unstarched and wrap in blue paper to prevent yellowing.

The old practice of pouring water in holes in cement to clean out all dirt is not as simple as blowing it out with a hand tire pump.

If the garden hose should spring a leak, try painting it with roofing paint.

Press most rayon fabrics when slightly damp. Spun rayons look best if ironed when almost dry. Press garments on the wrong side with a moderately warm iron using smooth, even pressure.

What is the most welcome gift you can send to a man in the service? Well, surveys among service men themselves show that one of the favorite packages from home are cigarettes. And first choice among men in all the services is Camel, based on the actual sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens. Through there are now Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to Sailors, Marines, and Coast Guardsmen wherever they are.—Advt.

Smile Awhile

Suspected
As he was squeezing through the narrow space to his seat in the circus, the awkward man turned to a grim-looking woman. "Pardon me, madam," he said, "but did I tread on your foot?" "I think you must have done it," was the curt reply; "all the elephants are still in the ring!"

Man for Him
A doctor was called in to see a very testy patient. "Well, sir, what's the matter?" he asked. "That's for you to find out," said the patient, glaring. "I see," said the doctor. "Well, if you'll excuse me a minute I'll go and bring a friend of mine—a vet. He's the only man I know who can make a diagnosis without asking questions."

The first thing we need if we want to feel pleased with ourselves is a poor memory.

New Mexico State Fair

At its regular session in Albuquerque, July 23, the New Mexico State Fair Commission, in completing plans for the 1943 Fair, September 26 through October 3, approved appropriations for the largest cash premiums for livestock and farm competitive displays ever offered in the state. Cash awards for beef and dairy cattle, swine, sheep, goats and poultry were increased materially, as were the awards for farm, orchard and garden crops. These were further increased by contributions from every major national association of registered breeders in the United States.

"The Commission feels", said Chairman H. B. Sellers, "that we must do our utmost to stimulate food production in 1944. We can do it only by improved livestock breeding and better range and farming efforts and methods. The cooperation of the great breeder organizations is not only recognition of the value of the New Mexico Fair, but also of its usefulness in stimulating production next year, when food will be most urgently needed."

The Commission completed plans for all entertainment features at the fair. Contracts were signed with Beutler Brothers, of Elk City, Okla., for six nights of rodeo performances, open to champion riders and ropers of the world; with Dodson's carnival company... a 35-car aggregation of attractions...; and the State Fair's first sheep-shearing contest was arranged for. The second annual "Catch-and-Have-It" calf contest for 4 H and FFA boys and girls was approved. The State Fair Commission again will have direct management of the eight-day race meeting. Veteran racing men were employed to handle all details of the meeting. The State Fair racing stables already are filling up and indications are that both in number and quality of horses the coming meeting will set a new standard.

Twelve thousand-four hundred separate cash premiums are listed for livestock, farm and garden products, home arts and home science displays. Premiums range from 50c to $100.00. The total offering is approximately $30,000. Both in number of premiums and in total cash awards offered, new high records are set.

"Attendance at the recent Amarillo rodeo and that at Las Vegas this week furnished convincing evidence that the people are hungry for amusement and that the rodeo remains the most popular form of outdoor entertainment," Harms said.

The 1943 premium book of 240 pages, with two-color cover, is now being distributed. Men and women, boys and girls throughout New Mexico interested in exhibiting are invited to write to Leon H. Harms, Secretary-Manager, P. O. Box 1693, Albuquerque, for a copy of the book and entry blanks. There is no charge.

of this Community:

ARE YOU REALLY AT WAR?

What does being "at war" mean to you? Less gasoline for your auto? Less sugar in your coffee? Higher prices for your food and clothes? Separation from your husband?

Sure, it has meant all those things, some serious and some really trivial for a period when your actual safety is at stake.

But has the war meant BLOOD, SWEAT AND TEARS to you? In many instances YES. The first stage of invasion has already pushed our casualties over the 100,000 mark.

The gold stars which decorate thousands of our homes today are a challenge to the vast majority of us to do our best in the Third War Loan. No good American wants to see one more gold star added to the firmament of glory. We educate our youth for life, not for death. If they die, they die so that we might live. Every extra War Bond you buy today will back the invasion so that the war will be shortened and so that there will be less blood, sweat and tears for you and your friends.

YOUNGSTERS—HELP WITH HOME-CANNING!

Don't worry if you're too young for the WAACS or WAVES. There's another important job for you. Save all the extra vegetables from your Victory Garden by home-canning. A few jars a day take little time and add up to well-filled shelves by the end of the season. Food costs are high in the stores and may be higher, but food grown at home still costs a few cents a jar. There's a deep satisfaction in growing and canning your own food. Wait and see. You'll take inventory of your garden each day to see which vegetables are right for the table and how many extras there are to put in glass jars. Make it a point each day to gather everything at its prime, and make it a point of honor to get the extras into glass jars before they lose freshness. That's the big secret of delicious, nutritious, home-canned foods—freshness. Home-grown, home-canned foods often have many more vitamins than those bought at the store, because they are fresh. And when you get a reliable home-canning booklet, you'll be surprised as how many different things may be put away for later use in glass jars. Be sure to have the very best canning instructions and recipes. One fruit jar company offers a Blue Book free with a coupon packed with each dozen jars—or for ten cents if you have no coupon. The instructions are easy to follow. It is not necessary to have elaborate or expensive equipment. Form a canning club and have fun while you can!

Coal May Be Rationed

It is rumored that coal will be rationed in the early winter. From reports I have received, this will not happen if the present volume of coal now taken from the mines is continued. Cars for the movement of coal are hard to get now and freight moves slowly, and will move slower as the movement of troops and war materials grow heavier. It is suggested by mine operators that you order your winter's supply of coal now, while available.

Save Tin Cans

A plea to housewives to continue preparation and salvage of tin cans in areas where tin can campaigns are authorized by the War Production Board was made today by the regional WPB conservation manager.

Even the tin can collection in some areas isn't exactly what it should be, the urgent war need for the super-critical tin contained in cans has not diminished in the slightest.

The need for tin is greater than ever. Our job now is to perfect collection methods and to salvage every can possible.

Housewives are urged to continue to observe these simple rules: Open both ends of the can. Wash thoroughly. Remove paper labels. Flatten the can merely by stepping on it. Deposit in a separate box or container for collection.

Throughout New Mexico can collections are encouraged by WPB. In many areas, collections are being made by drivers for bottling companies after local salvage committees have gathered the cans at a central point.

N.M. Cattlemen to Meet September 27

Albuquerque, Aug. 29, 1943. The next regular meeting of the Executive Board of the New Mexico Cattle Growers Association will be held at Albuquerque, on Monday, September 27th, with a brief preliminary meeting the evening of the 26th, E. G. Hayward, Cimarron, President of the Association announced today. More than 300 leading cattlemen, representing all parts of the state are expected to be in attendance at the meeting, Hayward said.

Principal problems today confronting livestock producers include: the acute shortage of supplemental feed together with a record number of cattle on ranges throughout the state and nation; Government regulations and controls which have in many instances resulted in light marketing of cattle, closing down of local packing plants and small distribution of meat; the Livestock and Meat Industry program to solve our wartime meat problems; transportation problems which will occur during the shipping season in the state, and numerous other like situations which demand considerable thought and action on part of cattlemen throughout the state, Hayward said.

Recalling that the first Quarterly Committee meeting of the Association scheduled to be held in June was postponed because cattlemen were too busy with ranch work and because of transportation difficulties, Hayward stated that it is considered necessary and essential that the September meeting be held in order to discuss and iron out many of the serious problems confronting the industry. All cattlemen in the state are invited to take part in the meeting, Hayward said.

Commenting that the State cattlemen's association office had received nearly 300 new applications for membership to be approved at the September meeting, Hayward said the Association's membership would soon total more than 2,500 members, representing ownership of more than 89 per cent of all cattle in the state.

Five Months of Tank Warfare
By Sgt. Charles Embao

(WHU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine)

An tank commander in the First Armored division, I saw five months of fighting in North Africa. It was the first large-scale tank fighting our army has had in this war.

Our company fought a lot of different kinds of actions. We fought against the French for a few days and then we fought beside them. We fought the Italians. And we got tangled up with three of Hitler's star panzer divisions.

We fought in the cold, the snow, the rain, and the mud; in the heat, the sand, and the dust; in the mountains, the pine woods, the olive groves, the dry lake-beds, the big seaports, the little Arab villages, and in some old Roman ruins.

We made some mistakes. We took some beatings. But our training was good and we learned fast. We improved on Old Professor Rommel's tricks as we went along. Altogether, I guess we handed out better than we took.

Coming into Oran, a sniper shot from a window at a tank about four ahead of mine. He wounded a Frenchman who was just handing a tangerine up to the man in the turret. Instantly the gunner in the next tank raised his 37-mm. and blew the sniper right out of the window. Almost at the same moment a tank destroyer fired with its heavy gun and practically blasted the corner off the building.

Shrieking Stukas.

In warfare, your first dive bombing is an unforgettable experience. When those Stukas come down on you, their sirens shrieking like some wild animal, the bombs deafening you and choking the earth, the machine-gun bullets sewing patterns all around you—boy, it really scares the daylights out of you, the first couple of times. Then you learn that they don't hurt the tank unless they score a direct bomb hit, which is very seldom.

We got on we didn't mind a dive-bombing attack nearly as much as well directed artillery fire. When those artillery shells start coughing for you, up and down, back and forth, on and on, you really want to get out of that place. You do get out, unless it is critical.

Before Tunis gave up, our armored division was busy for several weeks backing up and reinforcing a line about 150 miles long. Men, equipment, and help were on the way across the oceans and skies, but they hadn't arrived yet. We had to do with what we had. We would plug a hole in the line here, make a swift raid there, pull a bluff all the way along the line. If the Germans had known, they might have broken through in January.

I guess we moved around so much, jabbed at so many places, that we seemed to have twice as many tanks as we really had. Once, I remember, we rolled almost without stopping for 48 hours. We ate as we traveled, took turns driving, took turns sleeping. We never fired a shot in anger, except at dive-bombers, during the trip. I hope that march confused the Germans as much as it did us—we never did learn the purpose of it.

One evening a tank man named Bouerle, who understood German, got his radio on the German frequency and heard the German talking. They were in high spirits. One of them was saying: "We're going to get plenty of souvenirs for you this time." That meant us.

Pasting a Mark IV.

The two-way radio is a wonderful thing for handling tanks in battle, but it has its dangers. The enemy, miles away, is listening. If you leave your mike open you may drop an unguarded remark. Or the orders may be coming from a German.

One day when we were moving forward I heard our captain say: "Watch it, Shaffer. Watch out for German tanks up that road." A minute later I heard a voice with just the faintest German accent: "Okay, Shaffer. It's all right now. All clear. You can come on down the road." Shaffer wasn't sucked in, but it gives you a funny feeling.

Just to indicate what quick thinking you have to do in tank warfare, consider our situation one day when a big German Mack IV—twice as big as our tank—came edging around a corner of a ridge in front of us. The minute he came around I hit him with my 37 mm. gun. It didn't stop him and he fired at me with his .88. I backed up about 50 yards. The German shell hit just where we had been. I pulled the same maneuver twice again and then I had him where I wanted him; within reach of one of our M-10 tank destroyers.

Yanks Battle Through Jap Defenses and Rain

This unusual action soundphoto shows a unit of American fighters attacking on Rendova island despite a heavy downpour. In the dim light of dawn they huddle against tree trunks and other cover. Intensification of the war against Japan on other fronts was indicated by the establishment of an Allied Southeast Asia command under Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten of Britain.

Even King George's private golf course has been plowed up to be used for cultivation under Britain's wartime production policy. He is shown with Queen Elizabeth, Princess Elizabeth (rear left) and Princess Margaret Rose, inspecting the crops being harvested on his former golf course.

As Zero Hour on Munda Attack Nears

The greatest morale builder among military men—mail from home—is sorted out by men on New Georgia island just before they start out on a trek across mountains, jungles and swamps to surprise the Japs at Vira harbor. Capture of this strategic spot was the beginning of the end for the Japs on New Georgia island and the vital Munda air base.

Spotting the Enemy

It's important for servicemen and women to be able to identify friendly and enemy ships. These WAVES are learning to classify a vessel by its outlines and salient features at Hunter college in New York, where the girls are conditioned to navy military regime.

Spy Suspect

Grace Buchanan-Dimes, 34, who was asked by the FBI in Detroit, Mich. She was accused of securing information about United States arms production for Germany.

Washington, D. C. FURY IN THE AIR

U. S. air operations out of England are now by far the most extensive and toughest operations of the U. S. air forces. Pilots who have seen action in four theaters—China, the Pacific, North Africa, and Europe—say the first three are child's play compared with the current flak-and-fighter opposition of Germans.

The first flight a year ago was made without the loss of a single U. S. plane. The Germans were caught off guard by the daylight raid. But such things don't happen any more. It is no secret that U. S. losses on each raid over the continent are high enough to hurt badly, though not high enough to stop the operations.

War correspondents in Britain declare that U. S. airmen who fly these missions are the greatest heroes of the war. They have to face more fighting fury, and face it with more skill, than any other men in this war—whether fighting on land, sea or in the air.

PARATROOP MIRACLE

There was one thrilling bit of untold history regarding the Allied landing in Sicily which only now can be revealed. A division of U. S. parachute troops actually stopped about two Nazi divisions which were dashing to the seacoast to await Allied landing barges.

This occurred the night before the landing barges arrived. Had the paratroopers not succeeded in holding up the Nazis, U. S. troops might have landed literally in blood.

What happened was that the paratroopers, coming down mysteriously at night, not far from the Nazi divisions, fooled the enemy into thinking he was outnumbered. Actually, a paratroop division is far inferior in numbers to a division of ground troops. But the Nazis could not tell in the dark how many Americans there were, got the impression that the sky was packed with paratroopers.

So they decided to camp for the night and get ready for a fight the next morning. But by daylight U. S. landing barges were safely ashore.

LUDWIG'S WARNING

Emil Ludwig, famous German author and biographer, recently had a unique session with the army's school for military government at Charlottesville, Va., as to what the Allies should do with Germany after the war.

Ludwig gave a series of lectures on how to prevent another Hitler from arising and plunging the world into another war 20 years hence. Based upon years of studying Bismarck, Hindenburg and the Kaiser, the German historian urged that there be a strong army of occupation by all the United Nations for at least five years.

"The German people should know for the first time in 130 years," he said, "what a foreign authority looks like. Only thus can they be brought to understand that they have been defeated."

Ludwig pointed out that German militarism always had come from Prussia, while Germany's culture had come from the south and west. Therefore he proposed splitting Germany up into two states: (1) Prussia, small and isolated; and (2) Bavaria, Saxony, and the smaller Catholic German states which are not militaristic and which would be joined with Austria. This would put the Catholics in one country and the Lutheran Prussians in another.

No 'Poor Misguided' Germans. "Leave to the Germans all that other nations have," Ludwig recommended, "but take away their weapons, supervise their education, and give them political guardianship. If you do not, and if you speak of the 'poor misguided' German people, then 20 years from now your sons will be fighting another war against them."

"What I fear," continued Ludwig, "is that on the day after the death of Hitler, the Junkers, the generals will kowtow to you and say, 'We love Americans. Come, let us be brothers again.' I fear that some of you will say, 'Now let us make peace. They are good people, these generals.'"

"But they are not. They are not one whit better than the Hitlers. They merely have better manners," Ludwig declared.

Note: Ludwig paid tribute privately to the excellent job the army was doing at its school for military government. He said he had seldom met such an intelligent, progressive group of men, with such a grasp, on the world's future problems.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Quite a few Italian soldiers in Sicily undressed, hid their uniforms, put on overalls and went home to work to avoid becoming prisoners. When forthright ex-assistant secretary of war Louis Johnson got back from India his report was so critical of the British that state department officials scarcely believed parts of it. But after Ambassador Bill Phillips got back from his India survey, Undersecretary Sumner Welles told Johnson that pro-British Phillips was in complete agreement.

SLAVE TO PURGATIVES FINDS FREEDOM!

Feels 20 Years Younger, Ho Say!

Everyone who has despaired of ever finding normal regularity should read this uncollected letter:

"Six years ago, I was quite constipated. I'd taken many so-called 'cures', but it was the same old story. It seemed that each case had to be started from the start. Then I tried KILLLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. From that time on, I was 'regular' again, with none of the old griping pains. I'm 49, but feel younger than 20 years ago. I'm a true believer in KILLLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. Mr. A. B. Bessfield, 603 D. Villa Avenue, Villa Park, Ill.

What's the secret of such reports of ALL-BRAN's wonderful results? It's simply this: Lack of certain cellulose elements in the diet is a common cause of constipation. Scientists say KILLLOGG'S ALL-BRAN is a rich, natural source of these elements—which help the colonic flora do their job—lightening and softening the accumulated waste for easy, natural evacuation. ALL-BRAN is not a purgative. Not roughage that acts by "sweeping you out." It's a gentle-acting, "regulating" food! Eat ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water. See if you, too, don't find the relief you've dreamed of! Get it on the genuine ALL-BRAN! It is made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

THE STORY SO FAR: The story of their part in the battle for the Philippines is being told by four of the Ave naval officers who are all that is left of Motor Torpedo Boat Squadron 3.

CHAPTER XIV

"Then I went out to this sympathetic American stranger's home, which was on the outskirts on a hill overlooking Cebu City and harbor. I went right to bed after supper, but first I turned on the radio by my bed. It said that Bataan had just fallen. Maybe if they could have been told that those seven fat inter-island steamers were on their way loaded with food and quinine, maybe those poor brave, starved, fever-ridden guys could have held the line a little longer. Well, we in the torpedo boats had done what we could. And I wished that Peggy could know that, and that I could thank her for those two codeine tablets, and tell her how they let Reynolds sit out on the deck and really enjoy his last cigarette.

"It was a hell of an explosion which woke me up in the dark, and for a minute I didn't know where I was. Through my window which overlooked the town and the harbor beyond, I could see a fire rising on the outskirts. I looked at my wrist watch. It was 4:25. They were all awake in the house now. Then came an even bigger explosion and a flame ten times as high. My American host came back from the telephone and said that one was the Philippine Refinery; the Japanese were coming and the Americans were blowing up the town. I hustled into my clothes to get back into the city. I wanted to rejoin my three men, but I was stopped on the road by the army—no traffic, everybody must get out. It was 5:20, and by now one-third of the city was in flames.

"People were streaming out—some Americans, and a few of our navy. From them during the morning I heard that the Japs had come back and bombed what was left of our 34 boat on the beach. Well, that was over.

"Then I heard that Bulkeley wasn't dead—his boat escaped and was now in Mindanao. That Brantingham had burned his 35 boat sitting there on 'Dad' Cleland's marine railway—at least the Japs wouldn't get it. That Ensign Richardson had assembled what was left of our men, and joined up with our naval forces on Mactan Island, where they would all try to escape to the island of Leyte. It was the last I ever heard of them.

"The Japs had already landed twenty miles down the coast of Cebu—also at two other points.

"Well, what can I do?" I asked the army. "Nothing," they said. "Maybe you'd like to join the other evacuees who are assembling at Camp X—an army stronghold inland which was going to hold out all through the war until help came from the States.

"I couldn't make up my mind, so I waited at this American's house for something better to turn up, and meanwhile watched the Japs invasion from the second-story windows.

"The invasion of Cebu was on a penny-ante scale—we could have stopped them if we'd had anything at all," said Lieutenant Kelly. "They had a destroyer, two transports, and a couple of inter-island steamers not a hundred feet long. This gang lay off the channel entrance for a while, and presently they loaded about a thousand infantry into the two steamers (five hundred in each), which set out in column through the channel. The leading boat had a little 2-inch gun on its bow, and every now and then it would bang away toward the city.

"I watched them tie up at about ten o'clock in the morning at the only remaining dock and disembark. Meanwhile the three seaplanes (yes, the same ones) were flying over the city, dropping leaflets in English telling the Philippines to surrender. 'We are your friend,' and offering a substantial reward for any American, dead or alive, and a handsome reward for any American Officer or his body. Nice guys. Meanwhile two Zero fighters were strafing the automobiles trying to get out on the road.

"Then we got reports on the progress of the street fighting, which we could also hear from the house. The general had apparently pulled out—maybe to fortify Camp X—but the colonel was staying behind with his soldiers to hold out as long as he could. "Meanwhile I had been asking the army what was so good about Camp X. Well, it was way up in the hills, they said. It would take days of walking over footpaths, because all the roads into it were blown up. "But won't the Japs come after you?" "Oh, they'd never do that—it's too hard to get to. "What about equipment and guns? Well, they had a radio station, food for several months, a few hundred troops and a few rifles. The more I heard about Camp X, the more distrustful I got, and meanwhile a report came in that the Japs had landed at Toledo. I looked at my map—it was the standard map the army used for operations, put out by the Standard Oil Company with all their filling stations marked—and saw that a good road led directly from Toledo to Camp X. So I asked the army why the Japs wouldn't use it. "Oh, we're going to blow that up, just like the others." "But the whole Camp X plan looked lousy to me. "So I started off by myself for the other coast, hoping I could get out to some other island where the Japs hadn't come yet. I joined up with some civilians who were going the same way—they were plantation owners and could speak the dialect. It was a forty-two-mile hike over steep trails which crossed five mountain ranges. We carried a few cans of corned beef, and at night would sleep in native huts with pigs and chickens under us and flies over us, and we would get the natives to cook us rice and corn, and buy chickens which they would roast for us. We used banana leaves for plates, and pieces of bark for forks.

"The second day we heard planes at dawn and all scrambled back out of sight in the hut—peering up through the palms. It was three bombers in formation about fifteen hundred feet.

"Somebody said, pointing, 'Why, look—they're ours!' But I could hardly believe it—even when I saw the stars on their wings, even when I heard the faraway rumble of their bombs dropping on the Japs in Cebu. They were the first American bombers we had seen since before the start of the war. Then we heard some more planes—looked up, and again they were American, a new type with a split tail I'd never seen before but which I learned later were B-23's, and now I realized that here was our big American offensive—the one which we thought had peeped out on us the morning after we sunk the cruiser. Here it was at last—three days too late! Because in the meantime Bataan had fallen, and Cebu.

"Because we little guys—the ones who are expended—never get to see the broad picture of the war, never find out the reasons back of the moves or failures to move. We only see our part—look up through the palm trees at the seamy side of it, so when something poops out, and help doesn't come, and everything goes to hell, we can only hope help didn't come in time for some sensible reason like bad weather conditions in Australia. We hope, but at the time we can't be sure, and we get mad.

"That afternoon we bumped into a bunch of troops; they had come from Camp X. It seemed that at three o'clock in the morning a sentry heard a noise, called out 'Halt!' and was answered by Jap-tank fire. Somebody hadn't gotten around to blowing up that road from Toledo. So now impregnable Camp X was no more, all American forces on the island were routed, and everything was going to pot.

"Finally we hit a little native village on the coast and started looking for boats, but the mayor said there were none—the native troops had used them to evacuate that day. But they were swell to us—always out in the country they were swell to us—ignorant guys, maybe, but nice and kind as they could be. I remember on the trail we overtook a ramshackle cart and a few natives, and an old native woman gave the cart driver hell for not putting the baggage in his cart—said we Americans were fighting for their people and they should help us. "The driver tried to pile it on, but it broke his cart down. He wouldn't take any money—just said he was sorry he couldn't help us more. In those days in the jungle I learned more about how nice the simple Filipino people are than I'd learned in months in Manila; I also learned the more Americanized they are, the lousier they are.

"Leaving this village, we kept on down the road to an even tinier one on the coast—still looking for boats. We found a military headquarters and a Filipino third lieutenant—just a kid—in command of twenty native troops, no machine guns and almost no ammunition. Ten miles of hard-surfaced road connected it with a town where the Japs had landed. He said a Jap tank had come up the road the first day but had turned around and gone back. Why hadn't he blown up the bridges? No dynamite. What was he going to do if the Jap tanks came again? What could he do, he asked, but evacuate? I noticed they had all their gear packed into a bus, and that under their uniforms they wore their civilian clothing. And I couldn't blame them. But they helped us comb the place for boats, and we finally located enough bancas to carry us, and shoved off at dusk.

"We arrived at the next island soaking wet but thankful, and glad we were halted on the beach by native volunteer guards with homemade rifles, instead of by the Japs.

"Here I said good-by to the American civilians. They owned sugar and coconut plantations and wanted to get to their families. Then they would try to get them to safety, but where was safety? Or maybe, instead of wandering from island to island, it would be better to wait for the Japs in their homes. They couldn't decide. The whole easy, comfortable American world was cracking up fast in those islands. It wasn't nice to watch.

"Meanwhile I caught a ride in a car to the island's military headquarters where there was a general in command, and told the army lieutenant at the desk that I wanted to get over to the island beyond, provided the Japanese hadn't already taken it—what did he know? "Well, he said, he didn't know for sure, but he didn't think the Japs had taken it.

"I asked him when he had last communicated with military headquarters over there. "About a month ago, he said. "Well, I said, this was urgent—I had to find out quick—wasn't there any way of getting in communication with them?"

"Well, he said, he guessed he could pick up the telephone on his desk and call them. But, he explained, I was now around here and didn't understand the local situation. It seemed that his general and the general over on the other island didn't get on at all—hadn't liked each other since West Point. "You fellows may think you're fighting the Japanese," he said, "but here we know better. The front-line trenches of the real war are between these two generals." However, he said, my case made it different, and since I was a naval officer and therefore, so to speak, a neutral, he thought he could take it on his own responsibility to call up headquarters on the other island and ask in my behalf if the Japanese had landed yet.

"He rang them up, and then reported that at the other end of the wire they were talking something which wasn't English or Spanish. Maybe it was Tagalog, which he didn't speak himself, but just in case it was Japanese I had probably better find some other way of going to Mindanao.

"How the war between the generals came out I never learned; maybe their finishing it in a Japanese prison camp. "It took me days to get to Mindanao around through the islands, begging rides in cars, hiring small boats to cross little island channels. My objective was to join Bulkeley, who, they had said in Cebu, had escaped the destroyer and was in Mindanao. I wanted to make my report of my part of the battle to him as commander of our squadron. General Sharp, who commanded the island, surely could tell me where he was.

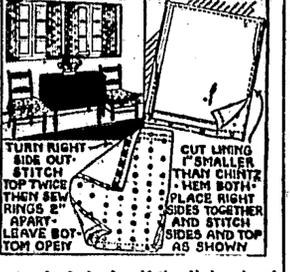

"A Chinese mestizo who was doing a smuggling business of luxury articles among the islands finally landed me, for an enormous price in pesos, at a tiny village on Mindanao which had been abandoned by everybody but one old man, who said yes, a torpedo boat had been in there the week before, and with gestures drew a pretty good picture of Bulkeley's black beard. But he said they'd been there only a few hours, and left for he knew not where. Then he asked when the Japs were coming. Because all the villagers had left, because they were afraid they'd be killed, but I didn't think the Japs would kill an old man, did I?"

"I hopped a ride on a truck on down to Iligan, and there was Bulkeley's 41 boat, tied to the dock! "The first person I saw was Ensign Cox here, and his mouth dropped open. After a few seconds, he said, 'Good God! I heard you were dead!' One by one the crew would come up, stare, then step up to shake my hand and say, 'Gen. Mr. Kelly, we're glad to see you!' ON THE HOME FRONT With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

QUAINT chintz curtains are always appropriate for case-ment windows and their colors give the best effect by day if they are lined to keep the light from shining through. At night they may be drawn together to serve each piece, then place right sides together and stitch side seams, as shown at the right of this sketch. Crease sides with seams on the lining, then stitch across top. The lower sketch shows how the top is finished.

Instead of shades if the lining is of fairly heavy material. The secret of making curtains of this type hang well is in not joining the two layers of material at the bottom. If your windows are narrow, a half width of chintz and of lining may be wide enough for each of the curtains. The lining should be cut one inch narrower and shorter than the chintz. Hem

Army Salvages Fats

It is estimated that enough waste fats are salvaged in Army camps within the Continental U. S. to make 1,500,000 pounds of dynamite each month, and still leave a residue of rendered grease from which 5,000,000 pounds of soap stock may be made.

Paul C. Cabot, Director of W. P. B. Salvage Division, recently urged housewives to remember that even if accumulated fats become rancid, they still retain a majority of the valuable glycerine that goes into war production. Some housewives, believing that rancid fats are valueless, have not been turning them in for salvage. This has resulted in the loss of thousands of pounds of glycerine that could have been processed from these fats.

USELESS SPENDING

Senator Harry F. Byrd, in a recent press release, said in part:

"The United States Civil Service Commission reports as of August 31, 1942, that there were 2,600,200 employees of the United States government. . . . On Armistice Day, November 11, 1918, there was a total of 917,760 civilian federal employees. We have three times that many now. In the last World War we had one civilian employee for every four and one-half members in the armed service. In this war, we have so far one civilian employee to every one and three-fourths members of the armed forces, the ratio being two and one-half times more per soldier, and we are still increasing our civilian personnel at the rate of over 3,000 daily. . . . On November 11, 1918, there were thirty agencies of the government. Today there are 81 distinct agencies, many of them making no direct contribution to the war effort."

This remarkable statement should receive the careful consideration of every American citizen. When we consider that, since the release by Senator Byrd, the President has submitted his budget to Congress for the fiscal year, calling for 169 billion dollars for our war effort and nine billion additional for civic expenditures, we gain some idea of what the conduct of this war is going to mean in the tax burden of the next generation.

Curtail Civic Spending
No one wants to limit a single activity necessary to win the war, but just ordinary common sense and economy indicate that every unnecessary civic expenditure should wait until the emergency of war has passed.

Right now our new Congress is confronted with the problem of preventing excessive profits on war contracts. Present law provides for "renegotiation" of their separate contracts by the Army and Navy departments and the Maritime Commission. There are some three million of these contracts, but probably not 5 per cent will show excessive profits after taxation.

The Internal Revenue department will find every case of excessive profits and, where such profits remain after taxes, can report such cases for "renegotiation." This is practical economy and does the job the most efficient way.

Industry and agriculture, both of which feel the pinch of shortage of manpower, should support Congress in any method it decides upon as practical and economical. Preventing new additions to the payroll and cutting out useless civic expenditures and payrollers who have nothing to do that is constructive in the war effort will help solve the manpower problem and ease the burden of taxes.
