Wearing 'Em Higher In The Navy

How long should be a WAVE's skirt? This is a major policy question now being debated in the Navy. The above knee length—or shortness—of women's skirts in civilian life makes the Waves feel out of the mode wearing skirts half way to the ankles. So they have thumbed through the book of regulations and found a helpful phrase.

The book says their skirts must be of "conventional sweep and length." But the modern convention is shorter than what they are wearing, so out comes the needle and thread, and in goes a broad hem.

Of course, they realize that in training schools, where they march in company formations, the skirts must be of uniform length, to give an even hem line for the whole company. This is awfully hard on some girls, who have to wear their skirts lower on the leg than others just for the sake of the hem line.

Mr. W. L. Smith of White Oaks was an Alamogordo business visitor last Thursday and Friday. Mr. Smith received a letter from his grandson, Leo Smith, Jr., in which he says that he received his "wings" at Phoenix, Arizona, recently. Leo and Joe Chavez of the News office received their basic training together at Kearns, Utah, and also were barrack mates and classmates in Radio School at Madison, Wisconsin.

H. E. Kelt, Fireman 2/e, arrived Sunday to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Kelt, Sr., before returning to his ship in San Diego. Herman E. is wearing some service stars on his sleeve, indicating the number of major battles he has been in.

Mrs. Ernestus Lacey of Nogal is visiting the wife of her nephew, Pvt Roy W. Harman, who is now stationed at Camp Lee, Virginia.

S/Sgt. Earl Thornton is spending a few days with his parents. He has been in the Army since June, 1942, and this is his first furlough. He has been stationed in Alaska.

Haven Glassmire, nephew of Mrs. A. F. Roselle, who has been in the Merchant Marines for some time, has been promoted again. He is a designer and draftsman.

Dan Conley, Jr., who has been in Australia for some time, arrived in San Francisco recently. After a short time in the hospital, he will come home for a furlough.

Otto Prehm, Petty Officer in the Navy, left Tuesday for Virginia where he is stationed. Otto subscribed for the News before leaving.

Tech. Sergeant Saturnino Chavez Victim Of This Relentless War

Made Supreme Sacrifice For Country, Home and Loved Ones

A wave of universal grief swept the town last Sunday morning, when it became known that one of our own young men, Saturnino Chavez, Jr., was a victim of this relentless war. Few particulars are available. The War Department's telegram to his mother was terse—"Died in Action. Letter follows."

He had been in North Africa only a few short weeks, and had already won for himself two Oak Leaf Clusters and another award for meritorious service and heroism in shooting down an enemy ship and perhaps two. He was the tail gunner aboard a Flying Fortress, the army's prized bombing plane.

The picture we have of Sgt. Sat. Chavez was to have run this week with one of the letters his mother received from him after he reached his overseas destination.

OBITUARY

Saturnino Chavez, Jr., was the second son of the late Mr. Saturnino Chavez and Mrs. Maggie V. Chavez. He was born in Carrizozo, August 17, 1913. He attended the Carrizozo Schools and graduated from High School in 1932. During his school years he studied violin and became a very accomplished musician. He was a member of the Carrizozo High School Orchestra under the direction of Prof. J. C. Burkett. The orchestra won first place at the State Music Meet in Silver City in 1929. In 1932 he received an award from the National Music Society for his violin playing.

Sat devoted much time to golf playing and won several golf contests also.

He was assistant cashier of the First National Bank when Mr. E. M. Brickley was here. Later he became Deputy County Treasurer and served in that capacity under Messrs. L. J. Adams, O. W. Bamberger and Ernest Key. In August, 1940, he became clerk for the Triple A here, and later at Bernalillo, where he enlisted in the Army in the middle of 1941. He was stationed at Sheppard Field, Texas, for a number of months, where he was promoted from private to sergeant and from where he ferried troops to different posts over the United States. From Sheppard Field he went to gunnery school at Las Vegas, Nevada. Next he went to Salt Lake City, Utah, where he received his "wings" and was promoted to Staff Sergeant. He went on maneuvers to Blythe, California, and then to Dyersburg, Tennessee, where he received his advanced training before he was sent to North Africa for combat duty. Sat was promoted to Tech. Sgt. when he was awarded his citations.

(His life was full of promise; his death is a severe blow to his family and friends.)

Sat is survived by his mother, Mrs. Maggie V. Chavez, three brothers, Manuel, Reuben and Zeko Chavez of Carrizozo; one sister, Mrs. Arthur Martinez of Topeka, Kansas; three aunts, Mmes. Mary Marquez and Stella Saleido of Tucumcari; Adelaida Ramirez of Los Angeles; two uncles, Alex Chavez of Tucumcari and Joe Chavez of Carrizozo; also his little nieces and nephews and many other relatives.

NOTICE: Anyone caught trespassing on the pastures of the Freeman ranch will be dealt with according to law.
Mrs. Rhoda Freeman Kohler.
015-29.

Mr. and Mrs. Otho Lowe of Capitan were in Carrizozo last Wednesday.

Mrs. P. M. Johnson returned the first of the week from Alamogordo where she had been visiting her great grandson. She left again Tuesday to visit in Roswell.

Messrs. Reyes Marrujo, Matias and Ignacio Sedillo of Rabenton were business visitors in Carrizozo last Tuesday.

BIRTHDAY PARTY

Mrs. Henry Hoffman entertained with a birthday party for her daughter, Mildred, last Saturday afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock.

Thirty guests were present and many games were played by the children. A great many gifts were received by the honoree—stationery, scrap books, jewelry, handkerchiefs, hair bows, fancy lapp ornaments and many things too numerous to mention.

The hostess served cake, cookies, sherbet and cocoa. She was assisted in serving by Mesdames James Duncan and Dan Elliott.

Radio Salute to Sunshine State

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Oct. 9.—New Mexico's military men and Spanish señoritas, Carlsbad caverns and Navajo novelties were all encompassed on a radio salute to the Sunshine State recently from Antilles Air Command headquarters here.

The half-hour program was one in a weekly series titled "48-Gun Salute" which pays tribute to a different state of the union each week for the benefit of men in service in the Caribbean. The program derives its name from the military custom of firing one gun for each state on Independence Day.

Special tribute was paid to the New Mexico National Guard which sent the first anti-aircraft battery to the Philippines before Pearl Harbor. The men from this outfit went into action at Manila, on Bataan and finally Corregidor.

Frame to Use for Storing Folding Cot

SOME people have a talent for making guests comfortable and they are not always the people with big houses and what used to be called a spare room. Many a homemaker today is graciously sharing limited space in a house or apartment because war conditions make her feel that it is part of her contribution.

This sketch shows an ingenious frame under which a folding cot may be stored in a hall or other out-of-the-way corner. The frame has a full skirted cover of denim trimmed in bands of flowered chintz. On top there stands a medicine chest with feet made by gluing spools in place. This cabinet gives a convenient place for toilet articles and the mirror door is well lighted with wall brackets connected with a floor outlet.

NOTE—This sketch is from BOOK 7 of the series prepared for readers on making things for the home. It also contains sketches and directions for 31 other things to make from odds and ends on hand and inexpensive new materials. Booklet costs 15 cents. Send request for booklet direct to:

Speaking of Sports

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

ONLY one thing is certain during the current football season—spectator interest is as great as ever.

This was proved quite definitely on the opening day of the college gridiron season. Four games in the Midwest that were open for civilian patronage, and Notre Dame at Pittsburgh, drew a total of 176,996, or an average of 35,399—much better than had been expected or predicted.

But that is about the only aspect of the game this year that can be taken for granted. Most of the others are surrounded by question marks.

The schools which did not benefit from the navy's V-12 programs were expected to furnish comparatively little in the way of top-flight competition. However, the strength of these civilian teams in the Western conference came as a pleasant surprise.

Navy Power

These teams were not bracketed with Northwestern, Purdue and Michigan. Their manpower resources were too great. Particularly was this true of Michigan.

Elroy Hirsch of Wisconsin and Bill Daley of Minnesota were two of the country's finest backs last fall. Both are fast, powerful ball carriers.

Minnesota is always a team to watch. The Gophers are strong for size—and plenty of power—but they never sacrifice speed. Their record is one of the best.

Past Champions

Ohio State, national champions of 1942, didn't fare too well when they lost their opener to the Iowa Senators, 20 to 13.

Purdue established themselves among the powerhouses when they beat Marquette by three touchdowns and a shut-out.

The basic reason for the good showing of the civilian teams is that they are well coached. Because of the civilian status of many of their players, they have had considerable practice time.

All in all, the football picture is muddled. But interest in the game has not slackened. The merry click of the turnstiles every Saturday afternoon is ample proof.

SPORTS SHORTS

- The University of Michigan has had a baseball team since 1066. Owners of Count Fleet estimate that the horse's injured ankle cost them $230,000 in purses this summer. Wilford Wehrle, one-time Western amateur golf champion, does everything left-handed except play golf. Lloyd Waner, former National league outfielder, is playing softball on an Oklahoma City war plant team.

Spotlight Fabrics for Fall Cite Satin, Jersey, Velveteen

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

CURRENT dress collections leave no doubt as to the forthcoming importance of satin, jersey and velveteen on the fall fabric program.

Satin also staged a big hit in way of accessories made of it, such as gloves, handbags (especially the new drawstring types) duffles with jabot treatment, smart hats, and that which is very new—the evening jacket of satin that is handsomely bead-embroidered.

Jersey is more beloved than ever this fall. Wool jersey, rayon jersey and cotton jersey all have their place in the mode.

Velveteen is popular for everything; jackets, skirts and the new pinafore-jumper dresses. It is being most enchantingly styled for dress-up wear.

With refreshing originality and resourcefulness, great cunning is expressed in such accents as unique midriff insets. For that matter, novel insets of satin are liable to occur most anywhere fancy happens to dictate.

The attractive gown shown to the left in the illustration is one of the reasons why satin is proving one of the big fabric successes of the present season.

Gloves protect the hands, but they do more than that this season. They give flipp to the simplest tailored costumes and to this end they are made to be ornamental as well as useful.

Save Tin Cans

A plea to housewives to continue preparation and salvage of tin cans in areas where tin can campaigns are authorized by the War Production Board was made today by the regional WPB conservation manager.

Even the tin can collection in some areas isn't exactly what it should be, the urgent war need for the super-critical tin contained in cans has not diminished in the slightest.

The need for tin is greater than ever. Our job now is to perfect collection methods and to salvage every can possible.

Housewives are urged to continue to observe these simple rules: Open both ends of the can. Wash thoroughly. Remove paper labels. Flatten the can merely by stepping on it. Deposit in a separate box or container for collection.

Throughout New Mexico can collections are encouraged by WPB. In many areas, collections are being made by drivers for bottling companies after local salvage committees have gathered the cans at a central point.

You Might As Well Confess!

Almost everyone likes a mystery—almost everyone enjoys the thrilling excitement of tracking down a criminal with an ace detective. But some are a little ashamed to admit reading mysteries. Well, you need not be. Maybe you didn't know that many college professors, bank presidents, great scientists, captains of industry, even the President of the United States all like their mysteries. In fact, millions of Americans are reading more mysteries today than ever before. Why? Mainly because these fast-paced, easy-reading stories are both relaxing and refreshing. It is for them—and for you—that we are publishing

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

Edited by Ellery Queen, famous detective of the radio, the movies, and best-seller books, it is devoted exclusively to the best in detective crime short-story literature. And we mean literature. The fact that a story owes its plot to crime and detection need not prevent its being well written. Short detective fiction that is well written is not too readily available. But we are finding them—in books, in magazines, in the files of famous authors—and by arrangement with other publishers as well as with authors, we reprint in the approved Reader's Digest manner the best detective fiction to be procured. Such masters as Dashiell, Hammett, Agatha Christie, Stuart Palmer and Ellery Queen are to be found in it.

Paratrooper Over Italy
By Frank Herkness

(WVU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

We jumped at midnight. For 30 minutes the jump door had been open, and the lieutenant, our jump master, had been standing there looking out into the moonlight and waiting for the red-light flash which meant to stand up and hook on chutes.

We had been flying a long time—much longer than actually needed to come from the African camp to Sicily. But, to throw the enemy off, we did not fly there directly.

Maybe there will never be such a night again. I've heard that 2,000 planes and 4,000 boats took part in the invasion, and I can believe it. The sky around us was filled with cargo transport planes, all loaded with paratroops, all heading for the same place, like a billion bees.

All of us were excited. For exactly one year and three days we'd been training for this, our first battle action. Three days before, we'd celebrated the anniversary by killing three beef cattle for dinner. And now the target was a few minutes ahead of us. We passed over the Sicilian coast and knew it wouldn't be long now.

The red light flashed. All of us stood up, fastened our chutes to the jump cable, and waited. Waited for what seemed hours for the green jump signal from the pilot. The plane was rocking from side to side, much worse than it ever did in the 15 practice jumps we'd made—I still don't know why.

Directly ahead and behind us we could see faintly glowing green lights—formation lights of planes ahead and behind.

Lieutenant Disappears. The pilot's light suddenly flashed. Officers always jump first. The lieutenant yelled, "Let's go!" and leaped out into the moonlight. We never saw him again.

We followed him instantly. The plane emptied in ten seconds. I was the last to jump. The plane seemed to be going unusually fast. My chute snapped open with a terrific jerk, and my carbine disappeared. So the only weapon I had was a long trench knife.

I should have been able to see all the other chutes in our party, but I could only see one, and realized something had gone wrong. Plans called for us to be dropped at 600 feet, with the plane slowed down to almost stalling speed—about 100 miles an hour. This was as we would spend less vulnerable time floating down, and also as we would be close together when we hit.

As it turned out, we were dropped at full speed—almost 200 miles an hour—and from 1,500 feet. That's why I could see only one other chute. I kept my eyes glued on it and pulled at my shrouds to follow it.

I landed hard but safe in an orchard. The rest of the boys landed nearby. Comparing notes, we were convinced that we had been dropped in a comparatively strange country, nowhere near our target area. Actually, we were at least 50 miles off—come time I'd like to know why.

This was all orchard country, which seemed dotted with enemy troops, forcing us to move carefully. There was spasmodic firing everywhere, but we managed to avoid the enemy. We spotted the main road and headed for it. We had crept along it about 200 yards when we were challenged. It was another American, posted there in the bushes to lead anybody to a nearby farmhouse which was being used as an assembly point and first-aid station. We went in.

From prisoners we learned that we had landed a few miles from Avola, a coastal town which the British over then were attacking. There was a little hill about 250 yards from the farmhouse where, as soon as it got light, we could see the whole scene. I'll never forget it. British landings being made against airplane and artillery opposition. We could help those boys by hitting the enemy in the rear. That's what we did. Maybe it was a good thing we landed where we did. I think we did more valuable work than we would have done if we had been dropped right on the bull's eye.

From the hilltop, as far as I could see, British ships were lying just offshore, with lines of little boats moving back and forth, bringing in more British Tommies. They were getting plenty of enemy attention. From the hills, Italian artillery was going full blast. Shells and bombs were bursting among the ships, but the little boats kept coming anyway.

It was about eight in the morning when we reached Avola and it took us until 2:30 in the afternoon to advance a little more than a mile toward the town square.

Marshall was under consideration for the post of global commander in chief of all Anglo-American armed forces, caused widespread comment in both military and political circles. TURKEYS AND THE ARMY

The army is beginning to wonder if it hasn't over-extended itself on the business of turkeys. It has ruled that civilians may not buy turkeys for their Thanksgiving or Christmas dinners—or for next Sunday's dinner, for that matter—until the army has acquired 12 million pounds for the armed forces overseas.

That sounded all right, until somebody in the quartermaster corps began figuring out what you could do with 12 million pounds of turkeys. For generous portions, you can figure that 100 pounds of undressed turkey will feed 100 men.

The number of men in the armed forces overseas, including army, navy, and marines, is around two million. Allow each man a pound of turkey for Thanksgiving and another for Christmas, and you reach the total of four million pounds.

But the amount reserved for this purpose is three times four million, or 12 million pounds.

When certain food experts in the quartermaster corps realized this, they started to do some fast telephoning. When last heard from, they still didn't know what two million men would do with 12 million pounds of turkey—except eat 'em.

NAZI PSYCHOLOGICAL WARFARE

Beware of false rumors about Germany. The Germans, masters of psychological warfare, are watching every opportunity to take advantage of American credulity. They know that Americans are optimistic by nature and that we are prone to believe any story about miraculous victories or fortunate events.

Apparently it was this method of psychological warfare which prompted the reports that Hitler had been deposed in favor of military authorities.

It has now been definitely established that no such event took place. State department officials now say flatly that the whole thing was a false report, from beginning to end. It was so generally reported, however, that they believe it must have been prompted by Germany. The motive in such a case would have been to make Americans rush to the conclusion that Germany was tottering and the war was not far from finished. This would have the effect of weakening our bond drives and similar efforts.

Note: The Nazi news report of Hitler's ousting came via Spain.

ARMY'S FAVORITE FOODS

Since the Truman committee's investigation of food waste in the army, the quartermaster corps has been as frugal as a Dutch housewife. Elaborate studies have been made of what the soldiers eat and what they leave on the plate, with the idea of cutting down the percentage of garbage.

After watching the eating habits of 10,000 soldiers at Chanute Field, Ill., the quartermaster corps gave each dish a rating, according to its popularity.

Roast chicken and apple pie rated 100. So did roast duck and roast ham. But creamed ham rated only 83. (QMC dietitian Mary I. Barber explains: "Not many men like maced up food. Artemus Ward said: 'When I eat hash, I like to know what I'm eating.'")

No matter what you may do to butter up spinach, it remains spinach and the soldiers gave it a rating of 41. It was just about the lowest of all.

NO TIRES FOR RUBBER CZAR

Col. Bradley Dewey, who succeeded Big Bill Jeffers as rubber director, says he wishes he could get his hands on a set of synthetic tires. He is now in charge of the program which promises to produce 50 million synthetic tires by the end of next year, but he is not able to try synthetic tires on his own car.

"I wish," says Colonel Dewey, "that OPA would let me have a set of the new tires. I'd like to try them out. I understand they hold less than natural rubber. Not that I drive at skidding speeds, mind you, but I'd like to see what they would do."

"Some of the taxi drivers out in Akron have new synthetic tires, and they swear by them. But I'd like to see what they would do for me."

Reason for Dewey's inability to get tires is that though he is in charge of the entire program, he is obliged to apply for tires through OPA, like any other citizen. And since his present tires are reasonably good, he can't get any new synthetic tires.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Success of the Dutch in transplanting the guine tree from Peru to Java helped encourage interest in the development of rubber plantations in the Far East in the early 1870's.

With all the discouragements of rubber and gasoline restrictions, automobile registrations at the end of 1942 were only 5 per cent lower than in 1941, a record year. Commercial vehicle registrations were down 5.5 per cent.

It is estimated that at one time there were between 300 million and 500 million wild rubber trees in the Amazon Valley and that less than 10 per cent have been tapped to date.

BLACK SOMBRERO

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Margaret Nichols owned some property in joint tenancy with Kitty Chatfield. When Kitty died it meant $200,000 to her. She explains the situation to her friend, Barry, an amateur detective. Elsa Chatfield had been disinherited at her Aunt Kitty's death, but is glad to be free of the restrictions imposed by her relative. Huntoon Rogers, a detective, asks what Aunt Kitty did of, and is told an overdose of morphine, although the police hold the opinion that it was suicide. Barry arranges to go with Dwight and Margaret Nichols on a cruise to Mazatlan, Mexico, where Aunt Kitty's brother, Sam Chatfield, owns a rancho. On the yacht Ortizaba he meets James Chesebro and George Rumble.

CHAPTER IV

"Oh, here you are," she said, an indefinable note of happiness in her voice. "Hello, everybody." She paused in the doorway, this lady with the almost golden hair and the level of gray eyes.

It was impossible not to contrast this new, this mid-April Elsa with the Elsa of the preceding autumn. On that memorable night when I had driven her to town in her working girl suit and carrying an overnight bag with just pajamas, because she had to have something, she had been like a high-strung, nervous colt at the barrier. Tonight a calm almost philosophic in its aspect had come upon her. No longer was the race so hot, the urge to be off so compelling. I realized, of course, that she experienced a sense of arrival. The notoriety of her carteratures had sobered her.

"Now, good-bye, Barry," she said, holding out her hand. "And a delightful trip in the Ortizaba with Dwight and Margaret."

"Good-bye, Elsa. I'm sorry you're not joining us."

"I am too; but there is this work I can't put off. Please give my love to Papa and Berta; you'll see them at Mazatlan, of course."

Huntoon Rogers and I walked back together to the yacht; Dwight and Margaret had gone on ahead. The last guest had departed and we sailed in half an hour.

"A remarkable girl, isn't she?" Rogers said, referring to Elsa.

"Extraordinary, I think."

"You've never been able to get anything out of her about the baby, and what she knows about the murder of her Aunt Kitty?"

"No-o," I said hesitantly. "Look here, Rogers—"

"Yes, I know," he cut me off. "I'm aware that you've been working quietly on certain angles of the case—"

"I must be a hell of a detective," I said in disgust. "First Elsa accuses me of snooping, and now you."

"It's a very peculiar case," he observed thoughtfully. "Nothing is obvious in it. Officially it is tagged suicide. It ends there. There's nothing to go on but the nose of one fellow in Pasadena, the chap who smelled chloroform. He has really a remarkable sense of smell. I've tested him. He sticks to it that there was an odor of chloroform in the room. There was no evidence of it in the autopsy."

"You're satisfied she was murdered?"

"Of course. And I mean to help you get to the bottom of it."

We dropped anchor in the harbor at Mazatlan and the crew lowered the launch to the sparkling water of the bay where it floated lightly from the end of its boom awaiting our pleasure. However, now that we had arrived, there was no hurry to go ashore; we were in that land of manana where time does not press and nothing demands doing immediately. Dwight had come to fish, but, as we reminded him, there was tomorrow.

Of Mexico's many charms the one that most endears itself to me is that indifference to time; nothing needs doing now. At home, time rides me like the Old Man of the Sea; in Mexico I can relax.

"Anybody going ashore now?" inquired Margaret briskly, coming up from her stateroom.

"Yes, I'm going," responded Rogers. I decided to join them.

Two ragged boys in the idling crowd pushed forward as we started from the wharf up narrow, twisting streets. Enormous sombreros shadowed their dark faces in each of which gleamed a row of very white teeth. One carried a battered guitar, the other a ukulele. Strumming fingers began resolutely to play.

When they had finished, Margaret's hand dived swiftly into her purse and she held out a coin to the older boy. The latter backed away, shaking his head; the other thrust his ukulele and his free hand behind him.

"Muchas gracias, senora," said the boy with a sweeping bow, "pero no tomames dinero." (We don't take money.)

Margaret continued to hold out the coin, and the boys backed farther away. There was a little expression of wonderment upon her face.

I think, however, that of all the unexpected things, the things that have taken me most by surprise in Mexico, none has equaled the sight which confronted us as we came out on the Street of the High Waves that morning of our first excursion ashore. Margaret saw it first, and stopped abruptly to stare as if she were seeing a ghost. Rogers had seen it too, and I found my eyes traveling with theirs to a figure standing on the sidewalk.

It was the pink shirt, the indecent pink and white check shirt which had the lush color of a ripe watermelon, that first claimed our attention. I noted the brown slacks. The incredible sports coat hung limply over one arm. An enormous black sombrero ornamented with silver topped the somewhat stocky figure, and loose, sandal-like guaraches covered his feet.

"Barry, I'm seeing things," said Margaret, aghast. She rubbed her eyes. "Do you see it too?"

Before I could answer, Rogers remarked, "Has he but the one shirt, or do we see him only when it's fresh back from the laundry?"

At that moment the figure turned. Margaret exclaimed, "Why, Mr. Rumble!"

"Hello, folks!"

"Did Elsa come with you?" asked Rogers.

"Sure, Hunt. Elsa and Chesebro and me. In his airplane. Chesebro piloted us down. We were getting around over there at Chesebro's ranch in San Fernando Valley night before last when he gets a telegram from down here saying he's needed. Some sort of business about his mine. You know Elsa. Take

"Hello, folks!"

"Did Elsa come with you?" asked Rogers.

"Sure, Hunt. Elsa and Chesebro and me. In his airplane. Chesebro piloted us down. We were getting around over there at Chesebro's ranch in San Fernando Valley night before last when he gets a telegram from down here saying he's needed. Some sort of business about his mine. You know Elsa. Take

ers had seen it too, and I found my eyes traveling with theirs to a figure standing on the sidewalk.

It was the pink shirt, the indecent pink and white check shirt which had the lush color of a ripe watermelon, that first claimed our attention. I noted the brown slacks. The incredible sports coat hung limply over one arm. An enormous black sombrero ornamented with silver topped the somewhat stocky figure, and loose, sandal-like guaraches covered his feet.

"Barry, I'm seeing things," said Margaret, aghast. She rubbed her eyes. "Do you see it too?"

Before I could answer, Rogers remarked, "Has he but the one shirt, or do we see him only when it's fresh back from the laundry?"

WRITER'S INSPIRATION

A FLAXEN HAired DOLL

SEEKING AN INSPIRATION, something to write about, I stopped before a store window in my town. Sure enough, there it was, a flaxen-haired, blue-eyed, red-cheeked, prettily dressed little lady—a doll.

That doll had been produced to satisfy the motherly instincts of a little girl. An object on which to lavish an instinctive mother love. It told me a story of thousands of workers employed in the making of dolls, a story of food and clothing and shelter for many thousands of families created by that motherly instinct of our small lassies and our ability to satisfy that appeal.

It brought to my mind the conditions in many other countries in which little girls have that same motherly instinct; of countries where that instinct must be, and is, satisfied with a rolled up rag with a string tied around it—a doll without the reality of flaxen hair, blue eyes, red cheeks and pretty clothes; of lands where that motherly instinct does not provide comforts for homes by making jobs for workers. It also brought to my mind the days of our grandmothers, our great and great-grandmothers who, as little girls, had to be satisfied with a rag with a string around it as a doll.

That flaxen-haired, blue-eyed doll pictured for me the difference in our American standard of living of today and in the time of our grand and great-grandparents, and in our standards and those of many other nations. It illustrated the necessity of maintaining our standards, not alone for our small girls but for all of us, and as an incentive for achievement on the part of people of other nations.

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER

—AND THE ENEMY

UNCONDITIONAL SURRENDER. That phrase appeals to us. We like the sound of it. We picture it as representing a decisive, conclusive, definite beating of the Hun, the Jap and their satellites, and we are for it.

But just what does it mean to the enemy peoples? Does it call for an unconditional surrender of their armed forces, their armies and navies and their war production facilities? Does it call for the abolition of their governments? Does it call for these, plus the surrender without conditions of all the people, their lands, homes, business and other forms of individual wealth?

Hitler would have the people of Germany believe the Allies are demanding the unconditional surrender of all the people of Germany with the confiscation of their individual wealth. He pictures for them an armed taskmaster, internment camps, forced labor, the breaking of home ties, the obliteration of national culture and national trade for a long, long period.

If Hitler's definition is correct, there are comparatively few Americans, in our present frame of mind, who would urge any softening of that definition. If he is not right, if those who have named the terms have something less drastic in mind, it might hasten the day of internal collapse in Germany if that less drastic definition were given to the German people and the German armies. The President did a part of that in one paragraph of his Ottawa speech.

WHEN MOTHER'S SHELVES WILL REALLY COUNT

FOOD MERCHANTS, especially those operating the larger chains, tell us we will be short, very short, on canned fruits and vegetables before the winter is far advanced. It is then the well-filled bins and shelves of the home cellar will look especially good. It is then we will offer special praise to mother for her foresight in stocking the family larder. It is then we will appreciate to the full the advantages of living in a rural community or on a farm where a garden was possible. That Victory garden may well rate higher in February than it did in August—thanks to Mother.

SOLDIER VOTE

NO MATTER which side of the political fence you may be on, do not count the soldier vote before it is cast. Of the men in the armed service in November of next year very few, if any, will have the privilege of voting. In many states absentee ballots are not permitted. In those where they are permitted, they are mailed only on request, and with the complications involved, requests will come from but a small percentage.

WHEN GERMANY QUITS, regardless of when that may be, we will not throw away our ration books. The need for food production and conservation will be even greater than now. There are millions of starving people in Europe whose lives will depend upon the productivity of American farms.

WHAT OUR SENATORS and representatives heard while they were at home on leave should be reflected in what they do during the next few months.
