ON THE HOME FRONT
With RUTH WYETH SPEARS

THE war is bringing many changes in the things we use and the things we do. Women as well as men are learning to handle tools. If a chair is lacking we make one. If we cannot have springs we find a way to make it comfortable anyway. That is the spirit of the times.

Perhaps you have made lawn chairs all with straight cuts of the hand saw. Have you ever stopped to realize that it is almost as easy to cut curves with a compass saw? Curves add comfort as well as beauty and a tufted cushion distributes the weight so that springs are not missed so much. The curved pieces of the charming chair sketched here are shown at the left. You can see how easy they are to cut out of odds and ends of one-inch lumber that you may have on hand. The reinforcing pieces are all straight cuts.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared an actual-size pattern for all the curved sections of this chair. Complete dimensions and directions for the chair construction and for making the tufted cushion, with list of materials included. This is pattern No. 23 and costs 10 cents. Send your order to:

MOTHER-IN-LAW CHEERS LONG SOUGHT RELIEF!

Had Been "Irregular" for Years!

Have you often despaired of ever finding normal regularity? Then, by all means, read this unsolicited letter:

"For many long years, my mother-in-law had suffered from common constipation, but got no kind of pills and medicines, but got no lasting relief. Upon reading the KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, her trouble cleared up. She feels like a new person, she says. She wanted me to tell the world how your product helped her." Mrs. E. J. Smith, 124 East 10th Street, Bronx, N. Y.

How do scientists explain the apparent "magic" of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN's relief? Simply this: ALL-BRAN is one of Nature's most effective sources of "cellulose" elements — lack of which in sufficient amounts in the diet is a common cause of constipation. These elements help the friendly colonic flora stuff up and lighten the colonic wastes for easy, natural elimination. KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN doesn't work by "purging" — or by "sweeping you out." It is a gentle-acting, "regulating" food!

If this is your trouble eat KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly. Drink plenty of water! See if you don't find the welcome relief you've hoped for! Insist on genuine ALL-BRAN, made only by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

'Dusting' Gold Coins Was Racket in the Early Days

Because gold as it comes from the mines is somewhat soft, it was not at all uncommon for gold coins or nuggets of the early days to wear down in actual value. "Dusting gold" also became a racket. In Chinatown, San Francisco, elderly Chinese men with infinite patience sat by days shaking sacks of gold coins over a pan. Gold dust rubbed off on sacks and filtered through, and this was salvaged for resale at the mints. Coins were then passed on at their full marked value. Today hardening alloys are added to gold.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

South America supplied 65 per cent of the world's rubber needs in 1890, while in 1922 only about 6 per cent came from that section. Far East plantation development accounts for the drop in the demand for Amazon Valley rubber.

Your Broadway and Mine:

Sallies in Our Alley: Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau went into the Hotel Delmonico pharmacy, made a small purchase, and handed the clerk a $100 bill. The clerk, failing to recognize him, scrutinized the money carefully. "I hope it's good," he said. "It ought to be," was the dry reply, "I made it myself."

Sounds in the Night: At Havana-Madrid: "He's in 4F. Walked through a screen door and strained himself!" At the Stork: "I'll cut you down to Mexican size!"

The Magic Lanterns: Mark Helinger herded the whole Warner Bros. payroll into Edouard Cantor's support in "Thank Your Lucky Stars," and what did that get him? A wow, that's all Cantor and Dinah Shore give zip and melody to the main yarn, and the olio trimmings come from such mighties as Davis, Bogart, Garfield, Flynn, De Havilland, Sheridan, not to mention Et and cetera.

The Magazines: William Shirer discussed "American Traitors of the Radio" in Harper's, meaning the correspondents who hired out as liars to Goebbels. They were weakies, said Shirer, fearful that they couldn't make a living if they came home.

The Front Pages: Sen. Lodge, back from the battle areas, blasted the "rozy propaganda" back here. He plans to report to congress that "our fighting men are mad because of the false optimism of the news at home."

Builds Up Huge Medicine Store

Navy Lieutenant in Alaska Gathers Vast Supply of Medical Supplies.

KODIAK, ALASKA. — American boys receiving quick and effective treatment for battle wounds in the Aleutian campaign have cause to thank a junior grade lieutenant. His name is John A. Oley and he has been in the navy for 27 years. The last 10 months of those 27 years he has spent organizing and creating in Alaska a U. S. medical storehouse to service the ships and naval stations throughout the sector, and a magnificent job he has done of it.

Five million dollars' worth of medical supplies are housed in two air-conditioned warehouses here, a tribute to common sense and tenacity of an old-time navy man who had a commission in the first World war and dropped it to resume the status of an enlisted man during the seventh-inning stretch which was at the moment regarded as a permanent peace.

Comes Back as Ensign. Then he came as an ensign to cope with the job of having available for the navy's doctors the life-saving drugs and medical supplies they would need over 1,500 miles of islands as the job of driving the last Japanese flag from American soil progressed.

When Oley first began to accumulate his supplies he had no place to store them. Nothing daunted, he hid them in the basements of officers' quarters, in the explosion chamber of the powerhouse—wherever he could find a dry spot and talk someone into letting him use it.

Suspect His Methods. "He used to beg, borrow or steal storage space. If you didn't have a lock on the door to your quarters you had no reason to be surprised if you found later in the day that your cot had been yanked outside to make room for a hundred cases of iodine.

Oley now has two modern warehouses for his precious stock, and the way he wangled them is typical of his methods. He described his situation as that of a polar bear trying to hold together a dilapidated hut which was collapsing at every corner and spilling out into the snow the medical supplies that the navy was going to need when the Aleutian offensive began.

Caribbean Research to Help All in That Area

LONDON. — The creation of a Caribbean research council which will serve in an advisory capacity for scientific, social and economic research for the benefit of the people of the area has been officially announced. The colonial office said the council was established by the Anglo-American Caribbean commission at a fourth meeting attended by representatives from research institutes and agricultural experimental stations of the Netherlands, Britain and the United States in the Caribbean area.

War Work in Prisons

WASHINGTON.—Director Maury Maverick of the W.P.D.'s government division said that 123 state penal institutions have completed $12,040,000 in war contracts in the last 14 months and expect to reach the $20,000,000 mark in the next 12 months. The record established by state institutions in turning out materials vital to the conduct of the war was described by Mr. Maverick and his staff at a luncheon which included prison-made stew, bread, butter and crullers.

Gypsy Fortune Teller Had Hitler's Number

CHICAGO. — Italy's surrender reminded persons of the Swiss story that Adolf Hitler, disguised as a chauffeur, visited a gypsy fortune teller. "In 1942 you will run out of gas," she said. "In 1943 you will have a broken axle (axis). In 1944 you will lose your (driver's) license."

DEBATE concerning the selection of any all-time football team is a never-ending affair. It is extremely unlikely that any two followers of the game would choose the same eleven men as their favorites. In the backfield alone it's almost impossible to pick out any four men from the following group—Bronko Nagurski, Red Grange, Jim Thorpe, Cliff Battles, Dutch Clark, Sammy Baugh, Ernie Nevers and Ace Parker. And there are others that deserve mention. The list of great linemen is just as endless.

Most fans would pick Nagurski on any all-time team. Thorpe is another player that immediately springs to mind. Both of them Bronko Nagurski proved their unquestionable fitness to occupy a niche in football's hall of fame. Their records are well known.

There are others who are, for one reason or another, less widely known to today's sports followers. Ken Strong is one. Pudge Heffelfinger is another. Both have had considerable publicity, especially the latter, but neither gets as much space in the record books.

About Ken Strong

Big Steve Owen of the New York Giants believes that no all-time team is complete without Ken Strong. As a sophomore at New York university under Chick Mehan, Strong was one of the best blocking backs of all time. He weighed 295 pounds and was speedier than most 170-pound backs. Later on he was switched to a half carrier and passer. According to Owen, "he was one of the best ball carriers I ever saw, college and pro. He was one of the best college or pro passers in the game. He was one of the three best kickers pro football ever knew. . . . There was no position in the backfield where he wasn't an outstanding star. I don't mean good. I mean great."

When N.Y.U. defeated a strong Carnegie Tech team—which already had whipped a powerful Notre Dame squad—Judge Walter Steffens, Tech coach, said: "I would never have believed that one man could wreck the team I had on the field today. He (Strong) ran over them and around them. He hit 225 pound Carols so hard I was afraid he had killed him. He is the best ball carrier I ever saw—one of the best passers I ever saw—a good a blocker as I ever saw—and certainly the best kicker I ever saw—including Jim Thorpe."

Strong lacked only one thing—the color which causes athletes to grab—and keep—the spotlight. But he had everything else.

Pudge Heffelfinger

Heffelfinger is better known to the older generation, and with good reason. Pudge was named All-America guard on Walter Camp's first team in 1923. The fact that a large smattering of present day gridiron followers are familiar with his record is evidence of his greatness.

Nagurski's present comeback recalls tales of Heffelfinger's amazing durability and stamina. At the age of 44 he went back to see how Yale was getting along. He came close to ruining the Yale line, which was one of the best.

Nine years later, when he was 53, Pudge played 65 minutes in a professional game at Columbus. Bo McMillin, then 32 years old, was his quarterback.

As remarkable a thing of its kind as the sports world has seen was Pudge's activity at the age of 65. He played through a 15-minute period in another pro game for charity, and the men who played against him declared he was still a good football player.

So Nagurski's comeback isn't so miraculous, even though he had been out of football for the past six years.

SPORTS SHORTS

- Georgia Tech once offered a football scholarship to Martin Marion, rangy shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals.
Jimmy Thomson, golf's long hitter, has lost 10 pounds since joining the coast guard.
Jockey Ted Atkinson rode in 1,200 races in 1943.
Fred Kelly, winner of the high hurdle championship in the Olympic games of 1912, has logged 17,500 flight hours as an army transport pilot.

Ration Book No. 4

Ration Book No. 4, designed to last two years, will be ready for distribution the last of October and will go into use early in November, the OPA has announced. The new book, which will be obtained through a nation-wide schoolhouse registration, will combine point and unit stamps, of which there will be 384, printed in blue, red, green and black.

The red and blue stamps, which are for meat, dairy products and processed foods as at present, will be used in conjunction with red and blue tokens, the latter to be introduced early in 1944, and given by merchants in change. Green stamps will be used on an "interim basis," with blue processed food stamps, in much the same manner as the brown stamps in Book 3 are being used this month in the meat-fats program.

Twelve of the 96 unit stamps, printed in black, are designated for sugar. An equal number are marked for coffee, which is no longer rationed. These and 72 others, marked "spares," will serve for any additional foods rationed, the OPA declared, its purpose being to provide for any contingency, since the new books are expected to serve for two years, as compared to 4 or 5 months for previous books. The cost of printing is about the same, around $1,500,000, it was stated.

Registration for Book 4 in New Mexico will be Oct. 27-28-29 at school houses, according to H. L. Galles, state OPA rationing officer.

Booby Trap Detector

In the snow, in the sand, on the beaches, on the roads, in the woods, everywhere the Axis soldiers hide "booby traps," to slow the movement of oncoming fighting men of the United Nations. The detector does the same work on land as the mine sweeper does at sea.

Like buying War Bonds, the soldier operating the detectors will never know just how much they have aided in the success of their campaign, but he knows his work is necessary and must be accomplished. If more Americans on the home front will come to realize this, the success of our War Bond campaigns will be assured.

Save Tin Cans

A plea to housewives to continue preparation and salvage of tin cans in areas where tin can campaigns are authorized by the War Production Board was made today by the regional WPB conservation manager.

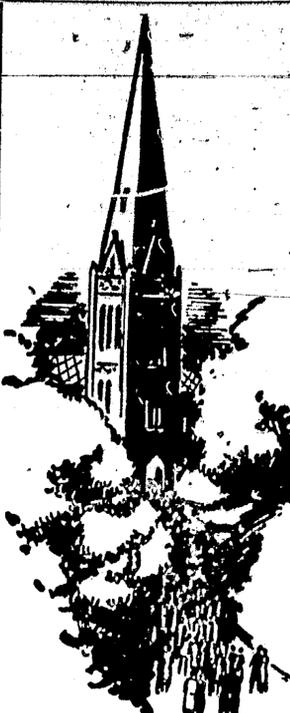

Even the tin can collection in some areas isn't exactly what it should be, the urgent war need for the super-critical tin contained in cans has not diminished in the slightest.

The need for tin is greater than ever. Our job now is to perfect collection methods and to salvage every can possible.

Housewives are urged to continue to observe these simple rules: Open both ends of the can. Wash thoroughly. Remove paper labels. Flatten the can merely by stepping on it. Deposit in a separate box or container for collection.

Throughout New Mexico can collections are encouraged by WPB. In many areas, collections are being made by drivers for bottling companies after local salvage committees have gathered the cans at a central point.

You Might As Well Confess!

Almost everyone likes a mystery—almost everyone enjoys the thrilling excitement of tracking down a criminal with an ace detective. But come on a little ashamed to admit reading mysteries. Well—you need not be. Maybe you didn't know that many college professors, bank presidents, great scientists, captains of industry, even the President of the United States all like their mysteries. In fact, millions of Americans are reading more mysteries today than ever before. Why? Mainly because these fast-paced, easy-reading stories are both relaxing and refreshing. It is for them—and for you—that we are publishing

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

Edited by Ellery Queen, famous detective of the radio, the movies, and best-seller books, it is devoted exclusively to the best in detective crime short-story literature. And we mean literature. The fact that a story owes its plot to crime and detection need not prevent its being well written. Short detective fiction that is well written is not too readily available. But we are finding them—in books, in magazines, in the files of famous authors—and by arrangement with other publishers as well as with authors, we reprint in the approved Reader's Digest manner the best detective fiction to be procured. Such masters as Dashiell, Hammett, Agatha Christie, Stuart Palmer and Ellery Queen are to be found in it.

But stories are selected on their merits, not on authors' names. Tough and suave, casual and swift, comic and tragic, they are mingled with reticent variety and stimulating change of pace. Rare gems, fit for the most critical, delightful to the most naive. You will find the new magazine well printed—sharp and clear, kind to the eyes. You will find the magazine as the Reader's Digest—convenient to hold, to handle, to slip into your pocket. You will find the cover as pleasing to look at as a book jacket. And you will find the contents the most satisfying quarter's worth of good entertainment you have found in many a day. On sale at all good newsstands—25c a copy.

SPECIAL 10c OFFER TO READERS OF LINCOLN COUNTY NEWS

Because we want you to know Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine we will send you a copy of this anthology of the best detective stories new and old—60,000 words of thrilling mysteries—for only 10c, the cost of postage and handling.

- II. "When the line is in use, and I'm waiting my turn, I won't interrupt."
- III. "When I have several calls to make, I'll allow time between them so other persons can use the line."
- IV. "When I finish a call, I'll make sure I've hung up properly, so all the telephones on the line won't be put out of service."

WAR ON ALL FRONTS

A SERIES OF SPECIAL ARTICLES BY THE LEADING WAR CORRESPONDENTS

Two Hard Years Of War Ahead
By Harry L. Hopkins

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

For a long time the air has been vibrant with the hope of quick victory. Well, in my opinion, we're not going to have it. The German-Japanese portion of the Axis isn't a pushover.

I believe two years of hard fighting on the fronts of the world and two years of increasing sacrifice at home lie ahead of us. Two years, at least. We must work harder, go without more things, lose more and more lives.

I say this with a deep conviction of our ultimate and inevitable victory. Call me gloomy, if you wish, but my optimism has been unwavering from the beginning and will not change until we have won. Considering all the realities of this vast conflict, I am really predicting a short war for us. Five more years of it would make a long one, and we can have a long one if we let down the war effort because of over-confidence.

This is a highly technical war. In World War I, men were sometimes sent overseas with a few months' training. While I cannot give you the actual figures, I may say that it takes almost a year to make a fairly finished army ground soldier out of a recruit, sometimes even longer if the man is given specialized training as well.

It takes at least a year and a half from the time a young bomber pilot first puts on a uniform until he carries a load of bombs over the enemy. The training of fighters and bombardiers takes almost as long. Remember that the youngsters, who are being drafted now will probably not see active service for a year or two years from now. The army and navy don't think the war will be over quickly.

Must Adjust Weapons.

As the war progresses and we enter France, Norway, China or Germany, it may be necessary to adjust our fighting tools to new conditions.

When we first entered North Africa with an experimental tank crew to serve with the British, we had to redesign a turret to give a wider horizontal range to the gun. Back went word to the factories. "Time lost!" they cried. "These fellows don't know what they're doing."

But they do know; that's why they change. If Germany comes out with a fighter that can down our B-17s, we've got to change.

I have no desire to wet-blanket our national optimism. I simply want to see it endure through the long months of hard fighting and hard working we have ahead of us.

But our over-confidence sometimes leads to relaxation, and relaxation leads to a longer war.

Soldiers in battle do not reflect. This moment is always the moment for the supreme effort. It is only when they have time to sit down and reflect, who begin to question the wisdom of our Allies, and begin to bicker about postwar plans. The fighters don't do it. Russia and China don't do it.

Best Army in History.

It cannot be assumed that China, because she has fought bravely for five years, can fight forever. But we are on the offensive with soldiers, sailors and marines trained to the hilt and equipped as no army or navy in history was ever equipped. We know how well they fight. I believe we will have victory in 1942 against both Germany and Japan. I do not think that is long to wait.

The Axis powers were preparing for a world war eight years before they marched, the Japanese much longer. They have been preparing to fight us ever since they said hello to Admiral Perry.

We were not prepared; here is the United States we had done too little up to Pearl Harbor. That's why some of our stocks of vital materials are low. Long ago, our enemies kroyed their industries to war production and since the war began they have expanded these industries. Today they have more producing plants than when the war began.

I have talked with a lot of army and navy men, and I have not met one who believes we can win a quick victory.

We must send our men across seas. The enemy's men are fighting in their own front and back yards. We must send our men everything they need—oil, food, clothing, bullets, tanks, planes, soap and tooth-picks—in the North African campaign, 700,000 items in all.

And a ship in which we send men and supplies is a mere speck in the ocean. A ship can't carry much, and a cargo plane even less, but everything we send to the front must be sent that way. It takes time, and more and more ships and planes.

Axis Soldiers Work in U. S.—at Prison Camp

Italian Women Dredge Sewers for Water

Women of Naples dredge the sewer for water. Their water supply system was destroyed by the Germans. As Allied troops pushed past Naples, a landing by the British Eighth army at Termoli on the Adriatic coast further strengthened the Allied advance.

Marines Landing on South Pacific Isle

Marines are shown during the initial steps of the occupation of the island of Nanumea in the South Pacific. Destroyers patrol in the background as men, guns, tractors and trucks leave the landing craft standing at the edge of a reef offshore. This landing was made at low tide so the men could walk ashore.

Washington Merry-Go-Round
DREW PEARSON

Washington, D. C.

BRITAIN VS. RUSSIA

One thing which distressed the Flying Senators on their round-the-world inspection was the intense rivalry between the British and Russians in the Near East.

The senators reported that around the Gulf of Persia, where the Russians take delivery on U. S. lend-lease airplanes, the British local commander at first refused to let the Russians set up a local lend-lease receiving agency. The Gulf of Persia long has been coveted by land-locked Russia as a means of reaching the sea. British opposition, presumably, was based on this.

Finally the British government in London ruled that the Russians could send an airplane mission to the Gulf of Persia, but even then the local British commander, according to the senators, delayed and tried to block the plan.

Now, however, the Russians are established at the head of the Gulf and work in close co-operation with U. S. officials. To save manpower, the U. S. army uses skilled natives to assemble airplanes under the supervision of sergeants and doughboys. Then the planes are turned over to the Russians for inspection. In test flights, the Russians cruise all over the Gulf of Persia area, obviously have ample opportunity to map out the terrain.

The Russian base is commanded by a live-wire young general who gets along well with the Americans but is eyed with some suspicion by the British.

The senators also reported that when the British were a bit starchy about letting the Russians use the airport at Teheran, capital of Iran, farther north, the Russian army sent in a regiment one night and, without further argument, took over the airport. Since then the British have had to ask the Russians for permission to use it.

These are a few of the delicate problems facing the Allies in this suspicious, balance-of-power section of the Near East, where, according to the senators, the chief topic of conversation is the political tug-of-war between Russia and Britain.

PATRIOTIC U. S. HENS

The hens of America are really doing all right by Uncle Sam. Their war effort is producing more eggs than the country has ever seen. Though we are sending 10 billion eggs overseas, 60 billion more remain for our frying pans.

This total of 60 billion eggs is an all-time high. Even the domestic 50 billion is an all-time high. Paced around to every man, woman and child, it means 340 eggs apiece for the year, or about one a day. This is a lot better than the average.

At the moment, because this is the moulting season, when laying always falls off. But eggs will increase again when the hens resume full-time production, also when the egg-drying business falls off.

This is a new and unexpected turn of events. The tremendously expanded egg-drying business was expected to take a full 20 per cent of our egg crop, but now the estimates are dropping fast. Reason is the British and Russians, after two years of dried egg dust, are getting tired of them. They are politely telling the combined food board and lend lease, "Don't pass those dried eggs around any more."

The dried egg business used a modest 10 million pounds before the war, mostly for cake flour and confectionary purposes. But the submarines have made shipping space so tight that space is not available for shell eggs, and the dried egg business has shot up to a capacity of about 450 million pounds.

Some of this capacity is now idle, because of Allied distaste for the product, so more fresh eggs will come onto the U. S. market.

ARMY ADVISES HOUSEWIVES

The quartermaster corps feels so many thousands of mothers' cans that it now dares to tell these mothers how to prepare a roast of beef.

Experiments in army camps show that if you cook a roast at relatively low temperatures, you will have 20 per cent more roast at the end. Cooking at high temperatures shrinks the meat, and dries up the juices.

According to QMC, the desirable range of temperature is 315 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit. Cooking an eight pound roast at this temperature will require 4 hours and 10 minutes.

In other words, it takes more time than at a higher temperature (at 400 degrees, it takes only 3 hours), but you save the juices, save vitamins, and will have more roast to slice.

WAR CHAFF

Officials estimate that if Russia gets out of the war, Germany will be able to double or triple the number of fighter planes which now oppose Allied bombers from England. Many Flying Fortress pilots are not big six-footers, but little fellows who have to stuff a cushion behind themselves in the driver's seat.

Experts who know Italy say there are 1,400 railroad bridges in that country, destruction of which from the air would cripple German troop movements completely.

DOAN'S PILLS

BLACK SOMBREIRO

by CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Elsa Chatfield, Hollywood artist, is not off from the will of her Aunt Kitty Chatfield, who died from an overdose of morphine. Barry, an amateur detective, and Hutton Rogers, a professional sleuth, go down to Mazatlan, Mexico, on a yacht cruise with Margaret and Dwight Nichols. Rogers is not quite satisfied that Aunt Kitty died by her own hand. When they arrive at Mazatlan they find that Elsa, James Chesebro, a mine owner, and George Rumble, Elsa's agent, have preceded them by plane. They dine at the ranch of Sam Chatfield, Elsa's father. Rogers asks Chatfield if he was in California at the time his sister, Kitty, died. The question upsets Sam Chatfield considerably.

CHAPTER V

"So, you see, when Kitty was found dead early next morning I was frightened—for Berta. What if the police asked questions? What if they heard through the servants that we had stayed the night there? That Berta had been very angry with Kitty? Could I have my beloved Berta the target of police questioning? You see?"

"Very clearly," said Rogers. "In order to set your mind at rest, Mr. Chatfield—if you are still troubled—I've read the police files dealing with your sister's death. There is no mention of your presence in the house that night. Of even in town at the hotel. How did you manage it?"

"Elsa managed it. She was there, of course. I never asked her how she did it. I'm relieved to know that Berta and I have no official connection with what happened that night. We were happy to get safely home to Mazatlan, and we have not ventured back to California, except for our brief visit some weeks ago."

"Were you aware that Katherine Chatfield was a morphine addict?" he inquired of her host.

"Not until after she died. Moreover, I don't think that Elsa knew it, either, living as she was in the same house with her, until after Kitty's death."

"Am I being too personal, Mr. Chatfield?"

"Not at all, Mr. Rogers. I am only too glad to tell you what I know."

"Yes."

"Did you detect any unusual odor in the room?"

"No. The room was closed—had been closed all night, I suppose. But I'm a poor person to be asked that question; my sense of smell is not acute."

"No odor of chloroform, Mr. Chatfield?"

"No, I don't recall it."

He poured from the bottle and reached for the siphon, his arm halting midway in its reach. "But why this talk of murder?" he asked. "Why not let it rest as it undoubtedly was—as a suicide?"

"The district attorney has never been satisfied with the investigation that was made at the time, Mr. Chatfield," I remarked. "He's a close friend of mine; he's never been willing to call it suicide."

"But have you anything to go on which indicated that it wasn't?"

"I haven't," I admitted.

Sam Chatfield's gray eyes in his deeply tanned face turned to Rogers inquiringly.

"There is an investigator on the Pasadena police force with an extraordinary sense of smell. He says there was an odor of chloroform in the room that morning."

"Well?" Sam Chatfield sat forward in his chair.

"Why chloroform if it was suicide? If your sister was a morphine addict, and had a cache of supply, as she must have had, why chloroform when she knew that an overdose of morphine was all she required?"

"And that fact—I'm not disputing the evidence of the man's nose—has swayed you to the opinion that my sister was murdered?"

"Yes."

"Do you have any more questions, Mr. Rogers?" inquired Sam Chatfield.

"There's one more thing," Rogers began slowly. "I hesitate to bring it up, for it must touch very closely upon your sensibilities. And yet it is vital."

"Yes?" Sam Chatfield's voice was clipped, unfriendly almost.

"There was a child some five years for so ago. And, of course, gossip. Ugly gossip. The truth never came out, even among close friends of your family—"

Sam Chatfield's eyes suddenly were blazing with anger.

"I've nothing to say, Mr. Rogers, about that child. It's dead. The whole incident is dead, so far as we Chatfields are concerned."

"I'm sorry," replied Rogers. "I'm very sorry."

We fished that next day. All day long in the launch we pried the blue waters off Mazatlan until well into the afternoon. Margaret, who had started with us, remained in the launch only a couple of hours. Elsa had promised to come out, bringing Berta with her. So we picked them up at the wharf and put the three of them on board the Orizaba and continued fishing from the launch. However, there was no sign of swordfish that day, but a run of albacore in the afternoon provided ample excitement; and in the evening we nursed our sunburn and talked of the fishing yet to be done.

Elsa seemed downcast at the rail that evening as she and I watched the brief, fiery sunset which preceded the dusk. Dwight and Margaret were below; Rogers was in his stateroom doctored a blistered nose, and Berta had been set ashore. Our fishing plans had been changed after dinner. Margaret had decided to invite Berta and Sam, and any of the others who could come aboard, for a day's cruise up the coast.

Margaret in the early evening had sent over into town for the two youthful mariachis, Felipe and Pancho; to come out and play for us, which they obligingly did for a couple of hours or so on the after deck. But Elsa was restless; this was not Reed Barton's playing and singing in the patio by moonlight which had stirred something in her heart; it was merely Mexican music without meaning. She got up and went below before the boys had finished, leaning over to whisper in my ear before she left me:

"Did you ever feel like a barometer, Barry? A change is coming. I slept on her remark and could make nothing of it, and after breakfast as we stood again at the rail looking off over the sparkling water of the bay which was emerging from a light fog. I asked:

"Of all the dirty, cowardly leeches—"

"Were you being prophetic last night, Elsa? About a change coming?"

"Barry, you're too profound for me this morning. Oh, look! The launch is coming from shore."

Noising through drifting wisps of fog was the sharp prow of the launch. Elsa brightened amazingly, her face was keenly alert as she endeavored to identify its passengers. Intense after a moment suddenly went out of her and she turned away. I saw Sam Chatfield in the launch, and Berta; and side by side the fat figure of Chesebro and Rumble, the latter dressed in his incredible coat and huge black sombrero, as congenial as a pair of disgruntled clams.

Elsa kissed her father and hugged Berta's small round person to herself ecstatically, and stretched a hand out to Chesebro in greeting.

"Didn't you bring Reed Barton with you, Jimmy?" she asked with a tone of petulance. Chesebro glanced sharply at her.

"Barton hasn't got back from the mine. Probably won't until later on today."

"But we can't go cruising without him."

"Don't forget, Elsa," Chesebro chided her almost as if she were a child. "That Reed Barton is employed; he's got a job to do. Work comes before social diversions."

"You always have such complete and satisfactory explanations, Jimmy," returned Elsa. Chesebro looked closely at her to see what lay behind the remark, and then strode down the deck to greet Dwight and Margaret who were emerging from the companionway.

"Your Mexico always delights me, senora," I said to Berta, as the crowd at the ladder began to break up. George Rumble moved away with Elsa. Hutton Rogers had come up from below and was talking with Sam Chatfield.

Berta's dark eyes lighted up with pleasure; her white teeth flashed me a smile and she leaned a bare brown arm upon the rail.

"That's because you know Mexico and understand it, Senor Madison."

At that moment down the deck where Elsa and George Rumble were bent heads together over a section of the Sunday paper he had brought on board, there came Elsa's voice so charged with emotion that it penetrated my heart like a knife.

"Oh—George!" she exclaimed.

"What's wrong with that, baby?" returned Rumble, matter-of-factly.

He hurriedly folded up the paper, however. Elsa drew away from him. She shrank as if she had been struck a mortal blow, walked dazedly to the companionway and went below. Rumble watched her go, his face a puzzle, then as if dismissing the matter, tucked the paper under his arm and walked nonchalantly aft, leaving us all staring after him, staring, too, at the companionway down which Elsa had disappeared.

Hutton Rogers had drifted over to my side while this was happening. His nose and cheekbones still were red from the sunburn of the day before, but his mild blue eyes were intent upon the retreating figure of Rumble.

"What happened, Barry?" he inquired.

"I don't know, Hunt. I can't imagine. Something serious, though, I judge from Elsa's reaction."

"Let's go take a look at Rumble's paper."

George Rumble continued retreating along the deck as we walked in his direction, a curious figure in brown slacks, incredible sports coat and the black sombrero. As he continued along the deck, he had the appearance of one endeavoring to walk away from disaster. Just as we were about to catch up with him, the fat figure of Chesebro, popping out of the doorway to the ship's lounge, waylaid him.

Rumble paused, his sombrero tilting back, as he looked up at the taller man. A curious expression was on Chesebro's dark face, an expression mingled of suspicion, resentment and malevolence. Without speaking, he held his hand out imperiously for the newspaper. Rumble gave it to him and withdrew a step or two and stood watching Chesebro's fat hands unfold the rotogravure section. The main bulk of the paper was tucked under his arm, whence it fell promptly to the deck, the edges of its many sheets to be stirred gently by the morning breeze. Chesebro turned to an inside page of the section, scanning its contents rapidly, while Rumble with gaze set like that of a small boy summoned to answer for his misdeeds, watched Chesebro.

Chesebro of a sudden started; his whole fat figure tensed. A moment later he recovered, angrily folded the section to it once through the middle and threw it overboard. I followed its downward fluttering, saw it hit the water, and then my eyes traveled farther to a rowboat manned by a native in white cotton pants and straw sombrero. In the boat looking eagerly at us was Reed Barton.

"Well?" said Rumble, licking his dry lips. "What do you think of it?"

Chesebro was swelling with poisonous fury. His dark eyes had hardened to pinpoints of baleful light. He clenched his fists and Rumble moved warily a step backward.

"You admit you're responsible for that picture in the paper?"

"Sure, Chesebro; it's a swell piece of publicity for Elsa."

Chesebro's arm flashed out, and Rumble ducked at the same time. The toll crown of the sombrero was caught by the falling fist and the hat flew off, rolling along the deck until it came to rest at the rail.

"Of all the dirty, cowardly leeches—"

"Don't you call me that!" Rumble assumed a fighting pose. "There's heart appeal in that picture—"

Hutton Rogers' tall figure jammed between the two belligerents; with a broad hand on the chest of each he shoved them vigorously apart.

"Don't forget yourselves!" he said sharply.

Chesebro dropped his hands and turned away, walking forward along the deck. Rumble glared after the fat, retreating back, looked up at Rogers who still stood as a barrier between him and his enemy, then strode over to the rail, picked up his sombrero and set it back upon his oiled, curly head.

The danger of fistcuffs past, I gave my attention to the approaching rowboat which was now quite close. The toll crown of the rotogravure section floated on the water within reach of the passenger, who, having observed that something unusual was afoot relating to them, reached over the side and gathered the pieces in and brought them up the ladder with him.

Rogers and I were there to greet him, and Dwight, too, whose curiosity at what had happened still was unquenched. The others had disappeared.

"I don't know what it's all about, Barry," Reed said, giving the wet pieces to me. "The Chief certainly swung from the ankles on that Rumble person. Where's Elsa?" he inquired eagerly. "She's on board, isn't she?"

"Oh, yes."

Rogers took the pieces of paper from me, carried them to a hatch cover and spread them methodically out for inspection. The section was a part of a Los Angeles Sunday newspaper that must have come down by train only the night before. Dwight was an interested spectator, and I crowded upon Rogers' other elbow. Reed Barton was of two minds, not to seek Elsa, the other to discover what was so interesting in the picture section.

Sick Hens Won't Lay, So Watch for Diseases

Fowl Pox, Colds Most Frequent Ailments

Diseases among your hens may be causing lowered egg production and unnecessary deaths. One of the most common is fowl pox, says Successful Farming magazine. This ailment spreads slowly but surely. Be on the lookout for the appearance of small, straw-colored or brown, wart-like scabs which may appear on the comb or wattles, or around the eyes and at the corners of the mouth.

TELEFACT

There are now four chickens for every person in the United States while back in 1900 there were only three. Since there are now about 135,000,000 people in the country, there are some 540,000,000 chickens on farms.

Turkeys, too, have been increasing, after a long decline between 1900 and 1920. There are now around 6,000,000 of the big birds on the nation's farms, just about as many as there were at the turn of the century.

control of fowl pox if it has not gone too far.

Inspect your flock at monthly intervals for these profit robbers, lice. The simplest method of freeing the birds from such parasites is to paint a reliable nicotine preparation on the roosts about a half hour before roosting time. Then be certain all the birds are on the roosts, because if a few lice escape the entire flock will become reinfected.

The greatest losses from infectious colds are loss of body weight and egg production. If the disease occurs, you may first notice that a few birds remain on the roosts most of the day or particularly in the afternoon when grain is hand-fed. The infected individuals should be removed from the flock if possible. Check the litter and if it is too wet remove it and add a deep, dry litter.

If it is only damp add about an inch of dry litter to the top of it and stir it every few days. Do everything possible to keep the birds eating at top pitch. The use of a moist mash at noon, or the feeding of mash pellets will help.

In the absence of an outbreak of a serious infectious disease, it is unnecessary to change litter every two weeks or two months. Instead, with a good start of highly absorbent litter three inches deep, add about an inch of new litter at frequent intervals until the litter is at least six inches deep by December 1.

Either keep the litter stirred or feed grain in the litter so that the birds stir it sufficiently. This built-up litter is one guarantee against unnecessarily cold floors which cause lowered egg production.

Cull the birds frequently and regularly. This practice conserves critical feedstuffs, provides more floor space per bird, tends to lower mortality, and raises percentage of egg production. Take out the birds which aren't contributing their share to your pocketbook and the war effort.

The best method to conserve fowl paralysis is to remove any lame birds and those with gray eyes (providing the pupils are irregular in outline).

If disease occurs, act promptly and get an accurate diagnosis. Be certain that casualties are promptly disposed of by burning them, or burying deep enough so that dogs cannot dig them up.

Plant Cover Crops

Vegetable growers will find the fall a favorable time to sow cover crops, either after an early-market crop has been removed or just before the last cultivation of a late market crop, H. H. Cox, extension agronomist at Rutgers university, says.

Being a nitrogen gatherer, hairy vetch is one of the best of the winter cover crops. It will return to the soil, when plowed down next spring, the equivalent of several hundred pounds per acre of nitrate of soda.

FRANCE AT THE PEACE TABLE

TWO WEEKS before the signing of the armistice that ended World War I, on November 11, 1918, I had a brief and informal interview with Clemenceau, the French premier. I had no prepared questions and was not then permitted to use anything he might say. One of the two or three questions I asked was:

"When the war ends, will France support President Wilson's announced policies at the peace conference?"

For just a moment his eyes flashed under those heavy brows and then he replied very quietly:

"In this war France has suffered far more than any other nation. We will collect. The Boche will pay."

At the peace table American idealism was to, and did, collide with French realism. France, more than America, dominated the peace conference. Again American idealism will collide with European realism. This time it will not be France that will name the peace terms. This time it will be Russian realism that will dominate. Insofar as eastern Europe is concerned and eastern Asia, should Russia enter the war against Japan, Russia will stake the boundary lines. Self-preservation of Russia, not self-determination of peoples, will be the guiding factor. Russia will take back much of what she lost in the settlement of World War I and in the war with Poland. In that, it is my guess, she will have the support of England. Joseph Stalin is a realist. There will be no federation of small nations of eastern Europe to threaten the Russian bear.

WAR PLANT PAYROLLS AND INFLATION

WORKERS IN WAR PLANTS are given increases in wages until their income is at least double that of normal times. They want to spend that increase but there is a decrease in the commodities they can buy. Such a condition causes inflation. Abnormal wage scales for war products, a doubling up of the cost of war. That calls for increased taxation and an increased issue of government bonds. The taxation and purchase of bonds have fallen hardest upon those who have not profited from increased wage scales in war plants or increased profits from the production of war necessities. The increased wages in war plants has thrown the whole economic machinery out of gear and produced the conditions out of which inflation is born. The place to have controlled inflation was in the war plant payrolls.

HERE IS A MAN WHO KNOWS FARM PROBLEMS

I do not believe there is any man in America who has a clearer comprehension of the big and little problems of American agriculture than Wheeler McMillen. He knows the needs of the dirt farmer through having been one and he is still operating a farm of that character. As organizer and president of the Chomurgic council, he knows the future possibilities of American agriculture.

He has been directly instrumental in providing new uses for farm products. His urge is for greater farm production and in that increased production he sees the future of America. His value to the American farm is far greater than those who seek temporary make-shifts to increase prices of farm products. His efforts are to create increased permanent markets that will provide profitable prices. He is a sane and practical type for agriculture to follow.

CIVILIAN ACTIVITIES IN GOVERNMENT

SENATOR BYRD'S COMMITTEE tells us the increase in the number of civilian employees of the federal government in the first six months of 1943 amounted to something like 600,000 new names on the payroll, that, despite all the efforts of the committee to reduce the cost of the civilian activities of the government. They may withhold appropriations does not accomplish the desired purpose as the employees are simply transferred from the departments for which there is no appropriation to others for which appropriations have been made, even though to do this economies must be made in other than personnel lines. It is to be regretted that congress cannot find a way of exchanging the white collars of government desk jobs for uniforms of the armed forces or the overalls of war production plants. Such an exchange would help to solve the manpower problem.

And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U.
