Lincoln's Birthplace

Lincoln saw the evils of a country "half slave-half free." We are fighting now to keep Nazi slavery away from our free shores as much as to liberate the conquered peoples of Europe and Asia.

Narrow Escape

Tardy Donors

Needed to Boost War Chest Total

Volunteer workers have attempted to contact everyone in the interest of the National War Fund Drive, yet a number of individuals have not been interviewed as they are difficult to find with respect to the appeal for funds to boost the war chest.

Lincoln County campaign solicitors have worked most diligently, wholeheartedly and in a determined manner to see that every possible dollar in the county is rounded up for this essential fund.

It is quite a task to see all prospects. It is to these the appeal to rush in their contributions has been directed, and an encouraging number have responded and others are expected to contribute soon.

Your contribution will not only assist our Allies but will provide adequate facilities for our fighting men at home and abroad. Your money will be used for War Prisoners' Aid, USO, United Seamen's Service, United Nations' Relief, Refugee Relief and Local Needs.

WE CAN'T ALL FIGHT!
WE CAN'T ALL SUFFER!
But We Can All Give!

If you have not contributed or if you have not been contacted, don't wait any longer for a collector to see you. Any amount is acceptable. Just mail a check to, or give your money to one of the cashiers in the Lincoln County Agency Bank, Carrizozo.

Mrs. J. G. Moore with Miss Allsup raised the sum of $115.00. This is the largest amount yet raised by two people.

Notes of an Innocent Bystander:

The Magic Lantern: Mary Martin, already topping the newest stage hit, "Venus," presides over a daffy dilly on the screen called "True to Life." "Phantom of the Opera" gives you more opera than phantom this time, with Nelson Eddy, Susanna Foster and Jane Farrar pouring it on vocally. Claude Rains is the head skulker, but his chills run second to the trills. "Behind the Rising Sun," is grim stuff about the war against the Japs. Its barbarities were authenticated by Correspondent James Young, who lived among the beholders for years. Margo and Don Douglas are the pair who stir up the Japs' furies.

The Dials: The AFL urged NBC to muzzle Kaltenborn because of his severe jabs at labor unions. The network, however, permits him to continue expressing his opinions freely, even if they irk you or me. The best answer to any oral attack, as the AFL probably will agree, is not suppression, but facts. When civil liberties go down the drain so will labor's. We thwart only columnists took bows for scoops. But every hour, via its radio offerings, the N. Y. Times announced its beat in reporting that Italy would declare war on Germany. Fred Waring likes to hurl numbers around on his show—how many performers, etc. He announced 170 piano keys for a selection. How many piccolo holes? Jack Benny's new corps of writers caught his style admirably on Jack's first out and added a little more lunacy. The other night a band came on the air unaccompanied by that claquey hand-clapping and synthetic cheering. Or could I have just dreamed that?

Memos of a Midnighter: MGM has junked "They Were Expendable," a best seller. Jockey Nick Wall and his wife have reconciled after a long sep. I giddiers think that if Durocher is dropped as Dodgers' pilot—his successor may be the gent who once said: "Is Brooklyn still in the National League?"—Bill Terry "Lassie," the dog star (of the film by that name at the Music Hall), is a him—real name is Pal. The owner sold him for $10. After seeing the preview in H'wood he came out muttering: "I've thrown away a fortune!" Garbo has given in, to Ernest Pascal's pleading to go to London and star in Shaw's "St. Joan."

From the Irish Echo: "Premier De Valera of Eire succeeded, after considerable time and effort, in making Hitler pay for the restoration of a synagogue in Dublin which had been destroyed by Nazi airmen when they bombed the city a couple of years ago. Mr. De Valera acted in fulfillment of a promise to the Jews of Eire that their lives and property would be protected by the government against the acts of any enemy of the country."

Quotation Marksmanship: A. Murray: She's the only one I know who always seems to rumba into a room. Meré: Beauty is the first present nature gives to woman and the first it takes away. Denham: Ambition is like love—impatient both of delays and rivals. Moore: Playful blanches that seem but luminous escapes of thought. E. Luce: Hitler's One-World—Unanimous. H. Klurfeld: Disco gave Italy roads, but the Allies are giving it hot and cold running Nazis. E. Gilligan: The village went to sleep—window by window. H. Ercum: She balanced her dignity on the tip of her nose. Confucius: If you lose your temper, you've lost the argument. Anon's definition of intoxicated: To feel sophisticated and not be able to pronounce it.

Private White House polls show Wallace has twice the support for the vice presidency as the combined vote of all his opponents, including J. Byrnes, P. McNutt, Mr. Justice Douglas and J. Winant. A Capitol correspondent is in a jam with colleagues for supposedly making remarks to their wives. The Stork Club has gone high-toned. Last night its guests included America's famous poet, Joseph Auslander, and Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle Jr., and his wife. In the film, "Spitfire," the late Leslie Howard (who perished in a plane) says: "What's the use of inventing planes? They only kill people!" L.H.K. of the Times records this nifty: "Washington is a place where everyone is welcome but no one is missed."

His chums enjoy relating this about lovable Barney Baruch, whose counsel is often sought by statesmen. Baruch is hard of hearing and wears a device which is connected with some dry batteries concealed in a coat pocket. These batteries are hard to get nowadays—so when Baruch is buttached by a bore or some time-waster, he reaches into his pocket and disconnects the batteries by merely pushing the "OFF" button. The bore keeps raving away, but Baruch doesn't hear a thing.

JUST A year ago baseball fans were plagued by numerous fears that they had seen their last World Series for the duration. The draft status of big league ball players was an unknown factor. Washington had done little to indicate an awareness of such an activity as baseball.

The most strident of the calamity howlers forecast an early and abrupt end to the game. Both leagues would fold up before the season got well under way. The public wouldn't stand for healthy, well-conditioned men playing baseball while other men risked their lives and their futures in defense of their country.

Then, too, many gloomier individuals believed that the caliber of play would be lowered to such an extent that the cash customers would stay away in droves. DIMaggio, Feller, Greenberg and other stars of the first magnitude had gone into service. Could baseball survive such a shock?

False Argument

The latter argument was completely spurious. Baseball has managed to survive its natural losses. Didn't Babe Ruth mean as much to baseball as Joe DIMaggio? Didn't Lou Gehrig mean as much as Bob Feller or Hank Greenberg? The shock of their loss was cushioned because it was inevitable, but the final results were similar. Baseball would be in a sorry state if its fate

Instinct Leads Them To 'Greenest Grass'

That "the grass is greener on the other side of the fence" for the cow is more than bovine fancy. When the cow will risk injury from barbed wire in order to get out on the highway or into another field for the grass on the other side, surely there must be some compelling force responsible, Dr. William A. Albrecht, chairman of the department of soils, University of Missouri, asserts.

"Perhaps, farmers have never thought that animal instinct and soil fertility are at the basis of what may be wrongly considered just so much 'crazy cow' psychology," said Dr. Albrecht. "In this adage about animal behavior, there is given to us a significant suggestion for making our shortage of labor more effective and the farm business more profitable. Recent soil studies using animals as means of measuring soil fertility are pointing out that animal choices represent more effective gains by them, better animal health, along with more regular and more prolific reproduction.

"Lime treatments on the soil, for example, are the areas commonly selected when cows graze lespedeza in one part of the field in preference to another, as numerous farmers testify. Hogs acted similarly toward corn left in the field. The corn was

SNAPPY FACTS

ABOUT RUBBER

To maintain the nation's essential motor transportation system, the American rubber tire industry will be called upon to make 50 million synthetic passenger car tires in 1944. The synthetic rubber program is being geared to permit such an output without hindering the military needs for rubber.

More than 65 per cent of the war materials reaching factories in Michigan travel on rubber-tired trucks, and 47 per cent of the finished products move out by truck. Proof that our national economy is closely bound with rubber.

Judge Landis

JUDGE LANDIS depended on the destinies of a few widely publicized players.

Even now there are quite a few baseball followers who moan sadly of the coming year. Things look no better to them than they did last year. In truth, they look worse.

The drafting of fathers has brought acute confusion to the faint of heart who already are worrying about the 1944 World Series. They might do well to save their tears for the minor leagues—they'll probably need more sympathy than the majors.

Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball commissioner, and William Horridge and Ford Frick, presidents of the major circuits, are quite confident the league organizations will function again next year. They know there will be new difficulties, that it may be necessary to lower the player limit and that there will be a vastly greater percentage of manpower losses.

And it isn't at all unlikely that, in order to keep the main show alive, the minors will have to function on a tighter basis than at any time in their history. It used to be a source of strength of the minors that they were included in major chain store systems. Now it becomes the source of their greatest danger.

Possibilities

Major clubs will draw from their farm clubs even if it should weaken them completely. At its worst it could mean the suspension of the International and Pacific Coast leagues and the American association. At its best it's likely to mean that those leagues will be using men who definitely are not up to standard.

Baseball men have been slow in attempting to clarify their standing. But there are signs that they want action. There is said to be growing revolt against Judge Landis' order that nobody connected with the majors may contact anybody in official Washington about any matter connected with baseball.

Baseball has been the subject of many unfair attacks in the past months. The other side of the story should be told. Club owners, managers and other officials are too intelligent to expect any undue consideration. They are looking for no more than workers in any other industry.

Francisco ("Pancho") Segura, internationally known tennis player, is the son of the caretaker of Ecuador's only tennis club. His expenses to this country were paid by the Ecuadorian government.

Ty Cobb and Adrian Anson played the longest with the same team in the major leagues. Cobb was with Detroit 22 years, Anson with Chicago the same.

AGRICULTURAL NOTES

Sorghum syrup is not a good sweetener for fruits. Its flavor is apt to crowd out the delicate fruit flavor.

To render fat, cook it over very low heat until it is melted. Do not let fat smoke. Strain it through cheesecloth or old muslin. Cover the strained fat and keep it cool until used.

left untouched where no lime was used even though the hogs passed to and fro through it. Barley has been grazed out first where 200 pounds of fertilizer was applied in contrast to that with only 100 pounds. Grains, such as corn, in the self-feeder, have been selected by hogs according to the soil treatment where the crop was grown. Guinea pigs have selected various grains with differences in choice according to the fertility of the soils growing them.

"Yes, 'the other side of the fence' is sought by the animal because its better judgment as to its nourishment, and therefore its better health, better growth, and more efficient reproduction are involved. The cows usually break out on to the highway or railroad right-of-way where crops have grown annually but have not been removed. Crops have not carried away the soil fertility. We have been alarmed about the danger that some valuable meat or milk producer might be killed by traffic. Instead, we should be recognizing the fact that by means of the more fertile soil on the other side of the fence our efforts and the animal's time can be used more effectively.

"The cows have been pleading with us to give soil improvement some needed attention but we have turned them a deaf ear. We may well profit by using these animal assays of our soil fertility as well as by calling on the chemist for soil tests.

"How can we best accomplish the job of soil replenishment? There are a number of ways. Liming is beneficial because it helps both the plants and the animals to get their needed calcium, more than because this soil treatment fights soil acidity. Calcium in limestone, or even in gypsum, phosphorus in the acid, or raw rock forms; potassium as salts; and all the other nutrient elements included on the soil fertility list, need our attention as soil treatments to make the grass greener on our own side of the fence."

You Might As Well Confess!

Almost everyone likes a mystery—almost everyone enjoys the thrilling excitement of tracking down a criminal with an ace detective. But come on a little ashamed to admit reading mystery. Well—you need not be. Maybe you didn't know that many college professors, bank presidents, great scientists, captains of industry, even the President of the United States all like their mysteries. In fact, millions of Americans are reading more mysteries today than ever before. Why? Mainly because these fast-paced, easy-reading stories are both relaxing and refreshing. It is for them—and for you—that we are publishing

Ellery Queen's Mystery Magazine

Edited by Ellery Queen, famous detective of the radio, the movies, and best-seller books, it is devoted exclusively to the best in detective crime short-story literature. And we mean literature. The fact that a story owes its plot to crime and detection need not prevent its being well written. Short detective fiction that is well written is not too readily available. But we are finding them—in books, in magazines, in the files of famous authors—and by arrangement with other publishers as well as with authors, we reprint in the approved Reader's Digest manner the best detective fiction to be procured. Such masters as Dashiell, Hammett, Agatha Christie, Stuart Palmer and Ellery Queen are to be found in it.

But stories are selected on their merits, not on authors' names. Tough and suave, casual and swift, comic and tragic, they are mingled with refreshing variety and stimulating change of pace. Rare gems, for the most critical, delightful to the most naive. You will find the now magazine well printed—sharp and clear, kind to the eyes. You will find the size same as the Reader's Digest—convenient to hold, to handle, to slip into your pocket. You will find the cover as pleasing to look at as a book jacket. And you will find the contents the most satisfying quarter's worth of good entertainment you have found in many a day. On sale at all good newsstands—25c a copy.

A Good-Neighbor Creed

If you were acquainted with the other folks on your telephone party line, chances are you'd find them good neighbors . . . people you'd like . . . people who believe in sharing party line service this way:

- I. "Somebody else on my line may be waiting to make a call, so I'll be brief."
- II. "When the line is in use, and I'm waiting my turn, I won't interrupt."
- III. "When I have several calls to make, I'll allow time between them so other persons can use the line."
- IV. "When I finish a call, I'll make sure I've hung up properly, so all the telephones on the line won't be put out of service."

V Mail

When a soldier or a sailor is low in spirits there is nothing that will cheer him up as much as a letter from home, so the War and Navy Departments have devised a method for getting "the word" to its fighting men with the greatest dispatch. This is the microfilm method of transmitting letters, known to all of us as V-mail.

Any news from home is bound to please our soldiers and our sailors, but the news they want to have most is the news from our production front and news that we are winning our fight against inflation by our savings and investment in War Bonds. U. S. Treasury Department

A SERIES OF SPECIAL ARTICLES BY THE LEADING WAR CORRESPONDENTS

Eisenhower in Sicily

By John Gunther

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

I went ashore on Sicily with General Eisenhower. The first landings had taken place only 40 hours before, others were still going on. We had little information as to the progress of the fighting, but soon it became clear that the war was very close.

An American cruiser was about a mile offshore. It began to bark. First a flash, then a crack, then a splash of shell, finally the echo plunging back from the drear Sicilian hills.

The rate of firing increased, and another officer, American, said: "They must be on to it now."

We saw fires quite near. I asked an officer when the Luftwaffe had been over this harbor. He replied: "Constantly."

Our destroyer had picked up four German aviators from the water the night before and brought them in. They had been on a life raft 80 hours. A British lieutenant, naked to the waist and with shaggy black beard, said: "They were pretty pooped. We almost chucked one of them over."

Later the Germans were brought on the deck of the destroyer, and shown the prodigious display of warships steaming past. One German said: "I don't believe it. It can't be true." He had swallowed whole the Nazi propaganda that the British Mediterranean fleet had been sunk.

Eisenhower wanted to visit Sicily as soon as possible after the invasion, for several reasons: to confer with Hewitt, Patton and his other officers, to see for himself how things were going, and particularly to salute the Canadians who were associated with the British and Americans in a big-scale operation for the first time.

He stood on the deck and watched the shore flow along beside us and in conversation he constantly stressed the Allied nature of this tremendous operation, expressing his appreciation in the warmest terms of the "exquisite" co-ordination achieved by all. He talked about how Cunningham, Alexander and Tedder, each working perfectly on his own sphere, assembled the whole machine into action with consummate efficiency while he was only "Chairman of the Board."

Before this, I'd met Eisenhower two or three times, attended several of his press conferences, and been extremely impressed by this officer (only a lieutenant colonel a couple of years ago) who was now in supreme charge of one of the greatest, most complex operations in military history.

Friendly and Direct. He is a solidly built man of medium height, with sandy hair, big forehead and freckled face. He has one of the wildest, most mobile grins imaginable. His manner is direct, simple, friendly.

You get the sense from him that he's very sure of himself and knows his own worth. But his informality and his modesty are intensely genuine. He's the least stuffed-shirted general I ever met. All his colleagues admire his enormous tact. He had never had concrete battle experience in the field till last November, yet found himself appointed superior to veterans like Alexander and Montgomery.

But he quickly proved himself a real strategist with the final victory in Tunisia. Now he has won not only the respect of his subordinates but this affection. Though he likes to call himself chairman of the board, he is much more than that. He is a perfect co-ordinator, capable of vigorous, decisive action. He is very shrewd, as anyone can tell on listening to his conversation, despite his tremendous modesty. He tries to keep in the background as much as possible, always stresses his responsibility to Washington and London, and even refuses to let correspondents dateline anything as from "General Eisenhower's Headquarters." He insists they use the term "Allied Headquarters."

Eisenhower went to the Philippines with MacArthur in February, 1935. He returned to the United States in January, 1940. He was certain war was coming, but thought it would strike us from Europe first.

'Alarmist Ike.' Friends kidded him, called him "Alarmist Ike." He went to work in the Third Army at San Antonio. From there he was called to Washington, after Pearl Harbor.

Eisenhower is as sound as can be in the essential strategy of war and speaks from experience of the comparative danger from the Germans and the Japanese. He knows we must beat Germany first for the most elemental reason, and he is absolutely firm for Anglo-American solidarity.

Fighting Disease, Japs in Jungles of Burma

Americans, Burmese, Chinese, British, and native Naga coolies are battling side by side against disease and the Japanese in the jungles of Burma. Left: Big Hawk, an expert in microscopic work, instructs Na Shaw, another Burmese nurse, at the Seagrave hospital unit of the U. S. army. Right: Along a rugged north Burman trail, American-trained Chinese soldiers pull a field gun into position. Upper inset: Corp. Roll Krog of St. Joseph, Mo., and a Chinese soldier take time out to rest beside a jungle trail. This picture was taken in the Naga hills where the Chinese and American troops fought together against the Japanese.

Rehabilitating Shocked, Orphaned War Waifs

Hundreds of English children whose parents have been killed and whose homes have been destroyed during the war are being nourished back to health and guided in the ways of normal childhood at the Hanover Lodge Nursery in London. Some were so shocked by the noise and destruction of war that they may never recover. Left: One of England's "homeless generation" bravely salutes in her crib. Center: In the garden the children pose for the cameraman. Top right: This modest young man covers his face as he is photographed while being given a bath. The nursery was formerly the home of a wealthy American girl.

The family of young Elwood Lewis adopted her, fed her with a medicine dropper, but did not contain her. "Bambi," pictured above, lives in the woods near Elwood's home. She comes out each morning for breakfast and again after school to romp with Elwood.

MAGNETIC TORPEDO:

Here is one reason why we needed the Azores so badly as an anti-submarine base. The U-boats not only have new devices but also a new strategy and may converge around the bottleneck to the Mediterranean between the Azores and Gibraltar, DEVICES:

Latest Nazi torpedoes are superior to the former type which exploded only on contact. New torpedoes are exploded (1) on contact; (2) by magnetic attraction or coming close to the steel hull; (3) by the vibration of the engines of the ship under attack. This makes it possible for the submarine to succeed in its mission much more frequently than before. A torpedo is much less likely to miss, since missing actual contact with the target does not now mean, as previously, that it misses the target.

STRATEGY:

Convoys have now discovered that Nazi subs are hunting in packs of sufficient number to employ the same sort of naval strategy which large units of naval vessels are able to use. A group of submarines will surface on one side of the convoy, and thus decoy the escort vessels in that direction. Meantime, another group of submarines on the other side of the convoy will approach within easy firing range and discharge their torpedoes.

Observers believe, however, that the main artery of commerce from the United States to the European theater of war—the North Atlantic run—is still so well guarded that the submarine menace is licked so far as that run is concerned. It is feared, however, that the Nazis will now strike at another vulnerable point, namely the Straits of Gibraltar. Since these straits must be passed by all Allied merchant shipping supplying the Mediterranean theater of war—including North Africa, Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica, Italy and the Adriatic—not to mention all the shipping now passing through the Mediterranean bound for the Straits of Suez and India—this area is due for a concentrated submarine attack.

A VISIT WITH STALIN

Secretary Hull might have got some interesting pointers for his Moscow trip from Cuban Ambassador Concheco, only Latin American diplomat who has met Stalin.

Brilliant Senor Concheco to both Cuban ambassador to the U.S.A. and Cuban minister to Soviet Russia. Recently he came back from a visit to the Soviet capital during which he presented his credentials to Foreign Minister Molotov, and expressed the polite hope that he might also call upon Stalin. Knowing that Stalin was one of the busiest men in the world, however, Concheco did not press the point and actually did not expect to see him.

So he almost fell out of his ballet seat one night when someone tapped him on the shoulder and told him that Stalin would see him in 23 minutes. How Stalin knew the Cuban diplomat was enjoying the famous Moscow Ballet, Concheco did not know.

However, he was told that a motor would call for him at the theater in 15 minutes, and he should be ready. Concheco consulted a British diplomat, also present at the ballet, who told him that the man who had tapped him on the shoulder was the Russian chief of protocol, so he had better be ready.

It was May, but zero weather in Moscow. However, Ambassador Concheco did not find it cold in the Kremlin. (Churchill wore a zip-suit when he called on Stalin, and Mrs. Hull has been worrying on behalf of her husband about the cold in the Kremlin.) Only two officers guarded Stalin. One officer met the Cuban at the entrance of the building and escorted him to Stalin's office. There he was met by another officer who took him the rest of the way. There was no pomp or ceremony.

GENIAL JOSEPH

Stalin himself was not fierce, but kindly and genial. His eyes, according to Ambassador Concheco, are deep and penetrating, but with wrinkles of humor in the corners.

The Soviet premier seemed surprisingly well-posted on Cuban problems, knew something about its labor laws and its economic questions. However, he was not familiar with Cuban-U. S. relations and seemed to think that Cuba was still politically dependent on the U.S.A. The ambassador explained that the Platt amendment had been abrogated and Cuba now enjoyed complete freedom.

CAPITAL CHAFF

Capt. Ralph Ingersoll, drafted away from his editorship of the newspaper PM, was detailed by the army to help pilot the Five Flying Senators on part of their war-zone trip. It is reported that Ingersoll is being queried by the war department as to who leaked certain information to the senators... Gov. Matt Neasey of West Virginia, former U. S. senator, will run for the house of representatives in the First West Virginia congressional district.

BLACK SOMBRERO

Elsa Chatfield, Hollywood artist, is cut off from the will of her Aunt Kitty, who died from an overdose of morphine.

CHAPTER VII

But Elsa was not through with him. A moment later when her horse dropped to all four feet, she came within striking distance.

"Elsa!" I shouted, starting from our place beside the oxcart. "Elsa!" But she didn't hear me.

The rigid arm relaxed, the quilt slowly fell from her nerveless fingers, the quilt which later was to play so vital a part in our tragic story.

The rage that had stirred Elsa to a frenzy melted quickly away. Rogers released her and went to help Chesebro to his feet.

"Oh, Barry!" she said. A sob shook her body convulsively. "Oh, Barry—I said that someday I'd pull off his legs. But that's not enough. I'm going to kill him instead!"

Chesebro was put gently to bed in an enormous room furnished in ancient black walnut; the high ceiling and the great length and breadth of the room gave me the feeling almost of being in a cathedral.

"It is the heart, you," he said at last, speaking English with a strong rhythmic accent. "He's had an attack; it is light, but he shall remain in bed for several days. Why the face like this?" he inquired, indicating the bruised flesh.

"There was an argument, Doctor Cruz," Rogers replied slowly, "in which he was severely beaten. With a whip."

"Ah!" responded Doctor Cruz and shrugged his shoulders discreetly. I went into town with the doctor when he left that early afternoon.

"You're coming out again, of course, for the evening?" Rogers inquired.

"Yes, I wouldn't miss a fiesta. I don't suppose Chesebro's condition will make any difference in their plans."

"I think not." George Rumble, lingering in the shade of a clump of bananas, came to life.

"I believe I'll go along with you. All right is it, Doc?" he asked of Doctor Cruz.

"You bet," responded the Mexican physician. And as we rode into town together. Doctor Cruz dropped me a few minutes later in a side street where over a doorway let into a glaring white wall was a sign bearing Chesebro's name.

"A cus ordenesa, cenor," he said. "Senor Barton; is he in?" I inquired in Spanish.

"Si, cenor; por esta puerta," he said rapping gently, then opening the door into the inner office.

Reed Barton sat with his feet upon the top of his desk, smoking a cigarette, and gazing dreamily out into a small patio where a fountain dripped and a ruby throated hummingbird was busy among the flowers.

"Hello, old man," I said. Reed took his feet from the desk, got slowly from his chair and dropped his cigarette into an ash tray. He held out his hand.

"I dropped in just now to tell you some news." "What news?" "I thought you ought to know about it, Chesebro has had a heart attack. The doctor has put him to bed out at Sam Chatfield's."

"What brought that on?" "Elsa beat him up quite badly with a whip a while ago; almost cut him to ribbons. The attack followed."

"Well," he said with surprisingly little show of interest, "it doesn't mean anything to me, Barry, to know about it. Thank you, though, for your trouble."

this odd reception of the news I had for him.

"It really doesn't matter, Barry," he amplified. "Chesebro and I are through. We're quits. He's kicked me out of his organization. I've been sitting here resting a bit after getting my stuff together, and thinking—"

"You mean you're fired?" "Yes." "Why—what?" "Elsa, of course. The man is mad, Barry. About her."

That evening at the rancho is one that none of us who was present will ever forget, an evening not of full feasts, but of gay and typical dances, the zapateados, an evening that ended so tragically.

Chesebro was lying motionless in bed. Because of the painful injuries inflicted by the lash of Elsa's whip, he did not turn his head when we came into the room, merely inquired quietly who we were.

"I'm glad you came in," he said from his pillow. "Sit down, won't you?"

"We'll not stay," Rogers told him, going up to the bedside and looking down upon the bandaged occupant. "Can we get you anything? Do any service for you, Chesebro?"

"Thank you, no. I'm all right. I'll be up and about in a few days." He rested a moment before he continued. "They are very kind to me, both Sam and Senora Chatfield. I couldn't ask more devoted, thoughtful attention."

"Oh, I'm sure you're well cared for," I said. "It was a—" I started to say something of the beating Elsa had given him, but paused, afraid to irritate his sensibilities. Chesebro waited a moment for me to go on, then said: "I don't"

She had gone mad with hatred of him.

blame Elsa. I blame only myself for having underestimated Elsa's capabilities."

"Elsa is," began Rogers, a half-humorous note in his voice, "surprisingly full of capabilities."

"Yes," said Chesebro, matter-of-factly, "that's true. But she didn't know; she couldn't have known that I was experiencing a little trouble with my heart—and I shouldn't have done what I did. You find me very contrite, gentlemen. Elsa, I'm sure, will forgive me when she comes in to see me, as I've been promised later on she will do."

We said good night and withdrew from the huge, dimly lighted room where dark shadows in the far corners could have concealed a host of evil spirits.

There was an odd, constrained silence when we entered the living room, a slight hush of expectancy and a stiffening of the occupants in the chairs. Dwight and Margaret had arrived. Rumble was there, having come out with me from town. Sam and Berta were sitting with them. Elsa had not yet made her appearance, and Reed Barton came in a moment or two after we entered. He was dressed picturesquely as a charro, the Mexican cowboy, and evidently was determined to have a part in the evening's festivities. He wore a short leather jacket, a soft red tie, long leather pantaloons as tight as he could sit down in, bespangled with silver buttons and chains.

I detected a look of disappointment in his face as he glanced around the room and did not find Elsa. Berta, dressed in black velvet and heavily rouged, coquettishly made a place for him beside herself, and indicated her husband with her fan, as if he were only waiting for the attention of all before saying something.

"I," he began hesitantly. "I am suggesting something for this particular time—it is still early—which has nothing whatever to do with the evening's festivities. They will sellow. It will come as a surprise, I know; it will seem out of place, perhaps, to some of you. But it is something that seems to be necessary."

Sam Chatfield was now well launched upon his little speech; there was earnestness upon his face, in his manner. "You all know, of course, of the death of my sister, Katherine, in California, now more than a year ago. At odd times since that occurrence there have been intimations that the authorities are not satisfied with the official findings. I discover that among you there are two who are actively prosecuting an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding Katherine's death."

"Since all of us here"—he looked around the room—"Elsa will be here shortly—knew her or had some dealings, or association of some sort, with her, I shall ask Mr. Rogers to conduct an examination. I want him, and through him the authorities in California, to be satisfied. Neither Berta nor I have been available for questioning hitherto, and I hope Mr. Rogers will not feel constrained, because we are his hosts, in questioning us. Of course, Mr. Chesebro cannot be with us, and is at present in no condition to undergo questioning, but that, perhaps, can be done later, if it has not already been done."

"Thank you, Mr. Chatfield. It is indeed a surprise. I had been hoping soon to suggest that something like this be arranged. I'm sure that Mr. Madison will be grateful for this opportunity, now that the matter is, so to speak, out in the open. Of course," he hesitated, looking intently at Sam Chatfield, "there is in the death of your sister—or, for that matter, in the death of anyone else—a set of facts. We are uncertain just what those facts are. The district attorney's office doubts the validity of what purports to be facts in the Katherine Chatfield case."

There was a stir in the doorway and Elsa entered the room, pausing on the threshold to survey us as we sat listening, solemn-faced and stiffly, as if to a schoolmaster, while Rogers talked. She was always lovely; her hair of an almost golden sheen, the level gray eyes, the firm, erect carriage which was emphasized tonight by the costume she wore. She was dressed as a China Poblana.

"Am I interrupting?" she asked from the threshold. "No, dear; come in," said her father. "We were expecting you to join us." He made a place for her at his side.

A faint smile flitted across her face at the sight of Reed Barton, and she nodded to him, slightly aloof now, this person, who so ardently had hoped that Reed would come like a caballero and sing love songs to her on the deck of the Orizaba.

"I presume there is little need to do so, but perhaps it is best to remind you all that Katherine Chatfield died of an overdose of morphine."

At Rogers' words, Elsa, who had just sat down, lifted her head high, her nostrils opening wider as if she sniffed danger.

"The overdose probably was much in excess," continued Rogers easily, "of what she was accustomed to take. In the circumstances only two conclusions are possible. Either she administered the overdose herself, in which case it was suicide. Or, it was given to her by someone desiring her death, either forcibly, or by the aid of some preliminary anesthetic administered quickly before she was aware of her danger—such as chloroform. In which latter case, of course, it is murder."

"Mr. Chatfield quite recently told Barry Madison and me that both he and Mrs. Chatfield were spending the night at the house the night his sister died. Elsa, of course, was there. Some time ago Reed Barton informed me that, in the nature of his work for Mr. Chesebro, he ran many personal errands for him, and that on this particular evening he had been instructed to deliver a book to her."

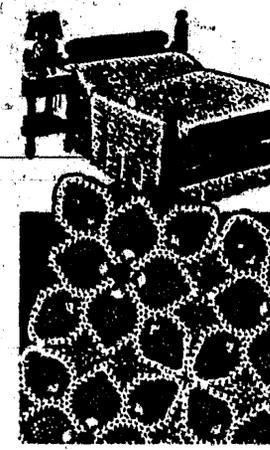

"And I have just discovered in talking with George Rumble that he had been engaged to do some public work for Miss Chatfield, and that on the evening of her death he was present in the house for a short time, that the two argued, and that he left threatening to sue her for his money."

"Dwight," Rogers said, with a smile, "so far as I know, you and Margaret are the only ones here, excepting Barry Madison and myself, who have not been shown to have been present that night. How about it? Are you keeping something to yourself?"

Dwight Nichols shifted his crossed legs and tapped the ash from the tip of his cigarette.

"I believe I told you a long time ago, Hunt, that I might be accused of having a motive in Kitty Chatfield's slaying—if that's what it was. I profited to the extent of a couple of hundred thousand dollars at her death, because of some property owned in joint tenancy. But there it ends. I didn't happen to be at the house at any time that evening she died."
