"WE Pledge Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all."

Lieut. Joe H. Drake

Lt. Joe H. Drake was here on leave last week, visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Drake at Ancho. Lt. Drake has been overseas and saw some action in Sicily as a bombardier.

Fighters Send Postwar Fortune Back Home

Speaking of postwar reserve funds—there is the $50,000,000 which American fighting men in the Southwest Pacific have sent back already to their families in war bonds, insurance, deposits and allotments.

Finance officers of the Army forces in the Far East say that combat troops have sent back more on a man-to-man basis than their comrades behind the lines.

It all adds up to a fortune—and the faith our men have in the kind of America they want to return to.

Mrs. Bertha Martinez arrived last Friday night from Topeka, Kansas, to make her home with her mother, Mrs. Maggie Chavez. Her husband, Pvt. Arthur Martinez, was shipped from that camp to an unknown destination, presumably a point of embarkation.

Mr. and Mrs. Sabino Vidaurri heard last week from their son, S 2/c Lucio Vidaurri, who is on board the U. S. S. Titania somewhere in the Pacific.

Bill Ferguson, the Capitan Bronco Buster, joined the Marine Corps in El Paso last week.

A letter from Robert Meza states that he has entered training at Texas A. & M. College as a radio man for the Navy. He sends regards to his friends and states that the Lincoln County News kept him informed of all the home news while he was in San Diego.

Pvt. Roy W. Harmon is attending school at the Westchester State Teachers' College, Westchester, Penn. He likes his course and will probably finish with flying colors.

'TIS SADI!

(By Joe S. Chavez)

The Capitan train is now serving as a work train, picking up the old steel, ties and bridges on the Capitan branch, which has been discontinued. Years ago, before the county seat was changed from Lincoln to Carrizozo, dignitaries such as judges, senators, attorneys and peace envoys made the bulk of passenger trade on the luxurious railroad coach of those days.

Occasionally, a cattle rustler, a horse thief or some other desperado who had been eluding justice, would share the comforts of that luxury and also the beautiful scenery along the mountainous route. Those gentlemen generally had a one-way ticket to the calaboose at Lincoln or to the "Big House" at Santa Fe. As chaperones and hosts on their ill-fated travels, they greatly enjoyed the companionship of the late Sheriff John Owen and his hardened deputies.

Going over, the first stop was at Walnut, where passengers for Nogal and surrounding ranches made their exit. From there on up it was toil, sweat and discord for the poor fireman until they ascended the divide. But on the downward trip he relaxed in the cab and took life easy, while the brakemen were doing their share of perspiring and griping.

The high-powered automobile came and made the little "Pride of Capitan" look like a snail crawling up Indian Divide on a frosty morning. But the little train paid no heed and kept up its regular routine until a few weeks ago, when the Southern Pacific declared its uselessness, and the State Corporation Commission granted the right to cease operation.

Not only will the human beings miss the "puff, puff, puff" of the Capitan train on Tuesday and Friday mornings. The old horses and cattle and even the hoot owls along the old trail will die of grief.

'TIS SADI!

Salvation Army Drive

Baron Auricemma states that his appeal to the people of Lincoln County for Salvation Army funds was the most successful in fifteen years. Every town in the county responded very generously, and he feels sure that one reason for the willing response is the fact that the Salvation Army is non-sectarian and non-political and the public knows it.

The board of directors for the Army in this county are Messrs. A. J. Rolland, R. E. Lemon, Carrizozo; F. H. Hall, Capitan; Abington of Corona.

All extend thanks and appreciation for funds received.

Mr. and Mrs. Pete O'Rear and children were guests at the home of Mrs. O'Rear's sister, Mrs. M. O. Longley, last week.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

About New York:

What looks like a palace at Park Ave. and 51st is merely the uppity Racquet and Tennis Clubhouse. There is a Park Ave. penthouse that has a garden with a 30-foot waterfall. Radio City's studios are built like boxes within boxes, separate rooms within rooms, raised from the building floors by steel springs covered with felt in order to improve acoustics. Imagine going through all that trouble for soap operas. The Music Hall Rockettes can live comfortably without ever leaving the theater. They work there, can eat in its restaurants, and have a luxurious dormitory atop the theater to sleep in. Talk about tact. At one Park Ave. place, the headwaiter never bows to a patron, if he is with a woman not his wife.

Thirty-two years after Columbus discovered America the strip of land now known as Manhattan was discovered by Giovanni da Verrazano. There isn't even a street named after him. What many sightseers think is romantic and picturesque in Chinatown are merely rundown tenements. The city's worst slums are located there. Our fighting Mayor LaGuardia has installed a punching bag in one of the City Hall rooms. Only six cities in Germany contain more Germans than Yorkville. Many of the Oriental herbs sold for high prices in exclusive food shops are grown in Staten Island. If you want a whiff of old New York, go to the Murray Hill Hotel.

Ten times as many people visit New York during a year as live in the metropolis. As far as earthquakes are concerned, the Big City is the safest part of the world. Only 4,000 of the 18,000 Chinese in New York live in Chinatown. This gives you an idea how cosmopolitan our burg is. It has three Arabic daily newspapers. The Chinese maintain a school for their children in Mott St. The merriest locale in town is the Puerto Rican section of Harlem on Saturday night. There are laws regulating the shape of our chycerapors. The opening of the Brooklyn Bridge was celebrated as a national holiday. For twelve years, while the bridge was being built, the chief engineer had lain partially paralyzed. The first lady to drive across it was his wife, who acted as his intermediary.

The Herman Goering award is presented monthly to a member of the American Air Force in England. It is given to the Yank who contributes most to the German war effort. It is a large iron cross (12 by 12 inches) worn around the neck. The RAF has a similar prize—published each week in its paper—a parody on an official seal. Recently it was awarded to the crew of a large bomber, returned from a mission. It seems they couldn't make their radio work properly on the way home. The gas was almost gone and finally they were forced down in what they thought was Holland. Upon landing, they immediately set fire to their bomber, stayed with it until it lit up the black night. They ran like anything for what they thought was the nearest house, praying that the tenants were sympathizers. It was the calson around the corner from their base!

One of the most important stories of the war (how the surrender of the Italian fleet was achieved by a radio engineer of the Overseas Branch of the OWI) was ignored or buried by most newspapers. Not one of them even mentioned his name. He is Robert Morris Pierce of Cleveland, Ohio, attached to the Army's Psychological Warfare branch, of which OWI is an important part. Here is how it was done. When Italy surrendered, a message was prepared for broadcast to the Italian fleet. It was doubtful if the fleet would hear it because the Italian Navy had a strict taboo on listening to our broadcasts. Pierce solved the problem by working all night to shift the big transmitter to the international distress signal band to which ships of all nations listen. The message was broadcast every 15 minutes for several hours. When the Italian fleet steamed into Malta (as a result of the broadcast) Admiral Sir Andrew Brown Cunningham, Allied Naval Force Commander, said: "Tell General McClure they've accomplished in one day with propaganda what I've been trying to do for three years with the Navy."

Groucho Marx told Artur Robin-stein that Southern California was becoming the home of musical greats. Rachmaninoff, Menuhin, Iurbi, Rubinstein, Heifetz, all of whom played at the Hollywood Bowl. The maestro said when the season ended he was in the foyer of the Philharmonic and heard two dowagers discussing music. "How was the season at the Bowl?" one asked. "Quite good," was the answer, "considering that we had nothing but local talent."

Fashion Is in Mood for Swank Accessories and Handsome Furs

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

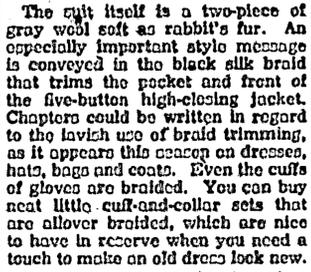

THIS is a season when you are supposed to dress up your basic capture with dramatic accessories and stunning fur pieces. If you have been saving a choice bit of fur, thinking that sometime it might be used to trim a coat or fashion a hat, now's the time to hand it over to your furrier or your milliner. Tell her to make you up something fetching in the way of handbag, hat, scarf or muff to wear with your suit or coat, your one-piece dress or your loveliest evening gown.

Don't throw away the tiniest swatch of fur, for even the most insignificant little piece can be fashioned into a cunning bow to wear on the lapel of your cloth coat, or to pin on the pocket of your tweed jacket. If you are clever you can make your own little fur novelties out of tidbits of seal, Persian lamb, mink or gray lamb.

There's lots doing this winter among designers who vie with each other as to who can turn out the most strikingly original ideas in hat and muff or hat and bag sets, and special emphasis is being placed upon the importance of stole-like neckpieces.

Best dressed women regard a stole of choice fur as being a necessary luxury this season, be it of the simple type to wear with one's smart tailleur, or the more elaborate sort for evening wear. Of the latter sort is the exquisite white fox fur which imports drama to the lovely white gown centered in the illustration. That fashion is in a mood for swank accessories is seen in the hair ornament made of strands of white satiny glass beads. Following the Chinese influence, it is balanced at each side, as if in salute to our ally.

With a gray suit, mildy to the left in the picture wears a black scarf fox turban and a stole that converts into a muff. It may be worn as a scarf with the ends forming a muff, or it can be carried as a muff with long stole ends. This scarf-muff novelty, so practical and so wearable, is typical of the clever things being done with fur.

The suit itself is a two-piece of gray wool soft as rabbit's fur. An especially important style message is conveyed in the black silk braid that trims the pocket and front of the five-button high-closing jacket. Chapters could be written in regard to the lavish use of braid trimming, as it appears this season on dresses, hats, bags and coats. Even the cuffs of gloves are braided. You can buy neat little cuff-and-collar sets that are all-over braided, which are nice to have in reserve when you need a touch to make an old dress look new.

Ensemble sets of black velvet which are quite the rage this season team "this and that" together in such fascinating "sets" as the huge black velvet bag, hat and gauntlet glove combination pictured in the group. The hat has a lace brim piped in velvet. The bag is enormous, as most bags are this year. You can do a lot with a little when it comes to even a few inches of black velvet. For instance, you can make a little velvet patch pocket, and in jet beads trace your initial thereon. Display this as a breast pocket on your simple black daytime dress. It is well to have a big velvet bow in your accessory collection, for these bows are worn like a corsage, sometimes with a glittering brooch or clip.

Perfect for dinner and dancing with the new chort evening gowns, is the necessary set shown in the inset. The fact that it is in black and white is significant, for again a sudden flair for black and white springs up in fashion circles. The hat is of white fox fur, trimmed with black wings. A black and white fox muff complements the hat.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

Braid-Trimmed Hats

Newest of the new winter fashions bring tidings of braid-trimmed hats. Perfect for wear with tailored clothes is a hat of gray felt as shown above. It is very outstanding because of the fact that it is trimmed with black braid, which is big news. The vogue for braid trims is becoming increasingly interesting, since designers are making lavish use of braiding this year on everything from dresses and coats to handbags and hats. The high peaked crown of the other model shown reflects Russian influence.

Lapel Pins Are Made Of Colored Leather

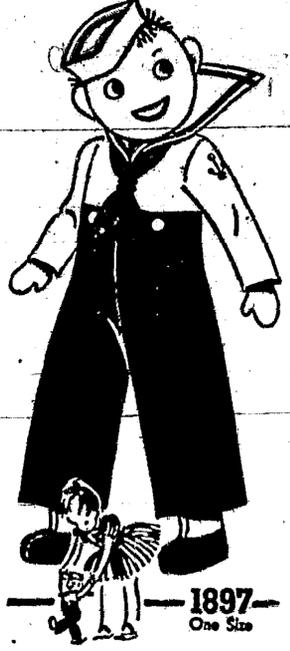

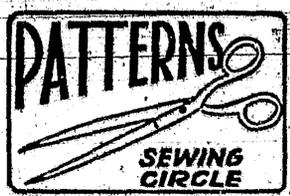

Birds and animals are being copied in miniature done in gay leathers for the newest lapel pins. Birds of paradise are in gold kid trimmed with collars of green and red and finished off with a single real feather. A flamingo spreads long pink tail feathers, its plumage made of fragments of kid. The parrot is the coolest specimen of all, done in green leather with yellow and red contrasts. This new leather jewelry also includes animals, such as a big white leather circus horse, or toy elephant and so on. School-girls like to wear these on their jackets or at the neckline of their smart long sweaters.

Collar and Cuffs Now Get Designers' Attention

Not long since it was pockets that were featured as the center of attraction in coat dress and blouse styling. But if you will take sharp note as you stroll through fashion displays you will observe that it is collar and cuffs upon which designers are now focusing their creative genius. It will be interesting to keep tab on this movement. A dress, for instance, will be sans trimming except for glittering sequin collar and cuffs. New too, are the braided collar and cuff sets.

Lace-Trimmed Coats

Both small and brimmed velvet hats are enchantingly trimmed with lace that tines beautifully to gala occasion. These black velvet fantasies are most alluring and the tiny caplet and bonnet types with their mantilla like lace drapes or halo veils of sheerest Chantilly are most alluring.

Groceryman Was Just Standing True to Form

The village groceryman—who was also an air-raid warden of long standing—was very proud of the fact that his photograph had been published on the first page of the local newspaper.

While he was chowing it to one of his customers, a rather formidable old lady, he detected a certain lack of enthusiasm on her part, and said apologetically: "Of course, it's not a very good photo. I'm out of focus."

"Yes," the old lady replied with a grin amilo, "you're always out of something. You were out of string beans Tuesday and out of flour Friday!"

When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. And though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to men in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard wherever they are.—Adv.

Whales and Subs
Aircraft of the Civil Air patrol guarding our coastal waters are required to report the sighting of whales as well as submarines so that surface vessels in the vicinity may be notified. In several cases under poor visibility whales have been mistaken for U-boats and torpedoed.

NEEDED CARS NEED WEED CHAINS

DON'T START FIRES IN YOUR TIRES!

• Tires won't actually burst into flames when you spin them in snowdrifts or on icy roads. But you "burn 'em up" just the same. And tire chains will be hard to get this winter. So we suggest that you act at once to have your old chains reconditioned, and, if necessary, to secure new WEED TIRE CHAINS.

Essential civilian cars and trucks have first call on WEED CHAINS which are available after the needs of the armed forces have been supplied. . . . Battle Wagons

When Japan attacked at Pearl Harbor we had 17 battlechips in service and 10 building. We were making preparations but the war did not wait. These 32 battle wagons cost American taxpayers three billion dollars for a two ocean navy. The war seemed far away then.

Now fifty million Americans have a personal stake in this war. It has been brought home to them. That's why everyone is increasing purchases of War Bonds.

Save Tin Cans

A plea to housewives to continue preparation and salvage of tin cans in areas where tin can campaigns are authorized by the War Production Board was made today by the regional WPB conservation manager.

Even the tin can collection in some areas isn't exactly what it should be, the urgent war need for the super-critical tin contained in cans has not diminished in the slightest.

The need for tin is greater than ever. Our job now is to perfect collection methods and to salvage every can possible.

Housewives are urged to continue to observe these simple rules: Open both ends of the can. Wash thoroughly. Remove paper labels. Flatten the can merely by stepping on it. Deposit in a separate box or container for collection.

Throughout New Mexico can collections are encouraged by WPB. In many areas, collections are being made by drivers for bottling companies after local salvage committees have gathered the cans at a central point.

J. P. White, Jr., Roswell, Vice-President, has been named chairman of Resolutions' Committee. Standing committee chairmen are: State Land, Floyd W. Lee; State Tax, Lee S. Evans; Legislative, Burton Roach; Public Relations, A. D. Brownfield; Traffic, Albert K. Mitchell; Reward, Tom Clayton; Wildlife, G. W. Evans; Public Lands, J. Sherwood Culbertson; National Forest, Geo. A. Godfrey; Tariff, B. B. McDonald.

Among the many problems to be discussed, the Protein Feed Situation will take a foremost part, together with transportation problems which will probably occur the latter part of December and January due to heavy cattle shipments expected at that time.

Nearly 100 new applications for membership will be voted into the Association. All cattlemen are urged to attend the meeting whether they are members or not, Hayward said.

BONDS OVER AMERICA

Paying tribute to its fighting men who fell on foreign fields during World War I, Indiana has erected at its capital of Indianapolis this striking War Memorial.

Hoosier Monument

Your War Memorial; U. S. War Bonds

Our dead have left their own memorials; the starved and hounded people of captive Europe can do little more than hope and pray, but to free Americans is left the choice of their own future.

NEED FOR UNITED EFFORT

To win this war we must have unity of effort. "The do-as-I-tell-you-not-as-I-do" attitude will never mobilize national power or bring speedy victory.

This need for united effort was emphasized by the President in his recent call for a 40 per cent reduction in the use of government automobiles. Take the use of tires and gasoline by various federal agencies. A report of the Joint Committee on Reduction of Non-Essential Federal Expenditures says:

"Despite the growing automobile crisis, both in tires and gasoline, the investigation of the committee indicates that for the first four months of the present fiscal year the various agencies of the government, exclusive of the Army and Navy, continued for the most part to use as many passenger cars, to drive as many miles, and to consume about as much gasoline as did these agencies in a comparable period of the previous year, notwithstanding the efforts of the government to reduce the consumption of gasoline and conserve rubber.

Same Standard for All

"The committee believes that the same standard of strictly essential driving should be applicable to government employees as now applies to individual citizens."

The committee gives figures upon which its conclusions are based. In the last fiscal year the government owned 17,395 passenger automobiles, exclusive of the Army and Navy and exclusive of trucks and motorcycles. It now owns 10,033 passenger automobiles.

In the last fiscal year the cost of operating these automobiles was $4,249,602. According to the use of the first four months of the present year the cost will be $3,924,069. In the last fiscal year these government-owned cars traveled 203,530,230 miles. According to the first four months of this year, government-owned cars will travel, this fiscal year, 199,030,030 miles and consume 12,853,533 gallons of gasoline.

The report also quotes from a statement of the Director of the Budget, indicating that "until now government cars have had an average of six and one-half tires each." The Committee's finding "that the same standard of strictly essential driving" should apply to government employees as is applied to individual citizens is too downright sensible to require discussion.

Why More Payrollers?

Another example of the need for united effort is found in the problem before Congress as to whether excessive profits on war contracts require new bureaus and additional payrollers or whether the Department of Internal Revenue can do the job.

The average citizen struggling with high taxes and a shortage of manpower answers: If necessary, amend the Internal Revenue Act for this purpose.

To win the war we must spend money and use materials wisely. We have enough manpower to do our essential jobs, but we have neither the manpower nor the taxes to hire special payrollers to do work that can be done better by established agencies.

AMERICA

These words from a recent advertisement are worth reading twice: "A drum, a little red wagon, a picture book; these are gifts that bring joy to a boy's heart. But you can give him a far greater gift. You can give him the right to live as a free American."

Free Enterprise

It took Germany nine years to build enough plants and equipment to fight this war; it took Japan 25 years, Russia 29 years. American industry, under free enterprise, has done it in two years.

Ration Book No. 4

The red and blue stamps, which are for meat, dairy products and processed foods as at present, will be used in conjunction with red and blue tokens, the latter to be introduced early in 1944, and given by merchants in change. Green stamps will be used on an "interim basis," with blue processed food stamps, in much the same manner as the brown stamps in Book 0 are being used this month in the meat-fats program.

Twelve of the 98 unit stamps, printed in black, are designated for sugar. An equal number are marked for coffee, which is no longer rationed. These and 72 others, marked "spares," will serve for any additional foods rationed, the OPA declared, its purpose being to provide for any contingency, since the new books are expected to serve for two years, as compared to 4 or 6 months for previous books. The cost of printing is about the same, around $1,500,000, it was stated.

Save Deer Skins For War

The State Game Department today again called attention of all big game hunters to the fact that deer and elk hides are urgently needed for military use. General Conservation Order M-310 of the War Production Board froze all deer skin leather for military purposes.

Hunters are urged to channel their deer skins into the trade so that they may be processed and used for the armed forces. State Game Warden Elliott Barker said, "In New Mexico, dry skins of deer and elk may be sold. Practically all hide buyers will accept your deer skin, and it will then be made available for war material. Turn it in to your local dealer."

'Forts' Raid Schweinfurt
By Doris Fleeson

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangements with Woman's Home Companion.)

I was lucky. By chance I walked right into preparations for one of the greatest bombing missions in history. This was the vast raid on Schweinfurt. I saw our boys take off and I saw them return.

The small world of a bomber base in England is organized with utter precision toward one end—to get those planes off the ground, over the target and home. One mission follows another and everybody knows exactly what to do or is told. Outwardly it is calm, but in the background is always one brutal fact: some of our aircraft do not return. When the planes are out on a dangerous mission, voices get shriller and men appear reluctant to abandon one another's company.

Americans and the RAF share their secret skills but not their way of life. Our base is a piece of America—food, equipment, wise-cracks. Few English faces are seen and these are usually liaison officers.

Everybody knew that the coming raid on Schweinfurt was to be something special, that there were some of the most important targets ever bombed anywhere. The Nazis are aware how vital ball bearings are to the war and the plants that make them had been tucked deep into the mountain folds of Bavaria. The Nazis knew Allied fighter planes could not carry enough gasoline to protect the invading bombers which would have to face Nazi fighter fire for hundreds of miles. But Fortresses have firepower to protect themselves and they have a bomb-ight to hit any target. Months ago their crews were handed nomenclature maps of the Schweinfurt targets to study. In English ciphers they practiced over and over again formations which would doom the factories.

Restricted to Post.

Finally the crews were briefed. But weather forced cancellation. So important was security on this raid, Colonel Harding restricted to the post every man who attended the briefing, gave special orders that they were not to discuss it among themselves and cut off telephones. Colonel Harding gave the group final instructions. A West Pointer from West Virginia, he has ice-blue eyes, a quiet manner and a stilet of medals. The latest of these is a silver star for gallantry and achievement in leading bombing raids over enemy territory.

"Don't let the boys tell you they aren't scared on raids," Colonel Harding told me. "Nobody could be such a fool as not to be frightened when flak and fighters come at him. I've been scared plenty."

I was assured by the boys that Harding's briefing technique was okay. One thing the boys can't stand, they told me, was what they called "drip." They know what they are fighting for. What they want to be told is why the target is so important, so that if they get hurt they can feel it's worth it.

Major John Kidd of Cleveland led the group off the field. Three squadron leaders seconded him. "Sweating it out" is the air force's incoherently accurate phrase for the busyness of waiting for the planes to return from a raid. The waiting is undramatic but very wearing.

"Happy to Go Alive."

Outwardly all went on as before after the bombers roared down the runway at the base. Another mission went out and returned. It was a milk run over Holland. Another was briefed but canceled. After many long hours, the Fortresses came back. The gleam of a major's oak leaf on a red top perched at a rakish angle over a grinning Irish face was the herald. The wearer of the oak was Major Egan; his simple heartfelt greeting was: "I'm very happy to be alive."

Then from all mouths tumbled out stories of the man-made hell they had been through, beginning hours before the target was reached. All agreed that nothing like it in size, venom and duration was ever before experienced in aerial warfare. All around were fighters, Forts blowing up in flame, and the thunder of guns without end. The Nazis arched strings of blinding new rocket shells.

The Fortresses battled German fighters for 3½ hours—the longest engagement in the history of heavy bombings—but they had gone over their target and got away.

A measure of the raid was the volatility of the crews who made it. Their talk lasted through their days of rest and was still going strong when I left the base. Crews are encouraged to talk, of course, not only to help get it out of their systems but to keep intelligence officers fully informed. What they say might help greatly in planning the next encounter with the Nazis.

GOOD WORD ON EGGS

If you like eggs—fried, scrambled, or Easter—this may interest you.

The high price of eggs will soon come tumbling down. This Humpty-Dumpty event will be brought about by the sale of five million cases of government eggs.

War Food administration, responding to the pradding of critics, admits that it was putting too many eggs in one basket, for military and lend-lease requirements, at the expense of civilian requirements.

Release of this tremendous quantity of eggs won't alarm the housewife, but worries War Food experts because it might discourage production for next year.

Meantime, War Food and OPA are rowing over the price to be paid for these five million cans of cold storage eggs. WFA officials, protecting the producers, want a higher price for cold storage eggs than fresh eggs.

OPA, thinking of the housewife, says: "This is the first time we ever heard that eggs become more valuable as they get older!"

But War Food stands firm on the principle that the old eggs should bring more money. Their reason is that the old eggs were stored by dealers who were playing the usual seasonal game of holding for a rise in price, without realizing that the government was going to step in and take over at the fixed price.

In other words, War Food exports are trying to hand dealers come of the speculative profit they might have gotten, while OPA—trying to protect the consumer—wants to hold the price down.

The incide government egg debate is still raging.

COLD WINTER AHEAD

Whatever you burn this winter—oil or coal—it is still going to be sold.

The public has the impression that it is only coal which is short now. Actually, oil is even shorter, rations for this winter being based on a 24 per cent cut below pre-war consumption.

The fuel situation is so bad that OPA exports covered months ago recommended coupon rationing of coal. A warm debate followed between OPA and the Solid Fuel Coordinator, in which latter, supported by the coal industry, opposed rationing.

But OPA exports believed coal would be short this winter and, during the summer, laid plans for coupon rationing. In August, they were all ready to go to press with millions of coupon books.

Finally, however, the coal coordinator vetoed the plan. Now it is too late to impose coupon rationing—partly because there is not sufficient time to print the coupons and give out instructions to local boards; also because some coal is already supposed to be distributed—iniquitably—to consumers.

Thus we shall have to rely on "dealer rationing." This does not limit consumption—only strings out the supply in dribbles, making a greater delivery tank without decreasing consumption.

The public believes that oil is plentiful compared with coal, and OPA is now bogged with applications for reconversion from coal to oil. These applications are being rejected, since the impression of abundance of oil is merely an illusion.

FEWER TIRES FOR ALLIES

One thing not discussed at the Moscow conference was rubber tires. If the question had been raised, Russia would have been told that tires on Lend-Lease will have to be reduced sharply.

Reason is that U. S. trucks and buses are wearing their tires down to the fabric, and Jesse Jones' long hollyhock synthetic tires are falling behind schedule. There is plenty of new rubber, but a dire lag in tire production.

Meanwhile, bus and truck transportation has never been more vital. Last year inter-city buses carried more passengers than the railroads' (600 million compared with 600 million), though they travelled fewer miles.

If they are crippled, the weight would be thrown back on the already struggling railroads. Also, many places would be without transportation, since 54,000 communities have no rail service.

The army, OPA, ODT and the rubber director's office are putting their heads together to find a way out. One solution will be a reduction of tires shipped on Lend-Lease. Russia alone was promised 500,000 this year, in addition to 2,000,000 already delivered.

Hunt Rogers, professional sleuth, and Harry Madison, an amateur detective, go to Mazatlan, Mexico, to solve what they believe to be Elsa's murder. On arrival they find that Elsa's party had preceded them by plane. During a feast at Sam Chatfield's ranch (Sam is Elsa's father) Rogers questions the guests about the death of Sam's sister. All have a motive. They go to the courtyard and while watching the dancing Maria announces the death of James Chesebro. The Mexican police arrive and examine the body. Death was the result of a knife thrust.

CHAPTER X

"Why, then, did the others push you forward as if you knew something?"

"I go over the house seeking my pay; they do not have the money in the kitchen, sir. It is for this reason they push me forward."

"So you were wandering about the house, then?" said Lombardo.

"What did you see?"

"I am walking in a place, sir, which Maria tells me is the passage-way that leads to the room where the gentleman was murdered. There I see a man enter a door, sir, which must be the door to the room. For I have described it well to Maria, sir."

"Who was the man, Pedro?"

"That I do not know, sir."

"Was he wearing a sombrero?"

"Yes, sir."

"What kind?"

"It was large and black. I think it was of felt. The head and shoulders were in shadow, sir, but in the hand he carried a whip."

"Was he Mexican or American, Pedro?"

"Sir, I do not know."

"What kind of a whip did he have? You said he carried a whip."

"It was about six feet long, sir, and Pedro's thin brown hands measured a space in air about eighteen inches in length. It was, I think, what you call a quirt, sir."

"A quirt, sir?" Lombardo turned to look meaningfully at Alvarez, his eyebrows arched, his lips parted slightly. He turned back to the pulque man. "Do you see among us, Pedro, such a man as you have described? I warn you to be very careful; these are gentlemen."

Pedro's sharp little eyes, to my alarm, were suddenly upon me; he inspected me carefully, then shifted to Sam Chatfield who sat beside me. Finally he quitted our host's short figure and moved to Hinton Rogers. He dismissed him with a glance, then came back to me, as if some doubt lingered in his mind. "I did not see the face, sir," Pedro reminded Lombardo.

Hinton Rogers spoke for the first time. "It is impossible, Senor Lombardo. Senor Madison was with me when Maria came with the news of the murder."

"And all of the evening, dear?"

I answered the question. "No," I said. "But the remainder of the time I was with either Senor Rumble, or Senorita Chatfield."

"Yes, of course," said Lombardo. "Pedro is wrong." He waved the pulque man away abruptly, saying sternly, "It is enough, Pedro; you are mistaken about this man. He pointed to me. "Do not make any more mistakes."

"Yes, sir," replied Pedro, springing up from the chair and vanishing in the shadows near the door.

"The quirt," Lombardo said, "I do not understand. Was it the purpose to whip the victim and then kill him? The lashes on the face, Miguel, were they made so recently?" he turned to Doctor Cruz.

"They were made much earlier, Guilo."

"How did he get them? Did the one who gave them to him return, and this time kill him with a knife?"

No one answered the question. "Is there anyone else among the servants whom you wish to interrogate?" inquired our host.

"No, sir, I am interested now in other things."

"Come this way, then," said Sam Chatfield, leading us from the kitchen.

An atmosphere of gloom seemed to pervade the huge living room when we entered. Margaret and Dwight Nichols sat with Berta, talking quietly. Elsa and Reed Barton had withdrawn to a shadowy corner. George Rumble sat on the bench of the grand piano smoking.

"I think," began Sam Chatfield hesitantly, "that Senor Lombardo has a few questions to ask."

"Only a very few, ladies and gentlemen," Lombardo said, bowing courteously.

"The Senorita," and his eyes sought out Elsa in the background, "if I may, please; I wish to ask of her a question."

Elsa moved forward, still wearing the colorful costume in which she had danced with Reed Barton, and stood before Lombardo.

"A thousand pardons, Senorita," began Lombardo, yielding to an obvious embarrassment that swept over him. "I ask the question: Have you worn the costume of the China Poblana all evening?"

"Yes, of course," Elsa replied, somewhat puzzled. "I put it on at dusk."

"Then you cannot be the one," said Lombardo.

George Rumble got up from his seat on the piano bench. He walked over to Lombardo.

"Elsa is out of it; you can't tangle her in this thing. And all I want to say is what about a sombrero? I notice mine is missing from the rack near the front door. I don't accuse anybody of stealing it, you understand; but what about a sombrero?"

Lombardo turned to Alvarez and said in Spanish, "Fetch the sombrero from the room, please." He turned back to Rumble. "In a moment, Senor Rumble, I will show you the sombrero I speak of." Alvarez returned promptly with the black felt sombrero.

"Do you recognize the sombrero, Senor?" Lombardo inquired, holding it out to Rumble.

"Sure. It's my hat. A while ago when I was out that way I missed it."

Rogers answered. "We found it in the room where Chesebro was murdered."

A curious expression came over Rumble's face; the dark eyes seemed to grow darker.

As he stood there before us the chief of police conceived an idea; it was first observable in a narrowing of his large dark eyes, a cocking of his head.

He summoned Alvarez with a lift of his chin and said in Spanish, "The pulque man who is called Pedro; bring him here at once, Luis," and he indicated a spot on the floor directly in front of him with a down turned thumb as the place to which he desired the pulque man to be brought.

Alvarez vanished and the occupants of the room relaxed. Cigarettes were passed and a nervous attempt at light conversation was made by Berta while we waited for the return of the pulque man. She was smiling and almost gay, although in the depths of her dark eyes there was a look of fear. We had not long to wait, however, for Alvarez soon returned, clutching the frightened Pedro by a thin arm.

"It is lucky for you, Pedro, that you are still here," began Lombardo. "I have more questions to ask you."

"I am here, sir," replied the man, "because I have not yet received the money for my pulque."

Lombardo ignored the frank statement, and requested the man to look about him. "Here are other persons, Pedro," he directed. "Look closely, and tell me if any of these others is the man you saw wearing the sombrero and carrying the whip. Make no mistakes."

Pedro did as he was bidden, but shyly and with evident embarrassment. Dwight Nichols stood up the better to be viewed, and he pulled George Rumble by the sleeve to line him up alongside himself and Reed Barton.

"I see only the back, sir; I do not see the face," he repeated.

Lombardo was patient. He picked up Rumble's black sombrero from a chair where it rested and held it out to Pedro. "Is this the sombrero the man wore?" he asked.

Pedro put his hands behind him and shook his head. "I saw only the back, sir," he repeated monotonously.

Lombardo had an idea. "We will go to the place where you saw the man, Pedro," he announced. "The gentlemen in turn will put on the sombrero, and carry the whip, and you will say which, if any, looks like the man you saw. Where is the whip?"

"There's a whip there on the table under my hat," Elsa remarked casually. "One I've carried with me riding." She indicated a table against the wall near the door. Alvarez went to the table and brought back a quirt I recognized as the one Elsa had used that morning in her savage attack upon Chesebro. Lombardo took it.

"Yours?" he asked, gesturing toward Elsa.

"No; not mine. It belongs here on the rancho. I found it, when I wanted a whip, on the rack outside where the hats hang."

"Ah, so?" Lombardo turned the quirt about in his hands, examining it for a moment. Finally and without releasing his hold he held it out toward Pedro. "Is this the whip you saw, Pedro?"

The pulque man took one quick, fascinated glance, then looked away. "I do not know, sir; there was a whip in the hand."

"Come; the gentlemen, please; the ladies, no. Follow me," Lombardo spoke quickly. He led the way toward the sombrero room where the body of Chesebro still lay in its huge mound within the dim pool of candlelight.

"Where were you when you saw the man enter the room?" Lombardo demanded.

"I am here, sir," he answered, pointing with a trembling finger to a tall piece of furniture against the wall. "I hear the man coming, and I feel I have trespassed where I should not go. So I conceal myself there and wait for him to pass."

"Very well, Pedro; you stand there now, and one of the gentlemen will put on the sombrero and carry the whip and walk past you."

"I did not see the face, sir; I see only the back," the pulque man reminded him as he took his station.

"Now, which of you will be the first?" Lombardo asked, ignoring the man's remark.

Reed Barton stepped forward, still dressed in the costume of the Charro, except for his own sombrero which he had left among the others on the rack near the front door.

"Ah, so? Thank you, sir," Lombardo gave him Rumble's hat, which Reed set atop his head, greatly increasing the height of his tall figure. "Now the whip," said Lombardo, and that was given him. "And now, Pedro, the gentleman comes from this direction and walks to the door, opens it and enters, is it not so?"

"Yes, sir."

Reed withdrew and began a slow but steady walk down the dim passageway to the door behind which lay the body of the murdered man. I drew back against the wall beside Rogers, whose body was crowded close against mine. I felt a tenuousness in his muscles and realized with what extraordinary alertness his eyes followed the tall figure of Reed Barton as he re-enacted the dread prologue to the death of Chesebro. Slowly, inevitably, he approached the door to the room. Rogers had become so intent upon this re-enactment that he was drawn a few steps after him, studying the figure, his every action and movement. As Reed touched the doorknob, when we all were intent upon this last act before we should turn to demand of the pulque man his verdict, there was a sudden rattling sound behind us. It was followed by a rapid shuffle of feet in loose guanches, and before our astonished gaze as we turned, Pedro, the pulque man, was running away on foot as his thin legs could carry him.

Nor did we find him later that night after the police had taken their departure, their questions exhausted, their plan of re-enactment of the murder scene abruptly ended by the departure of Pedro, although, directed by Sam Chatfield, we searched diligently. There was an old man. The others at last had scattered. Only Hinton Rogers and I lingered in the patio.

"What do you make of it, Hunt?" I inquired, meaning the night's tragic happening and the terrible escape of the star witness. He was slow to reply. At last he said:

"Did you see the whip at any time during Reed's walk down the dim passageway? He carried it in his hand, you know."

"I saw him take the whip."

"But did you see it in his hand as he walked?"

"No."

"Does that not strike you as interesting?"

"It means much, I think; it explains what has happened. In the kitchen when Pedro described the appearance of Chesebro's murderer, he put the whip in his hand. Pedro took his stand at the spot where he says he observed the death march, so to speak. But the whip is not visible carried quietly at the side."

"Therefore, Harry, it is simple to reason that Pedro either lied when he said the man carried a whip, or he saw him elsewhere in the house at a time and place where the whip was plainly visible."

We sat together in the patio turning over the possibilities that lay close to the fact, the corollaries that might flow from it. Did Pedro, therefore, also hold the secret of that other murder far to the north of us in California and distant now in time by more than a year? Finally, I said what was in my thoughts.

"Reed Barton?"

Hinton Rogers did not reply at once. He leaned forward on the bench, his hands upon his knees, staring into the shadows at our feet.

Adjusting Carburetor, Plugs, Saves Gasoline

Tractor Engines Should Run at Top Efficiency

With the gasoline situation becoming increasingly serious due to demands for gas for combat uses, farmers are being asked by the War Food Administration to cut their use of tractor fuel to a minimum.

While this request may seem extreme to farmers who have had their tractors stranded now and then by dried-up fuel tanks, W. C. Krueger, extension agricultural engineer at Rutgers university, points out that many tractors could be operated on 15 to 25 per cent less fuel through correct carburetor adjustment, lubrication, and proper setting of spark plugs and magnets.

He emphasizes that when it takes 100 to 120 gallons of fuel to plow a 40-acre field, 40 to 80 gallons to disc that field, 60 to 80 to haul a grain drill over it and 30 to 50 gallons to harrow it, a 25 per cent reduction in fuel becomes important.

Krueger offers the following suggestions for improving tractor efficiency:

1. It is a common error to believe that the leaner the mixture the less the fuel used. Too lean a mixture wastes fuel, causes over-heating, invites valve trouble. Best fuel economy results from getting carburetor at a compromise between too lean a mixture for idling and a slightly rich mixture representing maximum power adjustment. This setting can only be determined by trial under load.

2. Magneto timing is often responsible for over-heating and uneconomical operation. Since the method of setting varies with the tractor, follow the instruction book closely.

3. Set spark plug and magneto point gaps to recommended clearance occasionally. Put in new plugs when electrodes become worn.

4. Check valve tappets two or three times a season. Improper clearance ruins more valves than all other causes put together.

5. Never chuff off a tractor immediately after running at full load. Valve warping is often caused by not letting the engine idle a short time before stopping so that the valves may cool gradually.

6. Operate the tractor at full load as much of the time as possible. It costs nearly as much to operate a tractor at half load as it does at full load. Maximum draw-bar efficiency occurs when the load is heavy enough to cause wheel slippage in field operations approximately 10 per cent.

men in 1924. So his words carry weight.

"We took a fine team to Cleveland," Miller remarked recently, "and Notre Dame beat us although we had a fine line and a good set of backs. The team I saw that day was the greatest in the school's history. I believe it could have beaten any college or professional team put together."

Leahy views each game with gloomy foreboding. His pre-game outlook is dark and melancholy. When things are beginning to look too bright for his team he begins remembering what Holy Cross did to Boston College last year. He remembers, too, that bleak day in 1935 when a three-beaten Northwestern came through to whip an undefeated Notre Dame team which was on its way to a national championship.

Leahy doesn't have to remind himself not to grow too optimistic. His old thoughts are for the benefit of others who are overly cheerful.

Just as we think Leahy is the coach of the year, so we believe Angelo Bertelli is the player of the year. Though he didn't have the opportunity to finish out the season, Bertelli proved himself to be one of the most brilliant players in Notre Dame history.

In our opinion, Notre Dame, with its superb line, its greater backfield and its dazzling speed, stood out as the best college team we've ever seen.

The Possibilities

Dill Alexander, Georgia Tech coach, whose team played both Notre Dame and Navy, declared that the Irish could beat any team he had seen this season 60 to 0 if Notre Dame kept the pressure on.

Veteran football writers of the Midwest have expressed the belief that Notre Dame, with Bertelli in action, could beat the Bears and Redskins. Undoubtedly the South Bend school is very well equipped with the elements of the T-formation demands at its best. But to beat the Bears would be asking a great deal from any college team. We wouldn't know about that.

Another thing—Johnny Lujack, the young man who replaced Bertelli, is more than a fair ball player. As an 18-year-old, even Bertelli was probably no more promising. There isn't much that Bertelli did that Lujack can't do. He can pass, run and tackle. In the Army game he answered the question of how he would react in the clutch. The answer was favorable.

SPORTS SHORTS

Professional football teams, playing away from home, receive a flat guarantee of $5,000 or 40 per cent of net gate receipts.

The Cardinals were not the first club to make more errors than runs in the World Series. Connie Mack's Athletics made nine errors against McGraw's Giants in 1905, and scored only three runs in five games.

A New York statistician discloses that Whitlaway earned $4.17 a yard in the 60 races he ran while piling up $541,161.

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

EVEN while Coach Frank Leahy of Notre Dame was somberly forecasting that the Irish-Northwestern tilt could "go either way," 91 of the nation's top grid experts were casting 91 first-place ballots for Notre Dame in the weekly poll to determine the country's best football team.

And that, by the way, was the first time any football team ever received unanimous backing.

Notre Dame's football status was summed up very clearly by Lieut. Comdr. Edgar ("Rip") Miller, Navy line coach, who said that the 1943 lineup is the best of all Notre Dame teams. . . . "probably the greatest in collegiate or professional history."

Miller, as may be remembered, was one of the Seven Mules who cleared the way for the Four Horsemen in 1924. So his words carry weight.

"We took a fine team to Cleveland," Miller remarked recently, "and Notre Dame beat us although we had a fine line and a good set of backs. The team I saw that day was the greatest in the school's history. I believe it could have beaten any college or professional team put together."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

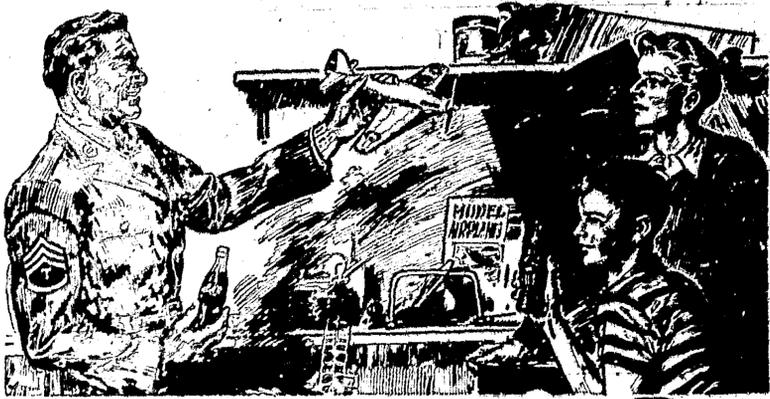

It was not until almost 300 years after Columbus that real commercial use was made of rubber. Native rubber articles—play balls, bowls, bottles, hats, cups and shoes—were brought to Spain and Portugal from various parts of Central and Northern South America years before the commercial merits of rubber were realized. A rapidly growing army of more than 500 rubber-growing specialists from the U. S. is now in the Amazon rubber district expanding the collection of crude rubber and conquering the last disease that has taken severe toll of the jungle trees.

NOVEMBER
Is "Christmas Mailing Month" This Year

Delivery of the annual flood of Christmas gifts and cards on time, always a serious problem, "will be more than a problem this year—it will be an impossibility—unless Christmas mailings are made largely in November," Postmaster General Frank C. Walker has warned.

"Transportation facilities are burdened to the limit with war materials and personnel, and the Postal Service has sent more than 31,000 experienced employees into the armed forces," Mr. Walker said. "The only solution to the Christmas problem is: MAIL IN NOVEMBER. Mark your parcels, 'Do Not Open Until Christmas.' That is the only way to avoid disappointment not only for many civilians but also for millions of soldiers who are still in this country. It will also avail us to handle a small volume of light, last-minute mailings, such as cards, up to December 10.

The volume of mail now is far above any previous records. More than 200,000 extra temporary employees normally are employed to help with the holiday postal rush. This year, the extra employees will be largely women and high school boys and girls who are unable to work the long hours usually required and whose work will be relatively slow. Another reason for mailing earlier is that retail stores are short-handed, and purchasers can avoid shopping in crowded stores.

Postmaster General Walker observed that this warning is not an attempt to tell the public what to do; it is only an advance notification of what will happen if they will mail late.
