CARRIZOZO, NEW MEXICO, FRIDAY, DECEMBER 10, 1943.

NUMBER 21

"We Pledge Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands; one Nation, indivisible, with Liberty and Justice for all."

CAPT. G. L. STRAUSS

Flier Crowds Lots of Action Into 23 Years

"The white cliffs of Dover are the most beautiful sight in the world, and the English Channel the widest stretch of water in the world"--lying home from bombing missions over the continent, in the opinion of Captain George L. Strauss, formerly of 213 Bennett Avenue, who has recently returned to the European theatre of action after several months in the United States, where he was making a confidential report in Washington.

Captain Strauss, although only 23 years of age, has led a more colorful life than most men do in a lifetime. Prior to his return to the United States for his report he was a pilot officer with the Royal Air Force, in which he qualified as a navigator, bombardier, gunner and aerial tactician. He participated in every major raid over Trondheim, Cologne, Lebeck, Rostov, Bremen and many others.

At the age of 15, Strauss set out on his career as a soldier of fortune by enlisting in the C.M.T.C. He then served four years in the Navy, visiting such places as Hawaii, Panama, Cuba and Trinidad. Then, at the age of 20, he served in the Canadian Motorcycle Regiment, Irish Fusiliers and the Sixteenth Scottish Regiment, not to forget six months spent as leader of a gun crew in the Norwegian Navy.

Upon the entry of the United States in the present war, Captain Strauss then transferred from the R. A. F. to the U. S. A. A. F., receiving the rank of first lieutenant.

"Contrary to many reports," Strauss states, "German anti-aircraft fire or flak is highly effective up to certain altitudes and rapidly improving."

"Raids over the continent," he explained, "are becoming so terrific that in one instance there were so many planes in the sky that it took me 45 minutes to get over the target once we were at our objective."

In a lighter mood, Strauss concluded a letter received here by stating that "we really appreciate our bombing missions by daylight. The R. A. F. flies by night so naturally that leaves all the good looking girls for us to take out when we are off duty at night." -- Long Beach, California-Daily.

Private "Joe" Martinez

(LABOR)

Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table never performed more glamorous feats of heroism than those presented to us almost every day in the press. Among the stories we like best is that of Private "Joe" Martinez, who, at 22, was working as a common laborer in the Colorado sugar beet fields.

No one ever thought of "Joe" as a hero. He was just "another Mexican." He's dead now, killed while fighting the Japs on Attu Island in the Aleutians, but he has been posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, the most coveted of all decorations. Here is what he did:

After the Americans landed, the Japs put up a mighty stiff fight. "Joe" led his battalion against the withering fire. (Where the officers were at that moment is not stated.) The Yanks made some progress, cleaned out some foxholes. Then the advance bogged down.

Once more "Joe" the sugar beet laborer, led the way. Up the steep slope he went, emptied his rifle at the Japs and fell mortally wounded. Inspired by his gallantry, his comrades pushed the attack to a successful conclusion. Somehow stories of that kind strengthen our faith in democracy. America is not dependent on some "upper class" to defend it. A "Joe" Martinez will pop up when he's needed.

Capt. Bradley Smith

Capt. and Mrs. Bradley Smith arrived here from Fort Riley, Kansas, last Friday night and spent Saturday with Mr. Smith's parents, his sisters, Meddames R. E. Hemphill and Odell Baker and families. They left on their return trip last Sunday morning. Mrs. Hemphill and small son Eddie Bob went to Newman, Texas to meet Mr. Hemphill, who is in the U. S. Navy at San Diego and will be home on leave.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ferguson of Nogal Mesa and Mr. and Mrs. Champ Ferguson of Capitan were visitors in town Wednesday.

DO YOU know the Kaleidoscope quilt pattern? A block is shown here. It is put together so that from every angle it makes a different design. One of these fascinating quilts made in two tones of blue and white started all the sewing and sawing for the attractive bed nook you see in the sketch. The bed and woodwork are painted white. The built-in closets and book shelves at each side of the bed are connected with a scalloped cornice of thin wood. Widths of blue gingham are stitched together for the full curtain at the head of the bed and for the under spread.

NOTE—Mrs. Spears has prepared a pattern for the Kaleidoscope quilt (No. 200) and for the cornice scallops (No. 207) to be cut with a key hole or jig saw. Patterns are 10 cents each and may be ordered direct from:

Yule Time Sees Birth of Legends

December derives its name from the fact that it was the tenth month in the old Roman Calendar. The Saxons called it "winter-monath," but after their conversion to Christianity this was changed to Hellig-monath or Holy Month, in honor of the nativity of Christ.

Many queer customs are observed all over the world at the beginning of the month, one of the oddest being that at Craig-madden, Stirlingshire, where there is a triangular hole beneath a number of Druidical stones. Women who can't crawl through this believe that they will avoid dying childless. Curiously enough, a similar custom prevails in the Temple of Malabar Point, Bombay, where there is a narrow opening in the rocks. Men who squeeze through, are supposed to leave their sins behind, while women believe that they will conceive children.

Married men must be careful when choosing holly for the home decoration. If smooth leaves predominate, the wife will be mistress for the next 12 months; if prickly, she must play "second fiddle" to her spouse. Whatever you do, allow no new leather in any form to enter your house during Christmas week; if you do it is sure to bring ill-luck with it. The first thing brought home on Christmas Day must be something green; and the first person to enter must be a male. Even a tomcat, if in aid, can be relied on to bring luck with him! Anyone who draws water from a well on Christmas morning draws a good fortune for his family. If a cricket chirrup on your hearth on the fateful day, you may look forward to the coming year without a fear, for of all luck-bringers at Yuletide the cricket is king. Many people keep open their ears on Christmas night for the crowing of the cock.

Christmas Spirit

Although the time for the "adoption" of an overseas serviceman has passed, Joyce Reynolds, movie starlet, demonstrates the enthusiasm with which the first drive of its kind was carried on. Thousands of Yule packages were deposited in Uncle Sam's mail pouches in response to a campaign undertaken by a California newspaper.

Tables Laden at Yorkshire Yule

Christmas Eve is known as "Frumity Night" in the North Riding of Yorkshire, England, on account of the delicious dish always served at the Christmas Eve supper. This dish is made from wheat stewed ("creaved" is the local word) in the oven for several hours, then boiled with milk in a saucepan, thickened with flour, sweetened with molasses and served with cinnamon.

Among the many former customs existing in Yorkshire are those governing a Christmas tea. To begin with, there is sugar-cured ham at the top of the table; the pork-pie, so golden brown outside with its pattern of pastry leaves, and so firm and luscious inside, with clear, savory jelly filling up the cranics, that the pale imitations called pork-pies elsewhere seem really a sort of insult; the spiced loaf, cut thin, and buttered with the freshest of fresh butter; the Christmas cake in the center, made last October at latest, and growing richer and richer in its dark solitude ever since; flaky mince-pies bursting with dried fruits and apples and spices; home-made bread; hot Sally Lunn teacakes that come in later, all hot and hot, making everybody, however full, find room for one bit more—and this no fancy picture. One can imagine no worse punishment for a greedy villain than to sit at a table spread with a Yorkshire Christmas tea, while he gnaws digestive biscuits for ever and ever.

Santa Claus Favors

Use one red apple for each favor. That is the body of Santa Claus. The head is a marshmallow with clove eyes, lipstick nose and lips and rouge cheeks. Stick head to body with a bit of library paste, over stem of apple. Pat paste down center front to middle, also around center, outlining waist. Put a bit of cotton on paste finishing waistcoat. Make a red art paper dunce cap for the head and paste cotton around lower edge and on top.

Prettify Your Basic Dress Or Suit With Glamour Accent

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A MOST encouraging season this for women who needs must keep within a limited clothes budget! If you fortify yourself with a simple basic dress or suit, or both, that you can rely upon to "go places" this winter, it's cheerio to you! To be attired as chic as the next one all you will need is an ample supply of eye-catching accessories that will dress your costume up or dress it down to occasion. The current fashion program revolves around just this—one good cut and one smartly silhouette basic dress, supplemented with as many carefully selected choice and interchangeable accessory items "as thy purse can buy."

So important is the accessory trend that most leading stores and shops employ specialists who will guide and advise us to making perfect selections that will correlate the costume entire into a harmony of color and design. To go sightseeing in a specialized accessory department is a sort of Alice in Wonderland experience. You will be fascinated with what you see. A thrill and a surprise awaits every step of your way.

In your meanderings among these fashion displays you will come across such charming ensembled accessories as a hat-and-boa duet, as shown above to the left in the illustration. The boa of two-toned tulle, copper penny color blended with champagne, casts a cloud of misty loveliness about milady's shoulders and throat. The pert forward-tilted hat takes on a swish of the tulle whimsy. For the little evenings that go to make up a social winter season, this adorable twosome will bring glamour galore to your simple basic dress. You can carry this lovely "set" out in other exquisite color combinations, such as deep fuchsia red with purple. If you are resourceful you can easily make a similar tulle tea yourself. What's more, the dainty diaphanous furbelow on the hat can be made detachable so that upon occasion it can be mounted on a comb and worn as a hair ornament. Yes, indeed, you are supposed to do just such slight-of-hand tricks as this in order to carry out that new slogan for patriots, to "make the most of what you have."

The picture to the right above fairly bubbles over with exciting interest. The story centers about the versatile use of buttons. Take a note of the jeweled button originals down the front of the smart wool jacket. And now for the big thrill! The ornament which this lady of fashion wears so effectively in her hair is made of the same gleaming buttons that fasten the dress! Here's how—simply wire or sew the buttons to a comb top, for it's smart this season, as every fashion-aest woman knows, to ensemble your hairdo to your costume. Comes now the climax to this charming button story in the amazing earrings. They are made of the same identical buttons, and you can do it yourself. Simply only off the plastic chunk of two buttons with pliers. Pry cuttings out of an old pair of earrings. Drop a wee bit of plastic cement into the hollow disks and press buttons into place. These button originals come in 12 jewel tones so you will be able to match them to any costume. By the way, take note of how cleverly the scalloped yoke is finished off with a hand-crochet edge done in yarn perfectly color-matched to the fabric itself. Try it on that wool dress of yours that needs a touch to give it a new-this-year look.

The gay and picturesque bonnet cagglung about the head of the fashionable miss pictured below to the right is a sure and certain gesture toward adding a glamour touch to a young costume. Inspired by a Russian peasant headdress, this model is of bright green felt hand-embroidered in yarn and appliqued with galaxy print. Hoop earrings add a touch of sophistication. And there is nothing equal to a flattering little fur or fur-trimmed chapeau to cast a glamour glow over your entire costume! The chic model shown is of a turquoise suede fabric curmounted with a chous of silver fox. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

White Wool Knit

Here is a white wool knit ensemble of scarf, turtle-neck sweater and matching gloves. It is a real treasure to have when the chill of winter comes on. Being white it has that about it which is very flattering. As illustrated, it is worn with a black tweed suit thus featuring the ever smart and good-looking black and white contrast. The black patent leather shoulder bag with its white stitching tunes to the black and white scheme perfectly.

Moire and Satin Suits For Furlough Brides

Two-piece soft suits of crepe moire, clipper satin or faille, nice one-piece dresses of these attractive materials, look just right for the furlough bride. The departments that make a specialty of catering to brides who want something youthful and not too formal, are showing dresses of this sort that tune perfectly into the wartime wedding picture.

These abound in flattery little ruffles and they make much of sprightly self-fabric bows placed on pockets and at the new to-one-side fastenings. There is quite a little shirring used also and latest fashion reports tell of a revival of pin tucking in costume styling. Saw-tooth edges are a smart detail also, likewise self-fabric floral appliques. Aqua, gray, dusky pink and beige are favored colors, with soft blues the favorite of them all. Dresses of this type will be lovely for little evening affairs during the holidays.

Gloves in Two Colors

Gloves with wide filled cuffs in contrasting color are new in the fabric types. The wide flare cuff lined with a contrasting color is also shown. This new bi-color scheme is repeated in the hat.

For THE 56,000 POUND BOMBER

PHILLIPS produces AVIATION FUEL

WHY DOES PHILLIPS BOTHER with Model Motor Blend Aviation Gasoline . . . which is bought by the pint and used by the medicine-dropper-ful?

The answer is simple: The boy enthusiast of today, flying his three and one-half pound model plane, may be the designer of tomorrow's 200-ton airliner. It is good for the future of aviation that such youths should be encouraged.

Less than ten years ago many of the weapons and materials, which are now so important to us in the fight for freedom, seemed as trivial as pint-size sales of special aviation fuel for nine-ounce midjet engines. At that time some people wondered why Phillips research men sought the secrets of synthetic rubber, when natural rubber was plentiful. They questioned why so much study was devoted to the chemistry of petroleum hydrocarbons.

Today the answer is simple: Phillips is a major producer of butadiene for synthetic rubber . . . and 100 octane aviation gasoline for the Army, Navy, and United Nations air forces. And these synthetic chemicals are only two of the limitless thousands of products which can be made by using petroleum and petroleum gases as a chemical raw material.

That is why we say, every time you see the Phillips 66 Shield, let it remind you that Phillips refineries, in addition to producing gasolines, lubricants, and fuel oils, are also gigantic chemical plants, pouring out weapons for victory.

Save Deer Skins For War

The State Game Department today again called attention of all big game hunters to the fact that deer and elk hides are urgently needed for military use. General Conservation Order M-810 of the War Production Board froze all deer skin leather for military purposes.

Hunters are urged to channel their deer skins into the trade so that they may be processed and used for the armed forces. State Game Warden Elliott Barker said, "In New Mexico, dry skins of deer and elk may be sold. Practically all hide buyers will accept your deer skin, and it will then be made available for war material. Turn it in to your local dealer."

When the number of former Southern Pacific officers and employes in the U. S. fighting forces passed the 12,000 mark, the event was observed by 20,000 of their fellow employes by War Bond purchases, blood pledges for the Red Cross and other wartime activities. This railroad now has a manpower shortage of 10,000. Picture shows President A. T. Mercer officiating at change of service flag markers.

WAR ON ALL FRONTS

Post-War World

By Charles E. Kettering

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with The American Magazine.)

Everybody talks these days about what kind of a world we shall have after the war.

I think we are going to be somewhere in between—and the nature of that in-betweenness is going to depend on how well we—all of us—think and plan as we go along.

But a lot of what passes for "post-war planning" is really "post-war wishing." The way to tell the difference is this: Does the scheme assume that human nature will be different after the war?

Human Race Plods On.

The human race has been around for a couple of million years. I don't know how many thousand wars it has fought during that time.

So, when a plan says that after this war is over everybody is going to be a good neighbor and a nice fellow and so on, I think you can question that.

"Well, even so," say the wishful gazers, "it will be a wonderful world. Look at all the marvelous new inventions made during the war."

I'm an optimist, too, but I like to ask questions. Which of those things was invented during the war? Answer: Not any of them.

Not Much That's New.

Actually, not so very much has come along in the way of new inventions during the war.

But the wishful gazers are not discouraged. They are drawing and designing the most intricate post-war automobiles. They are painting lovely pictures of them.

Everybody seems to be designing post-war cars except the automobile engineers. They are too busy making weapons.

Offhand, I would say that the post-war car will look much more like an automobile than like an egg.

If you think it over, you will see why there cannot be revolutionary changes in familiar American mass-production articles immediately after the war.

After the war, they must first be reconverted to peacetime production, a huge task in itself, which must be accomplished as quickly as possible in order to provide employment and to make up the great shortages that have developed.

PRESIDENT AND NEWSPRINT

Some of the President's newspaper friends who have been consistently for him over a long period of years are now suggesting that this is a good time to turn the other cheek regarding his constant feud with the press.

Actually, a good many bureaucrats have been nibbling at the newsprint problem, but no one has stepped in with any forthrightness to cut red tape and solve the problem.

Not generally realized is the fact that newsprint shortage is due not so much to decreased woodpulp production in the Canadian forests, but to much greater use of cardboard and packing material in sending war supplies abroad.

The plan put forward by newspaper executives friendly to the White House includes:

- 1. Greater use of war prisoners in the Canadian and Maine forests.
2. More equitable distribution of newsprint among publishers.
3. Stricter supervision of cuts by throw-aways, dodgers, comic magazines and newspaper users who have not kept such accurate records of their past consumption.

What the White House will do remains to be seen.

Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed were silent as the train bore them swiftly homewards at the end of their honeymoon.

Mr. Newlywed had spent every available penny on the holiday and his next pay day was a full two weeks off.

But as they neared home the young wife gave a merry laugh. With a frown her husband asked the cause of her merriment.

"I'm going to tell you a secret that will cheer you up, Billy," she said. "Before we went away I hid a ten dollar bill in a jar in the pantry."

"Yes," moaned the dejected spouse, "I know. I found it."

BLACK SOMBREIRO

By CLIFFORD KNIGHT

Elsa, Chatfield, Hollywood artist, is dis-inherited by her Aunt Kitty, who died from an overdose of morphine. Hunt Rogers and Barry Madison go to Mazatlan, Mexico, to solve what they believe to be Kitty Chatfield's murder. On arrival they find that Elsa's party had preceded them by plane. During a festa at the ranch of Elsa's father, Sam Chatfield, James Checero is murdered. Lon-barde, chief of Mexican police, questions Pedro, the village man, who is required to identify the slayer. Pedro, star witness, escapes during re-enactment of the murder. Search for him is made in the mountain country. Lon-barde arrests Reed Barton on suspicion of murdering Checero.

CHAPTER XII

"Buenos dias, senores," he said in Spanish, including the guard in his greeting. The latter saluted.
Sam Chatfield reached an impulsive arm through the bars to shake hands with Reed. "I'm sorry, Barton," he said in English. "I came as soon as I heard the news. Drove in at once. There must be some mistake—unless you've confessed that you did it?"

Reed Barton grinned. "Hardly that, Mr. Chatfield. I didn't kill Checero."

"That's good. Have they treated you all right?"

"Very well, indeed; no complaint."

"I rather think there'll be no cause for complaint, Barton. I'll use my influence, of course. But you and I have powerful friends, and we'll see that you are comfortable as long as you are here. Which I hope will not be long."

"Thank you, Mr. Chatfield. That's very kind of you."

Sam Chatfield thrust his short arm again through the bars and took Reed's hand in a vigorous grip. Rogers and I likewise shook hands with the prisoner, and with assurance that we would stand by him, we took our departure together with Sam Chatfield.

On the sidewalk outside, however, we separated after a brief exchange.

Hunt and I went aboard the Orizaba to discover that Dwight and Margaret were absent in the laugh; the calling master pointed it out to us well up in the Estero del Astillero, but headed back in our direction. It came eventually alongside, and Margaret and Dwight climbed up the ladder to the deck.

"No luck!" said Margaret wearily, looking up to copy the two of us leaning over the rail. "Dwight's little playmate ran away from us."

"I'll say he ran away from us.
No strilo; no sign; no anything.
Saw him break water just once. This is no place, of course, to go fishing for marlin. I guess that particular one wandered into the bay by mistake."

"He stepped upon the deck and leaned his rod against the rail. It was Margaret who detected something unusual in our manner."

"What's happened?" she demanded. Dwight looked sharply at us at her question as if to discover the reason for it.

"Any new development—about last night?" he inquired.

"Rather an awkward development —for Reed Barton," Rogers replied, rubbing the side of his large nose with a forefinger.

"What? Tell us."

"Reed's in jail, charged with the murder of Checero."

Rogers hastened to explain why Reed Barton was in jail, giving them an account of our search for Pedro, the pulque seller, and our visit to Lombardo.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" exclaimed Margaret when he was done.
"That's bad luck. I wonder what Elsa thinks about it."

"I don't know whether she knows it or not," I said. "Sam Chatfield didn't say, when we were talking with him."

"We'll find out, of course, when Elsa comes on board this afternoon," said Margaret. "We're actually going fishing tomorrow, you know."

A hail from the water drew us to the ladder, and Margaret, who was closest, waved both arms in welcome, and called out excitedly:

"Oh, hello! So glad you could come. But—why didn't we send the launch for you? Why, we could just as well as not. I'm sorry."

Greetings from several voices below responded, and, looking over the rail, I discovered a boat containing Bert and Elsa, and on the seat behind them Sam Chatfield and George Rumble, the latter wearing his black sombrero with its silver trimming which glittered in the afternoon sun.

"It's Reed, of course," Elsa said dispiritedly in answer to my comment as I gave her a hand at the top of the ladder.

"We'll have him out in no time," I comforted her.

"That's what Papa says too, but I'm afraid, Barry."

To what lengths of extravagant promise I might have gone at that moment I'll never know, for with a sudden, bewildering sound of breaking water, a huge silvery dark fish leaped from the bay not fifty feet from the Orizaba's deck sides, scooped almost even with the rail in its mighty leap and fell back with a resounding crash. I could hear the snap of his gills, as close as he;

almost, I fancied, I could smell him.
"Come on, you fishermen!" shouted Dwight, making for the ladder.
The rowboat had altered off, its native owner rowing as if for his life, and those of us now intent upon the pursuit poured into the launch, across which the occupants of the rowboat but a few moments before had had to clamber to reach the Orizaba's ladder.

The launch had been rigged for swordfishing. Two leather-cushioned swivel chairs were mounted side by side in the stern of the boat. There were seats behind these for those not engaged in trying for marlin, or who were content to fish over the side. Sam Chatfield had climbed into the seat beside Dwight. He was endeavoring to disengage a rod rigged with heavy tackle which lay alongside on the floor. I helped him with it. George Rumble sat beside me, his huge black sombrero crushed down upon his round skull, so that it would clear the awning overhead.

Dwight glanced up, his outfit ready, and for the first time looked about to see who had come along with him. He recognized Sam Chat-

"Look here, I'm not so keen on visiting that guy down at the jail."

field at his side and smiled, then became solicitous of his welfare.

"Are you comfortable, Sam?" he asked.

"Oh, yes; quite." "Take this cent, Sam. I think it is the better of the two."

"No, thank you, Dwight. I prefer this side. As a matter of fact, I'm going to ask you now if I may sit here tomorrow on our little jaunt up the coast."

"You certainly may, Sam. Take whatever side is most convenient for you."

Rumble removed his huge black sombrero to let the breeze cool his head; his dark oily hair lay close to his round skull. He dropped the hat at our feet where it lay beside a small wrench. Rumble eyed the latter for a moment, then picked it up and turned it thoughtfully about in his hands. Sam Chatfield finished baiting the huge number twelve hook at the end of its steel wire leader, took a firm grasp on his rod and made a cast, sinking back into his chair, which creaked under the strain.

My gaze for the moment was on George Rumble; there was an odd look in his eyes. He was not interested in the cast; his attention seemed to center upon the straining swivel mechanism underneath Sam Chatfield's seat. His gaze came back to the wrench in his hands. He turned it about, then of a sudden dropped it beside his sombrero as if the metal had suddenly become hot.

Looking back on that evening ashore in Mazatlan, I now can see how freighted it was with tragedy, but it began and ended, apparently, as only a gay adventure. Bert and Margaret remained on board, the Orizaba; Elsa, George Rumble and I went ashore together in the launch. Dwight, Rogers and Sam Chatfield had not been ready to go with us, and the launch returned for them.

Elsa had only one purpose, and that to go to the jail to see Reed Barton. She kept pushing us along until finally Rumble halted at a street corner and said, "Look here, I'm not so keen on visiting that guy down at the jail."

"You don't have to go if you don't want to," Elsa retorted. "That guy probably isn't interested in seeing you, either."

"That settles it, sweetheart," Rumble replied in his husky voice.
"Nothing like speaking your mind.
I'll see you later."

"Where?" demanded Elsa.

"Now do I know? I'm going to the hotel and get my things together.

Margaret's orders. See you on the boat, anyhow, if not before."

Rumble stood on the street corner, a curious figure in a yet more curious throng of native life.

"Goodby," said Elsa.

"Goodby, sweetheart."

The jail, standing in all its mediocrity close by the church, its scaling, cracked, pseudo-Gothic exterior softened now by the night's warm shadows, seemed less an eyesore than in the hard light of the sun.

"Elsa," I began, halting on the steps, "perhaps I'd better take you over to the hotel, and I'll call on Reed myself."

"Don't be silly," she said, advancing through the doorway with such precipitate energy that the splendid creature preening his mustaches leaped nimbly to one side to avoid being run down.

But there was no Reed Barton in the jail. Elsa did not at first comprehend the information which was offered in response to our inquiry, and neither did I.

"Por quo no?" she demanded in Spanish of the jail guard.

"El hombre no esta aqui," the man replied. "No se por que no."

"I hope they haven't taken him out and shot him," Elsa said, turning to me, an odd light in her gray eyes, which were now round with apprehension. "They do things like that."

"Forget it," I said. "Your father's influence probably got him out. Dónde esta el hombre?" I inquired of the guard who in reply merely shrugged his shoulders, indicating that he had no idea where Reed was to be found.

We made our way to the plaza where I hoped the old, old Mexican custom once more was being exhibited. But when we arrived only a handful of youthful caballeros encircled the block, and a smaller number of conchitas were moving slowly, lazily in the opposite direction. One caballero, bolder than the rest, halted before his favorite and with a bow presented her with a flower. Round and round they went, while the band played the arias of "La Eschama." Motor cars were parked at the curb, a haven of parental refuge for any conchita who grew weary.

"I've seen this before," said Elsa after we had watched it for some moments. "I never realized until now, though, but I've been doing this same thing for years. Every girl has. Parading myself, my body, my soul, all that makes up the pitiful little me, imping for the approval of some gay caballero."

"Your gay caballero stands on your right against the trunk of that tree."

"Where?" Her head jerked sharply in the direction I indicated. Reed Barton stood leaning lightly, coolly, against the tree as he gazed at the scene in the plaza. He pulled his watch from his pocket and looked at it, unmindful that we were near by.

Elsa left me instantly and flew to greet him, and I walked over more sedately to congratulate him on his release.

"Elsa had visions of your being steed against a wall at dawn and dying romantically to the rattle of musketry," I said.

"Really?" He grinned, pocketing his watch.

"Don't mind what he says," Elsa implored him.

"But how did it happen, Reed?" I asked.

"It was just one of those things," he said. "They came and opened the door to the cage and said to the bird within, 'Fly away, my sweet, and I set you free.'"

"As simple as that?" said Elsa with a caustic note in her voice.

"What I think happened was that they discovered I was not just a peon who could be thrown into jail and forgotten. Perhaps your father helped, Elsa; perhaps the consul had something to do with it. Anyway, it's nice to be out. Neither your father will accept my thanks, nor the consul; 'twas a mere nothing. Glad to do it, and all that.
Saw your father down the street a white ago, Elsa."

"He was coming ashore—Oh—you're going with us tomorrow."

"Where, and what?"

"Fishing. You'll have to come aboard tonight with your things; we're leaving early. And now—"

She halted, a wistful look in her level gray eyes. "Isn't there a dance going on somewhere tonight, Reed?
Can't we dance and be romantic?"

"Oh, sure. There's a dance at the hotel tonight. Come along and observe the flower of Mexican youth.
You'll see something! These little kids here in the plaza with their hand-me-downs and New York models are a bit tawdry. The newer youth of Mexico is elsewhere. Coming, Barry?"

"Of course not!"

Later I looked in upon the dancers. Reed Barton was right; the flower of Mazatlan was present.
Youth, in any land, of course, is synonymous with beauty, but here it was to be found in extraordinary measure.

I looked on for a while entranced, then wandered away. There was a crowd in the bar, and I stood for a while drinking the excellent beer. I wondered where Rogers was, where he had gone, and presently he came in and joined me.

"Where?" demanded Elsa.

"Now do I know? I'm going to the hotel and get my things together.

Margaret's orders. See you on the boat, anyhow, if not before."

Rumble stood on the street corner, a curious figure in a yet more

"Goodby," said Elsa.

"Goodby, sweetheart."

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

OTTO GRAHAM, Northwestern's brilliant halfback, who bowed out of collegiate competition when the Wildcats defeated Illinois in their final game of the season, has left behind a list of gridiron accomplishments destined to keep his name in the record books for some time to come.

As a final accolade to a noteworthy career, his teammates named him the most valuable player on the 1943 squad.

The all-around athlete from Waukegan, Ill., broke all existing Big Ten forward passing records during his three years of play with Northwestern. He also tied the conference single game scoring mark.

OTTO GRAHAM

In almost every poll conducted during the season, Northwestern ranked among the 10 top teams of the nation. Without Graham, the Wildcats wouldn't have had a chance. He sparked the team all during its eight-game schedule.

Graham's Record

Outstanding among his gridiron achievements were:

1. Established a new Big Ten forward passing record by completing 157 passes out of 321 for 2,162 yards, a completion average of 49.
2. Set a new Big Ten forward passing record for one year by completing 63 passes out of 123 for 1,032 yards in 1942.
3. Tied the Big Ten scoring record of four touchdowns in one game against Wisconsin in 1943.
4. Set a new Big Ten single game forward passing record by completing 29 out of 33 passes for 233 yards against Michigan in 1942.

Here is his three-year passing record:

Year	Games	Passes	Comp.	Yds.
1941	0	75	33	570
1942	0	123	63	1,032
1943	0	64	32	431

Although Graham reached stardom in his first college game against Kansas State in 1941 by returning a punt 93 yards for a touchdown and completing five out of nine passes for another 93 yards, it was in 1943 that he attained full stature as a football player. In his last year of competition Graham proved that he is everything a triple-threat player should be. He completed 23 out of 34 passes for 491 yards and carried the ball 87 times for a total of 233 yards, an average of four yards per carry. It was the best ball carrying performance of his three years of competition.

Kicking Assignment

He took over the kicking assignment when the Wildcats lost the services of Herman Friskey and Don Bushman in mid-season and averaged 20 yards per kick. He also proved to be an extremely successful kicker of punts after touchdown, landing seven out of nine attempts through the uprights.

A glance at Northwestern's scoring column provides further testimony of Graham's value to the Wildcat cause. He scored 61 points on nine touchdowns to place second in conference scoring. In addition he threw four touchdown passes. He thus had a hand in scoring 85 out of the 123 points rung up by the Wildcats this fall.

Graham hit his scoring peak in the Wisconsin game when in 24 minutes he equaled the conference scoring record of four touchdowns in one game. He also kicked three points after touchdown and passed for still another touchdown. He delivered against Ohio State when the Wildcat offense was floundering badly. During a brief appearance against the Huckeyes he scored one touchdown and passed for another in a 13 to 0 triumph.

Graham is one of the finest athletes ever to compete in Big Ten circles. And that takes in a lot of sports.

SPORTS SHORTS

- The Chicago Cubs have eight players with 4-P draft classifications.
- The first field goal John Sturgis ever attempted enabled Ohio State to beat Illinois 29 to 20.
- The St. Louis Cardinals have hit only one home run in their own park in four World Series. In the same four series the Yankees hit 12 in St.
Louis.
- Teruo Akinaga, tackle on the Fort Sheridan football team, is 5 feet 3 1/2 inches tall and weighs 152 pounds.
His nickname is "Bull."

Origin of Goodby

Our goodby is a shortened form of "God be with ye." "So long" is thought to be an American corruption of the word saluam ("peace") as heard in the Moslem greeting "Salaam alai-kum," meaning "May peace be unto you," perhaps brought to America by Moslem slavers, or African slaves.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Military requirements take the major portion of available rubber supplies for tires (for planes, trucks, and other war vehicles), tanks for tanks, boots, balloons, raincoats, ponchos, shoes, surgical supplies, and hundreds of other essential military items.
That's why patriotic civilians take the restrictions on their rubber use in an understanding spirit.

According to the cost of living index, it is recorded in 1943, Columbia was credited with having found natives bending the rubber tree (1490-1500) and to have brought some back from Hispaniola to Queen Isabella.

Government Lends Silver To Take Place of Copper

Because copper is urgently needed for war materials, the treasury department has recently lent, to operated plants, sufficient silver to take its place in their power distribution lines, says Collier's. Silver thus employed will not be consumed or destroyed and can be returned after the war.

One installation in Michigan, which would have required $105-000 worth of copper, contains silver valued at $15,000,000 and, therefore, is constantly, under armed guard.

When you see news photos of soldiers "off duty" in camp or bowling the battle lines—notice how often you'll see them smoking a cigarette. There's a good reason for that. Army officials say that cigarettes are an appreciable factor in maintaining morale—and the soldiers themselves and U. S. certain of cigarettes from home is always welcome. What brand?
Well, sales records in Post Exchanges and Canteens show that Camels are the favorite cigarette with men in all the services.
Though there are Post Office restrictions on packages to overseas Army men, you can still send Camels to soldiers in the U. S., and to Galters, Marines, and Coast Guardmen wherever they are. A-2.
